NCAA likely to seek rehearing in TV suit

NCAA legal counsel is preparing a request for a rehearing before the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals of the Association's appeal from a Federal district court ruling that declared the NCAA Football Television Plan and implementing contracts to be in violation of the Federal antitrust laws.

A panel of three 10th circuit judges May 12, in a 2 to 1 decision, upheld the lower-court ruling by Judge Juan C. Burciaga but remanded it to the trial court for further consideration of the earlier injunction, which the NCAA has claimed is too broad. The stay of the trial court's decision previously instituted by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals remains in effect.

The Association has 14 days from the May 12 date to submit an application for a rehearing before the court en banc (in full). NCAA general counsel George H. Gangwere said the petition for rehearing would be based on a number of factors, including a request that the appeals court give the NCAA membership a clearer directive as to means by which the television plan could be adjusted to comply with antitrust laws.

NCAA President John L. Toner said May 16 that he believes the Association should pursue the case by all possible means in the interest of protecting the legitimate educational interests of all member institutions.

"If the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals will not accept a petition for a rehearing, I believe we should pursue the matter to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary," Toner said. "The majority opinion of the appeals court indicates that it may be possible to have football television controls if the plan were redrawn, and I would hope that the appeals court itself would provide some more precise guidance in this direction."

The three-judge panel of the 10th circuit reached its decision after six months of deliberation. A total of eight judges sit on the 10th circuit.

In writing the majority opinion, Judge James Logan said, "We affirm the district court's conclusion that the television plan is unreasonably restrictive of competitive conditions and therefore unlawful.

"It increases concentration in the marketplace; it prevents producers from exercising independent pricing and output decisions; it precludes broadcasters from purchasing a product for which there are no readily available substitutes; it facilitates cartelization. Against this array of antitrust injuries, the NCAA's justifications are insufficient."

In remanding the matter to Judge Burciaga's court, however, the court said, "We agree with the NCAA that the trial court erred in holding that the television plan and network contracts constitute a group boycott. . . ." The court suggested that the lower court reconsider portions of its earlier ruling, including, attorneys believe, Burciaga's prohibition against the NCAA being involved in any future football television contracts.

"While we hold that the NCAA cannot lawfully maintain exclusive control of the rights, how far such rights may be commonly regulated involves speculation that should not be made on the record of the instant case," the court stated.

not anticompetitive. Rather, it is designed to further the purposes and objectives of the NCAA, which are to maintain intercollegiate football as an amateur sport and an adjunct of the academic endeavors of the institution."

Judge Barrett, noting that the Universities of Georgia and Oklahoma had claimed in their suit that institutions had been threatened with

What does court's ruling mean?

- The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Judge Burciaga's decision that the NCAA Football Television Plan violates Federal antitrust laws but sent the matter back to Judge Burciaga to clarify the terms of his injunction. The court's mandate for this purpose would occur about June 2.

- The stay of Judge Burciaga's order remains in effect pending various appeal opportunities available to the NCAA. Thus, the television plan and network contracts continue to be binding.

- The NCAA has until May 26 to file an application for a rehearing by the three-judge panel or the entire, eight-judge 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.

- Filing with the U.S. Supreme Court of a writ of certiorari remains a possibility for the Association. The writ of certiorari amounts to a request that the case be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

Circuit Judge James E. Barrett, the senior member of the panel, disagreed with his colleagues and wrote in his dissenting opinion, "We agree with the NCAA that the trial court erred in holding that the television plan and network contracts constitute a group boycott.

"I am convinced that although there is evidence to support the trial-court findings, my review of the entire evidence leads me to a firm conviction that a mistake has been committed.

"It is my view . . . that the NCAA television plan's primary purpose is termination of their NCAA membership if they participated in some other football television plan, wrote, "The NCAA's expulsion sanction appears to be an enforcement mechanism and not a sham for an anti-competitive purpose."

He also wrote that he believed the plaintiffs were insisting on "the best of two worlds" in proclaiming their allegiance to all other NCAA rules and regulations pertaining to intercollegiate football and, at the same time, insisting on invalidating the NCAA television contracts and

Court ruling meets with some misgivings

Reactions to the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals' decision to uphold Judge Juan C. Burciaga's September 1982 ruling that the NCAA's football television contracts constituted an illegal restraint of trade were varied, but most reflected misgivings regarding the effect of the decision.

A sampling of the comments made publicly follows:

David E. Cawood
NCAA television program director

"We continue to believe that television protection and limitations are necessary for the welfare of intercollegiate football and for maintaining that activity appropriately within the structure of higher education. We will continue our efforts to maintain the validity of the NCAA Football Television Plan that previously was adopted by the membership."

Charles M. Neinas, executive director
College Football Association

"[The ruling] has shown that the NCAA cannot seize an institution's rights. . . . We've developed certain contingency plans, and I would hope we would be able to develop something that would satisfy our members and be within the law. . . .

"You have to read Burciaga's opinion. His point is, the reason he's not going to let the NCAA back in is because he can't trust the NCAA. He can't trust them not to go back in and create a monopoly. The only way the NCAA can be controlled, because of the subtle ways in which they can operate, is not to let them back in at all. . . .

"It [the CFA membership] authorized us to set up a television plan and to go to TV entities for the purpose of investigating its salability. We've done that. . . . We will announce it to the membership at an appropriate time and in an appropriate manner. I don't know if they'll vote on it per se,

Six national leaders in intercollegiate athletics have been named to chair separate sessions during the first Division I summer membership meeting June 24-25 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

The meeting will feature separate sessions for faculty athletic representatives, directors of athletics, conference commissioners, primary women administrators of athletics programs, basketball coaches and football coaches, as well as opening and closing joint sessions of all participants.

Chairs for four of those sessions were named by the Division I Steering Committee: NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis, Oregon State University, faculty representatives; Eugene F. Corrigan, University of Notre Dame, directors of athletics; Fred Jacoby, Southwest Athletic Conference, commissioners, and G. Jean Cerra, University of Missouri, Columbia, primary women administrators.

The chairs for the coaches' separate sessions were appointed by the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the American Football Coaches Association. Bob Knight, Indiana University, will lead the basketball coaches' meeting, while Bo Schembechler, University of Michigan, president of the AFCA, will chair the football coaches' session.

Twenty head football coaches and 20 head basketball coaches have been selected by the AFCA and the NABC, respectively, to attend the meeting. In addition, each voting conference in Division I has been invited to send from two to four representatives, based on the conference's sponsorship of men's or women's programs or both.

Foreign athletes prominent on college teams

By Susan Fornoff
USA Today

Akeem Abdul Olajuwon was a 6-9 goalkeeper for a Nigerian soccer team when someone told him, "You're too big to play soccer."

Coach Richard Mills tutored him in basketball and coached him on the Nigerian national team and the Moslem Teachers College team, until Chris Pond, a Peace Corps worker, suggested Olajuwon hone his talent at a college in the United States.

Pond listed some schools, including Providence and Houston, and made some contacts, including Houston coach Guy Lewis. Lewis, skeptical, said he would look at Olajuwon if he came.

In the fall of 1980, Olajuwon, 18, flew to New York. "It's too cold," he decided, and skipped his visit to Providence. Houston, he was told, was warmer. A little warmer.

"When I first came, I didn't like it, and I was thinking about going back," Olajuwon said. "I didn't play that first year, and I was so mad I wanted to go home."

But he stuck it out, and he plans to complete his collegiate career at Houston.

His story is unusual only because he plays an American-made sport. In international sports such as soccer, swimming and tennis, foreign athletes routinely help build NCAA empires.

At Houston, not only is Olajuwon big on the basketball court, but the Cougars' swimming program is built on Canadians, Scots and British.

As youth soccer booms in the United States, the University of San Francisco continues to import players, with 13 foreigners on its 21-man roster. And at the University of Miami (Florida), coach John Hammill recruits from his native

South Africa.

Why? Because, some coaches say, the U.S. athlete is spoiled and the foreign athlete is cheap. At a time when nonrevenue-producing sports face budget cuts and even elimination, many talented U.S. athletes expect a full free ride.

"The American player right now is a prima donna," said Steve Negroesco, who has coached San Francisco to five national soccer championships. "The American kids equate soccer with baseball and football, and they want everything."

Columnary Craft

We can't afford that. We split up our scholarships and distribute them on the basis of need. Most of the foreign kids pay for more than half of their educations."

"These kids appreciate the chance to come over here and get an education more than the Americans do, maybe because the American kid's kind of spoiled," said Larry Heidebrecht, rookie track coach at the University of Texas, El Paso, which won three straight NCAA triple crowns—indoor and outdoor track and field and cross country—with foreign athletes.

Tall basketball players, such as Olajuwon and Indiana's Uwe Blab of West Germany, know no geographical boundaries, and some football programs have been fond of foreign placekickers.

Phil Hansel, Houston's swimming coach, noticed that most teams at the Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships March 24-26 brought foreigners.

"For the number of first-class, top-drawer college programs we're trying to put in the water, there aren't enough top quality swimmers to go around," Hansel said. "We have to go for foreign athletes."

They don't have to go, literally. Negroesco has contacts all around the world. Recently, a group of his Nigerian alumni decided to sponsor annually a student-athlete to attend USF. Hammill once headed South Africa's junior program; now, he recruits his former proteges.

But the foreign athlete certainly goes for the U.S. university. South Africans can postpone their military obligations by attending college. Antonette Wilkin, an all-America diver at Houston, escaped a frightening political situation in Zimbabwe.

"There's a terrorist war there, and the farmers were the people attacked because the city was so well-protected," she said. "We live on a farm—we're the country's largest strawberry producers—and I always needed a police escort to and from the house."

But more often the superior combination of athletics and education is the major draw for foreign athletes. Texas-El Paso distance star Suleiman Nyambui ran 20 miles each way to attend school in Tanzania. Erik Nielsen, an all-America soccer player at San Francisco, wanted to attend college but didn't have the straight A's he needed to get into one of Norway's four business schools.

"I wanted to go to a university at home," said backstroker Beverley Rose, Scotland's contribution to Houston. "But the problem there is trying to swim and go to the university, because there just aren't the facilities. You have to choose. And that's why so many British swimmers are here."

But recruiting foreigners has its disadvantages. One, born of the chief advantage, is that coaches usually haven't seen their recruits. Hammill once recruited a Frenchman who, he later learned, never had played tennis on a hard court.

Breaking of coaches contracts is a matter of ethics

By William F. Stier Jr.

No institution or administrator wants to stand in the way of a career move by a coach. But no administrator wants his or her athletic program to be jeopardized.

It simply is a question of ethics—ethics in terms of the individual coach keeping his or her commitment and the ethics of an institution that attempts to lure a coach away from another program by encouraging him or her to break a contractual, moral and ethical commitment.

One cannot legislate morality or ethics. It is up to the parties in-involved—the coaches and athletic administrators alike—to attempt to correct and check this growing abuse within our profession at all levels.

Hopefully, the following recommendations might help to lessen the incidence and soften the negative consequences of the unprofessional conduct of breaking a contract.

- Get the best assistant coaches available. The athletic department should implement the policy and practice of obtaining superbly qualified assistant coaches, who, in the future, could hold a head coaching post within the institution. This accomplishes two objectives. First, it becomes more feasible to promote from within when a head coach does depart. Second, such a practice tends to develop greater loyalty, dedication and commitment to the institution and program when the assistants are aware they possibly are being groomed for consideration of "bigger and better things."

- Hold back a percentage of pay in escrow. Institutions should hold a certain percentage of the coach's salary in escrow so that if a coach commits a breach of contract by abandoning the institution, the money held would be forfeited and revert to the institution.

- Look for the highest of ethics. Athletic administrators should hire only those coaches who exhibit and demonstrate the highest of ethics. Athletic directors should be most reluctant to select coaches who have broken contracts at other institutions. Hiring a coach with a history of breaking contracts is asking for more of the same.

- Keep an active file on others. Administrators should start a practice of maintaining an active file on possible replacements for each coaching position. This gives the athletic director a current knowledge of the marketplace, an awareness of the caliber of possible prospects and a head start on developing a list of qualified candidates, which then would be supplemented by a full search as required by law or institutional policy.

- Be fair and equitable. Athletic directors should give their coaches fair and equitable rewards and compensation for their services and skills. Coaches should be given comparable "tools and assets" with those of the competition. The equitable compensation includes a reasonable degree of security (if there is ever such an animal in the athletic world). Isn't it silly that athletic administrators almost always seem to give new coaches (especially those replacing fired coaches) more in terms of compensation, "tools and assets" than were given to the previous coach? Maybe the previous coach would not have had to be removed, or perhaps he or she would not have been tempted to leave a program for another one if adequate compensation, security, and "tools and assets" had been made available.

- A coach should have some protection. A coach should be provided with some type of protection against capricious or arbitrary actions by an administrator, an institution or various pressure groups. A three- or four-year "rolling contract" might be implemented, in which the coach would receive a new three- or four-year contract each year, assuming demonstration of competency. If the performance is judged unsatisfactory, the coach would have the remaining years of the contract to improve and to either earn a new rolling contract or work out the remaining years of the pact.

- Give the coach the chance to get on the tenure track. The coach who also has significant teaching responsibilities might be given the chance to be on a tenure track. However, this tenure-track contract should be tied into the coaching responsibilities without also forfeiting the right to teach within that institution. Again, coaches need some form of protection. But so, too, do institutions and athletic programs. Quality athletic programs could not survive for long if coaches were given tenure as teachers and then were allowed to give up their coaching responsibilities while remaining just as teachers. The end result would be a situation in which there would be no vacant teaching slot available for a new coach to assume.

Stier is director of athletics at Ohio Northern University.

College means more than degree

"If somebody uses the statistic of how few players in the NFL graduated from college one more time, I'll choke him."

"It's the number they use against us, and it's the wrong statistic. It doesn't mean anything. A guy in the NFL making a ton of money doesn't need a degree."

There are guys in college now who will make their living in basketball—maybe not playing it, but coaching it on some level or selling supplies or in some fringe trade. Eighty-one percent of those polled indicated that they would pay higher taxes to enhance it. More than half said they would pay an additional $200 in annual taxes to improve the schools."

Elsewhere in Education

States on their own, Bell says

"Education is a family matter, a local matter, a grass-roots matter. It's up to the states, and I think they've been doing a bum job," said Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell May 13 while attending an education conference at Michigan State University.

In referring to the report of the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which called for broad reforms in secondary education, Bell said the Reagan administration would restrict itself to providing leadership and to enforcing civil rights and equal opportunity laws and would not provide much new money or impose new controls.

Bell said the states must pay the bills for school improvements. He expressed support for the commission's report, but he said, "The state legislatures must levy the taxes and appropriate the money. It's that simple. We ought not start paying teachers' salaries and buying textbooks on the Federal level."

Colleges basing aid on merit

Many colleges and universities are offering scholarships based on merit rather than need in an attempt to attract top students in a time of decreasing enrollments.

An administrator at Brandeis University told The Wall Street Journal that every institution is vying for outstanding students to maintain and enhance academic reputation. "If we slip and don't get the best, then other students may not apply here," he said. "Outstanding students are a precious commodity these days."

Top students can upgrade a school's reputation and increase enrollment. Officials at Case Western Reserve University credit their merit scholarship program, which was inaugurated in 1974, with nearly tripling the number of applicants and doubling enrollment.

The competition can be as intense as the recruiting efforts among schools trying to recruit an outstanding high school athlete.

A North Carolina student last year turned down $4,000 in financial aid from Harvard University and chose to go to the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where he was offered a prestigious Morehead Scholarship, covering all expenses for four years.

Administrators at some colleges have criticized the merit scholarship program because they believe it is diverting funds from needy students to others, mostly middle-class students, who can better afford to pay college costs.

No bias in school test, court says

A Federal judge has ruled that Florida can deny high school diplomas to seniors who fail the state's functional literacy test.

The decision means that more than 3,000 high school seniors who failed the basic-skills test won't receive diplomas. Instead, they will get certificates of completion. The students are among the more than 108,000 seniors who first took the exam as sophomores in April 1981. Two-thirds of those who failed are black students, who called the test discriminatory and brought the court action.

It was the first test in Federal court of whether states can deny diplomas to those who fail a standard test. Many states have adopted standardized competency tests in the past few years, although most do not prevent students from receiving diplomas if they fail.

Half of nation moved in five years

Educators are paying close attention to a Census Bureau report April 12 that nearly half of all Americans moved during the last half of the 1970s. The nation's population is slipping away from the northern industrial states and toward the South and West, the report says.

In population shifts, the bureau said that nearly 94 million, or 44.5 percent, of the 210 million people over the age of five in this country in 1980 had changed residences since 1975.

Of those who moved, more than half stayed in the same county, about 25 percent stayed in the same state and another 25 percent moved to a different state.

The state with the lowest percentage of new arrivals was New York, with 3.8 percent. States with higher percentages of 1980 residents who lived in another state in 1975 were Nevada, 31.5 percent; Alaska, 29.1 percent; Wyoming, 28.3 percent, and Arizona, 23.9 percent.

GED test scores show increase

The General Educational Development Testing Service reports that the passing rate for persons earning high school equivalency credentials increased slightly last year, from 72.1 percent in 1981 to 74 percent in 1982.

Among reasons cited for the increase was evidence that candidates were better prepared.

A total of 792,132 persons took the test, with 535,503 earning scores that qualified them for an equivalency credential.

Approximately 48 percent of those taking the test reported that they were planning to continue their education or training beyond the high school level.

Students less likely to cohabit

An Ohio university faculty member has completed research showing that the sexual revolution on campus has slipped into reverse.

Sex is going out of style among students, according to the research of Nancy Clatworthy, assistant professor of sociology.

Clatworthy says the incidence of premarital sex and cohabitation are declining among the campus population.

Although her research results on cohabitation run counter to U.S. census figures, which show an increase, Clatworthy says that her research is more current and that campus lifestyles run ahead of the general population in such matters.

Demand for graduate programs in sports administration grows

By Jeffrey S. Durosko
and Charles R. Higgins

For years, athletes and coaches have been thrust into positions as athletic directors and general managers simply because they have been involved in athletics. But universities and professional organizations eventually discovered that training in football and baseball does not necessarily make one a good administrator.

And then, Walter O'Malley got an idea. O'Malley, longtime owner of the Los Angeles (nee Brooklyn) Dodgers, realized in the 1950s that sports organizations needed professionally trained persons to administer their affairs.

After years of discussions with Clifford Brownell, a friend of the late Mr. O'Malley's and a member of the Columbia University faculty, and James Mason, sports administration was born at Ohio University in 1966. Mason, the program's first director, is no longer at Ohio, but now is an associate dean at the University of Texas, El Paso.

Ohio University is the architect of the sports-administration curriculum and has placed more than 350 graduates in positions in sports-related organizations. A master's degree is offered at Ohio University, while other graduate and, more recently, undergraduate programs have popped up all over the country.

The addition of undergraduate programs in this area serves the needs of those students who express an early interest in the broad field of sports management. Many students, however, discover their vocational direction during their undergraduate years and find a need for graduate training.

Among other more established graduate programs are those at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst; Western Illinois University, and Grambling State University. In all, there are more than 40 programs in sports administration or sports management.

With competition for the entertainment dollar so fierce, it is imperative that sports organizations have sound persons in administrative positions. This makes the sports-administration program a popular and necessary one.

Over the past few years, inquiries to the Ohio University program have numbered in the thousands, while actual application numbers have risen as high as 300. Higgins and his interviewing committee have interviewed up to 125 of those persons each year for only 25 positions at Ohio University.

In the early years of the Ohio program, strict physical-education requirements had to be fulfilled to complete a degree, but they were dropped as the program adopted a more interdisciplinary approach.

Hallock retained by Pac-10 for research project

Wiles Hallock, who is retiring as executive director of the Pacific-10 Conference, is being retained by the conference to do historical research for the next two years.

Hallock will be employed half-time to pursue a narrative and documentary history of the conference and its predecessors, the Pacific-8 Conference, Athletic Association of Western Universities and Pacific Coast Conference.

He also intends to work on a history of the NCAA Football Television Plan.

Thomas C. Hansen, former assistant executive director of the NCAA, will replace Hallock as executive director of the Pac-10 July 1.

Courses in every related area are offered through Ohio University's other graduate schools. Students sample courses from management to law, from journalism to facility management. The aim of the course work is to provide the student with the knowledge he or she needs to function well in an administrative position on any level. Each student concentrates in the area in which he or she is most interested. Those areas include management, public relations, promotions, fund-raising and education.

Students have the opportunity for hands-on experience through practicum work throughout the university. Not until 1976 was practicum work offered, but both the students and Ohio University athletic personnel have benefited from the experience. Students have worked in all phases of the athletic department administration, including sports information, promotions, tickets and business. Students have worked in fund-raising for the university's successful Providing Athletes With Scholarships (PAWS) program and also in facility work.

One of the biggest opportunities for on-campus experience, however, comes in May when the Ohio University sports-administration program produces "Friday Night at the Fights." "Fight Night" is produced totally by students, who arrange training, tickets, promotion, public relations, concessions and overall management of the event.

But the most important part of the program comes in the internship phase of education, which gives the student full-time experience and the opportunity to apply skills discussed in the classroom and gained through practicum.

The program has received internship offers from all phases of collegiate and professional athletics, from arenas and sports facilities, sports-related resorts, fitness clubs, sporting-goods manufacturers, and sports promotion and marketing firms.

In showing their support of the program, many alumni of Ohio University sponsor interns at their organizations. Also, they return to Ohio for the annual Spring Sports Administration Symposium, either as speakers or participants. The symposium features prominent sports figures and draws not only alumni but other interested participants from across the country.

Higgins is coordinator of the sports administration program at Ohio University, and Durosko is a student in sports administration.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

The controversy surrounding Proposal No. 48 for Division I institutions has prompted me to propose a simple, honorable and fair solution. LeMoyné-Owen College competes at the Division III level, but our athletes compete every bit as fearlessly as do those in Division I.

In recognition of the contribution that our athletes make to LeMoyné-Owen College, we, in turn, guarantee that all students who maintain at least a 2.000 academic average and complete their athletic eligibility will be granted a lifetime scholarship at our college. We feel that this scholarship is an inducement to our athletes to complete their higher education and at the same time serves as an institutional recognition of their achievements in intercollegiate athletics. Our athletes typically take a reduced course load during the season of their sport, and our policy has resulted in a substantial portion of them graduating from our college as a result of the institution's offer of a lifetime scholarship.

Our athletes must maintain at least a C average from the moment they arrive on our campus until the day they graduate. The college feels that a lifetime scholarship is the least we can do to insure that they have a fair chance to receive their degrees.

LeMoyné-Owen College is a chartered member of the United Negro College Fund.

Lowell elevates track programs

The University of Lowell's women's indoor track and cross country programs will be raised to varsity status for the 1983-84 academic year.

Head coach Jerry Rideout said, "With our outdoor track program, which went varsity two years ago, this will give our women a year-round program in which to train and compete. It also will help us attract better student-athletes to the University of Lowell and will make recruiting easier."

Lowell sponsors 16 varsity sports for men and 11 for women.

ESPN plans pre-Olympic events

The Entertainment and Sports Programming Network has announced plans to provide extensive coverage of international competition leading up to the 1984 Olympic Games.

ESPN, a national cable sports network, will cover water polo, swimming, synchronized swimming, diving, canoeing, rowing and, possibly, cycling. The events will run through September and will be held at the Olympic sites in Los Angeles.

Questions/Answers

Q. What should an institution do if it wishes to host an NCAA championship?

A. Any institution interested in hosting an NCAA championship first should have its proposed budget approved by the governing sports committee for that championship, as well as by the Executive Committee. Two budgets should be submitted, one for games expense and one for entertainment expense. In the event gross receipts are not sufficient to meet the expense budgets, the Association will reimburse the host institution for the difference up to the amounts of the approved budgets. The host institution is responsible for all expenditures in excess of the approved budgets, even if gross receipts exceed the original estimate. Institutions interested in hosting men's championships should contact Jerry A. Miles, NCAA director of men's championships, and institutions interested in hosting women's championships should contact Patricia E. Bork, NCAA director of women's championships.

Division I baseball play-off picture clears

The picture is beginning to clear for the 1983 NCAA Division I Baseball Championship.

Twenty of the 36 participants now have been determined, including 14 automatic-qualifying conference champions and six at-large teams. Defending champion Miami (Florida) and runner-up Wichita state are among the at-large selections.

Six additional at-large teams will be picked May 23, following completion of conference tournaments that will determine the remaining 10 automatic qualifiers.

All 36 teams will compete in double-elimination regional tournaments beginning May 25 or 26. Those eight regional events will be completed by May 30, with the winners advancing to the 37th annual College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska, June 3-12.

Five of the eight regional sites have been set by the committee: North Carolina (East), Stanford (West I), Arizona State (West II), Florida State (South) and Texas (Central).

Miami and Wichita State have been among the nation's top-ranked teams all season, although Miami was ranked 10th in a recent national poll. The Hurricanes rely on the home-run bat of career leader Phil Lane and the pitching of Rob Souza (12-1) and Dave Eichhorn (34 games, 1.10 earned-run average). Wichita State, ranked No. 1 two weeks ago, was selected as an at-large team after being upset in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament by Indiana State.

The nation's second- and third-ranked teams in that poll, Brigham Young and San Diego State, both are in the Western Athletic Conference and will battle each other in that league's tournament May 19-21. San Diego State, with the help of first baseman Kerwin Danley, has been one of the nation's hottest teams, winning 42 of its last 46 games.

Texas, another season-long power, qualified by winning the Southwest Athletic Conference tournament. The Longhorns have the nation's fifth-ranked pitching staff, a strength common to 1983 championship participants. Early qualifiers include The Citadel, No. 2-ranked in pitching, New York Tech (No. 3) and North Carolina (No. 6). Michigan, fourth in pitching and third in fielding, is a strong contender in the Big Ten Conference.

The committee will select the remaining six at-large teams from runners-up in conferences with automatic qualification and champions in conferences without automatic qualification. Those conferences whose champions do not qualify automatically cannot have more than one participating team.

The championship field at press time included the following teams:

Conference champions: Atlantic Coast—North Carolina (41-8), Southern The Citadel (32-8), Atlantic 10—Temple (27-8), East Coast—Delaware (33-13), Southwest Athletic—Texas (52-13), Ohio Valley Morehead State (26-15), Southwestern Athletic—Grambling State (30-10), ECAC Section No. 2—New York Tech (24-8), ECAC Section No. 3—William and Mary (24-14), Sun Belt—South Alabama (40-24), Pacific-10 Southern Section—(37-15), Missouri Valley Indiana State (37-12), Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic—Florida State (54-16) and Southeastern Alabama (40-9).

At large: Miami (Florida) (56-17), Pan American (57-15), South Carolina (33-11), Arizona State (39-21), Wichita State (53-13) and Tulane (44-15).

Conferences whose champions qualify automatically and still have not been determined, with some of the contenders noted, are: Big Eight (Oklahoma, Oklahoma State), Big Ten (Michigan), ECAC Section No. 1 (Maine), Eastern Intercollegiate (Navy, Harvard), Mid-American (Ohio, Western Michigan), Northern California (Fresno State), Pacific-10 Northern Section (Washington State), Southern California (California-Santa Barbara, Fullerton State), Southland (Northeast Louisiana, Lamar, Texas-Arlington) and Western Athletic (Brigham Young, San Diego State, Hawaii).

Other teams under consideration for at-large selection include Mississippi State (Southeastern), James Madison (ECAC Section No. 3), North Carolina State (Atlantic Coast), Old Dominion (Sun Belt) and Midwestern City contenders Oral Roberts and Detroit.

San Diego State's Kerwin Danley scores

Tulsa could be hard pressed in defending golf crown

Trying to predict the outcome of this year's NCAA Women's Golf Championships is as difficult as pitching a good shot out of a sand trap.

Tulsa is the defending champion, but can it hold off Florida? Texas Christian was ranked No. 1 in the latest NCAA Women's Golf Committee rankings, but Ohio State appears to be peaking for a great finish to the season. Southern Methodist is strong, but can its younger players withstand the pressures of a national tournament? Miami (Florida) has one of the outstanding collegiate golfers in Penny Hammel, but does it have enough depth to be a challenger for the team title?

Those issues will be settled May 25-28 on the par-72, 5,922-yard Scarlet golf course at the University of Georgia, host of this year's championships. Seventeen teams and 102 participants will compete. Twelve of the 17 teams were selected on the basis of scoring-differential average from registered competition. Five teams and 17 individuals were selected at large. At least five of those 17 individuals were selected from Divisions II and III institutions. In the team competition, the low four scores for each team will count in each day's total score.

Tulsa, Florida, Texas Christian, Ohio State, Southern Methodist and Miami (Florida) were six of the 17 teams selected May 13 for the 1983 championships. Other teams chosen were Furman, New Mexico, Florida International, Georgia, South Florida, Illinois, Duke, Arizona State, Texas, Lamar and Arizona.

Tulsa ran away from the field in last year's championships, finishing 36 strokes ahead of Texas Christian. Although Tulsa returns three golfers from last year's team, it is unlikely the Golden Hurricane will dominate the championships again.

Coach Dale McNamara has two of the better women collegiate golfers in Kathy Baker and Jody Rosenthal but lost some of her team's punch because of the graduation of Dee Dee Lasker. Baker and Rosenthal finished 1-2 in the individual race last year. Not far behind was Barb Thomas, a consistent player who gives Tulsa an excellent chance of placing three in the top 10.

Tulsa's first-place finish at the recent Women's Southern Intercollegiate could provide the boost it needs to defend its title. Tulsa won the tournament, which was contested over the Scarlet golf course, with several of the top-ranked teams in the nation in the field.

Texas Christian returned every member of last year's team and hopes to use its runner-up finish as a springboard to the 1983 title. The Lady Horned Frogs are bolstered by all-Americans Marci Bozarth and Jenny Lidback. Along with Anne Kelly, Texas Christian's top finisher in last year's championships, Texas Christian has the talent to upend Tulsa.

Florida also appears to be a contender. The Gators have won four tournaments this year, led by sophomore standout Deb Richard. In addition to Richard, who has won three individual titles this spring, Lynn Connelly, the 1982 Southeastern Conference champion, and Laurie Burns, who has recovered from a bout with mononucleosis earlier this year, could fulfill coach Mimi Ryan's dream of winning a national title.

'82 Division III baseball lineup is intact for 1983 championship

Sports fans need look no further than the NCAA Division III Baseball Championship if they are looking for a rerun.

The field for the 1983 championship includes all six teams from the 1982 finals series, as well as four of the division's five previous national champions. Defending champion Eastern Connecticut State will have to beat 1980 winner Ithaca to advance from the Northeast regional.

First-round play begins May 20 when the first regional tournament gets started at Stanislaus State. Other tournaments begin May 22, May 24 and May 25, with first-round competition to be finished by May 28. Winners from the six double-elimination events will advance to the finals series, to be played June 2-5 at Marietta.

Stanislaus State, 1982 runner-up, is one of three teams from last year's finals that will be the hosts for first-round competition. North Carolina Wesleyan, rated in one poll as the division's No. 1 team, will be the host for the South region. Wisconsin-Oshkosh, ranked fourth nationally in the same poll, will be the Midwest host.

Ithaca will be the host in the Northeast, Monmouth (Illinois) in the Mideast and Montclair State in the Mid-Atlantic.

Marietta, 1981 champion and third a year ago, travels to Monmouth for that Mideast tournament. The Pioneers have been ranked second nationally, but the regional advisory committee placed them third in the Mideast region. William Paterson, a 1982 finalist, will compete in the Mid-Atlantic tournament at Montclair State.

Complete pairings for the 1983 championship are as follows:

Northeast (May 22-24 at Ithaca)—Worcester State (15-8-1) vs. Eastern Connecticut State (28-14) and Ramapo (23-12) vs. Ithaca (24-3).

Mid-Atlantic (May 22-24 at Montclair State)—Upsala (28-12) vs. William Paterson (28-6) and Montclair State (27-11) vs. Salem State (20-7).

South (May 20-22 at North Carolina Wesleyan)—Lynchburg (23-2) vs. Methodist (24-12) and North Carolina Wesleyan (32-4) vs. Salisbury State (21-10).

Mideast (May 25-28 at Monmouth)—Monmouth (23-2) vs. Ohio Northern (23-10), Luther (13-8) vs. North Park (28-8) and Elizabethtown (22-14) vs. Marietta (41-7).

Midwest (May 24-26 at Wisconsin-Oshkosh)—Concordia (Minnesota) (19-12) vs. Otterbein (21-8-1) and Washington (Missouri) (22-14-2) vs. Wisconsin-Oshkosh (26-2-1).

West (May 20-22 at Stanislaus State)—Stanislaus State (21-20) vs. La Verne (23-20-1).

Abilene Christian 'vaults' to top in Division II track

Abilene Christian will travel more than 750 miles to defend its title at the National Collegiate Division II Men's Outdoor Track Championships, but its stiffest competition may come from 75 miles down the road.

The championships will be held May 23-28 at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, along with the Division II women's championships.

Abilene Christian went to its first NCAA Division II meet last year and walked off with the title, largely on the strength of the pole vault results. The Wildcats are favored to repeat as champions, but Lone Star Conference rival Angelo State could make it tough.

To win the championship, Angelo State will have to overcome a potential 46 points in the pole vault. Abilene Christian finished first, second and third last year and could increase that to the top four this year.

Leading the vaulters is Brad Pursley, who vaulted 18-10½ earlier this spring to tie the American record. Behind him is Dale Jenkins, third last year, with an 18-4 vault this year; decathlete/hurdler/vaulter Tim Bright, 17-7 this year, and Bob Williams, 17-3.

The Wildcats also are strong in the sprints with the Williams brothers (Arthur and Darren) in the 100 and 200; Sam Houston State transfer Charlie Phillips, who was second in the 400 last year, and Tom Thompson, fourth in the 200 last year.

That combination should give the Wildcats strength in the 400-meter relay, an event they won in 1982; however, coach Don Hood believes they will be even stronger in the 1,600-meter event.

Other Abilene Christian qualifiers are Bright in the 110 hurdles and decathlon; Greg Johnson, second last year in the long jump; Peter Green in the triple jump, and David Simmons, who can score in all three weight events, Hood believes.

Angelo State was fifth in the meet last year, but coach Clint Ramsey rates the Rams better in 1983. Much of the potential for moving up depends on how well sprinter William Davis recovers from a leg injury. Davis was third in the 100 last year and second in the 200.

Without Davis, Ramsey still has Ernest Pennington, who has a 10.35 this year, and Paul Warren, who has run 10.48. Kevin Nance was ninth in the 110 hurdles last year and has improved his time to 14.12 this year.

The Rams are especially deep in the intermediate hurdles. Travel Hawkins had never run the hurdles before this year, and he leads four qualifiers with a time of 50.35.

Mats Hedberg has thrown 61-¼ in the shot put, and Ramsey hopes to score a lot of points in the weight events with Lennart Flyman, Bryon Sawyer and Paul Cacciapaglia.

A showdown may take place in the decathlon with defending Divisions I and II champion Tron Skramstad of Mount St. Mary's and Angelo State's Connie Silfver. Silfver already has scored 7,758 points this year.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo had won the Division II meet three years in a row before Abilene Christian moved in last year. The Mustangs have been hurt by graduation and injuries but still are capable of scoring.

The best of the group for Cal Poly-SLO probably is Carmelo Rios, the 1981 steeplechase champion, who also will double in the 5,000.

Division III women's track

Wisconsin-LaCrosse favored

There are 18 events in the National Collegiate Division III Women's Outdoor Track Championships, and Wisconsin-LaCrosse has qualified athletes in 15 of those events.

In fact, Wisconsin-LaCrosse coach Gary Wilson has 25 athletes who have met or broken the entry standard for the meet, which will be held May 23-28 at North Central College in Naperville, Illinois.

That depth gives Wisconsin-LaCrosse a golden opportunity to claim its first NCAA outdoor track championship and its second national title in a row. LaCrosse won the AIAW outdoor meet last year.

Leading the Wisconsin contingent is Tori Neubauer, who already has two national titles this year. She was the NCAA Division III women's cross country champion last fall and then won the two-mile run at the NAIA women's indoor meet in March.

Neubauer also finished fifth in the 5,000 at the Drake Relays against competition from all three divisions. She probably will double in the 3,000 and 5,000.

Another distance runner who may double for LaCrosse is Ann Heaslett, who has qualified in the 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000.

Other middle-distance and distance qualifiers include Doreen Ludlow and Lori Riemer in the 1,500, Mary Danielson in the 3,000, and Denise Drews and Patty Reynolds in the 5,000.

Wisconsin-LaCrosse also has a potential double winner in Cindy Leusmire, who won both the shot put and discus at the AIAW meet a year ago. Her 46-11½ in the shot and 153-0 in the discus are better than the winning throws in last year's NCAA meet.

The Indians also will be strong in the hurdles—with Amy Vandenberg and Penny Gerner—and in the relays.

Central (Iowa) won the NCAA. See Wisconsin-LaCrosse, page 8

Division II women's track

Cal Poly-SLO dominates field

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo outscored its nearest rival by more than 100 points last year to win the NCAA Division II Women's Outdoor Track Championships, and the Mustangs may be even stronger this year.

The meet will be held in conjunction with the men's meet May 23-28 at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau.

Depth has been the key for the Mustangs. From the 1,500 through the 10,000, they have 29 athletes qualified in the four events—so many that some probably will not make the trip.

Amy Harper is the star of the show. She has qualified in three events but probably will double in the 1,500, where she has a time of 4:18.38, and the 5,000, where she has run 15:50.4. Both performances are better than the winning times in last year's championships.

Harper also owns the fastest time among her teammates in the 3,000, but the top entry for the Mustangs is likely to be Lesley White (9:21.0). A total of 12 Mustangs have qualified for the event.

White probably will double in the 5,000 with Harper and Marilyn Nichols, and Nichols is the top 10,000 runner at 34:49.3.

The only event that the Mustangs did not score in last year was the 200, and they have no one there this year. However, they certainly could score points in every other event.

Tamela Holland, third in the 100 last year, returns, as does Arleen Van Warmerdam, who was eighth in the 400. In the 800, the Mustangs have Shari Ewing, third last year, along with Jill Ellingston, Kris Allyne and Allison Ehlen.

Janet Yarbrough was second in the 100 hurdles last year, and she already owns a 13.62 in the event. Cece Chandler could add some points for the Mustangs in the event, and both will join Holland and Van Warmerdam in the 400-meter relay.

Yarbrough, second in the long jump last year, is the top returner this year. Sue McNeal is the top returning high jumper, and Chris Dubois is the top returning heptathlete.

The toughest competition should be in the middle-distance and distance events. California-Davis returns Patty Gray, the defending champion in both the 3,000 and 5,000. South Dakota State returns Audrey Stavrum, who won the 10,000 last year.

South Dakota State's hopes were diminished with the loss of Nancy Gieske, runner-up in both the 3,000 and 5,000 last year. Gieske will not compete in the championships because of a stress fracture.

Northridge State has Carol Keller, who has run the second best Division II times in the country this spring in the 3,000 and 5,000, and Beth Weber, who has qualified in both of those

Close finish is expected in Division III men's track

The NCAA Division III Men's Outdoor Track Championships always have been close affairs. Only 18 points separated the top three teams last year, with Glassboro State winning the final event to clinch the title.

When the teams gather at North Central College in Naperville, Illinois, May 23-28 for the 1983 meet, it likely will be another close affair, with the possibility of a new champion emerging.

Hamline finished second a year ago and has some top athletes. That combined with injuries to Glassboro State's stable could mean prosperity for the Fighting Pipers.

Mike Manders is the top attraction for Hamline. Manders will be trying to win the shot put and discus for the third year in a row, and he certainly is capable of winning both again. He finished fourth at the NCAA indoor meet in the shot against competition from all three divisions.

Right behind him is teammate

Paul Kendrick, who was third in the shot and second in the discus.

Coach Kent Stahly also has two returning champions in the long jump. Dennis Hensch will defend his title from a year ago. Todd Wallert, who won the event in 1981, was third last year.

The other potential Piper champion is pole vaulter Dave Wenberg, who was fourth last year, vaulting with a cast on his arm. He has cleared 16 feet this year.

Glassboro State and Southern-New Orleans will be top contenders. Glassboro State has only 11 qualifiers for the 1983 meet, and coach Oscar Moore always has relied on depth. He had 22 qualifiers last year.

On top of that, Glassboro State will be missing five potential point scorers, including the injured Robert Beaman, who was second in both the 110 hurdles and long jump last year.

The good news is that Willie Lawson, the defending champion in

Cougars dominate Division II men's tennis

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville continued its domination of the NCAA Division II Men's Tennis Championships, winning the team title and taking the singles and doubles crowns last week in San Marcos, Texas.

The Cougars received a scare in the finals of the team competition—a single-elimination, dual-match format for the first time—when SIU-Edwardsville's top player, Ken Flach, was upset by Bill Jenkins of host Southwest Texas State. The Bobcats also recorded victories at No. 4 singles from Robert Stapper and at No. 5 from Carlos Correia; however, SIU-Edwardsville clinched the title by winning the Nos. 1 and 2 doubles.

There was, however, no upsetting

Flach in the singles championship. He won an unprecedented third straight title with a 4-6, 7-6, 7-5 victory over unseeded Scott Appledorn of Ferris State in the final. Flach rallied to win the match after Appledorn won the first four games of the third set.

Flach also collected his second consecutive doubles title. He teamed with Doug Burke to take the 1982 crown and this year was paired with Robert Seguso. They defeated Bart Hillock and Kevin Platt of Bakersfield State, 2-6, 6-3, 6-1, in the final.

The team title was the sixth straight for SIU-Edwardsville coach Kent DeMars. The Cougars also have won the last seven singles titles and four of the last five doubles championships.

Tennessee-Chattanooga wins title

Trailing, 4-2, following the singles matches, Tennessee-Chattanooga rallied to sweep all three doubles and win the 1983 NCAA Division II Women's Tennis Championships team title last week in Pomona, California.

The Lady Mocs' No. 3 doubles tandem of Kathy Tanzini and Lori Massengill defeated California-Davis' Ursula Donofrio and Marianne Martin in the decisive match of the team championship. The Mustangs had dominated the singles but could not come up with a doubles victory.

Upsets were at a minimum in the individual competitions, as both the singles and doubles finals matched seeded players.

In singles, No. 2 seed Suzanne Kuhlman of Georgetown beat top-seeded Sandra Elliott of Northern Colorado, 6-4, 6-4. They advanced to the finals after semifinal victories over the Nos. 4 and 3 seeds, respectively. Kuhlman topped Joan Mahon-Finder, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, and Elliott beat Helen Nazar, California-Davis. Both Kuhlman and Elliott survived first-set tiebreakers before taking relatively easy second sets in the semifinals.

No. 1 seeds Elliott and Mary Gillach of Northern Colorado won the doubles title with a straight-set victory over Patty Tiddy and Laurie Foederer of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, the No. 4 seeds. Tiddy and Foederer had defeated the second-seeded team of Pam Yates and Christine Picher, Tennessee-Chattanooga, to advance to the finals.

Redlands wins Division III men's tennis title

Redlands' top singles player, Erik Michelsen, led the Bulldogs to the team title and later captured the singles crown at the 1983 NCAA Division III Men's Tennis Championships May 9-15 in Albany, New York.

Michelsen's victory over 1981 singles titlist Donovan Jones of Claremont-Mudd-Scripps triggered Redlands' victory in the team competition. The Bulldogs won five of six singles matches before losing all three doubles contests.

For the first time in the eight-year history of the Division III tournament, a team championship based on a dual-match format was used. In the past, team scores had been based on matches won in singles and doubles.

Michelsen, the top seed, survived a three-set, opening-round singles match against Steve Paulsen of St. Olaf and then won four straight-set matches to advance to the final against Paul Brauner of Principia.

After dropping the first set, Michelsen broke Brauner's serve in the 12th game of the second set and closed out the match with a 6-1 final set. Brauner was seeded fifth and advanced to the final with victories over Jones, the No. 2 seed, and Joe Alamo of Redlands, the No. 3 seed.

In the doubles final, Alex Gaeta and Bob Swartout, Rochester, defeated Cris Bacharach and Ray Miller, California-Santa Cruz, in a tense three-set match. All three sets went to tiebreakers.

Upset winner

Bill Jenkins of Southwest Texas State defeated singles champion Ken Flach of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville in the team competition to help push the Bobcats into second place in the team standings of the Division II Men's Tennis Championships. Jenkins lost in the second round of individual singles play to John Hancock of Chapman. Jenkins, a junior, will be among the favorites for the singles championship in the 1984 championships.

Principia gains first championship with victory in women's tennis

Principia won two singles and two doubles matches in team competition to capture the 1983 Division III Women's Tennis Championships last week in Claremont, California.

Principia, winning its first NCAA championship in either men's or women's competition, got victories from Wendy Clark and Trish Suppes in singles play, and the doubles teams of Kristi Martin-Clark and Suzy Verheul-Julie Rhodes registered victories for Principia in team competition.

Behind Principia, which finished with 17 points, were North Carolina-Greensboro (13) and last year's champion, Occidental (11).

Occidental's Jean Marie Sanders won the singles crown in individual competition. Sanders, runner-up last year, defeated Laurie Laughlin of Southwestern (Tennessee), 6-1, 6-1.

Martin and Clark, who won the No. 1 doubles title in team competition, took home another trophy in individual doubles competition, defeating Nanette Huff and Cecelia Collins of Millsaps, 6-0, 6-3, in the doubles championship.

the 800, is healthy. He also was sixth in the 400 and anchored the second-place 1,600-meter relay team.

Moore has good hurdlers in Stanley Moore, Peter Reid and Anthony Abicca, and two high jumpers who have cleared 7-0 in Reid and Peter Sharpless.

Southern-New Orleans has had a history of scoring a lot of points with only a handful of athletes. Coach Artis Davenport's Black Knights, who finished third last year, scored 101 points using only six competitors.

Returning for Southern are Keith Nunnery, the defending 200-meter champion who was third in the 100; Michael Woods, who was fourth in the 400 and 11th in the 200, and Joseph Adams, who ran with Woods on the first-place 1,600-meter relay team.

Davenport also has three horizontal jumpers—Henry Matthews, Galen Usian and Ben Walker—who have exceeded 24 feet in the long jump and 49 feet in the triple jump. Some combination of these three likely will combine with Nunnery, Adams or Woods to help the Knights defend both their 400-meter and 1,600-meter relay titles.

The other returning individual champions include Frostburg State's Timothy Street in the 100 and meet last year but lost considerable talent from that team. However, all is not lost for coach Jane Kors. She still has Marcie Thurn, who was fifth in both the 100 and 200. Thurn also was the national champion in the long jump and anchored the first-place 400-meter relay team.

Lorenzo Waters in the 400 hurdles, Wisconsin-Stevens Point decathlete Gary Van Vreede, Pomona-Pitzer's Stanley Watts in the high jump, Buffalo's James Parker in the triple jump, Haverford's Ken Foley in the 1,500 and Fredonia State's Bernie Prabucki in the 5,000.

Also returning to the meet is Nancy Cisar, who was sixth in the 200, fourth in the 400 and ran on the 400-meter relay.

Fisk again will be interesting to watch. The Lady Bulldogs, who finished third last year, scored 88 points with only five athletes.

Three of the five are back, including

Karen Boxley, second in both the 100 and 200 and eighth in the 400, and Yelandra May and Sharon Gilmore, both of whom placed in both the 100 and 200. This trio ran on the second-place teams in both relay events.

Another athlete returning is Trenton State's Colleen Casey, the defending national champion in both the 5,000 and 10,000.

Interpretations

EDITOR'S NOTE: Publication of an interpretation in this column constitutes official notice to the membership. Questions concerning these or other O.I.s should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the Association's national office (P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201; 913/384-3220).

Campus entertainment

(Revises Case No. 228)

Situation: Prospective student-athletes visit a member institution's campus. (198)

Question: During the visit, would it be permissible to entertain the prospective student-athletes in the form of a luncheon, dinner or brunch at the home of an institutional staff member (e.g., the director of athletics, a coach, a faculty member or the institution's president)?

Answer: Yes. Inasmuch as it is not unusual for institutional employees to entertain prospective students in such a manner at their homes, it would be permissible to so entertain prospective student-athletes, it being understood that the entertainment is at a scale comparable to that of normal student life and not excessive in nature. [B 1-8-(j)-(3)]

Recruiting—advertisements

(Revises Case No. 182)

Situation: Game programs or other printed materials (e.g., periodicals designed to analyze recruiting activities) are published to provide information concerning the athletic participation or evaluation of prospective student-athletes. (478)

Question: Is it permissible for a member institution to buy or arrange to have space in the game program or other printed materials (e.g., recruiting publications) for any purpose whatsoever, including advertisements, a listing of prospective or enrolled student-athletes who will attend the institution and informative materials related to the institution?

Answer: No. The publication of advertising or promotional material by or in behalf of a member institution designed to solicit the enrollment of prospective student-athletes is a form of recruiting not permitted by the Association. Accordingly, the purchase of advertising space or the publication of promotional materials of any kind in a publication that is regularly issued for the purpose of facilitating the recruiting of student-athletes is prohibited. [B 1-1-(b), B 1-4-(a) and B 1-9-(a)]

Satisfactory progress—acceptable degree credit

Situation: Effective August 1, 1984, the calculation of credit hours under the eligibility requirements of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6) [satisfactory-progress rule] shall be based upon hours earned or accepted for degree credit in a specific baccalaureate degree program for the student-athlete at the certifying institution. (592)

Question: In what manner may a student-athlete who has not yet declared a major, or who changes his or her major, meet the requirements of this legislation?

Answer: During the first two years of enrollment, a student-athlete who has not yet declared a major may use credits acceptable toward any of the institution's degree programs in meeting the satisfactory-progress requirements. A student-athlete would be required to declare a major by the beginning of the third year of enrollment (fifth semester or seventh quarter); from that point, the credits used to meet the satisfactory-progress requirements must be degree credit toward the student's declared degree program. A student-athlete who changes his or her major may comply with the satisfactory-progress requirements if the change in majors is documented appropriately by the institution's academic authorities, if the credits earned prior to the change are acceptable toward the degree previously sought and if the credits earned from the time of the change are acceptable toward the new desired degree. [B 5-1-(j)-(6)-(iii)]

Higher education spots needed

NCAA Productions is seeking curriculum ideas for higher education promotional messages that are scheduled this fall on NCAA football telecasts produced by ABC Sports, CBS Sports and Turner Broadcasting System, Inc.

These plans, of course, are subject to the ultimate disposition of litigation before the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals. If legally permissible, the 1983 football season will be the fifth consecutive year the NCAA has devoted promotional time on regional and national football telecasts to inform viewing audiences about contributions of higher education. Numerous institutions and curriculums have been featured, not only during football telecasts but during televised coverage of the Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships.

NCAA institutions are urged to submit curriculum ideas to be featured during these 90-second messages. The specific institution and its program will not be the main focus of the messages, rather the curriculum itself (i.e., oceanography, wildlife management, veterinary medicine) will be emphasized to feature its merits and encourage people interested in attending college to consider it as an option. The Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) has worked closely with the NCAA in this effort and encourages institutions to submit ideas.

"The curriculum should be stimulating from a video and audio standpoint, and students and faculty must be available for on-camera interviews during production this summer, in addition to classroom and field settings for videotaping," according to James W. Shaffer, NCAA assistant director of productions and development.

Institutions interested should submit a one-page curriculum description and accompanying photos to be considered for the 1983 higher education series. Fifteen curriculums will be selected, with others to be chosen at a later date for airing during telecasts of the basketball championships on CBS Sports, NCAA Productions and the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network.

Institutions interested in submitting curriculum suggestions should send the information to Shaffer at the national office by no later than June 3. The programs selected will be announced in the June 22 issue of The NCAA News and contacted by Shaffer for production arrangements.

Enrollment forms mailed for insurance program

Insurance protection again is available to member institutions through the NCAA's annual insurance program.

Enrollment forms for the 1983-84 academic year have been mailed to all members for the travel accident and loss-of-revenue insurance programs, both developed by the NCAA Insurance Committee. The athletic accident program has been dropped because of declining participation.

The travel accident program provides 24-hour coverage for all types of accidents, including group travel to and from practices. Coverage begins at 60 cents per insured person for $5,000 coverage; premiums vary as additional coverage is purchased.

Members can insure student-athletes on all varsity and subvarsity teams, as well as cheerleaders and staff members.

The loss-of-revenue program is designed to protect catastrophic losses, including hijacking, incurred by varsity football and basketball teams. Members can purchase coverage in units of $10,000, up to a maximum $2.5 million or 100 percent of gross receipts.

Premiums for loss-of-revenue insurance are $7.50 per $10,000 of coverage for football and $15 per $10,000 of coverage for basketball.

Both programs are underwritten by the Aetna Life Insurance Company and are administered by Professional Planning Services in Shawnee Mission, Kansas. More information can be obtained by contacting James Lowry at Professional Planning Services or Richard D. Hunter, director of finance, at the NCAA national office.

The Insurance Committee decided to end the athletic accident program this year after Aetna declined to underwrite the program. The number of participating institutions dropped from 53 in 1978-79 to 18 in 1982-83.

Hunter said that institutions had found more economical options for purchasing such coverage. Its availability meant that the Association no longer needed to make available the coverage to its members.

Campbell 'positions' Creighton for comeback

By Steve Sinclair
Omaha World-Herald

Eric Campbell of Creighton has never been in an embarrassing position. He can play them all.

"I like playing," Campbell said. "I don't really care where I'm at."

In an April 28 double-header, Campbell was everywhere. He played all nine positions as Creighton swept a double-header from Bellevue College, 12-0 and 14-4, at Booth Field in Omaha.

The victories extended the 29-7 Bluejays' streak to 17 games. A big winning streak is always fun, and coach Dave Underwood wanted the day to be fun for Campbell, but not a farce.

"I think Bellevue understands that we were in no way trying to make a mockery of things," Underwood said.

Underwood proposed the idea as a tribute to Campbell, a junior from Omaha Burke. Campbell is batting .431 and has a 3-1 record and a team-leading 2.84 earned run average as a pitcher.

Prior to the double-header, Underwood had used Campbell as a pitcher, catcher and in all three outfield positions.

"The whole idea was that the guys and I think a lot of Eric Campbell and how valuable he is to the ballclub," Underwood said. "It's something we did as a group to show we think quite a bit of him."

Bellevue coach Herb Kupfer said it didn't bother him. He's an Eric Campbell fan, too.

"He's an excellent athlete, and he works very hard at it," Kupfer said. "You'd like to have 18 more of those guys. He's a real credit to the game."

Campbell started at first base and went around the horn playing all the infield positions, including catcher, in the first game, which was shortened to five innings by the 10-run rule. He handled ground balls at third base and second base without an error and made a putout at first base.

"The pitching is the only thing I didn't do as well as I thought I should have," Campbell said.

He pitched the first inning of the second game. The first batter walked and the second reached base on an error. Bill Smith singled, but the lead runner was thrown out at home. Joe Fonfaria followed with a three-run home run.

"I threw the same pitches I've thrown all year," Campbell said. "They went up there swinging. They just hit it."

Campbell's next stop was center field, and Tom Drees took over pitching in the second. Drees allowed only one hit the rest of the game. Campbell played right field in the third and the rest of the game in left field. "It was fun to do it," Campbell said. "It's something you can't do every day, but it's something you'd like to do once a year if you've got the chance."

The big chance Campbell wants is a shot at professional baseball. "That's what I'm gunning for," Campbell said. As a junior, Campbell will be eligible for the professional draft in June. He said it would be nice if he's picked, but he doesn't know what his chances are.

"Several clubs have expressed interest in him as a catcher," Underwood said. "We'd obviously like him back, but we want him to do what is best for Eric Campbell."

Both Campbell and Underwood said catcher will be his position in the pros.

"He's a very heady ballplayer," Underwood said. "He gets by in a lot of situations by thinking the game of baseball. As he plays and develops, catcher is definitely his spot."

Campbell played some catcher in high school, but knee surgery forced him to spend most of his time as a pitcher and outfielder. He started his college career at Northeastern Oklahoma A&M, a junior college, strictly as a pitcher.

"I found out Creighton was looking for a catcher, and that's what I always wanted to do, so I gave coach Underwood a call," Campbell said.

His timing was right. Paul Blanchard, a Creighton catcher, had just told Underwood he wanted to transfer to Minnesota and play football.

"About 10 minutes later, the phone rang and it was Eric," Underwood said. "He wanted to know if we could use him at Creighton."

Now, Campbell hopes to help Creighton receive some more recognition — a national ranking.

Assistant Director of Intercollegiate Athletics

BUTLER UNIVERSITY

Butler University in Indianapolis, Indiana, is seeking candidates to fill the newly created position, Assistant Director of Intercollegiate Athletics. The person appointed to this position will have primary responsibility for women's intercollegiate athletics. At present, Butler University fields NCAA Division I women's teams in basketball, volleyball, tennis, softball, swimming, and cross country. The Assistant Director will report to the Director of Intercollegiate Athletics, who has overall responsibilities for the administration of intercollegiate athletics and sport services.

Founded in 1855, Butler University is an independent, non-sectarian, coeducational institution. It is made up of a University College and five senior colleges, conferring both undergraduate and graduate degrees. Student enrollment is approximately 2,100 full-time, of whom approximately 1,300 are women. Some 67% of the students reside on the Butler campus. The campus is an attractive 254-acre site located in a residential neighborhood in the northwest section of Indianapolis.

The responsibilities of the Assistant Director will include administration and promotion of women's intercollegiate athletics, including the supervision of recruiting, coaching, financial aid, and representation of the University with appropriate athletic organizations. Coaching, especially women's volleyball, is a possibility, but it is not a necessary condition for consideration of applicants.

In addition to appropriate academic credentials, qualifications for the position include successful experience in intercollegiate athletics, demonstrable administrative skills, ability to communicate effectively orally and in writing, and familiarity with NCAA and AIAW regulations. The Assistant Director will be expected to work effectively with diverse constituencies of the University.

The position is open immediately. It is anticipated that the position will be filled no later than September 1, 1983. The application deadline is June 27, 1983. Please send a letter of application, a resume, personal references, and any other applicable papers to:

Mr. William L. Sylvester
Director of Intercollegiate Athletics
Butler University
4600 Sunset Avenue
Indianapolis, IN 46208

An equal opportunity employer. Female and minority candidates are urged to apply.

Qualifications: Bachelor's degree and minimum four years' experience in a major office operation or as a full-time staff member of sports information office at a Division I institution or conference. Responsibilities: Creative writing ability, develop conference brochures and releases, demonstrated marketing and promotional abilities, coordinating network of TV/cable and radio exposure for conference.

Candidates not meeting qualifications and lacking experience to carry out all responsibilities will not be considered. Successful candidate will locate in Champaign, Illinois. Closes June 3. Send resume and maximum of three letters of reference to:

Cecil N. Coleman, Commissioner
Midwestern City Conference
509 Park Lane Drive, Suite M
Champaign, Illinois 61820

Heat, high humidity worry track coaches

By Eric D. Zemper
NCAA Research Coordinator

Several spring sport championships each year are located in hot, humid areas of the country. The most noticeable example this year is the NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Outdoor Track Championships in Houston. Some coaches from cooler areas have requested information on how best to prepare their athletes for competition in the heat and humidity.

The best way to acclimate athletes to heat and humidity is to have them train for one or two weeks in that environment. Since it is impractical for Northern coaches to take their teams to the championships site a week or two early, an alternative approach is needed.

William C. Adams of the University of California, Davis, has done considerable research on heat stress in athletics and has a very practical solution. He suggests athletes can be acclimated adequately by simply doing normal workouts in a sweat suit for one hour a day for five to six consecutive days before leaving for the championships site. The sweat suit creates a hot, humid "microenvironment" around the athlete; it is a sort of "mini-Houston," which will serve to help the body adapt.

The body reacts by increasing the blood plasma volume, thereby creating a greater fluid reservoir. This is the key to adapting to exercise in the heat. Along with practicing in a sweat suit, the athlete should get plenty of water before, during and after practice.

One caution should be mentioned: avoid using rubber suits. Use of rubber suits can be dangerous because they can quickly lead to dehydration and serious heat-stress problems. (See articles on heat stress in the August 11 and August 25, 1982, issues of The NCAA News.) Adequate adaptation can be accomplished with a regular sweat suit.

Although most athletes generally do not need extra vitamins or special foods if they eat a well-balanced diet, a further suggestion about use of vitamin C comes from Wayne Van Huss, a professor of exercise physiology at Michigan State University.

He notes that recent research on well-nourished mine workers in South Africa, who work in very hot and humid conditions, indicates that use of 250 milligrams per day of vitamin C considerably reduces the adaptation time for working in such an environment. The extra vitamin C should be taken during the week of adaptation.

During the early stages of the heat acclimatization process, there is considerable loss of potassium from the body. It also would be helpful to have athletes eat more potassium-rich foods such as bananas and oranges during this period.

There is no guarantee that working out in a sweat suit, using extra vitamin C and potassium-rich foods will do the trick. Each athlete reacts a little differently to heat and humidity. But it is a lot cheaper and more practical than going to the meet site a week or two before the competition. In most cases, the suggestions should provide a reasonable head start for the athlete, so the new conditions will not be as stressful when they get to the championships site.

NCAA

asserting their "right" to contract independently for television dollars.

"I firmly believe that to the extent that the NCAA's television restraints upon Oklahoma and Georgia and other member institutions with excellent football programs are anti-competitive, these restraints are fully justified under the rule of reason in that they are necessary to maintain intercollegiate football as amateur competition.

"The restraint is not unreasonable in its effect on competition; its pro-competitive effect clearly outweighs the anti-competitive effect. . . ."

The majority disagreed with Judge Barrett, concluding that the television plan is one "that would always or almost always tend to restrict competition and decrease output."

The majority also did not concur with Judge Barrett's application of the rule of reason, stating that the assertions as to the purpose and benefits of the television controls

"do not overcome the anti-competitive effects of the restraints."

For example, the majority opinion notes that the trial court said the disparity in revenues between schools can be reduced by means "that do not threaten to cartelize the market or to restrict the number of buyers and sellers of NCAA football. A properly drawn system of pass-over payments to ensure adequate athletic funding for schools that do not earn substantial television revenues is one possibility."

The suit originally was filed September 8, 1981, by Georgia and Oklahoma at the request of the College Football Association, as a class-action suit on behalf of the CFA membership, challenging the NCAA on the question of property rights in televising college football.

After that filing, however, the plaintiffs redirected their case to one based solely on antitrust charges. The CFA had funded the litigation, but one week before the trial in September 1982, the CFA membership voted to finance the trial strictly on a voluntary basis.

Charles M. Neinas, executive director of the CFA, said last week that he did not believe the district court would allow the NCAA to offer any type of football television plan, stating that Judge Burciaga is "not going to let the NCAA back in . . . because he can't trust the NCAA."

Neinas said it was not too late for his organization to put together a television package for its members for the coming season, however. "If the NCAA gets a stay, that's one thing," he said. "But if they don't get a stay, we want to be ready to fill the void."

He declined to disclose to the Associated Press any details of a possible CFA plan or an opinion as to how the CFA or any other organization effectively could control the rights to college football television if Judge Burciaga's original decision stands.

Bowl designation dropped from I-AA final; format is retained

In its May 9-12 meeting in Charleston, South Carolina, the NCAA Division I-AA Football Committee agreed not to give the championship game a bowl designation and voted to retain a 12-team championship play off format.

Last year's championship game, which was held in Wichita Falls, Texas, was called the Pioneer Bowl. The committee felt the bowl designation does not clearly identify the game as the Division I-AA championship and decided not to adopt a bowl designation for this year's championship game.

This year's Division I-AA Football Championship will be held December 17 at Johnson Hagood Stadium in Charleston, Charleston, which was approved earlier as the site of the championship game, was awarded a two-year contract.

Eastern Kentucky football coach Roy Kidd, who represented the American Football Coaches Association at the meeting. The Division I-AA coaches also favored dropping the bowl designation in order to promote the national championship image to the public.

The committee voted to retain the 12-team play-off format used last year after reviewing proposals for eight-, 12- and 16-team play-off formats. Four-team play-off formats were used in the first three Division I-AA championships, which began in 1978. The play-off format expanded to eight teams for the 1981 championship and increased to 12 last year.

Under the 12-team format, automatic qualifications will be awarded to the champions of the Big Sky Conference, Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, Ohio Valley Conference, Southern Conference, Southland Conference, Southwestern Athletic Conference and Yankee Conference. The top two independent teams, as evaluated by the committee, will receive berths; the remaining three teams will be selected at large by the committee.

Other recommendations of the committee include:

- A proposal that would allow the committee to grant exceptions to the in-season round-robin criterion used in determining an allied conference's eligibility for automatic-qualification consideration as set forth in Executive Regulation 1-6-(b)-(4).

- An increase in the size of the official traveling parties of the teams competing in the championship from 57 to 60 and the squad size from 50 to 52.

options. The point of law has been settled."

Vincent J. Dooley, director of athletics University of Georgia

"I hope the present [NCAA] TV contract will remain in effect through this year. Otherwise, I believe it would create a chaotic situation, coming this late."

Andy Coats, plaintiffs' attorney Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

"... the NCAA may file a petition for rehearing. If they do, that continues the stay until it's ruled on. If it's turned down—which we think it will be—they can ask for a stay while they go to the Supreme Court."

"The Supreme Court only takes one case out of 200, but this is one they might look at. We hope the matter is resolved pretty quickly, but in all likelihood, there will be no answer until next fall."

Edward Bozik, director of athletics University of Pittsburgh

"By remanding this thing back to Judge Burciaga's court, it could be a time-consuming process. Who knows what anybody can do next? We can't make a definitive statement. We don't have all the information yet. . . ."

"We feel that some sort of regulation is necessary, whether it's the NCAA or whatever. We don't think it would be in the best interest of intercollegiate athletics for there to be an unregulated marketplace for football on TV."

Richard H. Perry, director of athletics University of Southern California

"The feeling I'm sensing is that people feel the worst thing that could happen now would be for everybody independently to go into the marketplace and sell without controls."

Neal Pilon, president CBS Sports

"[I can] see a set of circumstances where network television will no longer broadcast college football. . . . [I can] also envision a set of facts under which there will be no change at all."

Team-selection changes sought by Men's Ice Hockey Committee

Improvements in the team selection process and improved communications among committee members are what the NCAA Men's Ice Hockey Committee hopes will result from changes being recommended to the Executive Committee for the 1984 Division I championship.

The ice hockey committee, which found itself in a controversy as the 1983 championship started, is suggesting new guidelines for selecting championship participants. In addition, there will be increased involvement by advisory committee members prior to selection.

The selection guidelines, which will be acted on by the Executive Committee in August, call for the following steps:

- Automatic qualification would be granted to the champions of three conferences: the Western Collegiate Hockey Association, the Central Collegiate Hockey Association and the Eastern College Athletic Conference. All three conferences hold postseason tournaments, and it is anticipated that they would continue to designate the winners of those tournaments as the automatic-qualifying representatives. All three conference champions would play at home in the first round.

- Two teams from the East region would be selected on an at-large basis. The highest seeded of those teams would be the final home team in the first round.

- Three at-large teams would be selected without regard to region.

The new format would guarantee three places to Eastern teams and two places to Western teams. The remaining three teams could be from either region.

The format used in 1983 guaranteed four spots to teams from the East and four spots to teams from the West. The controversy occurred when the committee selected Minnesota-Duluth, a third team from the WCHA, as the final Western team, rather than CCHA regular-season champion Bowling Green State, which had been upset by Michigan State in the CCHA tournament.

The action prompted the resignation of committee chair Jerry York, who was replaced on the committee by Ron Mason of Michigan State. William J. Riley of Lowell replaced York as chair.

In addition to the new selection guidelines, NCAA Assistant Director of Championships Dennis L. Poppe said that the Men's Ice Hockey Committee would be increasing the number of telephone conferences involving all advisory committee members prior to the final selection. Previous policy called for a single combined conference following several regional discussions.

"The committee believes this will provide better information for advisory committee members and those who might be replacing committee members for the selection call," Poppe said. "We want to make sure all parties involved have complete information at the time of selection."

Discussion prior to the ice hockey committee's meeting in early May centered on a possible merger of the CCHA and WCHA, as reported in earlier editions of The NCAA News.

The merger talks failed to produce an agreement, though, when the CCHA rejected a WCHA counter-proposal. The WCHA wanted to form one league with two divisions and move two teams from the CCHA to the WCHA.

CCHA officials, who initiated the talks during the 1983 NCAA championship in Grand Forks, North Dakota, said they would continue to examine any proposals for expansion, merger or other action that would be in the league's best interest.
