ESPN to cablecast 22 NCAA championships

The Entertainment and Sports Programming Network will cablecast 22 NCAA championships, including 24 games from the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship and exclusive national coverage of the College World Series, each of the next two seasons.

ESPN, the all-sports cable network, acquired rights to 13 men's and nine women's championships for the 1982-83 and 1983-84 seasons. Seaver Peters, chair of the NCAA General Television Committee, and Allan B.

"Scotty" Connal, ESPN executive vice-president and chief operating officer, made the announcement last week. It marks the fourth consecutive year that the NCAA and ESPN have signed an agreement to present fall, winter and spring collegiate championships in all three divisions.

ESPN's coverage of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship will include cablecasts of the new pre-tournament elimination round (all four games), 14 first-round games and six regional semifinal contests. As in the past, ESPN will present the games in association with NCAA Productions.

Coverage of all games from the College World Series, most of them live, also is planned. Other men's championships to be aired will be Division I soccer, indoor track, ice hockey, tennis and lacrosse; Division II wrestling, track, swimming, gymnastics and basketball, and Division III basketball.

Women's championships to be cablecast will be Division I tennis, field hockey, volleyball and softball; Division II basketball, gymnastics, swimming and track, and Division III basketball.

"The NCAA championships package, led by Division I men's basketball and, more recently, the College World Series, has been one of the most popular programming entities we've presented," said Robert M. Gutkowski, ESPN vice-president for programming. "We firmly believe athletes competing at all NCAA levels deserve national recognition, and we are extremely pleased to join again with the NCAA to present top-quality championship competition."

"The NCAA has been pleased with ESPN's past coverage of NCAA championships and looks forward to achieving additional visibility for its championships program and the participating student-athletes with the new agreement," said Thomas W. Jernstedt, NCAA assistant executive director for championships.

As part of the package, ESPN also will present comprehensive features on three additional NCAA

NCAA to house Library of Films

The NCAA Library of Films soon will be operating from the national office, according to James W. Shaffer, assistant director of NCAA Productions.

Calvin Communications, Inc., a Kansas City film laboratory that handled transactions for the library the past four years, has announced it will discontinue its operations effective October 29. Coincidentally, the Association's communications department is scheduled to move into a new NCAA office building next month.

NCAA Productions is part of the communications department and already had plans to relocate the library in the new building. Shaffer indicated that all rental and sales requests should be directed to the national office.

It will be the first time in history that the library has been operated by the Association.

"We plan to reorganize the library into a more efficient and manageable operation," Shaffer said. "The past several years the library has been operated by outside commercial companies, and NCAA Productions looks forward to having more control of its day-to-day operations."

NCAA Productions also anticipates relocating historical films and videotapes of various NCAA sports currently located at Underground Vaults and Storage, a Hutchinson, Kansas, film-storage facility. Materials from the past several decades have been stored at the facility.

Nominations procedures outlined for vacancies on sports committees

Nominations for vacancies on NCAA sports committees to be filled at the 1983 NCAA Convention in San Diego must be forwarded to each member's district representative no later than December 1, according to F. A. Geiger, chair of the Men's Committee on Committees, and Patricia A. Thompson, chair of the Women's Committee on Committees.

In addition to forwarding nominations to district representatives, a copy should be sent to the chairs of the committees. Men's committee nominations should be sent to F. A. Geiger, director of athletics, Stanford University, Stanford, California 94305. Women's committee nominations should be sent to Patricia A. Thompson, assistant director of athletics, Elmira College, Murray Athletic Center, Elmira, New York 14901.

In order that a complete summary of nominations can be prepared, a copy also should be sent to Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, NCAA, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

When submitting nominations, the nominee's name, title, institution, division, district and conference should be provided, along with a brief paragraph describing the qualifications of the candidate. A separate nomination should be provided for each nominee, and the form should indicate whether the nominee would serve if elected.

Committee members who are eligible for reelection normally are reelected. Particular attention should be given to the eligibility requirements set forth in Bylaws 12-1, 12-4 and 12-5 of the NCAA Manual. Other members of these committees can be found in the 1982-83 NCAA Directory, which will be available about November 1.

The Men's and Women's Committees on Committees are responsible for soliciting nominations from the membership for individuals interested in serving on NCAA sports committees. They then make their recommendations to the annual NCAA Convention.

Any nomination for a sports committee must be submitted to the district representative and Vaughan by the December 1 deadline so the committees can review all nominees at their January 7-10 meetings in conjunction with the Convention.

Other Division I members on the Men's Committee on Committees are John P. Reardon, Harvard University (District 1); Kenneth G. Germann, Southern Conference (District 3); Albert M. Witte, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville (District 6); C. Arnold Ferrin Jr., University of Utah (District 7), and Vernon M. Smith, University of Toledo (at large).

Division II representatives are Howard Elwell, Gannon University (District 2); Dean Davenport, Ferris State College (District 4), and Carl R.

Meeting agenda for Convention will be mailed

Composite meeting schedules and hotel reservation forms for the 1983 NCAA Convention will be mailed later this month to all active, associate, allied and affiliated members.

The composite meeting schedule contains a day-by-day listing of all meetings for the 77th annual Convention, which will be held January 10-12 in San Diego. Dates and times of other meetings held in conjunction with the Convention also are included in the composite meeting schedule.

The hotel reservation form should be completed and returned to the San Diego Convention and Visitors Bureau. The Convention will be held at the Town and Country Hotel in San Diego, and reservations will be made on a first-come, first-served basis.

CCA endorses Division I plan

The Collegiate Commissioners Association has endorsed the principles of the NCAA Council's plan to strengthen the criteria for membership in Division I.

In its annual fall meeting October 7-8, the 12-member organization adopted the following motion:

"That the Collegiate Commissioners Association endorse the principles of NCAA restructuring as set forth in the NCAA officers' September 17, 1982, memorandum on behalf of the NCAA Council and transmit this expression of support to the Council at its October 12-14 meeting; further, that a task force of the group be appointed to monitor the evolution of these proposals and that each commissioner utilize his best efforts to generate additional support for such among his constituents."

CEO urges that athletes be students first

By Edward T. Foote II

Written for the New York Times

Big, far from home and 18 years old, he arrives at college, a freshman. For him, there is scant welcome, except that offered by coaches. It is mid-August. Three weeks later, his classmates will arrive on campus. By the time of freshman orientation, he will have run 250 miles for his new college.

On the Saturday after his classes begin (sometimes before), he dons football armor and, with 94 other strong young men, trots for the first time into the stadium. If it is an away game, he has cut classes and jetted partway across the country to alien territory.

Recalling years of watching National Football League heroes on television, he is thrilled to see the cameras, the press box high above, where—who knows?—maybe even Howard Cosell is watching.

Home or away, to the roar of 75,000 fans, the freshman has entered the frantic, exciting, exhausting and increasingly topsy-turvy world of big-time intercollegiate football. By the time he gets to sleep that night, he will have spent 30 to 40 hours on football since the week began.

His story could be told of student-athletes in other major sports. It is a story of growing—and deeply disturbing—importance.

Win or lose, playing or warming the bench, this young man is constantly tempted to believe that he is in college primarily to play football—not, like his classmates, primarily to learn. Astonishingly, educators themselves now debate whether he is there primarily to learn.

Fueled by TV megabucks, fanned by the prophets of cable and satellite potential, the distorted system of intercollegiate athletics occasionally reminds one of Alice in Wonderland, not least because it stands time-honored articles of educational faith on their heads.

Some, for example, suggest that we should succumb to "reality" and accept a permanent subclass of student, the intercollegiate athlete, whose purpose is to amuse us first on the college football field, later (for the very best two percent) in the NFL. Some go so far as to suggest that we pay them a salary for this labor of entertainment, waive normal rules of full-time study, grades and other boring academic impediments.

It is a sorry drama. The NCAA—the National Collegiate Athletic Association—for seven decades the accepted if controversial regulator of intercollegiate athletics, is under challenge from many sides. Among its most vocal critics are many of the more than 100 universities most in need of regulation: the major athletic powers. A court recently invalidated the TV bargaining agreement negotiated for universities by the NCAA and designed to keep at least an uneasy balance of economic power.

The danger is deeper than subverting the education of a handful of young men, sad as that is. The greatest threat, because it is masked in hype and money, is to the academic enterprise itself. Poisonous notions, curiously unchallenged, have backed up into the hearts of our colleges and universities, even into high schools and elementary schools, warping standards, swelling the wrong budgets, angering faculties.

The problem is not intercollegiate athletics. Competitive sports can enrich university life as well as athletes' lives. The problem is not the NFL or TV, both profit-making ventures to be forgiven for dangling dollars before the unwary. Nor is it any one university, most of which try hard to play within the rules, or any one student-athlete, most of whom do, too. The problem is the system that colleges and universities have come to accept. It is the corrosive absurdity of a system created by educational institutions that not only allows but fosters endemic perversion of education.

Proclaiming athletes to be students first, we lowered admissions standards and made freshmen eligible for the varsity a few years ago, so their first and lasting exposure to college life is the tumultuous pressures of football—not an easy challenge even for the smartest senior. Then we lament that so many fail to graduate.

Winning, always more fun than losing, is now so much the measure that scandals sprout like weeds. In extreme cases, transcripts are doctored, nonexistent courses taken, grades fudged, athletes steered through paths of least academic resistance. For such transgressions exposed, 17 universities are on NCAA probation. Few of us can throw stones. The University of Miami is on probation for football-recruiting violations committed from 1976 to 1980. The University of San Francisco recently shocked the sports world by abolishing its respected basketball program rather than trying to reform it.

The educational establishment is groping more creatively of late. Happily, not many would declare defeat and relegate student-athletes to gladiator status. And, for the first time, the American Council on Education has created a committee of 28 university presidents and chancellors to examine the problem.

The solution is so simple it is embarrassing to describe, if more difficult to enforce. Beginning in elementary school, the solution is an absolute requirement that our athletes be students first. They must take the same courses, suffer the same exams and meet the same academic standards as other students. We do no favors to the fabled poor but coordinated child if we pass him along grade by grade through high school because he graces playing fields, then slide him into college on the hopeless side of predictable academic success because he runs the 40-yard dash in 4.5 seconds, then avert our gaze as he founders for two or three years before failing out. The odds are 98 percent against his making it to the NFL.

Indeed, the odds are far better that he will be ill-equipped to function intellectually in a complicated world. In college, if student-athletes do not meet normal academic requirements in good standing, they should not play. Among other reforms, we should abolish freshman eligibility for varsity sports so that at least for one year a student could concentrate primarily on his studies.

Such ideas are neither new nor impossible to implement. The embarrassing part is that the present system is so bankrupt that the obvious needs such emphasis. As the problem is systemic, so must be the solution. No isolated efforts or examples, noble though they be, will suffice.

A key to change is that those with responsibility for the academic missions of universities—faculties, deans, provosts and presidents, not coaches, athletic directors and alumni associations—must lead. Universities exist for teaching and research, not winning games, and at the center of that existence is the obligation to students as students.

Ironically, among the biggest beneficiaries of such reforms would be student-athletes. They may just find that learning something about Plato, Shakespeare, biology and art is as enjoyable as blocking passes. And whether they do or not, a sound education is of greater use over the long run.

If one effect were a decline in the quality of intercollegiate athletics, so be it. Such a decline, if perceptible at all, would be a modest price to pay for a return to educating all our students. Athletes who prefer otherwise should work outside of universities directly toward a professional sports career. It is an eminently worthy calling, but not one that should be allowed to distort higher education any further.

Edward T. Foote II is president of the University of Miami (Florida).

Osborne wants freshmen to play

Tom Osborne, football coach
University of Nebraska, Lincoln
Big Eight Conference

"If you redshirt a freshman, then a lot of times as a sophomore he's not ready to play. So then a guy is looking at two years on a scout team. We want them to play as freshmen. Then if a kid's good enough to play as a sophomore, he's going to play. If he's not, then he's going to be red-shirted his sophomore year.

"We feel it's better for their overall morale to play as freshmen, rather than to be out there holding bags and getting run over by the varsity. You have a lot of kids quit and go home under those circumstances."

Barry Switzer, football coach
University of Oklahoma
Big Eight Conference

"Most freshmen can't play; if you have one who can play, you play him. That's the criterion: Does he have the ability to play? I think you have to play him if you need him and he's good enough."

Robert W. Parks, president
Iowa State University
Des Moines Register

"I've never been overwhelmingly in favor of freshman eligibility because many of these young people need a year to adjust to college life and academic work.

"My feelings are not too deep because there are arguments for both sides. Freshmen with the ability to play are a great deal of help to a lot of colleges and universities that don't have a large number of people on scholarships. The rule was put in to reduce the cost of athletics. From that standpoint, the rule is good because it keeps the cost of programs down. But as far as the welfare of the student, I'm not sure it's a good idea."

Bob Gutkowski, vice-president for programming
Entertainment and Sports Programming Network
USA Today

"There's a large audience out there that lives and dies by our programming. I think people are becoming addicts, for sure, in certain sports. Sports is directing not only our viewing habits but our living habits. People direct their schedule around the times that their certain teams are playing."

Pat Ewing, basketball player
Georgetown University
Washington Post

"People might seem shocked. I don't know why. I don't know why they think it's odd for somebody to want to finish college just because he is a basketball player. I know what my priorities are. I'm here to better myself, to graduate and get my degree."

Opinions Out Loud

Paul "Bear" Bryant, football coach
University of Alabama
USA Today

"I don't know how long the university can afford me, because I can't compete with all these young guys. I don't know how long I can fight them off. I'm not strong enough to fight back. I'm too old to fight back."

"If I'm confident we have a good program, I want to keep on going. If I'm not, I want out. I'm not gonna sit here and wear out my welcome. But I still love football. I love to be involved. I love the game."

Dan Devine, former football coach
University of Notre Dame
The Arizona Republic

"Today's young student-athlete faces pressures which few people, even those of far greater emotional maturity, are called upon to face. First, he receives adulation in high school for his athletic prowess and thus may devote too much of his time and energy on athletics at the expense of academic progress. At age 17 or 18, he must cope with scores of college recruiters—some of the great super-salesmen plying their trade in America today."

"It is beyond my comprehension how a 17-year-old youngster, and I have observed many of them, steps out of a small high school and, with two weeks of practice, makes an appearance before 100,000 fans and national television."

Questions/Answers

Q. Which NCAA sports committees have playing-rules responsibilities, and what are the basic duties of these committees?

A. The following sports committee have playing-rules responsibilities:

Football Rules	Men's Skiing	Women's Track and Field
Men's Gymnastics	Men's Soccer	Men's Water Polo
Women's Swimming	Men's Swimming	Men's Ice Hockey
Men's Track and Field	Baseball	Men's Lacrosse
Men's Basketball Rules	Wrestling	Men's and Women's Rifle
	Men's Fencing

It is the duty of these committees to establish and maintain rules of play in their respective sports consistent with sound traditions of these sports and of such character as to ensure good sportsmanship and safe participation by the competitors. Playing rules should be the same for all divisions of the Association, and differences among the divisions are not permitted. It also is the duty of these committees to approve records for sports in which national records are maintained. The Council may authorize any rules committee to cooperate with other national organizations in the development of common playing rules. Members and chairs of these committees are elected at the annual NCAA Convention.

Scholarship rule may be closing competition gap

I-A Upward Mobility

Most coaches say that the 30-95 scholarship limitations have leveled competition, making for more close games and closing the gap between the top and bottom teams. If this is true—and there is statistical evidence that it is—that would seem to make it more possible for losing teams to start winning.

And that seems to be happening. In Division I-A, 34 teams have won less than 45 percent of their games over the last five seasons combined. So far this season, 21 of these 34 have a higher winning percentage in 1982 than for 1977 through 1981. As a group, they have won 41.0 percent this fall against 33.5 percent for the last five seasons combined.

Northwestern already owns as many victories as it gained the last five seasons (2-6 vs. 2-52-1, or .250 vs. .046), so in that respect it leads the list. In percentage points, however, seven teams in the bottom 34 for the last five seasons are now more than 300 percentage points above their five-year pace:

	W	L	T	Last 5:
Vanderbilt	4	3	0	.200
Kansas State	4	2	1	.236
Illinois	6	2	0	.327
Wichita State	7	1	0	.364
SW Louisiana	5	2	0	.402
Boston College	5	1	1	.418
New Mexico	6	1	0	.449

The first four teams are getting strong leadership from senior quarterbacks—Whit Taylor at Vanderbilt, Darrell Ray Dickey at Kansas State, Tony Eason at Illinois and Prince McJunkins at Wichita State. Vanderbilt is seeking its first winning season since 1975 and its fourth since 1959, with only one bowl trip in that span. Kansas State has never been to a bowl in its history and its 6-5 season in 1970 was its only winning season in the last 27 years. Illinois was 7-4 last season, its second winning record since 1965. Its last bowl trip was to the 1964 Rose Bowl after the 1963 season. Wichita State has not been to a bowl since 1961, and this is its first winning season since 1972 (and third since 1961).

Vanderbilt has made steady progress under George MacIntyre, now in his fourth season. Taylor, unbelievably cool under pressure, follows the game plan to a "T." "We seniors have dedicated ourselves to a winning season and maybe a bowl," Taylor says.

Dickey, son of head coach Jim Dickey, is in the same mold. "There's a big difference in attitude," he says. "Now we expect to win." His dad seems to be winning his big gamble of redshirting eight 1981 seniors (and several others) to shoot for 1982.

Five more teams from the bottom 34 of the last five years now have winning records, with a sixth at .500. They are 5-3 Toledo, 4-3 Iowa, 4-3 California, 4-3 Georgia Tech, 4-3 Cincinnati and 4-4 Air Force (Toledo and Iowa started up last year, both reaching bowl games). In addition to Northwestern, seven more bottom-34 teams are below .500 but still above their percentage of the last five years. They are Texas Christian, Wake Forest, Duke, Army, Mississippi and Texas-El Paso.

Some of the 21 on the way up will be in this fall's list of most-improved teams, which will be based solely on 1982 vs. 1981. For instance, Kansas State was 2-9 a year ago, Georgia Tech 1-10, Southwestern Louisiana 1-9-1 and California 2-9. But the most-improved list will include many others, such as Louisiana State, already 5-0-1 after finishing 3-7-1 last year, and Auburn, already 6-1 against 5-6 last year.

By the way, last Saturday was a good day for the 10 losingest I-A teams of 1977-81—six of them won (TCU, Vanderbilt, Kansas State, Air Force, Virginia and Illinois).

I-AA Upward Mobility

Division I-AA once again is a two-part story. Of the 40 teams that moved from I-A, 16 are under 45 percent in winning percentage in the last five years. The computer history goes back four years in four-year-old I-AA, and 14 teams in the division all four years are under 45 percent for that span. Put these 30 teams together, and you will find 19 currently above their previous pace. As a group, it's now 43.0 percent vs. 34.4. Seven teams are up at least 300 percentage points:

I-AA, Previous I-A:	W	L	T	Last 5:
Pennsylvania	5	1	0	.202
Ohio U.	5	2	0	.382
Holy Cross	6	1	0	.418
NE Louisiana	6	2	0	.427
I-AA Four Seasons:	W	L	T	Last 4:
Middle Tennessee	6	2	0	.250
Maine	5	3	0	.296
Idaho	5	2	0	.326

Five more teams from the bottom 30 now have winning records. They are 5-2 Southern-Baton Rouge, 4-2 Bowling Green, 4-3 Morehead State, 4-3 Montana and 4-3 Rhode Island. Seven more are under .500 but above their previous pace—Lamar, Appalachian State, Marshall, Columbia, Delaware State, Idaho State and Tennessee Tech.

And it seems certain some will make the season-end most-improved list. For instance, Penn and Morehead each finished 1-9 last year and Idaho and Southern each 3-8. Put Maine down for a special comeback award. In three straight weeks, the Black Bears lost in six overtimes (58-55 to Rhode Island), Southern Mississippi's Sam DeJarnette ranks third in Division I-A all-purpose running with a game average of 180.7 yards.

in four overtimes (48-45 to Boston U.) and on a last-second field goal (35-32 to Towson State) but have rallied to win their last three games.

Quotes Of The Week

Georgia's Herschel Walker appears blasé about his touchdowns. He doesn't do a dance in the end zone or high-five the men who blocked him in. "Like I'm happy when I score," Walker told Jerry Green of the Detroit News. "I reckon everybody knows it. But I don't want to dance. If the whole offense danced, then I'd dance with them. It would be kind of embarrassing to me if I danced and there were 80,000 people in the stadium and I was the only one dancing out there." (Claude Felton, Georgia SID)

Washington offensive tackle Don Dow, 6-6 and 285 ("That's no surprise to my mother—at birth I was 11 pounds, one ounce"), is amused by friends who express sorrow that he will miss the holidays at home if Washington makes its third straight trip to the Rose Bowl. Dow, a Seattle native, told Georg Meyers of the Seattle Times: "Two years ago, on Christmas Day, I played the back nine at Mission Viejo in the morning and body-surfed at Laguna Beach in the afternoon. Last year, friends invited me to their home at Canoga Park for dinner. They had a stocking full of treats for me. I did not feel deprived." (Mike Wilson, Washington SID)

Lafayette quarterback Frank

Novak, the nation's No. 1 Division I-AA passer, on the school records he is setting this fall: "I'm not out looking to set records. They are nice, but this is a team game. Personal records are great to look back on when you're 45 and have grandchildren." (When you're 45? Well, could be. . . Novak is 21 and married, with a one-year-old son.)

Lafayette fullback Craig Williams after head coach Bill Russo complimented him by saying he looked like a reincarnation of Bronko Nagurski (all-America tackle and fullback at Minnesota and a member of the College Football Hall of Fame): "Never heard of him, but he sounds like a mean guy." (Craig Smith, Lafayette SID)

Southern California coach John Robinson on ex-fullback Todd Spencer, now the starting tailback: "When he was a fullback, he'd come over to the sidelines and remind me that he'd only carried the ball three times all day. After his 24th or so carry against Oregon (his first start at tailback), he came off the field out of breath, sweating and hurting a little bit and I asked him if he was carrying the ball enough now. He sort of gasped and said, 'Yea, yea.'" (Duane Lindberg, Southern California assistant SID) against Southern Illinois, tailback Ken Lacy learned that his wife Suzanne, already two weeks overdue, had started labor and was going to be taken to the hospital by her mother. Lacy dashed off the field much to the surprise of the fans and ran in uniform to his apartment nearly a mile away. Seeing that all was under control, he returned, started the game and rushed for 70 yards in a 22-3 victory. Afterwards, Lacy said: "I was going to play, but I was sure thinking about Suzanne. And after all, it's Parents' Day." (Gil Swalls, Tulsa SID)

Just a few minutes after Tulsa took the field for pregame warm-ups

The Browner Brothers

Joey Browner, a standout senior safety at Southern California, is the smallest of the football-playing Browner brothers at 6-3 and 205. As you can imagine, it's an awesome lineup.

His three older brothers all played for Notre Dame. They are Ross, now 6-4 and 260; Jim, now 6-3 and 215, and Willard, now 6-3 and 235. Then Joey broke tradition and defected to Southern California. Younger brother Keith, 6-6 and 215, made it a double defection and now is a starting line-backer as a junior at Southern California.

Now consider the baby brother, an 18-year-old, redshirt defensive lineman at Georgia. His name is Gerald, he's 6-4 and 320, can run the 40 in 4.8, and Joey says Gerald is so solid he can bench-press 500 pounds. And even Lawrence University's Scott Reppert is second among Division III running backs with 156 yards per game and 14.4 points per game.

Gerald wasn't the family's biggest. Grandfather Browner on mom's side was 6-6 and 330 and an uncle on the same side was 6-7 and 300. As Scott Ostler of the Los Angeles Times wrote, the Browners are a franchise. They should hang a neon sign over their front door: "Over 50,000 Tackled."

It all started in a big field alongside the Browners' old house in Warren, Ohio, where the boys played football and other sports. Mom was the coach. "My father never played any sports," Joey told Ostler, "and he died when I was 17. But my mother is about 5-10 and she can still shoot a basketball. You should see her swing a baseball bat and throw a football. She had us under control. My father, too. They really disciplined us. Now, I'm very thankful I was brought up that way."

Ross has been the most-honored Browner to date. He won the 1976 Outland Trophy and the 1977 Lombardi Award as a defensive end. Joey, a starting cornerback in 1980-81, likes his new job at safety. He is among the national leaders in punt-return average and has three interceptions (he and Keith had one each against Stanford's John Elway). Southern California coaches are comparing him to Ronnie Lott, consensus all-America defensive back in 1980.

Right now, his mother, Geraldine, is on Joey's mind. She has just recovered from an illness that left her bed-ridden briefly back home in Atlanta. "Lately, I've been playing hard for her," he says. "I call her after every game to let her know how I did. It's funny, but she always knows if I'm hurt, even before I tell her." (Tim Tesaslone, Southern California assistant SID)

Quite A Weekend

Ashland defensive coordinator John Valentine enjoyed quite a weekend. On Friday night, his daughter Lisa won homecoming-queen honors at Ashland High School. The next day, his always-solid defensive unit helped the college-homecoming crowd celebrate a 24-13 win over Valparaiso. (Pete Moore, Ashland SID)

Four Above FG Record

"I took off the shoe and sock on my right foot at a practice last summer and I liked the feeling so much I decided to do all my kicking barefooted," says Illinois' Mike Bass. And the Illini certainly don't want him to change anything after that last-play 46-yard game-winner last Saturday against Wisconsin (29-28) that kept their Rose Bowl hopes alive. (Dale Ratterman, Illinois assistant SID)

George Works of Northern Michigan leads Division II rushing with 137.9 yards per game and is first in scoring with 16.3 points per game.

Bass now has 18 FGs in 21 attempts for 2.25 per game, which puts him above the all-time I-A record of 2.09 by Clemson's Obed Ariri in 1980. However, he is merely third nationally and one of four kickers currently above the record, as Washington's Chuck Nelson is averaging 2.86 (a perfect 20-for-20 and a record 25 straight in regular season), West Virginia's Paul Woodside 2.29 and Notre Dame's Mike Johnston 2.17 (on 13-for-13).

Three Blocked Kicks

Ithaca linebacker Dave Stone blocked three kicks—two punts and a field goal—in one game against Springfield in a 42-15 win. He's a junior from Oneida, New York. (Michael Williams, Ithaca SID)

E. T. Night at Utah

The Colorado State game was "E. T. Night." E. T. stood for extra ticket. Two adults buying tickets received two children's tickets free. We held an E. T. look-alike contest and "E. T." was flown in by helicopter to start the judging at half time. The entire night was a success (unless you mention that the contest winner looked more real than did the one we flew in) and helped bring in 28,603 fans to see Utah win. (Bob Bedore, Utah student assistant SID)

Sure Enough, 13-10

On a Friday sports talk show, New Haven SID Eric McDowell predicted his team would end its four-game losing streak by beating Kean 13-10. Sure enough, New Haven won, 13-10. (Eric McDowell, New Haven SID)

Pay-Back Time

Rusty Mandle is getting his pay-backs this fall at Saginaw Valley State. The 6-2, 200-pound defensive end from Plymouth, Michigan, is now dishing out the licks he took as the starting quarterback the last two seasons. (Tom Waske, Saginaw Valley State SID)

That's Odd . . .

When Bucknell played at Dayton, it was Bucknell's first trip west since it defeated Ohio Wesleyan in 1964. No, not west of Pennsylvania, west of Lewisburg, Pennsylvania, where Bucknell is located. (Brad Tufts, Bucknell SID)

I-A stays up; I-AA mixed

Division I-A attendance dropped slightly last week but still remained ahead of last season by 1.58 percent on a per-game basis. In I-AA, the picture is mixed, because percentage of capacity moved ahead of last year while per-game stayed behind:

Iowa remains dominant state in Division I

By Michael V. Earle
The NCAA News Staff

The state where people claim the corn grows as high as an elephant's eye can no longer claim that it is the collegiate wrestling capital of the nation. In 52 NCAA wrestling championships, Oklahoma or Oklahoma State has brought back the Division I title to the Sooner State 34 times. Oklahoma State has won the crown 27 times.

But another state where the corn undoubtedly grows as high has wrestled the supremacy tag away from Oklahoma. Although they cannot claim 34 championship titles, Iowa and Iowa State have become the new kings of the wrestling hill, and along with the teams from Oklahoma have formed the "Big Four" of collegiate wrestling. But since 1975, Iowa and Iowa State have had a headlock on the Division I title.

Iowa's headlock has been, and appears to be again, more secure. The Hawkeyes have won seven of those eight titles and are a good bet to pin No. 8 in March.

On paper, Iowa, which won the Big Ten Conference title and recorded a 16-0-1 dual meet record last year, looks awesome. Sixth-year coach Dan Gable returns five wrestlers who have won NCAA championships.

At the top of the list are the all-America Banach brothers—Ed and Lou. Ed, a two-time NCAA champion, returns in the 177-pound weight class while bigger brother Lou will be out for his second heavyweight title. With a 107-6-1 career record, Ed is within reach of Iowa's all-time mark for victories.

Between the Banach brothers in the 190-pound slot is Pete Bush, a senior who won his first NCAA title last season. However, a broken arm during preseason could hamper Bush's attempt to defend his title.

Iowa also is strong in the lower weights. Barry Davis, a 126-pounder who set a school record last year with 41 victories, will try to defend his NCAA title. Tim Riley, who was red-shirted last season, probably will be Gable's 118-pounder; junior Mark Trizzino (44-9-2 career record) will hold down the 134-pound position.

As strong as Iowa appears to be, the middle weights could be its Achilles heel this season. Jim Zalesky, a 158-pounder who won his first NCAA title last year, will be counted on heavily to provide some stability.

Despite the loss of all-Americans Lenny Zalesky and Dave Fitzgerald, Iowa should give Gable another outstanding season and his sixth NCAA title. It is starting to become a routine—one that Gable undoubtedly likes.

Meanwhile, the Iowa State Cyclones, last year's runner-up, will be trying to dethrone the Hawkeyes. The Cyclones, coached by Harold Nichols, fell 21 points short last year.

The Cyclones compiled a 17-2 dual meet record last year and won the Big Eight championship. Their success this year depends on finding replacements in the 158- and 167-pound weight classes. Iowa State has an abundance of talent throughout its lineup but lacks depth, particularly at the upper weights.

In the lower weights, Kevin Darkus, a runner-up in the championship last year at 118 pounds, and Joe Gibbons, a fourth-place finisher at 126 pounds, return. Gibbons was selected the outstanding freshman in the nation last year by the Amateur Wrestling News. He will wrestle in the 134-pound weight class this year.

In the middle weights, Nate Carr, who boasts an 89-15-1 career record, will try to become the first three-time NCAA champion since 1978. A trio of seniors provides strength for Iowa State in the upper weights. Perry Hummel (177), Mike Mann (190) and heavyweight Wayne Cole were among the top four finishers in their respective weight classes at last year's championship.

Although Iowa appears to have the inside track to its eighth NCAA title, if the Hawkeyes stumble, Iowa State should be in position to assure that the state of Iowa retains its bragging rights.

However, with the return of 11 lettermen and an outstanding recruiting class, Oklahoma should make its strongest run for national honors since it captured the 1974 NCAA crown.

The Sooners, runner-up to Iowa State in the Big Eight Conference last year, are deep in talent. That young talent, coupled with the return of veterans Mark Schultz and Roger Frizzell and transfer Mark Zimmer, gives coach Stan Abel a team with tremendous potential.

The most notable recruits landed by Abel were John LaViolette and Dave Palmer. LaViolette, a native Oklahoma, brings a 104-1 career record and three Oklahoma state high school titles with him to Norman. LaViolette, who can wrestle at 150, 158 or 167, gives Abel some versatility among his middle weights and could break into the Sooners' starting lineup. Palmer, a 177-pounder, compiled a 102-2 career record in high school and was undefeated in his last 82 matches. Of his 102 career victories, 77 were falls.

Schultz returns for his curtain call and concludes the Schultz era at Oklahoma. Mark's brother, Dave, who many considered to be the finest collegiate wrestler in the nation last year, has graduated and left the chore of upholding the Schultz name to his younger brother.

Schultz was named the outstanding wrestler at last year's championship and stands a good chance of becoming the Sooners' second three-time national champion. Although Frizzell, a 150-pounder, has stumbled the last three years in the championship, he will be a strong contender for that elusive title this year. Zimmer, a transfer from the University of Wisconsin, where he attained all-America status as a freshman, gives the Sooners strength in the 126-pound class.

If Oklahoma's young talent can offset the loss of front liners at six weights, including NCAA champions Andre Metzger and Dave Schultz, the Sooners could add another Big Eight and NCAA title to their list.

The fourth member of the Big Four, Oklahoma State, has been at the pinnacle of collegiate wrestling since the championships began in 1928. However, the Cowboys have fallen behind the other three members of this select group in recent years. The Cowboys finished behind Iowa State and Oklahoma in the Big Eight race last year and have finished fourth among the aforementioned teams in the last two championships.

It has been 11 years since Oklahoma State won an NCAA title, and it appears the Cowboys will not bring one back to Stillwater this year. However, Oklahoma State is in no danger of being dropped from its membership in the Big Four.

The Cowboys have two runners-up from last year's championship in Kenny Monday and Mike Sheets. Monday is a definite threat to be in the running for conference and national honors this season, and Sheets has been one of the most pleasant surprises for coach Tommy Chesbro. Sheets was a surprise as a freshman, placing seventh in the championships in the 167-pound class. He was defeated by Carr in the finals of the 150-pound event last year. After two years of knocking off some of the top wrestlers in his weight classes, Sheets should not be much of a surprise to his opponents this year.

Although Oklahoma State does not appear to be a threat to challenge either Iowa State or Oklahoma for the Big Eight title, the Cowboys remain one of the quality teams in Division I.

Following is a weight-by-weight look at the top prospects in Division I wrestling:

118—Kevin Darkus, Iowa State; Bob Weaver, Lehigh; Randy Willingham, Oklahoma State; Carl Deste-fanis, Penn State; Bob Dickman, Indiana State.

Super heavyweights face weight reduction

By Russ L. Smith
Waterloo (Iowa) Courier

Some say it's for their own good. Others think it's in the best interests of their opponents.

And a small group, including some very large men, argues that the new wrestling rule destroys one of the basic appeals of the sport—that it has a place for all sizes and shapes.

Wherever you stand, however, the heavyweight division in intercollegiate wrestling will not be called the "unlimited" class after September 1, 1986.

At that time, big men will approach the scales before every meet with the same anxiety as their smaller teammates in the other nine weight classes. The heavyweights must weigh no more than 275 pounds after September 1, 1986.

The NCAA Executive Committee turned down the rules committee's original recommendation last spring that would have limited heavyweights to 350 pounds this season, 325 in 1984, 300 in 1985 and 275 thereafter. But, after a summer of studying the various ramifications of the rule in consultation with the Wrestling Committee and the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, the Executive Committee in August approved the aforementioned rule.

It will not, the committee rationalized, have any effect on wrestlers now on college squads, but it will give large young men in high school with wrestling ambition a goal for the next four years.

Princeton University coach John K. Johnston, chair of the Wrestling Committee, said the NCAA Executive Committee was persuaded to reconsider the rules committee's recommendation on the grounds of health. "There is much medical testimony regarding obesity," he said. "It is a sickness and an unhealthy situation."

The NCAA has adopted numerous rules in the past designed to protect the health and safety of the athletes. Cited as examples are the mandatory face mask in ice hockey and the mouth protector in football.

A number of high school athletic associations have approached the super-heavyweight problem and taken action to prevent huge mismatches that might result in injury. The state of Iowa, for example, has added a 13th weight—super heavyweight—for wrestlers weighing more than 230 pounds.

The NCAA considered a similar action, creating an 11th weight division—with a 225-pound limit. Economic considerations killed that suggestion. Few college wrestling programs can afford another division.

Concern with weight mismatches in wrestling could have a spinoff into other sports where the size of participants in contact with each other varies greatly. Football is an example, and those who object to the limitation on a wrestling heavyweight are sure to suggest that a similar limit be placed on football tackles.

However, Johnston says there is no hard evidence to suggest that serious injuries have occurred in collegiate wrestling because of weight mismatches. There is evidence that the heavyweight division has a disproportionate share of abbreviated matches and no-shows for whatever reason.

The Wrestling Committee conducted a survey of wrestling results in the 1980 and 1981 seasons. It found that the most forfeits occurred in the 118-pound class, with heavyweight second and the 190-pound class third.

The same survey showed the heavyweight class a runaway leader in defaults—matches started but not finished. Heavyweights had 320 defaults to 225 at 190 pounds and 126 at 177 pounds.

The heavyweight and 190-pound classes tied in the number of disqualifications where a match was terminated and the victory awarded to one of the wrestlers.

The heavyweights led by a wide margin in number of falls—about one-sixth of all falls instead of the one-tenth share that would have represented an even break for all of the weights.

A further statistic from the survey showed that 85.6 percent of the falls occurred in the first six minutes of the match.

Just how many young men the 275-pound limit will keep off the mat is conjecture now. Some coaches feel it will be very few.

Last spring's NCAA Division I tournament had no more than three or four wrestlers who weighed in excess of 300 pounds. Bruce Baumgartner of Indiana State won the heavyweight title weighing approximately 280 pounds, and he is one of the larger heavyweight champions in recent years, indicating that size alone is no guarantee of success.

The story was similar in the NCAA Division II and III tournaments. The latter had about six heavyweights in excess of 300 pounds (none of whom won the title), and the Division II championship had only two.

The two largest wrestlers in last year's Division I tournament—Tab Thacker of North Carolina State and Mitch Shelton of Oklahoma State—both hope to be back in the field next March at Oklahoma City. Thacker, who weighed in at 405 pounds last year, placed eighth, while the 407-pound Shelton failed to place.

Coach Tom Chesbro of Oklahoma State would like to see Shelton a little smaller. "We're going to try to get him down to around 375; I believe he'll be more effective," Chesbro said.

Chesbro said that Shelton is a good trainer—within the limits of his physical capabilities. "He obviously can't run the stadium steps with us," Chesbro noted. "It just would be too great a strain on his knees and joints."

Chesbro added: "I hate to tell a kid that because he's a certain size he can't compete in wrestling. I think that's opposed to the nature of the sport."

But he also said that when the Wrestling Committee's recommendation was made known last spring, Shelton was prepared to cut to 350 pounds to wrestle this year.

Chesbro said Shelton would have needed at least a year to reduce to 275 pounds. Chesbro could not predict how effective Shelton would have been at that weight.

Thacker's coach, Bob Guzzo, has been one of the most vocal opponents of the new heavyweight rule, Johnston says.

"Who am I to say how big a wrestler should be?" Guzzo asked rhetorically. "There are no restrictions on a football player or a basketball player."

He says Thacker has "grown" some since he weighed about 350 pounds in high school, and Guzzo believes he never will weigh that again. "I don't think psychologically that he could do it (get down to 350 pounds, let alone 275)," Guzzo says.

One of the studies that Johnston's committee has looked at, however, indicates that the weight "bounce" in heavyweight wrestlers, especially very large ones, is spectacular—regularly 20 to 25 pounds a day, depending upon the intensity of their workouts and the amount of food they consume.

The two biggest heavyweight champions of recent years are Chris Taylor of Iowa State and Jim Jackson of Oklahoma State. Taylor's weight was listed as high as 450 pounds. He terminated a short professional wrestling career because of health problems. He died in 1979 at 29 years of age, just seven years after he won the bronze medal in the 1972 Olympic Games and only six years after he won his second NCAA title.

Wrestling Notes

Nebraska coach injured in plane crash

Nebraska wrestling coach Bob Fehrs was injured this summer when the plane he was flying crashed near an Oklahoma City airport. Fehrs suffered a fracture of a lumbar vertebra and must wear a body cast from the chest down.

Assistant coach Kelly Ward will act as head coach while Fehrs is recuperating. According to Ward, Fehrs should return before the end of the year.

Duane Kleven has retired as coach at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. However, he will remain in Madison as director of the Camp Randall Memorial Sports Center. Kleven will be in charge of the day-to-day administration of the facility.

The 42-year-old Kleven compiled a 142-55-5 dual-meet record during his 13-year tenure. In Big Ten championship meets, the Badgers placed in the top three nine times under Kleven. He was named coach of the year in 1977.

Kleven will be succeeded by Russ Hellickson, an assistant coach at Wisconsin since 1970.

After a dramatic 18-15 victory over Yale last season, Harvard apparently won its first-ever Ivy League wrestling championship. But because Harvard used a wrestler who was not certified in his weight class in a match against Columbia earlier in the season, it was dropped into a second-place tie.

Harvard, an apparent 24-16 winner over Columbia, failed to have one of its wrestlers certify his weight, making him ineligible under the rules. Since he won his bout with a major decision, the four team points awarded to Harvard were subtracted, and six forfeit points were awarded to Columbia, giving the Lions a 22-20 victory.

The victory moved the Lions into first place with a 4-0 record. Harvard, Cornell and Yale tied for second with 3-2 marks. The championship was Columbia's third in a row.

Last year's NCAA championship crowd of 14,204 at Iowa State's Hilton Coliseum set an attendance record. This year's championship, March 10-12 at the Myriad in Oklahoma City, will be the first championship held at an off-campus site.

Although Oklahoma State had no individual champions in last year's NCAA tournament, the Cowboys maintain a sizable lead in all-time individual champions. Oklahoma State has had 99 individual champions since the tournament began in 1928. The Cowboys are followed by Oklahoma with 54, Iowa State with 42 and Iowa with 28.

In recent years, brothers have had considerable success in NCAA wrestling championships. Iowa State's Ed and Lou Banach have collected three individual titles between them, as have Mark and Dave Schultz of Oklahoma. Both Banach brothers and Mark Schultz are back this year and are strong contenders for another title in their respective weight classes.

Although a Big Eight Conference team has not won a national championship since Iowa State won the 1977 title, the conference has fared well in national competition. In last year's championship, all five of the schools that sponsor wrestling in the Big Eight placed among the top 12 teams. Missouri placed 12th, Nebraska sixth, Oklahoma State fourth, Oklahoma third and Iowa State second.

This was supposed to be a big year for Paul Sheriff. It still will be, but the spotlight will not be on the wrestling mat for the University of Oregon.

Instead, it will be in rehabilitation centers where Sheriff is learning to cope with being a paraplegic. Doctors say chances are slight that Sheriff ever will walk again as the result of spinal injuries suffered in an automobile accident this summer.

It was a devastating blow for Sheriff, who had worked himself into the starting lineup as a junior last season.

"I'm going to carry my stick and carry it proud and fast," Sheriff recently told Dave Kayfes of the Eugene Register-Guard. "A lot of people have legs and they're dragging their stick. I'm going to keep on going, and, if they can't keep going, that's their problem."

Sheriff plans to finish his degree in general science and geography and earn a master's degree in marine biology. He is the son of Stanley B. Sheriff, director of athletics at the University of Northern Iowa.

The University of Iowa, based on last year's finish in the NCAA championship, has a 10-point lead over Iowa State in returning points for the 1982-83 season. The Hawkeyes return 108.75 points with all-Americans Barry Davis (118), Jeff Kerber (134), Jim Zalesky (158), Ed Banach (177), Pete Bush (190) and Lou Banach (heavyweight).

Bakersfield State leads Division II teams

Led by coach Joe Seay, Bakersfield State's wrestling program has taken a meteoric rise to the top of Division II. After only four years as an intercollegiate team in 1976, the Roadrunners captured their first title. Since then, Bakersfield State has won the Division II championship every year but 1978.

In addition to Bakersfield State's impressive showings in Division II competition, Seay's team consistently has finished among the top 12 teams in Division I, although Division II teams cannot be scored officially. The Roadrunners scored enough points in the 1981 Division I championship to place fifth and would have placed sixth last year.

Despite losing most of the performers from last year's Division II championship team, it looks as though the Bakersfield State success story will continue.

Seay returns two champions who have proved almost unbeatable against Division II opponents. First on the mat for the Roadrunners is Adam Cuestas, a two-time champion in Division II at 118 pounds. Cuestas advanced to the quarterfinals of the Division I championship last year.

Mark Loomis also should be a cinch to defend his title in the 177-pound weight class and contend for the Division I title as well. Loomis, a senior, has recorded 45 pins in the last two years.

Heavyweight Roger Herrera, who placed fourth in the championship last year, should be one of the premier heavyweights this season. After a summer of delivering mail, Herrera reportedly has lost 40 pounds and improved his quickness. He is expected to wrestle at 235 pounds this season.

Bakersfield State's schedule is as demanding as that facing any team in the country. The Roadrunners will go head-to-head with several Division I powers, including Iowa, Iowa State, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State.

If Seay fills a few holes in the lineup and the Roadrunners steer clear of injuries, Bakersfield State should be the favorite to win another Division II title.

However, the Roadrunners will be pressed by North Dakota State—particularly since the finals will be in Fargo next February.

Prospects are good for a successful season at North Dakota State, which is led by 142-pound Mike Langlais, who was named the most outstanding wrestler of last year's championship. Langlais, a runner-up in 1980, was outstanding in last year's championship, winning four consecutive matches and pinning his opponent in the finals.

But North Dakota State coach Bucky Maughan can rely on other wrestlers for victories this season. Counting Langlais, Maughan has five all-Americans on the team. The Bison, winners of the North Central Conference last year with a 12-1 record, are particularly strong in the first four weight classes.

Preceding Langlais is Steve Werner (118), Lyle Clem (126) and Steve Carr, a 134-pound junior college national champion. All four are contenders in their respective weight classes.

North Dakota State also has strength in the upper weights, thanks to sophomore Dave Hass, a runner-up in the 190-pound class last year.

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville also should be a strong contender. The Cougars of coach Larry Kristoff had one of the youngest squads in the Division II tournament last year. Southern Illinois finished third in the championship, marking the ninth consecutive year that the Cougars have finished in the top six.

The Cougars return four all-Americans and have added seven high school state champions to their lineup. Southern Illinois is talented in the upper weights, led by sophomore Al Sears, who finished second in the heavyweight division last year.

Preceding Sears on the mat is Joe Glasder, one of the few seniors on the Southern Illinois team. The 190-pounder finished fourth in last year's championship. Completing the Cougars' upper-weight strength is Booker Benford in the 167-pound class. Like Sears, Benford had a notable freshman campaign with a fifth-place finish in the championship.

There are a number of other Division II teams to watch this season. Some of the top teams are:

Nebraska-Omaha—Heavyweight Mark Rigatuso should defend his Division II title and place high in the Division I championship. Coach Mike Denney has depth and quality personnel throughout the lineup.

Ashland—With the return of all-Americans Mark Black (150) and Reggie Johnson (118), the Eagles should improve last year's 17-5 dual-meet record and defend their Heartland Collegiate Conference title.

Northern Michigan—Prospects are good for the Wildcats after a sixth-place finish at last year's championship. Coach Mike Duroe has veterans at seven weight classes, led by all-Americans Willie Ingold (118) and Dave Iverson (177).

Morgan State—Winner of the Eastern regional two of the last three years, the Golden Bears should finish high in the championship. John Davis (158) and Greg Veal (167) rank among the top wrestlers in their weight classes. Coach James Phillips also has his eye on 390-pound Emanuel Yarbrough, who is a starter on the Morgan State football team, for this heavyweight slot.

Augustana (South Dakota)—The Vikings have good depth and are led by all-Americans Koln Knight (167) and Mark Young (190). If coach Phil Kendle can strengthen his lower weight classes, the Vikings will be a team to watch.

San Francisco State—The return of Adrian Leveuxier (126), Mario De Caro (134) and Bobby Gonzales (142) has coach Andy Foley optimistic about defending the Gators' Northern California Athletic Conference title.

Following is a weight-by-weight look at the top prospects in Division II wrestling:

118—Adam Cuestas, Bakersfield State; Reggie Johnson, Ashland.

126—Willie Ingold, Northern Michigan; Dan Stevens, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville; Lyle Clem, North Dakota State.

134—John Craig, Oakland; Bob Hoffman, Nebraska-Omaha; Joe Gould, Ferris State.

142—Mike Langlais, North Dakota State; Kraig Keller, Wright State; Todd Winter, Ashland.

150—Mark Black, Ashland; Charlie Lucas, Portland State.

158—Tim Jones, North Dakota State; John Davis, Morgan State; Lewis Reed, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville.

167—Greg Veal, Morgan State; Booker Benford, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville; Russ Pierce, Nebraska-Omaha.

177—Mark Loomis, Bakersfield State; Dave Iverson, Northern Michigan; Phil Herbold, St. Cloud State.

190—Dave Hass, North Dakota State; Joe Glasden, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville; Karl Pope, Portland State.

Heavyweight—Mark Rigatuso, Nebraska-Omaha; Al Sears, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville; Roger Herrera, Bakersfield State.

All-time team championships—Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo 8, Bakersfield State 6, Northern Iowa 2, Western State (Colorado) 2, Mankato State 1, Portland State 1.

All-time individual championships (schools with five or more individual champions only)—Northern Iowa 22, Bakersfield State 20, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo 18, Mankato State 12, North Dakota State 8, Eastern Illinois 7, Portland State 6, South Dakota State 6, Tennessee-Chattanooga 6, Slippery Rock State 5.

Brockport State, Trenton State head Division III title picture

Parity abounds among Division III wrestling teams. Predicting a national champion is difficult because several teams have the potential to unseat defending champion Brockport State.

Despite returning most of his point-winners from last year's team that won the championship by 18 points, coach Don Murray and his Golden Eagles will be hard-pressed to defend their title.

Brockport State again will rely on Frank Famiano and Ron Winnie, last year's NCAA champions at 126 and 150 pounds, respectively. Ed Morales (118), Jeff Cox (167), Anthony Conetta (177) and Vince Biamonte (190) also will have to win their share of matches for the Golden Eagles to repeat.

A good test for the defending national champions will come December 11 when Brockport State meets rival Trenton State in a dual meet.

The rivalry between Brockport State and Trenton State traditionally is one of the stronger among Division III teams. Trenton State was the national champion in 1979 and 1981, and Brockport State finished second. Brockport State won the 1980 title, with Trenton State second. The 1979 national championship was a classic confrontation with Trenton State winning the first-place trophy by one-fourth point.

Trenton State coach David Icenhower enjoys exceptional strength in the lower and middle weights and will count on that strength to win another Metropolitan College Athletic Conference title and contend for national honors.

Orlando Caceres finished third in the 126-pound championship last year and compiled a 29-3 season record. Caceres, who transferred to Trenton State after Arizona dropped its wrestling program, and Brockport State's Famiano have had some titanic struggles in past seasons.

Steve Fernandes (134), Ron Bussey (142) and Bob Glaberman (158) provide Icenhower with a 1-2-3 punch that probably is unmatched by any other Division III team. Fernandes, who compiled a 25-2 record, and Glaberman (158), 29-2 last year, will try to defend their national titles. Bussey, who also won 25 matches last season, placed second in the championship.

Another team from New York, Oswego State, can be expected to push Brockport State and Trenton State. The Lakers of coach Jim Howard, who is entering his 21st season at Oswego State, finished second to Brockport State in the SUNYAC title race and was runner-up to Trenton State in last year's NCAA championship.

Howard landed a highly touted recruit in Mark Glickman, a 6-6, 250-pound heavyweight, and will have his own son, Mark, in the 134-pound category. Mark joins his father after transferring from North Carolina State.

Doug Morse (190) and Tom Stanbro (177) give Oswego State plenty of strength in the upper weights, while Mark Bowman (150) adds stability to the middle weights.

Brockport State, Trenton State and Oswego State are the top contenders for the national title; however, all of the following teams are capable of winning the title and should have exceptional years:

John Carroll—The Blue Streaks return seven wrestlers who qualified for the championship. Tony DeCarlo returns for his 19th year as coach and should keep intact the streak of 89 consecutive victories in the Presidents' Athletic Conference. The D'Angelo brothers—Sal (heavyweight) and Nick (190) are good bets for high finishes in the NCAA championship.

Augustana (Illinois)—With three all-Americans and the addition of John Anderson (142) from the high school ranks, the Vikings are a threat to better their fifth-place finish of a year ago.

Wisconsin-Oshkosh—The Titans can be expected to pick up where they left off in 1981, with most of their starters back. Rick Gruber (118), who has a 64-4 career record, should lead Oshkosh.

Minnesota-Morris—Despite a youthful team, coach Craig Olson and his Cougars cannot be discounted. The Cougars should mount a serious challenge for the Northern Intercollegiate Conference title.

Wisconsin-Whitewater—The Warhawks, who have finished among the top 11 in championships (NAIA and NCAA Division III) in eight of the past nine years, could be a top 10 team. Coach Willie Myers has excellent quality and depth through the first seven weight classes.

Albany State (New York)—The Great Danes are coming off one of the best seasons in Albany State history. Coach Joe De Meo will rely on 10 lettermen to improve last year's 17-3-1 dual-meet record and fourth-place finish in the SUNY Conference.

Following is a weight-by-weight look at the top wrestlers in Division III:

118—Rick Gruber, Wisconsin-Oshkosh; Greg Lonning, Luther; Ed Morales, Brockport State.

126—Frank Famiano, Brockport State; Orlando Caceres, Trenton State; Tim Hardy, Wisconsin-Whitewater.

134—Steve Fernandes, Trenton State; Pat McMahon, Augustana (Illinois); John Viviani, John Carroll.

142—Ron Bussey, Trenton State; Darrell Leslie, Rochester Tech; Andrew Seras, Albany State (New York).

150—Dale Schmach, Augustana (Illinois); Jeff David, Wisconsin-Platteville; Tom Gallagher, John Carroll.

158—Bob Glaberman, Trenton State; Chris Casey, Augustana (Illinois); John Hamrick, Glassboro State.

177—Anthony Conetta, Brockport State; Ken Tashjy, Susquehanna; Tom Stanbro, Oswego State.

190—Doug Morse, Oswego State; Nick D'Angelo, John Carroll; Dave Chute, Elizabethtown.

Heavyweight—Sal D'Angelo, John Carroll; Tim Viaene, Wisconsin-Superior; Sam Hargrove, Olivet.

All-time team championships—Brockport State 2, Trenton State 2, Buffalo, John Carroll, Montclair State, Wilkes 1 each.

All-time individual championships—John Carroll 13, Brockport State 10, Montclair State 9, Trenton State 7, Millersville State 6, Salisbury State 6, Humboldt State 5, Wilkes 5, Minnesota-Morris 4, Luther 3, St. Lawrence 3, Binghamton State 2, Elizabethtown 2, Potsdam State 2, Wheaton 2, Allegheny, Ashland, Buffalo, Concordia (Minnesota), Cortland State, Dubuque, Gettysburg, Lake Superior State, Oswego State, Ripon, William Penn 1 each.

IU's Yeagley turns down $150,000 job

Citing a commitment to collegiate coaching, Indiana men's soccer coach Jerry Yeagley last week rejected a reported $150,000 offer to coach the Montreal Manic of the North American Soccer League.

"Coaching to me is a form of teaching and I don't think professional coaching would offer me that opportunity," Yeagley said.

Yeagley, who had a 10-year record at Indiana of 164-24-8 entering this season, said he began discussions with Montreal three months ago and visited the city earlier this month.

"I am steadfast in the way I feel toward Indiana University and this community, and I feel this is where I can make the greatest contribution to soccer, and the academic environment is where I best function," said Yeagley, who chairs the NCAA Men's Soccer Committee.

Research grants total $40,000

Have you ever wondered about the financial value of the newspaper coverage received by a major college athletic program?

That question may be one of many answered this year through research funded by the NCAA. More than $40,000 for research proposals has been approved by the NCAA Executive Committee, and they are under way at member institutions.

A study entitled "An Analysis of the Dollar Value of Intercollegiate Athletic Exposure Gained Through Newspaper Coverage for Selected Division I Institutions" will be undertaken by David C. Higginson and Thomas Baechle of Creighton University. Funding approved was $5,890.

Other projects authorized for funding were:

1. An annual study of athletic fatalities and catastrophic injuries, conducted by Carl S. Blyth and Frederick O. Mueller of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. This year's allocation is $7,700.

2. An annual grant to the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment (NOCSAE), $3,000.

3. A study entitled "Examination of the Validity of the Wet Bulb Globe Temperature (WBGT) Index as a Means for Prevention of Heat Injury in

More permanent home sought for Division I-AA title game

The NCAA Division I-AA Football Championship is looking for a home. It might be a home the championship already has had, but it is likely to be more permanent than previous arrangements.

Due to the expiration of the current two-year contract with Wichita Falls, Texas, the NCAA Division I-AA Football Committee will be negotiating a new agreement this year.

"The committee is interested in considering anyone who is interested," said Milton D. Hunter, South Carolina State College, chair of the committee. "If we can stay in Wichita Falls and make the championship even more successful, that's fine; if we need to go elsewhere, we are ready to do that. We really would like to find one site and stay there."

In past years, the championship also has been held in Sacramento, California, and Orlando, Florida. The committee believes a more permanent site would stimulate interest in the event.

Wichita Falls again is under consideration and has been extremely cooperative. However, bad weather and a stadium with limited seating capacity have hampered that city's efforts.

The committee, which hopes to identify a site for 1983, 1984 and 1985, also has received inquiries from Lake Charles, Louisiana (McNeese State University would serve as the host institution); Charleston, South Carolina (The Citadel), and Tacoma, Washington. Informal discussions also have been held with officials from Indianapolis, Indiana.

Hunter and Jerry A. Miles, director of men's championships and committee liaison, visited Lake Charles earlier this month. Similar visits are planned to the other interested sites later this fall in preparation for a January 13 meeting in San Diego, where presentations will be made by all interested parties.

The committee is encouraging other institutions or sponsoring agencies to bid for the championship. A stadium with a seating capacity of 20,000 to 25,000 is desired, along with a financial arrangement that would guarantee payment of all championship finals expenses. The NCAA would negotiate an appropriate split of net receipts in excess of that guarantee.

Anyone interested should contact Miles at the NCAA national office.

CFA renews TV committee

The College Football Association has reactivated its television committee and directed it to examine the possibilities of a football television plan for CFA members, contingent upon a decision favorable to two CFA members in their legal proceedings against the 1982-85 NCAA Football Television Plan.

Oral arguments before the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver will be heard November 18 in the case filed by the University of Oklahoma and the University of Georgia against the NCAA. Previously, U.S. District Court Judge Juan C. Burciaga held the NCAA Football Television Plan to be in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act and, therefore, void.

The NCAA obtained a stay of Burciaga's order from the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in mid-September, and the November hearing was set to hear the NCAA's appeal.

Meanwhile, the CFA board of directors has instructed its TV committee to seek legal opinions concerning the formulation of any future television plan, including one that might include CFA members; to explore the future of cable television, subscription and pay television, and to examine a variety of options based upon a range of rulings that eventually may be made by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Members of the CFA TV committee are W. S. Bailey, Auburn University; Eugene F. Corrigan, University of Notre Dame; DeLoss Dodds, University of Texas, Austin; Daniel G. Gibbons, University of Oklahoma; Gene E. Hooks, Wake Forest University; Cecil W. Ingram, Florida State University, and Glen C. Tuckett, Brigham Young University.

Proposal aimed at coordinating assistance calls

Because of an increase in telephone and written requests for assistance in applying NCAA rules and regulations, the Council will sponsor a recommended policy at the annual NCAA Convention to limit contacts with the national office to authorized institutional personnel only.

Many individuals at NCAA member institutions are bypassing campus and conference channels and contacting the national office directly regarding the application of NCAA rules.

The proposed recommended policy suggests that member institutions identify one staff member who would be responsible for coordinating the application of NCAA rules to the institution's athletic program.

The designated individual first would review any questions at the institutional level and then with the institution's allied conference, if applicable. If a rules interpretation cannot be solved at the institutional or conference level, the designated individual then would contact the national office for assistance.

Prior to the Convention, the Council has asked that institutions and conferences implement this policy so that the national office staff can respond quickly to those concerns that cannot be answered elsewhere.

Newsworthy

Three different players hold the NCAA Division I-A record for the longest field goal. Two of them—Steve Little of Arkansas and Russell Erxleben of Texas—set the mark at 67 yards in 1977. It was equaled a year later by this man. Can you name him?

ECAC to add six members

The Eastern College Athletic Conference has approved the membership applications of six institutions, bringing the conference's total membership to 236.

Joining the largest athletic conference in the country will be the University of Massachusetts, Amherst; the University of Rhode Island; Coppin State College; Gannon University; Hellenic College, and Mary Washington College.

Elected to conference offices with Edward S. Steitz, president-elect for 1982-83, were Andrew T. Mooradian, athletic director at the University of New Hampshire and president-elect for 1983-84, and Mary Barrett, associate director of athletics at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, vice-president.

The James Lynch Memorial Award for outstanding career success and unusual contributions to intercollegiate athletics was presented to six former athletic administrators. The award winners are the late John J. "Taps" Gallagher of Niagara University, the late Robert Pritchard of Worcester Polytechnic Institute, the late Frank Carver of the University of Pittsburgh; the Rev. John J. Horgan of Seton Hall University, Raymond Oosting of Trinity College and Walter J. "Duke" Nelson of Middlebury College.

Notre Dame gets academic award

The College Football Association's Academic Achievement Award, which annually is presented to the CFA member that graduates the highest percentage of its football players, has been awarded to the University of Notre Dame.

The award, sponsored by the Touchdown Club of Memphis, Tennessee, will be presented at the Liberty Bowl game December 27.

The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, said, "Notre Dame has been proud of the graduation rate among athletes. We take more pride in this fact than in any victories on the field of play."

The CFA said that 84 percent of the freshman football players who entered Notre Dame in 1976 received degrees within five years.

Southland penalizes two programs

Louisiana Tech University's football program and McNeese State University's baseball program have been placed on probation for two years each by the Southland Conference.

Louisiana Tech's penalty is the result of an infraction committed during the 1980 season. The sanctions imposed prohibit Louisiana Tech coach Billy Brewer from recruiting on or off campus for a year and reduce the university's financial aid awards by three for the 1983-84 academic year.

McNeese State still will be eligible for the conference baseball title and any postseason play-offs. The Cowboys' penalty is the result of having used a freshman player who had not graduated from high school.

Ketcham named to ESPN post

William P. Ketcham has been named vice-president for consumer marketing at the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network (ESPN).

Ketcham, senior marketing manager for Pepsi-Cola Bottling Group the past year, will be responsible for all consumer marketing functions of the network, as well as ESPN's trade advertising and promotion.

Ketcham will be based in ESPN's office in New York City.

Kentucky seeks new contract

The University of Kentucky will seek a new contract for radio broadcasts of its football and basketball games.

The athletics board at Kentucky rejected Kentucky Network Incorporated's bid to renew the contract it won three years ago. Kentucky Network won the contract three years ago by outbidding the previous contract holder, Host Communications Incorporated.

Sports-medicine conference set

A sports-medicine conference on "Upper Extremities in Throwing Sports" will be held February 10-12, 1983, in Atlanta. The United States Baseball Federation and the United States Olympic Committee Sports Medicine Council will cosponsor the event.

The conference, which has been approved for continuing medical education credit by the American Orthopaedic Society for Sports Medicine, is designed for physicians, athletic trainers, therapists and coaches. It is intended to give those professionals a foundation in application of biomechanical principles, training techniques and medical diagnosis of shoulder, arm and elbow disorders common to athletes whose sports require use of the throwing motion.

Dr. James Andrews and Dr. Bertram Zarins will serve as cochairmen of the conference.

Additional information or a copy of the preliminary program can be obtained from the U.S. Olympic Committee, Sports Medicine Division, 1750 East Boulder Street, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80909 (303/578-4575).

these materials will provide NCAA Productions an opportunity to determine what is useable and what can be destroyed," Shaffer said. "These materials have provided an excellent stock-footage service to the television networks and commercial production companies, but we hope to be able to offer some new titles in the library's inventory."

Shaffer also noted that NCAA Productions would consider the possibility of starting a videocassette market to offer titles in this format through the library. The library has offered only 16-millimeter films in the past.

Inquiries concerning the library should be directed to NCAA Library of Films, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201, or Shaffer may be contacted at 913/384-3220.
