

Expanded Council meeting termed a success

The first full meeting of the expanded and partially federated NCAA Council was held April 18-20 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri, and was considered successful by the Association's elected leadership.

"I believe the expanded Council reflects a great opportunity for involvement by a much larger number of its constituents," NCAA President John L. Toner told the Council in closing remarks before adjourning the meeting April 20. He praised the efficiency of the division steering committees in carrying out their portions of the agenda.

The steering committees concluded their separate sessions April 19, a day ahead of schedule, and the Council itself completed its agenda nearly seven hours before the scheduled adjournment April 20.

Most comments by Council members reflected satisfaction with the new Council structure and procedures, and several reported that the meeting had exceeded their expectations.

The Council was expanded from 22 to 46 members by action of the 1983 Convention, assuring more representation for each division, more equitable geographical balance in representation, and specific positions on the Council for each Division I-A conference, each Division I-AA football region and for those institutions that are not classified in either I-A or I-AA.

For the first time, division steering committees were afforded the opportunity to take final action (subject only to reversal by a two-thirds vote of the full Council) on matters pertaining exclusively to their divisions. The full Council continues to take final action on Association-wide matters and those involving more than one division.

Among the specific actions taken by the steering committees were these:

Division I

The Division I Steering Committee agreed that it is incumbent upon the Council to investigate alternatives regarding the structure of Division I in the aftermath of the defeat of Proposal No. 71 at the 1983 Convention. The committee voted to have the Administrative Committee appoint an ad hoc committee—with all segments of Division I represented—to develop a statement regarding the Division I structure for consideration at the Division I summer meeting June 24-25 in Kansas City.

Division I members also approved a proposed research study relating to the new Division I academic requirements for initial athletic eligibility adopted by the division's membership to become effective August 1, 1986. The Council directed that a special committee be appointed to oversee the study, agreed that an outside agency should be contracted to conduct the study itself and urged that the project begin as quickly as possible.

Samson, Sweet, Germann named by Council as committee chairs

The Nominating Committee and the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees for the 1984 NCAA Convention were appointed by the NCAA Council in its April 18-20 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Appointed as chairs of the three committees were Charles H. Samson, Texas A&M University, Nominating Committee; Judith M. Sweet, University of California, San Diego, Women's Committee on Committees, and Kenneth G. Germann, Southern Conference, Men's Committee on Committees.

As a result of the Council restructuring plan passed at the 1983 NCAA Convention, the chair of the Nominating Committee is selected from among the four Council members on the committee, who no longer necessarily alternate by district. This change allows Samson to be the first person to serve consecutive terms as chair of the Nominating Committee.

The Nominating Committee recommends candidates for the offices of president and secretary-treasurer when those offices have vacancies and affirms the work of its division subunits, which act separately to recommend candidates for each Council vacancy within their respective divisions.

The two committees on committees present nominees for vacancies on all sports committees as listed in Bylaws 12-4 and 12-5.

Seven new members were appointed to the Nominating Committee by the Council. New members in Division I are Charles Harris, University of Pennsylvania (Region I); Robert S. Bryan, North Carolina State University (Region 2), and Cecil W. Ingram, Florida State University (Region 2).

New Division II members are Joan Board, Grand Valley State Colleges (Region 3), and Robert J. Hiebert, California State University, Northridge (Region 4). New members from Division III are Charles Luce, Connecticut College (Region 1), and Julian L. Smith, St. Andrews Presbyterian College (Region 3).

Nominating Committee members who were elected for another term are Bruce A. Corrie, Bucknell University (Division I, Region 1); Doris F. Chambers, Kent State University (Division I, Region 3); G. Jean Cerra, University of Missouri, Columbia (Division I, Region 3); J. Gene Bourdet, San Diego State University

Executive Committee to convene May 2-3

Recommendations from 19 sports committees and several financial matters highlight the agenda of the May 2-3 meeting of the NCAA Executive Committee at the Westin Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

This will be the first meeting of the Executive Committee since the committee was expanded from 12 to 14 members at the 1983 NCAA Convention. The Executive Committee now includes the president, secretary-treasurer, eight Division I members, two Division II members and two Division III members.

Among the sports committee recommendations is one from the Division III Football Committee supporting a championship game between the NCAA Division III football champion and the Japanese collegiate football champion.

The football committee recommends that the competition not occur more than two to three weeks after the national championship and that it not interfere with final examinations.

The Men's Soccer Committee is recommending that the final eight teams in the Division I Men's Soccer Championship be seeded and that the 1983 championship be played December 10 in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

In financial matters, the Executive Committee will discuss a recommendation to close the division championships reserves and place the balances in a funded operating reserve. The amount to cover these funds will be allocated in the budget.

The committee also will discuss the possibility of the Association's purchasing loss-of-revenue insurance for major NCAA revenue championships, such as the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. The Association has discussed this possibility with insurance companies.

The Executive Committee will receive reports from the following committees: Special Committee on Championships Standards, Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, and the Special NCAA Committee on Officiating Improvement.

The competitive safeguards committee is requesting expansion of the injury-surveillance program adopted last year for the sport of football. This is a program whereby selected trainers from member institutions submit weekly reports on injuries to the NCAA national office. The committee is recommending that the program be expanded to cover women's volleyball, women's gymnastics, wrestling, baseball, women's

Researchers seek further drop in catastrophic injuries

Greater efforts to reduce catastrophic injuries in football are being promoted by two NCAA researchers in their annual study of such injuries.

Frederick O. Mueller and Carl S. Blyth of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, note in their sixth annual Survey of Catastrophic Football Injuries that "permanent cervical-cord injury data collected during the six-year period from 1977 to 1982 show a reduction of injuries when compared to earlier data. The reduction of catastrophic injuries has been the first step, and now it is time to make greater efforts to further reduce these numbers."

The annual study, for which funding was initiated by the NCAA in 1977, is designed to report the incidence of football injuries that result in spinal-cord injury. Injuries that result in death are not included.

Eleven permanent cervical-cord injuries occurred during the 1982 football season, including two in college. Seven of the injuries occurred in high school competition, while the remaining two incidents occurred in a semiprofessional football game and a benefit high school alumni game.

The 11 injuries in 1982 bring the six-year total to 68. A high of 13 occurred in 1978; a low of nine occurred in 1981.

Mueller and Blyth reached several conclusions in their study, including the report that the incidence of catastrophic injuries is very low on a 100,000-player-exposure basis. For the approximately 1.575 million participants in 1982, the number of permanent paralysis injuries was .70 per 100,000.

In addition, it appears that the majority of such injuries occur during games and not practice. Nine of the 11 injuries last year occurred in games.

Tackling and blocking have been associated with most of these serious injuries, including nine of the 11 incidents in 1982. Eight of the 11

'Crazy Legs' has Wisconsin toeing the line

By Rick Davis
San Diego Tribune

It has been 14 years now since Elroy "Crazy Legs" Hirsch left Southern California and headed back to his native Wisconsin.

A wise move? Even he wondered at the time. His West Coast ventures across a 20-year stay had been rewarding: a playing career with the Los Angeles Rams that didn't end until 1957 and landed him in the NFL Hall of Fame, a management role that got him as high as general manager of the same club, a brief acting career that included three movies.

"It was a very tough decision," remembered Hirsch, who was in San Diego recently to address a University of Wisconsin alumni gathering at the Islandia Hotel. "I was settled in Los Angeles, had a house and a good job."

Indeed, it was only because of a twist of fate that Hirsch was "fooled" into taking the job as athletic director at the Big Ten Conference school in February 1969.

"The day I was back in Madison for the interview, Ivan Williamson, the athletic director who was stepping down from the job, fell down a stairway and was killed," said Hirsch.

"I was done with the interviews but was supposed to tour the school's facilities and look over the financial books. I was so upset, I came back home. I took the job a month later. But I don't think I would have taken it had I known the real mess things were in. I discovered that later. Money was so important, and we didn't have any."

Of course, what has happened to the Wisconsin athletic program under the guidance of the 59-year-old Hirsch is a remarkable success story. The Badger athletic program has gone from $220,000 in debt and an on-the-field loser in just about every sport to black ink and overall excellence.

Take a bow, Crazy Legs.

"The last three years, we've ranked in the top three in the conference in an overall rating system that includes recognized Big Ten sports," he said. "It's different in the money-making sports on campus (football, basketball and ice hockey), where we're trying to win national championships. In the other sports, my advice to the coach is just try to win a conference championship. That would be doing quite well.

"We've got an $8 million budget this year, but we should show a profit of $200,000."

That's good news to any state board of regents familiar with the pinch that inflation has put on collegiate athletic programs in recent years.

"We haven't dropped one sport," said Hirsch. "The only major way you can cut costs and not hurt the overall program is to reduce travel. Schedule opponents who are closer to home. Get more of them to play on your campus. You can't think of cutting salaries or spending less on equipment. The only other way is to reduce scholarships. That's hard to do."

Hirsch smiles readily when the subject of stricter academic entrance requirements for freshmen is brought up. He does not fear the resolution, which was passed at the NCAA Convention in January.

"Wisconsin always votes for any proposal to make academic requirements tougher," he said. "Our objective is to get the other schools more equal to us. You know our faculty will never lower our standards. And they shouldn't. In the long run, it would hurt the athletes."

Hirsch has orchestrated progress in 14 years. But, as he points out, it's a team effort.

"Some people advised me to take the job because it was the perfect time to go into the program," remembered Hirsch. "How could you goof up? As it turned out, the people—staff, alumni, faculty—have been great. If people don't care, you can't turn something like that around. Maybe all they needed was a rallying point."

Still, one goal remains: the Rose Bowl. Wisconsin has not been in Pasadena on New Year's Day since 1963.

"That's a disappointment," he admitted. "For years, you played for third in the Big Ten—behind Ohio State and Michigan. The 95 limit for football scholarships has helped crack that. Two years ago, we would have gone to Pasadena except for a goal-line fumble in the Illinois game. We're getting close."

Loss of Dan McClimon saddens collegiate track world

By Don Lindstrom
Wisconsin State Journal

Why does tragedy have to happen to the best?

Dan McClimon was the best.

During these moments of life, we begin to question why misfortune strikes anyone, particularly a person of such genuine good as this 41-year-old coach and family man.

The small plane crash near Middleton earlier this month that resulted in McClimon's death and severely injured pilot George Walker has thrown a pall of gloom over the state and the University of Wisconsin.

Dan's friends—coaches and college officials from all over the nation, parents of hundreds of athletes he has coached, and his multitude of friends—are now in prayer for his family—wife Pat and children Chris, Molly and Colleen.

Many of Dan's athletes—among them Steve Lacy, Leotha Stanley, Mark Winzenried and Jim Bradley—were at University Hospitals with other friends at the moment of his death.

Our only consolation can be that we are all better people for knowing a man like Dan McClimon.

Yet, it brings home a truth that even the best are so vulnerable.

Everything looked so great for McClimon and his Badger teams.

He had just coached Wisconsin to its first NCAA cross country championship with a talented team dominated by underclassmen. He was chosen NCAA cross country coach of the year for the second time and NCAA district coach of the year for the fifth time.

His current track team, with Leroy Dixon rapidly blooming into one of the world's top sprinters, was building toward the Big Ten championship contention.

He particularly was proud of his NCAA harrier champions. It was added pride to consider that all eight of his runners, including captains Tom Quigley and Jim Brice, were not only American-born athletes, but natives of Wisconsin or Northern Illinois, all within "sight of UW."

Lacy, a world-class star and a 1980 U.S. Olympic team member, claimed there was "no finer coach in America." All of Dan's athletes, close enough to call him "Mac," agree.

Dan has coached 19 all-Americans, three NCAA champions and three NCAA runners-up in track and cross country.

He was respected among his peers, being elected president of the National Cross Country Coaches Association. Last summer, he helped coach the U.S. national track and field team against the Soviet Union.

Dan recently deliberated over a lucrative offer to leave UW and rebuild Northwestern University track and cross country fortunes. He and his wife, Pat, decided to turn it down because he wanted to coach here, and they wished to continue residing in Madison and have their children continue at Madison schools.

He was an expert recruiter, especially of distance runners.

That's what he was doing near Pontiac, Illinois—the first legal signing day for recruits—and he signed one of the top distance runners right in the shadows of Illinois State and Illinois. The athlete he signed was Cornell's John Jacobson, the 1982 Illinois state Class A champion, who won both the 1,600- and 3,200-meter events.

Tragedy is not new to the McClimon family.

Dan and Pat lost one son, Tim, to leukemia not long ago. Dan's father also died suddenly on the eve of a recent Drake Relays.

We all feel so helpless, and all we can do is pray for George Walker's recovery and extend deepest sympathy to the McClimon family.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

I continue to be disturbed over the increasing number of articles that are appearing in The NCAA News and other publications that support the idea that prohibiting freshman eligibility will be the panacea for the academic problems facing intercollegiate athletics.

I implore the ACE Ad Hoc Committee on Athletics, the NCAA Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education, the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education and all other organizations to define exactly what they mean by abolishing freshman eligibility and to examine the ramifications of some of the other alternative proposals.

I do not think there is a national academic problem with golfers, gymnasts, wrestlers, cross country runners, etc., competing in varsity sports as freshmen. Therefore, the elimination of freshman eligibility should not be used in the general sense. Be specific.

If the Division I-A football schools think that this is a problem at their level with their institutions, then let them take the appropriate action. I certainly understand the desire and need for I-A institutions to have the autonomy to pass legislation that affects their programs, and I agree with them.

However, I do not think that prohibiting freshmen from playing varsity football at the I-AA, II or III levels is warranted or necessary. Nor do I think the abolishment of freshman eligibility for everyone in basketball is the answer to the academic problems that some institutions are having. Let each institution undertake to solve its own problems.

If passage of such legislation means that there would then be freshman/JV teams with their own coaching staffs, playing full schedules, and the number of athletic grants would be increased to cover both varsity and subvarsity teams, then I am adamantly opposed to it also.

In this day of increasing financial pressures and faculty concerns at all colleges and universities, I find it hard to justify and support proposals that will increase the cost of intercollegiate athletics. This includes guaranteeing a student-athlete an athletic grant for five years.

I strongly support the new academic requirements adopted by the NCAA in San Diego and emphatically subscribe to the tenet that students should be students first and athletes second. If the students who are admitted to your institution are academically qualified, there is no defensible reason why they should not be able to participate, as freshmen, in any extracurricular activity, whether it be the band, chorale, theater or varsity athletics.

begin to change their attitudes about the game. Winning at all costs is being supplemented by other goals. Making sure your team isn't 'ripped off' by the referees—and letting everyone hear you cry when you think you are—is one of them. Secondary in importance is seeing which side can degrade the officials and their team's opponent the most effectively.

"This can't continue. Basketball is arguably the most emotional of sports—16- and 17-year-olds dressed in little more than underwear are supposed to perform flawlessly before wildly screaming students and grown-up critics seated a few feet away. At the same time, the coach tries to be leader, teacher and organizer while making decisions within seconds."

Tom Anson, professor of political science
University of Michigan
The Wall Street Journal

"It's possible for a brainy, strong-willed athlete to come out of college with a degree that means something, but it's usually an uphill battle. The pressures all are directed toward getting athletes to take easy courses and light class loads. If you're 18 or 19 years old and wrapped up in sports to begin with, they're hard to resist. I don't think I could have resisted them at that age."

"You talk to somebody, and you'll see how these guys work. You'll see how they get you for one little bit of action, and then they get you to raise the line, and then they say, 'why don't you double up?' And before long, it's just like having a fish on a hook."

UCLA set to defend men's volleyball title

If West Coast domination of the NCAA Men's Volleyball Championship is ever going to end, 1983 appears to be the year it could happen. All 13 championships have been won by four California schools: UCLA (nine), Southern California (two), Pepperdine and San Diego State.

However, some schools east of the Rocky Mountains—Penn State, Ball State and Ohio State—are capable of loosening the grip California schools have had on the championship.

The championship, which will be held May 6-7 at Ohio State University, will be a single-elimination tournament of four teams. The final four will include one team from the East, one team from the Midwest, one team from the West and one team selected at large. UCLA has clinched the West berth as a result of winning the California Intercollegiate Volleyball Association (CIVA).

Penn State appears to be the best in the East. The Nittany Lions, under coach Tom Tait, finished second to UCLA in last year's championship and have proven that they are capable of beating traditional West Coast powers. Penn State lost one starter from last year's team but has performed impressively this season and, to most observers, is a vastly improved team.

The race for the Midwest berth is between Don Shondell's Cardinals of Ball State and the Ohio State Buckeyes of coach Jim Smoot. Based upon early-season results, Ball State could have the inside track on the berth and spoil Ohio State's dreams of playing in the national tournament on its home court. However, the Buckeyes turned a few heads earlier this season by taking UCLA to five games before losing.

Although most preseason forecasters picked UCLA to win another championship, the Bruins of coach Al Scates only rate a slight edge as the favorite.

The Bruins will be making their sixth straight appearance in the final four. Despite their 22-4 record, the Bruins have struggled at times. UCLA lost twice to Pepperdine and once each to San Diego State and Hawaii, the first time the Bruins have lost four regular-season matches in a number of years.

Contenders for the at-large berth are Pepperdine, Hawaii, California-Santa Barbara and Long Beach State.

Merger of hockey conferences rejected for 1983-84 season

A merger of the two Division I men's ice hockey conferences in the West is not likely for the 1983-84 season, but it has not been ruled out as a long-term possibility.

That was the conclusion at the meetings of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association members April 19-21 in Grand Forks, North Dakota. Representatives of member institutions considered a merger proposal from the Central Collegiate Hockey Association but decided not to accept the proposal now.

Instead, the WCHA has offered a counterproposal that includes these provisions:

- Each conference would retain its own identity, structure and governance.

- Two CCHA teams, to be mutually agreed upon by the two conferences, would join the WCHA.

- Interconference games during the regular season would be scheduled, starting with the 1983-84 season. It is likely that each league team would play four interconference games.

- The two leagues would conduct a joint postseason tournament, including a final-four tournament to determine the play-off champion of Western ice hockey. The tournament would be played at a neutral site, possibly Joe Louis Arena in Detroit.

- A joint committee would be established to evaluate the results of the interconference competition and to consider further areas of cooperation, including the merger possibility.

The WCHA representatives said they believe this proposal would strengthen both the conference and Western hockey in general, while still preserving the WCHA's tradition of excellence developed over the years.

The proposal will be considered by the CCHA institutions May 4 in East Lansing, Michigan.

There are six members in the WCHA and 11 members in the CCHA. Two seasons ago, Michigan State University, the University of Michigan, Michigan Technological University and the University of Notre Dame left the WCHA to join the CCHA. Notre Dame since has dropped the sport on a varsity basis.

Candidates sought for honors awards

July 1 is the nomination deadline for 1984 candidates for the Association's Theodore Roosevelt Award, the highest honor the NCAA can confer on an individual. Also, nominations from winter and spring sports for Today's Top Five and all nominations for Silver Anniversary awards must be submitted by that date.

The "Teddy" Award is named after President Theodore Roosevelt, whose concern for the conduct of intercollegiate athletics led to the formation of the NCAA in 1906. It is presented annually to a distinguished citizen of national reputation and accomplishment who is a former varsity letter-winner and has maintained a continuing interest and concern for physical fitness and competitive sport.

Last year's Teddy recipient was former Wake Forest University student-athlete and pro golfer Arnold Palmer. Other former winners include Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gerald R. Ford.

College Athletics Top Ten—Today's Top Five and Silver Anniversary awards—annually honors five current student-athletes and five outstanding former student-athletes who graduated 25 years earlier. Both groups are selected on academic achievement and athletics prowess; a distinguished career following graduation is another characteristic of Silver Anniversary winners.

Nomination forms will be mailed to all NCAA member institutions May 1. A second mailing in the fall will request Today's Top Five nominees from fall sports. Completed forms should be returned to David E. Cawood, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Nominations due May 12

Nominations for NCAA postgraduate scholarships in sports other than football and basketball must be mailed to appropriate district selection committee chairs by May 12.

A total of 45 awards (25 for men and 20 for women), each worth $2,000, will be given to student-athletes in NCAA sports other than football and basketball. Nominees must have demonstrated ability on the playing field and in the classroom.

Faculty athletic representatives are responsible for nominating student-athletes from their respective institutions and must follow these guidelines:

- Nominate not more than two men and two women.

- Use the application forms provided by the NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship Committee.

- Complete all forms, providing complete information.

- Mail the forms and transcript(s) in one package to the district selection committee chair no later than May 12.

Winners will be selected by the national committee in June and announced as soon as possible thereafter.

Volunteers for Youth selects new directors

Five student-athletes will serve as national directors of the NCAA Volunteers for Youth program during the 1983-84 academic year.

They were appointed by the NCAA Volunteers for Youth Committee at its meeting in Kansas City April 6-7. The new VFY national directors are:

- Sally Alden, senior, Stanford University. Her home town is Rancho Palos Verdes, California, and she is majoring in human biology/administration. Alden participated in crew at Stanford, serving as team captain one year.

- Betsy Mullins, senior, University of Connecticut. A varsity swimmer, Mullins is majoring in communications. Her home town is Roxbury, Massachusetts.

- Keith Staser, senior, Arizona State University. Staser was the head manager of the Sun Devils' football team and is from Ovid, Michigan. His major is marketing.

- Craig Thompson, Idaho State

University (1982 graduate). Thompson participated in intramural sports while attending Idaho State and majored in health education. He later earned a master's degree in athletic administration. Thompson's home town is Denver.

- Bryan Thoreson, senior, South Dakota State University. Thoreson's home town is Brandon, South Dakota, and he is majoring in agricultural engineering and animal science. Thoreson participated in varsity track and cross country at South Dakota State.

In addition to the new national directors, the VFY program will be changing administrators for 1983-84. Steve Wenger, senior national director for the past three years, will be replaced by Audrey West, currently assistant senior director. Cheryl L. Levick, assistant director of women's programs, will serve as NCAA staff liaison, replacing Assistant Executive Director Ruth M. Berkey.

NBA pay limit could draw collegians early

By James A. Sheldon
The NCAA News Staff

Sam Perkins says he won't. Akeem Abdul Olajuwon says he might, and Clyde Drexler is not saying anything.

The topic of discussion for that trio and perhaps a dozen other talented undergraduates is the National Basketball Association draft and whether to declare themselves eligible, thereby forfeiting their remaining collegiate eligibility. Just how many undergraduates will declare for the draft by the May 14 deadline is questionable, but the recent agreement between the NBA and its players' union could have an effect.

When first made public, the new NBA labor agreement appeared to have ominous overtones for current undergraduates. The reason: a $75,000 salary maximum for first-round draft choices beginning in 1984-85.

That is considerably less than first-round picks have been able to command in recent years. There was immediate speculation that the $75,000 salary limit would encourage stars like North Carolina's Perkins and Houston's Olajuwon and Drexler to leave college now.

Boston attorney and agent Bob Woolf told the Associated Press, "There's certainly an enticement there. It may be more beneficial, from what I know, for them to come out now. There are 10 or 12 premium players who could make this the best draft ever if they came out."

San Antonio Spurs President Angelo Drossos told Sports Illustrated, "They've all got to come out, because next year, that money isn't going to be there."

However, that type of speculation may have been premature. There are some aspects of the NBA agreement that bear closer examination:

- The $75,000 ceiling applies only to NBA teams that are at a still-to-be-determined payroll maximum. There also will be a minimum $65,000 salary for rookies.

- The new rookie contracts will be for just one year. The player then becomes a free agent, and teams will have the opportunity to retain their own free agents regardless of the payroll limit.

- Teams will be permitted to offer more to a first-round draft pick if they adjust the rest of their payroll to stay within the maximum.

This could mean that future NBA rookies will have more bargaining power than originally was suspected under the terms of the new agreement.

"The initial thinking by a lot of people was that this year would be the last chance (to negotiate a sizable contract)," said Alex Sachare, NBA director of information. "I think that is a misunderstanding. I don't believe our players' association would have agreed to a contract that they thought would damage their bargaining power."

Teams still would be able to offer large contracts to rookies, Sachare emphasized, if they thought that player was worth the expense and if they adjusted the rest of their payrolls accordingly.

"If a rookie says he wants $1 million his first year," Sachare said, "and the club thinks he is worth it, it can clear its payroll to accommodate him."

Of course, only a handful of players fall into that category every year. For the middle and late first-round picks, a year of proving themselves and then a chance to become a free agent may be more lucrative.

"Unless you pay my client whatever I want," agent Bill Madden told the New York Post, "I like my chances better after one year. I'd sign my guy for the one, take out an insurance policy to protect against injuries and hope for the best."

In terms of this year's undergraduates, perhaps only Olajuwon and Patrick Ewing of Georgetown could command a big first-year contract. Others such as Michael Jordan (North Carolina), Wayman Tisdale (Oklahoma), Keith Lee (Memphis State), Perkins and Drexler might be picked in the middle of this year's first round but could go higher in the future.

"A player like that might think twice about coming out," Sachare said. "He might be better off with another year in a college atmosphere—another year of experience and another year of maturity, both on and off the court."

Just how many undergraduates declare for the June 28 draft could have a significant effect on how high each is drafted and what kind of salary he can command. Since the old "hardship" rule was established 12 years ago, 101 undergraduates have opted for a shot at the pros, an average of about eight a year. As many as 16 (1975) and as few as five (1981) have come out.

Right now, there is no way to predict who will declare and what effect the new NBA labor agreement will have on the drafting of undergraduates. There might be some indication this year because the five NBA teams with the highest payrolls (New York, New Jersey, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Seattle) will be subject to the new restrictions a year ahead of the rest of the league.

"At this point, it's just hard to tell," Sachare said. "It's a very innovative labor agreement, and a lot of people won't know what will happen until June."

Expanded

- Agreed to ask the Council to sponsor legislation at the 1984 NCAA Convention to eliminate part-time assistant coaches in basketball, permitting one head coach and two assistants in that sport.

- Reinstated Bylaw 7-1-(j) as it appeared in the 1982-83 NCAA Manual, thus permitting the three Division I national service academies to utilize four part-time coaches in football. The academies successfully appealed the action of the Constitution and Bylaws Committee, later sustained by the Administrative Committee, to delete that bylaw as a result of the Division I Convention approval of Proposal Nos. 125-A and B, which eliminated part-time coaches in Division I-A football.

- Approved plans for the Division I summer meeting and agreed that the Division I selection and invitation process for the annual meeting of chief executive officers September 19-20 in Kansas City should be the same as last year.

Division II

The Division II Steering Committee discussed the desirability of proposing academic standards for initial athletic eligibility in that division as a result of Division I's adoption of Proposal No. 48 at the 1983 Convention. The committee agreed that it supports more stringent academic standards and will consider legislation of that nature for Division II when the research study regarding No. 48 is completed. It asked that a sampling of Division II institutions be included in that research project.

The committee also determined possible agenda items for the Division II chief executive officers' meeting in September.

Division III

The Division III Steering Committee reported that it will ask the Divisions I and II committees in August to consider waivers of the transfer residence requirement for any Division I or II student-athlete transferring to a Division III institution, regardless of whether the student-athlete has participated at the Division I or II institution prior to transferring.

The committee also noted that adoption of legislation establishing a Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship at the 1983 Convention had been ruled null and void in view of the fact that the division did not meet the sponsorship requirements of Executive Regulation 1-1-(a) as of September 30, 1982. The committee said it would resubmit the proposal for the 1984 Convention, which also will have before it a proposal to specify that only institutions sponsoring men's athletics programs would be included in determining the required sponsorship to establish or continue a men's NCAA championship.

Division III Vice-President Kenneth J. Weller, president of Central College (Iowa), informed the Council that the steering committee is continuing its consideration of 1983 Convention Proposal No. 65 and related issues regarding multidivision classification.

Council

Among the final actions taken by the full Council was a decision to appoint a Council subcommittee to hear appeals of actions taken by the NCAA Eligibility Committee. The committee will include three Division I Council members and one each from Divisions II and III, the same division ratio utilized on the former Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals.

In another decision involving all three divisions, the Council voted to affirm its earlier policy regarding requests for Bylaw 10-1-(a) exceptions. The Council intends to grant such exceptions—which permit an institution to classify its women's programs in a division other than its membership division—only when it determines that the institution's circumstances (e.g., limited female enrollment) justify such action.

The Council also began its planning for the 1984 NCAA Convention, agreeing to give consideration to recommending that members of each division sit together in the business session to facilitate vote counting. The Council also agreed to have printed in the Convention publications the procedures to be followed in electing Council members and division vice-presidents and to consider featuring "structured debates" in the general and Division I round tables.

Also on the agenda was a review of legislation for the January 1984 Convention, and the Council voted to sponsor the following amendments:

- To prohibit athletic department staff members from providing information to individuals involved in organized gambling activities and from gambling on college athletics contests; also, to include in the student-athlete statement a requirement that the student provide information relating to any involvement in organized gambling activities.

- To delete the opportunity for allied conferences to vote on NCAA legislation, a proposal that was defeated at the 1983 Convention.

- To permit a student-athlete who receives a Pell Grant plus institutionally administered financial aid to receive a maximum total amount that does not exceed the value of tuition, fees, room and board, and required course-related books plus $900. That proposal was narrowly defeated at the January Convention.

- To establish Bylaw 6 grant limits in women's skiing and women's soccer in Divisions I and II.

- To permit the Postseason Football Committee to assess financial penalties against the management of a bowl game that violates the provisions of Bylaw 2-2.

In other action relating to possible legislation, the Council referred to the Special Committee on Legislative Review a series of proposals regarding the soccer playing season, as well as a proposal to begin the Division I men's and women's basketball playing season approximately one month later. The Council also agreed to consider in August an amendment to Constitution 3-1-(h)-(1) that would prohibit member institutions from conducting practice sessions at off-campus sites, with certain prescribed exceptions.

Other Council actions:

- Elected the following new NCAA members: Active (effective September 1, 1983)—Berea College, Berea, Kentucky, and Nazareth College, Rochester, New York, both Division III. Associate—Community College of Rhode Island. Allied—Centennial Athletic Conference, North Coast Athletic Conference and Wisconsin-Iowa-Minnesota Field Hockey Conference, all Division III, and Oil Country Athletic Conference, Division I. Affiliated—Northern Illinois Board of Officials for Women's Sports.

- Established a special women's advisory group consisting of the 13 women serving on the Council, to be chaired by Division I Vice-President Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University. The group will contemplate policies and programs to enhance women's intercollegiate athletics and assist in their development at the institution, conference and national levels.

- Directed the staff to continue studying the amount of class time missed by student-athletes due to waivers for outside participation, travel to NCAA championships and other causes.

- Considered a preliminary report of a study of the NCAA committee structure, which will be completed by August, and agreed to sponsor legislation specifying that not less than 25 percent of the positions on any NCAA sports committee must be filled by administrators. The Council also noted that 527 individuals currently occupy the 587 positions on all standing NCAA committees, and only eight persons serve on more than two committees.

- Noted that any division now is enabled to adopt a resolution or an amendment to the executive regulations at an NCAA Convention, and that rescission by two-thirds of all delegates present would be required to negate such a division action.

- Approved continuation of the NCAA-NAIA joint-declaration program for participation by dual members in certain men's and women's championships.

- Approved recommendations of the NCAA Insurance Committee that the Association's basic athletic accident insurance program not be offered for 1983-84 inasmuch as only 18 institutions are enrolled currently; and in the future, a minimum of at least seven percent of the active membership must enroll in any Association insurance program for it to be continued. That committee also was directed to continue negotiations regarding a possible catastrophic injury insurance program for NCAA member institutions.

- Agreed to have the Administrative Committee appoint a special committee to study the need to increase the amount of financial aid a student-athlete may receive under NCAA legislation (currently tuition and fees, room and board, and required course-related books), as recommended by the Long Range Planning Committee. That committee also recommended that two documents written by former NCAA President J. Neils Thompson, University of Texas, Austin—one dealing with codes of ethics for college athletics and another with means of diminishing pressures in athletics—be referred to the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education and be made available to the membership. [Note: The documents will be published in future editions of The NCAA News.]

injured players were playing defense.

Several recommendations have been offered to reduce catastrophic injuries below the average of 11 per year that has been characteristic of the sport since 1977. These include:

1. Emphasize the need to block and tackle with the shoulder, not with the head, through drills by coaches in the proper fundamentals of blocking and tackling. Rules changes initiated for the 1976 season that eliminated the head as a primary and initial contact area for blocking and tackling have been of the utmost importance.

2. Provide student-athletes with proper conditioning exercises that will strengthen their necks and enable them to hold their heads firmly erect while making contact.

3. Discourage players from using their heads as "battering rams" when blocking and tackling. Coaches and officials should enforce rules prohibiting spearing in practices and in games. Players should be taught that the helmet is a protective device and not to be used as a weapon.

4. Ensure special care by all coaches, physicians and trainers to see that players' equipment is fitted properly, particularly the helmet.

5. Maintain a physician on the field during game and practice sessions. When this is not possible, make arrangements to have a physician's immediate service when emergencies arise. Each institution should have a team trainer who is a regular member of the institution's staff and who is qualified in treating and preventing injuries.

"Football catastrophic injuries may never be totally eliminated," say Mueller and Blyth in their report, "but continued research has resulted in rules changes, equipment standards and changes in teaching the fundamental techniques of the game. Research based on reliable data is essential if progress is to be made."

Copies of the complete 1982 report are available from Eric D. Zemper, research coordinator, at the NCAA national office.

lacrosse and men's lacrosse, as well as football.

The Executive Committee also will review Executive Regulation 1-1-(a). The committee will determine whether championships that no longer meet the minimum criteria should be continued without receiving subsidy for transportation and other expenses.

The committee also will complete plans for the 1984 Convention, scheduled for January 9-11 at the Loews Anatole in Dallas, Texas.
