

Ramer, Barnes Re-elected; Four NCAA Council Members Named

CONGRATULATIONS!—Earl M. Ramer, who was re-elected NCAA president at the 1972 Convention, congratulates ABC sportscaster Keith Jackson on his outstanding work as master of ceremonies at the Honors Luncheon. A pictorial feature on the Honors Luncheon is on page seven of the NEWS.

Dr. Earl M. Ramer has been elected for a second one-year term as president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Re-elected with the University of Tennessee professor was Secretary-Treasurer Dr. Samuel E. Barnes of District of Columbia Teachers College.

The NCAA member institutions also elected four new members to their 18-man Council.

Ralph E. Fadum of North Carolina State University replaces H. Boyd McWhorter of University of Georgia as District 3 vice-president; Wade R. Stinson of the University of Kansas succeeds David Swank of the University of Oklahoma as District 5 vice-president; and William Exum of Kentucky State College and Walter L. Hass of the University of Chicago take over for Richard P. Koenig of Valparaiso University and Dwight T. Reed of Lincoln University as members-at-large.

Swank and Koenig, however, remain on the geographically representative policy-making body of the NCAA. Swank fills the expired term of Frank R. Carver of the University of Pittsburgh as a member-at-large, while Koenig replaces Vice-President-at-Large William H. Ketz of Union College.

Marshall S. Turner, Jr., Johns Hopkins University, replaced Francis E. Smiley of Colorado School of Mines on the Association's Executive Committee.

Faculty Representative

President Ramer, who has been a member of the Council since 1964, is the faculty representative at Tennessee. A graduate of Peabody College in Nashville, with a Ph.D. from Columbia, he is in Tennessee's Department of Continuing and Higher Education.

Dr. Barnes is a professor of physical education at D.C. Teachers College. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Oberlin College and his Ph.D. from Ohio State.

Fadum is dean of engineering and professor of civil engineering at North Carolina State. He is faculty representative and president of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Stinson is serving his seventh year as athletic director at Kansas. He is chairman of the NCAA's Extra Events Committee.

Dr. Exum is athletic director and head of the physical education department at Kentucky State. He's also one of the busiest committee members for the NCAA, serving as chairman of the College Division Cross Country Meet, and National Summer Youth Sports Program bodies.

Hass is athletic director and chairman of the physical education department at the University of Chicago. He also is varsity football and golf coach. In addition, Hass serves as chairman of the NCAA College Division Basketball Committee, and is a member of the District 4 Scholarship Committee.

Turner is athletic director at Johns Hopkins. He served as chairman of the NCAA College Committee for four years and is secretary-treasurer of the Middle-Atlantic Conference.

Delegates Reject Proposals

No Special Convention in 1972

A Special NCAA Convention before July 1, 1972, was rejected by delegates to the Association's 1972 NCAA Convention in Hollywood, Fla.

The delegates turned down three separate proposals for special meetings.

A Special Convention for the joint purpose of considering legislative reorganization of the NCAA and the proposed amendments on financial aid was defeated by an overwhelming voice vote.

Then, a proposal for a Special Convention to consider only reorganization was defeated 219-135.

Third Proposal Loses

The third proposal for a Special Convention to consider financial aid only also failed by a voice vote.

"I'm not surprised," NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers said of the rejection of the Special Convention, "but I'm disappointed."

Many delegates expressed the opinion financial aid philosophy should be determined by the individual institutions. However, the reorganization of the NCAA into three or four divisions under one Constitution, but with separate Bylaws was given a chance to pass.

But it failed 219-135, apparently losing to the feeling among delegates that concrete proposals should be presented for thorough study before voting on adoption is scheduled.

The major recommendations of the Special Convention on Financial Aid included:

1. Financial aid for all athletes to be based on need.
2. Limitations on the number of financial aid awards.
3. Nationally observed candidate's acceptance procedure.
4. One-year maximum term for athletic-related financial aid awards.

"I believe there will be some dividing of the Association for legislative purposes," Byers said. "It was defeated at this Convention because of reluctance to take a chance that division would become divisive."

UD Freshmen Ruled Eligible in Football, Basketball; Recruiting Restrictions Approved at Convention

The approval of freshman eligibility for NCAA certified postseason football games and the National Collegiate Basketball Championship and adoption of several recruiting restrictions highlighted the voting action at the 1972 NCAA Convention.

The resolution to make freshmen eligible in football and basketball under provision of NCAA Bylaw 4 was split into separate proposals at the request of Charles Oldfather, faculty representative at the University of Kansas.

There seemed to be strong sentiment for approving freshmen in basketball, but not in football.

College Division Committee Chairman Stan Marshall asked CD members not to vote on the freshman issue, because it did not affect them. Freshmen have been eligible at College Division institutions since January, 1971.

The vote on making freshmen eligible in basketball at UD institutions received strong approval by voice vote.

NCAA President Earl M. Ramer requested a standing vote on the football proposal when he was unable to determine the Association's decision. The proposal passed 94-67. The rules become effective August 1, 1972.

The new eligibility pertains only to competition in post-season bowl games and NCAA Championship events. Determination of eligibility for regular-season competition is the prerogative of the institution and/or its conference, if any.

"The decision on using freshmen is strictly a matter to be determined by the individual conference or individual institution," NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers said at a press conference following the voting session.

The Association approved the following recruiting amendments:

- A prospective student-athlete may make only one paid visit to any institution, whether the institution provides the transportation or it is provided by a representative of its athletic interests;

- A prospective student-athlete cannot make a paid visit prior to the opening day of classes of his senior year;

- Entertainment of a prospective student-athlete and his parents is restricted to the institution's campus;
- There is to be no transportation of friends or relatives of a prospective student-athlete by any representative of an institution's athletic interests.

Among other rule changes were:

- The first basketball game of the season may be played on the last Friday in November. The present rule lists December 1 as the first date for scheduling a game.

New Starting Date in Football

- The starting date of the football season was moved from the second weekend in September to September 1.
- A graduate student is eligible to compete in intercollegiate athletics providing he attends the same school

First World University Games In U.S. Show USCSC Success

The staging of the World University Games in Plattsburgh, N. Y., is an historic event for America, in general, and the United States Collegiate Sports Council, in particular.

This will be the first time the spectacular Winter Games have ever been held in the U.S.

The Games, which officially will be known as the 1972 Lake Placid Universiade, will be contested at State University in New York at Plattsburgh, February 26-March 5. The University is located centrally between Montreal, Canada and Lake Placid, New York.

FISU Affiliate

The USCSC is the U.S. affiliate to the International Federation of University Sports (FISU), sponsors of the Games. FISU holds Summer and Winter Games on alternating years to foster international understanding among future world leaders through sports competition between student-athletes from various countries.

More than 20 countries and possibly 800 athletes are expected to compete this year.

The USCSC is composed of the NCAA, National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, National Junior College Athletic Association, and the American Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. There are nearly 1,400 member colleges participating in the program.

The USCSC promotes international intercollegiate sports year-round by having U.S. athletes and coaches compete with their counterparts from other countries.

The USCSC's role in the Lake Placid Universiade is proof of its success and world prestige. The USCSC is working with Plattsburgh State, the village of Lake Placid and a special commission appointed by New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller to make the '72 Games the best ever.

The theme of the Lake Placid Universiade is "For a Better World Tomorrow", indeed an appropriate goal for its participants.

Jess Hill, whose career as a player, coach and athletic director at the University of Southern California spans five decades, recently was honored with a testimonial dinner on his 65th birthday.

Upwards of 1,000 friends, business associates and Trojan fans saluted Jess as his career as a student-athlete, coach and administrator was reviewed. It was an evening long to be remembered, but then Jess Hill is a man long to be remembered.

New Commissioner

Hill, who retired as head of the USC athletic department January 3, is the first fulltime commissioner of the fledgling Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

The PCAA, however, has to give its new commissioner some time off to take the world trip, which was presented to Jess and his lovely wife, Betty, at the testimonial dinner.

Bill Wall, president of the Basketball Coaches Association, made a big hit with the media when he told of his group's inquiry into the possible use of lie detector tests for finding recruiting violators.

"It started as a gag by Abe Lemons (Oklahoma City University coach), when he suggested all coaches take lie detector tests to see which ones were cheating in their recruiting," Wall said at a press conference during the NCAA Convention in Florida.

"But I am serious about it, and we have contacted police departments to see if such tests would be possible. We have asked members of our basketball coaches to report to us any violations, and we in turn will pass them on to the conferences and the NCAA for investigation.

"We are determined to expose any cheaters," continued Wall, who is the director of athletics and basketball coach at MacMurray College, "and we (basketball coaches) are starting in our profession."

Elsewhere in Education

College Enrollment of Veterans Up 25%

The Veterans Administration reported there were 737,000 veterans attending college under the GI bill in November, a 25 per cent increase over a year earlier.

In addition, 354,000 veterans and servicemen were in school below the college level, 19 per cent more than a year ago.

Surveys Show Higher Enrollment, But Fewer Jobs for Graduates

The results of three separate nationwide surveys in Higher Education and National Affairs show that total enrollment at colleges and universities increased this year, freshman enrollment declined, and job prospects for graduates again appear bleak.

The enrollment data were collected by Garland G. Parker of the University of Cincinnati for the 52nd annual survey by School and Society, and by the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education. The employment picture was reported by Michigan State University's Placement Bureau which surveyed 346 employers across the nation. Major highlights:

• Parker's survey, of enrollment at 1,147 institutions, shows full-time enrollment up 3.2 per cent, part-time enrollment up 0.9 per cent, and grand-total enrollment up 2.6 per cent. Freshman enrollment, at 980 institutions, was down 0.7 per cent, the first such decrease since 1966.

• The Carnegie Commission survey, based on returns from 444 four-year institutions, reported 40,600 unfilled freshman places, a 14 per cent increase over 1970. If the figures are extrapolated to include 1,500 four-year colleges, the commission said, the total number of vacancies would be 110,000.

• The MSU survey of employers found expected demand down 1.8 per cent for bachelor's degree candidates, down 12.4 per cent for master's degree candidates, and down 26.8 per cent for doctoral candidates.

Reduction of HEW's Staff Ordered

HEW has been ordered to reduce its staff by 10.2 per cent by July 1, 1972, it has been disclosed.

The reduction of some 11,400 employees from the 112,000-member department would exceed the President's announced reduction goal but presumably would not affect the U. S. Office of Education whose reduction plans cleared the Office of Management and Budget earlier. Secretary Elliot L. Richardson scheduled a meeting with employees Dec. 17 to discuss the reduction plans in more detail.

Columnary Craft Freshmen Eligibility Has Everyone Talking

The approval at the NCAA Convention of freshmen being eligible for NCAA certified postseason football games and the National Collegiate Basketball Championship under provision of NCAA Bylaw 4 has caused much comment throughout the country. Here are some of the views expressed:

John Wooden, UCLA basketball coach: "I'm very much against it. I simply think it takes a boy a year to get used to the adjustment and orientation of college life."

John Pont, Indiana football coach: "I think you have seen your last freshman football player flunk out of school."

Bill Pace, Vanderbilt football coach: "I don't think you'll see too many freshmen on the starting teams, but I can conceive of several being on the specialty teams."

Al McGuire, Marquette basketball coach: "It is better for the young fellows to have a year out . . . it's throwing them into the rat race too soon."

Frank Broyles, Arkansas football coach: "I really need a kicker as anyone who followed our team last season knows. I'm pretty sure I have the best one in our state lined up to come and he's a freshman."

Bill Yeoman, Houston football coach: "You won't see any freshmen on the varsity at the University of Houston. I do not feel freshmen are mature enough physically or emotionally to compete on that level at their age."

Johnny Orr, Michigan basketball coach: "It's a revolutionary thing and I think it's wonderful. I don't see why freshmen should sit down. I think a lot of freshmen will play."

Vince Gibson, Kansas State football coach: "Well I'll be darned (it passed). There sure won't be many (freshmen) playing in our conference."

Chuck Neinas, commissioner of the Big Eight: "If we could get enough major conferences to agree, we wouldn't play freshmen. But . . . if the other guy gives them four years, we have to change the rules, too."

Roy Skinner Vanderbilt basketball coach: "I've pushed for such a move for a long time. I feel like we waste our players who don't get to play on the varsity. I believe B-team is much more valuable to a boy than work on a freshman team. Now, we'll have a B-team schedule instead of a freshman schedule. I don't buy this business that competing for a varsity position will create undue pressures, and take up more of a freshman's time, than has been true in the past."

Adolph Rupp, Kentucky basketball coach: "I see no reason why a freshman can't play varsity basketball. It means one thing—you never get caught with a bad team. You can rebuild anytime and that's a wonderful thing."

Earle Edwards, North Carolina State football coach and president of the American Football Coaches Association: "It will cost you just as much to put in a junior varsity program. Besides, I don't think freshmen are very likely to play for many teams. When you see how cautious coaches are about using sophomores, you have to wonder about freshmen."

Dick Campbell, Xavier basketball coach: "I think the ruling will be more beneficial to football than to basketball."

John Bateman, Rutgers football coach: "If freshmen can play on your team, you don't have a very good varsity program."

Jerry Tarkanian, Cal State Long Beach basketball coach: "I don't think it will have too great an effect on varsity competition . . . I think the ruling will help about 15 players in the country who could make a good varsity team as freshmen."

Fran Curci, Miami football coach: "I think it's great. It's a step forward as far as costs are concerned. Most important, it didn't seem fair to jeopardize young players who are capable of playing."

Bill Musselman, Minnesota basketball coach: "There will be more pressure in recruiting the top 20 kids in the country, fighting for them like we never had before."

J. D. Morgan, UCLA athletic director: "I believe the 18-year-old vote did something for the climate of the whole thing. If you're old enough to vote, you're old enough to play basketball or football on the varsity level."

Carroll Williams, Santa Clara basketball coach: "I don't like the idea. Not too many freshmen can play at our level. The freshman year is a big adjustment for a high school graduate to make. It will take an exceptional kid both in the classroom and on the floor to play as a freshman."

Larry Naviaux, Boston University football coach: "I prefer not to play freshmen. My concern is academically. I think we have to let them get their feet on the ground."

Gary Colson, Pepperdine basketball coach: "I'm for it 100 per cent. It will open new avenues of recruiting."

Ted Owens, Kansas basketball coach: "I can't see any way it'll hurt a freshman. He'll progress much faster playing against the varsity all the time."

Bill Battle, Tennessee football coach: "I can't see the freshman program being eliminated. The way I look at it, it is sort of like the 11th game—do what you want to about it."

Russell Walseth, Colorado basketball coach: "I think if a young man is old enough to go into the service or to vote he should be able to play varsity basketball."

And, on and on it goes.

NCAA Profile

Ilg Aware of Problems Facing College Athletics

George F. Ilg, the District 8 Vice-President on the NCAA Council, is a man keenly aware of the problems currently confronting intercollegiate athletics.

"The need to consider reorganization and the financial aid programs is very important now," he said.

Ilg also feels his role as Fresno State College's faculty representative has increased in importance the past few years.

"Faculty representatives are now the liaison between the athletic department and administration. This is much more demanding than 15 years ago when my main responsibility was signing eligibility forms."

High Priority

One NCAA program which he gives high priority is the NSYSP program currently awaiting Senate appropriation of operating funds.

"The summer youth program needs the support of all NCAA institutions," Ilg said. "Each athletic director should make a special effort to contact his Congressman concerning this very important program."

Ilg serves as President of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and Chairman of the Fresno State College Senate Board on Athletics.

A native of San Francisco, Ilg received his B. S. from the University of California, Davis in 1936 and the following year received his M. S. in Dairy Technology from Ohio State University. This was followed by brief stints as branch manager of the Borden Company of California and professor of Dairy Industry at Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo both before and after the war.

He came to Fresno State in 1948 and has served as Assistant Dean of Agricultural Sciences

George Ilg
Council Member

from 1948 to the present.

As project director of the Fresno State College Peace Corps, Ilg was in charge of several planning trips to Iran, India and Ceylon.

He is a member of the American Dairy Science Association; Alpha Zeta; Alpha Gamma Rho and the National Association of Colleges and Teachers of Agriculture.

he did as an undergraduate and has eligibility remaining within four years after initial enrollment.

• An athlete's name or picture may be used for limited promotional purposes, provided he does not receive remuneration and he does not directly endorse the product.

• A student-athlete is immediately eligible for NCAA events if he transferred because his original institution no longer sponsored his sport on an intercollegiate basis.

The approval of a National College Division Soccer Championship on a trial basis also received approval.

The Association voted down a resolution authorizing a survey by the Television Committee to determine whether a plan for controlling basketball telecasts should be formulated.

Convention delegates voted against restricting to two the number of visits an institution's athletic staff or other representative may make to a prospective student-athlete and also against limiting to five the number of institutions to which a prospective student-athlete may make an expense-paid visit.

The five paid-visit limitation received a 191-144 favorable vote, but inasmuch as it was a Constitutional amendment, it needed a two-thirds (222 votes) approval.

Resolutions favoring summer basketball programs were soundly rejected. However, a proposal to restrict the employment of a prospective student-athlete, who has finished his sophomore year in high school, in a summer camp for which institutional facilities are used or in which a university employee participates failed.

A proposal to abolish the 1.600 rule failed by a 186-125 vote.

"The 1.6 rule has been under attack from the day it was first approved," commented Byers. "Arguments against it reached their peak at this Convention and it was not repealed. I believe it's finally fixed."

It was a record-breaking Convention as there were 750 total delegates (old record was 733), and 435 voting delegates (equalling record). A record vote of 365 (315-50) was cast favoring the advertising promotion change.

Freshman Year Counts As Year of Eligibility

Member institutions are reminded that while approval of freshman eligibility in football and basketball at University Division institutions permits frosh participation in an NCAA Championship event or postseason football it does not permit four years of varsity competition in a particular sport after the freshman year.

For a student-athlete to be able to enjoy four varsity seasons in a sport one of the four seasons must be as a freshman.

of selection of the participating teams, Wednesday, March 1.

Scott also reported that commencing with the 1973 Tournament the pairings for the National Semifinals games will be rotated annually. Presently, East always plays Midwest, and West meets Midwest. In 1973, a shift will be made so East meets Midwest and Midwest vs. West, while in 1974 East will play West and Midwest vs. Midwest.

The 1973 Finals will be in the St. Louis (Mo.) Arena, while the Greensboro, N. C., Coliseum will be site of the 1974 Finals.

Under the new format, the National Semifinal games will both be played on Saturday afternoon, with the National third-place game and Championship game played on Monday night.

Scott said features which were attractive to the Tournament Committee, were one less day of class time lost by participating student-athletes and slightly more rest for the players between the Semifinal and Final games.

Also, both Semifinals games will be shown nationally on television, he added, rather than the split national coverage now employed.

1972 Basketball Championship Eyes Record

The 1972 National Collegiate Basketball Championship appears to have an excellent chance of breaking the basketball attendance record at the Los Angeles Memorial Sports Arena.

The record for the largest crowd to ever attend a basketball game at the Sports Arena is 15,742. The record was set at the 1968 National Collegiate Basketball Championship in the semifinal game between UCLA and Houston.

The 1972 Championship, which will be held March 23 and 25, already is a sellout at the Sports Arena.

Howard Clips Billikens For 1971 Soccer Title

Howard University nudged St. Louis University, 3-2, to capture the 1971 National Collegiate Soccer Championship before 5,800 fans at the Orange Bowl.

Coach Lincoln Phillips' team became the first predominantly black school to ever win a National Collegiate Championship.

The Bisons also ended St. Louis' 44-game win streak and the Billikens' bid for a third straight championship.

Howard, a 1-0 winner over Harvard in the semifinals, was led by Alvin Henderson, a speedy forward from Trinidad.

Henderson scored Howard's first goal to tie the game, 1-1, had an assist on the second, and tallied the clincher in the second half.

St. Louis, winner of eight of the previous 12 national championships, had gained the finals with a 3-2 win over San Francisco in the other semifinals game at the Orange Bowl.

The Billikens' Mike Seerey, who scored one of St. Louis' two goals against Howard's outstanding goalie Samuel Tetleh, was named the Offensive Player of the Championship.

Shutout Streak

Tetleh extended his shutout streak to five with the 1-0 whitewash against Harvard.

Phillips was happy his team was going against the tremendously successful St. Louis team in the championship game.

"I was very impressed with what I saw," Phillips said after St. Louis edged San Francisco, "but they are vulnerable."

The confident Bisons came from behind twice in the opening half to tie the score before Henderson scored the winning goal early in the final half.

Henderson, Howard's second leading scorer behind Keith Aqui, was a doubtful performer after suffering a knee injury in the Harvard game. The Trinidadian sophomore was injured as he assisted on the Bisons' only score.

Phillips, who says he "likes being the underdog," has built Howard into a power in two years. The Bisons' only loss last year was a 4-3 setback to UCLA in the NCAA semifinals.

Howard brought a 13-0 record to the Orange Bowl. St. Louis was 16-0 entering the Championship.

Phillips has only four seniors on his 26-man squad, so it appears the Bisons may be out to build a soccer dynasty of their own.

Patulski Named Lombardi Winner

Notre Dame's Walt Patulski is the winner of the second annual Vince Lombardi Trophy as the outstanding college lineman of 1971.

The 6-6, 230-pound senior defensive end was awarded a 45-pound mounted block of granite trophy at a $100-a-plate dinner in Houston, Tex. Proceeds went to the American Cancer Society.

Larry Jacobson of Nebraska, Ron Eslay of Louisiana State University, and Rick Glover of Nebraska were the other finalists.

SUNY at Plattsburgh Eager for '72 Games

From February 25 through March 5 will be one of the most exciting periods in the history of the State University of New York at Plattsburgh. During these ten days, several years of planning and preparation will be realized as Plattsburgh State College plays host to the 1972 World University Winter Games.

FISU Sponsored

The University Games are sponsored every two years by the International University Sports Federation (FISU), and this winter's event is the first ever to be held in the United States.

The eligibility rules require that the competitors be amateurs according to the rules of their particular discipline, be between the ages of 17 and 27; be full-time students at accredited universities, colleges and technical schools; and have taken the last prescribed examinations. Former students who have obtained their academic degrees in the year preceding the Universiade may also enter.

Sharing the responsibility for the success of the Winter Games with Plattsburgh State are the United States Collegiate Sports Council, a temporary State commission appointed by Governor Rockefeller, and the Village of Lake Placid.

Student athletes will compete in traditional Alpine and Nordic skiing events, in figure skating and speed skating, and in ice hockey. The ice arena in the College's new field house complex will be completed in time to house competitions in ice hockey and figure skating, and facilities at Whiteface Mountain, Mt. Van Hovenberg, Intervales and Lake Placid will be the site of competitions in the various other events.

Aggie's Japanese Trip Proves Big Hit for College Football

By Ray Franks, Editor & Publisher

National Directory of College Athletics

TOKYO, JAPAN—College football took on a truly international flavor in late December when Utah State University visited Japan for a series of two post-season games.

It took inventive money-raising schemes (including contributions from the players themselves) and a special decision by the NCAA to get the final hurdles cleared for the 15,000-mile, 13-day trip, the first such meetings between U. S. and Japan college teams.

One Sided Wins

The Aggies, an 8-3 team last season with the likes of Texas and Oklahoma on their 1972 schedule, beat a contingent of Tokyo all-stars, 50-6, in a game that was dubbed the "Silk Bowl." The following Sunday, they won in similar fashion from an all-star squad at Osaka, 45-8.

In all fairness, however, it must be pointed out that Utah State outweighed their adversaries from the Orient about 40 pounds per man and had nearly a foot height advantage. The heaviest player on the Japanese squads was listed at 183 pounds on the program.

Unknown to most Americans, 53 colleges play U.S.-type football in Japan, and for the games with Utah State, the best players from all these schools were chosen. Considerably behind the Americans in technical knowledge, the single-wing is still big in the Japanese's offensive arsenal, and the wishbone is something they still relate to chicken creole.

"They were better on offense than I expected," said Utah State coach Chuck Mills in his best diplomatic voice. "They threw the ball well on the short patterns, and they are good pass receivers." And he added, "I don't imagine many people in the States realize the handicap the Japanese play under."

He was referring to these facts:

1. Japanese players must buy their own shoes, shirts, pants, pads, everything. Football is still a minor sport and there is not enough ticket sale revenue to finance the program.

2. None of the teams have a paid coach or trainer on the staff. Only one has a coach who is connected with the school. Others are volunteers who conduct practice after leaving regular jobs. Many times the coaches never make workouts.

The Japanese are making progress, however, mainly from help of U.S. servicemen stationed in the country. They welcomed the visit of Utah State as a clinic, as well as bowl game, and one of their coaches, Ken Takeda, stayed with the Americans the entire 13 days. Last fall, after the post-season games had been approved, the American Football Association of Japan (the national organization that embraces all colleges playing football) sent one of its coaches, Yoichi Aminaka of Tokyo, to Logan, Utah for a week. He lived with Aggie coaches as he scouted them, and stayed on for their game with Wyoming.

Eager to Play

Knowing they would be outmanned badly, the Japanese nevertheless were eager to schedule the games for the interest it would create in football. Although it is not uncommon to attract 60,000 for a high school playoff game in baseball, the country's No. 1 sport, football rarely draws more than 10,000 for its college championship game. A crowd of 3,000 is more like the average.

The giants of Utah State did command attention. When they first boarded their Japan Air Lines charter in San Francisco, the Aggies drew astonished looks from the tiny kimono-clad stewardesses. Along the Ginza of Tokyo, shoppers and businessmen gawked at the touring Americans.

The dozen newspapers and TV stations of Tokyo conducted many interviews and covered routine workouts because a relatively-new commodity was being introduced to their people. They were curious about the players, asking such questions as: "How many of you are married? . . . What is your major in college? . . . Do you plan to play professional football? . . . Is this your first trip to Japan?"

The pre-game ballyhoo created sufficient interest to bring in 30,000 fans to the game in Tokyo, despite the fact it was televised live from Olympic Stadium. Tickets were priced at 1000 yen or about $3.25, U.S. money. This is about half price of U.S. college game tickets but is considerably more than the 75-cent price for a regular contest in Japan.

Being the first American college team to play in the land of the rising sun, Utah State was accorded the red carpet treatment. Even the U. S. ambassador to Japan, Armin Meyer, got into the act. He was present for the game in Tokyo, participated in the pre-game ceremonies, and made the following observation:

"In the stream of good-will sports visits to Japan, the great American game of football has unfortunately been slighted up to now. I am pleased that this oversight is being rectified by the visit of the fine Utah State team."

Famous for their conservative politeness and gift-giving, the Japanese played the perfect hosts. Sight-seeing tours and welcoming parties were more conspicuous than workouts and squad meetings on the Utah State itinerary. It was fortunate the Utags were not forced to be at top strength. The 14-hour flight over the Pacific had the Americans reeling the first couple days before the whirlwind-dervish social calendar took over.

The Americans found out you can't outgive the Japanese. At the official welcoming party before the first game, a lavish buffet was served the players of both teams, coaches, and booster club members with the Utah party. Expensive hand-painted bowls were presented both athletic director Frank Williams and coach Mills of the visitors.

Gifts for Americans

After the Tokyo game, the Japanese gridders dashed to the sidelines and came up with happy coats (kimono-style lounging jackets) for their American friends. In an impromptu act, the Aggies started peeling off their game jerseys and gave them away. But that wouldn't do. The Japanese came right back with their game shirts, specially-made for the All-Star game and much more expensive than the Aggie equipment. Pointing up the acute difference in size, some of the Utah State gridders had to take off their pads to get the Japanese jerseys over their shoulders.

Christmas is not recognized by the majority of the people in Japan, where Buddhism is dominant. However, on Christmas Eve, families in Osaka took the American players and coaches into their homes to celebrate the Christian event.

Although several Japanese officials spoke fair English, the language barrier caused some problems in the first U.S.-Japan Good Will football series. No one in the 125-member American group spoke Japanese. "One good thing about it," quipped Aggie quarterback Tony Adams, "we won't have to worry about them catching our audibles at the line of scrimmage."

How the games were scheduled is another story in itself. Utah State's fine 8-3 record qualified it for post-season play, but the groundwork had been laid long before the season started. It all began when coach Mills of the Aggies conducted clinics for U.S. military personnel in Japan in the summer of 1970. A few Japanese college and semi-pro coaches showed up for the classes, much to the delight of Mills and the servicemen.

Vigorous work by two former Aggies—Chris Pella and Bill Vasas (with U.S. Naval recreation departments in the Far East)—got the ball rolling. Mills and coach Takeda, the Osaka coach who had spent two years at Michigan State getting his doctor's degree in psychology, then swung into action on their respective sides of the Pacific.

After the idea for the games had been tossed into the open, Japan Air Lines, a government-owned operation, insisted on flying the Utah State coach to Japan last summer. He accepted, and after a week with Takeda and other Nippon officials, the plan was formulated.

The next move was to get NCAA approval.

That left one chore undone . . . financing the trip. Japan could offer no guarantee, but did agree to pick up all costs of the team after it landed in the country. They also agreed to split all profits after expenses, if any. The problem of getting the team to the Orient and back was still there.

Money Plan

Aggie officials huddled for several days and came up with a plan that could be called irregular, to say the least. But it worked. First, they asked every member of the coaching staff and all players to contribute $250 each toward air fare. "Their first reaction was they couldn't come up with that kind of money," related coach Mills. "I told them, 'go borrow it from a relative or a bank . . . this is a chance of a lifetime.'"

As it turned out, only four players failed to make the trip because of finances. The backfield was hardest hit when three starters chose to remain in the snowy clime of Utah. All-American end Bob Wicks declined so he could participate in All-Star games in the States.

After 40 players and coaches brought in checks, athletic director Williams decided to charter a 140-passenger jet and sell additional space to boosters and alums. All but 20 seats on the DC-8 were peddled. More money was needed so coach Mills and his secretary sent out hundreds of letters to exes and top industries in the country, asking for donations. The requests brought in about $5,000.

The trip abounded with a festive atmosphere from the very start. Aggie assistant coach Rich Groth used the event for a honeymoon. Originally planning to be married on the plane enroute, Groth and his bride relented to the whims of relatives and exchanged vows the day before departure. And Bob Hope made a fitting appearance on the scene. The Utah State party was half-way between San Francisco and Honolulu when Hope and his Christmas show troupe pulled alongside in a military plane, heading for Viet Nam.

"I wouldn't be surprised if you Aggies could beat the L.A. Rams," commented Hope over the plane's intercom. "After the Rams-Redskins game the other night (won by the Redskins), I'm what you might call financially clean!"

Reflecting on the marathon trip, coach Mills offered: "I like to do different things with the team each year." What he can do next season to top the intercontinental excursion to Japan must have athletic director Williams scratching his head and keeping an active file on the Fiji Islands, French Riviera, and other strongholds of American-type collegiate football.

Council Acts on O.I. Amendment

By action of the NCAA Council on January 9, the amendment to Official Interpretation 112, identified as proposal No. 51 in the 1972 NCAA Convention Program, will become effective October 1, 1972.

All other amendments to Official Interpretations of existing Constitution and Bylaws provisions became effective immediately upon adoption at the Convention, January 8, 1972.

Amendments to the Constitution and Bylaws become effective August 1, 1972.

(Note: Publication of an interpretation in this column constitutes official notice to the membership. New O.I.s printed herein may be reviewed by the annual Convention at the request of any member. Questions concerning these or other O.I.s should be directed to Warren S. Brown, assistant executive director, in the Association's executive office.)

Professional Rulings—Hardship Draft

Situation: A student-athlete with eligibility remaining is advised by a professional basketball league that he qualifies under its hardship provisions and is eligible for the draft. The student-athlete voluntarily requests that his name be placed on the draft list. (100)

Question: Does this voluntary action professionalize the student-athlete in accordance with NCAA rules?

Answer: No. By voluntarily requesting that his name be placed on the draft list, he has not entered into an agreement to negotiate a contract with a professional sports organization. [C3-1-(a)-(2)]

Situation: A student-athlete with eligibility remaining agrees that his name may be placed on the hardship draft of a professional league, then requests that his name be withdrawn prior to the actual draft. (101)

Question: Since the student-athlete requested that his name be withdrawn from the list prior to the actual draft, does he remain eligible for intercollegiate athletics?

Answer: Yes. [C3-1-(a)-(2)]

Situation: A student-athlete with eligibility remaining requests that his name be placed on a professional league's hardship draft list and his name is on the list at the time of the draft, but he is not drafted. (102)

Question: Is the student-athlete a professional?

Answer: Yes. The student-athlete became a professional when his name was a part of the actual hardship draft (i.e., entering into an agreement to negotiate). [C3-1-(a)-(2)]

Situation: A student-athlete with eligibility remaining requests that his name be placed on a professional league's hardship draft list. The student-athlete is subsequently drafted, but does not sign with any team. (103)

Question: Has the student-athlete professionalized himself?

Answer: Yes. The fact that he did not actually sign an agreement with a professional team does not negate the fact that he became ineligible by entering into an agreement to negotiate a professional contract. [C3-1-(a)-(2)]

Awards

Situation: An institution's football team participates in a postseason football contest. (85)

Question: Is it permissible for the institution to provide awards to team members because of their participation in the postseason football contest in addition to those awards presented by the management of the event?

Answer: Yes; however, these institutional awards must be properly personalized and the total cost of all awards presented to each individual participant both by the game management and the institution must not exceed a total cost of $100. [C3-1-(g)-(7)-(ii)]

Situation: An institution's athletic team is selected as a national champion by a press service, newspaper, magazine or other outside agency or organization. (86)

Question: Does such designation of a team as a national champion permit the institution to present awards to members of the team in recognition of the "national championship"?

Answer: No. Only teams winning an NCAA or NAIA national championship may be presented such awards by the institution. [C3-1-(g)-(7)-(iii)]

Track Coaches Request Help For Program

The Executive Committee of the U.S. Track Coaches Association has recommended the United States of America supplement the existing track and field program by emphasizing and/or establishing some other areas of the sport.

In addition to the established programs more effort should be made to expand and support an international junior track and field program; increase support of the World Student Games; provide competition for all students (graduates, etc.), and create a national director of track and field.

The national junior program would provide international experience for younger athletes.

Involvement in the World Student Games would provide international track and field experience for more of our collegians and, permitting graduate students in all types of local competition would stimulate their growth.

The U.S. Track Coaches Association believes a national director of track and field should be established to better coordinate all facets of United States track and field.
