TFA/USA expected to approve merger

The membership of the Track and Field Association of the USA is expected to approve next month an agreement that will have the effect of merging the organization with The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track.

Cleburne Price, University of Texas, Austin, track coach and TFA/USA president, said the agreement was approved unanimously by The Athletics Congress board of directors at a March 14 meeting in Kansas City.

Under the agreement, the TFA-USA membership will dissolve the organization. Six seats on The Athletics Congress board will be allocated to the NCAA, with three each going to the National Federation of State High School Associations and the National Junior College Athletic Association.

The three groups have been the primary supporters of TFA/USA since it was formed in 1978.

"The agreement assures representation for the school-college community on TAC's governing board and consolidates all domestic track beyond school-college competition under one organization," Price said.

"I think it's the right step at the right time for track and field in America," Price said. "TFA/USA assumed a strong leadership role in creating a structure for The Athletics Congress that assured compliance with the criteria for a national governing body. This is the next logical step."

When the NCAA representatives assume their positions on The Athletics Congress board, it will be the first time in almost 25 years that the Association has participated in the affairs of the national governing body for track and field.

The NCAA ended its involvement in 1960 when articles of alliance with the Amateur Athletic Union were cancelled. Despite numerous attempts, the NCAA and AAU were unable to reconcile their differences.

In 1978, Congress passed the Amateur Sports Act, which—among other provisions—prohibited a national sports organization from serving as the national governing body for more than one sport. The AAU, which had been an umbrella group for several sports, was forced to relinquish its authority over track and field.

In 1979, the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for track, selected The Athletics Congress, which had been formed in 1978, as the national governing body for the United States.

In 1980, TFA/USA was granted membership in The Athletics Congress. Until the recent agreement, the NCAA, NJCAA and the NFSHSA had continued to participate in The Athletics Congress affairs only through their memberships in TFA/USA.

"Our people have participated informally in various TAC activities for the last two years," Price said, "and they were most impressed by what they saw. Most of the old problems with the AAU administration have disappeared. The TFA/USA leadership just came to the conclusion that there was no longer a necessity for maintaining an alternative national track coordinating organization in this country."

The TAC board of directors currently is made up of 64 members, including TAC's officers and committee chairs, athlete representatives and representatives from other groups such as the armed forces and the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

Programs to be assessed

Executive Committee meets April 19-20

The NCAA Executive Committee will consider a broad range of topics when it meets April 19-20 at the Marriott Pavilion Hotel in St. Louis, Missouri.

Among the major reports will be one from the Subcommittee on Program Evaluation, chaired by Charley Scott, University of Alabama. The subcommittee, which has become ongoing in nature since its creation in 1981, is responsible for studying existing programs and reviewing new programs with the perspective that no NCAA program is to be continued automatically from year to year.

As is traditionally the case at the spring meeting, the Executive Committee will begin planning the 1982-83 NCAA budget. For the last two years, the committee has examined a four-year projection of NCAA revenue and expense, and that practice is expected to continue this year.

The NCAA travel service, in its first year of operation, will be reviewed. As more championships are completed, NCAA Controller Louis J. Spry said the committee will have a better understanding of how effective the program has been. In any event, the Executive Committee will discuss the travel program as it pertains to both championship and committee travel.

The Special Committee on Championships Standards, chaired by Seaver Peters, Dartmouth College, also will issue a report. A recommendation is expected regarding the staffing of championships by the Association's governing sports committees.

Other business is expected to include:

- A review of the 1982 NCAA Convention and planning for the 1983 Convention in San Diego. The committee also is expected to move toward a decision on which hotel the NCAA will use at the 1984 Convention in Dallas.

- A report on planning for the weekly NCAA News.

- Reports from several of the Association's sports committees.

This will be the first Executive Committee meeting for Fred Jacoby, commissioner of the Mid-American Athletic Conference. He replaces Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Robert C. James.

Discussion of Council restructuring on April agenda

Various developments regarding NCAA Conventions will be included on the agenda for the April 21-23 meeting of the NCAA Council at the Marriott Pavilion Hotel in St. Louis, Missouri.

The Council will consider recommendations regarding restructuring of the Council itself in accordance with a resolution adopted by the 1982 Convention in Houston. Such restructuring would expand the Council membership to assure more equitable representation of segments of the NCAA membership.

Other recommendations on the agenda will deal with possible changes in the voting requirements for amendments to executive regulations and for resolutions. Those considerations were directed by the Council in its post-Convention meeting. Current legislation specifies that the entire Convention, rather than separate divisions, must vote on such matters.

In other Convention-related matters, the Council will review various aspects of the 1982 Convention and begin planning for the 1983 annual Convention, to be held January 10-12 in San Diego, California. Part of that initial planning will be consideration of all proposed 1983 legislation on file in the national office.

The Council also will appoint individuals to fill vacancies on the Nominating Committee and the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees. (Note: Vacancies on those committees are reported elsewhere in this issue.)

The April agenda will include at least one appeal by member institutions. Bowling Green State University and Northern Illinois University have announced their intention to appeal a ruling by the NCAA officers regarding their compliance with the Division I-A football criterion set forth in Bylaw 11-1-(e)-(4). The institutions plan to have 30,000-seat stadiums by September of this year but have not had stadiums of that size in the years in which their home football attendance has been measured.

Elsewhere on its agenda, the Council will consider all officers' actions since the January meetings, review existing and proposed interpretations, consider various membership matters and receive reports from several committees, including the Classification, Executive, Governmental Affairs, Long Range Planning and Football Television Committees, the Committee on Infractions and the Special Committee on Legislative Review.

New Council members who will be participating in their first full meeting are Judith M. Brame, Division II vice-president at large, California State University, Northridge; Richard W. Burns, District 7 vice-president (Division I), University of Texas, El Paso, and Elmer W. Yoest, Division III vice-president at large, Otterbein College.

Driesell wants no more recruiting

Lefty Driesell, basketball coach
University of Maryland, College Park
The Washington Post

"They ought to put in a rule that no coach is allowed off campus to recruit at all.

"With all the recruiting magazines and scouting reports that everybody gets these days, you can make all the decisions you have to. Everybody says they have to go out and evaluate talent. That's a bunch of bull. Half the time you mess up anyway, even if you see the guy play 100 times.

"Let the kids make the decisions on where they want to play. You see a kid you like on a scouting report, you write him and invite him to campus. You get to know him that way, see what kind of kid he is, then decide if you want to offer him a scholarship. After that, it's their decision.

"When I think of the money and time I've wasted recruiting over the years, I get sick. There you are at a game. You know the kid can play or can't play. But you're there. You can't talk to him, but you're there. It's stupid, the whole thing is stupid."

Editorial

New York Times

"We're not even really part of the school anymore, anyway. I work for the N.C. State Athletic Association. That has nothing to do with the university. Our funding is totally independent. You think the chancellor is going to tell me what to do? Who to take into school or not to take into school? I doubt it."

"That observation by North Carolina State's basketball coach, Jim Valvano, should prove to all but incurable romanticists that big-time sports enjoy a life of their own at major American colleges and universities. The gulf between academics and athletics is widening. Schools that invest heavily in sports should acknowledge the fact that they operate semipro teams and start doing it openly.

"Astronomic revenues from television have transformed the business of college sports. Whereas only two dozen big schools once competed for top high school athletes, hundreds now do. Allegations of recruiting and promotion violations are common. Some schools go so far as to set up athletic departments as separate corporations. The University of Michigan's program shares its income with the university only if the athletic director agrees.

"In these circumstances, enforcement of the rules of the NCAA depends largely on information supplied by the members—and they tend usually to protect each other 'It is, after all, a fraternity,' says coach Valvano.

"The benefits of fielding outstanding teams are plain. The commercials on campus life, shown at half time, can lure future physicians as well as power forwards to a university. Successful teams can encourage proud legislators and alumni to support higher education financially. Television receipts can help pay for other college activities, including intramural sports.

"But are even those benefits really worth the distortions of purpose and commercialism? Can universities afford to lease their names to athletic subsidiaries and then ignore what is done in their name? How many scandals must erupt before the reputation of higher education, or at least of individual schools, is compromised?

"Howard Swearer, the president of Brown University, offers the most straightforward and satisfactory response: Schools that aspire to sports prominence and profits should establish semiprofessional teams. Let the athletes take courses on campus if they qualify academically, but stop pretending that most athletes are students and that coaches are professors.

"The honest separation of academics and athletics would say something important about the honesty of American higher education."

Coaches are the solution

By David Westphal
Des Moines Register

Go ahead and pay college basketball officials $50,000 a year. Send them to continuing education classes during the off-season. Make them watch game videotape until their eyes hurt.

What have you got? A bigger officiating bill and not much more. There still will be atrocious calls, unevenly officiated games and "homer" jobs. And coaches will still yell and gnash their teeth and say they wuz robbed.

Why? Because decisions made by basketball officials are based as much on personal interpretation as on the rule book. One official's traveling call is another official's foul. One man's block is another man's charge. Anyone who has watched a televised game where instant replays are used knows it's true.

"Let's take a look at that play again and see if the defensive man didn't have his feet planted," the analyst says. "Yep, you see it right there. He had his feet planted in plenty of time; it should have been a charge against the offensive man, not a block. Bad call."

A charge!? Is the analyst blind? Is he looking at the same play I just saw? Why, the defensive man obviously undercut him. The call was right.

And so it goes. In many games, the same thing happens dozens of times—not because the officiating crew is lousy, but because that is the nature of the game. The rule book describes exactly what is a foul and what isn't, but in practice the difference sometimes is nonexistent. Not everyone splits hairs the same way.

It would be fun to select the best 25 officials in the land, seat them at courtside for a basketball game and see how they'd call various situations. The guess here is that, on a single play, some officials would call traveling, some would call a three-second violation, some would call a foul on the defensive player and some would let action continue.

In the old days, it was a lot easier. The players were slower and the interpretations were more clear-cut. If the defensive player so much as touched the man with the ball, it was a foul. But not many fans would opt for a return to the old days. The liberalization of officiating rules is one reason college basketball has become one of the nation's most popular sporting events.

Basketball officials would prefer to live in obscurity. Call the game, collect their $150 and expense money, sneak out the back exit and be on their way. But college coaches this season have made sure the officials have worked under a bright spotlight.

Rarely have basketball fans in Iowa heard so many complaints about officiating. Game after game, coaches Johnny Orr of Iowa State and Lute Olson of Iowa sat down at their postgame press conferences to express ever-increasing astonishment at how bad the calls had been. Olson even outlined a program to upgrade the quality of Big Ten Conference officials.

It's easy to understand their frustration. One bad call by an official can ruin years of recruiting, teaching and training by coaches. A lapse of concentration can destroy dreams.

So maybe Olson is right. Perhaps colleges should invest more of their basketball revenue on officiating, with the aim of reducing bad calls.

But before that happens, conference officials ought to extract a promise from basketball coaches that they'll cut their postgame bombast about officiating.

We wouldn't begrudge coaches the opportunity to get their licks in during the games. After all, everybody else is doing it; and it provides an escape valve for the mountainous pressure that accompanies big-time basketball. Yelling at officials certainly is better than berating one's spouse, castigating the kids or kicking the dog.

But we could do without the twice-weekly discussions about blown calls. Most fans know that missed calls are a part of basketball and that over the course of a game, they balance out. When their team loses by two points or four points, fans think about lousy shooting, poor rebounding or turnovers—not a missed traveling call.

So when they read the next morning that the coach once again is harping about the officials, the words probably get read this way: copout.

There is one thing coaches can do if they're really fed up with the officiating. They can speed up the game. Nothing enhances the importance of officiating more than a 45-42 game. If coaches want to live by the deliberate, controlled offense and packed zone defense, they're going to have to get used to dying with the officiating.

Rich Hunter promoted to director of finance position

Richard D. Hunter, NCAA assistant director of championships, has been promoted to the newly created position of director of finance.

Hunter, 31 and an NCAA staff member since October 1978, will assume the new responsibilities April 16. The position involves the areas of general financial planning and administration, supervision of the NCAA travel service, preparation of championships financial reports, contract supervision, membership insurance and supervision of research and sports-medicine activities.

Before joining the NCAA, Hunter was superintendent of recreation for the city of Overland Park, Kansas. He has been responsible for the administration of several men's championships since joining the NCAA, including fencing, rifle, wrestling, swimming, gymnastics, football, golf, lacrosse, skiing and indoor track. He also has acted as the staff liaison with the NCAA All-Star High School Games Committee.

Hunter attended Southern Methodist University from 1969 to 1971, majoring in business administration. He transferred to Kansas State University, where he obtained a degree in physical education in 1973. He has done graduate work at the University of Kansas in the institution's public administration program.

While with the city of Over-

land Park, Hunter participated in a variety of seminars dealing with management, leadership development and zero-base budgeting.

New NCAA line of apparel to be available this summer

A new apparel line identified as "NCAAction Sportswear" will be on retailers' shelves this summer as the result of an agreement between the NCAA and E. R. Moore Company.

A line of sweaters, sweat-shirts and T-shirts will be available by mid-summer. E. R. Moore also plans to expand the program to include shorts, golf shirts, socks, warm-up suits, visors, tote bags and windbreakers. The products will be sold in more than 1,000 J. C. Penney's stores across the nation, as well as in sporting goods stores and college bookstores.

In addition to a variety of products featuring NCAA insignia, the line also will include products with logos of member institutions. E. R. Moore and the NCAA will contact members concerning the three-year agreement, under which the NCAA and member institutions will split royalty payments.

"This will provide member institutions an opportunity to receive excellent visibility, increased revenue and an association with a quality product," said John T. Waters, NCAA director of promotion. "Members will not be burdened with any of the problems of marketing their own line under this agreement."

E. R. Moore, which is based in Skokie, Illinois, and is a division of Beatrice Foods, is well known for its line of caps and gowns for graduation ceremonies and also for its physical-education clothing.

Wilson named as editor of expanding NCAA News

Thomas Wilson, an assistant professor of journalism and faculty adviser to the campus daily newspaper at Ohio State University, will join the NCAA staff in early April as editor-in-chief of the NCAA News.

Wilson, 46, was selected from among more than 65 applicants to fill the new position, which was created as part of the plan to begin producing the News 46 times per year instead of on the current 18-issue schedule. The new publishing schedule will begin in June.

David Pickle, who has edited the News for the past 4½ years, continues as managing editor.

Before joining the Ohio State journalism faculty in 1977, Wilson worked on daily newspapers for 15 years. He served as sports editor and later managing editor of the Fulton (Missouri) Sun-Gazette, a copy editor of the Miami (Florida) Herald and news editor of the Kankakee (Illinois) Journal before becoming executive editor of the Findlay (Ohio) Courier, a position he held for eight years before moving to Ohio State.

As faculty adviser to the Ohio State Lantern, he served as publisher of a 70,000-circulation daily newspaper with a staff of approximately 90 students. The Lantern is the fourth-largest campus daily in the nation.

Thomas Wilson

Wilson has served as a judge in news, sports, advertising and photography competition for newspaper associations and wire services, has organized statewide educational seminars for professional journalists and was ranked among the top 20 teachers of writing and editing in competition sponsored by the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

A native of Chandler, Oklahoma, he earned a bachelor's degree in political science at the University of Oklahoma in 1959 and has done graduate work at the University of Michigan on a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

CEOs to meet in September

The third annual NCAA-sponsored meetings of institutional chief executive officers have been scheduled September 27-28, 1982, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

For the second time, the meetings will include separate sessions for chief executives from Divisions I, II and III. The activity is intended as a discussion forum and educational program in which CEOs can review major policy areas in intercollegiate athletics.

Each voting allied conference in Divisions I and II will be invited to select one chief executive to attend the meeting, and a specified number will be invited to represent independent institutions. In Division III, the steering committee will select the chief executives to be invited. NCAA officers James Frank and John L. Toner have announced that there is no plan to open the meetings to any interested chief executive, as was done last year in Division I.

Agendas for the three separate sessions will be developed by the three division steering committees in their June meetings. The NCAA Council may add late topics in its August meeting.

The individual selected for the position will be responsible for assisting with the conduct and administration of championship competition. Other duties will include working with NCAA sports committees and selected NCAA championship handbooks. The position also will involve other administrative duties.

The vacancy was created by the promotion of Richard D. Hunter to the newly created position of director of finance.

NCAA winter championships

DC wins its first title

District of Columbia, after three tight early-round contests and a five-point semifinal win, handed defending champion Florida Southern a 73-63 defeat to win the NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

Appearing in the tournament for the first time, the Firebirds won their two regional contests and a quarterfinal game by a total of eight points to advance to the semifinals in Springfield, Massachusetts. UDC then used a 40-point explosion by forward Michael Britt to edge Bakersfield State, 76-71, in the semifinals and set up the showdown with the Moccasins.

Florida Southern also had a rough road to the finals. Along the way, the Moccasins survived a triple-overtime thriller against Livingston in a regional final and a double-overtime semifinal against Kentucky Wesleyan, 90-89.

That tense game with Kentucky Wesleyan may have taken its toll on the Moccasins, as the Firebirds wore down Florida Southern in the second half of the final with a deep bench and full-court pressure. UDC, after leading 36-35 at intermission, was clinging to a two-point lead at 48-46 with 12:31 left in the game when Greg Carson and Earl Jones led a 10-1 spurt that gave the Firebirds a comfortable margin.

Jones, UDC's 6-11 sophomore center, and Britt paced the Firebirds' attack with 24 and 20 points, respectively. Forward Mark King hit for 24 points, mostly from outside, for Florida Southern; and all-America center John Ebeling added 18 points and 14 rebounds. District of Columbia, under head coach Wil Jones, finished the season with a 25-5 record. Florida Southern was 22-10.

Britt, Jones and Ebeling all made the all-tournament team, along with Kentucky Wesleyan's Dwight Higgs and Wayne McDaniel of Bakersfield State. Britt was named the tournament's outstanding player, while Higgs (22 points) and McDaniel (28 points) hooked up in a shooting match in the third-place game, which Kentucky Wesleyan won, 77-66.

Diane Looker, Cal Poly-Pomona

Cal Poly meets expectations

Cal Poly-Pomona entered the first NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship as the nation's top-ranked team and more than upheld that rating with an impressive drive to the title.

The Broncos, who finished the year 28-7, cruised to the crown with a 93-74 win over Tuskegee in the championship game in Springfield, Massachusetts. Cal Poly-Pomona's 71-58 semifinal victory over Mount St. Mary's was the closest game the Broncos played in the tournament.

Throughout the tournament, Pomona used the inside-outside punch of center Carol Welch and guard Jackie White to key its attack. Welch put in 15 points in the semifinal win and led all scorers with 26 in the final. White, who was named the tournament's outstanding player, had 23 points in the semifinals and 22 in the finals. That pair got plenty of help against Tuskegee with 21 points from forward Lisa Ulmer.

Tuskegee, which ended the season with a 29-5 record, stayed close in the early going against the Broncos, only to see a 10-10 tie broken open by the shooting of Ulmer and Welch, who sparked Pomona to a 19-10 lead. The Broncos built the margin to 47-24 at half time and never let the Golden Tigerettes back in the contest. Substitute Annette Chester with 17 points led five Tuskegee players in double figures.

Chester also led Tuskegee in its 88-82 semifinal win over Oakland with 24 points. She was named to the all-tournament team along with Welch, White, Oakland's Brenda McLean and Mount St. Mary's Becky Lovett.

Lovett's 17 points, 21 from Kelly Roche and 19 from Margaret Diaz were enough to offset McLean's 23-point effort and 20 points from Linda Krawford as Mount St. Mary's defeated Oakland, 73-62, in the third-place game.

Wabash cruises to crown

Wabash, behind a 45-point effort from center Pete Metzelaars, rolled over Potsdam State, 83-62, to capture its first NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship.

Metzelaars, who had 21 points in a 68-64 semifinal win over Stanislaus State, was named the tournament's most outstanding player. The 6-8 senior also set tournament records for most points (129), most field goals (54) and field-goal percentage (77.1). He finished his career with a Division III-record field-goal percentage of 73 percent.

The only other Little Giant scoring in double figures in the final was forward Merlin Nice, who had 12 points, including a six-for-six performance from the free-throw line. Nice was 24-for-24 from the foul line for the tournament, which set another championship record.

Metzelaars, however, was the one who broke the game open. After Potsdam State, the defending champion, had seen a 14-11 advantage turn into a 35-26 half-time deficit, Metzelaars put the game out of reach with 14 points in the first seven and a half minutes of the second half as Wabash forged a 55-32 lead. Forward Maurice Woods led Potsdam State with 21 points.

A crowd of 3,500 at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan, was on hand for the final. Wabash, which was making its third straight appearance in the tournament, won the title in its first trip to the final four.

Joining Metzelaars, Nice and Woods on the all-tournament team were Doug Cornfoot, Stanislaus State; Rick Davis, Brooklyn, and Leroy Witherspoon, Potsdam State. Brooklyn, a 50-49 loser to Potsdam State in the semifinals, bounced back to edge Stanislaus State, 68-62, in the third-place game.

Blue Jays take thriller

Host Elizabethtown held off a late North Carolina-Greensboro surge in regulation and went on to capture a 67-66 verdict in overtime to win the inaugural NCAA Division III Women's Basketball Championship.

Playing before their home-town fans in Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania, the Blue Jays saw a 10-point lead crumble in the last 5:40 of regulation as North Carolina-Greensboro rallied behind the hot shooting of Jody Mangus and Carol Peschel. Mangus tied the game at 54-54 on a jumper with 38 seconds left to cap a Spartan rally that saw them outscore Elizabethtown 14-4 down the stretch. When the Blue Jays missed the front end of a one-and-one situation with four seconds left, the contest moved into overtime.

A fast-break layup by Margaret Longo gave Elizabethtown a three-point lead with 1:26 remaining in the overtime. North Carolina-Greensboro cut the lead to one on a Michele Blazeovich field goal and had a chance to take the lead after an Elizabethtown turnover. The Blue Jays won a crucial jump ball, however, ran a fast break for a Page Lutz basket and then held on as the Spartans' Renee Coltrane hit two late free throws.

Elizabethtown, which finished 26-1, advanced to the finals with a 71-51 win over Clark (Massachusetts). The Blue Jays were led by Longo's 23 points and 16 from Bev Hall. North Carolina-Greensboro's Peschel took game-scoring honors with 28 points, while Blazeovich chipped in with 14.

North Carolina-Greensboro, 25-3, moved into the championship with a 77-66 semifinal win over Pomona-Pitzer. The Sagehens recouped for a 72-71 overtime win over Clark in the third-place game.

Joining Lutz, Hall and Peschel on the all-tournament team were Pomona-Pitzer's Carol Ferren and Sherry Sydney, North Carolina-Greensboro. Hall, who had 15 points in the semifinal win over Clark, was named the tournament's outstanding player.

Wayne State regains title

Wayne State, led by Neil Hick's victory in the sabre competition, claimed its third title in four years at the National Collegiate Men's Fencing Championships at Notre Dame, Indiana.

It was the fourth team title for the Tartars, who claimed their first championship in 1975. Only New York University (12) and Columbia (eight) have captured more fencing championships.

All of the 1982 individual champions were first-time winners. Alexander Flom of George Mason, third-place finisher a year ago, won the foil, while Peter Schiffrin, San Jose State, was first in the epee.

Gator swimmers No. 1

Winning more than half the events in the meet, Florida coasted to the team title in the first NCAA Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships in Gainesville, Florida.

Olympian Tracy Caulkins led the Lady Gators with individual championships in the 100 butterfly, the 200 individual medley, the 400 individual medley, the 200 butterfly and the 100 individual medley. She never was seriously pressed, the closest race being the 200 individual medley, which was decided by a margin of .64 of a second.

Florida breaststroker Kathy Treible captured championships in her specialty at 50, 100 and 200 yards, while Lady Gator diver Megan Neyer added first-place finishes in both diving events. Caulkins' sister, Amy, captured the 100 freestyle and the Lady Gators took a pair of relay championships to give them titles in 13 of the 24 events. Florida amassed 505 points, compared to 383 for second-place Stanford.

Marybeth Linzmeir led the Cardinals with championships in the 200, 500 and 1,650 freestyles. Sue Walsh of North Carolina, which finished third with 285 points, took backstroke titles at 50, 100 and 200 yards.

Interpretations

EDITOR'S NOTE: Publication of an interpretation in this column constitutes official notice to the membership. Questions concerning these or other O.I.s should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the Association's national office (P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201; 913/384-3220). The following cases appear in the 1982-83 Manual and are reprinted here for emphasis.

Published scouting service

Case No. 198

Situation: An institution's athletic department wishes to subscribe to a periodic, regularly-published scouting service pertaining to prospective student-athletes. This service takes the form of a printed report relating athletic and/or academic qualifications of prospects.

Question: May an institution or one of its athletic department employees pay a fee to subscribe to this service?

Answer: Yes. It is permissible to subscribe to a regularly published scouting service involving prospective student-athletes, provided this service is made available to any institution desiring to subscribe and at the same fee rate for all subscribers. [B 1-5-(b)]

Reimbursement of representatives—recruiting

Case No. 199

Situation: A representative of an institution's athletic interests transports a prospective student-athlete to visit the campus.

Question: Is it permissible for the institution to reimburse the representative for the cost of this transportation, or any other actual or necessary expense incurred during the trip, and thereby count it as an institutional paid visit for the prospect?

Answer: No. Payment of such costs by the institution places the representative in the category of an athletic talent scout and is prohibited; further, a representative may not transport a prospect to the campus unless it is done at the representative's own expense and the representative accompanies the prospect. [B 1-5-(b) and B 1-8-(c)]

Expenses to athletic representatives

Case No. 200

Situation: An institution desires to pay the expenses of a friend or an alumnus to visit the institution's campus. The purpose of the visit is for the individual to become familiar with the campus facilities as well as athletic and academic programs of the institution in order to better represent the institution in the recruitment of prospective student-athletes.

Question: Would the payment of expenses other than meals provided in the institution's home community for these individuals to visit the campus be considered as payment of costs incurred by athletic talent scouts in the studying or recruiting of prospective student-athletes?

Answer: Yes. [B 1-5-(b)]

Athletic talent scout

Case No. 201

Situation: An institution wishes to employ an individual for the primary purpose of scouting or recruiting prospective student-athletes. The individual would be designated as a coach; however, the individual would not reside in the city in which the institution is located or its general locale.

Question: Would the employment of an individual to render such services be permitted by NCAA legislation?

Answer: No. The individual would be considered an athletic talent scout rather than a regular staff member of the institution. [B 1-5-(b)]

Interpretations stressed

The NCAA Council has concluded that administrative assistants to head football or basketball coaches will be countable against the coaching-staff limitations in football or basketball unless the requirements of Case No. 373 (1982-83 Manual) are met.

The official interpretation provides that if an individual performs responsibilities on a department-wide basis (such as a recruiting coordinator who coordinates recruiting for all of the institution's intercollegiate sports or an academic counselor who counsels all student-athletes in all sports), that individual is to be excluded from the limitations on the number of coaches in football and basketball.

Accordingly, an administrative assistant to a Division I member institution's head football or basketball coach would be countable against the coaching staff limitations of Bylaw 7-1 unless the administrative assistant performs responsibilities on a department-wide basis.

The Council also requested that member institutions note the application of Case No. 134, which relates to the adjustment of a student-athlete's financial aid resulting from the receipt of income for participation in professional all-star contests.

Under this interpretation, the institution involved must adjust the grant-in-aid so that the compensation, when coupled with the student's institutional financial aid, does not exceed commonly accepted educational expenses for the balance of the academic year.

If it appears that a student-athlete's income from such sources will equal or exceed commonly accepted educational expenses, the institution must terminate all institutional aid. Nonrefundable payments credited to a student-athlete's account need not become the student's obligation.

Williams takes easy win

Freshman Katherine Eckrich won five individual championships and junior teammate Elizabeth Jex added another four in pacing Williams to an easy victory in the NCAA Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships in Boston, Massachusetts.

For good measure, the Ephs added titles in all five relay events as they captured 14 of the 24 events. Little relief seems in store for Williams' rivals next year since only Catherine Hartley, who swam legs on two of the relays, is a senior.

Williams accumulated 402 points to outdistance second-place Kenyon, which had 303.

St. Louis University placed on probation for one year

St. Louis University has been placed on probation for a one-year period by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions as a result of violations occurring in the conduct of the university's intercollegiate men's basketball program.

The penalty includes sanctions that will preclude the men's basketball team from participating in any postseason basketball competition or from appearing on any live telecasts in basketball during the 1982-83 academic year.

Also, in accordance with the "show cause" provision of the NCAA enforcement program, the university has been required to disassociate its men's head basketball coach from the institution's intercollegiate athletic program.

"The NCAA's investigation of this case stemmed from reports of out-of-season basketball practice sessions that were conducted by the university's head basketball coach," said Charles Alan Wright, chair of the NCAA Committee on Infractions. "However, due to efforts by the head coach, an assistant coach and an attorney to provide university officials and the NCAA false and misleading information during the investigation of the matter, the case became much more serious.

"In determining an appropriate penalty in this case," Wright said, "the Committee on Infractions noted that the university did not take immediate action in the fall of 1981 to terminate the employment of its head basketball coach when the institution discovered that he had reported false information. Accordingly, the committee believed that in light of this factor and the nature of the violations in the case, further action against the coach and sanctions that would affect the institution for a one-year period were appropriate."

The Committee on Infractions found violations of NCAA legislation related to ethical conduct and out-of-season practice in basketball.
