

Fifteen Cagers Named

Scholarship Winners Talented Lot

Fifteen athletes who have excelled both in the classroom and on the court have been selected to receive 1967 NCAA postgraduate scholarships for basketball. The recipients of the $1,000 awards were picked by the NCAA's Postgraduate Scholarship Committee under the chairmanship of Laurence C. Woodruff, Dean of Students at the University of Kansas.

Included in the group are the nation's seventh leading scorer, two players from NCAA tournament teams, two athletes who scored more than 50 points in a single game and a Rhodes Scholar.

Gary Gray of Oklahoma City, part Delaware Indian, part Irish and all basketball player, tops the group in scoring with a 27.5 average, which placed him seventh nationally, less than three points per game behind the champion. Gray, an economics major who plans to pursue a law degree, was the spark-plug of the Chieftains who topped the major colleges in scoring with a 96.0 average. A 6-1 guard, Gray's 55-point performance against West Texas State was bettered only twice all season.

Best academic mark among the 15 winners is that of John Fontanella of Westminster (Pa.) who boasts a 3.86 average. The 5-10 guard is the shortest of the group in height, but his scoring average and single game output is exceeded only by the sharpshooting Gray. Fontanella averaged 22.3 points per game in 1966-67 and recorded 51 in one game.

Close behind Fontanella in the classroom were Don Hansard, St. Thomas (Minn.), who compiled a 3.83 mark; James Sutherland of Clemson, top officer in the school's ROTC program with a 3.79 average; and Kurt Hollasch of Rensselaer with 3.76.

Willie Wolters of Boston College and Bruce Parsons of Pacific (Calif.) each were important in their respective team's success in the NCAA tournament. Wolters, 6-8 center for the Eagles, helped his team gain the finals of the East Regional before losing 63-62 to North Carolina. He averaged in double figures and maintained a 3.35 mark in the classroom. Parsons captained the Tigers to a 24-4 record including their second straight West Coast Conference title. Pacific went to the finals of the West Regional before losing to UCLA 80-64.

Tom Ward, 6-6 center for the University of the South, scored at a 19.3 clip and managed a 3.62 mark in the classroom enroute to becoming a Rhodes Scholar. An All-College Athletic Conference choice, Ward started every one of his team's games over a four year span.

The average height of the 15 students is 6-4 with Hansard the tallest at 6-9. The group averaged more than 15 points per game during 1966-67 per man and has a grade point average of better than 3.5.

Winners of the 1967 NCAA scholarship awards for basketball are:

University Division

Edward Alvin Fredenburg, Oregon State University; Richard Albert Johnson, Yale University; James Lawrence Sutherland, Clemson University; Michael David Wicks, University of Idaho; William Francis Wolters, Boston College.

College Division

Michael Edward Bratman, Haverford College; John Joseph Fontanella, Westminster (Pa.) College; Kurt Dale Hollasch, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute; James Ed-

1.6 Compliance At New High Of 93 Per Cent

At NCAA News deadline 547 of the Association's 589 active member colleges and universities—93 per cent—had confirmed that their policies, procedures and practices satisfy the requirements of NCAA Bylaw 4-6-(b), the 1.6 legislation. Some of these are classified provisional, subject to the submission of additional information, but the largest number of NCAA members were eligible for recent winter championship events than at any time since the legislation became effective.

Among those in a provisional category is the Ivy Group. An interim agreement clearing the way for eligibility of those eight institutions for winter and spring championships this year was announced February 20, by NCAA President Marcus L. Plant after both personal conversations and exchange of correspondence with Kingman Brewster, Jr., President of Yale University and chairman of the Ivy Group this year.

Following Houston convention action which left the legislation unchanged, the NCAA Council ruled that if a member institutions' procedures since January 1, 1966, have met the requirements of the bylaw, even though they did not submit the necessary information to confirm this fact, they are eligible for NCAA events once the necessary declaration has been received. If, however, an institution's procedures contradicted the requirements of the 1.600 rule subsequent to January 1, 1966, then the two-year ineligibility provisions contained in the rule apply.

VOLUME 4 • NUMBER 1

JANUARY-FEBRUARY-MARCH, 1967

Marcus L. Plant, NCAA President, University of Michigan

Plant Picked Prexy; Teams With McCoy

The first act of Marcus L. Plant, newly-elected President of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, was to express to outgoing President Everett D. (Eppy) Barnes and Secretary-Treasurer Francis E. Smiley, "the deep gratitude that the Association feels for the service they have rendered over the years."

Next, the mild-mannered University of Michigan professor of law who will lead the NCAA for the next two years demonstrated his logical, practical approach to his new office:

"... To the new members of the Council and those whose terms are continued, I would say that Article Five of the Constitution commits the business of this Association to the Council, and these affairs will start operating at nine o'clock tomorrow morning in this hotel."

Thirdly Professor Plant indicated his personal feelings about being NCAA President:

"I realize that the selection of a president does not have as its primary purpose the conferring of an honor, and yet this is an honor, and I do so regard it, and feel it deeply and appreciate profoundly the implicit confidence that is suggested. I will make every effort to see that you do not feel this decision was ill-advised."

THE EDITOR'S VIEW

The "plague on both your houses" approach to the Federation-AAU dispute is not without some justification. And both public temper and media attitude which deplore a conflict between mature, intelligent men waged to the apparent detriment of the innocent competitor in a particular sport (track and field is the current focal point) are completely understandable.

Plaguing and deploring are not enough, however. To let the case rest there is not only an over simplification, but an injustice as well.

Issues More Vital Now

The public may have forgotten, never have known, or not care about the issues which begot and perpetuate the warfare. The press may be sick to death of writing or telling about them. (It's difficult enough, heaven knows.) The fact remains, though, that the issues which set the school-college community and the AAU against each other in those sports in which the U.S. educational system makes the major developmental and competitive contribution are even more important and valid now than in 1962, in 1920, 1911 or in 1897.

They're more important and valid because each year the gap between school-college contribution on the one hand and representation in policy and administrative decision at the national level on the other becomes wider.

Gap Must Be Reduced

Until this gap is substantially reduced no permanent solution to the conflict is possible. To say that both parties to a dispute are equally to blame because one adamantly refuses to make a single concession is ridiculous. To say that the other party should withdraw from the fray and demonstrate its cooperative attitude and willingness to reach an equitable solution by so doing makes no sense at all.

A human condition in 20th-century America which permits a governing body NOT TO REPRESENT those it governs is bound to be the source of a problem. Because the governing body has no intention of reducing its own authority and because the governed cannot reduce it without resorting to combative means, the federal government has intervened and has assumed what it considers a necessary responsibility.

It is hoped this responsibility includes a solution which gets at the basic problem—representative government. To paint both parties black (though neither may be all white) will not be sufficient answer.

Athlete Not Forgotten

Responsible athletic administrators are as concerned about the athletes in their programs as conscientious doctors are about their patients. It is an exaggeration to say that the track athlete is "the forgotten man" in the Federation-AAU conflict, but it is true there can be no excuse for a legitimate world mark being denied a Jim Ryun, a foreign collegian's eligibility being used as a weapon in the dispute, or suspension threats being hung over the heads of bona fide amateurs who adhere to the rules of those responsible for their training and competitive opportunity.

Conflict Not All Bad

Despite these obvious wrongs, however, there's been too much made over many of the athlete's supposed sufferings and the harm being done U.S. track as a result. The conflict has heightened developmental activities by both Federation and AAU interests. There have never been more meets at every level of participation, or more interest in the sport or more good athletes or greater U.S. track and field strength than now.

Ultimately Worth While

You say it would be even better in every way without the fussin' and feudin'? We would say, Amen, to that. And further, it should be said:

The long-range benefit to the individual athlete inherent in a solution which will balance developmental and competitive programs with administratively sound, representative authority and policy will far outweigh any temporary anxiety, feeling of insecurity or actual trauma caused an athlete by the conflicting groups.

Columnary Craft

Reprinted below are excerpts from news columnists commenting pertinently about the collegiate position on various matters. They are selected, not merely because they are favorable, but because they make points about undergraduate athletics which the NCAA News feels need to be emphasized.

Frank Boggs, Daily Oklahoman

The AAU had summoned Ryun to Chicago to receive the James E. Sullivan Award. It is presented annually to the "amateur athlete who, by performance, example and good influence did the most to advance the cause of good sportsmanship during the year." By the way. The AAU never has received this award.

Dan Hardesty, Baton Rouge Morning Advocate

All of us who were close to Jim Corbett have known, deep in our hearts that some day he would face this situation (sudden death), ever since his near-fatal heart attack in New York in 1958. Many of us tried time and again to get him to slow down his working pace . . . but to no avail. He knew only one way to do his job and that was full-speed, often 18 to 20 hours a day . . . He had in fact been doing just that (working round the clock) for four consecutive days immediately prior to his death . . . He always kept on his office wall a sign which read: "It's nice to be important, but it's more important to be nice." And that was the guiding principle under which he operated . . .

Jack Gallagher, Houston Post

Ol' Duffy (Daugherty) wasn't just whistlin' the Notre Dame Fight Song when he suggested a collegiate elimination tournament (National Collegiate Football Championship). His proposal has genuine merit . . . For the first time (Dallas, December 31st-January 1) a major post-season game and NFL playoff occurred in the same city and only 24 hours apart. From a scheduling standpoint it was such a rarity that it may never take place again.

Still one wonders what impact the pro game might have had at Dallas if it had been competing with, say, Texas A & M vs. Notre Dame in the semifinals of the national championship. No doubt which contest would be uppermost in the minds of Texans in spite of the fact that they like the rest of the nation have been swept up in the pro football boom.

An overriding reason for the way in which the pro game caught on in Dallas was its import. This was for the NFL championship. The winner would go on to the Super Bowl. It was a playoff, an elimination, a meaningful contest rather than an exhibition.

Matched against it, the SMU-Georgia contest was a drab affair with scant appeal . . . the colleges are fighting the pros for public attention. In order to promote its product, college football must be receptive to ideas that will add interest to the game.

What better way than a series of eliminations leading to a national champion? If such a development took place would the Cowboys vs. Green Bay take precedence in Dallas over Arkansas vs. Michigan State in sudden death overtime for the national championship? Hardly.

Abe Chanin, Collegiate Baseball

(A refutation by Mr. Chanin of the claim of Jim Russo, Baltimore Orioles, that "the calibre of major league play will begin to suffer in four years if this rule (four-year rule protecting collegiate players) remains in effect.")

Russo claims that "the most successful big leaguers are those who came right out of high school." And he cites statistics to prove his point. The Orioles surveyed American and National League rosters and found that "two high school graduates succeeded in reaching the major leagues for every one college player."

This survey is just as effective as the one that reveals that girls make the best mothers. The Orioles survey fails to take into consideration a rather important point: The best high school talent is lured every summer by the big bonuses of professional baseball and not by college scholarships.

Just suppose this high school talent was allowed to flow into the colleges, a survey then would show 10 to 1 or 100 to 1 in favor of college players making the grade in the major leagues . . .

This is a day of utmost importance for the backing of higher education. Or didn't the Orioles fly high enough to see the Sputnik?

Paul Zimmerman, Los Angeles Times

(Quoting track authority, Dick Bank, following the latter's return to the U. S. from Prague)

Bank said he . . . learned that the AAU did not properly submit Jim Ryun's half-mile record to the IAAF.

"I was told that if either president Dave Matlin or executive director Don Hull had signed the application like they did for the mile which was approved, it would have been accepted."

At the AAU meeting in Chicago recently it was stated the IAAF had turned down the record, made under supervision of AAU officials in a USTFF meet, because the event had been held without the AAU's sanction.

"Of course it did," said Bank, "but only because neither Matlin nor Hull signed the record application like they did for Ryun's mark. The thing that makes it more absurd is that the AAU turned right around and approved Jim's half-mile performance as an American record."

Everett D. (Eppy) Barnes, NCAA immediate past president (left) and John Eisenhower display NCAA's first Theodore Roosevelt award. The "Teddy" went to General Dwight D. Eisenhower and was accepted at the Association Houston Convention by son, John.

First Teddy Award Goes To Dwight D. Eisenhower

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, 34th President of the United States, could not be there in person to receive the NCAA's first annual Theodore Roosevelt award. But his presence was felt keenly by the more than 500 attendees at the Convention's Honors Luncheon, both by the words he sent the delegates and because the man who accepted for him was his son, John.

The "Teddy" was given by NCAA President Everett D. (Eppy) Barnes. Tribute to General Eisenhower was eloquently paid by Earl Rudder, President of Texas A & M University, decorated commander of the Second Ranger Battalion at Normandy.

John Eisenhower was obviously touched by President Rudder's tribute.

"I thought I was coming as an aide," he said, "and wound up coming as a family representative. Perhaps, speaking from the third person I can tell you a little better than my father could himself, how much athletics has meant to him throughout his entire life. He has had an eventful career . . . but I can assure you that the fact that he was able to win his varsity letter as a yearling—a sophomore at the Military Academy—is certainly one of the events of his life he regards with the utmost pride."

Col. Eisenhower then read a portion of a letter his father had sent to the Convention:

"In a very long lifetime, much of it spent in contact with young people, I have always been an enthusiastic supporter of college athletics, which of course, help in the development of physical fitness. More than this, they foster among the student body the beginning of loyalty for the institution and a spirit of healthy competition. They develop latent qualities of leadership and promote the essentials of teamwork. Because of these advantages, our students normally become better citizens of our country and are better prepared to carry out the responsibilities and enjoy the privileges of freedom."

Three days later, Barnes presented the "Teddy" in person to General Eisenhower, recuperating from gall-bladder surgery in Palm Springs, Calif. and the ceremony was recorded for posterity by ABC TV and carried the next day on Wide World of Sports.

Plant and McCoy New NCAA Officers

A final word to the delegates by the Association's 18th President commended their industry:

"This has been a very hard-working convention, perhaps the hardest-working convention I have ever attended, both with respect to the meetings attended and the measures considered and the diligence with which the delegates have exercised their function."

Chosen as Plant's running mate as Secretary-Treasurer was one of the NCAA's most respected, best-liked and easily among the nation's most competent directors of athletics, Ernest B. McCoy, Pennsylvania State University. He moves directly to his new post of service from the Council. He has served with great distinction as Chairman of the former Sports Injuries and Safety committee and as a member of the University Basketball Tournament committee. Election to secretary-treasurer gives the astute boss of Penn State athletics his first opportunity to be a member of the NCAA Executive Committee.

Convention Actions

If the actions taken by the membership were not revolutionary or spectacular, the 61st Convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association showed at the very least that those engaged in the administration of intercollegiate athletics recognize both the values of tradition and the dynamics of new ideas.

The Houston sessions in January saw the NCAA's honors program continued in the form of a second successful yearly luncheon and the pattern set for its permanent establishment. It resulted in a significant decision to stay with its 1,600 academic legislation, unchanged, pending a full practical trial under "game conditions" so to speak. The attendant members voted to tighten their committee procedures, clarify extra events and enforcement regulations. And in rejecting by a narrow margin varsity eligibility of freshmen (in sports other than football and basketball) demonstrated an awareness that the rapid changes occurring in higher education generally could very well alter a hitherto unshakable premise of most major university athletic programs.

While the merger of the professional football leagues eliminated the chief conflict between college and pro gridiron interests and professional baseball agreed not to sign collegians during their four-year eligibility, relationships with professional sports were nevertheless an important behind-the-scenes convention factor and continuing major issue in NCAA affairs.

And though, during the convention, conflict between sports Federations and the AAU lay dormant, subsequent developments in the long-standing battle pointed to an early summer showdown.

Colgate's distinguished and energetic Director of Athletics, Everett D. (Eppy) Barnes stepped down as NCAA president after two years of tumultuous activity during which time he exercised firm and indefatigable leadership, to be succeeded by the University of Michigan's Marcus L. Plant, thoughtful, logically-minded professor of law. (See separate election story.)

The Convention's only resolution passed provides for a new national championship event—College Division Baseball—to begin in 1968. Referendum vote of the membership to establish same passed overwhelmingly.

The following are specific legislative actions taken by the 61st Convention:

Constitution—C3-4-(b), payments under the G.I. Bill of Rights may be excluded from the financial aid computation otherwise required by this constitutional provision.

Bylaws—

B3-2-(a), amended to formalize legislative procedures of rules committees.

B3-2-(k), two more high school representatives added to Wrestling Rules Committee.

B3-3-(b), University Basketball Tournament Committee enlarged to seven members to accommodate Collegiate Commissioners Association's representative.

B4-1-(e)-(2), enrollment figure for freshman exception in National Collegiate Championship events conformed to figure used for National College Division events.

B5-1-(a), NCAA College Division Gymnastics Championships authorized.

B7-A-1-(a), (f), (i), (j), series of four amendments adopted to secure improved supervision of post-season football games, establish eligibility procedures for such competition similar to those applying to NCAA events, establish official radio and television sponsorship policies and require selections for post-season football games to be delayed until most of the season has been completed.

B7-A-2-(c), authorize the Council to limit the number of approved post-season football games.

Additional actions were taken which (1) made eligible an NCAA committee member for a full term on the committee if he has served one-half of a term or less, (2) placed the regional College Division football contests under the requirements of the Executive Regulations, (3) authorized the Extra Events Committee to administer additional regulations and policies as determined by the annual Convention or NCAA Council and (4) amended Bylaw 4 (effective September 1, 1968) to require member institutions to be exclusively University Division or College Division for purposes of NCAA competition in sports in which the Association sponsors national events in each division. [Concerning (4), this new policy will not change the present procedure whereby College Division members may compete in National Collegiate Championship (University Division) events if their performance in the equivalent National College Division event meets the requirements of Executive Regulation 2-3.]

Seven official interpretations were also dealt with and members are urged to refer to their NCAA Manuals with respect to O.I. 2-(c) and (d), O.I. 11, O.I. 42, O.I. 101, O.I. 108 and O.I. 186.

Members are asked to be particularly careful in any application of O.I. 2-(c)-(2) which relates, for example, to a student-athlete's decision to voluntarily sever his connection with a season's sport activity at some point after he had originally reported for practice with every intention to participate. The language in the application, letter-of-intent or tender is very important in any decision regarding graduation or cancellation of institutional aid. Just as important would be the circumstances leading up to the student-athlete's decision. O.I. 2-(c)-(1) is not applicable under these circumstances.

Ernest B. McCoy,
NCAA's Secretary-Treasurer

NCAA Membership Is At Record High 670

Like the cost of living, but with happier results, NCAA memberships keep rising.

The total has now reached 670 with the addition of 10 institutions this past winter. Included in the record figure are 589 active institutions, 20 associate institutions, 21 affiliated organizations and 40 allied conferences.

The present figure represents an increase of more than 110 per cent since 1950 when the membership totaled 317 and is over 10 times as many schools as were present when the organization was founded in 1906.

The new active members are:

Albuquerque, University of, Albuquerque, N. M.

Bentley College, Boston, Mass.

Bryant College, Providence, R. I.

California, University of, Irvine, Calif.

Central Washington State College, Ellensburg, Wash.

Farmington State College, Farmington, Maine

Monmouth College, West Long Branch, N. J.

New Haven College, West Haven, Conn.

Southampton College of Long Island University, Southampton, N. Y.

Winona State College, Winona, Minn.

New Title Sports Survey

NCAA institutional membership is almost split on whether or not any more sports should be added to the national collegiate championship schedule with those favoring additional events carrying the day, 162 to 132, in a recent survey.

Voting on the above plus a variety of other questions relating to competitive sports not now carried on the 13-sport, 21-event national title schedule in University and College divisions were the Association's directors of athletics in answer to an NCAA events questionnaire which went out at year's end.

Lacrosse, by a considerable margin, is the most popular collegiate sport in which there is no NCAA title competition, but volleyball got the nod by the narrowest of margins over lacrosse as the event most wanted among those who thought the national championship slate should be expanded.

Lacrosse is played at 90 member institutions at least. (Response to the questionnaire was just 358 of the NCAA's 589 institutional members.) Volleyball is played at 73 and in third place is water polo which was listed by 49 of the colleges and universities answering. Other sports with which the survey dealt were Rugby, played by 48 colleges which answered and handball, 37 colleges. Judo is an intercollegiate sport at 52 colleges, but at only four is it administered by the athletic department and at 13 others given some financial assistance by the athletic department.

Ninety-seven institutions said they would participate in national competition in one of the above listed sports, 227 said they would not. Sports other than those listed in which some interest was expressed were bowling, crew, rifle, weight lifting, rowing, and sailing.

New Committee Members Named

Elections and Appointments

More than 50 new members have been elected or appointed to NCAA committees effective in 1967. The majority of these—on 23 different committees—were elected by the 61st annual Convention after having been nominated by the Committee on Committees. The NCAA Council is responsible for the appointment of 20 committees and acts for the membership in filling vacancies between conventions.

The responsibility for recommending men to fill vacancies on the Council and Executive Committee rests with the Nominating Committee which must submit its choices to the annual Convention for approval.

Two athletic directors and two faculty representatives were elected to the Council at Houston. Frank Carver of Pittsburgh was named to replace Ernest B. McCoy of Penn State as vice-president of District Two and Marshall Turner of Johns Hopkins was selected to replace Jerome Holland of Hampton Institute as a member-at-large. Faculty representatives elected to vice-presidencies were J. William Davis of Texas Tech in District Six and James McCoy of Ohio State in District Four. Davis and McCoy replaced Chris Groneman of Texas A&M and Marcus L. Plant of Michigan, respectively.

Outgoing officers Everett D. Barnes and Francis Smiley of Colgate and Colorado Mines, respectively, were elected to the Executive Committee and William J. Flynn of Boston College replaced R. Victor Stout of crosstown Boston University on the same body.

The members of the Committee on Committees will be appointed by the Council at its spring meeting and vacancies to be filled at the 62nd annual Convention will be published in a later edition of the News.

More College Ball Than Pro Games

Perhaps the most significant item revealed in the recent baseball survey conducted by the NCAA executive office is that there were more collegiate games played last year than in all of professional baseball.

This, more than any other fact, substantiates the growth of the game on the collegiate level in recent years. Where once players of college age were in the low minors, today they are playing college and amateur baseball.

Among the more impressive statistics in the survey of 553 members was the amount of money budgeted for collegiate baseball. Following is a brief rundown:

Coaches' Salaries	$2,862,800
Student Financial Aid	1,963,700
Equipment	1,110,000
Travel	1,105,000
Field Maintenance	832,000
Miscellaneous	545,400
Total	$8,419,600

Nearly 22,000 athletes participated in collegiate baseball programs in 1966. Of this number, more than two-thirds competed in an intercollegiate varsity contest. In the 12 years since the last survey, participation within the NCAA membership has increased 133 per cent.

Of the more than 900 coaches employed by NCAA institutions, over one-third (357) have played professional baseball and approximately two-thirds (607) are employed on a full-time basis.

Not all schools indicated they had their own diamond, however, over 400 have at least one field and the estimated real estate value of these fields is over $70 million.

PHILLIP B. BROWN

The gentleman pictured above is the National Collegiate Athletic Association's official legal counsel in Washington, D. C. A partner in the Washington law firm, Cox, Langford and Brown, the NCAA's representative in the nation's Capital has worked with the Association since August, 1965 when the Senate Commerce Committee hearings on the track and field dispute were called. He was named to represent the Association in all Washington matters this past October. Brown, 42, a Middletown, Connecticut native, received his BA from Wesleyan University in 1944 where he was Phi Beta Kappa and Olin Scholar and received his Bachelor of Laws degree from Yale University in 1946. He is a trustee at Wesleyan.

Collegiate Competition Important to Space Effort

"There are two characteristics that I feel are important to me and to the colleagues with whom I associate in the space program. They are physical fitness and a fine sense of self-discipline. There is no question in my mind, and I am sure there is no question in the minds of those of you who are gathered here today, that these two characteristics are in fact developed during undergraduate days on the athletic field."

So said Capt. Alan B. Shepard, Jr., USN, America's first astronaut and the spokesman for the 12 space pioneers honored by the NCAA at the Association's second annual Honors Luncheon during the 61st convention in Houston.

Seven of the 12 men of space singled out by the NCAA for their collegiate varsity sports competition were present to receive the special plaques including Lt. Col. Edward H. White, II, graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, a few short weeks later one of three astronauts to be fatally burned on the launching pad in an Apollo project drill. The others honored and present were, in addition to White and Shepard, Capt. Jack R. Lousma, USMC; Dr. Edward G. Gibson, Jr.; Dr. Harrison H. Schmitt, LCDR Joseph P. Kerwin, M.D., USN, and Maj Edwin E. Aldrin, Jr., USAF.

The five whose duties elsewhere prevented their attending the luncheon were Maj. David R. Scott, USAF; Capt. William A. Anders, USAF; Maj. Edward G. Givens, Jr., USAF; John L. Swigert, and Capt. Alfred M. Worden, USAF.

Capt. Shepard is the officer in charge of America's astronaut group.

Pro Baseball's Rule Interpreted

Professional baseball's new Rule 3(K) governing signing of college players is subject to the following interpretations as noted by the NCAA's Committee on Professional Relations:

1. The rule is not retroactive. High school and college players who have been drafted previously fall under the old rule and are eligible to be drafted according to its provisions. If a player has not been drafted previously, he comes under the new rule.

2. Junior colleges are not included in the new rule, but if a player transfers from a junior college to a four-year college, he immediately comes under the new rule.

3. The new rule protects the player who becomes 21 during the school year since he cannot be drafted until the summer meeting.

4. Under the new rule a collegian may not be drafted because he becomes temporarily ineligible for academic reasons. He must not only be out of college more than 120 days, but have been dropped by that college in order to be taken.

5. The 120-day clause likewise is not applicable to the player who enlists or is drafted into the Armed Forces since he is not considered as having been separated from college during such enlistment or draft period.

6. While a collegian, in order to be protected under the new rule, must participate in the collegiate baseball program at his college or university, he does not have to participate against outside competition as a freshman to be protected. The rule gives protection to those at all four-year colleges which have a baseball program of any type.

7. Freshman football players who take part in spring football practice are protected if they practice with and/or play in freshman baseball games either before, during or after spring football practice.

8. If an eligible player is not a member of the varsity baseball squad as a sophomore, he can be drafted at the summer meeting or be signed during the summer vacation period whether drafted or not. However, if he starts college in the fall of his junior year, he comes under the new rule. This also applies to his junior and senior years.

11 NCAA Titlists from All Sections

Every section of the country is represented in the winner's circle at least once as 11 national champions were crowned in NCAA title events during March.

The West Coast walked off with the most laurels having five team champions. To the surprise of no one, UCLA won the basketball title, Southern California took the indoor track championship, Stanford recorded an upset win in swimming, UC Santa Barbara copped the College Division swimming title and Portland State was first in College Division wrestling.

Denver nipped Wyoming by less than one point to take its seventh straight skiing title and 11th crown in 14 years. Southern Illinois hosted and won the gymnastics meet making it three championships in four years for the Salukis.

Michigan State pulled a major surprise by winning the wrestling meet for the first time. Cross-state rival Michigan took runnerup honors marking the first time since 1950 that both Oklahoma and Oklahoma State had finished lower than second. Richard Sanders, a 155-pounder from Portland State, was named the outstanding wrestler in both the University and College Division tournaments.

NYU probably traveled farthest to win a title by going to San Fernando Valley State at Northridge, California, for the fencing meet. The Violets won for the second year in a row and seventh time in history.

Cornell brought more glory to the East by winning the Ice Hockey tournament, the first such title to go to an Eastern school since 1954. Big Red goalie Ken Dryden allowed just one goal in the two games, a record, and recorded only the second shutout in the tournament's 20 years.

Winston-Salem overcame a three-point deficit in the last four minutes to edge Southwest Missouri, 77-74, in the finals of the College Division Basketball Championship at Evansville, Ind. Earl Monroe of the winners scored 40 points in the championship game and 176 in five games enroute to winning the Most Outstanding Player accolade.

Certainly the most decisive champions were UCLA and Portland State. The Bruins won all four games in the basketball classic by at least 15 points and never trailed in the second half of any contest. Portland State won the College Division wrestling tournament by a 29-point margin. In the previous four years of the event, no team title had been won by more than five.

Records fell rather freely during the month. The indoor tracksters set or tied nine marks including the world record by Dave Patrick of Villanova in the 880. Patrick bested fabled Jim Ryun with a 1:48.9 performance.

NCAA swimmers set 11 American records and tied two others. Greg Buckingham and Dick Roth of champion Stanford and Ken Merten of Southern Methodist each cracked the record book twice, Buckingham at the expense of Yale Olympian Don Schollander.

Record crowds totaling 30,956 attended the three-day wrestling finals at Kent State. A total of 345 matmen representing 91 schools participated, both totals being all-time highs.
