Special Convention to consider restructuring

The structure of Division I will be the issue when the NCAA membership gathers December 3-4 at Stouffer's Riverfront Towers in St. Louis for the Association's 4th special Convention.

A total of 23 proposals, plus any amendments to them that may be submitted before the 1 p.m. deadline December 3, will be considered by the Convention. According to the statement of Convention purposes, the meeting is strictly for the restructuring of Division I; any legislative proposals not related to that topic will be ruled out of order.

The NCAA Council called the meeting September 8 in response to requests from the membership. By the October 4 legislative deadline, 23 proposals were received, including nine from the NCAA Council and five from the College Football Association.

The cornerstone of the Council's legislative package is proposal No. 5, which seeks to delete the existing 12-sport option in the Division I-A football membership criteria and replace it with two exception provisions and one waiver opportunity.

Specifically, the proposal would require an institution desiring to be a Division I-A member either:

- To have averaged more than 17,000 in paid attendance per home football game in the immediate past four-year period, or

- To play its home football games in a stadium that contains 30,000 permanent seats and to have averaged 17,000 in paid attendance per home football game at least one year in the immediate past four-year period.

If adopted, the proposal would mean that an institution no longer could bypass those requirements by spon-

Economy, restructuring prompted special meetings

Approximately 800 persons are expected to attend the NCAA's 4th special Convention December 3-4 in St. Louis, including about 375 voting delegates.

The turnout apparently will be smaller than at the Association's 2nd and 3rd special Conventions in 1975 and 1976 but larger than the gathering at the 1st special meeting in 1973.

Following is a summary of the NCAA's only previous special Conventions:

August 1973—A total of 573, including 407 voters, attended the 1st special Convention, which voted to establish Divisions I, II and III in place of the former University Division and College Division. The meeting was held August 6, 1973, at the Regency Hyatt House in Chicago, and the delegates considered only 14 amendments.

August 1975—Chicago also hosted the 2nd special Con-

Top Five Awards

Fall sports nominees selected

Four football players and one women's volleyball player have been selected as the fall finalists for the NCAA Today's Top Five Awards.

The five winners will be honored January 11 at the NCAA honors luncheon in Houston. The Theodore Roosevelt Award, the highest honor bestowed by the Association, also will be presented at the honors luncheon, along with the NCAA Award of Valor, which will go to U.S. Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy.

The football players are Bill Beach, Wittenberg University; Rich Diana, Yale University; Oliver Luck, West Virginia University, and Kenneth Sims, University of Texas, Austin. The volleyball player is Terri Kanouse, University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

The winter-spring Today's Top Five finalists were announced in October. They are Danny Ainge, Brigham Young University basketball player; Par Arvidsson, University of California, Berkeley, swimmer; Denise Curry, University of California, Los Angeles, basketball player; Ambrose "Rowdy" Gaines, Auburn University swimmer, and Lynette Woodard, University of Kansas basketball player.

The fall finalists were selected based on participation in sports conducted during the 1981-82 academic year. Each nominee is selected for athletic ability and achievement, character, leadership, extracurricular activities and academic achievement. Only seniors from the current calendar year are eligible.

Bill Beach

A two-time all-Ohio Athletic Conference selection at defensive back, Beach is the Wittenberg leader with nine career pass interceptions, including four as a senior. He was named OAC defensive player of the week at least once in each of his final three seasons and has earned academic all-America recognition.

A 3.75 student in biology, Beach has served as student representative to the faculty committee on athletic policy. He is active in Beta Beta Beta, the national honorary biology club; serves on the student hearing board, and is a member of the American Institute of Biological Sciences.

Rich Diana

Diana rushed for a school-record 1,074 yards as a junior and surpassed that total this season with 1,442 yards. The all-America candidate, selected New England player of the year as a junior, is among the national leaders in all-purpose running (more than 187 yards per game) and ranks among the top 10 in rushing (more than 130 yards per game). He has surpassed 100 yards rushing 10 times during his career, including five times this year, and has a 196-yard game against Brown to his credit.

He has maintained a 3.42 grade-point average in molecular biophysics and biochemistry. A National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholar-Athlete, Diana has served as a counselor for hospitalized children and has been in demand as a banquet speaker. He also is a consultant for the Yale admissions brochure.

Terri Kanouse

Twice chosen as team captain, Kanouse has led the Nebraska women's volleyball team to three Big Eight Conference titles. She has been honored as an all-America selection and a three-time all-Big Eight Conference choice.

Kanouse has been active as a volunteer counselor at volleyball clinics and won the 1981 Harmon Award as the outstanding Nebraska woman athlete for excellence in athletics, sportsmanship, scholarship and dedication. Majoring

Judge for AIAW suit sets limits, procedures

The United States district judge presiding over the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women antitrust action against the NCAA has entered an order establishing the procedures and time limits under which the case will be prepared for trial.

The order, written October 28, requires each party to file statements of contentions and proof—describing the legal arguments and factual contentions the party intends to advance at trial—and to identify the witnesses, documents and other evidence the party will introduce in support of its factual contentions.

The order establishes March 31, 1982, as the final date by which the NCAA and the AIAW are required to complete their discovery activities (depositions, document productions and other steps to identify relevant evidence).

At an October 22, 1981, status conference, the AIAW sought to have a date set for hearing its motion for a preliminary injunction barring the NCAA from conducting intercollegiate athletic championships for women. On that occasion, the judge indicated that he did not intend to rule on the AIAW motion for an injunction until discovery in the case was completed. He also said that he would establish an expedited schedule for pretrial proceedings in the case. The order that the judge has now issued is consistent with those statements.

The order does not establish a trial date, but under the terms of the order, the trial would be after April 9, 1982, the final date on which written direct testimony is to be submitted by the NCAA. The attorneys representing the NCAA believe that the court is unlikely to consider the motion of the AIAW for preliminary relief before the trial on the merits of the AIAW's claims against the NCAA.

The AIAW filed the suit against the NCAA October 9, alleging the NCAA with violating Federal antitrust laws.

Bowl process a sham?

By Jonathan Rand
Kansas City Times

A completely accurate forecast of this season's bowl matchups appeared in The Kansas City Times on the morning of November 21. It was kind of funny, because bowl invitations weren't supposed to be made before 6 p.m. November 21.

This means either Rich Sambol, the reporter who compiled the bowl rundown, is psychic or the bowls and schools they invited had jumped the gun.

The NCAA Manual states that before the third Saturday in November, a bowl "shall not extend an invitation, directly or indirectly, to the representatives of a member institution."

It also states that before that date, an institution "shall not consider any formal or informal invitations, directly or indirectly, from any . . . postseason football game."

It takes two to tango, so the bowls and schools must share the responsibility for turning the NCAA rules into a colossal joke.

There are those who maintain that these rules shouldn't be taken seriously, that they're unrealistic and ought to be scrapped.

"I don't know how important that is in the scheme of things," said Gene Corrigan, athletic director at Notre Dame and former chair of the Postseason Football Committee, which is partly responsible for enforcing the bowl rules.

"I don't think anybody pays a whole lot of attention to that rule or ever has.

"My feeling is, get the rule out of the book and let's make it realistic as it can possibly be so people don't have to fool each other."

I would be willing to snicker at the bowl rules, too, except the penalties for breaking them suggest the NCAA doesn't consider them a laughing matter.

A school caught breaking the rules can be banned from bowl games for two seasons, a more severe penalty than most schools receive for serious recruiting violations. A bowl caught breaking the rules could be forced to pay the NCAA as much as half its gross receipts from the game in question.

David Berst, NCAA director of enforcement, said the department has investigated possible rules violations by bowls and schools but without success.

You'd probably have to start tapping phones to prove a bowl bid was issued prematurely.

Bowl officials will swear a cocktail party with school officials was nothing more than a social visit and bowl business never came up.

"We are in the position of being embarrassed over whether or not we can make cases in applying the tough penalties," Berst said.

"Obviously, I'm not very excited about being put in that position."

The NCAA enforcement staff shouldn't be kept in that position, because the bowl rules primarily serve the best interests of the bowls and schools they invite, not the NCAA office.

Bowl committees want a pick-'em date to protect themselves from each other. Otherwise, some would get stung prematurely rushing in to sew up attractive matchups.

That became evident when the NCAA briefly eliminated the pick-'em date and declared open season for bowl bids. The Sugar Bowl got burned in 1974 when it invited Florida with a 7-1 record, only to watch the Gators finish 8-3.

The pick-'em date was reinstated at the behest of the bowls, and they've gone back to routinely violating the rules they wanted.

To make the rules more realistic, they were revised this year to allow bowls and schools, starting November 1, "to discuss the possibility" of a team's participation in a bowl.

They were doing that anyway, and the rules change has made them more brazen in their public statements. Sam Hines, president of the Tangerine Bowl, flat-out said 'before bids were made' that Missouri was his top choice, and school officials met November 19 to discuss whether the Tigers should be allowed to play despite a conflict with players' exam schedules.

Tangerine Bowl and Missouri officials must've discussed more than the "possibility" of a bid.

If rules are flagrantly being violated, they ought to be enforced or changed.

The NCAA apparently realizes this because Ralph McFillen, assistant director of championships, sent a memo to the bowl committees cautioning them that NCAA legislation would be "thoroughly examined" if found to be unworkable.

The rules, as they stand, are unworkable and ought to be changed. The pick-'em date should be two weeks earlier; that's when the bowls start jockeying for position, anyway, and any bowl that wants to close a deal before then could do so at its own peril.

1952 NCAA Television Committee Report

NCAA: The Voice of College Sports

"(The Television Committee) is convinced that any previous rewards for athletic success pale in comparison to the rewards of television, which constantly multiply as more television sets are installed . . . and the networks expand to all corners of the nation. . . . The rights for a few network games, now measured in thousands of dollars, will be measured in millions of dollars The 1952 Television Committee of the NCAA is of the unanimous conviction that steps must be taken by the colleges of the nation to meet this problem."

Bob Wisehart, sports writer

Pittsburgh Press

"The alliance between ESPN, the 24-hour-a-day sports cable network, and ABC could turn both sports and television inside-out and upside-down.

"Thus far, all we have is the recent announcement of a partnership, so the impact cannot be measured. But there's no doubt it's only the first rock to tumble down the mountain, preceding an avalanche that surely will change the packaging and presentation of American sports.

"The merger brings us closer to the time when fans will have to pay for major sports events they've been able to see for free on commercial TV for more than 30 years. . . .

"To gaze into the crystal ball, here is what many in the TV industry see ahead: the 1987 Super Bowl being broadcast live not on ABC, NBC or CBS, but on ESPN or some outfit like it. To see it, viewers would pay several dollars for the privilege. If they don't want to pay, they'll probably be able to catch a repeat of the game a few days later on a commercial network.

"Sports fans might be appalled at the thought. But freedom to watch the Super Bowl for nothing is not an inalienable right found anywhere in the Constitution."

Bill Gleason, columnist

"After a high school banquet two years ago, I was buttonholed by a fellow who wanted to tell me about his nephew. 'This kid just turned 16, he has developed an 18-inch neck and he can bench press a jillion pounds,' the man began.

"Another 'football uncle' who bores everybody, I thought, but then he said something refreshing.

"I've asked the kid's father, my brother, this question: To what end?"

"Why does a kid in high school need an 18-inch neck? And what's he going to do with it if he doesn't become a college football star?"

"To what end?"

"That's the question you should be asking if you care about college athletics.

"To what end weight-training programs? What does lifting weights really have to do with football? And how much does a weight room cost the alumni or the taxpayers?"

"To what end have kids in modern football uniforms become human tanks?"

"And to what end are these kids, your kids and your neighbors' kids, suffering injuries that doom them to go through life with crippling arthritis?"

"To what end?"

"I had made the decision in the months previous (to his arrest) that this has gone too far, I can't handle it. I was not going to get out, but I was going to change my philosophy; I had just had it. It was too far, too fast, too much.

"It (the cheating) isn't something initiated from within; it was done to survive. I was going to change my whole program, make some real adjustments in our philosophy. I guess it was too little, too late."

Robert A. Hall, chair

1952 NCAA Television Committee

NCAA: The Voice of College Sports

"It is the sense of the member institutions to continue to take the middle road between those institutions . . . who would ban live television completely and those institutions . . . who would, by rejection of all action, permit the monopolization of television by the very few."

Bill Nicholas, chair

Rose Bowl Football Committee

"The thing you've got to remember is that all of these people are violating the NCAA extra-benefit rule. Here they're out getting commitments, and they're not supposed to be doing that until (November 21).

"They've got commitments already. They're paying no attention to the NCAA regulation. That's either got to be strengthened or junked. If they don't put some teeth in it, what good is it?"

January Convention has balanced legislative package

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a preview of the legislation to be considered at the 76th annual Convention in the following topical groupings: playing and practice seasons, general, academic requirements, television, amateurism and eligibility. Legislation relating to financial aid, membership classification, recruiting, championships and governance will be previewed in the December 15 issue of the NCAA News.

Playing and practice seasons

The playing and practice seasons legislation is headed by Proposal No. 32 (NCAA Council), which—for the period between August 1, 1981, and August 1, 1985—would exempt women's programs at NCAA member institutions from pre-season-practice restrictions, playing season limitations and out-of-season practice limitations. Restrictions regarding the number of contests that may be played and restrictions regarding foreign tours would remain in effect.

Two proposals (Nos. 33 and 34) seek to increase the allowable number of basketball games for Divisions I and II institutions; No. 33 would raise the maximum from 27 to 29, No. 34 from 27 to 28.

General

Proposal No. 36, sponsored by the University of Texas, Austin, and seven other Division I institutions, seeks to clarify the ownership of property rights of NCAA member institutions.

No. 37, sponsored by the NCAA Council, would establish the Association's authority to fine member institutions as part of the NCAA penalty structure. The amount could not exceed $50,000 for any single case or proceeding.

The Council also has sponsored Proposal No. 38, which would alter the date on which the management of postseason football games would be allowed to offer invitations to NCAA member institutions. The new date would be the Saturday after the third Tuesday in November rather than the third Saturday, as is currently the case. The effect would be to move the earliest possible date for bowl bids from November 15 to November 19.

Proposal No. 40, sponsored by 13 Division I football-playing institutions, was defeated at the 75th annual Convention. The legislation would add one assistant coach to Divisions I-A and I-AA programs and eliminate part-time coaches, with the exception of two individuals who would have to be enrolled in a graduate-degree program.

No. 41 would allow Division I members to pay the expenses involved in scouting a soccer opponent. Currently, Division I member institutions may cover expenses for scouting football and basketball games only.

Academic requirements

The Council has submitted Proposal No. 42 in an attempt to refine some of the language included in the satisfactory-progress legislation that was approved at last year's Convention. In particular, it would affirm that the satisfactory-progress rule applies to regular-season competition in Division II as well as Division I and would require a student-athlete who has completed a season of eligibility to meet the standards established by the legislation before competing in a second season.

No. 43 would add qualitative requirements to the satisfactory-progress rule. A Southwest Athletic Conference proposal, No. 44, would require a student-athlete having missed an academic term for a second time to remain enrolled for two consecutive semesters in order to regain athletic eligibility.

Television

Proposal Nos. 45 and 46, both sponsored by the NCAA Council, provide for review and approval of current NCAA television procedures.

Proposal No. 47, also sponsored by the Council, would establish NCAA controls over all forms of football television and cablecasting; further, it specifies that each of the three divisions would be able to act separately on football television principles and that football-playing members of each division would vote on such principles. Finally, it would restructure the Football Television Committee.

A Southern Conference proposal, No. 48, would require that Division I membership on the Football Television Committee reflect proportionately the number of Division I-A and Division I-AA members.

No. 49, sponsored by the Council, would permit the Council or the Committee on Infractions to impose television sanctions concerning live telecasting of intercollegiate contests on programs which are not subject to NCAA control.

Amateurism

A Council proposal that would permit a student-athlete to coach or teach in his or her sport heads the amateurism section. Proposal No. 50 stipulates that the employment could not be by the student-athlete's institution, nor could it be arranged by the institution or a representative of its athletic interests.

Proposal No. 51 would allow student-athletes to sell their complimentary tickets at face value, provided the tickets are not purchased by the student-athlete's institution.

Eligibility

The current five-year rule for Divisions II and III would be altered by the passage of Council-sponsored Proposal No. 54. Rather than the existing five-calendar-year limitation on eligibility, the new rule would create a five-year limitation based on terms in residence.

Proposal No. 55, sponsored by the Pacific-10 Conference, is being considered for a second time after having been defeated at the 1981 Convention. It would require an incoming freshman at a Division I or II institution to have graduated from high school with an accumulative grade-point average of at least 2.750 in order to be immediately eligible for varsity competition. A student-athlete not meeting this requirement would be entitled to four years of eligibility after his or her freshman year (provided other eligibility requirements were met).

The redshirting of freshmen in Division I would be made possible again by the passage of Proposal No. 56, sponsored by NCAA Council.

No. 57, sponsored last year by the Council and this year by seven Division I institutions, would increase the 2.000 grade-point average requirement for initial eligibility at a Division I member institution to 2.200. No. 58, submitted by the Mid-American Athletic Conference, would eliminate the opportunity for a student-athlete to gain eligibility by posting a 2.000 grade-point average at a preparatory school subsequent to high school graduation.

Incoming freshmen injured in the summer before their first year at an NCAA member institution would be eligible to be considered for a hardship ruling if Proposal No. 59, sponsored by the Pacific-10 Conference, is approved.

No. 60, also sponsored by the Pacific-10 Conference, would permit a student-athlete injured at a junior college to be considered for a hardship ruling at a Division I NCAA member institution.

Proposal No. 61 would allow relief for a student-athlete enrolled at an institution that has been placed on probation with sanctions for the period covering the rest of the student-athlete's eligibility. The Council-sponsored amendment would permit a waiver of the transfer residence requirement under such circumstances.

Nos. 64 through 67 would change transfer eligibility requirements in Division III under certain circumstances.

Regina McNeal joins NCAA staff

Regina McNeal, assistant manager of sports information at Eastern Michigan University, has joined the NCAA staff as administrative assistant in the NCAA Statistics Service.

McNeal is a graduate of the University of Michigan, where she majored in English literature. She has been at Eastern Michigan for two years, where she compiled statistics and wrote feature articles for EMU's women's basketball and softball teams. She also assisted in compiling statistics for the men's football and baseball teams.

Lawyers examine union question

A group purporting to represent the rights of intercollegiate athletes claims that varsity athletes are entitled to form unions and to bargain collectively through those unions concerning "working conditions."

The Center for Athletes' Rights and Education (CARE) espouses an "Athletes' Bill of Rights," which states the following:

"College athletes are students and workers. Their time and sweat bring in millions of dollars to their universities from ticket sales, TV contracts and contributions. As students, they are entitled to an education similar in quality to other students. As workers, they are entitled to safe working conditions and fair compensation for the money they generate. The Center for Athletes' Rights and Education is committed to the development, through sport, of cooperation and individual excellence and advancing the rights of athletes in high schools and colleges across America. Among these rights are:

"1. The right to sports free from discrimination from race or sex.

"2. The right to tuition-free courses (at any time) if necessary to complete an athlete's undergraduate education.

"3. The right to legal assistance and due process in disputes with athletic departments and coaches.

"4. The right to information about the benefits and dangers of diet, training methods, injury prevention and treatment.

"5. The right to remedial courses, tutoring and counseling geared to a quality education, not athletic eligibility.

"6. The right to an athlete's letter of intent, signed by the coach, clearly outlining the school's educational and financial obligations to the athlete.

"7. The right to a multiyear grant-in-aid which would allow athletes to complete their degrees, even if seriously injured.

"8. The right of equal access to facilities, coaching and equipment for males and females.

"9. The right to fair compensation for the revenues generated by the athlete.

"10. The right to form unions and bargain collectively on all issues affecting financial aid and working conditions."

NCAA legal counsel has made a preliminary examination of the question of unions for intercollegiate athletes and has concluded that both state and private institutions normally will be held to have no obligation to bargain collectively with organizations claiming to represent student-athletes.

Private institutions

The opinion states that while the National Labor Relations Board consistently has asserted jurisdiction over non-student, nonteaching employees of private colleges or universities, it has refused to assert jurisdiction over students who are employed by the institution they are attending, regardless of whether such employment is related to the student's course of study. An example of the board's policy with respect to students is a recent decision in which the board ruled that hospital interns, residents and fellows were primarily students and therefore were not entitled to the protection of the NLRB.

Counsel's opinion points out, however, that any body seeking recognition as an "athletes' union" almost certainly would claim that intercollegiate athletes are not "students," but rather "workers" for the industry of big-time college athletics. If the board were to accept this approach (which counsel claims would be a marked departure from NLRB precedents), it would increase the likelihood of institutions being required to bargain collectively with student-athletes.

If, however, the board were to rule that student-athletes are not subject to its jurisdiction, such a ruling would prevent state labor boards from assuming jurisdiction over them at private institutions. (Federal law states that when Congress grants jurisdiction to a Federal agency over a matter affecting commerce, the jurisdiction of a state agency over that same subject matter is preempted.)

State institutions

State colleges and universities must look to state law, particularly the state public employee bargaining law, to determine if there is any duty to bargain with a union of student-athletes. The basic question, however, is the same for state institutions as it is for private institutions: Are student-athletes "employees" for the purpose of collective bargaining? If so, any bargaining duty would be controlled by state law.

Preliminary research has not revealed any previous decisions on the question of a student-athlete claiming union organizing rights. Two courts have addressed the issue of whether financial aid to a student-athlete makes a student an "employee" in the context of state workers' compensation laws. In both cases, the courts considered the issue to be whether a contract of employment existed, with the existence of a contract dependent on the extent to which the financial aid was directly tied to participation in athletics.

Counsel cautioned, however, that workers' compensation statutes involve different legislative policy issues than public employee bargaining statutes. The same may be said for an earlier Internal Revenue Service decision stating that athletically related financial aid is an educational grant rather than taxable employment income. "In the last analysis," the opinion states, "(we think) decisions as to collective bargaining rights will be determined in the policy context of labor relations statutes."

Miners rout field

Texas-El Paso set an all-time record with 17 points in winning its fourth straight team title at the National Collegiate Division I Men's Cross Country Championships in Wichita, Kansas.

The Miners, winners of six of the last seven championships, totaled 17 points with team finishes of first, second, third, fifth and sixth over the 10,000-meter (6.2 miles) route at Echo Hills Golf Course in Wichita. The 17 points broke the previous record of 25 set by Drake in 1944.

Texas-El Paso's performance was so outstanding that Suleiman Nyambui, last year's individual champion, was the fourth Miner runner to cross the finish line, behind Mathews Motshwarateu, Michael Musyoki and Gabriel Kamau.

Motshwarateu, last year's runner-up, was the individual champion with a time of 28:45.6, just eight-tenths of a second ahead of Musyoki. Kamau was third in 29:19.3, nipping Colorado's Mark Scrutton by three seconds.

Nyambui, who has won 10 NCAA outdoor and indoor track titles in addition to his one cross country victory, finished seventh individually in 29:32.6, exactly one second ahead of teammate Gidamis Shahanga.

In addition to Motshwarateu, Nyambui and Scrutton, two other runners finished in the top 10 for the second consecutive year. Penn State's Alan Scharu was sixth (seventh last year) in 29:30.5 and Arkansas' David Taylor was ninth (10th last year) in 29:35.6.

Texas-El Paso's championship was its seventh in cross country, just one behind Michigan State, the all-time team leader. The Miners now have won 17 team titles in cross country, outdoor track and indoor track, all of which have come since 1969.

Top individuals: 1. Mathews Motshwarateu, Texas-El Paso, 28:45.6; 2. Michael Musyoki, Texas-El Paso, 28:46.4; 3. Gabriel Kamau, Texas-El Paso, 29:19.3; 4. Mark Scrutton, Colorado, 29:22.1; 5. Graeme Fell, San Diego State, 29:30.4; 6. Alan Scharu, Penn State, 29:30.5; 7. Suleiman Nyambui, Texas-El Paso, 29:32.6; 8. Gidamis Shahanga, Texas-El Paso, 29:33.6; 9. David Taylor, Arkansas, 29:35.6; 10. Richard Tuwei, Washington State, 29:36.7.

Team results: 1. Texas-El Paso, 17 (NCAA record—old record of 25 set by Drake, 1944); 2. Providence, 109; 3. Arkansas, 175; 4. Wisconsin, 179; 5. UCLA, 187; 6. East Tennessee State, 223; 7. Arizona, 253; 8. Florida State, 257; 9. Clemson, 300; 10. Illinois, 305.

Marauders claim title

Millersville State waited only one year after moving to Division II to make its mark in championship competition with a first-place finish in the Division II Men's Cross Country Championships in Lowell, Massachusetts.

Led by Gregory Cauller, the fifth-place team finisher, the Marauders placed three runners among the top 20 to edge Edinboro State for the title.

Defending champion Humboldt State did not qualify a team for the meet, but the Lumberjacks' Mark Conover crossed the finish line in 31:45.7 to capture the individual title.

Frank Assumma, California-Riverside, was second on the individual list and the first team finisher with a time of 32:08 for the 10,000 meters.

Millersville State's Donald Williams was 13th, William King 17th, Erik Steudel 21st and Paul Bowman 41st to round out the Marauders' scoring.

Top individuals: 1. Mark Conover, Humboldt State, 31:45.7; 2. Frank Assumma, California-Riverside, 32:08.0; 3. Brian Ferrari, California State (Pennsylvania), 32:12.9; 4. Steve Pybus, Eastern Washington, 32:21.4; 5. Steve Venable, Troy State, 32:30.6; 6. Jed Krieg, North Dakota State, 32:34.4; 7. Gregory Cauller, Millersville State, 32:35.4; 8. Andy DiConti, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, 32:43.6; 9. John Steinberg, Ferris State, 32:44.9; 10. Joe Sheely, Northern Colorado, 32:45.5.

Team results: 1. Millersville State, 97; 2. Edinboro State, 99; 3. Mankato State, 119; 4. Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, 122; 5. California-Riverside, 127; 6. North Dakota State, 166; 7. Southeast Missouri State, 199; 8. Indiana (Pennsylvania), 207; 9. South Dakota State, 208; 10. Ferris State, 240.

North Central wins fifth

Despite placing only one finisher in the top 10, North Central won its fifth team title at the National Collegiate Division III Men's Cross Country Championships in Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Led by freshman Bob Dunphey's ninth-place finish, North Central compiled 89 points to defeat runner-up Brandeis (107). North Central, which previously won NCAA cross country titles in 1975, 1976, 1978 and 1979, is the only team to win the Division III championship more than once.

Dunphey's time was 26:01.1 over the 8,000-meter (4.97 miles) course at Petrifying Springs Park in Kenosha. Remaining members of North Central's winning team were Tony Bluell (11th, 26:02.2), Bill O'Neil (17th, 26:09.3), Dale Koepnick (30th, 26:28.3) and Ray Krauss (66th, 27:06.6).

Principia's Mark Whalley won the individual title with a time of 25:25.9, beating Chicago's Michael Axinn to the tape by 20 seconds. The race, hosted by Carthage College, was run with a slight snow cover and temperatures in the low 30s.

Carleton, last year's team champion, finished fifth with 176 points as only Todd Schafer (fifth) and Quinn Batson (16th) managed top performances.

Connecticut triumphs

In an all-New England final, Connecticut topped Massachusetts, 4-1, to win the first NCAA Division I

Field Hockey Championship

Playing as the visitors on their home field (Massachusetts was the top seed), the Huskies put together a three-goal second half to break open a close game. After Rose Smith had put Connecticut on top in the first half, Lorie McCollum scored 1:49 into the second half for what proved to be the winning goal. The Minutewomen cut the margin nine minutes later when Tina Coffin tallied, but two goals in the last five minutes sewed it up for Connecticut.

Coach Diane Wright's squad had a surprisingly easy 3-0 semifinal triumph over No. 2 seed Old Dominion, with Smith notching two goals. Massachusetts, meanwhile, made a first-half goal by Judy Strong stand up for a 1-0 win in its semifinal against Long Beach State.

Old Dominion bounced back from its shutout at the hands of Connecticut to post a 2-1, penalty-stroke win over Long Beach State in the third-place game.

Pfeiffer holds on

Host Pfeiffer got a first-half hat trick from sophomore Carol Whitehouse and then held on for a 5-3 win over Bentley in the inaugural NCAA Division II Field Hockey Championship.

Whitehouse's three goals staked the Falcons to a 3-0 lead before Judy Chiarelli was able to pull Bentley back within striking distance before half time. But Whitehouse's fourth goal of the game and a goal from Carol Durkin put the game out of reach.

Pfeiffer, the top-rated Division II squad all fall, advanced to the finals with a 1-0 overtime victory over Chico State in the semifinals. Bentley, meanwhile, also was involved in the semifinal, taking a 2-1 verdict over Adelphi.

Pfeiffer finished the season with an 9-3-1 record, while Bentley ended with a 7-6-5 mark.

Undefeated Trenton wins

Trenton State put the finishing touches on an undefeated season when the Lions blanked Franklin and Marshall, 2-0, in the finals of the first NCAA Division III Field Hockey Championship.

Coach Melissa Magee's squad ended the year with a 15-0-2 record, while Franklin and Marshall wound up 9-6-1.

Two goals by Lori Jung were more than enough for Trenton State in the final, as a stout Lion defense held the Diplomats to just four shots and goalie Dina Ayers posted her 10th shutout of the year.

Both finalists had close semifinal wins as Trenton State beat host Westfield State, 2-1, and Franklin and Marshall edged Elizabethtown, 1-0. Westfield State took a 3-2, two-overtime decision over Elizabethtown in the third-place game.

Glassboro edges Scranton

In the first four-overtime final in NCAA Division III Men's Soccer Championship history, Glassboro State overcame Scranton, 2-1, to capture its first title.

The two teams traded first-half goals and then battled through nearly 103 minutes of scoreless soccer before winger Scott Salisbury slotted home the winner for the Profs with 2:34 left in the fourth overtime. It was Salisbury who had given Glassboro State a 1-0 lead with 23:26 left in the first half before the Royals equalized the score with 17:06 left before intermission when Tom McGill tapped in a loose ball in a goal-mouth scramble.

The championship at Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania, marked the culmination of a three-year battle for coach Dan Gilmore's team. The Profs were runners-up in 1979 and third-place finishers a year ago. For Scranton, it was the second straight overtime loss in the championship game as the Royals fell, 1-0, to Babson in last year's final.

Baseball highlight film is available

Orders now are being accepted by the NCAA Library of Films for "The Pride of Omaha," a highlights film of the 1981 Division I Baseball Championship.

The 26-minute, 16-millimeter color film was produced by NCAA Productions and underwritten by The College World Series, Inc., an Omaha, Nebraska, civic organization. This is the first year NCAA Productions has filmed highlights of the College World Series to be included in the NCAA Library of Films.

Highlights feature action from the final five games of the championship. The film includes coverage by a two-camera crew that provides both press-box and field-level views of the action.

Arizona State (the champion), Oklahoma State, Texas and South Carolina are the four teams featured from the original eight-team series bracket. The film features highlights from two 13-inning contests and the national championship game between Arizona State and Oklahoma State.

The Sun Devils defeated the Cowboys, 7-4, to claim their fifth national championship. Arizona State left fielder Stan Holmes was the individual star, collecting 13 hits, batting in 17 runs and hitting .465 over six games.

The sale price is $180 and the three-day rental fee is $50. Orders may be placed through the NCAA Library of Films, P.O. Box 15602, Kansas City, Missouri 64106.

soring 12 men's sports.

The exception criteria would be as follows: (1) An institution could retain Division I-A football classification if it is a member of an allied conference in which at least six of the conference member institutions sponsor football and more than half of the football-playing members meet the criteria for the applicable period, or (2) an institution not meeting the 17,000 average attendance or 30,000 permanent-seat requirement would qualify if it has averaged 20,000 in paid attendance for all of its games, home and away, for the applicable period (one year or four years).

The waiver opportunity would allow the Division I-A membership to vote, by a majority of those present and voting, to permit an institution not meeting the Division I-A criteria to be classified in Division I-A.

Proposal No. 6 is a Council resolution providing a similar waiver opportunity at the 1982 Convention because the waiver opportunity provided in Proposal No. 5 could not be effective until September 1, 1982.

Another Council resolution, No. 10, would commit the Council to present legislation at the 76th annual Convention that would amend the constitution and bylaws to allow the football-playing members of each division to determine their own football television policies. The resolution also calls for a reorganization of the Football Television Committee on a division basis. The purposes of the committee's reorganization would be (1) to reflect the results of the restructuring of Division I football and (2) to provide representatives of each division on the committee autonomy in determining the recommendations they may wish to make to the football-playing members in their divisions.

Council-sponsored Proposal Nos. 15, 16, 17 and 18 relate, directly or indirectly, to overall Division I membership criteria. They seek (1) to create a minimum requirement of eight varsity intercollegiate sports for Division I membership, (2) to establish a limit of two basketball games against institutions that are not members of Division I for institutions attempting to move into Division I, (3) to require all Division I members to play at least one-third of their basketball contests at home and (4) to strengthen the requirements for automatic qualification in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

The major thrust of the CFA's legislative package is to create a new membership division. Proposal No. 2 would amend Bylaw 9-1-(a) to establish Division IV.

Subsequent proposals—all out of order if No. 2 is defeated—would create initial guidelines for Division IV membership (eight varsity intercollegiate sports, scheduling and playing at least 70 percent of all games against I-A members, averaging at least 20,000 in paid attendance per home football game for the immediate past three-year period and playing home football games in a stadium containing a minimum of 30,000 permanent seats), would establish Division IV representation on the Council and Executive Committee and would create virtually autonomous Division IV committees for football television and postseason football.

The Big Eight Conference and the Ivy League also have sponsored legislation featuring variations on the attendance and stadium-size requirements.

Also, the University of Texas, Austin, and seven other members seek to add a new section to the constitution, entitled Property Rights. Because the proposal does not relate directly to Division I restructuring, the chair of the Convention has indicated it will be ruled out of order. Proponents of the legislation are expected to challenge the ruling.

The Council's proposals were generated by the Special Committee on NCAA Governance, Organization and Services, chaired by President James Frank, Lincoln University (Missouri), and a subcommittee chaired by Richard H. Perry, University of Southern California.

"The Council believes that a special Convention is appropriate," Frank said, "because a substantial number of Division I institutions want the opportunity to consider the recommendations of the governance committee in a session separate from the normal Convention proceedings, when a great many other issues are before the membership."

"It is obvious that the 1978 reorganization of Division I football has not worked as intended and that Division I membership as a whole has experienced what appears to be uncontrolled growth," Frank said. "The Council proposals are designed to refocus on the intent of the 1973 decision to create the three-division structure and the 1978 plan to reorganize Division I football -- to assure that institutions with similar commitments and essentially like programs are grouped together."

Oliver Luck

Luck has had a remarkable career both on the field and in the classroom, earning recognition as an outstanding quarterback while maintaining a 3.96 grade-point average in his study.

With a portion of his senior season remaining, Luck already has established Mountaineeer career records for total offensive plays and total yards, passes attempted and passes completed. He ranked 18th nationally in total offense with 2,365 yards running and passing as a senior. In one game his junior season, he completed 20 to 25 passes for 314 yards.

He is active in church and civic affairs and speaks frequently to youth groups throughout the state. Luck, a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholar-Athlete, has been selected to the dean's list each semester.

Kenneth Sims

A serious ankle injury ended Sims' senior season after nine games, but he remains a serious candidate for the Outland Trophy and the Lombardi Award, both emblematic of outstanding line play. He is a two-year all-America selection and also has been named all-Southwest Athletic Conference twice. He is team captain for the Longhorns.

A 2.7 student in physical education, Sims has served as a volunteer worker with retarded children and has donated time to underprivileged children. He has made several appearances on a local children's television program and has been an unofficial cheerleader for Texas basketball, swimming and tennis teams. He is active in church work.
