Basketball rules changes approved

By James A. Sheldon
The NCAA News Staff

ALBUQUERQUE — The NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, meeting here April 4-5, passed rules changes in two significant areas — number of timeouts and intentional fouls.

The committee also passed stricter guidelines on rules experimentations and voted to conduct experiments next season only in five specific areas:

- 45-second shot clock left on for the entire game with no time counts, except 10-second and three-second counts.

- 45-second clock turned off for the last four minutes of the game, with all currently used counts still in effect.

- A three-point field goal from 19 feet, nine inches, measured from the center of the basket (similar to experiments conducted in the Big Ten, Southern and Atlantic 10 Conferences).

- Use of rear-boundary arc to minimize stalling.

- A marked coaching box similar to experiment used in the Southeastern Conference.

Following passage of Proposal No. 123 at the NCAA Convention last January, the rules committee now has control over rules used during regular-season play, including all experimentation.

In the past, the official NCAA men's rules could be enforced only during NCAA championship play.

"The number of experiments conducted last year helped us zero in on the areas we wanted to pursue," said Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the committee and athletic director at Springfield College. "The experiments conducted last year and the results of our surveys indicate an increasing interest in two areas—three-point plays and shot clocks."

"We're cutting down on the number of conferences conducting the experiments; but the rules committee is mindful that while we have an excellent code of rules, we always are willing to look at improvements for the

Division I summer meeting to be held in Kansas City

Planning for the first summer meeting of the NCAA Division I membership has been approved by the NCAA Administrative Committee, and voting allied conferences and independent representatives will be asked this week to attend the meeting and to submit suggestions for agenda items.

The meeting will be held Friday and Saturday, June 24-25, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

Each of the 35 Division I voting allied conferences will be invited to send two, three or four representatives, based on the conference's sponsorship of men's and women's conference programs.

The 17 Division I conferences offering both men's and women's programs will be invited to send one faculty athletic representative, one director of athletics, one primary woman administrator of athletics programs and the conference commissioner or executive officer.

Eleven Division I conferences sponsor programs for men only, and they will be invited to designate one faculty athletic representative, one director of athletics and the conference commissioner.

The seven Division I conferences offering only women's programs may designate one primary woman administrator of athletics programs and the conference commissioner to attend the meeting.

The invitation to conference commissioners or executive directors is limited to those serving full-time as the salaried chief operating officer of the conference.

In addition, the Administrative Committee will invite six representatives of the 19 Division I independent institutions—two directors of athletics, two faculty representatives and two primary women administrators.

The American Football Coaches Association and the National Association of Basketball Coaches will be asked to select 20 head coaches of Division I football and basketball programs, respectively, with the understanding that each will designate not more than two coaches in a sport from the members of any one allied conference.

Also in attendance will be the 22 members of the Division I Steering Committee and the NCAA president

NCAA committee approves special football TV dates

Although the future of college football on television still rests with the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver, the NCAA Football Television Committee proceeded with plans for the 1983 season at its April 3-4 meeting in Albuquerque, New Mexico, by assigning eight special dates for the upcoming season.

Television coverage of the 1983 college football season will begin on ABC September 3 when UCLA meets Georgia in a national, prime-time telecast. Other special dates assigned to ABC were Army vs. Navy November 25 (late time slot), Texas vs. Texas A&M November 26 (national, early time slot) and Alabama vs. Auburn December 3 (national, late time slot).

The Notre Dame-Miami (Florida) game September 24 will be telecast nationally on CBS at 9 p.m., EST. Other special dates approved for CBS were Alabama vs. Boston College November 25 (national), Nebraska vs. Oklahoma November 26 (regional, late time slot) and Florida vs. Florida

AIAW appeals ruling of district court judge

The Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women has appealed the February 28 ruling by U.S. District Court Judge Thomas P. Jackson that the NCAA committed no violations of the antitrust laws when it began offering championships and other programs in women's intercollegiate athletics.

The appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit was filed March 29, and the NCAA was notified the following day.

Judge Jackson stated in his 46-page opinion in February that the AIAW had failed to prove its claims against the NCAA. His decision said the AIAW's decision to suspend its operations was the result of legal competition, rather than any illegal practices by the NCAA, and that there had been no conspiracy on the part of the NCAA leadership in adopting the governance plan and offering programs and services for women's athletics.

According to NCAA legal counsel, the district court clerk is to transmit the record of the case to the appeals court within 40 days of the filing of the appeal.

After that, the AIAW has 40 days to file its principal brief, and the NCAA then has 30 days for its filing. The AIAW has 14 days after the NCAA filing to reply to the NCAA brief.

It is not likely that oral arguments will be heard by the appeals court until the court's fall term, September to December, and there is no way to determine when a decision might be reached, according to counsel.

AIAW originally brought the suit October 9, 1981.

Ivy League not afraid to mix brains, brawn

By Furman Bisher
Atlanta Journal

Nothing like this has happened in the Ivy League, where the Cabots speak only to the Lodges, since Herman Hickman arrived at Yale from a mountainside in Tennessee. It wasn't a direct trip — Herman made a few detours on the way — but these interludes never cost him an ounce of ample blubber, nor did they dilute his catfish drawl. Yale didn't hire him for his personality, nor did Yale hold it against him.

Yale was mainly interested in a fellow who could coach young men and beat Harvard. It didn't check all the limbs in his family tree, wasn't interested in whether he drove a Jaguar or wore an ascot and didn't care about the origin of his accent. How could Yale have known that a man that enormous, who had grown up on pork chops and turnip greens, could recite all the verses of "Paradise Lost" and quote from Shakespeare on fitting occasions? This Southern boy coached the first Yale team captained by a black player, Levi Jackson.

It almost was as startling recently when Cornell University, high above Cayuga's waters, reached into the professional leagues and plucked a man to coach its sturdy students of football. It wasn't at all repulsed by dealing with a man who played for the minted coin. Each year, the Ivy League shamelessly graduates muscular alums into the professionals. Two of its grads wore the armor of the Washington Redskins and one of Miami's in this year's Super Bowl. And what Ivy Leaguer is to scoff at $70,000 for a day's honest labor?

Playing football for money does not necessarily smear the reputation of a fellow who might later teach the game to the scholars of the Ivy League. It is hardly ever that one comes from as far back up the pike as Maxie Baughan, who grew up among the steel mills of Bessemer, Alabama, then earned his way through Georgia Tech backing up lines.

Bessemer was as industrial as Gary, Indiana. Maxie's father was a foreman in the Tennessee Coal & Iron plant until his life suddenly came to an end on the job. He was showing some young men around the plant, ironically stressing safety precautions, when stricken by a heart attack, falling to his death among some high-voltage wires during his son's second season as a professional.

Several years Maxie Baughan plied his trade. He backed up lines for the Philadelphia Eagles, Los Angeles Rams and Washington Redskins and then coached, including two seasons back on campus at Georgia Tech. There is a particularly strong case of on this redheaded son of the Alabama South as its next coach, to follow such historic figures as Gloomy Gil Dobie, Carl Snavely and Lefty James?

"I understand that it was Tom Matte. I'd known Tom in Baltimore, and he is the friend of an influential of things started to add up.

"I'd always had a secret desire to coach at one of the service academies. I like the discipline, the values, the straight and hard-line course. Cornell fills the same purpose. Young men come here not to prepare for the pros, but to get an education. This is a great institution, and I like the challenge."

There was a trace of misgiving among his Cornell interviewers that he might be using the situation to train himself for a head-coaching job in the NFL. "What if, after two years, you are 20-0, and an NFL team comes to you with an offer?" they asked.

"I didn't come here to prepare myself for another job," he assured Cornell. "I plan to be here a long time." He trusts them to remember that if, after two seasons, he is 0-20.

It isn't out of the traditional mold, this amalgamation of the boy from the Southern milltown and the Ivy League school. This rugged linebacker from Georgia Tech played himself into the pros and through 13 seasons of sweat and drudge and glory. Ed Marinaro was Cornell's last product for the NFL. Maxie Baughan comes now, one might say, as a partial payment in return.

Columnary Craft

coincidence that when Maxie has his coming out as Cornell's coach next season, the Big Red will play Pennsylvania on Franklin Field, where he played his first game as a player for hire.

It may strike one as peculiar that in the last game Baughan's predecessor coached, Cornell upset Penn in the most devastating way. The 23-0 defeat cost Penn sole possession of the Ivy League championship, and though it was Cornell's fourth victory in a row, it followed six defeats in a row and couldn't save Bob Blackman's job. Blackman was steeped in the traditions of the Ivy culture, having been the coach at Dartmouth 16 seasons before succumbing to the lure of the Big Ten.

But how did Cornell come to settle

Cornell alumnus in New York. Tom recommended me," Baughan said. "That's how it started. I took the job, I might say, without ever seeing Cornell."

Baughan was busy helping the Detroit Lions prepare for the play-offs, so a Cornell emissary came to visit him. He then sent his wife to look over the town of Ithaca and the campus above the lake storied in alma mater.

"She came back ecstatic. She'd met everybody from the president to the equipment manager," Baughan said. "It became an exciting adventure for us both, and here we are, away from the metropolitan life and the clamor of the NFL."

The players' strike had its effect. "I won't say I was disillusioned, but a lot

Gavitt against expanding tournament field to 64 teams

David R. Gavitt, commissioner
Big East Conference
USA Today

"I'm personally not excited about 64 teams in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. I worry about it diluting the field and hurting our relationship with the (32-team) NIT, which has been a stepping stone for many of the schools that make our tournament.

"The best formula is 48 teams — 24 automatic qualifiers from conferences and 24 at-large teams. Maybe some of the weaker conferences that meet the minimum automatic-qualifying requirements could rotate automatic berths, but we wouldn't freeze anyone out.

"Going to two networks also is a possibility. We went to a second network in the regular season (CBS joined NBC) two years ago, and it's worked well in exposing more teams to parts of the country. Maybe it would work for the tournament."

Maybe he's a little scared. I'm not chasing a legend, so it doesn't bother me when people say that. It was an honor just to be considered for this job and a double honor to follow him.

"But I don't consider myself as filling his shoes or taking his place, and positioning, beginning in sports. You don't want to play the wrong kind of schools, because it might put you in the wrong class in someone's view."

J.W. Peltason, president
American Council on Education
The New York Times

"Intercollegiate athletics do make a contribution. It is one of the few integrating things in our society. Male and female, Black and white, conservative and liberal, humanist and scientist all get together. And then there is the Greek ideal of strong mind and healthy body. The problems are in exploiting young people, in creating hypocritical attitudes for all students."

George Raveling, basketball coach
Washington State University
The Washington Post

"The college game was doing better than ever before we put in these rules. My feeling is, 'If it ain't broke, don't fix it.' We shouldn't have a mechanical device (shot clock) legislating the game.

"Three-point play? Why stop there? Maybe we should have a four-, five-, six- and 10-point play, too. Maybe we should have judges sitting on the sidelines, holding up cards that decide the degree of difficulty for each shot. You know, maybe give 10 points for one of those nice disco moves."

Opinions Out Loud

Ray Perkins, director of athletics

"Maybe the guy who says he wants to succeed the guy who succeeds a legend isn't quite up to the challenge.

I'm not dumb enough to try. It's a great challenge to follow him and still have success — and we will.

"But anybody who tries to 'replace' Coach Bryant is not very smart, not very intelligent. In my mind, no one else compares to him as a coach or as a man. I never heard him say anything that didn't make sense. I can't say that about anyone else I've ever been around. He had a pretty good track record, and you can probably count on the fingers of one hand the people he coached who were failures in life. Find me someone else to say that about."

Questions/Answers

Q. Has the number of women attending NCAA Conventions increased since the adoption of the "governance plan"?

A. Yes. When the plan was adopted at the 1981 Convention, 158 women were among the 1,168 delegates representing active and allied members. The number of women was exactly the same at the 1982 Convention (158 of 1,180 active/allied delegates), but at the 1983 Convention in San Diego, the number of women jumped 57 percent to 248. Women represented 18.1 percent of 1,373 delegates from active and allied members in San Diego.

Wolfpack upsets Cougars for men's championship

North Carolina State's two-point victory over No. 1-ranked Houston for the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship April 4 in Albuquerque, New Mexico, ranks as the greatest upset in collegiate basketball, at least since the victory by unheralded Texas Western (Texas-El Paso) over Kentucky for the 1966 title.

North Carolina State, ranked 16th in a final-season national poll, won in the last two seconds of play when Lorenzo Charles grabbed a missed shot and dunked the ball for the 54-52 victory. It was the second NCAA championship for the Wolfpack and the first for coach Jim Valvano, who is in his third year at the institution. North Carolina State won its first NCAA title in 1974 under coach Norm Sloan.

The Wolfpack also became the first team in the history of the tournament to win the championship in a season in which a champion had 10 losses. The old record was nine by Indiana in 1981.

After the victory, Valvano, usually talkative and much quoted by the media, said, "It's awesome. I'm almost speechless. I've got no funny lines. I'm simply in awe of this team."

After having been 9-7 at one point in the season, the Wolfpack finished 26-10 and won its last 10 games in a row, coming from behind in seven of eight contests.

Houston sustained only its third loss of the season after 32 victories.

Houston built a 52-46 lead with 3:19 remaining in the game. The Cougars outscored the Wolfpack, 17-2, early in the second half to overcome a 33-25 first-half deficit. The Wolfpack had led by 10 points on two occasions during the first half.

In the final three minutes, Sidney Lowe scored from 20 feet, and Dereck Whittenburg hit two long-range shots to tie the score at 52.

The Wolfpack held the ball in the final 40 seconds until Whittenburg took a 30-foot desperation shot. It missed but was recovered by Charles and dunked for the winning margin with two seconds remaining.

Thurl Bailey led the Wolfpack with 15 points, and Whittenburg had 14.

Houston's Akeem Olajuwon, who was named the tournament's most valuable player, scored 20 points for Houston and gathered 18 rebounds. Joining Olajuwon on the all-tournament team were Bailey, Whittenburg, Lowe and Louisville's Milt Wagner.

Division I women's basketball

Trojans' comeback nips Louisiana Tech

Thanks to a pressing defense, Southern California overcame an 11-point half-time deficit to defeat defending champion Louisiana Tech, 69-67, April 3 at the Division I Women's Basketball Championship in Norfolk, Virginia.

Cheryl Miller, named the tournament's most valuable player, led the comeback charge for the Lady Trojans. Southern Cal finally caught the Lady Techsters with 7:10 remaining, and Miller gave the Lady Trojans the lead for good at 5:41 on a 15-foot jump shot.

"It goes back to the fact that we're a fast-break team. You don't need a press then," said Southern California coach Linda Sharp. "But today we needed it."

"I think we really surprised them with the press. I don't think they were talking about the press at half time."

Another key to Southern California's victory was the defensive work on Louisiana Tech's Janice Lawrence in the second half. Lawrence scored 17 points in the first half as the Lady Techsters built their 11-point half-time margin; however, the Southern Cal defense held Lawrence to three points in the second half, including a key 7½-minute stretch when she did not score.

"We could not expect to shoot as well in the second half as we did in the first half," Louisiana Tech co-head coach Leon Barmore said. "You have to give Southern Cal credit for its press. We did not handle it very well at critical times. We certainly can't win if Janice Lawrence doesn't get the basketball."

Miller, a 6-1 freshman, led the Lady Trojans with 27 points, including 11 of 14 from the free-throw line. She also led her team with nine rebounds. Lawrence's 20 points led Louisiana

Tech; and Jennifer White scored 18 points, including eight-of-nine shooting from the floor.

Along with Miller on the all-tournament team were teammate Paula McGee, Lawrence and White of Louisiana Tech, and 6-8 senior Anne Donovan of Old Dominion, which lost to Louisiana Tech, 71-55, in the semifinals. Southern Cal advanced by defeating Georgia, 81-57.

Seminole placed on probation

Florida State University has been placed on probation for a one-year period by the NCAA Committee on Infractions as a result of violations occurring in the conduct of the men's intercollegiate basketball program.

The NCAA penalty does not include sanctions, and the university remains eligible for television appearances and postseason competition in basketball.

The NCAA's action follows the university's own investigation of its men's basketball program in 1982 after public charges of irregularities by a former player.

"The NCAA's inquiries in the case confirmed that two violations of NCAA regulations occurred, one in the 1978-79 academic year and the other during the 1981-82 academic year," said William L. Matthews, acting chair, NCAA Committee on Infractions. "One violation related to improper transportation and entertainment for an enrolled student to travel to the hometown of a prospect to assist in recruiting. These arrangements involved an assistant coach who no longer is associated with the university."

"The second violation," Matthews noted, "concerned arrangements for a basketball team member to receive a suit, although available information did not support a finding that the violation was intentional or that basketball coaching staff members were aware of the matter. Accordingly, the committee determined that a one-year probationary period should be imposed in part to express the committee's concern with the violations, but also to emphasize the university's continuing responsibility to closely monitor its intercollegiate athletic program."

IOC drops anti-boycott plea

An attempt by the International Olympic Committee to secure an agreement from United Nations members that they would not boycott future Olympics has been dropped.

Following the 36-nation boycott of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, the IOC had attempted to marshal United Nations support for the Olympic movement. In effect, the IOC asked U.N. members to promise not to boycott future Olympics.

Canadian IOC member Richard Pound was appointed chairman of an IOC commission for the protection of the Olympic movement. Pound, however, said last week, "We feel that world conditions are not right for taking this matter any further at the present."

Player-of-the-year Sampson heads all-America selections

A pair of sophomores and three seniors make up the first-team Division I all-America squad recently announced by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

North Carolina's Michael Jordan and Georgetown's Patrick Ewing are the two underclassmen on the team, joining seniors Dale Ellis (Tennessee), John Paxson (Notre Dame) and Ralph Sampson (Virginia).

Sampson and Jordan were first-team selections this year on all four of the major all-America teams—NABC, United States Basketball Writers Association, Associated Press and United Press International. Ewing and Ellis were first-team selections on all but the UPI squad.

In addition to making all four all-America squads, Sampson also was busy collecting individual awards. The 7-4 center recently was named player of the year by both the USBWA and the NABC.

The USBWA award was the third straight for Sampson, a feat matched only by UCLA's Bill Walton (1972-1974). Sampson earned the NBC's Eastman Award for the second consecutive year to become the first player ever to receive that award more than once.

Following are the NABC selections for Divisions I, II and III:

Division I

First team—Michael Jordan, North Carolina; Patrick Ewing, Georgetown; Ralph Sampson, Virginia; Dale Ellis, Tennessee; John Paxson, Notre Dame.

Second team—Keith Lee, Memphis State; Sam Perkins, North Carolina; Steve Stipanovich, Missouri; Ennis Whatley, Alabama; John Sundvold, Missouri.

Third team—Wayman Tisdale, Oklahoma; Ted Kitchel, Indiana; Sidney Green, Nevada-Las Vegas; Randy Wittman, Indiana; Jeff Malone, Mississippi State.

Division II

First team—Earl Jones, District of Columbia; Michael Britt, District of Columbia; Keith Bennett, Sacred Heart; Joe Dickson, Merrimack; Bryan Vacca, Randolph-Macon.

Second team—Leonard Goggins, Cheyney State; Gary Monroe, Wright State; Rich Leonard, Central Connecticut State; Bob Reitz, Stonchill; Dwight Higgs, Kentucky Wesleyan.

Third team—Mario Elie, American International; Bill Rausch, Slippery Rock State; Larry Tucker, Lewis; Jerome Kersey, Longwood; Rhonie Wright, Sacred Heart.

Division III

First team—Leroy Witherspoon, Potsdam State; Ron Stewart, Otterbein; Shannon Lilly, Bishop; Tim O'Brien, Hartwick; Gerald Holmes, Roanoke.

Second team—John Colombo, John Carroll; Ron Evans, Hamilton; Bill Bessoir, Scranton; Chris Huff, Wittenberg; Lou DeRogatis, Widener.

Third team—Dan Trant, Clark (Massachusetts); Myron Dulkoski, Muskingum; Todd Hart, Ithaca; Harland Storey, Colby; Will Peterson, St. Andrews.

Center fielder gives meaning to 'sacrifice'

The "Me Generation" has a major influence in our society today, but some old-fashioned values are alive and well in the Chicago area.

Mike Huff is playing center field for the Northwestern baseball team after declining athletic grants in both football and baseball from several institutions outside the Chicago area. He chose to attend Northwestern after finding out, in the spring of his senior year at New Trier High School in suburban Wilmette, Illinois, that his sister had leukemia.

By the time Mike made his decision, Northwestern had closed its admissions for the fall of 1981. He did not let that deter him.

"Mike pursued Northwestern," said baseball coach Ron Wellman. "When he found out that admissions were closed, he went to see the university president. He made his case so well that the president agreed to admit him."

He played left field for the Wildcats as a freshman, batting .382 to lead the team in hitting. This year, he has moved to center field and is doing even better, batting .460 after 11 games.

And his sister is doing better as well.

"She is in the first stage of remission and is progressing well," Wellman said. "She is a big fan of Mike's and comes to most of our games."

A sophomore in Northwestern's arts and sciences school, Huff is popular with his teammates and appears to be comfortable in the situation. His decision to forego the athletic grants he was offered was one that many athletes would have found very difficult to make.

"I think the fact that he made that decision is indicative of the kind of person he is," Wellman said. "Not only is he interested in himself, but he also is interested in other people.

"There are not many 17-year-olds who could make that kind of decision, but Mike was able to sit back, analyze all the aspects and reach what was a very mature decision."

Huff's interest in other people starts with his family. As indicated by his choice, the Huffs are very close. In addition to his sister, Mike has a younger brother in whom he takes great interest.

"They are a very close family," Wellman said.

The baseball opportunity at Northwestern has enabled the Huffs to remain a very close family. Mike's hitting has not yet made the Wildcats a winner—they were 2-5 in the recent Riverside Baseball Invitational at the University of California, Riverside, and finished a Western trip with a 3-8 record—but he takes things a step at a time.

Georgia Tech to appeal ruling

The board of directors of the Georgia Tech Athletic Association will appeal a state court of appeals decision, which said that former Georgia Institute of Technology head coach Pepper Rodgers is entitled to benefits he lost when he was fired two years before his contract expired.

The association said it first would ask for a rehearing before the appeals court. If that is denied, the Association will petition the state supreme court to review the case.

In 1980, Rodgers filed a $331,000 suit against the association, contending he is entitled to compensation for perquisites such as profits from radio and television shows, summer football camps, the use of a new automobile, and tickets to professional sporting events.

Ivy coaches help fight illiteracy

Ivy League football coaches have affiliated as a group with Literacy Volunteers of America, an organization aimed at fighting illiteracy in the United States.

Frank Navarro, head coach at Princeton University, said, "As representatives of some of the most prestigious universities in the world, we have an obligation to become involved in positive social and educational programs that will benefit people of all ages."

"Our group has been searching for the right opportunity, and we have found it in Literacy Volunteers of America. They are fighting a problem that is solvable and that certainly relates to our roles as coaches and educators," Navarro said.

More than 26 million Americans are functionally illiterate, according to the Literacy Volunteers of America.

The LVA already has taught 60,000 people to read at a 10th grade level. According to the LVA, it requires 50 hours of volunteer effort to teach someone to read at that level.

John Eggert, chairman of the board of LVA, said, "Ivy League coaches have credibility. When they tell the nation there is a problem, people are going to listen."

"This is something we should have an interest in," said Joe Yukica, head coach at Dartmouth College, noting that the NCAA recently passed a rule requiring student-athletes to have a minimum score of 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test by 1986.

"We know some kids who are great athletes who are going to miss the opportunity to go to college because of that," Yukica said. "If we are going to do something about that, we've got to make those people more excited about reading."

Navarro said the coaches group has three major goals: "The first is awareness. We want people to know there is a problem and where they can help. Second, we want to involve other organizations. And we want to start personal initiatives in our own areas."

The Literacy Volunteers of America has 145 programs in 29 states. The organization has nearly 70,000 volunteers. It was founded by Ruth Colvin in Syracuse, New York in 1962.

States may lose Federal funds

Nine states have been threatened with cutoffs in Federal funds for higher education if they fail to make substantial progress toward desegregating their colleges and universities by the end of the 1983-84 academic year.

The order was given by Federal Judge John H. Pratt, and it marked the first time in a decade-long fight over college desegregation that a Federal judge has ordered the Department of Education to enforce specific deadlines.

The deadlines had been sought by the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which filed the original suit about 13 years ago.

Pratt ordered five states—Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Oklahoma and North Carolina—to submit plans by June 30, 1983, that would contain concrete steps toward desegregating by fall 1985. The judge gave Texas 45 days, and Pennsylvania and Kentucky were given until mid-summer to draw up acceptable plans or face fund cutoffs.

Virginia, which already has had a revised desegregation plan provisionally approved by the education department, was ordered to show progress toward carrying out the plan by September 1984 or face a fund cutoff. The plan, which was submitted in January by Gov. Charles S. Robb, is expected to cost the state $16 million over three years.

The NAACP Legal Defense Fund had argued that without threat of Federal sanctions, the education department would not move quickly enough to achieve desegregation.

Degree helps lifetime earnings

A bachelor's degree is worth more than $300,000 in extra lifetime earnings for men, but it is slightly less than half that figure for women, the Census Bureau reports.

A male, now 18, who eventually receives a college degree will earn $329,000 more during his lifetime than a male that age with only a high school diploma.

An 18-year-old woman who finishes college can expect only $142,000 more in lifetime earnings than a woman with only a high school education.

Lifetime earnings for a man with a degree are estimated at $1,190,000 compared to $861,000 for a man without a degree. A woman is expected to earn $523,000 with a degree and $381,000 with a high school diploma.

States boost pay for education

For the first time, states are paying more than half the cost of public education this year, according to a study by the National Education Association.

States now provide an average of 50.3 percent of public education revenue. The percentage 10 years ago was 40.7.

At the same time, the Federal share of funds for education has dropped to 7.4 percent, the lowest in a decade. The local share has dropped to 42.3 percent after reaching 51.4 percent 10 years ago.

Atlantic 10 Conference pursues television contract for basketball

The Atlantic 10 basketball conference, disappointed over its lack of television exposure this year, has hired a New York advertising agency to secure a television contract for the league.

"We have the William Morris Agency of New York working on it. We're working with the network as well as syndicators for a game-of-the-week format next year," says West Virginia Athletic Director Fred A. Schaus, who is chairman of the league's TV committee.

Schaus said West Virginia, which has its own Mountaineer sports network and also made four network appearances last season, was in "good shape." But he said the league as a whole was disappointed by its lack of television exposure this year.

A television contract is likely to be one of the chief topics of discussion at the league's spring meeting in June.

The Atlantic 10 formed last season by taking seven teams from the old Eastern 8 and adding Penn State, Temple and St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania). Pittsburgh dropped out of the Eastern 8 to join the Big East Conference.

Schaus said it would take time before the league can compete with the Atlantic Coast and Big East Conferences, which both have lucrative TV packages.

"In any new alignment, you have to feel your way," said Schaus. "It takes time. Many of the schools have excellent facilities. Some of the schools have excellent basketball recognition and are good basketball schools, but we need a couple of outstanding players, TV exposure and success in our nonconference games."

West Virginia, which won the conference tournament and joined league member Rutgers in the NCAA tournament, was the league's top draw last season, featuring guard Greg Jones, the Atlantic 10's co-MVP.

Even so, the Mountaineers and Temple drew only 4,712 fans to the 18,000-seat Philadelphia Spectrum for the conference championship game.

The semifinals and final attracted only 11,043, pointing out that the Atlantic 10 has a long way to go to catch up with the Big East and ACC, which were drawing sellout crowds at their tournaments in New York and Atlanta.

"We will sustain a loss," Atlantic 10 Commissioner Leland Byrd said of the tournament. "We were very disappointed in Philadelphia. The interest is there, there's good press in Philly, and Temple and St. Joseph's have a good following. I don't know what the answers are."

Byrd says the leading site for the next year's tournament is the Pittsburgh Civic Arena, which would be within easier driving distance for West Virginia fans. Schaus, however, says West Virginia will make a strong pitch to host the tournament itself, in Morgantown.

"In Morgantown, it would be assured of the best response of any place it would go," he said. "We'll make a pitch for it; if Pittsburgh is chosen, that's good, too."

TV in the News

Baseball revenues could increase

With attention focused on NBC-TV's recent $1 billion bid to televise major league baseball over the next five years, a dramatic increase in local television and radio revenues could do almost as much to sweeten baseball's pot.

The pending contract with NBC (and possibly with ABC-TV, as well) could mean between $6 million and $7 million per team per year beginning next season. Starting this season, however, a number of clubs will realize significant increases in local television and radio revenues.

According to Broadcasting magazine, the combined value of network and local television contracts this year is $153 million, about 30 percent more than in 1982 and more than four times as much as was realized 10 years ago. The advent of cable television agreements has accounted for most of that increase, according to the magazine.

Regional cable networks planned

At least five regional cable television networks could be launched next year, each focusing on major league baseball.

According to a recent article in Cablesports, Anheuser Busch, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals and in control of options on television rights for the Kansas City Kings, St. Louis Blues and St. Louis Steamers, is in the process of putting together a regional network. Owners of the Detroit Tigers, Boston Red Sox, Baltimore Orioles and Milwaukee Brewers also are examining the possibility of putting together regional networks.

The Tigers and Brewers, along with the Chicago White Sox, also are involved in Super Sports Network, a proposed national sports network. The Brewers and the Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association are partners in the Wisconsin All-Sports Network, which also will cover Marquette University and University of Wisconsin, Madison, athletic events.

Newsworthy

Who is the only player in Division I men's basketball history to play for two different schools in the Final Four?

Tournament sought for Garden

Frank McGuire, director of intercollegiate athletics for Madison Square Garden, has said he hopes to organize a preseason men's basketball tournament featuring four of the nation's top teams to be played at the start of the 1983-84 season in the New York arena.

He said Garden officials would like the event to be a three-day affair involving either conference champions or runners-up. He mentioned the Big East, Atlantic Coast, Southeastern and Metro Conferences as possible participants.

"We have to get permission from the NCAA, and we're working on that," McGuire said. "I've talked to two conferences and been encouraged by our conversations."

Amateur sports gets funding aid

The International Olympic Committee has announced plans to hand out $9.5 million this year to help amateur sports around the world.

The grant, which is obtained from selling television rights to the Olympic Games, marks a $1.5 million increase over the 1982 total. Most of the money will be channeled to developing countries, with $551,000 targeted for Africa and $500,000 for Asia. In addition, the IOC will give each national committee financial help in sending athletes to the 1984 summer and winter Olympics.

The IOC designates one-third of all television revenue for its own use and lets the host city keep the rest. From its share, the IOC allots one-third to the 26 international governing federations, distributes one-third to the national committees and keeps one-third.

Coaching institute planned for May

The Mid-America Coaching Institute for athletic directors, coaches, trainers and counselors will be held May 17-19 at the University of Oklahoma.

Topics will include managing drug/alcohol problems, motivation, and interpersonal and race relations. Each participant will qualify for 1.7 continuing education units. University credit also will be available.

More information can be obtained by contacting Vern Robertson, Chemical Dependency Studies, University of Oklahoma, 555 Constitution Avenue, Norman, Oklahoma 73037.

Professionals added to event

Professionals under the age of 20 will be allowed to compete in the demonstration tennis competition that will be part of the 1986 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

The agreement was reached last week between the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee and the International Olympic Committee. It marks the first time that avowed professionals have been permitted to participate in an Olympic-related event.

At the World Olympic Congress in 1981, the IOC agreed to let each international sports federation set its own eligibility requirements, subject to IOC review.

Tennis has not been a part of the Olympic program since 1924; however, it is slated to return in 1988 at Seoul, South Korea. It was last played as a demonstration sport at the Mexico City games in 1968.

and secretary-treasurer, who will participate in developing the agenda and presentations for the session. The Administrative Committee determined that conferences or independents may be represented by members of the steering committee, if they wish, or they may send the permissible number of additional representatives.

If all possible participants attended, a total of 185 would participate in the meeting.

The meeting will convene at 1:30 p.m. June 24 and will adjourn at noon June 25. It will open and close in joint sessions; however, the bulk of the time will be spent in six separate sessions, for faculty representatives, directors of athletics, primary women administrators, commissioners, football coaches and basketball coaches.

Approved by the NCAA Council in its January meeting, the Division I summer meeting is designed to provide a forum well in advance of the annual NCAA Convention for more extensive participation by the various constituencies within Division I in consideration of legislative and policy issues of importance to that division's membership.

State December 3 (national, early time slot).

"All 'special dates' games announced are pending subject to final negotiations between the two networks and the institutions involved," said Wiles Hallock, chair of the Football Television Committee.

"The committee had to go ahead and plan these special dates although a legal decision on the football television plan still is pending. Any further delay would have been a serious handicap to the networks. We had to proceed as though the contracts are in effect, which they are subject to the appeal court's decision."

Last November, the 10th Circuit

Court of Appeals in Denver took under advisement an appeal of a Federal court ruling that declared the 1982-1985 Football Television Plan null and void. The NCAA has asked the appeals court to overturn a September 15 ruling in Oklahoma City by Federal Judge Juan C. Burciaga that the television plan is a per se violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The committee also announced the 1983 control dates for the two networks. The control dates for ABC-TV are September 10, September 17, October 1, October 29 and November 12. Control dates for CBS-TV are September 24, October 8, October 15, October 22, November 5 and November 19.

No football deaths, colleges report

The number of fatalities directly attributable to football remained unchanged for the third straight year, according to an annual survey of football injury research sponsored in part by the NCAA. For the second time in the past three years, there were no direct fatalities at the college level.

In all, nine football-related deaths were reported in 1982, with seven occurring at the high school level. The remaining two fatalities occurred in organized youth league programs.

The consistent low level of football-related fatalities (0.57 per 100,000 players) continues a trend shown in several of the most recent editions of the annual study. It is compiled by Frederick O. Mueller of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Richard D. Schindler of the National Federation of State High School Associations and is prepared for the NCAA, the NFSHA and the American Football Coaches Association.

Again in 1982, most of the deaths resulted from injuries to the head, as has been the case generally since 1960.

"We must continue to reduce head and neck injuries," the report emphasized. "It has been suggested that the increased protection afforded by recent advances in protective equipment encourages young athletes to take undue risks when executing football skills."

Mueller and Schindler offer several suggestions for reducing head and neck injuries but also acknowledge the efforts of the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment (NOCSAE) in improving football protective equipment.

The report urges NOCSAE to continue its research in improving helmets and that old and worn equipment be properly renovated or discarded. Mueller and Schindler also suggest that continued emphasis be placed on developing the best equipment possible.

The authors are convinced that "the current rules that eliminate the head in blocking and tackling, the helmet research conducted by NOCSAE and better medical supervision have played the primary role in reducing fatalities and serious head and neck injuries in football."

Mueller and Schindler also report indirect deaths in their report; these are fatalities caused by systemic failure as a result of exertion while participating in football activity or by a complication that was secondary to a nonfatal injury. Eleven such deaths occurred during 1982, including three at the college level.

In one specific area related to indirect fatalities, the report suggests that continuous effort be made to eliminate heat-stroke deaths associated with football. From 1960 through 1982, 69 heat-stroke cases have resulted in death. A dramatic reduction has occurred since 1974, though, and just two such fatalities were reported in 1982.

Mueller and Schindler made 12 specific recommendations based on 1982 survey data, which have been presented to the sponsoring organizations. Persons at NCAA member institutions interested in obtaining copies of the 22-page report should contact Mueller or Eric Zemper, research coordinator at the NCAA national office.

The specific recommendations were:

1. Mandatory medical examinations and medical history should be taken before allowing a student-athlete to participate in football (The NCAA recommends a thorough medical examination when the athlete first enters the college athletic program and an annual health history update, with use of referral exams when warranted).

2. All persons who are involved with training football players should emphasize proper, gradual and complete physical conditioning. Particular emphasis should be placed on neck strengthening exercises.

3. A physician should be present at all games and practice sessions. If that is not possible, adequate emergency procedures must be available.

4. All personnel associated with football participation should be cognizant of the problems and safety measures related to physical activity in hot weather.

5. Each institution should strive to have a team trainer who is a regular member of the faculty and who is adequately prepared and qualified.

6. Cooperative liaison should be maintained by all groups interested in the field of athletic medicine.

7. There should be strict enforcement of game rules, and administrative regulations should be enforced to protect the health of the athlete. Coaches and school officials must support the game officials.

8. There should be a renewed emphasis on employing well-trained athletic personnel, providing excellent facilities and securing the safest and best equipment possible.

9. There should be continued research concerning safety factors in football.

10. Coaches should continue to teach and emphasize the proper fundamentals of blocking and tackling to help reduce head and neck fatalities.

11. Strict enforcement of the playing rules by both coaches and officials will help reduce serious injuries.

12. When a player has experienced or shown signs of head trauma (loss of consciousness, visual disturbances, headache, inability to walk correctly, obvious disorientation, memory loss), he should receive immediate medical attention and should not be allowed to return to practice or a game without permission from the proper medical authorities.

game," Steitz added.

Surveys taken by the committee indicated that 49.3 percent of some 700 basketball coaches surveyed favored some sort of shot clock, and of those who did vote for the clock, 74.3 percent preferred one that would last 45 seconds.

Coaches pick all-Americas in basketball

Anne Donovan, Old Dominion's 6-8 senior center, is one of three repeat selections on the 1983 Kodak women's all-America basketball team.

Also chosen for the second straight year were Kentucky center Valerie Still and Long Beach State guard Lataunya Pollard.

Rounding out the 10-woman team were a pair of Southern California stars, center Paula McGee and freshman forward Cheryl Miller, Janice Lawrence, Louisiana Tech; Tanya Haave, Tennessee; Joyce Walker, Louisiana State; Jasmina Perazic, Maryland, and Priscilla Gary, Kansas State.

Kodak has sponsored a women's all-America team since 1975; however, this year marked the first time the squad was chosen by members of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

44.6 percent favored it, although the coaches were somewhat divided on the distance. The distance chosen by the committee — 19-9 from the center of the basket — was favored by 40.5 percent.

Beginning this year, the rules committee annually will designate specific areas that will be open to experimentation. Each specific experiment will be tested in no more than two conferences, and conferences not submitting research data by a specified deadline will not be granted experimental rights for two years. The rules committee will publish its guidelines and deadlines for accepting experimental requirements in a future issue of The NCAA News.

Rules changes passed by the committee this year include making all common fouls in the last two minutes of a game count as two-shot free throws, if the offended team is in the bonus situation; and limiting the number of timeouts to three in all games involving commercial electronic media when the commercial format calls for at least three timeouts per half. The three timeouts permitted each team will be accumulative.

"The committee felt that a change in the number of timeouts in games involving commercials would be beneficial in cutting down the time it takes to play the closing minutes of the game," Steitz said.

"The two-shot foul on common fouls in the last two minutes hopefully will help eliminate the inconsistency in calling intentional or one-and-one fouls. The committee also felt that this would help eliminate the tendency to foul at the end of the game," Steitz added.

The committee also made penalties for flagrant personal and technical fouls identical—disqualification, two free throws and the ball out of bounds to the offended team.

The committee also emphasized existing rules on the principal of verticality, charging on the part of an airborne player and confining coaches, assistant coaches and players to the designated bench area.
