Academic standards research to begin

The first step toward developing NCAA-sponsored research concerning academic requirements will be taken June 25 when a special committee meets in Kansas City.

The Special Committee on Academic Research, to be chaired by Division I Vice-President Gwendolyn Norrell, will supervise research regarding the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j), as amended by Proposal No. 48 at the 1983 Convention. Among the committee's first tasks will be the development of the final design of a study to be undertaken about Proposal No. 48 provisions. The committee also will discuss selection of a research organization to conduct the study.

Norrell is faculty athletic representative and professor in the counseling center at Michigan State University. Other members of the NCAA Council appointed to the special committee were Wilford S. Bailey of Auburn University and Francis W. Bonner of Furman University.

Other committee members include Edward B. Fort, North Carolina A&T State University; Charles Harris, University of Pennsylvania, and Robert F. Steidel, University of California, Berkeley.

Three experts in educational research also were named to the committee. They are Nancy Cole, University of Pittsburgh; Robert Lynn, University of Illinois, Champaign, and John Taylor of the National Institute of Education.

Although discussion of the study design and research organization will be the priorities at the first meeting, the committee also plans to discuss the validity of a core-curriculum requirement, the validity of standardized test-score requirements, possible interactions of those two requirements and a time frame for the project.

The committee also will discuss already-determined goals of obtaining data relating to the relationship of test scores to graduation rates, the relationship of a core-curriculum requirement to test scores and equivalencies between scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, (SAT) and the ACT examination produced by the American College Testing Program.

Eric D. Zemper, NCAA research coordinator, will serve as staff liaison to the special committee.

Major Division I issues on June meeting agendas

The major current issues facing the NCAA Division I membership dominate the agendas for the first Division I summer meeting June 24-25 in Kansas City, Missouri.

From football television to freshman eligibility, the 175 participants in the meeting at the Hyatt Regency Hotel will have a midyear opportunity to discuss half a dozen of the key questions facing the division this year. The purpose of the new meeting is to provide such a discussion forum and to involve the appropriate constituencies within the division, with the understanding that chief executive officers have their own special meeting in September.

Reports of the discussions and any recommendations agreed upon by the participants will be considered in several other forums, including the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education in July and the Division I Steering Committee and NCAA Council in August. The September CEO meeting also will consider the results of the June meeting, as will various member conferences.

The summer meeting opens with a joint session of all participants at 1:30 p.m. June 24, chaired by NCAA President John I. Toner. Highlighting that opening session will be a status report on the work of the select committee by John P. Schaefer, president of Research Corporation and executive director of the select committee, and a review of the status of football television litigation by President Toner and Wiles Hallock, outgoing chair of the NCAA Football Television Committee.

For three hours that afternoon, there will be separate sessions of faculty athletic representatives, directors of athletics, primary women administrators of athletics programs, conference commissioners, basketball coaches and football coaches. Those sessions will be chaired by John R.

Davis, NCAA secretary-treasurer; David L. Maggard, University of California, Berkeley; G. Jean Cerra, University of Missouri, Columbia; Fred Jacoby, Southwest Athletic Conference; Bob Knight, Indiana University, Bloomington, and Bo Schembechler, University of Michigan, respectively.

While each of those groups will have the opportunity to discuss other matters of interest, four issues appear on the agenda for each separate group:

• Academic requirements, including the provisions of 1983 Convention Proposal Nos. 48 and 56 [Bylaws See Major, page 8]

Maggard will chair directors of athletics

David L. Maggard, director of athletics at the University of California, Berkeley, and a member of the NCAA Council, has been named to replace Eugene F. Corrigan, University of Notre Dame, as chair of the directors of athletics session at the Division I summer meeting.

The change was made when Corrigan reported that he would be out of the country at the time of the meeting.

Several changes also have occurred in the listings of participants in the meeting June 24-25 in Kansas City, Missouri. Changes since all participants were listed in the May 25 and June 1 issues of The NCAA News are as follows:

Faculty representatives: Harry M. Cross, University of Washington, replaces Milton R. Schroeder, Arizona State University, as the Pacific-10 Conference representative. James Doyle, DePaul University, has accepted an invitation to attend as a representative of the independent Division I institutions.

Commissioners: Steve Hatchell, newly named commissioner of the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference, will be that conference's representative instead of Jerry Lovelace.

Football coaches: The American Football Coaches Association has selected Fred Akers, University of Texas, Austin; Brian Burke, Ohio University, and Dave Currey, California State University, Long Beach, to replace Lou Holtz, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Harold Raymond, University of Delaware, and Joe Restic, Harvard University.

Basketball coaches: The National Association of Basketball Coaches has not announced a representative to replace Sonny Allen, University of Nevada, Reno.

College World Series has high TV rating

Television viewers who enjoyed the 14 games of the 1983 College World Series should be able to continue enjoying college baseball championship coverage next year, based on viewing levels reported to the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network (ESPN).

Baseball telecasts from the series in Omaha ranked with ESPN's top-rated programming in each of the last two quarters, achieving a 2.6 rating for the 10 games televised live (the rating means that 2.6 percent of the U.S. television households were watching the games). The championship game June 11 between Texas and Alabama had a 4.5 rating.

"We were most pleased by the performance," said Tom Odjakjian, manager—program scheduling for ESPN. "Since this is the first year we have had ratings, we had no history for the series. We didn't know how people would respond."

"Interest stayed constant through the week and built toward the end—people did not just watch the first weekend and decide they had seen enough."

ESPN's highest-rated program in the first quarter of 1983 was the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship, which had a 4.3 rating. Other top-rated programs were United States Football League action (4.3), boxing (2.6) and billiards (2.2).

In the fourth quarter of 1982, college football bowl games were ESPN's top-rated programs, achieving a 4.5 rating.

Expanded injury-surveillance program sought

Collecting information about athletic injuries has become an important part of the NCAA's research and sports-medicine activities. If the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports has its way, that collection effort will become even more important.

The committee, which started an injury-surveillance program in football last fall, affirmed at its June meeting in Kansas City that it intends to expand the program to other sports.

That affirmation was necessary because the NCAA Executive Committee referred a request for funding to the special NCAA Program Evaluation Committee last spring. The delay could affect expansion efforts related to fall sports.

"The Executive Committee deferred all special requests for funding because it is a more sound financial policy to act on all such requests at one time," explained Ruth M. Berkey, assistant executive director.

"Although it is true that the delay (until the Executive Committee meets again in August) might affect expansion of this program in the fall, it will not affect continuing the football collection; and, a decision will be made soon enough to add sports during the winter and spring seasons."

The competitive safeguards committee hopes to begin collecting data from one men's sport and one women's sport during each season beginning with the 1983-84 academic year. Winter and spring sports targeted for this year are wrestling, women's gymnastics, baseball, men's lacrosse and women's lacrosse. If an additional sport can be added this fall, it will be women's volleyball.

Eric D. Zemper, NCAA research coordinator and staff liaison to the committee, estimated that expansion of the surveillance system will cost the Association an additional $8,000 to $9,000 this year. Maintenance of the football program should not exceed $8,000, he said.

Zemper emphasized that "the intent of the committee always has been to expand the program. The ultimate goal is an injury-surveillance system that covers all NCAA-sponsored sports."

The committee's efforts began in football, in part because of the number and seriousness of injuries. The Association previously obtained such data from the National Athletic Injury/Illness Reporting System (NAIRS), which operated at Pennsylvania State University.

That program no longer collects data for high school and college sports. In addition, the committee had some doubt about the validity of the NAIRS data. According to Zemper, the complexity of the reporting form and the composition of the sample made the data suspect.

"A common theme at the committee's last meeting was the need for more information," Zemper said. "We need to know what is really happening in college athletics. This will allow us to provide information to our rules committees about safety efforts they can make and to respond to outside organizations that propose ideas that could affect NCAA sports."

The seasonal expansion planned for 1983-84 is the second step in the process, but no definite plans have been made beyond that point. The committee intends to examine the

Briefing dates set in AIAW case

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has established the briefing schedule in the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women's antitrust litigation against the NCAA.

The AIAW is appealing the February 28, 1983, decision of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, which found that the NCAA committed no violations of the antitrust laws when it began offering championships and other programs in women's intercollegiate athletics. The appeal was filed March 29.

The certified record of the district court proceedings was filed with the appeals court June 2, and the appeals court has ordered that the AIAW's brief must be filed by July 12. The NCAA's brief is due August 12.

Based on that schedule, the case will be included among those to be drawn for the November-December session of the court of appeals.

Eligibility is smallest loss in going pro early

By Muriel Flake

The recent events surrounding the early entry of Clyde Drexler into professional basketball pose some critical questions concerning the best interest of players and all involved—the universities, the NCAA and the NBA.

It is understood there are no contracts or rules prohibiting collegians from leaving the university scene for professional basketball before graduation or at least until one's freshman class graduates. My question is, "Are these collegians operating from freedom of choice in the purest sense?"

With the glitter of six-figure incomes and all the hoopla surrounding early entry, does a 19- or 20-year-old really have freedom from psychological pressures to make wise decisions based on the best long-term interest?

The courts would say that Drexler and Akeem Olajuwon, the young Nigerian who decided to remain at the University of Houston for another year, are free to decide and even pledge to protect that freedom. But isn't there more to consider?

As I understand NCAA rules, there is permission for a student-athlete to consult an attorney or other professional for advice. However, once the student-athlete engages someone in any representative form [i.e., in negotiating a contract], he forfeits all remaining college eligibility.

The rule opens the door for the unconscionable agent who quietly solicits the collegian with all type inducements to turn pro. It has been reported that extreme limits of propriety have been tested to coerce the young person into professional basketball.

There are college basketball coaches who advise a sophomore or junior to give up his eligibility and file for early entry because they feel the athlete doesn't need the experience of another year or two in college. But the soliciting agent may have only one thing in mind in urging the sophomore or junior to turn pro—profit—as his income depends on an affirmative decision by the athlete.

The college-age period in an individual's life is an important transition stage of development in that the person is integrating himself as an adult. The college experience allows a semi-protected environment for this development.

As tax-paying citizens, we must evaluate our responsibilities and consider the long-range goals and rationale for providing a system of public-supported higher education.

One major purpose of the college experience is to facilitate intellectual growth. However, it is not possible to compartmentalize the human organism. One also is an emotional, feeling being. We are pledged to educate young people in all areas of development to ensure their positive direction as healthy, fully functioning adult members of society.

Colleges are not established to develop human beings to exist in the glamour of pro sports for five to eight years. However, the option need always be open should the collegian decide on the pro course for his life.

The issue—as I see it—is the type of support provided for the athlete at this crucial time for decisions. What protections are built into the system for athletes? How are contacts by soliciting agents monitored? I wonder if circumstances don't cloud the athlete's ability to make decisions in his best long-range interest.

Another consideration here is the full value of a college education. Are we placing economic opportunity as the high priority? It may be that an intangible dividend of growth and maturity provided by an additional year of college would better serve long-range goals for the athlete.

A year of professional basketball with all its transitoriness and spotlights may not provide the base for future personal security.

Some may argue it is foolish to remain in college when the athlete could collect $200,000 or $300,000 by signing a pro contract. I wonder, however, if surrendering the additional year of sophistication gained from the college experience is worth the money.

The offer quite likely will be available one year later. Perhaps money is not the real issue with an income of above $80,000 annually.

Leaving college early raises other questions. There are many activities in college life that are gone once the athlete turns pro. Even if his basketball skills are ready for the big leagues, is his maturity for handling the lifestyle sufficiently advanced? Has any thought been directed toward "life after the pros?"

Answers to these questions are not easy. I have no solutions on how to provide financial counseling. It does seem that some formal support for the student-athlete could ensure good professional guidance. It is doubtful the athlete is getting appropriate guidance from someone who stands to profit from his decision to turn pro.

There could be long-range problems for the individual if he turns pro and later regrets the decision. In our society, guilt is triggered easily except in the sociopathic personality. Guilt can be manifest in several ways.

One concern may surface with a broken commitment to teammates, the university community and the larger urban community. A person may get a feeling of lost achievement in the sense of unfinished business, not completing a task. Circumstances and situations that can't be relived generate regret. The responsibility of setting examples for others weighs heavily on persons in spotlights, and compromising one's integrity is the most insidious form of guilt.

It seems there are moral and ethical issues that arise from what appears solely an economic issue. The problems need to be resolved on moral and ethical grounds.

I would be too naive to think that college basketball is an amateur sport in its purest form. But I have an idea that permitting the student-athlete to retain a well-qualified representative, possibly approved by the NCAA, and at the same time retain his amateur status, might relieve some of his ethical and moral burden.

Legalized gambling a poor risk

Editorial

USA Today

"Legalizing sports gambling will only multiply the amounts bet on games. That could multiply the danger of corruption. Instead, if laws are enforced, regulations tightened and team owners required to adhere to the same code of conduct as their players, then the integrity of sports can be protected. And the game, not the bet, will again be the national pastime."

I have no strong feelings about the number of foreign athletes, except that in collegiate competition, they should be the same age as ours who are coming out of our own high schools. Questions/Answers

Q. In what sports does the NCAA conduct sports polls?

A. The NCAA conducts polls in four sports—football (Divisions I-AA, II and III), field hockey (Divisions I, II and III), women's volleyball (Divisions I, II and III), and men's and women's basketball (Divisions II and III). All polls are conducted on a weekly basis by the respective sports committees, with the exception of Divisions II and III field hockey and Division II women's volleyball, which are conducted on a biweekly basis.

Q. Can a local television station or cable system purchase rights to NCAA championships?

A. Certain championships television rights have been purchased by the networks on an exclusive basis. However, championships that have not been sold, most prominently preliminary competition, may be negotiated for on a local-market basis through the NCAA. Parties interested in negotiating for rights to specific championships should contact C. Dennis Cryder or James W. Shaffer at the national office.

Championships Highlights

Golf crown is fifth for Oklahoma State

Oklahoma State won the team title by seven strokes at the 86th NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships June 8-11 in Fresno, California, but Arizona State's Jim Carter needed an extra play-off hole to capture the individual championship.

It was Oklahoma State's fifth team title, the most recent coming in 1980. The Cowboys were runners-up to Houston last year.

Oklahoma State finished with a four-round total of 1,161 (nine over par). Texas (1,168) and Houston (1,170) were second and third.

Carter, who began the final round four strokes off the pace, made a par four on the first play-off hole to defeat Doug Harper of Fresno State, Paul Thomas of Texas and Scott Verplank of Oklahoma State. The four had tied at 287 (one under par) after 72 holes of play. Furman's Brad Faxon, who led by three strokes after 54 holes, had a 77 in the final round and finished at 288.

Besides Verplank, other members of the Cowboys' championship squad were Tommy Moore (75-76-69-73=293), Willie Wood (78-71-73-72=294), Andy Dillard (72-74-77-74=297) and Phillip Walton (77-70-74-78=299).

The tournament was held at the San Joaquin Country Club, with California State University, Fresno, serving as host institution.

CWS 'rating' was no bum steer; Longhorns romp to fourth title

Ninth-inning grand-slam home runs, extra-inning victories by a surprising Alabama team, the two millionth fan and increasing national television interest all were stories of the 1983 College World Series. When the games were finished, though, pretournament favorite Texas quietly defeated four opponents to win the NCAA Division I Baseball Championship.

The Longhorns had been one of the preseason favorites in Division I, primarily because of their pitching. That forecast held true during the finals series as Texas allowed just 11 runs in four games to become the 10th undefeated champion in College World Series history.

Roger Clemens pitched a seven-hitter in the championship contest as Texas edged Alabama, 4-3. Calvin Schiraldi, though, was the series' dominant pitcher and earned most outstanding player honors.

Schiraldi started the series with a five-hit, shutout victory over James Madison. He came back in Game 11 to help Texas to its first victory over Alabama, striking out 11 in 5 1/3 innings of relief in a 6-4, 10-inning contest.

The Crimson Tide made it tough for Texas, though, taking a 2-0 lead after five innings in the finale. Texas tied the game in the sixth on two hits, a walk, a hit batsman and a force play. In the seventh, the winning runs scored as Mike Brumley singled, Kirk Killingsworth tripled and Jose Tolentino bunted for a base hit.

One of the early CWS heroes, David Magadan, tried to bring Alabama back when he doubled to lead off the ninth. Magadan's run was the only one the Tide could score, though, as Clemens held the lead.

Magadan had entered the record books by starting the series with eight straight hits, including five in Alabama's opening-round upset victory over Arizona State. For the series, he batted .550 (11 for 20).

A nine-session record of 115,700 fans saw the 14 games, played June 3-11 in Omaha, Nebraska. On June 10, the two millionth fan to see the College World Series action since the finals moved to Omaha in 1950 entered Rosenblatt Stadium.

The average crowd for a session this year was 12,856, the highest in CWS history. It was the first time that all sessions drew at least 10,000 fans.

This was the fourth national title for Texas, with the last coming in 1975. It was the first time that the series has had two straight undefeated champions—Miami (Florida) won the title without a loss in 1982. Texas now trails only Southern California (11) and Arizona State (five) in total national baseball championships.

This game was one for the book

The final game of the 1983 NCAA Division III Baseball Championship, won by Marietta, 36-8 over Otterbein, was a record-setter.

Marietta set championship records with 36 runs and 33 hits in the game and 12 runs in the fourth inning. The previous highest-scoring game had been just two years ago, when North Carolina Wesleyan defeated Upsala, 27-9.

Shortstop Jon Shuler of Marietta equaled championship records with five hits and six runs scored. He had seven runs batted in, including a grand-slam home run, but the tournament record is 12. Pitcher Glen Alexander of Otterbein suffered through a record performance, allowing 14 runs, all earned, in 1 2/3 innings of pitching.

Marietta second baseman Jim Pancher was named the tournament's most outstanding player. He was joined on the all-tournament team by four Marietta teammates. They were first baseman John Hefner, designated hitter Steve Riley, outfielder Mark Talarico and pitcher Jim Kennedy.

Subcommittee reschedules football television meeting

Because of scheduling conflicts, the June 13 meeting of the administrative subcommittee of the NCAA Football Television Committee was postponed until June 23.

The meeting was called to review alternatives available to the membership should the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan not remain in effect this fall. At this time, the current plan remains in effect at least until the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals considers the Association's petition for a rehearing by the court's entire eight-judge panel. The Association filed that petition May 26; however, the court has yet to respond.

At the conclusion of the June 23 meeting, there will be a telephone conference with the entire Football Television Committee to discuss the current status of football television. A report then will be presented to the Division I Steering Committee and at the Division I summer meeting June 24-25 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Members of the administrative subcommittee are Wiles Hallock, Pacific-10 Conference; Hugh D. Hindman, Ohio State University, chair; Andrew T. Mooradian, University of New Hampshire; John J. Crouthamel, Syracuse University; John D. Swofford, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Ronald Schipper, Central College (Iowa).

Drake's Karnes to head NACDA

Robert D. Karnes, director of athletics at Drake University, was named president of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics at NACDA's annual convention June 12-15 in Las Vegas, Nevada.

Other officers will be Col. John J. Clune, U.S. Air Force Academy, first vice-president; Andrew T. Mooradian, University of New Hampshire, second vice-president, and Hugh D. Hindman, Ohio State University, third vice-president.

Ten new members also were selected for the 1983-84 executive committee. They are Alpha Alexander, Temple University; Barbara Camp, Southern Methodist University; Gary Cunningham, University of Wyoming; Arthur Eason, William Paterson College; Kit Green, University of Washington; Orville Gregory, Johnson County (Kansas) Community College; Nancy J. Olson, Florida International University; Vernon M. Smith, University of Toledo; Dick Towers, Kansas State University, and Charlotte West, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale.

In other action at the organization's 18th annual convention, delegates agreed to address some of the major problems facing intercollegiate athletics today. Committees were formed to deal with the topics of academic standards, reorganization, governance, recruiting, liaison with football and basketball coaches associations (including the issue of agents), and length of playing seasons.

situation on a yearly basis, with no definite timetable established for implementation of the full system.

In addition to affirming its interest in the injury-surveillance program, the committee:

- Recommended that Frederick O. Mueller, chair, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, serve as liaison to the Men's Lacrosse Committee. The lacrosse group requested this action, which must be approved by the Executive Committee.

- Discussed establishing a policy regarding participation by female student-athletes who are pregnant. The committee plans to review existing institutional policies and literature prior to making a decision.

- Recommended a one-time grant of $10,000 to the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment (NOCSAE). This would be in addition to the annual research grant awarded to NOCSAE.

- Reviewed various sports-medicine research proposals that will be acted upon by the Research Committee this summer.

- Freshman eligibility.
- Division I membership criteria.
- Modification of the current limitation on an athletics grant-in-aid [Constitution 3-1-(g)-(1)].

Another topic—dealing with player agents—appears on five of the six agendas, all except the one for the primary women administrators.

The directors of athletics, basketball coaches and football coaches also will discuss recruiting contact and evaluation periods in those two sports. The directors and basketball coaches will talk about the suggestion that the basketball season start one month later than at present and about various aspects of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

On the agenda for the football coaches, in addition to the major topics mentioned, are professional sports draft procedures, football coaching staff limitations, National Letter of Intent signing dates and various other items of concern to the coaches and the American Football Coaches Association.

Both groups of coaches will review the NCAA legislative process, and the basketball coaches will consider eliminating the part-time coach in their sport, as well as other matters of interest as suggested by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

The primary women administrators also will review the legislative process, emphasizing the application of NCAA rules to women's programs and the role of the primary woman administrator of athletics programs. Special questions in women's basketball, golf, gymnastics and volleyball are on the agenda, as are topics dealing with summer camps, commercial sponsorship, letters of intent, the five-year eligibility rule and the 20-year age rule.

In addition to the topics appearing on all agendas, the conference executive officers also will concern themselves with the five-year rule and the 20-year age rule, the basketball season, the application of NCAA legislation to women's programs and various issues involving NCAA championships.

The six separate sessions reconvene for two hours the morning of June 25, before a two-hour closing session of all participants, featuring reports on the discussions and decisions reached in each of the separate meetings. The summer meeting will adjourn at noon June 25.

The NCAA Division I Steering Committee will meet in the morning June 24 and again briefly after the summer meeting adjourns June 25. Division I Vice-President Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University, will chair those sessions.

ing a 3.6. Other popular programs were two boxing shows (3.3 and 2.6) and professional basketball (2.2).

This was the second year that ESPN televised all College World Series games, either live or on a delayed basis. Four of this year's games were delayed because of programming conflicts.

"Even the taped games did well," Odjakjian commented. "Certainly, based on the performance, we will reevaluate our scheduling for next year."

"I would anticipate that there still will be a few games shown taped rather than live because of other programming commitments, but we might make them different sessions than this year."

The 2.6 rating for the live telecasts was above the current ESPN goal for prime-time programming, which Odjakjian said is a 2.0 rating. A taped rebroadcast of the championship game, shown June 12, achieved a 1.6 mark. Odjakjian added that a late-night game shown on a delayed basis in midweek also achieved an encouraging viewing level.
