

Special Convention set for December 3-4

Attention will be focused on a series of proposals designed to restructure Division I when the 4th special Convention of the NCAA is held in St. Louis December 3-4.

The Convention will open officially at 2 p.m. December 3 at Stouffer's Riverfront Towers with the general round table, chaired by NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John L. Toner, University of Connecticut. Most Division I-A allied conferences will meet either in the morning before the round table or shortly after its conclusion. A schedule of events—including related meetings—appears at the end of this article.

A total of 23 proposals—plus any amendments to amendments that may be submitted—will be considered at the business session, which will begin at 9 a.m. December 4.

The statement of Convention purposes notes that the agenda for the special Convention is limited to legislative proposals directly related to Division I restructuring. Any legislative proposal not qualifying will be ruled out of order.

The Special Committee on NCAA Governance, Organization and Services began addressing the Division I restructuring question late in 1979. In March 1981, a subcommittee of five individuals was appointed and assigned two topics: The effectiveness of the 1978 Division I football reorganization into Division I-A and Division I-AA and the overall growth of Division I membership, especially in terms of Division I basketball classification.

The demand for a special Convention developed in August and September after the College Football Association contracted with NBC television for a four-year football television package apart from the NCAA's $263.5 million package with ABC and CBS.

CFA member conferences, faced with the question of choosing between the NCAA package and the CFA package, held a series of meetings between August 21 and September 8. At that time, the more basic question of Division I restructuring became the

Annual Convention

122 proposals in Official Notice

Delegates to the 1982 NCAA Convention in Houston will be facing virtually the same number of proposals as they considered at the 1981 Convention.

A total of 122 proposals will appear in the Official Notice of the Convention, which will be mailed from the national office Friday, November 20. The proposals are distributed among 12 legislative topics, and no proposal, topic or group of topics seems to stand out as being more important than others, as was the case at the 1981 Convention when governance, academic requirements, financial aid and recruiting issues dominated the program.

The NCAA membership will consider the proposed legislation when the Convention assembles January 11-13 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Houston. Related meetings will begin January 8.

Chief executive officers of active and allied members will receive forms to be used in appointing voting delegates, alternates and visitors to the Convention. Those forms, which will accompany the Official Notice, are to be returned at the earliest convenience of the chief executive officers.

The legislative package of 122 proposals is below the 10-year average of 139. The smallest number considered during the period was 105 in 1980, while the record high was 225 in 1976.

This marks the second consecutive Convention for slight increases in the number of proposals to be considered. Since 1979, however, the numbers have remained relatively stable, not rising above 134 (1979) or dropping below 105 (1980). At no other period during the last decade has the amount of legislation to be voted upon remained so constant.

Excluding 31 proposals in the consent packages (20 routine amendments to the bylaws and 11 to the constitution), the largest number of proposals for any topical grouping is 14 found in the financial aid, membership and eligibility sections. There will be 13 recruiting proposals, while championships attracts 10 amendments. Other groupings include general (six), television (five), amateur (four), governance (four), playing and practice seasons (four) and academics (three).

A review of the proposed legislation for the January Convention will appear in the November 30 and December 15 issues of the NCAA News.

McCarthy earns Award of Valor

United States Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy, who was wounded in a March 30 assassination attempt on President Reagan, has been selected to receive the NCAA's Award of Valor at the 1982 honors luncheon.

McCarthy, a football letterman at the University of Illinois, Champaign, in 1970 and 1971, was injured when he positioned himself between the potential assassin and Reagan. He was struck in the abdomen by a .22 caliber bullet and knocked to the ground by the impact. McCarthy was hospitalized for nine days at the George Washington University Hospital but has since recovered and is back on duty.

After graduating from Illinois in 1971 with a degree in finance, McCarthy joined the U.S. Secret Service in February 1972 and was assigned to the Chicago field office, where he was responsible for investigating counterfeit currency and for investigating the theft, forgery and negotiation of U.S. Treasury checks and bonds.

In February 1979, he was transferred to the Presidential Protection Division in Washington, D.C., where he was among those responsible for the protection of President Carter. Since December 1980, McCarthy has been assigned to President Reagan.

The following honors have been presented to McCarthy:

- City of Chicago Medal of Merit.
- Illinois Police Association Valor Award.
- U.S. Secret Service Valor Award.
- U.S. Treasury Department Outstanding Performance Award.
- Honor Legion Award of the New York Police Department.
- International Association of Chiefs of Police/Parade Magazine Policeman of the Change recommended in automatic qualification

The NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee has recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee that no more than 40 percent of the championship bracket may be allocated to champions of allied conferences and that, beginning with the 1983 championship, those conferences qualifying automatically will be determined strictly by the NCAA's Rating Percentage Index.

The committee stipulated that fractions are to be rounded upward; so in the current 48-team bracket, for example, no more than 20 conferences could qualify automatically. The committee, however, would have the prerogative of recommending fewer than 20 conferences for automatic qualification.

The RPI—which is based on winning percentage, opponents' winning percentage and the opponents' opponents' winning percentages—will be computed for all games of the 1981-82 season, including postseason tournaments. The RPI index alone will determine those conferences that will receive automatic qualification.

Final RPI figures will be available to allied conferences by May 15, 1982.

In one other change, the committee voted to recommend that a conference's representation in the tournament be limited to a maximum of 50 percent of its membership. Again, fractions are to be rounded upward.

Committee Chair David R. Gavitt, Providence College, said the reasons for the recommendations included the following:

1. During the past two years, there has been continued proliferation of automatic qualification. Allowing 50 percent of the field to qualify automatically no longer will accomplish what the committee originally intended to do in terms of striking a balance between the number of automatic qualifiers and at-large positions.

2. It is in the best interest of the tournament for the committee to have the flexibility to select 60 percent of the field on an at-large basis. Due to the quality of basketball being played at the Division I level, it would be advantageous for the committee to have more at-large positions.

3. The changes provide more quality control. Too many conferences presently are gaining a privilege and financial rewards without earning them. The constant flow of institutions moving to Division I needs to be discouraged. Presently, a great incentive to move to Division I exists even though the quality of basketball of the institution or conference desiring to make the move may be questionable. Institutions are motivated to move to Division I, join or form a new conference, meet the minimum criteria and then seek automatic qualification.

The committee met October 21 in Chicago.

The special Convention

Dissatisfaction with the current status of Division I in general and Division I-A Football in particular has led to the call of a special NCAA Convention, the fourth in the Association's 75-year history.

Reduced to a simple form, the problem to be addressed in St. Louis December 3-4 consists of two parts:

- The 1978 football restructuring that created the Divisions I-A and I-AA Football classifications has not achieved its announced objectives. That restructuring was to assure that institutions with comparable major football programs would be able to function nationally within their own classification; i.e., Division I-A. There were 139 institutions so classified in the spring of 1978. There now are 137, and their respective football programs are quite disparate.

- The three-division structure created in 1973 was designed to place institutions with similar overall athletic programs in the same division for competitive and voting purposes. To a considerable degree, that has been the case in Divisions II and III. But the Division I criteria have not been a meaningful standard for institutions seeking Division I classification. The division has grown by about five institutions per year, and many believe the disparity among current Division I institutions is comparable to the differences which existed in the membership as a whole before the adoption of the three-division format.

A special Convention is costly and time-consuming, but the seriousness of the issues prompted the Council to conclude that this special meeting was necessary. When an appreciable number of members believe such a Convention is the best way to treat a serious problem, it is the NCAA Council's obligation to respond to that desire.

A number of Division I members asked for an open meeting of institutional chief executive officers to discuss the current problem, and the Council responded by opening the September 28-29 meeting of Division I CEOs to any chief executive in that division wishing to attend. Other Division I members specifically called for a special Convention to vote on solutions to the restructuring problem apart from the important business of the annual Convention. The Council responded by calling the special Convention in St. Louis.

The Council also has the responsibility to suggest possible solutions to problems facing the Association—solutions that are workable and effective, open for discussion by all members and as fair as possible to as many members as possible. Those considerations are reflected in the amendments proposed by the Council for action in St. Louis.

In most instances, effective solutions to difficult problems usually are balanced and reasonable, rather than radical. In terms of solving the current Division I problem, the Council's proposed amendments are designed to achieve the original objectives of NCAA restructuring while providing the opportunity for institutions of the future to achieve Division I-A or overall Division I status if their programs merit.

Opinions Out Loud

Richard Zernack
New York Times

"Division III schools, which incidentally include colleges and universities both large and small, offer no special treatment to varsity athletes. Athletes are students who play on teams rather than athletes who attend (or might not attend) classes. No scholarships, no preferential admission, no special jobs or no under-the-table money are offered.

"Indeed, philosophically, Division III schools view varsity athletics as the honors program for those students gifted in an athletic sense, rather than in music, English, history and so on. The focus of the program is on what is best for the participant, rather than the won-lost record or the size of the crowd.

"On a competitive level, although performances undoubtedly do not match those seen in Division I, the quality can be surprisingly good. Contests played between two Division III schools can be and usually are just as exciting and interesting as those between two national powers. Indeed, Division III schools and athletes have the opportunity for postseason competition leading to national championships. They are assured of meeting other nonscholarship competition throughout. And for the Division III team that wants to test its mettle against the 'big-timers,' it is always possible to schedule a few Division I opponents.

"Division III athletics, because of its participative orientation, is less burdened with restrictive rules and regulations affecting the athletes. Recent actions and sentiment within both the NCAA and the AIAW indicate an even greater move in the direction of liberalizing restrictions on participation within Division III. This is as it should be, because it is within Division III that one can find college students engaging in athletics merely for the love of sport.

"The Division III philosophy presents an effective model for intercollegiate athletics. It represents the largest single part of the American intercollegiate athletic system, albeit almost totally ignored by the news media. The philosophy is one that is educationally and ethically sound and appropriate. It is the only philosophy that truly embodies the often abused concept of amateurism."

Springfield system works

The Associated Press

One percent of its students were all-Americans in various sports last year. At last count, its graduates ran athletic programs in 62 countries.

But in these days of big-money college athletics, Springfield College doesn't give out a single athletic scholarship to its 2,300 students and has no intention of doing so.

The athletic director even cheers when the president says, "We have no desire to be a competitive, commercial power in athletics."

Springfield College doesn't have to be. Despite its small-college status—it is classified in the NCAA's Division II—it's frequently been a guiding force in amateur sports for the past 96 years, inventing a few games along the way. Basketball and volleyball caught on best.

The school was founded by the YMCA in 1885 for the training of "Christian gymnasium instructors." It still gets some of its funds from the YMCA. Today its programs are traditional—some would say old-fashioned. But it is keeping up with the times by emphasizing recreational sports, taking advantage of the boom of interest in physical education.

When the minister of education for the People's Republic of China toured the United States last summer, he passed up scheduled visits to Harvard and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and demanded to be taken instead to Springfield College, where his country's physical education leaders had been educated. And the college recently signed an exchange compact with China, the only small school to do so.

The list of the college's faculty and alumni is a Who's Who of organized athletics.

"When we had a college reunion at the (Montreal) Olympics, there were so many top officials there, everyone thought something terrible had happened and they were all gathering for an emergency meeting. And there we were having a cocktail party," said Athletic Director Edward Steitz.

Steitz is president of the U.S. Amateur Basketball Association, a member of the U.S. Olympic Committee's executive board and president of the Eastern College Athletic Conference.

One of Steitz's graduate students was NCAA President James Frank of Lincoln University, who recently recalled that he helped finance his masters and doctorate by handing out towels in the gym.

The sports Springfield didn't start, it helped along.

The college's first exhibition gymnastics team, formed before the turn of the century, included graduate students Amos Alonzo Stagg, who also coached the football team, and James Naismith, a Canadian who, as a faculty member, invented basketball.

Coach Frank Wolcott, who started the first women's collegiate gymnastics team in the East and won virtually every award in gymnastics before his retirement from coaching last year, helped bring about a renaissance of that sport.

The school is conventional, in that it continues to require all students to take courses in religion or philosophy as well as the basics in English, math and science and four years of physical education.

Springfield College still aims to develop athletes. It had 23 all-Americans last year.

But, President Wilbert Locklin said, "We are not looking for the great athlete. We are looking for the man or woman who wants to be a great coach and a leader of people."

The market has shrunk for teachers and coaches as financial pressures mount on educational institutions, and Springfield College has responded by developing programs in recreational sports.

The school has added to its curriculum special training for graduates to run increasingly popular corporate physical fitness programs and commercial recreation, such as ski resorts and exercise salons.

Twelve new buildings have gone up in 12 years, the most recent a $5.3 million domed gymnasium and physical education complex. Started two years ago, the complex was already paid for when it opened recently in a gala dedication emceed by 20-year trustee Art Linkletter and featuring 120 gymnasts and dancers.

"The new awareness of the benefits of good health—all the cycling and jogging and weight programs—has helped us tremendously," Locklin said. "Of course we were there first. It's only what we've been saying for years.

"And we are going back to our roots," with a larger emphasis on turning out trained administrators for the YMCAs, which are attracting more and more people to their sports fitness programs, he said.

"It's only natural," he said. "We are one of two colleges in the country affiliated with the YMCA. They are a great source of jobs and they are a great source of kids and in these times of zero population growth, colleges have to be aware of these things."

NCAA fall championship action continues

Divisions I-AA, II, III Football

Eastern Kentucky and Boise State, last year's finalists, are two of the top contenders for the 1981 National Collegiate Division I-AA Football Championship, to be held December 19 in Wichita Falls, Texas.

The Division I-AA bracket has been expanded from four to eight teams this year. Champions of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, Big Sky Conference, Ohio Valley Conference, Yankee Conference and Southwestern Athletic Conference will receive automatic qualification. The top independent team also will receive a berth; the final two teams will be selected at large.

First-round games will be played December 5 at four different campus sites, and the semifinals will be held December 12 at two campus sites.

Eastern Kentucky, the 1979 champion and 1980 runner-up, is the early favorite. The Colonels were 9-1 at press time and leading the Ohio Valley Conference. Their only loss was to Navy, a I-A team.

The Colonels feature a strong running game led by Terence Thompson (105.9 yards per game). Eastern Kentucky also has been stingy on defense, ranking fifth in I-AA in total defense at 230.9 yards per game.

Idaho State, Boise State and Montana all are in contention for the Big Sky Conference title and an automatic play-off berth. All three had one conference loss with two weeks remaining.

Boise State, last year's NCAA champion, is led by running back Rodney Webster (third in nation) and wide receiver Kipp Bedard, who caught 11 passes in last year's championship win over Eastern Kentucky.

South Carolina State, 8-2, and Bethune-Cookman, 6-3, are the top contenders for the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference spot. The leading teams in the Yankee Conference are New Hampshire (7-2), Rhode Island (5-4) and Massachusetts (5-3).

Grambling State, 6-2-1, and Jackson State, 7-1-1, are the contenders in the Southwestern Athletic Conference, although Grambling State was the leader at press time by virtue of defeating Jackson State earlier this season.

Other contenders for at-large positions are Tennessee State, led by quarterback Bryan Ransom, and Lehigh, 7-2.

Three unbeaten teams head the list of favorites for the 1981 National Collegiate Division II Football Championship, to be played December 12 in McAllen, Texas.

Southwest Texas State, Northern Michigan and Virginia Union all were 9-0 at press time and ranked 1-2-3 in the weekly Division II football poll. Eight teams will be selected for the Division II championship, with one team picked from each of the four regions and the other four teams chosen at large.

Southwest Texas State is the No. 1 offensive team in Division II, averaging 510.6 yards and 41.1 points per game.

Eastern Kentucky's Terence Thompson

The Bobcats are led by quarterback Mike Miller, who is ranked second in passing efficiency and third in total offense.

Three other Lone Star Conference members are strong contenders in the Midwest region. Texas A&I (7-2), Abilene Christian and Angelo State are Midwest hopefuls, along with Northern Michigan and Grand Valley State.

The West region also features some strong contenders in defending champion Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, Puget Sound (9-1), North Dakota State (8-2), Eastern Washington and North Dakota.

In the East region, Virginia Union, Shippensburg State and Millersville State are the early favorites. In the South region, the teams to watch are Elizabeth City State (8-1), Jacksonville State (6-2) and North Alabama (7-1).

Defending champion Dayton heads a host of contenders for the 1981 National Collegiate Division III Football Championship, to be held December 5 in Phenix City, Alabama.

Eight teams will be selected for the Division III championship, with two teams chosen from each of the four regions. First-round games will be played November 21 at four different campus sites, and the semifinal games will be held November 28.

Dayton, a 63-0 winner over Ithaca in last year's championship, was 9-1 at press time, its only loss coming at the hands of Eastern Kentucky, last year's Division I-AA runner-up. The Flyers are in the tough North region that includes Wabash (8-0), Augustana (Illinois) (8-1), Adrian, Baldwin-Wallace (1978 champion), DePauw and Elmhurst.

In the South region, the top contenders are Widener (9-0), West Georgia (8-0), Carnegie-Mellon, Susquehanna and Swarthmore.

Alfred (9-0), Montclair State (8-1) and Wagner (8-1) are the top teams in the East region. Wagner is led by running back Alonzo Patterson, the Division III rushing leader at press time with 162.4 yards per game.

Undefeated Lawrence, led by running back Scott Reppert, heads the list of contenders in the West region. Other teams with good chances of being selected are San Diego, Bishop, Minnesota-Morris and Ripon.

Divisions I, II Men's Soccer

Defending a national championship is never an easy task; in the cases of reigning soccer powers San Francisco and Lock Haven State, it may be harder than ever.

Both have had key injuries that have led to lower-than-normal rankings, and neither is a shoo-in for selection when the NCAA Division I and Division II Men's Soccer Championships get under way in mid-November. The Division I finals will be held December 5-6 in Stanford, California, while the Division II tournament will conclude November 27-28 in New Haven, Connecticut.

Defending Division I champion San Francisco has suffered through injuries to new midfielder Christian Heteleone (broken kneecap) and star forward Bjorn Tronstad, who broke an ankle last summer while playing at home in Norway. Two more of the Dons' Scandinavian scoring stars, Jo Bersvand and Roar Andersen, did not return to school, leaving head coach Steve Negroesco with some big holes to fill.

However, if a recent 2-1 win over highly rated San Jose State is any indication, the Dons are beginning to mesh. They will need to if they hope to get by the Spartans and San Diego State in the Far West region.

If San Francisco falters, any number of teams could step in. Connecticut has replaced graduated all-Americans Joe Morrone and Erhardt Kapp with such new stars as Bill Morrone, Elvis Comrie and Pedro DeBrito. The Huskies figure to be heavily favored in New England, as does Indiana in the Great Lakes. The Hoosiers, a 4-3 loser to San Francisco in last year's championship game, are led by forward Armando Betancourt.

The other regions appear to be up for grabs. Atlantic Coast Conference powers Clemson, Duke, North Carolina and North Carolina State all will be hoping for berths in the South, along with Alabama A&M. New York could be equally competitive, with Long Island, Columbia, St. Francis, Cornell and Hartwick seeking bids.

There is a new face in the Midwest, where former Division II power Eastern Illinois has stolen some of the limelight from St. Louis and Southern Illinois-Edwardsville. Philadelphia Textile and Penn State appear to be the class of the Middle Atlantic region, while George Mason heads a list of at least seven schools that could attract attention in the South Atlantic.

Lock Haven State's chances of repeating as Division II champion received a jolt when all-America forward Trevor Adair suffered a compound leg fracture last month. The Bald Eagles (11-4-2) still have plenty of talent on hand, including all-America midfielder Tim Gargan; but they will have to survive a play-off game with undefeated Cheyney State (12-0) to receive a tournament bid. The winner of that play-off will have the unenviable task of facing top-ranked Missouri-St. Louis (12-3) in second-round play.

In the Northeast, New Haven (14-3-1) and Hartford (15-2-1) will battle in the first round. The winner will meet 1981 host and 1980 semifinalist Southern Connecticut State (13-3). Seattle Pacific (14-4-3) and Chico State (15-2-1) will meet in the first round in the Far West, with the winner advancing against Los Angeles State (17-0-1). The South will be an all-Florida battle with Tampa (12-0-2) hosting Rollins (9-4-3).

Divisions I, II, III Women's Volleyball

As has been the case with previous men's championships, California teams are expected to dominate at the first National Collegiate Division I Women's Volleyball Championship, to be held December 18 and 20 in Los Angeles.

UCLA, the host institution, is among the early favorites, along with San Diego State, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, Hawaii, California-Santa Barbara and Southern California (last year's AIAW champion).

The size of the field for the first championship has been set at 20 teams. First-round play will begin December 3-5, with the four regionals set for December 11-13.

UCLA, 22-5 at press time, is led by two-time all-America Linda Robertson, a 5-8 power hitter. Other Bruin standouts are Kathy Herse, a member of the World University Games team, and Jeanne Beauprey, a former junior all-America.

San Diego State, 23-3, has become a bona fide contender with the return of junior Laurel Brassey, a member of the 1980 Olympic team who sat out last season. The Aztecs are a young team with a starting lineup composed of three sophomores, two juniors and one freshman.

At press time, San Diego State and UCLA were tied with Southern California for the Western Collegiate Athletic Association lead. The WCAA champion qualifies automatically for the NCAA championship field.

Other California teams likely to receive invitations to the championship are Pacific, 15-8, and Stanford, 21-9.

Japan competition set

Six men and three women collegiate golfers will travel to Tokyo December 12 to compete in the seventh annual NCAA-Japan golf tournament.

This will be the first year for women to be included in this international competition, which will be conducted December 16-18 at the Kasumigaseki Country Club in Tokyo.

The American men's team holds a 5-1 edge in the series after winning last year's match, 27-13. The Japanese amateur team's only victory came in 1976. The NCAA is a cosponsor of the event with the Japan Student Golf Association.

The men's team will be composed of the top six undergraduate finishers from the 1981 Division I golf championships. The three women golfers were selected on the basis of criteria established by the NCAA Women's Golf Committee.

Brigham Young golfers Keith Clearwater and Richard Fehr, two members of the Cougars' 1981 NCAA championship squad, head the six-man team, which will be coached by Brigham Young coach Karl Tucker.

Other members of the men's team are Tony Grimes (Arizona State), Kirk Jones (Centenary), Mike Putnam (New Mexico) and John Slaughter (Houston).

The women's team will be composed of Juli Inkster (San Jose State), Kris Monaghan (New Mexico) and Val Skinner (Oklahoma State). Ann Pitts, women's golf coach at Oklahoma State, was chosen coach of the women's team.

John L. Toner, director of athletics at Connecticut and secretary-treasurer of the NCAA, will travel with the group as the team leader.

Ideas given to improve officiating

The Collegiate Commissioners Association has formulated a report that includes recommendations designed to improve men's basketball and football officiating at the collegiate level.

The report, written at the request of the NCAA Council, states that a need exists for a developmental program through smaller colleges. It also says the attitude of coaches, particularly in basketball, is to intimidate officials, and often institutional administrations are not willing to control coaches who seek to form an adversarial relationship with officials.

Other problem areas cited relate to the image of officials and the inability to recruit young people into the field.

The CCA recommends a three-part plan to help alleviate these and other problems, calling for assistance from NCAA member institutions, allied conferences and the NCAA:

- NCAA Member Institutions
1. Develop strong officiating courses at each institution.
 2. Actively recruit former varsity athletes to officiate in their sports.
 3. Improve bench decorum and eliminate intimidation of officials.
 4. Improve working conditions and treatment of officials.
 5. Increase game fees for officials, particularly at Division III institutions.
 6. Do not degrade the image of officials. Coaches being interviewed should use more commendation and less ridicule in postgame comments regarding officiating.

- Conferences
1. Work with Divisions II and III conferences and independents in the same area to create an officials development program.
 2. Encourage attendance at weekly officials meetings and

- enrollment in college officiating courses and summer basketball camps.
3. Urge veteran officials to offer assistance in establishing and conducting classes for officials.
4. Establish liaison with local officials associations.
5. Eliminate "scratch lists" used in evaluations of officials.
6. Urge veteran officials whose skills are fading with age to retire gracefully at the appropriate time.

- NCAA
1. Include educational articles in the NCAA News regarding the total role of officials.
 2. Develop crowd-control rules that can be enforced.
 3. Prepare visual aids for six-man football officiating crews.
 4. Conduct football and basketball clinics in each of the eight NCAA districts.
 5. Develop a program recognizing quality work by officials.

Certification required

Before a student-athlete in the sports of gymnastics or track and field is allowed to participate in any outside competition, NCAA Bylaw 2-4 stipulates that the meet must be certified by the NCAA Extra Events Committee.

Any domestic event held during the calendar year that is not sponsored, promoted, managed or controlled by a collegiate entity (a two-year or four-year institution) requires certification.

Gymnastics and track and field coaches are advised to make certain that they are knowledgeable of any competition in which their student-athletes participate to avoid potential loss of eligibility.

Meets certified for this year are as follows:

Gymnastics
Farmingdale Open, Farmingdale, New York; December 11-12, 1981.

Japanese University Sports Board Men's Tour, December

9-19, 1981.

Track and Field
Southern Indoor TFA Invitational Championships, Montgomery, Alabama; February 12-13, 1982.

The NCAA News includes a section listing up-to-date certifications as they become available.

Meets that do not involve a large number of competitors and that are local in nature may not require certification if classified as nonincome. This determination would be based on several factors, such as the purpose of the meet, the entry fee and admission charges and the overall financial operation. Regardless, the Extra Events Committee advises coaches to check with the NCAA to determine whether the competition has been classified as non-income before allowing a student-athlete to participate.

Scorers to monitor jump balls

There is an important addition to the duties of official men's basketball scorers that is not covered in the 1982 edition of the NCAA Basketball Rules and Interpretations.

With the elimination of all jump balls (except at the start of games and overtime periods), teams now will alternate possession in jump-ball situations. The official scorer must keep a running record of this alternating process.

The new NCAA Official Basketball Scorebook provides space for recording this information. The scorebook can be obtained for $3 by writing NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

In addition to recording jump-ball possessions, there must be an indicator installed at the scorer's table that can be turned to show which team will receive the next possession.

Fall championships

Along with Hawaii, Brigham Young (25-6) and Penn State (38-3) appear to have the best teams outside the state of California. Hawaii was undefeated at press time.

In the South region, the top contenders for play-off spots at press time were Texas A&M (28-10), Kentucky (17-6), Alabama, Louisiana State, Memphis State and Tennessee.

Besides Penn State, the top contenders in the Midwest region are Nebraska (24-6), Purdue (28-5), Northwestern (34-10), Illinois State (23-20) and Western Michigan.

In the Southwest region, Arizona State, Brigham Young, New Mexico and Arizona are the leading contenders for a play-off position.

Sacramento State is the early favorite to capture the first National Collegiate Division II Women's Volleyball Championship, to be played December 18-19 at the University of California, Riverside.

Ten teams will be selected for the Division II championship, which will begin at four regional sites December 11-12. Champions of the California Collegiate Athletic Association, Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association and Golden State Conference will receive automatic berths in the championship.

Sacramento State, a member of the Golden State Conference, was ranked No. 1 at press time with a 19-1 record; Florida Southern, 20-3, was ranked second.

The contenders for the California Collegiate Athletic Association berth are California-Riverside, Cal Poly-Pomona and Northridge State.

Cal Poly-Pomona, 9-5, is led by Jill Smith, a 6-0 hitter from El Monte, California. The Broncos also feature Kim Nutter, Weezie Burbank and Barbie Veselic.

Other Division II contenders are Lewis (25-6-2), Northwest Missouri State (35-8), California-Davis (8-1), Northern Kentucky (25-13) and Mansfield State (24-4).

California-San Diego appears to be the early choice for the first National Collegiate Division III Women's Volleyball Championship, which will be concluded December 18-19 at Maryville College in Maryville, Tennessee.

Ten teams will be selected to compete in the Division III championship, with one team chosen from each of four combined geographical regions. Four regionals will be conducted December 11-12 at the sites of the top four seeded teams.

California-San Diego was

24-6 at press time and ranked No. 1 in the poll conducted by the NCAA Division III Women's Volleyball Committee. The Tritons are led by 5-8 sophomore Louise Schwartz and two transfers from Division I institutions—Tammy Swit, a 5-9 sophomore from Anchorage, Alaska, and Marilyn Horn, a 5-9 junior from Newport Beach, California.

Other teams in the West/Great Lakes region with play-off hopes are Sonoma State (15-11), Stanislaus State and Occidental (10-6). In the Mid-Atlantic/Northeast region, the top teams are Juniata (28-3), Grove City (30-5), Smith (26-8) and Salem State.

Maryville (Tennessee), the host institution, is the top contender in the South/East region, and Wisconsin-Stevens Point (32-4) and Illinois Benedictine (29-3) are the leaders in the Central/Midwest region.

Water Polo

Stanford once again appears the team to beat as competition gears up for the 1981 National Collegiate Men's Water Polo Championship November 28-29 at Long Beach State.

The Cardinals, defending champions and winners of three national titles, are a solid choice in the West region, which has produced all 12 water polo champions.

California teams that could block the Cardinals' path to a second consecutive title include California, Pepperdine, Long Beach State, California-Santa Barbara, California-Irvine, UCLA, Southern California and California-San Diego.

Contenders from the Midwest region include Air Force and Loyola (Illinois). Teams to watch from the East include Brown, Harvard, Bucknell, Slippery Rock and Fordham.

Interpretations

EDITOR'S NOTE: Publication of an interpretation in this column constitutes official notice to the membership. Questions concerning these or other O.I.s should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the Association's national office (P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201; 913/384-3220).

Postseason football practice

Situation: The limitations on postseason football practice do not include practice for NCAA championship events, provided such practice is limited to students eligible for that event. (583)

Questions: If a member institution is under consideration by an NCAA football committee for selection to participate in the football championship for that division, may the institution conduct postseason football practice sessions?

Answer: Yes. The practice sessions may be continued on this basis until it is determined by the appropriate committee whether the institution will be selected to participate in championship competition [B 3-4-O.I. 311]

International soccer approval

Situation: An all-star soccer team participates in international competition outside of the permissible soccer playing season set forth in Bylaw 3. One NCAA member institution has more than three of its soccer players on the all-star team. (589)

Question: It is necessary for the institution to have the competition approved?

Answer: Yes. The foreign tour provisions of Bylaw 3-5 shall be applicable to an institution if more than three of its student-athletes participate on the team. [B 3-5-(a) and (b)]

Certification of 2,000 eligibility

Situation: A prospective student-athlete attends a high school (in the United States or a foreign country) which calculates grade-point averages on a basis other than the 4,000 scale. (584)

Question: In what manner may an NCAA Division I member institution certify the prospect's eligibility under the provisions of Bylaw 5-6-(b) [2,000 rule]?

Answer: The prospective student-athlete's high school graduation status and his high school grade-point average shall be determined on the basis of written verification from the prospective student-athlete's high school or, if the high school will not provide the prospect's grade-point average on a 4,000 scale, through use of the NCAA Guide to International Academic Standards for Athletic Eligibility. In any case, the prospect must satisfy the minimum standards for eligibility set forth in the guide or, if sufficient information is not available from the high school or in the guide, the matter shall be referred to the NCAA Academic Testing and Requirements Committee for resolution. [B 5-6-(b)]

Summer orientation program

Situation: A member institution conducts a summer orientation program for educationally disadvantaged students prior to their initial enrollment as regular students. (590)

Question: May prospective student-athletes receive institutionally administered financial assistance related to their participation in such a program?

Answer: Yes. Financial assistance may be provided prospective student-athletes attending such a program, it being understood that: (1) the program involves noncredit orientation sessions, as distinguished from actual summer school sessions; (2) the selection of individuals to participate in the program and the provision of financial assistance to those individuals is not based in any manner on athletically related criteria; (3) the same standards for participation and financial assistance are applied to all participants in the program, and (4) each participant has been officially accepted for admission to the institution during the regular academic year. [B 1-9-(a)] greater issue. In response to widespread Division I sentiment, the NCAA Council called the Convention September 8.

The first NCAA special Convention was conducted in 1973 for the purpose of reorganization. It was at that meeting, held in Chicago, that Divisions I, II and III were created; previously, the NCAA had been structured according to college and university divisions.

Special Conventions for the purpose of bettering the economy of intercollegiate athletics were conducted in Chicago and St. Louis in 1975 and 1976 respectively.

Miami football program penalized

The University of Miami (Florida) has been placed on probation for two years by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions as a result of violations occurring in the conduct of the university's intercollegiate football program.

The penalty includes sanctions during the first year of the probationary period that prohibit the university's football team from participating in a postseason bowl game following the 1981 football season. In addition, the university will be permitted to award only 20 initial grants-in-aid (rather than the normal limit of 30) to new student-athletes in the sport of football during the 1982-83 academic year.

In accordance with the "show-cause" provision of the NCAA penalty structure, the university also was required to reprimand an assistant football coach for his lack of candor in reporting the facts related to one finding of violation.

The university will be permitted to appear on NCAA football telecasts during the probationary period.

"The majority of the findings in this case," said Charles Alan Wright, chair, NCAA Committee on Infractions, "involved NCAA legislation governing recruiting. Accordingly, the committee believed a severe limit on new grants-in-aid would be appropriate to offset any recruiting advantage that may have been gained improperly by the university.

"The committee believes that this case is the result of a lack of attention to NCAA recruiting requirements, rather than a pattern of unethical inducements to prospective student-athletes. The committee believes the penalty in this case is meaningful and appropriate in that it relates to the responsibility of the institution and directly affects the institution's recruitment of future student-athletes."

The university did not appeal the Committee on Infractions' findings or penalty in this case. The committee found violations of NCAA legislation related to the principles governing extra benefits to student-athletes, financial aid, practice seasons, various recruiting regulations and certification of compliance with NCAA legislation.

Texas Christian on probation

Texas Christian University has been placed on probation for one year by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions as a result of violations occurring in the conduct of the men's intercollegiate basketball program.

The action will not affect the university's eligibility for postseason competition or television appearances in the sport of basketball. However, as a result of his involvement in the case, the university will prohibit one assistant basketball coach from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities during the probationary period and will not provide the individual a salary increase during the 1982-83 academic year.

"The violations in this case involved the improper recruitment of only one prospective student-athlete by one assistant basketball coach," said Charles Alan Wright, chair, NCAA Committee on Infractions. "However, the committee was quite concerned with the nature of the infractions, which appeared to represent a deliberate attempt to circumvent NCAA legislation, and the committee believed that disciplinary action against the institution and the involved coach was warranted."

Wright emphasized that the conduct of Texas Christian

University officials throughout the investigation and processing of this case was exemplary and noted that the university never before had received a public penalty from either the NCAA or the Southwest Athletic Conference.

"The committee believes," Wright said, "that the university continues to be committed to operating its athletic program in complete compliance with the letter and spirit of NCAA legislation."

The Committee on Infractions found violations of NCAA legislation related to ethical conduct, recruiting and certification of compliance with NCAA legislation.

New books available from NCAA

An expanded NCAA basketball records book now is available from the NCAA.

In addition to the comprehensive records published in the inaugural edition of the records book last year, the 1982 version of NCAA Basketball Records includes the 1982 schedules for women's teams as well as men's. Also incorporated in the 1982 publication are the 1981 conference standings and NCAA championships results, formerly published in the basketball guide. The guide has been discontinued.

The 320-page book includes college basketball records of the modern era, both individual and team, as well as all-time statistical leaders, all-America teams since 1929, 1980-81 season scores for men's teams, NCAA basketball championship records and coaches' records.

The basketball records book sells for $5. Orders should be sent to NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

Also, a 93-page book detailing proven methods of raising funds for intercollegiate athletic programs has been published by the NCAA.

The NCAA Fund Raising Manual includes nine chapters written by individuals who have implemented successful fund-raising programs at NCAA institutions. Examples of forms, publications and letters are reproduced in the book.

The book features chapters on forming a local fund-raising organization, fund raising by mail, fund raising without football, organizing a booster club, endowment and insurance gifts, fund raising for women's athletics, capital campaigns and the team concept of fund raising.

Copies are available at a cost of $4 for members and $8 for nonmembers from NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

Football TV ratings continue to increase

NCAA football television ratings through October 31 are nearly seven percent higher than 1980 ratings over the same portion of the season.

With the October 31 Penn State-Miami (Florida) national telecast gaining a 14.5 rating, overall ratings for the ABC games climbed to 10.8, with an audience share of 30 percent. Last year, the NCAA rating was 10.1 and the share was 29 through November 1.

More viewers are tuning in to football at all levels this season. Ratings of the CBS National Football Conference telecasts are up over last year by 16 percent, while ABC's prime-time National Football League games show a 6.5 percent increase. Ratings of NBC's American Football Conference games have declined by 11 percent.

ABC had presented 12 NCAA telecasts through October 31, seven regional and five national. In addition to the Penn State-Miami game, regionals on October 17 and October 24 had ratings of 12.1 and 12.0, respectively, helping the NCAA series to have a much more consistent performance than a year ago. The overall October rating was 11.0, about six percent higher than last year's 10.4 performance in October.

Nearly 12 million homes received the Penn State-Miami game, the highest total since 12,370,000 homes were tuned in to the Notre Dame-Southern California telecast that concluded the 1980 series.

Official rating sites established

The Affiliated Boards of Officials of the National Association for Girls and Women in Sport will certify officials for basketball at four different sites from November through February.

The sites and dates are Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa, November 27-29; the University of California, Berkeley, December 3-5; St. John's University, Jamaica, New York, December 28-30, and Memphis State University, Memphis, Tennessee, February 25-27, 1982.

For application forms, interested ABO members are to contact their local board chair or the NAGWS national office, 1900 Association Drive, Reston, Virginia 22091.

For more information, those interested should contact June Courteau, Basketball NRT Coordinator, 125 South Brooke Drive, Waterloo, Iowa 50702.
