SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM ESTABLISHED BY NCAA FOR POST-GRADUATE STUDY

Colleges Are Own Vigilantes

Members Responsible Most for NCAA Enforcement

The colleges' own vigilance and cooperation are mainly responsible for the consistent progress which has marked the NCAA enforcement program, 12 years old at the end of this month.

Thus did the NCAA Council assess the first dozen years of the Association's self-policing procedures, and in so doing pay generous tribute to the important work of its three-man Infractions Committee.

Statistics released at its April meeting in San Francisco show that the NCAA has had fewer allegations and fewer cases of rules infractions over the past five years than ever before.

"It is clear, from our own observations," said NCAA President, Robert F. Ray, "from a wide range of comment across the country and from statistical study that the membership's objective of taking care of its own is being met."

"This doesn't mean NCAA enforcement procedures are entirely effective, that there are not continuing violations or that there won't be future violations," President Ray continued, but confidence in the program has been established and individual responsibility recognized. The splendid and tireless work of the Infractions Committee has had much to do with this progress," he concluded.

Ladies Locked Out As NCAA Remains Strictly for Men

Could a woman compete in an NCAA championship event? It was a question to make some men quake and thoughtful males scurry for the answer in the Association's Constitution, By-Laws, and Executive Regulations.

The NCAA Executive Committee faced the issue squarely. At the request of women sports leaders themselves and the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee, the following addition to the Executive Regulations was made to settle the matter:

"The games committee shall limit participation to eligible male student athletes."

The brief addition to the first paragraph of Executive Regulations II, Section 4, thus resolved the question—for NCAA meets and tournaments at least—which has been much under discussion, by both men and women athletic administrators.

Specific request for consideration by the NCAA came from Dr. Marguerite A. Clifton, UCLA, representing the Division of Girl's and Women's Sports of AAHPER, and Mrs. Sara Staff Jernigan, Stetson University, representing the U. S. Olympic Committee's Women's Development Committee.

In the interests of fostering the development of women's athletics, and making available the resources and experience of the NCAA to leaders in this activity, the Council has appointed a special Committee on Women's Competition. This committee will serve as a liaison agency with all other interested groups.

$1,000 Grants to 32 Seniors Set by Executive Committee

TV Grid Revenue to Finance Academic Achievement Awards for University and College Division Football and Basketball Players

A significant scholarship program for post-graduate and professional study has been established by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Outstanding senior scholar-athletes of 1964-65 from NCAA member colleges and universities who have participated in football and basketball will be eligible for 32 one-year, one thousand dollar grants.

The new award plan — first ever undertaken by the NCAA — was approved by the Association's Executive Committee at its San Francisco meeting, April 18. A scholarship committee will be appointed to draw up official procedure and criteria for the grants.

The plan will be financed — $32,000 for the scholarships plus $3,000 administrative expense — from the NCAA's four per cent share of football television rights fees paid by NBC for the 1964 season.

In addition to approving the expenditure and specifying the scholar-athlete awards for post graduate or professional study by graduates of the class of '65, the Executive Committee designated the following:

Twenty-two of the scholarships shall be awarded to varsity football participants — 11 from the major college list and 11 from the College Division.

The remaining ten grants shall go to varsity basketball players, five from colleges or universities in the major cage category and five from College Division institutions.

The $1,000 grants will go directly to the universities or professional schools of the recipients' choice.

Though no scholarships have been provided for participants in sports other than football and basketball, $84,088 has been set aside from television revenue to support clinics and encourage increased participation in other sports.

"A program of scholarship awards for distinguished academic achievement has been discussed from time to time for some years in the NCAA," executive director Walter Byers said. "Increased revenue derived from the television assessment makes possible these awards to worthy student-athletes."

"Thirty-two scholarships is a good start," observed NCAA President Robert F. Ray, "but it won't begin to take care of the great number of senior football and basketball players in our member institutions who are honor students in all fields of study."

COUNSELS

TV REVENUE BEING PUT TO GOOD USE

Much has been written in recent days about sports television. The enormous sums being paid for rights fees to televise both amateur and professional athletic events of all kinds; the intense competition on the part of the networks to obtain these telecast rights, and speculation about where all this is going to lead has been much in the news.

Will the beneficiaries of these astronomical payments be corrupted? Will television's interest, purchasing power, production problems, and scheduling complications dominate the presentation of sports events? Will "overexposure" on television kill spectator interest?

Already TV is being credited with or blamed for motivation of issues which in fact, predate the industry itself.

Tom Moore, president of ABC TV, was quoted recently as saying:

"The real basis for the dispute between the NCAA and the AAU is that a number of sports, other than football suddenly have great monetary value in their television rights."

Nothing could be further from the truth. That's akin to saying the American Revolution occurred because there was gold in California.

Mr. Moore's alleged comment does, however, illustrate the sort of thing which has marked speculation about sports-TV relationships and America's seemingly insatiable appetite to watch competitive athletics of all kinds. And it is typical of some of the irresponsible statements being made relative to TV money.

Specifically, NCAA football television policy represents a compromise of viewpoints within the 600-member Association. As such it draws fire from all extremes which are a party to the compromise as well as others with singular thoughts on the subject.

"Too few members are involved. Only major universities and colleges with highly-emphasized football programs are beneficiaries," is one extreme.

"Benefits are extended on too broad a basis and restrictions of the plan are too severe," is at the opposite pole.

There are all degrees of sentiment in between.

This is as it should be. There are some merits to all these viewpoints.

Complete surrender to extremes, however, could lead to loss of public interest (ergo revenue) on the one hand or loss of the demonstrable protective features to college football as a whole on the other.

What is pertinent to all points of view is whether or not TV revenue is being put to good use for worthwhile purposes.

Of the $6,522,000 which will be paid by NBC this fall ($13,044,000 is the two-year contract figure), the 48 participating teams—more than ever before—plus their allied conferences will receive 96 per cent, or $6,261,120.

Of the remaining four per cent which accrues to the NCAA, $35,000 has been set aside for the NCAA Post Graduate Scholarship program (see page one story), $60,000 to establish a College Division regional football championship reserve fund, $81,000 for administrative expense of the entire football television program, and $84,088 to support instructional clinics and encourage increased participation in sports other than football and basketball.

Basically, administrative expense is all that has been available to the NCAA in the past. The remainder within a three per cent assessment in 1962-63 (four per cent previously) was returned to the individual participating members.

We submit that post graduate scholarships, college division football, and concrete encouragement of all sports combine for worthwhile purpose, and that, yes, television revenue is being put to good use by college football—both by the NCAA and by its many member institutions which benefit directly.

What? Sold Out. Already!

Next year's National Collegiate Basketball Championship is a sellout right now. That's right, ticket sales for the NCAA cage finals next March 19 and 20, in Portland's beautiful Memorial Coliseum were closed May 1, and the 13,000-seat arena declared full.

Wonder who'll be playing?

Touché

"It seems to me to be unfortunate that the NIT and NCAA Championships continue to be cast as rival basketball tournaments. This they are not.

"The NCAA tourney is national title competition, enlisting participation by all teams which can qualify under a set of rules necessarily complicated but actually quite effective in a very involved situation. The NIT is an excellent invitation contest bringing together each year a choice group of top-flight teams which are deserving of further recognition following successful seasons of play... Its stature does not depend upon its superiority over or inferiority to any other event."

ASA BUSHNELL, Commissioner, ECAC (in a letter to Phil Pepe, sports staff, New York World Telegram and Sun, March 12, 1964)

FINAL CALL FOR OLYMPIC FUND DRIVE ANNOUNCED

The final call for a "big push" to put the nation's educational institutions over the top in their drive for funds to support the United States' 1964 Olympic effort financially has been issued by Biggie Munn, chairman of the NCAA Olympic Committee.

Munn, athletic director at Michigan State University and a veteran of fund-raising campaigns of various sorts, says that right now there is $131,307 in the till, leaving the drive some $218,693 short of its goal of $350,000.

"This isn't as bad as it sounds. Drives such as this usually start slowly, but now is the time to throw it into high gear," Munn said.

"I call on every educational institution in the land—high schools, prep schools, junior colleges, colleges, universities — to pitch in and get the job done."

He suggested special collections at athletic events, benefit shows with proceeds going to the cause, contributions solicited on season ticket applications to football, basketball, and other sports; fund-raising contests with prizes to winning teams, and direct contributions from athletic budgets as ways for institutions to do their bits.

Munn suggested that athletic officials and schools seeking aid in doing their part in the fund drive should get in touch with their NCAA district representatives on the committee. Contributions should be directed to them, too.

One district, No. 7, comprising the Rocky Mountain area, already has topped its quota, Munn said.

The district representatives are as follows:

- District 1—Fred D. Tootell, University of Rhode Island
- District 2—Wilford Ketz, Union College
- District 3—W. W. Cobey, University of Maryland
- District 4—Richard C. Larkins, Ohio State University
- District 5—Gordon Chalmers, Iowa State University
- District 6—Clyde Littlefield, University of Texas
- District 7—Robert L. Davis, Colorado State University
- District 8—Stan Bates, Washington State University

COUNCIL ASSESSES ENFORCEMENT PROGRAM

Consistent Progress Being Made

key group is George H. Young, Dean of the Law School, University of Wisconsin. The other two are Nicholas M. McKnight, Dean Emeritus, Columbia University, and J. William Davis, head of the Political Science Department, Texas Technological College.

Figures show that the Committee on Infractions has dealt with 401 cases since June 1, 1952. Guilt was established in 36 per cent or 144 cases. In 58.6 per cent of the cases dealt with, guilt was not established. The remaining differential represents cases pending when the committee went into its San Francisco session, or 5.4 per cent.

At that time, not including the Kentucky, Prairie View, and Slippery Rock cases in which penalties were invoked, there were four official inquiries and 18 preliminary inquiries pending. Figures are not available relative to new cases opened at the San Francisco meeting.

Of the 144 cases in which violations were established, 98 were dealt with by the NCAA.

In 20 instances the institution or conference took corrective action, and there were 26 miscellaneous cases of a less serious nature where no public censure was made.

Of the 98 cases in which the NCAA took disciplinary action, 39 were for recruiting and illegal aid, 26 for recruiting violations alone, nine for illegal aid only, 19 for playing and practice season and post-season game violations and five miscellaneous.

The following are NCAA member colleges and universities currently under penalty:

Centenary College and University of Iowa, one-year probation, beginning January 7, 1964, no sanctions.

University of Dayton, two-year probation, beginning Oct. 31, 1962, with sanctions in basketball.

Hardin-Simmons University, two-year probation, beginning April 26, 1963, with sanctions in football.

University of Kentucky, Prairie View A & M, and Slippery Rock State College, one year probation, beginning April 20, 1964, with sanctions in football.

Executive Office Adds Two Hands

NCAA Employs Cleary, Price as Thornton Moves to 'Bama

One good hand gone and two added is the word from national headquarters as increased activity and expanding services highlight the news from the NCAA executive office.

Gone is Charles Thornton after one-year's service as an assistant to the executive director. Charley took up new duties as sports information director and administrative aide to the athletic director of the University of Alabama, May 1.

Added are Michael J. Cleary, named NCAA Events Director and G. David Price, new Publications Editor and assistant to the Public Relations Director.

Cleary, 29, has, since 1962, been Director of Special events and assistant to the executive director of the NAIA; is a 1955 graduate of John Carroll University where he was Sports Information Director, head cross country and assistant track coach.

In his new capacity Cleary will administer the NCAA's meets and tournaments and will give particular attention to the rapidly expanding College Division program which includes seven national title meets and tournaments, four new regional football playoffs and 19 regional tournaments in other sports.

Price, 21, a senior this spring at University of Oklahoma, has served as assistant to sports information director Harold Keith, for the past three years.

Both Cleary and Keith began their new chores May 18.

Seven Plus Eight

The number of conferences now subscribing to the inter-conference letter of intent agreement is now seven, reports J. William Davis, athletic faculty representative from Texas Tech and the NCAA's one-man committee for the project.

Conferences now participating are the Southern, Atlantic Coast, Big Eight, Big Ten, Missouri Valley, Southeastern, and Southwest. Among the major conferences only the Western Athletic Conference and the AAWU are not party to the cooperative effort.

Also participating are eight non-conference universities — Syracuse, Pittsburgh, Penn State, Georgia Tech, Florida State, Marquette, Southern Illinois, and Houston.
