

Combined indoor track championships seen as boost to men's competition

Despite published reports criticizing the first combined men's and women's NCAA indoor track and field championships as being too selective, the NCAA track and field committees believe the new, streamlined format is a logical development that offers better competition in intercollegiate ath-

Larry Ellis, head track coach at Princeton University, recently told the Associated Press that very few coaches like the new championships format.

'The new format actually is the result of a series of actions between the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committees and the Special Committee on Championships Standards," said Dennis L. Poppe, NCAA assistant director of championships.

"The sports committees were aware of the need to reduce the number of parwith pressures from their coaching

"In addition, the standards committee was charged with the responsibility of monitoring the number of participants in all 73 NCAA championships and, specifically, how the number of participants in the indoor championships compared with other NCAA events. It was a difficult task for all

To incorporate the women athletes, the men's events have been streamlined for the March 11-12 championships in Pontiac, Michigan. The threemile run and the distance medley relay have been eliminated, and fields have been reduced to 12 teams for the mile and two-mile relays, 24 for the sprints and the hurdles, and 20 for all other track and field events.

Those numbers were set by the NCAA committees, but qualifying standards were not eliminated com-

For example, if the standard for the high jump was established at 7-2, any athlete clearing that height would become eligible for the NCAA championships. But if 20 other jumpers go higher than 7-2, then that athlete would get bumped from the champion-

"They're trying to develop an invitational meet, not a collegiate championship," said Ellis, who also is the head men's coach for the 1984 U.S. Olympic team.

'They're not thinking of the athletes in this case," Ellis told Bert Rosenthal of the Associated Press.

'Many athletes will be left out. The meet will be mostly for those athletes who go to the invitational meets during the season before the championships,

Athletic programs fight rising costs

By Timothy J. Lilley The NCAA News Staff Sports fans, take note

Your favorite college team now is keeping track of a statistic that undoubtedly will influence its future more than the combined total of victories, losses, coaching changes or all-

America selections it has produced. The statistic is called cash flow: the bottom line between the black ink of solvency and the red ink of deficits that leads to buses instead of planes, 11 sports instead of 17.

Nobody seems immune. More than 48 percent of the Association's membership is situated in states whose budgets will reflect negative numbers as of June 30. Some athletic programs are making money; most are not. And, the problems they all face raise serious questions about how to pay the bills.

'We haven't had to take any drastic steps," said Frank Cignetti, director of athletics at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. "Nothing has come down to us from the state concerning cutbacks for this year, but you never know.

That outlook is held in many parts of the country, where projected deficits are causing government leaders in many states to impose cutbacks that affect every aspect of the public sector, including state-supported intercollegiate athletic programs

"I will have to get along with less money," said Rhode Island's John Chuckran, who has had to take steps to his original budget that recently was trimmed because of a projected state

'The severe weather we have experienced this winter has forced the postponement of several contests we had scheduled. Where those contests did not have a bearing on any league or championship opportunities, I have opted not to reschedule them," Chuck-

Other measures implemented by the Rhode Island administrator, certainly not unique in these times, have included the doubling and even tripling of room assignments on road trips and the switch from bus to plane on relatively short (400 to 500 miles) trips.

"The coaches realize the alternatives are pretty simple," Chuckran said. "They know they must tighten the belt or face the reality of losing their sport at some point.

"We are not one of those fortunate ones who are self-sufficient and no longer rely on state moneys. But we think intercollegiate athletics here at Rhode Island and everywhere is important enough that we will take the necessary steps to trim things down and keep going," Chuckran stated.

Even the other side of the coin, alluded to by Chuckran, is not as shiny as some might expect. "We generate our own income, which means our destiny is in our own hands," said Dave Hart, director of athletics at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

Computer use in football injuries questioned

By Voigt R. Hodgson

In the January 19, 1983, issue of The NCAA News, a reprint of an article by Dennis Byrne of the Chicago Sun-Times, entitled "Computers Tackle Problem of Football Injuries," was published about which I would like to put some things in perspective. Computers are a popular subject since they began putting rockets into space and bringing them back, as well as handling the even more formidable task of monitoring the nation's creditcard spending.

At Wayne State University (Michigan), computer models have been modeling the spine for 20 years, beginning with the problem of injury to the lower lumbar spine due to ejection from high-speed aircraft. Improvements have been made from what is learned in experiments with physical models, both live and inanimate. Still, it is not refined enough to tackle the problem of football injuries, particularly neck injuries. The difference is that the computer is successful where laws and rules are established, but it cannot take the lead into new, unplotted regions like biomechanics.

Believe me, if it were possible to sit back and type commands into a computer and come up with a 95 percent confidence level about what practically can be done to eliminate or reduce the annual average of nine (1977-1982) catastrophic neck injuries that occur among hundreds of millions of football collisions to a very diverse group of anatomical and physiological specimens—hyped up to varying degrees by self, friends, relatives and strangers, not to mention a mix of turfs, weather, equipment, coaching, previous injuries, wide variation in impact tolerance, etc.—it would be

The problem is that we do not yet know all the laws that govern catastrophic neck failure so that we can build this into a model and allow it to make more accurate response predictions for a given set of input condi-

The model in use is not sophisticated enough to guarantee much more than a 50-50 chance of a correct answer. This is obvious when they write that a "tackler's neck takes 5,000 pounds of force—the weight of a truck," in a 20 mph collision. Five thousand pounds is a body-accordioning amount, which would pulverize any but a math model's neck.

It is futile to classify collision intensity on the basis of a force on the tackler's neck. The neck can be compressed simultaneously in flexion and extension-not to mention torsion. More than one helmet manufacturer has been hung by a jury because of the simplistically persuasive argument that its helmet was considered to provide inadequate attenuation of forces on the top of the head. He is in a "nowin" situation, because if the helmet is enlarged to provide more space for energy-absorbing materials, it also provides more leverage to bend the neck. Bending produces a higher concentration of forces that must be sustained longer, so he ends up with, at best, no reduction in hazard to the cervical cord.

Football authorities recognized the danger of spearing and were aware of the way tackles and blocks should be performed most safely before scientists began to deal with the problems. Since the 1976 rules changes outlawing initial contact with the helmet, paralyzing neck injuries have dropped from an average of 21 from 1971 to 1976 to a 9.5 annual average during the 1977-1982 period.

The National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment (NOCSAE) has recognized that protection of the head and neck should be considered together in trying to reduce this figure still lower. The football helmet standard and experiments with the most advanced dummy in the world, purchased in 1978 with a $22,000 grant from the NCAA, have shown that very little can be accomplished with helmet design alone to reduce neck injuries. Neck injuries occur in a wide variety of helmet designs, pretty much proportional to market share.

Essentially, the same helmet crown designs existed in helmets during 1971-1976 as between 1977 and 1982.

At the January 1983 NOCSAE meeting, it was shown how loads could be transferred experimentally from helmet to shoulder pads with a minimum of load on the spine. This may not be a practical reality now, but meetings between researchers and manufacturers are planned to see what, if any, of the state-of-the-art neckinjury research findings can be applied.

We are not predicting at this point that the solution to elimination of all catastrophic neck injuries in football is at hand. We are headed in the same general direction as the 1976 rule that was meant to get the head out of football. Of course, this is impossible; so, the next best thing we are attempting is to get the neck out of football.

What this means is that kids who cannot get into a Division I school can go to Division II, where there are compensatory and tutorial reading, writing and math programs.

Questions/Answers

Q. Are NCAA members required to register their institutional service marks

A. No, but the NCAA strongly recommends that all institutions protect their service marks by registering them with the U.S. Patent Office. By registering their marks, institutions can obtain royalties by allowing manufacturers to market products bearing institutional symbols. Institutions that have not registered their marks are urged to contact a patent attorney as soon as possible.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

We think the National Collegiate Athletic Association, better known as the NCAA, has done college athletes a real service by insisting on higher standards for incoming freshman athletes, effective in 1986.

Under the present rules, far too many college athletes are encouraged to concentrate on football, basketball or other sports to the point of neglecting their

When such students finally graduate and then fail to make it into professional sports or coaching, they suddenly find themselves without either a career with the 'pros" or a good education.

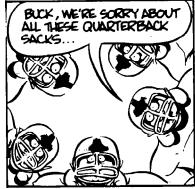

There are too many cases in which both high schools and colleges are guilty of exploiting such young players, taking all they have to give as athletes but failing to provide them with a good education in return.

A total of 400,000 high school students play basketball. Only a few dozen make it into the pros each year, fewer than one out of 10,000.

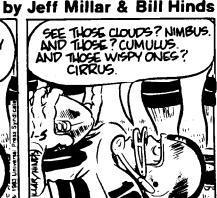

We hope the NCAA will stick to its guns with these new rules to protect the thousands of young athletes involved.

Tar Heels' Smith reaches victory plateau

North Carolina coach Dean Smith now has 13 consecutive 20-victory seasons, and that breaks the record 12 by Nevada-Las Vegas' Jerry Tarkanian. Right? Well, yes and no.

You see, Kentucky's Adolph Rupp had 14 consecutive 20-victory teams, but this came over 15 seasons because Kentucky was under NCAA suspension and played no varsity schedule in 1953. Rupp's streak began with the 1945 season and extended through 1959. If you are wondering about John Wooden, his longest streak at UCLA was nine 20-victory seasons—his last nine teams (eight of which won the NCAA championship).

Denny Crum, a 1959 UCLA graduate, now has 12 consecutive 20-victory seasons at Louisville. They have come in his first 12 seasons as a collegiate head coach, and if you are wondering whether that is a record, the answer again is yes and no. You see, Tarkanian won at least 20 in his first 12 seasons as a head coach on the four-year level (five seasons at Long Beach State, then seven at Nevada-Las Vegas), but he was a head coach on the junior college level prior to that. So on a four-year level, Crum has a tie.

Let's take a look at the streaking 20s for each coach. Rupp, a 1923 Kansas graduate, had a 376-47 won-lost record (.889 winning percentage) for his 14 straight 20-victory teams, four of which won NCAA champion-ships—1948, 1949, 1951 and 1958. Smith, a 1953 Kansas graduate, had a 324-80 record (.802) through games of February 21 for his 13 consecutive 20-victory teams. His only NCAA crown was last season when the Tar Heels were 32-2.

Tarkanian, a 1956 Fresno State graduate, had a 282-58 (.829) record for his 12 straight 20-victory seasons, 1969 through 1980 (his team was 16-12 in 1981, ending the streak, but 20-10 last season, and, of course, currently undefeated at 24-0). His 1977 team was 29-3 and finished fourth in the NCAA. Crum's first 12 Louisville teams were 285-77 for .787 through February 21 with one NCAA crown—the 33-3 team in 1980.

Of course, Crum's career is far from over. But at the moment, he is the only coach to win at least 20 every year of his career for at least 10 years. Other top coaches always have had at least one break in the string. Wooden's 1966 team, for instance, fell to 18-8 after NCAA championships in 1964 and 1965 (freshmen were not eligible in 1966, otherwise Lew Alcindor & Co., who won three national crowns, doubtless would have at least kept the string alive, giving Wooden 13 in a row to the end of his career).

Super sophomores

A pair of 5-10 sophomore forwards were basketball news makers recently, though at different institutions. Cindy Bonforte, a member of the starting five at Wagner, set a school men's and women's single-game rebounding record with 30, a total that matches the NCAA Division I women's individual record set last year by Dartmouth's Gail Koziara. Bonforte has more than 20 rebounds in each of five games this season and has been in double figures in scoring and rebounding 13 times. Delta State's Debra Temple scored 40 points and pulled down 40 rebounds in her team's 83-79 overtime victory over Alabama-Birmingham last week. Temple's effort, which breaks the Division I record in rebounding and is 10 points shy of the single-game scoring record, helped her team overcome a half-time deficit.

Snow stories

Tales of horror about travel problems caused by the recent "Blizzard of '83" that struck the East Coast are numerous and varied. Here are two: Upsala coach Tom Chapman decided to try to make a scheduled trip to Eastern Connecticut the Friday the storm began, even though the snow was already piling up outside. He figured the bus simply would outrace the snowstorm, which was moving south to north. It took two hours to travel seven miles to the George Washington Bridge. Then the bus was stuck on the Cross-Bronx Expressway, where it remained for 20 hours. The team spent the time sleeping, taking a two-mile hike to the only open grocery store in the area and trying to find a functioning Pac-Man video game. After the expressway was cleared and the team returned to Upsala, a scheduled Monday game was cancelled because the cold and snow had rendered the gymnasium generator inoperable. (Frank Centore, Upsala SID).

Marist assistant coaches Al Skinner and Don Kelbick, on the road recruiting, were both caught in the blizzard, but Kelbick fared better than Skinner. Kelbick was able to plow his way through the snow and spent a warm and restful evening in a Bridgeport, Connecticut, motel. Skinner's car bumper locked with another on the Cross Island Parkway in Long Island. Unable to separate the bumpers, Skinner was forced to spend the night in the car—right where it was. (Jay Williams, Marist SID)

Sweet dreams

Telephone calls received in the wee hours of the morning strike fear into the hearts of many people, since they frequently portend bad news. In Virginia Tech coach Carol Alfano's case, however, a 2:30 a.m. call she recently received was very welcome indeed. A 5-8 point guard whom Alfano was recruiting had decided that she was interested in attending Virginia Tech. Having arrived at the decision late that night, the recruit decided to contact Alfano then and there, instead of waiting until the next day. The coach picked up the phone and received the good news, but the next day could not decide whether she actually had spoken with the player or had only been indulging in wishful dreaming, so to speak. Her first order of business the next day was to try to confirm the recruit's interest. "I woke up and could not remember if it had really happened or if I had dreamed it," Alfano said. "But I called her and she assured me it was no dream." (Boh Roller, Virginia Tech student assistant SID)

Something in the water

A warning to teams traveling to Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana: If you pick the wrong schools to play in those states, you practically are guaranteed a loss. The top five current Division I home-court winning streaks are at schools located in the three-state area.

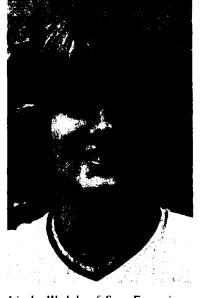

Leading the list is Lamar University in Beaumont, Texas. The Cardinals have a 66-game home-court winning streak dating to 1978. Their last home loss was a 90-89 double-overtime loss to North Texas State February 13, 1978. Arkansas-Little Rock is a distant second at 30 games, then Arkansas with 27, Southwestern Louisiana 22 and Houston 17. The all-time Division I record is held by Kentucky, which won 129 consecutive home games from 1943 until 1955.

Playing to beat the band

Many college teams have routines or individuals believed to bring good luck. In the case of Hunter College, the good-luck charm is a five-piece band. The Hunter men's team won six consecutive games, beginning January 19, at which the band was present. The band had another engagement the night Hunter played Staten Island, though, and the Hawks lost, 86-69. Any bands out there need a place to play? (Jeff Bernstein, Hunter SID) in Spain, where he was serving a mission for the Mormon Church. Durrant promised himself when he undertook the mission to concentrate entirely on prosclytizing to the exclusion of other activities, including basketball. During the two years, Durrant held true to his promise and did not shoot even one jump shot. The only indulgence he allowed himself was a weekly runand-dribble session. Once each week, he would rise early in the morning and dribble a basketball through the streets of Madrid and other Spanish cities he visited during the course of the mission, attracting some grumbling attention from the residents. Though he leads the team in turnovers, the twovear layoff has not done his shooting touch any harm. He currently is ranked 11th nationally in scoring and is eighth on the Brigham Young career scoring list with a year remaining to play. (Ralph Zobell, Brigham Young associate SID)

2,000 and 1,000

While Texas Southern's Harry Kelly is moving up the career scoring chart (last week's notes), he also has joined the 2,000-point/1,000-rebound club. He is the 37th college player to attain those totals. No. 38 also could come from this year's senior class. Kenneth Lyons of North Texas State has scored 2,123 points and needs only 38 rebounds in his last four regular-season games to reach 1,000.

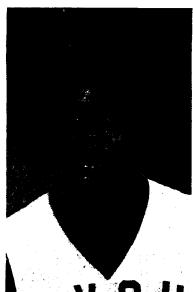

The 2,000-point club also will increase with members of the class of 1983. Kelly, Lyons, Ralph Sampson of Virginia and Mississippi State's Jeff Malone have joined, bringing the membership to 134. Two other current players have a chance at reaching 2,000 points before the season ends—Ray McCallum of Ball State (1,968) and Melvin McLaughlin of Central Michigan (1,948).

Western Illinois' Joe Dykstra has passed the 2,100-point level but has played only two years in Division I.

Quotes of the week

Utica women's coach Joan Kowalewski expected to earn her 100th career victory during a recent twogame road trip. Her team purchased a bouquet of roses to present to her on the occasion but had to delay the presentation when they lost the first game to Nazareth, 74-60. Determined not to let the bouquet go to waste, Utica defeated St. Bonaventure, 60-52, the next night and gave Kowalewski the roses in the locker room after the game. "I'm sure glad we won tonight," she quipped. "I'd hate to see the condition of these roses if we'd lost. Our next game isn't until the middle of next week." (Dan Chmielewski, Utica women's SID)

Vernon Butler, a 6-7 freshman forward at Navy, is from a close-knit family and does not hesitate to talk about his love and admiration for his father. Butler's dad has not missed a game during his son's first year of college ball and has made trips to New England, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Iowa from his home in Beltsville, Maryland. The elder Butler's travels prompted Navy coach Paul Evans to observe, "He can afford it now that he no longer has to feed Vernon at the dinner table." (Tom Bates, Navy SID)

While playing in a game against Bryant, Bentley sophomore forward Eric Wilkinson was called for an offensive foul after pushing an opponent to gain position under the basket. Walking downcourt for the one-andone, Wilkinson tried to convince referee Charles Stead that he was not at fault. "I know what you were doing," Stead chided. "I used to do it myself when I was playing, and I was good at it." (Dick Lipe, Bentley SID)

Texas women's coach Jody Conradt is in the habit of awarding a game ball to each Longhorn who scores 1,000 career points. Lately, however, she has given away more balls than she planned. Three team members already have reached the total this season, and two more are expected to before the season is completed. Conradt has come up with a way to replenish her dwindling supply of basketballs: "I think what I'll do is give them a game ball when they reach 1,000 points, and then if they don't score 2,000 points before they leave here, they will have to give the balls back." (Chris Plonsky, Texas women's SID)

Southwestern Louisiana's 20-4 record indicates the Ragin' Cajuns have not played poorly, but when they haven't been up to par, it has been very noticeable. After an 85-59 loss to Weber State, coach Bobby Paschal lamented, "We wanted to put together 40 minutes of basketball. We did it ... we put together 40 solid minutes of bad basketball." (Dan McDonald, Southwestern Louisiana SID)

After the Virginia Military Keydets lost their 15th game in 16 outings, a tough 75-69 battle with Richmond, a reporter remarked to coach Marty Fletcher that his team had put a scare into some of the people it had lost to with its tenacious play. Replied Fletcher, "That's nice, but scaring only counts in horror movies." (Mike Strickler, VMI SID)

Vanderbilt coach C. M. Newton always selects the very last seat in the rear of the team's 44-seat chartered aircraft. Asked why, he replied, "I've never heard of a plane that backed into a mountain." (Tony Neely, Vanderbilt assistant SID)

Mcdgar Evers was trailing Hunter by a large margin, and one of the Medgar Evers coaches began to vent his frustration at the plays his team was executing poorly. "Where's the postman? Where's the postman?," he screamed at one point as the players came down the court. A spectator sitting behind the bench answered, "He must be out delivering the mail, because I sure as heck don't see him." (Jeff Bernstein, Hunter SID)

St. Louis coach Rich Grawer is not very happy with his team's penchant for falling behind in the first half of a game, then staging a furious rally in the second half that falls just short of victory. "We do two things well," he explains. "We dig ourselves a deep hole, and then we climb part way out of it." (Andy Woods, St. Louis SID)

Tulsa, which was 6-7 at one point in the season when two starters could not play because of injuries, won seven of eight games recently and appears to be back at full strength. Hurricane coach Nolan Richardson could not resist reminding Tulsa supporters of a statement he made when his team was 6-7: "I still think we can go to the NCAA tournament. The fat lady hasn't sung yet, but she's humming like crazy." (Gil Swalls, Tulsa SID)

Greater balance should prevail in Division I

By Wallace I. Renfro

The NCAA News Staff

For the first time in five years, the Division I men's outdoor track season is a mystery. The teams that emerge will be those that stay healthy and make the best adjustment to life in the fast lane.

There are two reasons why the preseason picture is clouded: (1) Texas-El Paso, which has won the last four championships, no longer dominates the distance events, and (2) there is greater balance throughout the country, with a dozen teams that could finish in the top five.

Certainly, the Miners are very much a part of the picture, with a lot of talent returning. But Sulciman Nyambui is gone, and with him goes 30 points from last year's outdoor champion-

If the Miners cannot replace those points, the heir apparent could be Washington State, Southern Methodist, Tennessee, UCLA or Houston; and the list goes on.

Texas-El Paso scored 56 points in two events last year—the 5,000 and 10,000. Nyambui's role will have to filled by Gidamis Shahanga, who finished second in the 10,000 and seventh Zakarie Barie, sixth in the 10,000, also returns, along with Matthews Motschwarateu, 1981 cross country champion and third in the 1981 10,000; Mohamed Rutiginga, who qualified for the 10,000 in 1982, and Thomas Maweu, who placed in the Western Athletic Conference meet last year.

The Miners also have Bert Cameron, runner-up in the 400 last year and the 1980 and 1981 champion; Sam Ngatia, a sophomore who placed fifth in last year's steeplechase; Milt Ottey, the defending high jump champion and coholder of the collegiate record at 7-71/4, and Tore Johnsen, a sophomore who placed ninth in the hammer throw a year ago.

Fabian Whymns, a junior who qualified in both the 100 and 200 last year, adds to that strength, along with Carl Meylor, who qualified in the 400, and Norbert Elliott, a qualifier in the triple

The Miners still have the talent necessary to win but face two strong contenders in Washington State and Southern Methodist.

Southern Methodist coach Ted Mc-Laughlin believes the edge has to go to the Cougars

"Besides the fact that I don't want to be considered the favorite, I believe Washington State should be considered the leader," McLaughlin said.

Of course, no coach wants to be the favorite-only the champion. John Chapin may have his Cougars ready to spring the trap. All but 14 points return from a squad that was third in the NCAA meet last year with 85 points.

Forty of those points were scored by freshmen, 10 by sophomores and 21 by juniors.

Peter Koech, a sophomore, could be the next double winner in the distance events. He was second in the 5,000 last year and third in the 10,000. He already has the fourth best time ever in the 5,000.

The Cougars also will look for a lot of points from Richard Tuwei, another sophomore and the defending steeplechase champion. Tuwei has an 8:23.48 in the steeple; and Julius Korir, a freshman and the 1982 Commonwealth Games champion, has run an 8:23.78. Washington State could dominate the steeplechase.

Brent Harken was third in the high jump last year $(7-6^{1/4})$, and he is back. Also returning is Tore Gustafsson, 10th in the hammer a year ago, and Laslo Babits, second in the javelin.

Joseph Taiwo, a senior, was fourth in the NCAA outdoor triple jump last year and second indoors. However, Washington State probably will redshirt Taiwo in 1983.

The reason? It could be because the Cougars have Francis Dodoo, a junior who was redshirted last year and who probably can score points in the event; and Southern Methodist still has Keith Connor, the defending triple jump champion.

Washington State has strengthened itself with Chris Whitlock, who has a 45.67 in the 400 and was a redshirt in 1982; Sotirios Moutsanas, a junior with a 1:46.66 in the 800; Jacinto Naverrete, a freshman with a 13:44.1 in the 5,000, and Anastasios Djonis, a sophomore with a 7-23/4 in the high

Southern Methodist was sixth in the outdoor meet last year, but the Mustangs have strengthened their potential in 1983. The biggest boost is the return of Michael Carter in the shot put and

See Greater, page 9 UCLA's Del Davis

UCLA is top-rated women's team, with outstanding group of sprinters

When the women's Division I collegiate track and field season ended in 1982, UCLA was sitting on top. The chief reason was incredible depth in the sprints, with the Bruins scoring 87 points in five races at the NCAA cham-

All of that depth returns, so there is little reason to believe that UCLA will not be the team to beat in 1983.

In fact, there is little reason to believe that the Bruins, Tennessee, Florida State and Oregon—the teams that dominated outdoor track last year-will not be out in front again.

If there is any team that may change the picture, it probably is Nebraska, which recruited well.

UCLA earned eight scoring places in the 100, 200 and 400 last year and finished third in the two relays. This year, coach Scott Chisam says the Bruins will concentrate on the relays.

In the sprints, UCLA could be conwon the 200, finished fifth in the 100 and ran on the 400-meter relay team. Jeanette Bolden was second in the 100. 11th in the 200 and anchored the 400 relay. LaShon Nedd was eighth in the 100, fifth in the 200, fourth in the 400 and anchored the 1,600 relay. Arlise Emerson was fifth in the 400 and ran in the 1,600 relay.

Another outstanding performer for the Bruins is Jackie Joyner, the collegiate record-holder in the heptathlon. who won the heptathlon and finished second in the long jump.

Joyner also has run 13.81 in the high hurdles, but UCLA hopes to have a standout in that event in Heidi Friese, the Hawaii state high school cham-

In the 400 hurdles, UCLA has Sandy Leung, a junior who was the 1979 AIAW champion and held the American record at one time.

UCLA also has all-Americas in Michele Bush and Linda Goen, who were third and fourth in the 1,500, respectively, and Susic Ray, who was ninth in the javelin and fourth in the heptathlon.

Chisam has added to the Bruins' strength in the 1,500 with Polly Plumer, a freshman who holds the high school mile record (4:35.24) and was both the junior Pan American and national junior 1,500 champion.

Plumer has run 4:16.8 in the 1,500 and 9:30.1 in the 3:000

Chisam also recruited freshman Vickie Cook, who won the junior Pan American 3,000 championship and has run 9:26.23 in the event.

UCLA would like to get some points from Kari Gosswiller and Tonva Alston, who did not score in the NCAA meet last year but have cleared six feet in the high jump.

Tennessee was Bruins last year, and coach Terry Crawford's Volunteers have lost only 12 points from that team. The Volunteers can score in a lot of events, with their primary strength in the sprints and relays.

Benita Fitzgerald was third last year in the NCAA 100, won the high hurdles and anchored the 400-meter relay team that finished fifth. She also has the talent to score in the 200.

Cathy Rattray was third in the 400 and ran in the 400 relay and on the first-place 1,600-meter relay team.

Tennessee is especially strong in the 800, with Delisa Walton Floyd and Joetta Clark. The two finished first and second last year and ran the last two legs of the 1,600 relay.

Floyd, wife of former Houston 52.0 in the 400.

Kathy Hadler won the 5,000 for Tennessee last year and owns a 9:16.9

The other standouts for Tennessee are Patricia Walsh, who was third in the discus, and Myrtle Chester, who finished ninth in the heptathlon. Chester also has jumped 19-111/4 in the long

Crawford has added two freshmen who could give Tennessee additional scoring strength. Veronica Findley is a sprinter from Jamaica who has run 7.12 in the 55-meter event this year. and Monica O'Reilly, from Ireland, can run from 1,500 to 5,000 and has a 9:31 in the 3,000

Florida State is another team with power in the sprints, but the Lady Seminoles have been weakened by the loss of Tonya Brown in the hurdles.

That does not mean that Florida State will fail to score a lot of points this spring. The Seminoles scored in the 100, 200, 400 and finished second in both the 400-meter and 1,600-meter

Randy Givens is back after placing third in the 200, seventh in the 100 and running a leg in the 400-meter relay. Her running partner is Marita Payne, who won the 800 and was fourth in the 200. Payne ran in the 400 relay and anchored the 1.600 relay.

Angie Wright, a senior, also ran on both relay teams and finished seventh in the 400.

Like UCLA and Tennessee, Florida State returns all of its sprint points. Coach Gary Winckler has recruited Brenda Cliette, who ran an 11.58 in the 100 as a high school senior and was seventh in The Athletics Congress (TAC) 200 championships last year.

Also back for Florida State are sprinter Stanley Floyd, also has run Ovrill Dyer, ninth in the 800 last year; See UCLA, page 9

Abilene Christian 'vaults' into contention

Abilenc Christian became an NCAA Division II member last year and promptly made its presence known in outdoor track, unseating Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, which had won three straight championships.

Don Hood's Wildcats have good balance in a number of events but apply their own trademark to the pole vault, where they finished first, second and third last year and could add a fourth in 1983.

The Wildcats scored 121 points in the Division II championship last year, and most of those points return. The only losses were 110-meter high hurdle champion Steve Parker and Kelly Smith, who was 10th in the 400-meter

On the other hand, Hood acquired Charlie Phillips, the 400-meter dash runner-up last year, from Sam Houston State when that school dropped track. Phillips should provide points in that event and help the Wildcats defend their 400-meter relay championship.

Brad Pursley had to vault only 17-4 to win the outdoor competition last year, but he has cleared 18-51/2. The only vaulters in the division who can stay with him are his teammates.

Dale Jenkins, the world record holder for 18-year-olds, was second last year. He has cleared 18-1/2. Bobby Williams was third in 1982, and his best is 17-1

Abilene Christian could add to its pole vaulting depth with Tim Bright, a decathlete who has cleared 17-8 in the decathlon pole vault and 18-1 in open competition.

Hood has some outstanding sprinters in Albert Lawrence in the 100 and Tom Thompson and Arthur Williams in the 200.

When Hood adds Phillips and Mark Witherspoon, he has scoring potential in both the 400-meter and 1,600-meter

Rick Watkins placed seventh in the high jump competition last year, but the senior has cleared 7-21/4. Also returning are Greg Johnson, second in the long jump last year; Peter Green, who was 10th, and David Simmons. seventh in the shot put and sixth in the discus.

To make matters worse for Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, the Mustangs lost three athletes who combined for 43 points last year.

Patrick Croft was fourth in the 400 and ninth in the 200. Vernon Sallaz won the 800 and was fourth in the 1,500. Doug Avrit was seventh in the 10,000. All are gone, and second-year coach Tom Henderson does not have anyone to replace them at the national

That does not mean that Henderson will be watching the bottom fall out of the Mustangs' track fortunes, however. He returns seven all-Americas from 1982 and another from 1981.

Steve Strangio was fourth in the 10,000 last year and seventh in the 5,000. He has some sturdy teammates in Mike Lansdon and Kevin Broady. Lansdon was 15th in the NCAA cross country meet last fall

Also expected to help the Mustangs in the distance events is Carmelo Rios, the 1981 steeplechase champion and a fine 10,000 runner.

Henderson will have a problem defending his third-place finish in the 400-meter relay, with the loss of his sprinters; however, the Mustangs return three of the four members of the 10th-place, 1,600-meter relay team.

The Mustangs also have Steve

Thomas, eighth in the pole vault, and Ronald Waynes and Terry Armitage, who were third and eighth, respectively, in the long jump.

Armitage could earn some points in the triple jump—he has leaped 50-111/2—and so could Victor Torres, the 1981 California state junior college triple jump champion.

Henderson also has scoring potential in the hammer with junior college transfer Bill Portezacke (168-4) and in the javelin with thrower Ray Belnap (228-4)

Angelo State is another team that has inserted itself into national Division II track rankings, and the Rams could move up the ladder in 1983 with freshman and junior college additions.

The Rams are strong in the sprints with William Davis and Ernest Pennington. Davis was third in the 100 last year and second in the 200, and Pennington was seventh in the 100.

Thanks to Davis and Pennington, the Rams were second in the 400meter relay and won the 1,600 relay last year. Coach Clint Ramsey returns three of the four members of the 400 relay team and half of the 1,600 team.

He has added freshman Paul Warren, who ran 10.48 in the high school 100, and Carl Young, the national junior college champion in the 400-meter hurdles in 1980 and 1981. Young also is the American junior record holder in the hurdles at 50.13.

The other returning scorer for Angelo State is Kevin Nance, who was ninth in the 110-meter hurdles last year, and Dennis Green, sixth in the high jump

Ramsey has recruited Mats Hedberg and Lennart Flyman, both junior college performers, to help in the weight events. Hedberg was the national champion in the shot put in 1981 and 1982, and Flyman was second in both the shot and discus.

The Rams also recruited Conny Silfver, the junior college decathlon champion the last two years. Of course, Silfver will have to contend with Mount St. Mary's Trond Skramstad, who is the defending decathlon champion in both Divisions I and II.

Mount St. Mary's also has Bob Stebbins, the 1981 decathlon runnerup, returning from an injury. Jeff White, the defending 400-meter champion, will be redshirted in 1983.

Cal Poly-SLO is top women's contender in Division II

One of the most brutal attacks ever on outdoor track competition was waged by the Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo women's team last year, when the Mustangs used 24 athletes to score 259 points in the Division II champi-

The bad news for everyone else in Division II is that the Mustangs return 16 of those athletes, and coach Lance Harter has been recruiting.

Harter loses 69 points from last year. Tamela Holland was third in the 100, and she has a 24.10 in the 200 but did not enter the event last year

Arlene Van Warmerdam was eighth in the 400 and has a 24.76 in the 200, but she did not enter the event, either. Both ran on the 400-meter and 1,600meter relay teams that finished first and second, respectively

Harter has three members of the 400-meter relay team back and two of the four from the 1,600-relay squad.

The Mustangs placed four in the 800 last year, and three of those runners return. Sheri Ewing was third, Kristin Allyne was ninth and Rhonda Patcha was 11th. To replace Scherzinger's points, Harter has recruited Tressie Gibbs, the California 800 junior college champion.

Amy Harper was second in the 1.500 last year and won the Division II cross country competition last fall. She also has a 9:14 in the 3,000 this year; but Harter has a full stable there, including Jennifer Dunn, who was eighth last year.

There are a total of eight who have run the 3,000 in under 10 minutes, including freshmen Kris Katterhagen (9:58) and Lori Lopez (9:45.30).

In the 5,000, the Mustangs return Irene Crowley, sixth a year ago, and Carol Gleason, who was 10th. Crowley also was the runner-up in the 10,000; but Gleason, only a sophomore, is improving so fast (she has a 34:43 this year) that she probably will score points for the Mustangs in 1983.

Harter also has a couple of outstanding hurdlers. Janet Yarbrough was second in the 110-meter event last year, and Chris Doubois was fifth in the 400 hurdles. Van Warmerdam has the best 100 hurdle time on the squad; she was the 1981 California state junior college champion in the event.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo placed two athletes in the high jump last year, and they both return. Sue McNeal was second and has cleared 6-2. Karen Kraemer was seventh.

In addition to her hurdle performance, Yarbrough also was second in the long jump.

The other returning scorers for the Mustangs are Dana Henderson, seventh in the shot put; Kathy Kahn, ninth in the discus; Danella Barnes, third in the javelin, and Dubois, second in the heptathlon.

A team that may be ready to make itself known in Division II is Northridge State, chiefly because the Lady Matadors have recruited Marlenc Harmon, No. 3 on the U.S. list of heptathletes, is virtually a oneperson squad.

She is the national junior pentathlon record holder, national junior 400meter hurdle champion and the California state high school long jump record holder.

Her personal bests include 13.52 in the 110 hurdles, 58.24 in the 400meter hurdles, 20-91/4 in the long jump, 5-10 in the high jump, 2:10.01 in the 800 meters and a 24.20 in the 200 meters

On top of that, she has scored 6,030 in the heptathlon.

Northridge State also has Carol Keller returning. She was seventh in the 3,000 last year and 11th in the 5,000.

Northridge State coach Don Strametz believes the team's strength lies in the middle distances, led by runners who helped the Lady Matadors finish third in the nation in cross country last Nena Manriquez is back, along with Carol Keller, who was seventh in the 3,000 last year and 11th in the 5,000. Also back is Lucia Rodriquez, the best cross country runner on the team and 11th last year in the 3,000.

In the 10,000 is Beth Milewski, who missed last year with injuries but was third in the event in 1981. Beth Weber, 11th last year, also returns

The only returning sprint scorer is Sheryl Thompson, who finished 11th in the 100 last year and was a member of the 400-meter relay team that fin-

South Dakota State finished third last year. The Jackrabbits probably cannot do any better than that in 1983 but certainly should be among the top five teams in the country.

Very strong in the distance events, the Jackrabbits placed three in the 3,000 last year, three in the 5,000 and three in the 10,000. They lose only one member of that unit.

Back is Nancy Gieske, second in the 3.000 and 5,000; Cindy Sargent, fifth in the 3,000; Laura Geason, 10th in the 3.000; Kristin Asp, third in the 5,000; Audrey Stavrum, fifth in the 5,000 and the 10,000 national champion, and Jill Ramsdall, eighth in the 10,000.

The only missing distance runner is Vicki Coyle, sixth a year ago in the 10,000.

Other national scorers for coach Ruth Marske are Tammi Wermers. fifth in the 800; Lori Dubbelde, sixth in the discus; Karla Brotherton, 11th in the discus, and Lori Boomsma, fifth in the javelin.

Bakersfield State is another California team that fully expects to be stronger in 1983. The Roadrunners tied for fourth last year.

Coach Bob Coons loses five from last year's scorers, including high jump champion Phyllis Blunston; but there are seven all-Americas returning. The Roadrunners also have several athletes returning from injuries that kept them out of national contention last year.

Returning all-Americas include Andralette Gill, ninth in the 100; Tina Lawson, 10th in the 400; Marcella Mariano and Sha Lucas, who teamed with Gill on the third-place 400-meter relay team, and Sharen Hamilton and Deborah Corley, first and second in the shot put last year.

In Division III, depth should keep Profs on top

Glassboro State in men's Division III outdoor track. The Profs have captured the national title three years running and were the runners-up the previous two years

Coach Oscar Moore uses the same formula over and over-depth.

'We won four individual events last year, and they won two," noted Southern-New Orleans coach Artis Davenport. "They win the championship, and we finish third. They just come at you in so many events.

Division III coaches probably will be moaning the same song this spring. Glassboro State lost five all-Americas who scored in 10 places in national competition last year.

We should be okay.

He returns eight all-Americas who scored in 11 spots nationally last year, and he has added personnel in the 800, distance events and high jump.

Willie Lawson is back, and he is the lone returning national champion. He won the 800, took sixth in the 400 and anchored the second place 1,600meter relay team.

One of his stable mates is Ronald Moore, ninth in the 200, 10th in the 100 and the anchor for the 400-meter relay team that was ninth. Moore also plans to run in the 400 in 1983.

The Profs' other national champion last year was 110-meter hurdler Garry Moore, who also ran on the 400-meter Moore says candidly, "I'm very relay team. But Glassboro State has Beamon and Anthony Abicca.

Beamon was second in the highs and second in the long jump, and Abicca was seventh in the hurdles. The Profs hope to get some help in the hurdles from Garry's brother Stanley Moore, a

Two other members of the 1,600meter relay team returning are Nick Kenny and James Thompson.

The other returning scorers from last year are Lennie Hernandez, fourth in the steeplechase, and Peter Sharpless, 11th in the high jump. Moore has high hopes for Sharpless, who has cleared 7-0 four times indoors this year

Adding to the scoring potential of the Profs are Greg Rapp, third in Divi-

14:44 in 5,000, and Robin Howard, a transfer from Lincoln (Pennsylvania) who was fourth in the 800 last year.

Moore also has recruited freshman Pierre Reid, who has high jumped 6-101/4 in high school and can run the Hamline made a battle of it for Glassboro State last year and finished only 71/2 points behind, but the Fighting Pipers lost a greal deal. Still, coach Kent Stahly has more than 60 points returning in only four athletes.

Leading the Hamline charge is Mike Manders, two-time national champion in the shot put and discus. He will try to join the select few who have three individual championships in two different events.

Also back is defending long jump champion Dennis Hensch. Right behind him is Todd Wallert, third in the long jump last year and the champion in 1981. The fourth returning all-America is Dave Menberg, tied for fourth in the pole vault.

Davenport had a dynasty of his own in the mid-1970s at Southern-New Orleans. The Black Knights were runners-up in 1974 and then captured the team title the next three years.

Last year, his crew finished only 18 points out of first and 101/2 points from second, as the six-man team rolled up 101 points in five events.

Half of the team is gone; but for Davenport, that means that half of his squad is back. With the way the Black Knights collect points, that should be enough to start.

Back is Keith Nunnery, the 200meter national champion and third in the 100; Michael Woods, fourth in the 400 and 11th in the 200, and Joseph Adams, 12th in the 400.

The Black Knights also are the defending champion in the 400 meter and 1,600-meter relays. But only Nunnery returns to the 400-meter squad,

Davenport is not without some potential, however. He also has Ronald Bellamy, who fell in the 800 at the national meet last year and certainly is capable of scoring points.

He also has Ben Walker, a junior long jumper and triple jumper who has gone better than 24 feet.

Three newcomers should help the team. Gralen Usian was the state high school triple jump champion. Sophomore transfer Henry Mathews is a versatile athlete who could help in several Finally, Curtis Washington, a freshman sprinter, may be the answer to the restoration of the relay teams.

Frostburg State has three outstanding athletes returning from 1982. Tim Street was the national 100-meter champion a year ago, and Lorenzo Waters captured the 400-meter hurdle crown. Also back is half of the 400meter relay team that was fifth in the nation

Stanislaus State was fourth in the country last year and returns most of its power in 1983. Billy Stone was second in the 100 and fourth in the 200 in the NCAA championships last year.

The other returning scorers are Al Jones, second in the 400, and Ed Hunter, 10th in the long jump. In addition, three-fourths of the secondplace 400-meter relay team returns, along with half of the third-place, 1,600-meter relay.

Other top Division III athletes to watch in 1983 are Allegheny's Thomas Held, second in the 1,500; Wisconsin-Stevens Point's Gary Van Vreede, the decathlon champion; St. Thomas' Nic Manciu, a freshman who was the Division III cross country champion last fall; St. Olaf's Perry Kotval, second in the pole vault, and Augustana's (Illinois) Doug Atkinson. the pole vault champion.

Wisconsin-LaCrosse is favorite for Division III women's title

There is a new kid on the block in Division III women's outdoor track.

Wisconsin-LaCrosse won the AIAW outdoor championship last year and moves into NCAA competition this spring. Everyone in the division believes the Indians are the team to bcat in 1983.

Coach Gary Wilson lost some athletes but has recruited well. And when the Indians met Central (Iowa), the team that dominated the Division III championship in 1982, last year in regular-season competition, Wisconsin-LaCrosse won by 30 points.

Wilson lost nearly half of his all-Americas, but he returns seven veterans from last year's meet. With 92 women competing in track, he expects to qualify from 12 to 18 athletes this

The Indians have a very balanced attack, with the only obvious weaknesses in the 1,500 and short sprints. Wilson says there probably is not anyone in those events of national stature.

Patty Heimerman, however, was third last year in the 400-meter dash and anchored the mile relay team that finished third. Also on that team was Kim Pfaffle, who was seventh in the Wilson has recruited a couple of outstanding freshmen in Carol Stieber, who may also run the 200, and Lori Hernke.

The Indians lost their national champion in the 800, but they have Pfaffle and freshman Mary Kastelic, who ran a 2:14.2 in the 800 in high school.

Wisconsin-LaCrosse also acquired a fine 400-meter hurdler in Amy Klee, who was second in the AIAW meet last vear and transferred when her institution dropped track as a varsity sport.

With the four sprinters and Klee, Wilson believes he will have a better 1,600-meter relay team than last year.

The Indians' strength may be in the distance events. Tori Neubauer, the Division III cross country champion last fall, returns in the 3,000. Neubauer ran 9:46 in the 3,000 last year, but Wilson thinks she will improve that to 9:15 or 9:20

Neubauer also has run 16:49 in the

Wilson has a couple of underclassmen in the 10,000, but both have run under 38 minutes. Sophomores Lisa Kutschera (37:26.72) and Barb Lauer (37:58.35) are distance threats

Another strong entry for the Indians is Cindy Leusmire, the AIAW national champion in both the shot put and discus. Donna Oedsma was fifth in the shot. Leusmire has bests of 46-2 in the shot put and 153-0 in the discus.

Desiree Witter was seventh in the heptathlon last year, and Tracey Lehman has cleared 5-6 in the high

Central (lowa) lost four athletes from a team that finished 55 points ahead of anyone else in Division III last year, and coach Jane Kors says she will be happy if the Flying Dutch can finish in the top five.

Things may be tough, but Kors still has plenty of scoring punch.

The most versatile member of the squad returns. Marcie Thurn was fifth in both the 100 and 200 and was the national champion in the long jump. She also anchored the best 400-meter relay team in the division last year.

The Dutch also return Nancy Cisar, who was sixth in the 200 and fourth in the 400. Cisar also was on the 400 relay team, along with returnee Lisa

The fourth member of the team was Paula Casey, who was second in the 200 and fourth in the long jump. She is gone, but Kors believes Robin Shaw will be a capable replacement.

Central's 1.600-meter relay team was disqualified in the event last year, but the whole squad returns. That could make up some of the missing points for the team.

The other returning scorers for the Flying Dutch are Lauri Haddy, fourth in the 800; Jean Sedlacek, 12th in the 800, and Rose Van Egmond, fifth in the jayclin.

Frostburg State was second in the nation last year, but the Bobcats lost too much. Their best returnee is Val Pearce, third in the 400-meter hurdles and eighth in the 100-meter hurdles.

Fisk, on the other hand, showed how far a team can go with very few athletes. The Lady Bulldogs used only five women to score 88 points and finish third in the nation.

Only two of the five are gone; and with several freshmen joining the squad in 1983, Fisk may be one of the division's top contenders.

Karen Boxley was second in both the 100 and 200 and eighth in the 400 as a freshman. Yelandra May was sixth in the 100 and ninth in the 200, and Sharon Gilmore was seventh in the 100 and 11th in the 200.

All three ran on the teams that finished second in the nation in both the 400-meter and 1,600-meter relay. Coach John Martin has enough freshmen on board to find a replacement for Shellouise Grant, the fourth member Trenton State is another team with a promising outlook in 1983. The Lions have Colleen Casey, the defending national champion in both the 5,000 and 10,000.

Trenton State also returns Linda Clay, ninth in the 100-meter hurdles; Jo Ann Potts, sixth in the 400 hurdles; Jill Watts, national javelin champion; Kelli Reddy, 10th in the javelin, and Melissa Wenczel, seventh in the hep-

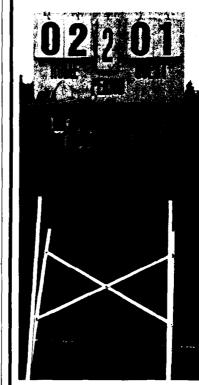

In addition, half of the third-place 1,600-meter relay team returns.

Wisconsin-Stevens Point has four outstanding athletes. Returning from last year arc Barb Nauschutz, second in the 100-meter hurdles; Barb Sorenson, second in the 800; Sarah Schmidt, sixth in the long jump, and Alisa Holzendorf, who joined Sorenson and Nauschutz on the sixth-place 400meter relay.

Another outstanding Division III athlete to watch in 1983 is Ohio Wesleyan's Julie Brendenbeck, fifth in the shot put, fourth in the javelin, and the national discus champion.

Margaret Coomber, seventh in the 1,500; Wendy Markham, who tied for fifth in the high jump, and Alice Bennett, who was eighth in the long jump.

Another potential point scorer for Winckler is Rena Antanelis, 1981 junior TAC champion in the javelin. The sophomore's best effort has been 162-

On an event-by-event basis, here are other athletes to watch in 1983:

100-, 200-Meter Dashes UCLA, Tennes see. Florida State and Nebraska leave little room for anyone else, but Los Angeles State's Diane Williams certainly will make herself known. She was fourth in the 100 and sixth in the 200 in the NCAA meet last year. Houston's Jackie Washington was sixth in the 100; Nevada-Las Vegas Lisa Thompson was 10th in 100 and seventh in the 200, and Prairie View A&M has Easter Gabriel, who was ninth in the 200. Houston recruited Maxine Underwood, 1982 TAC 200. indoor champion last year; Texas A&M has Novaita Samuels, third in the 100 and second in the 200 at the AIAW championships.

400-Meter Dash—Texas-El Paso returns Charmaine Crooks, second in the NCAA 400 last year. Other returning NCAA scorers include Prairie View's Gabriel, sixth; Missouri's Rosalyn Dunlop, eighth, and Los Angeles State's Sharon Dabney, ninth, Los Angeles State has an outstanding freshman in Denean Howard, who has run 50.87. Houston's Underwood is the defending TAC indoor 400 champion. Ohio State's Donithy Jones was third in the 1982 AIAW cham-

800-Meter Run-Not as many return in the 800 as in the sprints. In addition to those mentioned earlier, Stanford's Regina Jacobs was fourth last year and Indiana's Sheila Montgomery was 11th. There are some newcomers who could move into contention. Nebraska has freshman Kirsti Voldness, who has run 2:02.8, and Califor nia has Louise Roma, a sophomore who was the AIAW champion in 1982 with a 2:03. Two others to watch are Indiana's Barb Ennie, a two-time AIAW 600 all-America, and Ohio State's Debra Simececk-Beatty, the 1982 national junior col-

1,500-Meter Run-Virginia and Stanford will have a big impact on the distance events. Oregon's Warren and San Diego State's Monica Joyce—first and second last year—are gone; but Virginia has Jill Haworth, third, and Lesley Welch, ninth, back, Stanford has PattiSue Plu mer, who was 12th. California returns Margaret Spotts, fifth in the AIAW meet last year.

3,000-Meter Run-The field is crowded with returnees. Stanford took first and second last year with Ceci Hopp and Plumer, and both return. Also returning are Michigan State's Ann Pewe (fourth), Virginia's Lisa Welch (sixth), Drake's Liz Hialmarsson (seventh), Missouri's Andrea Fischer (eighth), Washington's Regina Joyce (ninth) and Kentucky's Bernadette Madigan (11th). The field will be strengthened by Arizona State's Mickey Doane, national junior college champion in both the 3,000 and 5,000; Illinois State's Wendy Van Mierlo, fourth in the AIAW last year, and North Carolina State's Betty Springs, the 1981 cross country champion who missed the outdoor and cross country seasons in 1982. Springs has run 9:09 in the 3,000.

5,000-Meter Run-Virginia did not score in the 5,000 or 10,000 last year, but the two-time cross country champion has plenty of talent to add to the contenders in 1983. Tennessee and Oregon took the top three spots fast year, but Stanford's Kim Schnurpfeil was fifth, and Utah's Jill Molen was sixth. Georgetown's Pia Pallodino, Drake's Hjalmarsson and Missouri's Sabrina Dornhoefer were seventh, ninth and 12th, respectively Arizona State's Doane and Illinois State's Van Mierlo also will be in the running for national attention. And a healthy Betty Springs could be at the top, with a personal best of 15:52.

10,000-Meter Run-Springs also could dominate here, with a 33:03.32 best. But she will have to fight off Stanford's Schnurpfeil, the defending champion, and Virginia probably will have one of the Welches (or both) in the running. The others who could score nationally are Utah's Molen. third last year; Michigan State's Jill Washburn and Diane Bussa, fourth and 11th in 1982; Oklahoma's Kellie Cathey, fifth: Stanford's Ann Locke, seventh, and Brigham Young's Carey May, eighth. Iowa has Jinny Spangler, a sophomore who was fifth in the AIAW meet last year.

Hurdles Both events could be wide open in 1983. Fitzgerald probably will dominate the highs. Arizona's Robin Marks, second last year, and Long Beach State's Faye Paige, third, are the top returning scorers in the 400. The other returning scorers in the highs are Texas-El Paso's Kim Turner, third; Eastern Michigan's Gina Tempro, 10th; Oklahoma's Sherilyn Sanders, 11th, and Alabama's Barbara Scott, 12th. Iowa has recruited freshman Natalie Spinks, the national junior Olympic champion at 13.72; Indiana has freshman Kelly Graham, fifth in the TAC high school rankings at 13.6, and Georgia has freshman Debbie DaCorta with a personal best of 13.5. Returning in the intermediates are Prairie View's Lynn Gamble, fourth; Alabama's Scott, sixth; Michigan State's Judi Brown, seventh, and Houston's Rachel Clary, 10th.

High Jump Disa Gisladdottir returns at Alabama to defend her No. 1 spot, and Ohio has Frances Daniell, who tied for fifth. Brigham Young has Julie Watar, 6-0; Drake has Anne Erpenbeck, who was injured last year but has jumped 6-0, and Texas Southern has Sybil Reddick, who has cleared 6-0. The field is wide

Long Jump -- The top five scorers from the NCAA meet last year are back, including Jennifer Innis, the defending champion from Los Angeles State. The others are UCLA's Joyner; Houston's Carol Lewis, third; Kansas' Halcyon McKnight, fourth, and North Texas State's Donna Thomas fifth. Also keep an eye on Georgia's Kathy Rankin, 20-113/4, and Missouri's Kellee Eubanks, 20-5.

Weight Throws Elaine Sobansky, of Penn State and the No. 3 shot putter from last year, is in top contention. She also is No. 3 in the current U.S. rankings. Others in the shot put include Indiana's Annette Bohach, seventh last year, Brigham Young's Julic Jones, 10th; Kansas State's Stine Lerdahl, 11th, and Long Beach State's Peggy Pollack, 12th. In the discus, Arizona State's Leslie Deniz, No. 2 in the NCAA meet last year, is ranked No. 1 on the U.S. list now. Also back are Stanford's Carol Cady, fourth; Alabama's Pia Iacova, fifth; San Diego State's Laura DeSnoo, ninth, and Brigham Young's Jones, 11th.

Javelin -Oregon's Hughes is the top returnee. She was second last year. Her teammate, Sally Harmon, was third. Houston's Dana Olson was sixth: Washington's Deanne Carr, seventh; California's Kristen Engle, eighth; UCLA's Ray, ninth, and Arizona State's Dodic Campbell, 12th.

Heptathlon-UCLA's Joyner and Ray probably will dominate the collegiate scene. San Diego State returns Carrie McLaughlin, and she was third last year. The other top returning scorers are Oregon State's Sonya Crowther, seventh; Tennessee's Chester, and Southern Cal's Kerry Zwait

UCLA's Jeannette Bolden

Carter, a junior, owns two indoor and two outdoor titles in the shot put and was second in the discus in 1981. He missed last year because of a football injury.

Southern Methodist returns the two best hammer throwers in the country. Richard Olsen has won the last two NCAA titles, and Robert Weir has finished second twice. Additionally, Anders Hoff finished fourth in 1981 and eighth last year. The Mustangs should dominate the hammer as Washington State should the steeplechase.

Sophomore Roald Bradstock was fourth in the javelin as a freshman a year ago. Henry Andrade was sixth in the high hurdles last year but may be out with an injury in 1983, and Connor returns to defend his triple jump title.

McLaughlin has added to his pointscoring potential with several 400meter runners, and he hopes this will help in the relays as well.

Leslie Brooks, a junior with a 45.96 best, leads the list of sprinters, along with Russell Mitchell, the national junior college champion, and Russell Carter.

Mitchell also has reached nearly 26 feet in the long jump and is the junior college title holder in that event as well.

Even if Andrade cannot compete in the high hurdles, the Mustangs added intermediate hurdler Sven Nylander, a freshman who won the European championship and has run 49.63.

Tennessee was second in the NCAA meet last year; however, the Volunteers have lost David Patrick, who won the intermediate hurdles and ran on the 1,600-meter relay team, and Mike Miller, who was third in both the 100 and 200

However, coach Stan Huntsman still has Willic Gault, second in the 100 and high hurdles last year; Greg Neal and David Siler, third and sixth in the triple jump last year; Richey Pittman, third in the 1981 steeplechase, and Steve Pie, eighth in the decathlon a

Oregon has the Crouser brothers, and that can mean a lot of points. Dean won both the shot and discus last year but will have to contend with SMU's Carter in 1983. Brian captured the javelin title

UCLA also will give the Pacific-10 Conference fits. The Bruins return Steve McCormack, eighth in the NCAA 5,000 last year; Marcus Allen, seventh in the high hurdles, and John Brenner, ninth in the shot put.

The leader of the Bruin corps is Del Davis, coholder of the collegiate high jump record at 7-71/4.

Southern California returns Darwin Cook, fifth in the 100, and Dave Kenworthy, who won the NCAA pole vault competition last year.

California returns Tom Downs, third in the NCAA 5,000 in 1982; Ross Alexander, who has placed sixth in the pole vault the last two years; Dave Porath, third in the shot put and ninth in the discus, and Bruce Parker, 12th in the shot put in 1982.

From top to bottom, the Pacific-10 will be tough in 1983.

Just as tough will be the Southwest Athletic Conference, where Southern Methodist will have to do battle with Houston, Texas, Arkansas and Baylor for the conference championship.

Houston no longer has Stanley Floyd; however, the Cougars return Mark McNeil, who was fourth in the 100 last year, and Anthony Ketchum, who won the indoor 400 a year ago.

The Cougars also have Cletus Clark, ninth in the high hurdles last vear, and Brian Stanton and Marshall Broadway, seventh and eighth in the high jump.

Texas will rely on Sam Sitonik, sixth in the steeplechase last year; Desmond Morris, fourth in the high jump; Oskar Jakobsson, fourth in the shot put and sixth in the discus, and Einar Vilhjalmsson, fifth in the javelin.

Arkansas lost most of its points but returns Mike Conley, who was second in the long jump. Returning to the squad after missing 1982 is football player Stanley Redwine, who was fourth in the indoor 600 last year.

Baylor is counting on a healthy Zeke Jefferson to help in the sprints and the mile relay. Paul Montgomery was third in the intermediate hurdles a year

On an event-by-event basis, here are some of the leaders to watch in 1983:

100-, 200-Meter Dashes-The list of top speedsters is longer than the sprints they run. Added to the ones mentioned earlier should be Texas A&M's Rod Richardson, seventh in the 100: Rice's Vince Courville, 10th in the 100; Ala hama's Calvin Smith, second in the 200, and Emmitt King; Michigan State's Elliott Tabron, eighth in the 200. Rising to the top of the list may be Georgia's Herschel Walker.

400-Meter Dash-Alabama returns Cedric Vaughans, third in the NCAA meet last year just ahead of Tabron. Other top performers are Carlton Young, Villanova, seventh; Sunder Nix, Indiana, ninth; Sunday Uti, Iowa State; Marcus Sanders, Michigan State, and Howard Henley Arizona State, 1981 runner-up.

800-Meter Run-The event is up for grabs. which may be a plus for Arkansas' Redwine or California's Mike White, who was a redshirt last year. Alabama will try to qualify William Wuyke, who has run 1:45.75. Virginia's Ray Brown, third last year, is the top returning NCAA scorer. Also back is Villanova's John Marshall, who was seventh last year.

1,500-Meter Run-Oregon State's Mark Fricker, third last year, is the top returning scorer Villanova will count on Marcus O'Sullivan. eighth last year, to finish higher. Auburn returns Sergio Oaxaca, who was 12th a year ago. Arkansas' Frank O'Mara could make it tough on every one with a 3:39.80 best.

Steeplechase -- In addition to Tuwei, Ngatia and Sitonik, there are four other returning scorers. Arizona has Jeff Hess, seventh last year, and the Wildcats recruited Bob Ingram, the state junior college champion the last two years. New Mexico returns Ibrahim Hussein, 10th last year; and Clemson returns Hans Kocleman, who was eighth.

5,000-, 10,000-Meter Runs-Texas-El Paso and Washington State likely will dominate the two events. A new name among the leaders could be Florida's Keith Brantly, who has turned in the top 19-year-old time in the world in the 10,000.

Hurdles-There is a lot of power returning in addition to Gault and Montgomery, the top returnees in the highs and intermediates, respectively. Rutgers has Gene Norman, third in the highs: Villanova has Rodney Wilson, who was fifth. Karl Smith from Texas was eighth last year Houston returns Clark in the highs and added Greg Johnson in the intermediates. Johnson was the California junior college champion in 1982.

High Jump. The qualifying standard went up three-quarters of an inch from last year to 7-3, but the list of those who have cleared it may be going up even farther. The top four jumpers from last year return. Add Navy's Leo Williams to the list of Ottey, Davis and Harken. Alabama's Rod Rudolph was sixth. Also to be added to the list are UCLA's Lee Balkin (7-41/4) and Arkansas State's Doug Shouse (7-41/4). Iowa State may have the next superstar in freshman Brian Tietjens, who has already cleared 7-5.

Pole Vault-Southern California has Kenworthy back, but almost everyone else returns as well. Kenworthy won last year at 17-113/4; but Kansas State's Doug Lytle, second last year, already has gone 18-11/4, and Indiana's Dave Volz, third last year, has cleared 18-103/4 Kansas' Jeff Buckingham has vaulted 18-4, and Oklahoma State's Joe Dial has cleared 18-43/4.

Long Jump-Last year's winner, Arizona's Vance Johnson, returns, along with nine more of the top 12 finishers. The most likely contenders are Arkansas' Conley, Western Kentucky's Steve Bridges, Kansas State's Veryl Switzer, Kansas Warren Wilhoite and Texas Tech's Thomas

Triple Jump-Behind Connor in the triple jump are Middle Tennessee State's Eddie Loyd. second last year; Fresno State's Henry Ellard, and Arizona State's Deon Mayfield, all of whom scored last year. Add to the group Kansas' Sanya Owolabi, who won the 1980 indoor championship and was second outdoors

Weight Throws-Carter and Crouser probably will battle it out for the top spots in the country all season. Also look for Boston's Art McDermott in the shot put. Houston's Rick Meyer in the discus and Boston's Declan Hegarty in the hammer Iavelin Florida's John Amabile joins Brian Crouser, Babits, Bradstock and Vilhjalmsson as the top returning point scorers. Joining the group could be Oregon State's Rich Wolfe and Clem son's John Seybold.

Decathlon-There are several good decathle tes returning, including New Mexico's Marty Nicbauer, North Carolina State's Fidelis Obikwu and Tennessee's Pie, in addition to Washington's Mike Ramos and Steve Erickson

Division III basketball tournaments begin

Before the season started, Lane coach Willie Shaw, who also is chair of the NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Committee, predicted that the division's 1983 final four could very well be entirely different from last

That prediction is beginning to look more and more accurate. Only 1982 runner-up Potsdam State appears to have a shot at repeating. Defending champion Wabash and fourth-place Stanislaus State are struggling through rebuilding years, and third-place Brooklyn now is in Division 1.

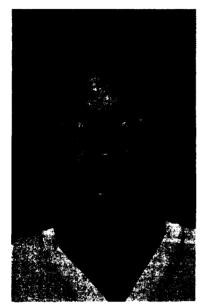

All of which could open the door for Scranton, Roanoke, Hope, Grove City or St. Andrews. That group represents the division's top five in the February

No. 1 Scranton, which took over the top spot earlier in the month, will hope to reach the final four March 18 and 19 at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan, on the strength of its quickness. With front-line height of 6-6, 6-4 and 6-4, the Royals are not counting on overpowering anyone.

'We're an extremely quick, transition type of team," Scranton coach Bob Bessoir said. "We're small, but we have a high-powered offense. We play a continuous-pressure defense. If we get into a controlled game, we can get hurt by our lack of size and bulk."

Bessoir, who has coached the Royals to seven appearances in the eightyear history of the Division III championship, found the answer to many of his problems literally in his own back yard. Son Bill, who played one year at South Carolina before transferring home, is Scranton's leading scorer with a 17.5 average.

At 6-6, Bessoir also is Scranton's tallest player; however, his father has used him as a swingman. Bill Bessoir's development has enabled thirdteam all-America Tom Kosin to move into a relief role, where he is averaging 10 points a game as one of the division's better sixth men. Junior forward

Bishop's Shannon Lilly

Jeff Jones, averaging in double figures in scoring and rebounding, has been another key for Scranton.

Scranton's No. 1 ranking hardly is a guarantee of a final-four appearance,

"We're ranked No. 1 right now, but there are some great teams around the country that I've heard about," Bessoir

Two teams that occupied the top spot earlier in the season-Hamilton and Buffalo State—drew Bessoir's praise. Scranton and Hamilton split a pair of games earlier; Buffalo State's victories over Canisius and Niagara, both Division I schools, created quite a stir in Division III circles.

While Bessoir may have to worry about Buffalo State, he will not have to lose sleep about a third meeting with Hamilton. The Continentals do not participate in postseason basketball competition

Roanoke, which had lost only an overtime game to Catholic as of mid-February, is looking for its third straight Division III tournament bid under head coach Ed Green. Hope has used a high-scoring offense to move to the top of the tough Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association race, and St. Andrews has dominated the Dixic Intercollegiate Athletic Conference behind the play of Will Petersen (27.1 points per game).

Another interesting conference race is coming to a conclusion in the Ohio

Athletic Conference, where Wittenberg, Capital and Muskingum are ranked in the nation's top 20. In all, 14 conferences will receive automatic berths in the 32-team field, with the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference receiving two berths.

Schools such as Grove City, Bishop and Wisconsin-Whitewater should be able to claim at-large bids. Bishop's chances of claiming a national championship will rest on guard Shannon Lilly, the division's top scorer (35.2) points per game), field-goal shooter (71.9 percent) and free-throw marksman (91.4 percent).

Division III men's regional play will be held March 3-5, followed by quarterfinal action March 12. Here is a look at the teams under consideration for the 1983 championship, with season records as of February 14:

Northeast-Bridgewater State (Massachusetts) (17-3), Clark (Massachusetts) (16-3), Massachusetts-Boston (16-5), Norwich (13-6) and Rhode Island College (13-6).

New York-Buffalo State (14-4). Hartwick (13-6), Ithaca (15-4), Potsdam State (17-5) and Union (New York) (14-2).

Middle Atlantic--Grove City (19-2), Mora vian (18-4), Scranton (19-3), Susquehanna (18-6), Western Maryland (16-5) and Widener (17-6). South Atlantic--John Carroll (14-4), Mont clair State (15-5), New Jersey Tech (14-6), Roanoke (22-1). Upsala (15-6) and William Paterson

South-Centre (14-8), LeMoyne-Owen (16-5). North Carolina-Greensboro (16-6), North Carolina Wesleyan (16-6), Rust (20-3) and St. Andrews (21-2)

Great Lakes-Albion (14-5), Capital (17-5),

Hope (16-2), Muskingum (16-5), Ohio Northern (16-6) and Wittenberg (18-4).

Midwest -- Millikin (17-5), Monmouth (Illinois) (14-4), St. Norbert (15-4), William Penn (15-5) and Wisconsin-Whitewater (17-4)

West -Bishop (17-5), Nebraska Wesleyan (13-8) and Sonoma State (13-9).

'We had to eliminate some of our intercollegiate programs to survive, and the 12 that remain have been prioritized into levels," he explained. Sports at level No. 2 receive fixed financing; they get a budgeted amount of money to work with for the entire

"Level No. 1 sports are those we feel should compete nationally, like football, men's and women's basketball, and women's gymnastics. Each year, it seems like we must whittle away more and more. I have to be concerned about every little dime.

'The coaches don't like it; nobody likes it," Hart said. "But when it comes to ticket prices, fund-raising activities and marketing, there is only so far you can go.

'We ask our coaches what they need, not necessarily what they want," said Louis G. McCullough, director of athletics at Iowa State University. "Sometimes there can be a big differ-

"We're lucky," he continued. "We have everything paid for, and we sponsor 21 sports. But, I also know that we are the exception and not the rule. We have not left very much unturned. We are getting into scholarship endowments, have seen attendance increase from 24,000 to 51,000 in the last decade and do all of our own merchandis-

54 hours of LSU sports are broadcast via cable to around 17,000 homes in Baton Rouge and to many more through other cable systems around the

"We're excited about its potential not only for the financial possibilities but also for the increased exposure for the entire LSU athletic program. Football and basketball are not the only two sports we telecast. We already have produced 80 shows.

'We are trying to minimize expenses without imposing the kind of austerity that can hurt this program, Responsibility seems to be the byword in the philosophy of Milo R. Lude as he heads the athletic program at the University of Washington. "I remind all of our budget heads that this is a time to be very prudent and conscientious," he explained. "They must try to avoid spending money they simply do not or will not have.

And despite the fact that we are self-sustaining," Lude continued, "we face indirectly the state-imposed cutbacks that other units experience. The upkeep of our physical plant is just one area that suffers when the crew responsible is trimmed or has its hours reduced.

The situation is familiar for Hugh D. Hindman, director of athletics at Ohio State University. "We use equipment here a little longer than we used to, and our physical plant has been forced to cut its services because of the financial situation.

'We don't have to retrench funds," Hindman continued, "but I will have to be a better manager for the balance of the year.

A few hours south of Columbus at East Tennessee State University, athletic director Doug Messer finds himself talking about the same kinds of

'So far, we have had no reduction in funds," he said. "But a year ago, the legislature basically told us, 'Here is a level of funding for you that we are committed to, but we doubt there will be any increases.

"How do you make up the difference?" Messer asked. "If private giving cannot meet our income demands. then I have to look at every alternative , every possible avenue to a sound financial base

'Staff combinations are a possibility; maybe you only have one coach for both your men's and women's tennis teams," Messer offered, "Maybe you reduce grants from full to partial . . . maybe you have to terminate some sports.

"Those are not the kinds of things I like to think about," he said, "but you have to consider all the variables and try to come up with the best solution."

When institutions come together, as they must in a conference, the problems can loom larger. "The geographic parameters of our conference are such that I, as commissioner, have some very real financial concerns," said Richard D. Martin of the Missouri Valley Conference.

"I don't feel like I am under the gun every minute of every day like many athletic directors must; however, when conference obligations call for New Mexico State to travel all the way to Illinois State for a league game, there are some serious concerns.

"There are things we can do at the conference level to try to help our members get a break," Martin continued. "We have gone to divisional play within the league, and that has eased things some.

"Basketball teams and some football teams travel to road games the day of the contest to cut costs," he said. "Many different things have combined to place a real burden on our institutions.

"Any commissioner will tell you that conferences today are as concerned with the financial implications of their decisions as member institutions are with their own financial management.

And when budget time rolls around at state-supported institutions, another factor comes into consideration . . politics. "The department submits a budget, which becomes part of the institution's budget that is submitted to the regents," explained Tom Parac, director of athletics at Montana State University.

That budget is different from the governor's budget, and he usually has financial analysts with their own idea of what the budget should be.

"Until the war is over, the battles are fought and the smoke clears, we don't have any idea of the kind of budget we will have to work within. Our legislature is in session right now," Parac continued, "and if I want to talk to our president, I have to call him at the state house in Helena.

You always have people battling for money, and two years ago the legislature took the stand that education should be up front for consideration," Parac explained, "But this time the general feeling is that it's not education's turn.

"Athletics is not a separate entity here," Parac pointed out. "We are growing as the university as a whole is growing, and we can't expect to be in on the good without being in on the problems.

"There is nothing like winning to provide ways to make up the difference," Parac concluded. "But we all have to work hard. Those who stay a half-step ahead will have a chance to make it.

the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan null and void. A decision is expected soon.

The panel members agreed that proliferation of local telecasts eventually could destroy network participation, leading to consortiums competing for television revenue and possible breakups of major conferences.

O'Malley said the acceptance of the current NCAA television package by major advertisers and affiliated stations was very good last year because it was "well-administered in terms of balance, exposure and the money paid

O'Malley said no controls or a plan that was weak would alter the base of college football television for a long time. He is not in favor of a plan that would require experimentation.

"Advertisers have so many other places to go," O'Malley said. "They (advertisers) are hard to sell on an unknown package, and if we cannot go to them with concrete plans, they may go elsewhere with their dollars.

'Monetarily, at this point, network television of sports has generated 95 percent of the dollars. We feel the very future of network television could be in jeopardy.

Hallock reported that income from the three networks that televised college football in 1982 reached $66.4 million, compared to $30 million in 1981. Hallock said that 1983 income would increase $8 million next year if the 1982-1985 television package were to stay in effect.

In addition to the threat of destroying national telecasts, Hallock said athletic conferences may be split because of the pressures on institutions to generate income from television

"I think if there is no NCAA-controlled television package, the pressures for splitting up of conferences are going to be greater than they have ever been," Hallock said. "There will be increasing pressure within the conferences on those who are not generating revenue.

Hanson, who said WTBS was happy with the results of last year's television package, speculated that proliferation of local telecasts and the accelerated growth of cable television could cause chaos among networks.

Scott, who has been active on Southeastern Conference committees that are discussing the ramifications of any court decision, supported Hanson's views.

"If there are no controls, we may have a rather chaotic situation," Scott said. "Without controls, we could go into a situation that is detrimental to many institutions. The rich could get richer and the poor could disappear. That is quite possible."

In addition to the television panel, eight football coaches spoke to the group of sportswriters. Coaches attending were Eddie Robinson, Grambling State University; Bill Yeoman, University of Houston; Rov Kidd, Eastern Kentucky University; Ken Hatfield, U.S. Air Force Academy; Jim Dickey, Kansas State University; George MacIntyre, Vanderbilt University; Terry Donahue, University of California, Los Angeles, and Hayden Fry, University of Iowa.

Defending the new format, Albert Buehler, track and field coach at Duke University and chair of the NCAA Men's Track and Field Committee, said, "There were too many people in the past. For example, we had 48 milerelay teams at last year's meet . . . and that's too many.'

Don Canham, director of athletics at the University of Michigan and the championships meet director, said, "Adding the women to the meet would make it too long if we retained all the events of the past, so we had to do something."

Canham estimated that last year's championships---with men onlydrew more than 500 athletes. This year, with the women added, he expects about 700 athletes.

"We wouldn't have time to accommodate everybody if we retained the status quo," Canham said. "We've got to be dealing with class athletes, not numbers."

Ellis mentioned that changing the qualification requirements for the meet will keep many athletes on edge until the final weekend before the championships, uncertain whether they will be competing.

"In the past, once an athlete made the qualifying standard, he knew he was in and could do his training accordingly," Ellis aid.

'Whenever the number of championship competitors is reduced, concerns naturally are expressed by the coaches in that sport," said Poppe. 'However, in this particular case, I believe the track and field committees and the standards committee acted in the best interests of the sport and the championships."

Athletic teams put on alert for red measles

A potential major outbreak of red measles on college campuses is causing concern among health officials who fear that traveling athletic teams and their followers unknowingly may transmit the virus to other areas.

'We have investigated 78 individual cases of the red measles on six different college campuses throughout the country," said Steve Barrett of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. "We are quite concerned that the constant movement of intercollegiate athletic teams provides an excellent vehicle for the transmission of the disease.

"There is no evidence that athletic teams are directly involved at this point," Barrett explained, "But athletic events, where a large number of people come together in a fairly confined area, are perfect settings for the transmission of this or any virus.

"While there is only a small percentage of people who are susceptible to the red measles in the population, that small percentage still can mean some pretty large numbers in terms of people who may be affected.

"A good measure of prevention is the most important factor at this point," Barrett continued. "We would hope that coaches and other athletic officials would check to make sure that every member of their traveling parties has been immunized; those who still are susceptible should be immunized with live measles virus vaccine as

Cases of measles have been confirmed at Purdue University and Indiana University, and probable cases have been reported at Michigan State University and Oregon State Univerrely solely on the Shimkus family, however. All five starters are averaging in double figures, with sophomore forward Terry Solema the second leading scorer (13.3 points per game).

Gault also should be able to count on the squad's tournament experience-Pittsburgh-Johnstown was a first-round loser in last year's Division II championship. Overall, however, the Mountain Cats may be a little green. There is not a senior in the starting lineup.

Pittsburgh-Johnstown's other main concern will be escaping the tough Mid-Atlantic region. Five teams in the division's top 20 are from the region, which consists solely of the state of Pennsylvania.

"I don't think there is any doubt that our region is the toughest in the country," said Gault.

The other Pennsylvania powers are independent Grove City and Middle Atlantic States Athletic Conference members Susquehanna, Elizabethtown and Scranton. Susquehanna, with a 20-0 record and a No. 3 national ranking, currently has the edge on Scranton (16-5, No. 6) and defending Division III champion Elizabethtown (14-3, No. 13) in the race for the Middle Atlantic Conference's automatic bid. Grove City will be leaning heavily on the talents of Jodie Imbrie, the division's leading scorer with a 30-point average.

Three other conferences will receive automatic bids--Chicago-Metro Conference, Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and Jersey Athletic Conference. The Massachusetts State College Athletic Conference, which was granted an automatic berth before the season, has lost that status following Framingham State's decision to drop the sport, leaving the league with just five members.

North Central (16-4, No. 8) appears to have a solid grip on the title in the Chicago-Metro. North Carolina-Greensboro (16-5, No. 9), the national runner-up last year, is battling Virginia Wesleyan and Christopher Newport in the Dixie Conference. One team from each of the division's eight regions will join the four automatic qualifiers and 20 at-large entries in the 32-team field. Regional play gets under way March 3-5. Quarterfinals will be played March 11 or 12; and Clark will host the final four March 18 and 19 in Worcester, Massa-
