

Committee to develop alternative TV plan

The NCAA Football Television Committee has voted to develop an alternate football television plan or plans that could be implemented for the 1983 season if the Association's present plan and contracts do not remain in effect for the coming fall season.

Meeting May 27 in Chicago, the committee noted that the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan and implementing contracts are in effect at this time and will remain in effect at least until the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals considers the Association's petition for rehearing by the full eight-judge circuit court. That petition was filed with the circuit court May 26.

However, the committee agreed that it would be necessary to move quickly if the current stay of the earlier Federal district court injunction that invalidates the NCAA plan is removed.

"NCAA attorneys believe that an alternative plan can be devised that will meet the legal requirements found in the present opinion of the court of appeals and yet protect gate attendance and provide network television," explained David E. Cawood, NCAA assistant executive director and television program director.

Committee agrees with assessment

The committee agreed with that assessment in its Chicago meeting. Also meeting with the committee were the following representatives of the Division I-A football conferences: John A. Fuzak, Atlantic Coast Conference; Carl C. James, Big Eight Conference; Wayne Duke, Big Ten Conference; James W. Lessig, Mid-America Athletic Conference; Lewis A. Cryer, Pacific Coast Athletic Association; F. A. Geiger and Thomas C. Hansen, Pacific-10 Conference; Charley Scott, Southeastern Conference, and Fred Jacoby, Southwest Athletic Conference.

Eugene F. Corrigan, University of Notre Dame, represented Division I-A independent institutions. The Western Athletic Conference was represented by Joseph L. Kearney, a member of the television committee.

The committee reviewed with the conference and independent representatives Bylaw 8, which provides the mechanism by which the football-playing members of Division I can achieve any type of television plan they want, and Division I-A members have veto power, in effect, over any plan presented.

"The Division I-A institutions can draft their own plan in any manner they want, without being affected by anyone," Wiles Hallock, chair of the Football Television Committee, said. "They do not have to accept a predetermined plan, and they can submit options if they wish and they can determine themselves exactly what procedures they want to follow."

Council will determine legality

Acknowledging that no alternate plan would be advanced until the NCAA Council determines that it would be legal and appropriate to implement such a plan, the committee agreed on the following timetable:

- The administrative subcommittee of the Football Television Committee will meet June 13 with NCAA legal counsel to devise an alternate plan or plans that would conform with the Federal antitrust laws as interpreted by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals. Members of the administrative subcommittee are Hallock, chair; Kearney; Hugh D. Hindman, Ohio State University; Andrew T. Mooradian, University of New Hampshire; John J. Crouthamel, Syracuse University; John D. Swoford, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Ronald Schipper, Central College (Iowa).

•By June 22, the subcommittee will present a preliminary recommended plan or plans to the full Football Television Committee for consideration.

•The preliminary plan or plans, as revised by the committee, then would be considered by the Division I Steering Committee June 24.

•The plan(s) also would be presented to the Division I summer meeting June 24-25 for discussion, following which the television com-

Tori Neubauer won the 3,000- and 5,000-meter runs to help Wisconsin-LaCrosse capture the Division III Women's Outdoor Track Championships. Neubauer's winning times set records in the events. Results on page 5.

Delegates named to attend June meeting

A total of 112 persons have been named to represent Division I voting allied conferences and independent institutions at the first Division I summer meeting June 24-25 in Kansas City, Missouri.

They will join 40 head football coaches and head basketball coaches selected earlier by the American Football Coaches Association and the National Association of Basketball Coaches, as reported in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News. Also attending the meeting will be the NCAA Division I Steering Committee.

Each voting allied conference in the division was asked to select from two to four representatives to attend the meeting, based on the conference's sponsorship of men's programs, women's programs or both. A conference sponsoring both is permitted to send a faculty athletic representative, a director of athletics, a primary woman administrator of athletics programs and the conference's executive officer.

Conferences offering only men's programs did not designate the primary woman administrator, while those involved only with women's programs will send the conference commissioner and a primary woman administrator.

In addition, the NCAA Administrative Committee, acting for the Division I Steering Committee, has invited six persons to represent the 19 Division I institutions that do not belong to a voting allied conference.

Following are the conference and independent representatives invited to attend the meeting, as of May 31:

Faculty Athletic Representatives

Allen Agnew, California State University, Fresno, Pacific Coast Athletic Association; Wilford S. Bailey, Auburn University (interim president), Southeastern Conference; Richard Block, Hofstra University, East Coast; Thomas Bohannon, Appalachian State University, Southern; John O. Bolvin, University of Pittsburgh, Big East; William Bradford, M.D., Duke University, Atlantic Coast; John Fox, Harvard University, Ivy Group; Walter Fredricks, Marquette University, independent; Sam R. Gennuso, Arkansas State University, Southland.

Daniel G. Gibbens, University of Oklahoma, Big Eight; Harold Godwin, University of Idaho, Big Sky; Charles Ihrke, University of Wisconsin, Green Bay, Association of Mid-Continent Universities; Michael Johnson, University of Houston, Southwest Athletic; Henry Jones, Howard University, Mid-Eastern Athletic; Robert J. ## Association's efforts to promote women's sports showing results

One year into an intensive effort by the NCAA to help promote women's intercollegiate athletics, member institutions already are seeing the results.

The Executive Committee last year approved nearly $300,000 to be used in the current fiscal year for promoting women's athletics. The money has been targeted for everything from television exposure to bumper stickers, and the results have been positive.

"Our thought last year was that we'd make at least a three-year concentrated effort with special funds for promotion of women's athletics," said John T. Waters, NCAA director of promotion and public relations. "At the end of the three-year period, we'll make an evaluation of our success and determine which areas we will continue to pursue."

"Based on the first 10 months of our program, I think we're very encouraged. We are committed to maximizing the potential of women's athletics."

The NCAA's most visible promotional efforts have included the televising of the Division I Women's Basketball Championship and other women's championships; a weekly nation-wide radio program, which devotes significant time to women's athletics, and a two-day press conference on women's basketball held in January in New York.

These efforts and others have been directed at increasing the media's and the public's awareness of women's intercollegiate athletics.

"We've tried to take a realistic look at the specific needs for women's athletics," said NCAA staff member Cheryl L. Levick, who soon will devote full time to women's athletics media relations and promotion. "We are trying to supply the financial and personnel support to accomplish these goals. We want to use the print and electronic media to the best of our ability to promote women's athletics."

A key to the Association's promotional efforts has been a special fund designed to promote women's basketball and women's gymnastics, as well as baseball. Approximately $134,000 has been channeled into this program, which includes the weekly radio show produced by the NCAA and Host Communications, Inc., and broadcast on the CBS Radio Network.

The five-minute program is aired over more than 150 stations across the nation, including stations in most of the country's major markets. The series began in January and has included programs on women's basketball, swimming, gymnastics, softball, tennis and golf and also a segment on fund-raising for women's athletics. Bids currently are being received for a 52-week version of the show for next year.

In addition to televising the Division I women's basketball final, CBS-TV covered the 1983 NCAA Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships and the 1983 NCAA Division I Women's Gymnastics Championships. An additional nine NCAA women's championships were cablecast by the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network during the 1982-83 academic year.

Last winter's women's basketball press conference generated significant coverage in New York and nationally, according to Levick. Coaches and

Oklahoma's Tubbs returns to active duties

By Al Carter

Houston Chronicle

Billy Tubbs must have thought he had died and gone the other way. So this was hell. In the game of hereafter hoops, this was the low post—the ultimate technical foul.

Minutes after he was struck down by a car while jogging near his Norman, Oklahoma, home the morning of February 20, Tubbs found himself surrounded by policemen. For some reason—a guilty conscience has not been ruled out—Tubbs thought the officers were, heaven forbid, referees.

Tubbs, the jogger, had come in second against the Oldsmobile Cutlass. Tubbs, the Oklahoma Sooners' basketball coach, had no intention of letting a bunch of satanic striped shirts get the best of him. The officers told Tubbs to go to the hospital. So Tubbs told the officers where to go (a small provocation, considering that all parties, in his mind, were already there).

As usual, Tubbs had his say, but the men in charge had their way. And it's a good thing. The college basketball fraternity nearly lost one of its most colorful and successful coaches that quiet Sunday morning. Tubbs can laugh about the accident now—and he does.

"I finally realized how big OU basketball has gotten," Tubbs says. "Two doctors were operating on me, and one of them stopped and looked at me and said: 'Billy, before we finish up, we'd really like to talk to you about better seats for next season.'"

Because all has turned out well, Sooner publicist Mike Treps doesn't mind talking about the 1981 season, when Tubbs' first Sooner club finished 9-17 and was such a road patsy that Iowa State jumped to a 22-0 lead against OU in Ames.

"Billy spent most of that season running out in front of cars trying to get hit," Treps says.

They all missed, a fortunate thing for OU basketball fans. As he did for Lamar University and as he promised to do for OU, Tubbs has built a winning program. The Sooners' back-to-back 20-victory campaigns of the past two seasons are a first for the school. He took OU to the National Invitation Tournament in 1982 and was two weeks away from leading his team into the NCAA tournament last season when he decided that Sunday morning to listen to his daughter's portable headphones while jogging the four miles he likes to get in daily.

The Sooners made the tournament. Tubbs didn't.

"It's a bunch of bull, if you ask me," says Tubbs, who has formally resumed his coaching duties. "You work your tail off and then, when the icing on the cake comes along, you don't get any of it. It doesn't seem fair to me."

Columnary Craft

Tubbs' luck could have been a lot worse. Tubbs only pretends to remember the accident. "It was definitely a charge," he says, laughing. "But I tell you, I've got to learn not to take charging fouls like that."

Tubbs says the day of the accident and five of the next seven weeks are blank spots in his mind. His injuries were much more serious than first reported by doctors and the university. He was hospitalized for more than three weeks, went home for four days and was hospitalized again for another three weeks. Doctors had to use nuclear radiology techniques to locate a bone fragment in the pelvic region. Surgery corrected the problem, and Tubbs is now only a month away from resuming his jogging routine. He expects to be 100 percent by August bad news for real basketball refs.

His "gift of gab," as he calls it, is also on the mend. "I'm ready to lay this thing to rest and go back to talking OU basketball," Tubbs says. "But there are so many rumors going around and so many things to clear up. Any time someone has a head injury, people automatically assume his mind is going to be screwed up. But what people have to remember is that I was crazy to begin with."

Tubbs had no trouble convincing his nurses. Mike Newell, the former San Jacinto (Texas) College assistant, took charge of the team, and the Sooners went on to finish just one game behind Big Eight champion Missouri and earn an NCAA bid. Along the way, Tubbs threatened to "throw everything" out of his hospital room window unless he was allowed to attend OU's game with Kansas in the first round of the league tournament. Tubbs stayed put, and the Sooners lost.

"I thought at any time they were going to come in and tie me down with leather straps," he says. "I am not a good loser."

"I've gone back and looked at the films of the games I've missed," Tubbs says, "but it's all part of looking to the future. I'm proud of our team and the progress we've made, but I'm not satisfied. I won't be satisfied until we win the Big Eight and make the Final Four. And I'll never be completely satisfied until we make the Final One."

In the meantime, Tubbs is catching up on his communicative skills. Among his requests for interviews is one from a jogging magazine. The topic: Is it wise to wear portable headphones while running?

"I damn sure know the answer to that one," he says.

Among the stacks of mail, Tubbs swears, are several "get well" wishes from basketball referees. Tubbs hopes to soon offer each sentiments of a different kind.

"I'm dedicated," he says, "to being ornery as ever."

Looking Back

Five years ago

A survey of the NCAA membership completed in June 1978 indicated that 39.1 percent of the responding institutions were in favor of the Association sponsoring national championships for women. A total of 477 members responded, with 189 in favor and 288 opposed. Division II members were in favor, 66 to 52; and NCAA members that did not belong to the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women favored NCAA sponsorship, 41-13. Minnesota pitcher-outfielder Dave Winfield was named the outstanding player in the College World Series, played June 8-14, 1973, in Omaha, Nebraska, but the Southern California Trojans won their fourth consecutive team title by coming from behind to beat Minnesota, 8-7, in the semifinals and downing Arizona State, 4-3, in the finals. The first National College Division Championships were conducted in tennis, outdoor track and golf in 1963. Los Angeles State beat Southern Illinois-Carbondale to win the inaugural tennis event June 6-8 at Washington University (Missouri), while Maryland State (now Maryland-Eastern Shore) was defeating Fresno State for the track title in Chicago June 7-8. A week later, Southwest Missouri State hosted and won the first golf championship, beating Aquinas. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports" and National Collegiate Championships records book)

Elsewhere in Education

Parents give college $1 million

The College of William and Mary has received a $1 million grant from the parents of a former student who said they are delighted with the "first-rate" education their daughter received.

The unidentified couple gave the money to the school to use for research grants and faculty salary supplements.

Foreign students under new rule

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has announced that beginning in August, it will give foreign students four years to complete their course work in the United States.

If course work is not completed within that time, the student must return to his home country for two years before registering again in the United States, according to Janet Graham of the INS.

Meanwhile, congressional committees have approved bills that would force foreign students to return home for two years before becoming eligible to apply for U.S. citizenship.

Graham said the bills are necessary to deter foreign students whose intent is never to go back home.

Aid to black colleges increases

The Reagan administration has announced that in the past year its aid to black colleges and universities increased by $19.6 million to $564.5 million.

Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell said the administration is seeking to give schools the most Federal aid possible by helping them compete for Federal grants and research projects.

"We did not settle for any shortcuts in making the grade," Bell said.

Bell said the emphasis on aid to black colleges recognizes their "unique contribution" to educating Blacks, graduating 85 percent of the country's black lawyers and doctors, 75 percent of its black Ph.D.s and military officers, and half of the black business executives.

School prayer endorsed by Bell

Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell has endorsed a constitutional amendment that would guarantee voluntary school prayer.

During Senate hearings on school prayer, Bell said the omission of prayer from schools . . . "is a symptom of the many trends and changes that are going on in this country that are undermining students, undermining character development and undermining a very serious debt to education."

Racial quota system rejected

A Federal appeals court has struck down a racial quota system for faculty in the Kalamazoo, Michigan, public school system, which had voided seniority rights for some white teachers.

In reversing a lower-court decision, the appeals court said the quota of 20 percent black teachers was arbitrary and inappropriate to remedy past discrimination in the school district.

The court said the quota system was inappropriate because the school district was making a good-faith effort to recruit minority teachers.

Tuition tax-credit plan advances

The Senate Finance Committee has approved President Reagan's bill providing Federal tax credits for parents of private school pupils.

The credit would be for up to half the costs of tuition for each dependent at a private elementary or secondary school. The credit, a dollar-for-dollar offset against taxes owed, would start at a maximum of $100 for tuition paid for the next school year, rising to $200 in 1984 and $300 in 1985.

The maximum credit would be available only for families with gross incomes of less than $40,000 a year. There would be no credit for those above the $50,000 level.

Athlete provides an endowment

Kelvin Bryant, former football player at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has presented the institution with a $10,000 endowment toward academic scholarships in the recreation-administration curriculum.

Bryant, a three-time all-Atlantic Coast Conference selection, ranks third in rushing in Tar Heel history. He currently is playing with the Philadelphia Stars of the United States Football League.

Bryant said, "I enjoyed my time at Carolina very much, and I wanted to help make it possible for some other young person to have the type of experience I did on a college campus."

College-preparatory study outlined

The College Board has prepared a statement outlining the knowledge and skills students must acquire to have successful academic careers in college.

"Academic Preparation for College: What Students Need to Know and Be Able to Do" covers English, the arts, mathematics, science, social studies and foreign language. The report also deals with computer competency.

These are some of the highlights of the statement:

•English—Competence in writing pertains to all academic disciplines and should be developed in other subjects, too.

•The arts—A basic understanding of and appreciation for the theater, music, dance and the visual arts.

•Mathematics—A more challenging level of preparation in high school, including calculus, for students expecting to major in engineering, economics, premedicine, computer science or natural science.

•Science—A quantitative understanding of at least one area of science, including the development of such core skills as laboratory and field work skills.

•Social studies—A basic understanding of at least one social science (economics, political science, geography or sociology) should be acquired in addition to an acquaintance with United States history, world geography and cultures.

•Foreign language—Students should be able to speak, read and write elementary sentences in a foreign language and to acquire knowledge of the culture, history and lifestyle of the society in which the language is spoken.

Toner gives further explanation of NCAA eligibility standards

NCAA President John L. Toner has supplemented the Association's testimony regarding S. 610, the Collegiate Student-Athlete Protection Act of 1983 introduced in the U.S. Senate by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pennsylvania.

Toner told a congressional hearing in March that the Association does not favor the bill, which would grant antitrust immunity to professional sports leagues that refuse to sign undergraduates who still are eligible for intercollegiate competition.

Representatives of the College Football Association and the American Football Coaches Association testified in favor of the bill in March. Testimony by representatives of the professional football leagues was heard last week.

Toner told the congressional committee in March that the NCAA believes "a student-athlete should have the right to sign a professional contract during his undergraduate career if it is in his own long-term, best interest to do so."

When questioned about the NCAA rule declaring a student-athlete ineligible if he hires a lawyer-agent to represent him in negotiations, Toner said, "There is no gray area between eligible and ineligible."

Toner has written Sen. Specter to clarify further the NCAA's position on this point.

Here are excerpts from Toner's letter to Sen. Specter:

... as I explained in my statement to the committee NCAA rules specify the following instances in which a student-athlete relinquishes college eligibility in a sport:

—if he receives or agrees to receive payment for participation;

—if he agrees to compete in professional athletics or to negotiate a professional contract;

—if he directly or indirectly uses his athletic skill for pay, signs a contract to play professional athletics in a sport or plays on a professional athletic team; or —if he contracts, orally or in writing, with an agent to represent him in the marketing of his athletic ability or reputation.

A student-athlete may consider an offer, whether or not he initiated the process by which the offer is made, but he may not attempt to negotiate a better deal and still retain his eligibility for intercollegiate play.

The NCAA constitution expressly states that a student-athlete may contact an attorney for advice about an offer from a professional club without jeopardizing his eligibility for intercollegiate competition. Similarly, such an attorney for a student-athlete could be employed to solicit the professional offer referred to in the preceding paragraph, just as the student-athlete is entitled to solicit such an offer himself.

A student-athlete is considered to have professionalized himself only when he instructs his attorney, or some other agent acting on his behalf, to negotiate with a professional club for purposes of becoming a professional athlete.

The NCAA membership has drawn the line at a point that equates virtually any conscious affirmative steps toward marketing of athletic ability, either with or without the assistance of an attorney or agent, with loss of intercollegiate eligibility. At the same time, however, the student-athlete is permitted, without risk of loss of eligibility, fully to explore with competent advisers the meaning and intent of NCAA rules

Pro leagues' signing rules

A major topic at the Association's recent Professional Sports Liaison Committee meeting was a review of the methods and criteria various professional organizations use to draft and sign athletes. The following procedures are the drafting and signing criteria used by professional sports organizations:

•National Football League One of the three following criteria must be met before an athlete can be drafted: The athlete must have exhausted his college eligibility; he must have graduated from college, or five years must have elapsed since the day he first enrolled in college.

•United States Football League—The USFL's drafting and signing procedures are the same as the NFL's except that the league will make exceptions to the criteria due to extenuating circumstances.

•National Basketball Association—The following bylaws are in effect: The athlete must be at least 17 years of age; the athlete's high school class must have graduated; an athlete in college must declare, in writing, his eligibility at least 45 days before the draft (after a college athlete declares his eligibility for the draft, he has 24 hours to withdraw his declaration), and NBA teams cannot make contact with a student-athlete unless he declares his eligibility. (Note: The NBA is working on arrangements that would allow athletes selected in next year's draft to remain eligible for the Olympics.)

•Major League Baseball—An athlete can be drafted if he meets one of the following criteria: The athlete has reached his 21st birthday; he has completed his junior year in college and is between school years; he has completed his eligibility for intercollegiate baseball; his enrollment is terminated due to scholastic deficiency, or he withdraws from college and subsequently remains out of college for at least 120 days.

•National Hockey League The following bylaws are in effect: The athlete must be 18 years of age (before September 15 of the previous year) by June's entry draft; a bona fide college student can remain unsigned so long as he is a student, and for 180 days afterwards.

•Major Indoor Soccer League—An athlete can be drafted if he meets the following criteria: The athlete is 16 years of age; the athlete or his class has graduated from high school, junior college or college; if the athlete is enrolled in high school, junior college or college, he must declare his eligibility, in writing, along with a letter from the director of athletics, at least five days before the October draft. (Note: The MISL has a December supplementary draft for athletes who wish to participate in an NCAA championship. Most teams will pay tuition for those athletes who leave school early.)

•North American Soccer League—The following bylaws are in effect: The athlete must be at least 16 years of age to be eligible for the draft; high school athletes can be drafted the December before their class graduates the following June, but no club can talk to the athlete so long as he is in school or until he graduates; junior college and four-year college athletes can be drafted in December before their class graduates the following June; there is a mid-March signing date for all athletes drafted the previous December but any high school athlete unsigned by then can be redrafted in a supplemental August draft; any collegiate athlete unsigned by the mid-March deadline can be redrafted in a supplemental March draft, and exceptions to any of these bylaws must be petitioned and approved by the commissioner.

and the potential benefits that might accrue in the event he were to decide to professionalize himself.

NCAA rules . . . are designed to permit the student-athlete to consider the fundamental issue of professionalization under circumstances in which he has basic information necessary to decide that issue, without being subjected to the pressures that can arise from the involvement of an agent whose sole incentive ordinarily would be the reaping of rewards from a decision to professionalize.

... as to why a student-athlete, once having consciously made the decision to professionalize himself, should not be allowed to "change his mind" and reestablish himself as eligible for intercollegiate competition, the answer is two-fold:

(1) Adoption of such a principle would completely open the door to prospective agents and other representatives of professional interests to become involved in the educational process in general and in the student-athlete's decision-making process in particular; and (2) such a principle would invite endless debate and necessary decisions as to how far the student-athlete would be permitted to negotiate for—and indeed pursue—a professional career before he no longer would be eligible to regain his eligibility for intercollegiate play.

Both the NCAA and its members make major efforts to inform student-athletes concerning NCAA rules and the limits they impose. For example, through its Professional Sports Liaison Committee, the NCAA has worked with an attorney to prepare a volume for students that explains NCAA rules and provides information about selecting an agent. In addition, the NCAA staff is available, and is known by every NCAA member institution to be available, to the institutions and their student-athletes to answer questions concerning the application of NCAA rules.

There are a limited number of instances in which a student-athlete—either because of a lack of advice or more often because of incorrect advice—unwittingly takes a step which results in his having professionalized himself under NCAA rules. A procedure exists within the NCAA structure to deal with these instances. If a student-athlete, having professionalized himself, wishes to attempt to regain his eligibility for intercollegiate athletics, he is entitled to a hearing before the NCAA Eligibility Committee for a review of his status. The determinative question in these cases generally has been whether the student-athlete in fact intended to professionalize himself—in which event the committee has not restored eligibility—or, as is more often the case in appeals before it, whether the student for some reason had not formed an intent to become a professional—in which event the committee generally has authorized the restoration of eligibility.

The Eligibility Committee has restored the eligibility of the student-athlete in question in 22 of the 26 cases heard by the committee since 1979. . . .

Abilene Christian men repeat in track...

As expected, Abilene Christian used its depth in the pole vault to defend its championship in the NCAA Division II Men's Outdoor Track Championships May 23-28 at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

Angelo State, the runner-up, fell 31 points short of Abilene Christian, 169 1/2-138 1/2. Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo tied with St. Augustine's third with 117 1/2.

The Wildcats captured four of the top five places in the pole vault, including the top three, to score 45 points and hold off Angelo State. Charlie Phillips won the 400 for Abilene Christian and anchored the first-place 1,600-meter relay team. Tim Bright won the decathlon. Coach Don Hood's squad captured 20 places in 13 events.

Angelo State won the 400-meter relay, was first and second in the 400 hurdles, and scored in 11 events.

The biggest surprise may have been in the decathlon, where defending Division II and Division I champion Tron Skramstad, Mount St. Mary's, withdrew after failing to make opening height in the pole vault. He had a record 4,074 points after the first day.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo captured four first places, five second places and missed scoring in only three events in defending its title in the NCAA Division II Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships May 23-28 at Southwest Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

The Mustangs scored 206 points, 90 points better than their nearest rival, Morgan State. Alabama A&M, the 1982 runner-up, fell to fourth, with 102 1/2. Hayward State was third with 105 points.

Amy Harper of Cal Poly-SLO won both the 1,500 and 5,000. Danella Barnes won the javelin competition despite a badly sprained ankle, and Sue McNeal won the high jump.

Sacramento State's Donna Carley and Morgan State's Kim Whitehead also were double winners. Carley won the 100 and 200 and set records in both, and Whitehead won both hurdle events with record performances.

Successful defending champions in the individual events included Whitehead in the 400 hurdles, Morgan State in the 1,600 relay and Bakersfield State's Sharon Hamilton in the shot put.

Profs take No. 4 in row in track

Glassboro State used a strong performance in the two hurdle events to edge Hamline, 97-94, and capture its fourth consecutive NCAA Division III Men's Outdoor Track Championships May 23-28.

The meet was held at North Central College.

Stanley Moore won the 110 and 400 hurdles, and teammates Anthony Abicca and Pierre Reid finished third and seventh, respectively, in the 400 hurdles to give Glassboro State 46 points.

Hamline used its power in the weight events to mount a strong challenge. Mike Manders, two-time defending champion in the shot put and discus, again captured the double victory. Teammate Paul Kendrick was second in both to give the Pipers 54 points.

It was the second consecutive year that Hamline has finished second.

Wisconsin-LaCrosse relies on dual winners for title

Cindy Lensmire and Tori Neubauer won two events each and Mary Kastelic won one event to help Wisconsin-LaCrosse win the 1983 NCAA Division III Women's Outdoor Track Championships May 23-28 at North Central College in Naperville, Illinois.

Lensmire was a double winner in the shot put and discus, and Neubauer won both the 3,000 and 5,000. Records were set in all four events. Kastelic earned another 10 points for Wisconsin-LaCrosse with her victory in the 800-meter run.

Other double winners in the women's competition, which was held in conjunction with the Division III men's championships, were Cortland State's Tracey Ann Armstead in the 100 and 200 and William Paterson's Natalie Jordan in the 400-meter dash and 400 hurdles.

St. Thomas finished second on the strength of its middle-distance runners. Rose McIlrath won the 1,500-meter run for St. Thomas, and the Tommies placed three runners among the top eight 800 finishers.

Central (Iowa), last year's Division III champion, finished fourth, 22 1/2 points behind third-place Cortland State. Wooster was fifth with 58.

Syracuse tops Blue Jays for lacrosse crown

Syracuse erased a seven-goal deficit in the second half and held off a late Johns Hopkins rally to win the 1983 NCAA Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship May 28 with a 17-16 victory over the Blue Jays in Piscataway, New Jersey.

A crowd estimated at 17,000 was on hand to witness one of the most exciting contests in the 13-year history of the championship. The two-team total of 33 goals equaled the all-time high established in 1975 when Maryland defeated Navy, 20-13.

Syracuse attackman Tim Nelson sparked the Orange offense with two goals and six assists. Nelson was the tournament's leading scorer with four goals and 11 assists in three games.

The game's early action produced the potential for a Johns Hopkins rout. Unassisted goals by John Krumenacker and Brent Ciccarone and Kirk Baugher's score on a pass from Ciccarone gave the Blue Jays a 3-0 lead at the 8:36 mark of the first period.

Syracuse got on the board at 9:07 on an unassisted goal by Dave Desco, but the scrappy Johns Hopkins defense held the Orange at bay throughout the first half. The Blue Jays held an 8-4 lead at intermission.

Less than nine minutes into the third quarter, Johns Hopkins had increased its lead to 12-5 on scores by Peter Scott, Krumenacker, Willy Odenthal and Del Dressel.

"Our goalie (Travis Solomon) told me he could smell the Hopkins players' breath, they were getting so close," said Syracuse head coach Roy Simmons Jr. "We decided to start conceding shots a little farther out to give Travis some room to work."

The strategy proved effective as the Orange outscored Johns Hopkins 8-1 over a nine-minute stretch and took the lead, 14-13, when Brad Kotz converted a feed from Art Lux at 4:18 of the final period.

Nelson made it 15-13 with an unassisted score, but Hopkins battled back to knot the score with goals by Henry Ciccarone Jr. and Bill Cantelli.

Syracuse regained the advantage for good with an unassisted tally by Kotz at 12:24 and a goal by Randy Lundblad. With 1:09 left, the score was 17-15.

Dressel kept the Hopkins hopes alive with an unassisted goal at 14:10, cutting the margin to 17-16. The final 50 seconds had the near-capacity crowd on its feet as the Blue Jays applied constant pressure on the Syracuse goal but could not crack the defense.

"We scored enough goals to win the game," said Johns Hopkins coach Henry Ciccarone Sr., "but our defense was unable to keep Syracuse off the board in the second half."

TCU women upset Tulsa in golf

Penny Hammel of Miami (Florida) fired a five-under-par 69 to take the individual title and Texas Christian came from behind to take team honors in the NCAA Women's Golf Championships May 25-28 in Athens, Georgia.

Hammel, who began the final round in a tie with Cindy Davis of Furman and Kathe Kingston of Mississippi State, left the field behind with a four-round total of 284. Hammel finished 12 strokes under par over the 6,044-yard, par-74 course at the University of Georgia, which hosted the championships.

Davis finished second after a final-round 75 and four-day total of 290. She was followed by Tulsa's Jody Rosenthal (291) and Texas Christian's Rita Moore (294). Kingston, who shot 80 in the final round, tied for fifth with Marci Bozarth of Texas Christian and Amy Benz of Southern Methodist at 295.

Moore's 71 and Bozarth's 74 in the final round, combined with Anne Kelley's 73 and Rae Rothfelder's 74, helped Texas Christian to a final-round 292—the best one-day team score in the tournament.

Defending champion Tulsa, which led Texas Christian by two strokes after three rounds, finished second at 1,193, followed by Georgia (1,206), Southern Methodist (1,209) and Florida (1,215).

Hammel, considered one of the top contenders for individual honors, became Miami's fifth national champion.

"I didn't make any putts on the front but they just started falling on the back nine," Hammel said. "I thought I had a good chance to win coming into this tournament."

North Carolina's Page Marsh, who tied for 19th, recorded a hole-in-one on a par-three hole.

The team title was Texas Christian's first national women's golf championship. The Lady Horned Frogs finished second last year.

Longhorns favored in men's golf Profs

The Texas Longhorns men's golf team knows how to win tournaments. Its victories have consisted of winning by play-off, coming from behind or barely hanging on to win after blowing large leads.

Whatever the method, the Longhorns have won six of eight tournaments this season. And, as one of the 32 teams selected for the NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships, the Longhorns are capable of tournament victory No. 7. This year's national championships will be held June 8-11 at the San Joaquin Country Club in Fresno, California.

Texas proved it is a team of national-championship caliber with its come-from-behind victory over defending NCAA champion Houston in the Southwest Athletic Conference championships.

At the end of nine holes, Houston led Texas by seven strokes. The Cougars maintained a seven-stroke lead with just six holes to go. Then, Texas caught fire and came back to earn a nine-shot victory. The Longhorns played the final three holes in three under par.

Leading the 16-stroke turnaround was Brandel Chamblee, who took medalist honors; Paul Thomas, who tied for third, and Mark Brooks, who finished fifth.

They have a well-balanced team that is well-suited for the tricky San Joaquin course. Like Houston, Oklahoma State returns everyone from last year's team that finished 10 strokes behind the Cougars in the NCAA championships. Unlike Houston, the Cowboys are considered one of the better chip-and-putt teams.

Dons may vote soon on program

A decision on whether to resume the University of San Francisco's men's basketball program could be made June 10 when the school's board of trustees meets.

Bill Fusco, director of athletics, told officials of the West Coast Athletic Conference that the board of trustees would examine the possibilities of reestablishing the program and reentering the WCAC.

A task force created by the Rev. John LoSchiavo, USF president, has recommended that the school resume play after a two-year break. Father LoSchiavo dropped the school's successful program last summer following a pattern of repeated recruiting scandals and controversy.

Kentucky-Louisville series planned

For the first time since 1922, the University of Kentucky and the University of Louisville will meet this year in a regular-season men's basketball game.

The schools have agreed to a four-year series, which will begin November 26 in Lexington in the season opener for both teams.

The game will be televised in prime time by the Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., in a joint venture with Sports Productions, Inc., of Dallas. According to the Washington Post, Turner Broadcasting will pay about $600,000 for the television rights, making it the largest single-game fee paid for a regular-season college basketball game. Turner paid $575,000 for last season's University of Virginia-Georgetown University game.

After years of opposition, the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees voted earlier this year to endorse a series between the two traditional powers. Louisville defeated Kentucky, 80-68 in overtime, in the final of this year's NCAA Midwest regional.

Virginia Tech goes on one-year probation

Virginia Polytechnic Institute has been placed on probation for a one-year period, effective May 16, 1983, by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions as a result of violations in the institution's intercollegiate football program.

The penalty does not include sanctions and will not affect the institutions eligibility for postseason competition or football television appearances.

Most of the violations involved the institution's recruitment of prospective student-athletes in football during the 1981-82 academic year. The violations will affect the eligibility of eight football team members to represent the institution in postseason football bowl games, it being understood that the institution may appeal to the NCAA Eligibility Committee for restoration of eligibility if the institution believes such an appeal to be appropriate.

"The committee did not consider the findings in this case to represent a pattern of intentional violations," said Charles Alan Wright, chair, NCAA Committee on Infractions, "but the committee was concerned

Athletes' TV films tell youth: 'Get High on Sports, Not Drugs'

Basketball players Patrick Ewing of Georgetown University and Akeem Abdul Olajuwon of the University of Houston were among 13 student-athletes who joined University of Notre Dame football coach Gerry Faust and CBS announcer Gary Bender in Phoenix, Arizona, at the NCAA-Fiesta Bowl "Get High on Sports, Not Drugs" campaign.

The program is a partnership between the NCAA and the Fiesta Bowl in which the athletes tape 30-second public-service television announcements to urge the nation's youth to choose sports instead of drugs. Last year, the messages were seen by more than 150 million viewers.

The 30-second spots will be broadcast during the 1983-84 football and basketball seasons. The May 24 banquet, which attracted a record crowd of 1,200 people, was sponsored by Samaritan Medical Foundation.

Other athletes who participated in the 1983 program were Ernest Anderson (football), Oklahoma State University; Michael Carter (football and men's track), Southern Methodist mittee or a subunit would hold hearings involving representatives of the membership and the television industry.

• A special meeting of Division I football-playing members to act upon possible plan(s) and alternatives thereto would be held in late August or early September.

CFA to hold seventh annual meeting in Dallas

The College Football Association will hold its seventh annual meeting June 3-5 in Dallas, Texas, with the agenda headed by a CFA Television Committee report on contingency plans developed by that committee for possible implementation if the NCAA's television plan and contracts are nullified by court action.

Daniel G. Gibbens, faculty athletic representative at the University of Oklahoma, will present the television report.

Also on the CFA agenda are future changes in intercollegiate athletics, college-professional relations, a review of the academic standards adopted by the 1983 NCAA Convention, freshman eligibility and the feasibility of a Division I-A football championship.

Joab Thomas, president of the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, and chair of the CFA board of directors, will preside at the opening session June 3.

Top swimming, diving prospects are featured

Three current NCAA swimming and diving champions join two former collegiate title-holders in a five-page preview of America's Olympic swimming and diving prospects in the June 1983 issue of Life magazine.

"Leaps and Laps for L.A." focuses on the top prospects for the U.S. squad, which has dominated Olympic competition in swimming and diving. American swimmers and divers have earned 174 Olympic gold medals, more than any other group of competitors in modern Olympic history.

Current and former NCAA champions featured in the coverage include Mary T. Meagher of the University of California, Berkeley, winner of the 200-yard butterfly this season; Steve Lundquist of Southern Methodist, who earned seven individual titles during his collegiate career, including the 1983 titles in the 100-yard breaststroke and the 200-yard individual medley; Matt Gribble of the University of Miami (Florida), 1983 NCAA champion in the 100-yard butterfly; Ambrose "Rowdy" Gaines, winner of five individual titles during his career at Auburn University, and Greg Louganis, who won three diving titles while at Miami (Florida).

Laura Rosen, Westfield State, 37.68; 12. Patricia George, Cortland State, 36.78.

Hepthathlon—1. Carolyn Parsley, Bridgewater State (Massachusetts), 4.716 (Record—old record, Gail Glave, Frostburg State, 4.676, 1982); 2. Caryl Senn, Ithaca, 4.674; 3. Deanne Malvino, Sonoma State, 4.666; 4. Martha Anderson, St. Thomas, 4.627; 5. Helen Straus, Chicago, 4.567; 6. Elizabeth Phelps, Ohio Wesleyan, 4.514; 7. Kathy Crotty, Frostburg State, 4.371; 12. Lisa Warren, Salem State, 4.352.

Those attending the May 27 meeting in Chicago also discussed a preliminary outline of provisions that might be included in an alternate plan or plans, and it was emphasized that the provisions were only for discussion purposes.

Those attending the meeting also considered a review of the NCAA's filing for a rehearing by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals en banc (in full) of the 2-to-1 ruling by that court's three-judge panel affirming the lower court's decision that the NCAA TV plan and contracts were in violation of the Federal antitrust laws.

The group noted that the appellate court had found no boycott violation and had refused to rule as to monopoly, basing its majority opinion on price-fixing. The circuit court had concluded that the lower-court injunction appeared to be too broad, and it remanded the case to the district court to consider the injunction in light of the views of the court of appeals.

In the petition for rehearing, the NCAA seeks reconsideration of five questions:

1. Whether an appellate court may leave an injunction in force once it has concluded that the injunction is vague and overbroad. (It was reported that the U.S. Supreme Court, in the past, has said an injunction should be vacated in those circumstances.)

2. Whether an agreement among universities to establish a football television package—a package found by the circuit court panel to have logically plausible procompetitive aspects—may be held to be unlawful per se because it reduces the number of different games shown.

3. Whether the defendant in an antitrust case bears the burden of proving not only the existence and extent of the procompetitive benefits of a cooperative arrangement but also the "necessity" of the restrictions.

4. Whether the NCAA's members possess sufficient power in a relevant market to permit a finding of violation under the rule of reason.

5. Whether a process of competitive bidding ending in the letting of contracts for the telecasting of football can be deemed suppression of competition just because, once the contracts have been signed, there is no further rivalry on a game-by-game basis for broadcast rights.

If the circuit court denies the request for rehearing, the NCAA will have seven days to seek a further stay pending appeal to the Supreme Court. If a stay is granted pending such appeal, it would continue at least until such time as the Supreme Court determines whether to review the case, which probably would not occur until October or November.

Rozelle sees flaw in Specter antitrust bill

National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle told a congressional committee last week that the NFL was not looking for any special antitrust immunity, as proposed in a bill by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pennsylvania.

He said the measure now under consideration by the committee allows professional sports leagues to honor eligibility rules, but it does not require them to do so. Rozelle said this creates a situation that existed when the United States Football League signed Herschel Walker of the University of Georgia to a professional contract while he had one year of college eligibility remaining.

"The National Football League has stood by its eligibility principles

Association's

players from leading teams were brought to New York for the two-day press conference, and plans are being made for a similar program next season.

Other facets of the Association's promotional package for women's athletics include the following:

• Promotional items to be used in conjunction with NCAA championships, such as public-service radio announcements, bumper stickers, banners, program features, ticket merchandisers and appliques.

• Promotional videotapes on eight women's sports, distributed to national television and cable systems by the NCAA Television News Service.

• Feature films on women's intercollegiate basketball and gymnastics produced by NCAA Productions, which will be available next year for use by member institutions.

• Negotiations, currently under way, to sell the television rights to regional competition in Division I women's basketball and gymnastics. NCAA Productions last season produced and sold the rights to the Division I basketball semifinals.

• A series of articles in hotel and airline magazines. Both Holiday Inn and Hyatt will run articles on women's athletics in fall editions of their in-room magazines.

• Television spots on CBS and ESPN promoting the Division I Women's Basketball and Gymnastics Championships.

• A special allotment of $6,000 each for promotional efforts in the Division I Women's Gymnastics, Volleyball and Basketball Championships. For example, the University of Utah, which hosted the gymnastics event, used the funds to rent billboard space.

• An upcoming professional-development seminar on marketing women's athletics.

• Assistance to women's sports information directors in working with the media.

In addition, the Council, through its new women's athletics advisory group, will address the concerns and problems of the women's athletics community.

When these efforts are added up, the Association hopes the membership will realize a higher level of visibility for its women's programs.

"It's been like night and day," said Debbie Harmison, sports information director at Old Dominion University. "One of the biggest impacts of the NCAA's involvement is just a matter of public awareness. Having those four letters attached to a championship gives it more clout. People in the community identify with the NCAA."

because it has been urged to do so by the colleges and universities—who have the most to lose, because we believe these principles are sensible and fair and because many in Congress have indicated their approval of our policy," Rozelle told the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Rozelle said the NFL's policy of not signing players with collegiate eligibility remaining "is both reasonable and proper in the circumstances of professional football."

Earlier, USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons told the committee, "Although we share wholeheartedly their (NFL's) dedication to the belief that student-athletes ought to complete their education, we are on account of our more limited resources especially vulnerable to a legal challenge."

However, Simmons said the USFL has declared a moratorium on signing undergraduates until "we deal with the various collegiate bodies and can come up with some changes."

Simmons said the USFL's New Jersey Generals were allowed to sign Walker because the league was threatened with a lawsuit by Walker's lawyer.

Sen. Specter discounted the threat of legal action by Walker.

"The Walker signing gave the USFL a big boost at the start of its existence. The problem I have with the league's position is that there is a lack of sincerity on being afraid of a lawsuit."

"I doubt that Herschel Walker would have taken you to court, because it takes such a long time to resolve those issues," Specter said.

"There are areas we must examine," Simmons said. "There are thoughtful modifications that can be made in the existing eligibility rules that can better accommodate the rights of these young men."
