Committee seeks new penalties

The NCAA Recruiting Committee has suggested that the Council and Committee on Infractions give consideration to imposing additional penalties against institutions involved in so-called minor rules infractions cases.

In addition to the traditional private and public reprimands that are issued in such cases, the Recruiting Committee recommended that other punitive actions be taken, such as possible cuts in grants-in-aid, monetary fines and restrictions on the coach involved by not allowing that person to participate in off-campus recruiting for a specified period of time.

The committee also reviewed the Operation Intercept program during its May 23-24 meeting in Williamsburg, Virginia, and voted to report to the Council the committee's continued support of this enforcement program, which involves 25 part-time investigators who interview the top 50 to 100 high school recruits in football and basketball each year.

William B. Hunt, NCAA assistant executive director, said the program is valuable for several reasons.

It is the primary way in which the NCAA develops information on its own initiative. In interviewing top high school athletic prospects, the NCAA is able to cross-check every major institution's recruiting methods, Hunt said.

He also said the program serves as a deterrent to infractions, and it allows the Association to better acquaint recruits and their high school coaches with NCAA rules so that they will be less likely to become involved in violations.

With regard to financial aid matters, the committee voted to recommend to the Council that Proposal No. 36, which was narrowly defeated at the 1983 Convention, be resubmitted at the next Convention.

The proposal would allow student-athletes who are Pell Grant recipients an exemption of up to $900 from the financial aid limitations.

Currently, student-athletes may exempt no more than $400 of the Pell Grant award from the regular aid limitation.

To help provide additional security for student-athletes, the committee voted to recommend that legislation related to financial aid be amended to permit four-year grants-in-aid to replace the current one-year grant.

Additional legislation should be considered, the committee said, to permit financial aid to be extended after four years, up to the point of graduation of the student-athlete, even though athletic eligibility is

News completes 46-issue year; circulation climbs past 20,000

This issue of The NCAA News marks the completion of the first year of the 46-issue format implemented June 16, 1982.

The News was published twice a month last summer, weekly on Mondays from September 6 to December 6 and weekly on Wednesdays from December 15 to today's issue.

Besides an increase from 18 to 46 issues per year, other changes occurred in the News last summer. Changes were made in appearance, format, typeface and nameplate, and the paper was printed on newsprint for the first time.

Another significant change in the News during the past year was the addition of a job-listing service for the membership. The Market has been one of the biggest successes during the first year of operation as many institutions have used the News to advertise their job openings.

The new 46-issue format was created with hopes of the News becoming the primary news vehicle for the Association. The Executive Committee's goal in approving the change was to develop a continuing publication for the full reporting of significant information about college athletics and to deliver the publication to the membership in a timely fashion.

Another new feature of the News this past year was the inclusion of football and basketball statistics. Football statistics for all divisions were printed weekly in the News from September 13 to December 6, and basketball statistics (men and women, all divisions) appeared in every Wednesday issue (except December 29) from December 15 to March 16.

The net result of the new format has been more news for the membership and, in most cases, the News has been delivered more quickly than in the past. Including this eight-page issue, the 46 issues of the new News contained 516 pages, compared to 168 for the previous 12-month period, a 207 percent increase in information for the membership.

During the past year, members received 13 eight-page issues, 29 12-page issues and four 16-page issues. On a weekly basis, members received 9.9 pages of news on intercollegiate athletics, compared to 3.2 pages during the previous 12-month period. Circulation also has increased

Committees named to study key issues

Special NCAA committees have been appointed to study three major issues affecting Division I members—academic requirements, criteria for membership in the division and dealing with player agents.

The NCAA Administrative Committee appointed the committees this month, acting on authorization by the NCAA Council and the Division I Steering Committee in their April meetings.

The three committees will meet as early as possible this summer and will consider discussions of their topics by those attending the Division I summer meeting June 24-25 in Kansas City, Missouri. It is hoped that all three will be able to report, at least preliminarily, at the August meeting of the Division I Steering Committee.

Academic research

A nine-member Special Committee on Academic Research was named to supervise the research to be conducted regarding the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j), as amended by Proposal No. 48 at the 1983 Convention.

Named to chair that committee was Division I Vice-President Gwendolyn Norrell, faculty athletic representative and professor in the counseling center at Michigan State University.

Other members of the NCAA Council appointed to that committee were Wilford S. Bailey, acting president of Auburn University and a member of the NCAA Research Committee, and Francis W. Bonner, faculty athletic representative and former provost at Furman University.

Also named were Edward B. Fort, president of North Carolina A&T State University; Charles Harris, director of athletics, University of Pennsylvania, and Robert F. Steidel Jr., University of California, Berkeley, chair of the NCAA Academic Testing and Requirements Committee.

The other three members of the group are experts in educational research: Nancy Cole, associate dean and professor of educational research methodology at the University of Pittsburgh, who was formerly a member of the American College Testing Program staff and was vice-president of the tests and measurements division of the American Educational Research Association; Robert Linn, a member of the educational psychology faculty at the University of Illinois, Champaign, and John Taylor of the National Institute of Education, a former San Jose State University football player who heads the NIE Task Force in Math and Science Education.

The Administrative Committee also decided to ask the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers to appoint a liaison official to meet with this special committee.

Division I criteria

Six chief executive officers of Division I member institutions are included on the Special Committee to Review Division I Membership Criteria, which includes representation for all segments of Division I: six from Division I-A, three from Division I-AA and three representatives of Division I members that do not play football or do not sponsor it in that division, plus the chair.

Presidents and chancellors named to that committee are Norman Hackerman, Rice University; Wesley W. Posvar, University of Pittsburgh, and Joab Thomas, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, from Division I-A; Jack V. Doland, McNeese State University, and Arliss L. Roaden,

Women's sports subject to enforcement August 1

Women's athletics programs at NCAA member institutions will be subject to the full NCAA enforcement program effective August 1, 1983. This policy has been affirmed by the NCAA Administrative Committee and Council in accordance with Proposal No. 24, which was overwhelmingly adopted in January at the 77th annual Convention.

Infractions cases that are processed subsequent to August 1 will be considered by the NCAA Committee on Infractions under the Official Procedure Governing the NCAA Enforcement Program (pages 186-201, 1983-84 NCAA Manual). The committee will consider alleged violations that reportedly occurred subsequent to the adoption of the Convention resolution (January 12, 1983).

This enforcement policy will be applied to the women's intercollegiate athletics program at all NCAA member institutions regardless of the set of rules with which the institution has certified compliance for its women's program.

Prior to the effective date of the new policy, the present method of handling rules violations for women's programs will be continued. The current policy is implemented through the NCAA Eligibility Committee, which has developed procedures to afford hearing opportunities for member institutions allegedly involved in violations.

The Eligibility Committee is authorized only to impose sanctions that would affect the institution's eligibility for participation in NCAA women's championships.

News media blamed for recruiting pressure

By Gus Schrader
Cedar Rapids Gazette

A curious off-shoot of sports journalism has arisen in recent years. For want of a better term, we might call it "the Transition Game." Crapshooters would label it "betting on the come line."

Whatever the handle, it involves the unbelievable attention given to college recruiting of high school football and basketball players and the drafting of college stars by the pros.

The amazing thing about it is this: Some newspapers and radio-TV outlets actually pay more attention to a young athlete when he or she is being recruited or drafted than they do when he or she performs on the field or court.

We thought of the added pressure placed on the athletes by the news media when the National Football League was holding its annual draft of college luminaries.

We watched two local TV stations that had cameramen and reporters stationed in the apartment of Iowa offensive tackle Brett Miller. They recorded the comments and expressions of Miller and his wife as they watched the draft on TV and waited by the phone for news of which club had drafted him, and in which round.

Miller is 24½ years old, and he undoubtedly can handle this unusual attention. Maybe the same can't be said for high schoolers who are courted by dozens of college scouts for months. They, their families and coaches have to take calls almost constantly from news people seeking tips on which way the athlete is leaning.

This "waiting game" wasn't a media event even 10 years ago. How did it become such a significant news item?

We think the fire over recruiting/drafting was fanned by the radio sports call-in shows that also became popular—at least with a small percentage of our citizenry—several years ago.

These call-in shows attracted a certain breed of sports fan, the guy who takes pride in proving—by his call to the station—that he knows things before his friends do: What prep star is going to what college? What pro team is interested in drafting which college ace?

First thing you know, it became a kind of contest in which sportswriters and broadcasters joined in. With their rush to scoop the opposition on a young athlete's fancy, they began devoting much time to telephoning all parts of the country.

Recruiting tip-sheets have sprung up to guide coaches and the news media. Athletes are rated on their recruiting appeal by "experts" who actually may see only a few of them in drill) and baseball, without much pressure, and still have time for plenty of study.

We thought of it again when we read what can happen to a young man who didn't handle the pressure. Charlie Wysocki was an outstanding running back at Maryland.

We met Wysocki two years ago when the NCAA brought several all-America candidates to the Football Writers Association of America meetings at Kings Island, Ohio. Wysocki's story is a fascinating one. He is a black man who, as a boy, was adopted by a Polish-American couple and reared as their son.

Wysocki's senior year was a disappointment because of injuries. His doctor said he suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of being passed over in the NFL draft. He had an unsuccessful trial with the Dallas Cowboys.

The breakdown began last October 19 when Wysocki got into his car and disappeared for 24 hours. He turned himself in at a police station after spending the night at a shopping mall 45 miles from home.

He was admitted to a private hospital in Philadelphia January 5. His mother said he had become a "zombie," unable to talk, eat or dress himself without help. Psychiatrist Robert Partridge said Wysocki's manic-depressive illness was prompted by his rejection from the NFL and his frustrating final season at Maryland.

Wysocki said he is recovering, but he added a disturbing note: "I want to play pro ball. I want to play this year. It's my life. I've been doing sprints, lifting weights."

His case, obviously, is an extreme one. However, it also might serve to warn us that not every high school and/or college athlete can handle the kind of pressure that comes with the recruiting/drafting game.

Columnary Craft

action. When the recruiting war ends, a body count is held and colleges are graded on who got the most of the best.

We can't blame the news media completely. A segment of readers and viewers must be interested for it to receive so much attention.

We always hope the young athletes are solid enough to handle all this. We thought of that when Marion's Todd Twachtman, a fine athlete and scholar, was passed up by the major-college recruiters, who didn't think his speed and size were adequate. Thank goodness, he kept his head on straight and chose Dartmouth, where he will play football (no spring

But I know different coaches around the country are looking at the Southwest Conference and telling me it's the worst they've seen."

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

My congratulations to you on the publishing of the article on sports administration by Charles R. Higgins.

Though we do not have a sports-administration program here at Michigan, we play a very integral role for the schools that do offer one.

On completion of their degree, graduates in sports administration must do an internship for related experience.

Since I have been at Michigan, we have had six of these students getting their internship with us. The first two were both getting a degree from Ohio University and are now full-time administrators at the University of Houston.

The next year, a young lady from Michigan did her internship here and is now employed by the Big Ten Conference office. At the same time, a young man finishing his undergraduate degree was with us, and he is presently working for the Michigan Panthers of the United States Football League. Currently, we have an Ohio graduate and a young lady from the United States Sports Academy in Alabama finishing up their internships. I am sure there will be a job for them in the near future.

Our interns stay with us for approximately one year, and as the supervisor of this program, I would like to say we are very proud of all of them and happy to prepare them for administration of athletics.

I am a 1975 graduate in sports administration from Western Illinois University. Also on the Michigan staff, Bob DeCarolis finished a similar degree at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Questions/Answers

Q. How does a coach or any other individual at a member institution suggest changes in championship format, selection procedures and other championship administrative matters?

A. Coaches and other institutional personnel are encouraged to submit suggested changes in any championship matters (selection process, format, rules, etc.) to the chair of the governing sports committee and/or the NCAA staff liaison. Q. How many championships does the NCAA sponsor each year?

A. The Association sponsors 73 national championships each year—40 for men, 31 for women and two for both men and women. Among the men's championships, four are National Collegiate Championships, 13 are Division I championships, 12 are Division II championships and 11 are Division III championships. Among the women's championships, five are National Collegiate Championships, nine are Division I championships, nine are Division II championships and eight are Division III championships.

CoSIDA announces baseball all-Americans

Shortstop Marty Blair of The Citadel, a first-team selection at second base last year, led the voting for the 1983 academic all-America baseball team selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA).

Outfielder Jeff King of Ohio State, who was chosen as the designated hitter last year, also repeated on the honor squad, joining teammate Robbie Cobb, named to the first team at second base. Western Carolina also placed two members on the first team: catcher Greg Johnson and outfielder David Hill.

Blair, a senior business student, had a 3.830 grade-point average. King, a junior business student, had a 3.770 GPA.

In CoSIDA's College Division, outfielder Mark Graham of Delta State earned academic honors for the third straight year. He was a second-team selection in 1981, a first-team choice last year and a first-team choice this year. Graham, a senior, had a 3.620 GPA majoring in mathematics.

Change in scoring sought

The NCAA Division I Track Coaches Association has voted to recommend a change from the current 12-place scoring for outdoor meets to a return to the preliminaries-semifinals-finals format.

Meeting in conjunction with the NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Outdoor Track Championships at the University of Houston last weekend, the combined group of men's and women's coaches voted 94-16 to recommend eight-place scoring for championships.

Twelve-place scoring has been used the last two years in the NCAA meets. Under the format used at Houston, eight qualifiers advanced to the finals from the preliminaries for lane races and relays based on time plus heat winners. Places nine through 12 were awarded to the next four fastest times.

In a separate vote of the women's division of the coaches association, the recommendation for eight-place scoring was approved 32-4. The women's group also supported the format change.

Dean Hayes, president of the full coaches association, said "The coaches finals series of the 1983 NCAA Division III Baseball Championship head the division all-America team selected by the American Baseball Coaches Association.

Second baseman Richard Mattocks of North Carolina Wesleyan and right fielder Mark Talarico and pitcher Terry Mulholland of Marietta were chosen from teams that advanced to this year's finals series.

Other selections to the all-America squad were: catcher Mark Levine of Oswego State, designated hitter Tom Jaremko of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, first baseman Tom Amante and center fielder Rich Brown of La Verne, third baseman Mario Ferrigno of John Jay, left fielder Wayne Harrison of Lynchburg, shortstop Randy Ross of North Park and pitcher Marc Gluckman of Washington (Missouri).

want to return to the old format as much as possible. Why fix the watch if it isn't broken?"

Gary Schwartz, president of the women's division, said "the women's coaches were unanimously against 12-place scoring."

The recommendations will be considered when the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committees meet in June to determine rules changes and championship format recommendations for 1984.

Golf championships results corrected

Because of a reporter's error in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News, Greensboro College and the University of the South were not listed in the team results of the Division III Men's Golf Championships.

Greensboro College, not the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, finished 10th in the team standings. The University of the South (Sewanee), not Southern University, New Orleans, finished 17th. Team scores were correct as reported.

Basketball leagues approved

Applications from 41 additional summer basketball leagues have been approved by the NCAA Administrative Committee, acting for the Council.

The Council now has approved 151 summer leagues. The list of approved summer leagues that appeared in the June 1 issue of The NCAA News had a couple of lines of type out of order. In South Carolina, the Walter Burke Summer Basketball League in Charleston and the Sterling Adult Summer League in Greenville have been approved. In Arkansas, the G. W. Carver YMCA and Recreation Center League in Little Rock was approved.

In addition to the June 1 issue, previous lists of 1983 summer basketball leagues approved by the Council appeared in the April 13, May 4 and May 11 issues of The NCAA News.

NCAA to request rehearing in case

The NCAA will file a motion by June 24 with the Kansas Board of Tax Appeals requesting a rehearing of a board decision disallowing an exemption for the Association as an educational institution.

The tax board ruled in late May that the national headquarters in Mission, Kansas, is not used exclusively for educational purposes as required to qualify for a state tax exemption.

"Part of the (NCAA) function is to entertain and part of the function is to coordinate revenue-raising activities for its members," the decision said.

In a dissenting opinion, board member Robert C. Henry said the fact that the NCAA is considered big business is "irrelevant and immaterial" and could be applied to any large organization. Henry argued that sports are an integral part of college education, and the NCAA was organized to promote some order and standards.

Association attorney C. W. Crumpecker Jr. of Kansas City, Missouri, said the rehearing is being requested because the Association contends the board misapplied the law to the facts in the case.

If the board does not act on the motion for rehearing within 30 days of the filing date, the request is considered denied, Crumpecker said.

Then, a further appeal is possible with the District Court of Shawnee County, Kansas, in Topeka.

Crumpecker said he believes the case is significant because it results in a legal body regarding sports "as not part of the educational process."

Title rematch set

The fifth annual Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic will be a rematch of the 45th annual NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

The University of Houston and North Carolina State University, finalists in this spring's NCAA championship, will meet November 19 in Springfield, Massachusetts, in the Tip-Off Classic. The game has become the traditional opener for the collegiate season.

North Carolina State defeated Houston, 54-52, in April in Albuquerque, New Mexico, to win the 1983 NCAA Division I title.

Mustangs edge Tennessee in men's track

Southern Methodist put together four days of nearly flawless performances to edge Tennessee, 104-102, in the NCAA Division I Men's Outdoor Track Championships at the University of Houston May 30-June 4.

It was the first time the Mustangs had won the event, and it was the second national track title for Southern Methodist in 1983. The Mustangs also won the NCAA indoor meet in March.

Before the outdoor meet, coach Ted McLaughlin pushed Washington State as the favorite; the Cougars had 22 qualifiers in the meet. However, all did not go well for Washington State, which finished fifth.

"I thought we had a chance," McLaughlin said after the victory. "But I thought we had to not make any mistakes, and, basically, we didn't. We got the maximum points from our squad."

The Mustangs won four events—the hammer, shot put, triple jump and 400-meter hurdles. The first three were expected, but only McLaughlin and his staff were not surprised at the hurdle victory by Sven Nylander.

"We knew Nylander was ready to run well," said McLaughlin. "We figured he would be in the top three."

Tennessee used its speed to challenge SMU for the team title. The Volunteers won the 400-meter relay for their only event championship but captured third, fifth and sixth in the 100; sixth in the 400; second and third in the 110 hurdles, and fourth and ninth in the 400 hurdles.

UCLA wins second crown

A 30-point effort from Jackie Joyner and first-place finishes in the 400 and 1,500 helped UCLA defend its title in the NCAA Division I Women's Outdoor Track Championships May 30-June 4.

Joyner scored the winning points for the Bruins, finishing third in the long jump. With Joyner's 10 points, UCLA edged Florida State, 116½-108. Nebraska was third with 106½.

Joyner also won the heptathlon to open the meet, finished eighth in the 100-meter hurdles, and ran on the 400-meter relay team that finished fifth and the 1,600-meter relay team that finished sixth.

Other winners for UCLA were Florence Griffith in the 400 and Michele Bush in the 1,500. Griffith also was second in the 200.

Florida State won both relay events and used its sprinters to finish third and sixth in the 100; third, fourth and sixth in the 200; fifth in the 400, and third and eighth in the 400 hurdles. Wendy Markham was second in the high jump.

Nebraska's Merlene Ottey collected 40 points, with first-place finishes in the 100 and 200 and a third-place finish in the 400.

Division III baseball

Marietta takes easy victory

Marietta used a record 36-run performance to win the 1983 NCAA Division III Baseball Championship in a convincing fashion.

The Pioneers defeated conference rival Otterbein, 36-8, in the championship game of the series, which was played June 2-7 in Marietta, Ohio. The 33 hits by Marietta also were a tournament record for one game. The championship matched two teams from the Ohio Athletic Conference that had played three times during the regular season, with Marietta losing twice. Neither team won the league title.

The victory enabled Marietta to regain the championship it previously had won in 1981. The Pioneers lost to Otterbein in the first round but won three straight games to set up the rematch. Marietta and Otterbein both had to defeat previously unbeaten North Carolina Wesleyan to reach the championship contest.

Shortstop Jon Shuler led the Pioneers against Otterbein with five hits, including a grand slam home run and seven runs batted in. Shuler also scored six runs to tie a tournament record.

Infielders Jim Pancher and John Hefner each had four hits, while designated hitter Steve Riley drove in five runs. Marietta scored 12 runs in the fourth inning to extend a 7-2 lead and added nine more in the fifth to put the game beyond reach.

CORRECTIONS

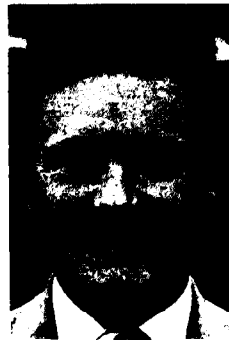

Because of an editing error, the Record section in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News listed Wes Kitley as the new men's and women's track coach at Abilene Christian. Kitley, however, was named only women's coach; Don Hood remains men's track coach at Abilene Christian.

Due to erroneous information provided to The NCAA News, a story in the June 1 issue was incorrect in stating that NCAA President John L. Toner's supplemental statement regarding the Collegiate Student-Athlete Protection Act of 1983 had been sent to Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pennsylvania. The statement is being sent to Sen. Strom Thurmond, chairman of the U.S. Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

Because of a reporter's error, the heptathlon results from the Division III Women's Outdoor Track Championships were incorrect as reported in the June 1 issue of The NCAA News. The results that appeared were the rankings heading into the competition rather than the final results. Following are the official results of the heptathlon competition at the 1983 Division III Women's Outdoor Track Championships: 1. Deanne Malvino, Sonoma State, 4,955; 2. Martha Andersen, St. Thomas, 4,716; 3. Elizabeth Phelps, Ohio Wesleyan, 4,664; 4. Shawn Jawsen, Occidental, 4,657; 5. Helen Straus, Chicago, 4,633; 6. Caryl Senn, Ithaca, 4,605; 7. TV in the News

Kickoff Classic coverage expands

The August 29 Kickoff Classic, matching defending national champion Penn State and Nebraska, already has been acquired by 130 stations.

In one week, the game being syndicated by Katz Communications has cleared 46 of the nation's top 50 television markets and has reached nearly 80 percent clearance of U.S. television homes. Of the 130 stations already committed to the contest, 111 are network affiliates, which have elected to preempt regularly scheduled programming.

According to Advertising Age, that figure already may represent a record number of affiliates for a syndicated sports event. Many of those affiliates will air the football game instead of network programming designed to lead into the upcoming fall season.

At least one executive at Katz speculated that the recent ruling by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in an antitrust action brought by the University of Georgia and the University of Oklahoma against the NCAA may have been a factor in the acceptance of the syndicated contest.

"With the recent court decisions, the precise way things will go in the future is still unclear," Pat Garvey, Katz Sports vice-president, told Advertising Age, "but the handwriting is on the wall. We will have access to college games in the future. The Kickoff Classic has proven that if you have the right game, you can clear almost 80 percent of the country practically overnight."

McGuire gets long-term contract

Former Marquette University men's basketball coach Al McGuire has signed a long-term contract with NBC-TV as a college basketball analyst. Terms were not disclosed.

McGuire joined NBC Sports in 1977 and has been widely recognized for his free-wheeling commentary.

"Like the sport he covers, Al McGuire is spontaneous, unpredictable and exciting," said Arthur A. Watson, president of NBC Sports. "He's a unique personality who informs and entertains."

NBC shows big ratings gain

Perennial third-place finisher NBC scored the biggest gains, throwing the May television ratings sweep into the closest race ever.

Figures released by the A.C. Nielsen Co. for the period of April 28-May 25 gave a slight edge to CBS with a 15.2 rating and 25.7 share, followed by NBC with 14.9/25.3 and ABC with 14.7/25.1. Combined with the figures released by the Arbitron Ratings Co., NBC experienced a seven percent improvement, while CBS improved two to three percent. ABC dropped a similar percentage.

Industry analysts cited NBC's first-run specials, which ran opposite series reruns on the other networks, as being the primary cause of the close ratings.

Cable systems target of complaint

NBC-TV has filed a complaint against three cable television systems for what it claims was "willful piracy" of its 1983 Super Bowl telecast.

The complaint names Athena Cable System, Corpus Christi, Texas; United Video Cablevision, St. Louis, Missouri, and Cox Cable of New York, Inc.

The network alleges, "Information obtained by NBC establishes that certain cable television systems located in certain parts of the country knowingly and willfully intercepted NBC's 'clean' feed of the Super Bowl and fed this signal to their respective cable subscribers in clear violation of section 605 of the Communications Act." The complaint asks the Federal Communications Corporation to take unspecified remedial action against the cable systems.

An NBC spokesman said the network was exploring allegations against other cable systems as well.

Atlantic-10 seeks revenue boost

In an effort to boost attendance and television revenue, the Atlantic-10 Conference has shifted its men's postseason basketball tournament.

The 1984 tournament will be held in Morgantown, West Virginia, on the campus of West Virginia University. The 1985 tourney also will be held at an on-campus site—Rutgers University in New Brunswick, New Jersey.

"I feel that moving the tournament to an on-campus site is our most feasible alternative at this time," said Leland Byrd, conference commissioner. "Being on campus provides us greater control over television rights, as well as greater flexibility in establishing a tournament format."

In previous years, when the tournament was held at Pittsburgh's Civic Arena or the Spectrum in Philadelphia, the arenas kept part of the television revenue. Attendance also was a consideration—last year's final between West Virginia and Temple University drew 4,712 to the 18,000-seat Spectrum.

The WVU Coliseum in Morgantown seats 14,000, and the Mountaineers averaged 10,486 a game last season.

According to league spokesman Ron Bertovich, the postseason tournament site will alternate between the league's Eastern and Western divisions. West Virginia, Pennsylvania State University, St. Bonaventure University, Duquesne University and George Washington University are in the Western division. The Eastern division is made up of Rutgers; Temple; St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania); the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and the University of Rhode Island.

Concerning eligibility, the committee voted to support the concept of freshman ineligibility in football and basketball at Division I-A institutions and in any other sport where similar pressures may warrant such legislation.

The new academic standards for freshman eligibility adopted by the 1983 Convention were supported by committee vote, with the understanding that additional research will be conducted to determine the validity of ACT and SAT scores.

Tennessee Technological University, Division I-AA, and the Very Rev. L. Edward Glynn, St. Peter's College, from the other Division I segment.

The other Division I-A representatives are William H. Baughn, faculty athletic representative, University of Colorado; Eugene F. Corrigan, director of athletics, University of Notre Dame, and Division I Vice-President Norrell. Andrew T. Mooradian, director of athletics at the University of New Hampshire, is the other Division I-AA member, while Eve Atkinson, director of women's athletics at Hofstra University, and Thomas Frericks, director of athletics at the University of Dayton, are the other members of the committee from the non-Division I football category.

Named to chair the committee was NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis, faculty athletic representative, Oregon State University.

Player agents

The third special committee was appointed to formulate a set of recommended guidelines for member institutions to follow in dealing with player agents and to consider other means of approaching the "agent problem." The Special Committee on Player Agents will be chaired by Richard H. Perry, director of athletics at the University of Southern California.

Also appointed to that group: Vincent J. Dooley, director of athletics and head football coach, University of Georgia, and an officer in the American Football Coaches Association; C. Arnold Ferrin Jr., director of athletics, University of Utah, and a former general manager in professional basketball; Carl C. James, commissioner, Big Eight Conference, and a member of the NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee.

Schaus, director of athletics at West Virginia University and a former coach in professional basketball; Bo Schembechler, University of Michigan head football coach and president of the AFCA; Richard D. CFA announces TV plan

Members of the College Football Association, in that organization's seventh annual meeting June 3-5 in Dallas, expressed interest in having the NCAA television plan remain in effect for the 1983 season but unanimously adopted a one-season contingency TV plan if the NCAA plan and implementing contracts are ruled invalid by court action.

The CFA plan, unanimously adopted by the 59 institutions represented at the meeting, would provide exclusive national network telecasts at 1 and 4 p.m. on Saturdays during the football season, with a Saturday evening "window" telecast for which individual institutions and conferences could sell their games on their own.

The contracted networks would have the right of first refusal of Saturday games. Each participating institution would be limited to four appearances per year.

Participation by institutions would be based on a "commitment form" by which each institution would assign its television rights to the CFA.

CFA members also expressed interest in a television coalition with the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences, which do not belong to the CFA. Eugene F. Corrigan, director of athletics at the University of Notre Dame, said the CFA television committee would like the NCAA to monitor such a plan.

Edwin W. Lawrence

Lawrence named AD at Fairbanks

Edwin W. Lawrence, director of athletics at Cheyney State College, has been named director of athletics at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, effective July 1. Lawrence, who is NCAA Division II vice-president, has held his post at Cheyney State the past 14 years.

A member of the NCAA Council and Executive Committee, Lawrence also has served on the Nominating Committee and Men's Committee on Committees.

Lawrence was selected from among 85 candidates for the Alaska post after deliberations by a community-advisory committee, faculty-athletic committee and the coaches at the institution.

Before joining Cheyney State, Lawrence taught in public schools and coached golf, tennis, football and baseball. He is a graduate of West Chester State College and has a master's degree from Villanova University.

Although some problems occurred with delivery of the News last fall, the publishing department worked with the Shawnee Mission, Kansas, post office and the U.S. Postal Service to attempt to ensure that all members received the News not later than four days after publication. Some progress has been made, and efforts will continue this fall in the hope that all members will be able to receive the weekly football statistics by the end of each week.

A more recent change in the News has been in-house production of the publication. Beginning with the April 20 issue, portions of the typesetting and paste-up of the News have been done in the national office building.

David D. Ravel was hired as publications production coordinator, with primary responsibility for paste-up. Dorothea K. Jacoby, publications production assistant, is responsible for typesetting all copy for The NCAA News. Throughout the summer and by next fall, all production will be done in house. Photos, printing and mailing still will be done at Ashcraft, Inc., the Kansas City-based printer that previously did all typesetting and paste-up.

One of the major disappointments during the first year of the new format was the lack of display advertising. While The Market (job-listing service) exceeded all expectations, display advertising did not fare as well. The NCAA recently contracted with Host Communications, Inc., of Lexington, Kentucky, as its advertising representative for The NCAA News, and an appreciable increase in display advertising is expected for next year.

Another feature of the new News has been the inclusion of comprehensive results from all NCAA championships. Previously, complete results of championships were not reported until publication of the National Collegiate Championships records book; however, the primary purpose of the News now is to provide as much complete, up-to-date information to the membership as possible.

The next issue of the News will be published June 22. Other summer issues are July 6, July 20, August 3, August 17 and August 31. The News then begins weekly production on Mondays, September 5 through December 5, and the schedule reverts to Wednesday publication December 14.
