Regional meetings attract 900

More than 900 persons attended four NCAA-sponsored regional meetings designed to inform administrators and coaches in women's athletics of NCAA rules and procedures.

The attendance—predominantly primary women athletic administrators and coaches of women's teams, but including a number of faculty athletic representatives, directors of athletics and conference officials—included approximately 250 persons May 5 in Chicago; 300 May 7 at Cherry Hill, New Jersey; 220 May 10 in Atlanta, and 145 May 11 in Denver.

"Based on comments during and after the meetings, the regional programs were well-received, timely and answered many concerns and questions about NCAA legislation," according to Ruth M. Berkey, assistant executive director.

Berkey emphasized that the meetings were designed to be informational and that attendance was voluntary. "We believe they gave those active in women's athletics the opportunity to ask questions regarding the application of NCAA legislation as their institutions determine whether they wish to place their women's programs under NCAA rules between now and 1985," she said.

The NCAA staff members conducting the meetings encouraged member institutions to take advantage of the 1981-to-1985 period established by the NCAA governance plan to resolve problems caused by differences in rules governing women's programs and to determine the rules best suited to their programs.

"We emphasized that each institution has until 1985 to decide if it wants to affiliate its women's program with the NCAA," explained Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services. "As each institution goes through that process, it should take into account specific situations on its campus to assure that no student-athlete will be disadvantaged by a decision to operate under NCAA legislation."

Many of the questions asked at the four meetings dealt with NCAA legislation regarding transfers, the five-year eligibility rule, the relationship of the five-year rule and the hardship rule to pregnancy cases, and financial aid calculations and limitations.

The Special Committee on Legislative Review will discuss those topics and various other issues raised at the regional meetings when that committee meets June 7-8 in Boston.

Cures for athletic ills are elusive

Those attempting to right the wrongs of college athletics might sympathize with those who have attempted to cure the common cold.

If there were only one area of concern—one 'virus,' as it were—then surely a cure could be found. But the problems of intercollegiate athletics are so diverse and so interrelated that treatment, as with the cold, must deal largely with the symptoms.

At this time, the NCAA is trying to improve the condition of college athletics through three principal means:

- Education.
- Legislation.
- Enforcement.

The following is an explanation of what action the NCAA has taken in recent years, what actions are contemplated and why some alternatives are not practical.

Education

Education is a never-ending battle for the NCAA. The public generally misunderstands the role of the Association, operating under the impression that decisions are made and implemented unilaterally from Mission, Kansas.

The cornerstone of the NCAA, institutional control, is not widely understood. The same could be said of the Association's enforcement program, the role of the NCAA staff and the importance of the annual Convention.

In the interest of trying to promote a better understanding of the NCAA, the Public Relations Committee will discuss the possibility of reinstituting the NCAA Media Seminar, which has not been conducted since 1978. David E. Cawood, director of public relations, said the seminar would focus on selected topics of interest for the media attending the event.

Second part of a series

"I think the media seminar and the football

The NCAA News...enters new era in June

The next issue of The NCAA News will begin a new era for the publication that has served as the primary communication vehicle for the membership for more than 17 years.

Most noticeable among the changes being made in the newspaper are an increase in frequency and the appearance and format alterations. Expanded from 18 to 46 issues per year, the News will feature a new nameplate and new body and headline typefaces. The paper also will be printed on newsprint for the first time.

A significant change in the News for the membership is a job-listing service. Space in the job-listing section may be purchased to list vacancies in both athletic administration and coaching, as well as to help fill open dates on schedules.

Because The NCAA News is a national publication serving the college athletic community, job listings in the newspaper will fulfill many affirmative-action requirements.

Listings in the section will be arranged according to administrative or coaching positions on a sport-by-sport basis. Listings will be accepted up to seven days before the date of publication for each issue.

Other changes being made in The NCAA News are expansion of the editorial material to include football and men's and women's basketball statistics

Previews planned in 23 sports

The NCAA News will publish previews of 23 intercollegiate sports during the 1982-83 seasons. The previews will be included in regular editions of the News.

The preview of a particular sport will cover all divisions in which championships are conducted. Division I-A football also will be previewed.

The schedule of preview sections includes football, August 11; soccer, August 25; women's volleyball and water polo, September 6; cross country and field hockey, September 13; ice hockey, October 11; gymnastics and rifle, October 18; wrestling, October 25; women's basketball, November 1; men's basketball, November 8; swimming and fencing, November 15; indoor track, skiing and men's volleyball, December 22; golf and tennis, February 9, 1983; baseball, February 16; outdoor track, February 23, and softball and lacrosse, March 2.

prechampionship previews in every NCAA sport, complete championship coverage and more opinion and editorial columns.

The first issue of the expanded News will be published June 16. It will continue to be mailed under the existing third-class mailing permit until approval of a second-class permit is received. After that, most subscribers should receive the publication in two to four days.

Other summer issues will be published June 30, July 14 and 28 and August 11 and 25. The first weekly issue will be September 6.

Cheating: more talk than action

Jim Walden, football coach
Washington State University
Dallas Times Herald

"I think most of it (cheating in college athletics) is more talk than anything else. There is far more smoke than there is really fire. There are some teams that cheat, as in any profession. In the business world, there are cheaters. There are guys trying to sell Xerox machines the wrong way. There's bad and good in everything. We spend too much time talking about those that cheat instead of talking about those who don't."

Eddie Sutton, basketball coach
University of Arkansas, Fayetteville
Houston Chronicle

"The biggest problem with our league is that the faculty representatives are in control. We need to take the power away from them and give it to the coaches, athletic directors and school presidents. I have nothing against the faculty reps. In fact, we have a great one at Arkansas. But I know that if we gave a basketball quiz to them, most of them would flunk it."

Marv Harshman, basketball coach
University of Washington
Arizona Republic

"I've never understood why the NCAA should take half the money basketball tournaments make. I think they should take expenses necessary to run the thing, but right now, basketball is financing all the other championships."

Francis J. Lodato, professor
Manhattan College
The New York Times

"Perhaps a limit on spending for athletics, both at the varsity and junior-varsity levels, should be imposed. Or perhaps there is a need for an even more drastic step: instituting larger-scale intramural programs, which would benefit the mass of students, in place of interschool competition."

"But, if we want to keep intercollegiate sports, there are solutions that will allow us to do so."

"The first and foremost answer is the equal distribution of all revenue from televised and postseason play. Currently the colleges that invest most seem to be given a dividend on their investment. Eliminate this factor, and the problem of financial greed will be lessened. Winning—in fact, merely participating—in college athletics will be its own reward. Financial gains belong to the pros."

"Second, the colleges must agree to ban all athletic recruiting. The untold harm to young people exposed to money, sex and other inducements must be stopped. Jobs for parents of prospective college all-Americans, alumni purchases of tickets allocated to players, cars, apartments and other perquisites should no longer be tolerated."

"Third, all athletic scholarships must be eliminated. They in fact add nothing to the academic vitality of a college. Loopholes in this area must be plugged. All students representing good old alma mater should be students first, then athletes. In this way, the teams would be truly representative of the student body. This is, after all, one of the charms of college athletics. Well, isn't it?"

"Fourth, penalties for violations must be severe. Suspension of payments from television and postseason play must be imposed retroactively. All revenue to which a school would normally be entitled should be withheld if it is found to have violated the rules. If the finding of guilt follows payment of the revenue, then the school should be forced to surrender it. The violating school should also be removed from the NCAA and not be readmitted without a formal application. Then, if accepted after close scrutiny of its athletic program, it should be required to spend an extended period on probation."

"Fifth, either the NCAA's headquarters must meet the challenge of control over its member institutions, or a new governing body capable of meeting the responsibility should be formed. The inadequacy of the NCAA, a virtual monopoly, in policing all sports programs under its supervision is no small part of the problem. When organizations become too big, they bog down under their own weight. Perhaps thought should be given to decentralizing the control of college athletics. Maybe each college sport should have its own control board. This would serve to make rule enforcement less cumbersome."

Superdome manager lauds committee

To the Editor:

The huge success of the 1982 Division I Men's Basketball Championship is the direct result of the all-out effort and thorough efficiency of Tom Jernstedt and Dave Cawood of the NCAA staff and of Dave Gavitt and all nine members of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee.

We were all a bit apprehensive of the patron and press reaction to handling the big crowd; but problems were held to the very minimum, thanks to the foresight and dedication of the aforementioned individuals.

They all took on the challenge, and now they all should share in the pride of its accomplishment. College basketball has reached a new dimension.

And we're now even more convinced: The NCAA is a class organization with class people.

Cliff Wallace
General Manager
Louisiana Superdome

To the Editor:

I was a little mystified to read Bob Campagna's challenge to me in the April 30th edition of the NCAA News. Obviously he has no connections with budgets and the financial situation in athletic departments across the United States today.

Recruiting has become a million-dollar-a-year budget strain for most major colleges in Division I, and something must be done to curtail this useless expense.

If head coaches stay home from recruiting, we can save thousands of dollars. I also think that only one person should be allowed on the road.

I also would like to see visits by recruits cut to 24 hours instead of the present 48 hours. I would like to see telephone calls abolished entirely. This is a waste of time and money and works a hardship on high school athletes.

We in Division I have got to find ways to cut recruiting expenses, and I was merely suggesting a few.

If everything is equal for all Division I schools, then no one will gain an advantage. Bo Schembechler, the head football coach at Michigan, has been in favor of head coaches not being allowed to recruit off of campus for many years.

Maybe at Cornell College money is no problem, but it certainly is here at the University of Maryland and at 99 percent of Division I universities.

Just who can you trust?

By Bill Brubaker
New York Daily News

"It's a tough world out there."

UCLA's 6-5, 260-pound offensive tackle, Luis Sharpe, was talking about the painful process of selecting an agent before the recent National Football League draft.

"Four agents even tried to sign me while I was still playin' football, which is against NCAA rules."

A double sigh.

"Who could I trust?"

After dozens of conversations with high-pressure, fast-talking agents, Sharpe recently found the answer to his question.

"Joe Hoskins," he said.

Joe who?

"Joe Hoskins from Southwestern High in Detroit. My high school football coach."

Never mind that Hoskins has never represented a player in NFL contract negotiations. Never mind that Hoskins is a prep football coach—not a pro football agent. "Joe has a good business mind and he's as qualified as the next guy to do my contract," Sharpe said, with conviction. "Besides, he's someone I can trust."

Who to trust?

The question has haunted hundreds of college football players as they've searched for reputable agents to negotiate their first NFL contracts.

Who to trust?

The stakes are high. Upper first-round picks in the draft can command seven-figure contracts. A quality agent can assure a player of earning his market value—and often a lot more.

But today's college football stars are more wary than ever of sports agents. They've heard stories of how agents have ripped off previous generations of players, charging prohibitive fees and negotiating contracts that are top-heavy with deferred payments. Indeed, many of this year's pro prospects can talk from firsthand experience about the manipulative nature of agents.

"Two or three agents said they'd pay me $500 or $600 a month (during the school year) to sign with them last summer," said Texas defensive tackle Kenneth Sims, who was the first player drafted. "That's pretty damn good for not working. But I didn't want any part of it."

"Five or six agents tried to sign me early," said Clemson wide receiver Perry Tuttle, who, like the other players, declined to publicly identify the agents. "It was ridiculous."

"One agent—up New York way—offered me $1,000 a month if I'd sign with him last summer," said Mississippi State linebacker Johnnie Cooks. "Plus, he said he'd take care of my family. I told him, 'That's a lot of money, but everybody at my school is depending on me and I'm not going to jeopardize my career.' A lot of agents have just tried to use me. And some have gotten nasty when I told them I wasn't interested."

"Six or seven agents tried to sign me early," said Michigan offensive tackle Ed Muransky. "A lot of them offered me money. I told them, 'I'm not interested in any money. I just want an agent who I can trust.' They said they'd put the contract I'd sign with them in a safe and hermetically seal it until after the last game of the season. I said, 'No thanks.'"

Muransky said no thanks to more than 100 agents.

"Picking an agent is definitely five times worse than being recruited out of high school," Muransky said. "There's a lot of pressure with college recruiting, but when you're comparing schools like Michigan and Notre Dame, you're comparing Cadillacs to Lincolns. You're not going to get a bad deal. But with agents you're talking money. You're talking cash dollars. If you deal with the wrong guy, you can lose a lot of money."

"A couple of guys who hadn't even gone to high school wanted to be my agent," said Cooks.

"A lawyer in Canton, Ohio, wrote me that he was interested in becoming an agent," Muransky said. His letter read:

"Dear Ed,

"I'm of Czechoslovakian origin, as you are. We should stick together. I'll work for you because you're my brother nationality. I'm starting out in this business, so I'll just charge a small, nominal fee of 17 percent—up front—of everything I get you. . ."

The lawyer followed up his letter with a phone call.

"I told him, 'No, I'm not interested,'" Muransky said. "Then his wife started writing me. Then he called me again. Finally, I told him, 'Do you have any idea what agents are charging these days? Do you know that they're charging 3½ percent or four percent? Hey, you're not going to start out your business on me for 17 percent.'"

"Looie is one of the finest human beings I ever met," Hoskins said. "Looie helped me make a name for myself as a high school football coach, so I'm not going to charge him a dime. That's the God-honest truth."

Two questions remain after recent Title IX decisions

Two important questions were left unanswered in a Supreme Court decision in May regarding the scope of authority of Title IX.

In the case of North Haven Board of Education vs. Bell, the Supreme Court held that Title IX bars sex discrimination against educational employees as well as against students.

The court also ruled that Title IX regulations and the government's authority to cut off an institution's funds are limited to programs or activities that receive Federal aid.

The decision, while answering a long-standing question of whether Title IX is institutional or programmatic in scope, nevertheless raised two other vital concerns: What is the definition of a program or an activity? And, what types of aid can be considered Federal assistance?

These issues obviously will be confronted in other cases in lower courts.

The North Haven case in-involved two Connecticut school districts that contended that Title IX covered only student programs. The school districts had rejected attempts by the Office of Civil Rights to investigate charges of sex bias by female employees.

A Federal district court upheld that opinion, but the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second District ruled that Congress intended the law to cover employment.

Previously, four other Federal courts had ruled that the law applied only to student educational programs or activities such as admissions, textbooks, athletics and scholarships.

Following its decision, the Supreme Court said it is up to the U.S. District Court of Connecticut to determine whether school districts discriminate on the basis of sex or whether any such discrimination comes under prohibitions of Title IX.

The two school districts had argued that Title IX was not intended to cover employees because other statutes, including Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1972 and the Equal Pay Act, govern employment for academic employees.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun wrote in the majority opinion that the act appears to include employees as well as students.

Numerous cases under Title

IX have been pending in Federal courts awaiting a decision in the North Haven case.

At least three of those cases concern athletic programs. The question of whether Title IX is program specific has been raised in Bennett vs. West Texas State University and Haffner vs. Temple.

In Othen vs. Ann Arbor School Board, a case on appeal before the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Sixth Circuit, a district court ruled that Title IX is programmatic in scope and therefore does not apply to a high school athletics program that does not receive Federal assistance.

Executive Committee actions clarified

- Divisions II and III Wrestling—The ratios will be 8.3 percent of regular-season competitors in 1983 and 6.25 percent in 1984.

- Men's and Women's Rifle—The ratio will be 6.25 percent of regular-season competitors in 1983.

- Men's Fencing—The ratios will be 7.1 percent of regular-season competitors in 1983 and 6.25 percent in 1984.

- Men's Skiing—If the Men's Skiing Committee recommends that the 1983 meet be team competition (instead of individual), it must limit the number of teams to 12.5 percent of the number of institutions sponsoring the sport. If the committee elects to continue the championship on an individual basis, the number of competitors must be limited to 8.3 percent of regular-season competitors in 1983 and 6.25 percent in 1984.

In another matter, the Executive Committee denied a recommendation from the Men's Swimming Committee to base qualifying standards for the 1983 Division I championships on the 20th-place performances in 1982, rather than 18th. The article in the News incorrectly identified the action.

Improving college athletics preview we host each spring are both effective in helping writers make more informed comments on intercollegiate athletic matters," Cawood said. "The NCAA will provide a panel and topics, and the writers are free to ask anything they want. From the time the writers arrive until they leave, everything said by anybody is 'on the record.' It's the best way we have found to get the media involved in meaningful discussions about intercollegiate athletics."

In addition to providing speakers at summer camps, high school all-star games and coaches meetings, the NCAA also has attempted to educate prospective student-athletes through the Big Brother program and the AA Guide for the College-Bound Student-Athlete. In the Big Brother program, the NCAA identifies the nation's top football and basketball prospects and matches each with a staff enforcement representative, who provides guidance on permissible recruiting practices.

The NCAA Guide for the College-Bound Student-Athlete is a 16-page pamphlet designed to provide high school athletes with a simplified version of NCAA recruiting rules. More than 100,000 copies are distributed each year.

Cawood suggests that a similar publication might be helpful for coaches.

"I'm concerned that coaches have accepted the reputation of the Manual being as thick as an unabridged dictionary," Cawood said. He would like to see a "coaches manual" that would include only regulations relating to recruiting and eligibility.

The 1982-83 NCAA Manual contains 335 pages. Of that number, only 132 pages are devoted to the Association's constitution and bylaws. Of those 132 pages, fewer than 40 relate to recruiting and eligibility.

Cawood mentioned a study prepared before the 1982 Convention that summarized all NCAA legislation proven to have been violated from 1978 to 1981. Only three rules [Bylaw 1-8, Bylaw 1-1-(b) and Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5)] had been violated more than 20 times; only six others had been violated as many as 10 times [Bylaws 1-2, 1-6-(a) and 5-6 and Constitution 3-3, 3-4 and 3-6-(a)].

"Really," Cawood said, "most of the problems came from violations of Bylaw 1, which governs recruiting. There would be a lot fewer complaints if everybody adhered to that legislation, which covers only 12 pages of the Manual."

Legislation

Although many have suggested that a panacea exists in the form of "professional" intercollegiate athletics, one of the fundamental principles of the NCAA is the view that varsity sports are part of the overall educational process. Those competing in NCAA sports are required to be enrolled as full-time students and to be making progress toward a degree. "That is our rudder," said Executive Director Walter Byers at the football preview in February.

Since the NCAA is nothing more than its membership, this traditional approach could be altered or dismissed entirely at any Convention. Such a development is unlikely, however, so necessary modifications probably will be made within the existing legislative structure.

At recent Conventions, delegates have been active in amending academic-oriented legislation and recruiting rules, two primary areas of concern. In 1981, they adopted a satisfactory-progress rule that requires student-athletes to meet a national standard of progress toward a degree. Also at the 1981 Convention, delegates restricted the use of nonresident courses to establish eligibility and clarified the use of summer-school courses taken from institutions other than the certifying institution for the purpose of establishing eligibility.

As for recruiting, the 1981 Convention approved recruiting and evaluation periods in Divisions I and II football and basketball. Also in 1981, the Convention eliminated the controversial "bump" rule, replacing it with legislation that permits three recruiting contacts at the prospect's high school and three additional personal contacts anywhere else.

S. David Berst, NCAA director of enforcement, noted that these rules have come about in part from coaches taking a greater role in legislative matters. The NCAA Recruiting Committee has tried to encourage this involvement by bringing together a select group of football and basketball coaches to gain their opinions on legislative concerns.

"We introduce matters for feedback directly from coaches," Berst said. "What we want from them is the viewpoint from the perspective of the coach, who is directly involved in the recruiting process."

Berst said the coaches have expressed an interest in simplifying the existing recruiting rules and in making sure that what appears in the Manual is enforceable.

Berst said, "One difficulty is that whatever the rule is, coaches will tiptoe up to the edge of compliance with the regulation and look for a way to comply, yet gain an advantage over their opposition. That means you end up with very detailed and precise questions concerning the requirements of the rule. In addressing those questions, the rule becomes more detailed. I'm for simplification, but I have the reservation that upon analysis, you would find that most of what is in the Manual is necessary."

Enforcement

Recently, the NCAA enforcement department was reorganized to become the enforcement and legislative services department. The purpose is to make a distinction between the department's dual responsibilities of interpreting the rules and enforcing them.

When the reorganization and expansion is completed this summer, the staff will have 10 enforcement representatives and four individuals in the legislative area. Although the ratio of member institutions to staff members remains high, Assistant Executive Director William B. Hunt said the membership should notice an improvement in the response time required for investigating rules violations and for issuing interpretations.

When violations are found to have occurred, Berst said his discussions with coaches have revealed a desire for stiffer penalties. "The further an individual is removed from a penalty," Berst noted, "the more severe he thinks it ought to be."

The Committee on Infractions has examined penalties and has determined that the best policy is to create a penalty that will improve a particular situation. "The committee believes that not much is accomplished if a school is merely running from the enforcer," Berst said.

He cited examples of the sanctions mentioned by coaches that could be used in producing a "customized" penalty. Among the options available, he said, are limiting an institution in the number of regular-season games it can play, placing restrictions on spring practice in football and reducing the number of available scholarship grants. Those are in addition to the usual penalties involving restrictions on television appearances and postseason competition.

Along similar lines, the 1982 Convention passed one piece of enforcement legislation that has received widespread approval. The rule provides a waiver opportunity for student-athletes to transfer from an institution that has been placed on probation for the duration of their eligibility without having to meet the one-year residence requirement at another institution. One proposed penalty that the Convention defeated would have provided the NCAA with the authority to fine violators up to $50,000.

"There also is concern that a problem exists in penalizing the institution that commits a series of minor violations," Berst said. "The penalties that are currently used, such as public reprimands and probation with no sanctions, aren't as meaningful as they could be. More emphasis will be placed on finding the appropriate penalties to impose in these cases."

College athletics has been in the news lately, but it has been the kind of news that the intercollegiate athletic community could do without. The notion that college sports are corrupt and hypocritical has been accepted in too many places without serious challenges. The NCAA acknowledges that problems do exist in college sports and that what is wrong never will disappear entirely. But that does not mean that the current condition is beyond improvement.

Riverside wins title

California-Riverside may have won the final battle for the Division II Baseball Championship with a 10-1 victory over defending champion Florida Southern May 25. The war, however, really was won one day earlier in the semifinals.

In the emotional semifinal battle, California-Riverside scored four eighth-inning runs and then held off a furious Florida Southern rally in which the Moccasins scored three runs in the bottom of the ninth.

The Moccasins outscored Delta State, 13-9, to gain the championship finals against California-Riverside, but Highlander pitcher Scott Wanzer shut Florida Southern down with only six hits in gaining the 10-1 final-game victory. Right fielder Curtis Smith led the California-Riverside attack with a three-for-five performance, including a double.

Florida Southern outfielder Joe Sickles (nine for 19, nine runs batted in, two doubles and one home run) was selected the outstanding player of the tournament. Others on the all-tournament team were catcher Matt Held of California-Riverside; infielders Mark Angelo and Nelson Rood of Florida Southern, Brad Armstrong of Delta State and Brad Pounders of California-Riverside; outfielders Scott Khoury of New Haven, Mark Marches of California-Riverside and Sickles, designated hitter Steve Yanasheski of California-Riverside, and pitchers Bob Bendran of Florida Southern and Scott Wanzer of California-Riverside.

Cougars return to top

Houston's Billy Ray Brown won individual honors and led the Cougars to their 14th title at the 1982 NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships in Pinehurst, North Carolina.

Brown, a freshman, fired rounds of 70, 75, 65 and 70 over the par-72 layout at the Pinehurst No. 2 course to win medalist honors by two shots over Oklahoma State's Andy Dillard.

Houston's John Slaughter and Mark Fuller tied for third individually with 72-hole totals of 285, three under par. Other Cougar team members were David Tentis (295) and Billy Tuten (301).

Moccasins No. 1 in golf

Florida Southern won its second consecutive title at the 1982 NCAA Division II Men's Golf Championships before the home crowd in Lakeland, Florida.

The Moccasins led by four strokes after the first round but lost their lead after 36 holes as Sacramento State and Troy State moved to the front. Florida Southern regained the lead by one stroke after three rounds and then coasted to a 10-stroke victory with a two-over-par 290 in the fourth round.

Sacramento State started the final day only one stroke behind Florida Southern. The Hornets shot a 311 over the last 18 holes, however, and dropped from second to sixth in the team standings.

Gregg Gamester (73-73-75-73—294) and Mike Domalske (73-76-72-74—295) were the individual leaders for Florida Southern. Gamester finished in a tie for fourth place; Domalske tied for seventh individually. Other Florida Southern team members were Scott Behl (299) and Marco Dawson (302). Behl recorded a four-under-par 68 in the first round, the best 18-hole score in the tournament.

Ramapo breaks streak

Ramapo survived a last-round charge by six-time defending champion Stanislaus State to win the 1982 NCAA Division III Men's Golf Championships in Springfield, Ohio.

Stanislaus State fired a 293 (the best round of the tournament) in the final round, but the Warriors fell one stroke short of their seventh consecutive title.

Ramapo also saved its best for last. The Roadrunners shot a 297 for the final 18 holes and overtook third-round leader Allegheny to win their first NCAA team championship in any sport. Ramapo was runner-up in 1980 and third last year.

Dee defeated Evans in a sudden-death play-off for the right to advance to the Division I championship.

Dee was joined by Stanislaus State's Cliff Smith, who won the individual title with a seven-over-par 295. Smith had rounds of 78, 73, 71 and 73 over the par-72 course at Reid Memorial Park in Springfield.

North Carolina repeats

Junior crease attackman Dave Wingate scored five goals for North Carolina to lead the Tar Heels to their second consecutive title in the NCAA Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship.

The Tar Heels mounted a strong defensive game to defeat Johns Hopkins, 7-5, in the title game, played at Virginia's Scott Stadium May 29.

A crowd of 10,011 fans saw North Carolina extend its string to 26 consecutive victories, finishing its season with a 14-0 record. Hopkins, which lost in overtime to North Carolina during the regular season, closed out the season 11-3.

Wingate scored three goals in the first quarter, giving the Tar Heels a 3-0 lead at the end of the first quarter. But the second quarter held the key to North Carolina's victory. Johns Hopkins outshot its opponent, 17-4, during that period, but North Carolina's outstanding goalie, Tom Sears, stopped nine shots and held the Blue Jays to one goal. Wingate, meanwhile, scored again in the second, to make the half-time score 4-1.

North Carolina's well-executed zone defense effectively frustrated Johns Hopkins' strategy in the second half, holding the Blue Jays to two goals in each of the remaining periods.

In the third period, North Carolina was penalized eight times, but Johns Hopkins failed to convert its first three extra-man opportunities and the Tar Heels increased their lead to 6-1 on goals by Jeff Homire and Peter Voelkel.

Late in the quarter, the Blue Jays took advantage of North Carolina's penalty problems, with Mike Donnelly and Bill Cantelli scoring on extra-man situations to make it a 6-3 game. Donnelly's second of three goals came when the Tar Heels were two men down.

Wingate scored his fifth goal of the day just eight seconds before the third quarter ended on an assist from Kevin Griswold.

Cantelli scored unassisted on a dodge with 8:25 to play to make it 7-4, but Johns Hopkins could not get on the scoreboard again until Donnelly's final goal with just under two minutes left.

Hobart triumphs again

Hobart captured its third consecutive Division III lacrosse title by defeating Washington (Maryland), 9-8, in sudden-death overtime May 23.

Senior midfielder Larry Grimaldi scored the winning goal at 2:29 into the extra period. Grimaldi led the Statesmen with three points (two goals and one assist). Hobart senior attackman Bob Sipperly and sophomore attackman Marty Wood also scored two goals each.

Washington led, 3-0, after the first quarter, but Hobart came back in the second period and tied the score. Dickie Grieves then scored to give Washington a 4-3 half-time lead.

In the second half, Hobart first took the lead with two extra-man goals. Grieves then scored the first of three unanswered Washington goals, giving the Shoremen a 7-5 lead. Hobart followed with three goals to go ahead, 8-7. Jesse Bacon scored for Washington 10:12 into the fourth quarter to tie the game and force the overtime.

UCLA 'dooms' Fresno State

If a single athlete can be responsible for a team's success, UCLA's Debbie Doom should qualify.

Doom, a freshman pitcher, won all five of UCLA's games as the Bruins earned the title in the 1982 NCAA Division I Women's Softball Championship, played May 27-31 at Omaha, Nebraska. Doom pitched a two-hit shutout for a 2-0 decision (in eight innings) in the final game over Fresno State.

UCLA scored the two winning runs in the top of the eighth without the benefit of a hit. Two walks, a double steal, a sacrifice fly and an error produced the runs.

The rally was characteristic of UCLA's victories throughout the tournament. The Bruins scored just seven runs to win the five games but did not allow a run in their last 43 innings of play.

Doom allowed 21 hits and one run in 41½ innings during her five wins; she struck out 62 batters. Doom and Tracy Compton combined for a perfect game in UCLA's 1-0 second-round win over Western Michigan.

Western Michigan suffered a second no-hit loss later, as Fullerton State's Kathy Van Wyk (33-0 entering the tournament) bested the Broncos, 2-0. Van Wyk's unbeaten season earlier had been ended by Arizona State, 2-0.

UCLA finished the season with a record of 33-7-2; Fresno State was 43-11.

Sam Houston claims crown

An individual duel of outstanding pitchers highlighted Sam Houston State's victory in the first NCAA Division II Women's Softball Championship.

Sam Houston State's Val Greenwall pitched her team to a 3-2 win over Northridge State in the final game. The victory avenged a 1-0, 11-inning defeat to Oran earlier in the tournament.

Greenwall won three games during the competition, including two shutouts. She yielded just three runs in 31½ innings, two of those coming in the second inning of the championship game.

Three unearned runs in the third inning won the finale for Sam Houston. A two-run home run by center fielder Renee Rodgers was the key hit in the scoring effort.

Those unearned runs were the only ones allowed by Oran in 37 innings of tournament pitching. She threw a pair of one-hit shutouts, allowed just 11 hits overall and struck out 32.

Sam Houston State, which entered the tournament as the No. 1 seed, finished its championship season with a 42-6 record. Runner-up Northridge State finished 34-17-1. The championship was played May 28-30 at Sacred Heart University.

Warriors win in shutout

A four-hit shutout by Anne Costello led Eastern Connecticut State to a 2-0 win over Trenton State in the final game of the 1982 NCAA Division III Women's Softball Championship May 28-30 at Trenton State.

Costello, who combined with Lisa Kirk for an earlier 6-3 win over Westfield State, walked three and struck out one in her complete-game win. Eastern Connecticut scored in the second and sixth innings, with right fielder Sue Smuller and shortstop Marge Gwynne each driving in a run.

Losing pitcher Gina LaMandre allowed five hits, three by third baseman Jessica Olsen. LaMandre earned a win earlier in the tournament with a 1-0 decision in eight innings over Aurora.

Eastern Connecticut State's three straight wins gave the Warriors a final record of 27-10. Trenton State finished 31-15 as runner-up.

Bruins top tennis field

Michigan's Mike Leach overcame long odds and shoulder problems to win the 1982 NCAA Division I Men's Tennis Championships singles title in Athens, Georgia.

The unseeded Wolverine star upset 12th-seeded Brad Gilbert of Pepperdine, 7-5, 6-3, in the final. The championship was the first for a Big Ten Conference player since Michigan's Barry MacKay won in 1957.

"I had been losing tight matches to top players because the pressure was on me," Leach said. "I was supposed to win. But, I came in here unseeded and didn't feel any pressure. As it turns out, that may have helped a lot."

Leach's win culminated a week of upsets in the singles competition. Top-seeded Rodney Harmon of Southern Methodist was knocked off in the first round, and No. 2-seed Marcel Freeman of UCLA lost two tiebreakers to Gilbert in the semifinals. In the other half of the bracket, Leach and unseeded Christo Steyn of Miami (Florida) were the semifinalists, with Leach winning a three-set thriller, 6-2, 4-6, 7-6.

There also was a mild upset in the doubles finals where sixth-seeded Pat Doohan and Pat Serret of Arkansas took the title with a 7-6, 5-7, 6-2 win over Georgia's Allen Miller and Ola Malmqvist. The Bulldog duo had knocked off the top seeds and defending champions David Pate and Karl Richter of Texas Christian in the quarterfinals but could not upset the Arkansas pair, who were runners-up last year.

The team championship held closer to form with favored UCLA defeating Pepperdine, 5-1, in the finals. The Waves' No. 1 player, Glenn Michibata, knocked off Freeman, 6-3, 6-3, but the Bruins swept the rest of the singles matches to clinch the title.

Cougars win fifth straight

One impressive streak was continued and another started as the 1982 NCAA Division II Men's Tennis Championships held true to form in Miami, Florida.

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville won its fifth straight team title by a wide 22-13 margin over runner-up Bakersfield State. The five straight titles mark the most consecutive team championships in NCAA tennis history in any division. Southern California held the old record with four straight Division I crowns from 1966 to 1969.

While the Cougars were continuing their dominance of Division II, their No. 1 singles player, Ken Flach, turned in his second straight singles title and also paired with Doug Burke to win his first doubles championship. Flach, a sophomore from St. Louis, now has won all 12 singles matches he has played in NCAA championship competition. And, he has lost just one doubles match—last year's finals.

Flach's singles streak is even more impressive considering that he has been forced to three sets only once in two years, a 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 win over Renald Etienne of Florida International in this year's semifinals. With two years of eligibility remaining, Flach will have a chance to break the record of three career singles titles held by former Cougar Juan Farrow.

Bakersfield State barely edged host Florida International for second place, and Rollins was another point back in fourth.

Singles quarterfinals—Ken Flach, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, def. Rolf Wiedenmeyer, Hayward State, 6-0, 6-2; Renald Etienne, Florida International, def. Individual champion Shaun Miller lunges

Gusties serve up victory

Gustavus Adolphus, led by powerful junior Shaun Miller, defeated host Kalamazoo, 19-14, to win its second title in three years at the NCAA Division III Men's Tennis Championships.

Miller's booming serve led him to a 6-2, 6-7, 7-5 win over Millsaps' Bill Harper in the singles finals. He then teamed with Rich Skanse for a 6-2, 6-4 triumph in the doubles championship against Dave Sider and Peter Wood of California-San Diego.

The doubles victory for the Gusties was their third (Miller teamed with Jim Hearn to take last year's title), the most in Division III history. The team championship tied Gustavus Adolphus with Kalamazoo and Swarthmore for the most tennis team titles in division history.

Miller's route to the singles crown was not an easy one. He had to overcome No. 2-seed and home-town favorite Chris Burns of Kalamazoo in a three-set semifinal before taking on Harper, the tournament's surprise player.

Harper entered the final after facing a match point against Skanse in a third-round match and 10 match points against Hearn in the semifinals. The Millsaps senior then fought off two match points against Miller before finally succumbing.

Cardinals fly to victory

Stanford senior Alycia Moulton led the Cardinals to an expected team title and then went on to capture the singles crown in the inaugural NCAA Division I Women's Tennis Championships in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Moulton's 6-3, 6-7, 6-0 win over Kathrin Keil of UCLA triggered Stanford's win in the team competition. The Cardinals and Bruins split their singles matches in the finals, but Stanford swept all three doubles matches for a 6-3 triumph.

Both teams had advanced to the finals with narrow 5-4 semifinal wins. Stanford defeated Trinity (Texas), and UCLA slipped past Southern California.

"It's nice to win it this way," said Stanford coach Frank Brennan after clinching the team title. "It wouldn't have been gratifying to win any easier."

Moulton, the No. 4 seed in the singles draw, used a powerful serve-and-volley game to defeat San Diego State's Micki Schillig, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4, in the singles final.

The Carmichael, California, native had advanced to the finals with an easy 6-1, 6-2 victory over eighth-seeded Kathleen Cummings of Colorado, who had knocked off top-seeded Vicki Nelson of Rollins in the quarterfinals. Schillig, who was seeded seventh, also had a 6-1, 6-2 semifinal triumph over Kelly Henry of Southern Cal.

Matadors take crown

Northridge State used a deep and balanced lineup to win the first NCAA Division II Women's Tennis Championships.

The Matadors, who edged Bakersfield State, 15-13, scored at every position in the flighted team tournament except No. 5 singles. Key points came from Heidi Rose, who won No. 2 singles, and Debbie Creath and Marla Reid, who took the No. 2 doubles flight.

Rose also was a big factor in the singles championship. Although unseeded, Rose advanced to the finals where she lost to Bakersfield State's Iwona Kuczyńska, 6-2, 6-2. Kuczyńska also won the No. 1 singles flight in the team competition to pace the Roadrunners to the runner-up spot.

After losing to Cal Poly-Pomona's top team of Cathy Claussen and Bridget Nathan in the team competition, Northridge State's Wendi Luhmann and Cindy Woodhouse came back to defeat Claussen and Nathan in the doubles finals.

The team championship for Northridge State was the school's fourth NCAA title of the year. The Matadors earlier had won Division II titles in men's and women's swimming and women's gymnastics.

Occidental victorious

Occidental won flights at five positions on its way to an 18-15 win over second-place California-San Diego in the team portion of the first NCAA Division III Women's Tennis Championships in Jackson, Mississippi.

The Tigers got wins from Jean Marie Sanders at No. 1, Kathleen McFadden at No. 3 and Maria Newton at No. 4 in singles. McFadden and Sanders then teamed to win the No. 1 doubles flight, while Newton and Sue Rene won at No. 2.

California-San Diego got wins at No. 5 from Nadine Akimoto and at No. 6 from Lucille Fernandez in singles, and Fernandez and Cathy Sturdivant took the No. 3 doubles competition.

Sanders and McFadden then repeated their team-competition win over Wheaton's Jane Nelson and Laura Lindstrom in the doubles finals with a 6-2, 6-4 victory. The two teams were seeded second and fourth, respectively, and moved into contention when Newton and Rene knocked off top-seeded Becky Donecker and Lisa Groff of Elizabethtown in the quarterfinals.

Donecker, however, managed a measure of revenge with a 7-5, 6-1 win over Sanders in the singles final. Donecker, the No. 5 seed, had beaten top-seeded Vikki Lareau of California-San Diego in the quarterfinals. Lareau forced Donecker to three sets (1-6, 7-5, 6-1), despite playing with a hairline fracture of her ankle.

ACU vaults to No. 1

Abilene Christian used a sweep of the top three spots in the pole vault and won two other events to capture the NCAA Division II Men's Outdoor Track Championships with 120 points.

The victory upset Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo's shot at four straight team titles. Originally, the results had the Mustangs finishing third behind Los Angeles State. However, a review of the official results indicated an error had been made, and the Mustangs were awarded second with 94½ points. Northridge State was third with 83 and Los Angeles State fourth with 80.

Abilene Christian was expected to be strong in the pole vault and lived up to its reputation. Brad Pursley vaulted 17-4 for the win and a meet record.

Teammates Dale Jenkins and Bob Williams finished second and third to give the Wildcats 37 points in the event.

Darrell Green of Texas A&I, who captured the 100- and 200-meter events, was the only double winner in the meet.

Four meet records were set. In addition to Pursley's mark in the pole vault, Mount St. Mary's Trond Skramstad set a record in the decathlon (7,860); Mike Vanatta, Southeast Missouri State, broke the record in the 3,000-meter steeplechase (8:45.45), and Morgan State's Jack Pierce—who finished fourth in the 110-meter high hurdles—topped the old standard with a 13.83 in a qualifying race.

Tigers roar to title

Glassboro State won only two events but used its depth to capture a come-from-behind third straight team title in the NCAA Men's Division III Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

Hamline led most of the way in the week-long meet and had a half-point edge going into the final event, the 1,600-meter relay. Glassboro State finished second, Hamline finished ninth and the Profs walked away with a 119-111½ margin.

Southern-New Orleans was close with 101 points for third place. The championships were held at Naperville, Illinois.

Hamline's Mike Manders was the only double winner in the meet, setting records in both the discus and shot put. Both marks bettered the standards he had established in the meet in 1980.

The Mustangs won five events, and finished second in six and third in three to outclass the field. To further demonstrate their depth, there was not a double-winner on the team.

After the first day of finals competition, the Mustangs had scored 143 points and were never in trouble.

Alabama A&M won only two events but produced a double-winner with Grace Jackson capturing the 100-meter hurdles and the 200-meter dash.

Patti Gray of California-Davis, who won the 3,000- and 5,000-meter runs, was the only other double-winner.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo scored its wins in the heptathlon, 800, 1,500, 400-meter relay and the javelin.

The Flying Dutch won the long jump and the 400-meter relay and finished in the top six in eight other events to build up a 151-96 margin over Frostburg State. Fisk was third with 88 points.

There were double winners in both the sprints and distance events. Caren Askew, York, set the meet record in her qualifying heat of the 100-meter dash (12.12) before winning the event.

She also had a 24.58 wind-aided time in the 200-meter dash, which was good enough for first but not good enough for the record. Frostburg State's Melissa Hill had a qualifying time of 25.04 to set the standard.

UCLA caps perfect season

UCLA capped a perfect season by defeating Penn State, 15-4, 15-9, 15-7, to win its ninth title in 13 years at the 1982 NCAA Men's Volleyball Championship in University Park, Pennsylvania.

The Bruins, winners of the title for the third time in the last four years, finished the season with a 29-0 record. Coach Al Scates' squad won 82 of 92 games this season and was pushed to a five-game match only once.

UCLA's Karch Kiraly was named the tournament's outstanding player, the first time in the championship's 13-year history that a player has won that award two straight years.

In the Bruins' semifinal victory against Ohio State, Kiraly had 12 kills and two errors in 19 attempts, a .526 percentage. In the championship game, Kiraly had 16 kills and one error in 26 attempts.

Division I-AA football championship grows to 12 teams

As a result of the restructuring of Division I-AA, the NCAA Executive Committee approved the expansion of the Division I-AA Football Championship from eight to 12 teams.

The Division I-AA Football Committee proposed a 16-team bracket. However, the Executive Committee rejected that proposal in part because a number of the 88 Division I-AA teams have not indicated whether they will participate in the Division I-AA championship.

This will be the second straight year for Division I-AA championship expansion. Last year's championship was expanded from four to eight teams with five conference champions receiving automatic qualification.

Seven conferences will receive automatic qualification for the 1982 Division I-AA championship. Two independents will be chosen, and three teams will be selected at large to complete the 12-team bracket.

The Southland and Southern Conferences will receive automatic qualification in 1982, along with the five conferences that received berths last year (Mid-Eastern, Big Sky, Ohio Valley, Yankee and Southwestern Athletic).

Eight teams will play first-round games November 27, with the top four teams, as seeded by the committee, receiving byes. The second and third rounds will be played on campuses December 4 and 11. The championship will be played December 18 in Wichita Falls, Texas.

The committee will try to pair teams on a geographical basis in hopes of having an East vs. West matchup in the championship. Some teams, however, may be shifted to other regions to balance the competition in all regions.

To determine sites for future Division I-AA championships, the committee will meet January 13, 1983, in San Diego, California, with all cities and parties interested in hosting the championship. Cities that have expressed an interest in the 1983 championship are Wichita Falls; Lake Charles, Louisiana, and Tacoma, Washington.

Fiesta Bowl program gives antidrug message

Outland Trophy winner Dave Rimington of Nebraska and Heisman Trophy candidate Dan Marino of Pittsburgh were among 13 NCAA athletes who joined UCLA football coach Terry Donahue recently for the NCAA-Fiesta Bowl "Get High on Sports, Not Drugs" campaign.

The program is a partnership between the NCAA and the Fiesta Bowl in which the athletes tape 30-second public-service television announcements to urge the nation's youth to choose to participate in sports instead of using drugs.

Through the efforts of the Fiesta Bowl and the NCAA, the television spots will be broadcast during the 1982-83 football and basketball seasons. The program, now in its eighth year, has benefited from more than $125,000 in donations from the Fiesta Bowl.

Other athletes who participated in the 1982 program were Anne Donovan (women's basketball), Old Dominion; Dave Drechsler (football), North Carolina; Clyde Drexler (men's basketball), Houston; Gordon Hudson (football), Brigham Young; Pam McGee (women's basketball), Southern California; Paula McGee (women's basketball), Southern California; Mike Richardson (football), Arizona State; Reggie Roby (football), Iowa; Valerie Still (women's basketball), Kentucky; Steve Stipanovich (men's basketball), Missouri, and Tommy Wilcox (football), Alabama.

Positions open on enforcement staff

Applications currently are being accepted for positions in the NCAA enforcement and legislative services department.

An opening that is to be filled immediately is for the position of enforcement representative. Individuals in the position of enforcement representative are responsible for the investigation of assigned infractions cases.

Included in that responsibility are the duties of locating principals, making appropriate appointments and travel plans for interviews, preparing memorandums of information collected, developing official case files, analyzing information on file to determine what additional steps should be taken to complete a case and ensuring that established investigative procedures are followed.

Enforcement representatives also are responsible for drafting documents necessary to implement enforcement procedures and assigned cases. The representatives also must make oral presentations of information and evidence at Committee on Infractions hearings and must assist in providing interpretations of NCAA and AIAW legislation.

In addition to the position that currently is open, the NCAA Executive Committee has authorized the addition of two more enforcement-representative positions to be filled during the summer upon the completion of the Association's new building.

Applications also are being accepted for an administrative assistant of legislative services, a position authorized by the Executive Committee for the middle of the summer.

An individual serving in this capacity is responsible for providing interpretations of NCAA and AIAW legislation both in writing and by telephone. The individual assists in preparing and reviewing forms required by NCAA legislation and in researching materials necessary to implement the department's assignments.

The work requires a comprehensive knowledge of NCAA regulations and the ability to assist in implementing the Association's legislative process through the development of proposed amendments to NCAA legislation.

Anyone interested in these positions should contact Ronald J. Stratten at the national office.

VFY plans four seminars to build camaraderie

Organization and planning skills, as well as tips on working successfully with groups, will be discussion topics at the NCAA Volunteers for Youth summer workshops.

"The workshops provide an excellent opportunity for an exchange of ideas among directors of the student groups all over the country," said Steven L. Wenger, VFY senior national director. "The relatively few student directors on each campus can feel somewhat isolated in their efforts to build strong, active volunteer groups. At the workshops, we stress that each director is part of a nationwide group, that we can and do support one another. We are able to build quite a bit of camaraderie and team spirit."

Four workshops are planned each summer, and the student directors are invited to attend the one closest to their summer residences. "In this way, we get a good mix of people from different campuses," Wenger said. "We especially encourage the inexperienced student directors to attend the seminars so they can talk to and learn from their more experienced counterparts."

The dates and locations for the 1982 workshops are June 4, 5 and 6 at the University of Alabama; June 11, 12 and 13, Lafayette College; June 18, 19 and 20, University of Iowa, and June 25, 26 and 27, Stanford University.

Both the 1981-82 staff and the 1982-83 staff will be involved as instructors for the summer seminar workshops. The outgoing staff members are Sharon Eggerding, Keith Robine and Dave Saeta.

The workshops will be the first assignment at the national level for the incoming directors, who are Dave Bishop, Carl Howell, Kim Seckler and Debby Stroman. Wenger and Audrey West also will participate in the instructional sessions.

The Volunteers for Youth national staff has recommended that it be expanded by one position in the 1982-83 year. West, who has served as a national VFY director for the past two years, would fill the post of assistant senior director and assist in the planning and management of the national program. "With an additional person at this level, there always would be someone available in the national office to answer inquiries and assist the student groups on the campuses," Wenger explained. "It should improve our communications and the efficiency of the program."

Campus groups were established at 10 NCAA member institutions during the 1981-82 academic year. The new groups are at Carleton College, Louisiana State University, North Carolina Wesleyan College, North Dakota State University, San Jose State University, University of South Florida, Tuskegee Institute, Wayne State University, Weber State College and Western Michigan University.

DiEdwardo joins NCAA staff

Daniel B. "Tucker" DiEdwardo has joined the NCAA staff as an assistant director of championships.

DiEdwardo, 34, was a member of the NCAA Men's Swimming Committee from 1979 to 1981. He came to the NCAA staff from Youngstown State University, where he served as assistant director of athletics.

His responsibilities at Youngstown State included administration of basketball, swimming, soccer, field hockey, softball and some football activities. He also coordinated some public relations activities and assisted in the conduct of several NCAA championships at Youngstown State.

Prior to assuming the administrative post, DiEdwardo served as aquatic director, swimming coach and assistant professor from 1973 to 1981. His previous coaching experience also includes water polo and tennis responsibilities.

He is a 1970 graduate of Southern Connecticut State College, where he participated in swimming and tennis.

Statistics policies appear in Manual

Policies governing the NCAA's statistics programs in football, men's and women's basketball, baseball and women's softball now appear in the NCAA Manual as Executive Regulation 5.

The NCAA Executive Committee confirmed those policies in its January meeting and directed that the new executive regulation be printed in the 1982-83 NCAA Manual. It appears on pages 166 through 170.

Interpretations

EDITOR'S NOTE: Publication of an interpretation in this column constitutes official notice to the membership. Questions concerning these or other O.I.s should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the Association's national office (P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201; 913/384-3220).

Transportation to campus from high school event (Revises Case No. 217)

Situation: A prospective student-athlete participates in a high school athletic event on a Friday evening at a location other than the prospect's home town. The prospect will receive an expense-paid visit to the institution's campus the next day.

Question: Is it permissible for the prospect to receive travel expenses or be transported by a representative of the institution's athletic interests from the site of the high school athletic event to the campus?

Answer: Yes; however, only actual transportation expenses may be paid, and the cost of the transportation between the site of the high school competition and the institution's campus may not be more than the cost of transportation between the prospect's home and the institution's campus. [B 1-8-(a)]

Official visits—two institutions (Revises Case No. 219)

Situation: A prospective student-athlete is invited to visit two member institutions on the same trip.

Question: Is it permissible for both institutions to provide traveling expenses to the prospect?

Answer: Yes, provided there is no duplication of expenses, only actual and necessary expenses are provided and the 48-hour visit limitation is observed at each institution. [B 1-8-(a)]

Countable student-athlete—initial award (Revises Case No. 363)

Situation: A countable student-athlete is first awarded financial aid either during the student-athlete's sport season or subsequent to the end of that season, or the student-athlete enters an institution after the initial term of an academic year and immediately receives athletically related financial aid (e.g., midyear junior or senior college transfer).

Question: Where shall the student-athlete be counted in the limitations for the sport of football?

Answer: A recruited (per O.I. 100), countable student-athlete who enters during the fall term and receives initial financial aid after the start of the season or subsequent to the season during the first year in residence shall have the financial assistance counted against the academic year in which the student-athlete receives the initial award; if the institution's initial limit is already reached, such aid shall not be awarded to the recruited student-athlete. A recruited student-athlete (per O.I. 100) who enters after the first term of the academic year and immediately receives athletically related financial aid, or a nonrecruited student-athlete who receives such aid after the start of the season or subsequent to the season, shall be counted against the initial award limitation for either the current academic year (if the institution's annual limit has not been reached) or the next academic year, provided the total number of financial aid awards granted by the institution in the sport of football does not exceed at any time the overall grant limitation for that sport. [B 6-5-(c) and B 6-5-(d)]

Satisfactory-progress rule—effective date

Situation: The provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6) were adopted by Divisions I and II member institutions effective August 1, 1981, to specify minimum academic progress requirements for continuing eligibility.

Question: Which student-athletes are affected by the application of this legislation to their eligibility for intercollegiate competition?

Answer: The eligibility requirements of the satisfactory-progress rule shall apply only to those student-athletes who first enroll as regular students in a member institution subsequent to August 1, 1981. [B 5-1-(j)-(6)]
