Balloting begins on special television meeting

Ballots that would authorize a special meeting to discuss alternative football television policies have been mailed to the chief executive officers of NCAA Divisions I-A and I-AA football-playing institutions.

Completed ballots must be received at the national office by mail or wired transmission no later than 5 p.m. CDT July 15.

The ballots call for those CEOs, or their designated representatives, to vote for or against authorizing the Division I Steering Committee to call such a meeting under the terms of Bylaw 8-2 any time before the 1984 NCAA Convention January 10. If authorized, the steering committee would set the dates of the meeting and the dates for submission of amendments to principles and policies that would be submitted by the NCAA Football Television Committee or by six or more active members.

Representatives of member institutions were briefed last month by Wiles Hallock, immediate past chair of the NCAA Football Television Committee, during the Division I summer meeting. Hallock outlined recent legal actions involving football television and procedures adopted by the administrative subcommittee of the Football Television Committee for a special meeting and the possible development of an alternative plan(s).

The special meeting contemplated by the Division I Steering Committee could be called if the U.S. Supreme Court turns down the Association's request for a review of the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals' decision that the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan is in violation of Federal antitrust laws.

The NCAA has asked the 10th circuit court to stay its mandate pending a petition to the U.S. Supreme Court to review the case and to continue in effect the appellate court's stay of an earlier district court ruling. Should the court of appeals deny this petition, the NCAA then will ask the Supreme Court to extend the stay until it decides to act on the NCAA application for writ of certiorari.

Following the NCAA's request

179 delegates attend first summer meeting

A total of 179 representatives of Division I member institutions and conferences participated in the first Division I summer meeting June 24-25 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

A complete summary of the recommendations and other consensus positions taken during the meeting will appear in the July 20 issue of The NCAA News, after transcripts of the sessions have been reviewed. The meeting included opening and closing joint sessions and separate meetings of faculty athletic representatives, directors of athletics, primary women administrators of athletics programs, conference commissioners, head football coaches and head basketball coaches.

Included in the 179 Division I attendees were 28 faculty representatives, 30 directors of athletics, 25 primary women administrators, 32 commissioners, 20 football coaches and 19 basketball coaches, in addition to NCAA President John L. Toner, Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis, the 22 members of the Division I Steering Committee and Wiles Hallock of the Pacific-10 Conference, immediate past chair of the NCAA Football Television Committee.

Also attending were John P. Schaefer, executive director of the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education; Charles McClendon, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, and Joseph R. Vancisin, executive director of the National Association of Basketball Coaches. Edwin W. Lawrence, Division II vice-president, and Kenneth J. Weller, Division III vice-president, were present as observers.

Hallock and Schaefer spoke at the opening general session. Chairs of the various sessions were Toner, joint sessions; Davis, faculty representatives; David L. Maggard, University of California, Berkeley, directors of athletics; G. Jean Cerra, University of Missouri, Columbia, primary women administrators; Fred Jacoby, Southwest Athletic Conference, commissioners; Bo Schembechler, University of Michigan, football coaches, and Bob Knight, Indiana University, Bloomington, basketball coaches.

In addition to the summary that will appear in the next issue of the News, all participants in the meeting will receive a tabulation of the responses to an evaluation form they completed following the meeting. Nearly all of those returning the evaluation forms said the NCAA should continue to conduct such a meeting, and more than 90 percent rated the session as "extremely worthwhile" or "somewhat worthwhile."

NCAA Manual revision under way

An 18-month project to revise the NCAA Manual has begun, and the revision—if approved by the NCAA Council and authorized by the membership—will be implemented in the 1985-86 edition of the Manual.

George H. Gangwere, the Association's general legal counsel, has agreed to handle the project, with the assistance of other members of his law firm in Kansas City, Missouri.

Beginning this August and continuing through the 1985 NCAA Convention, each meeting of the NCAA Council will receive a progress report on the project. The first preliminary drafts of revised material are due in January 1984.

In its October 1984 meeting, the Council will review the complete revision and decide whether to sponsor legislation at the 1985 Convention to authorize its implementation in the 1985-86 Manual by the Constitution and Bylaws Committee.

Gangwere and his associates are free to propose any revisions they deem appropriate, with the understanding that no substantive changes can be made in the Association's legislation in terms of changing the meaning or application of the legislation. Substantive adjustments can be made only by amending the legislation at an NCAA Convention.

Instead, the project will consider editorial revisions, including the following:

California schools strike gold in NCAA championships

Schools from California won 16 NCAA championships during the 1982-83 season, and 62 institutions took home trophies from the Association's 73 championships.

No institution dominated the scene during the past year as UCLA did in 1981-82 when the Bruins won five championships. UCLA was one of 11 institutions that won two championships in 1982-83.

Six of the California-based championships were won by Pacific-10 Conference institutions. Besides UCLA's two championships in Division I women's outdoor track and men's volleyball, Stanford won championships in Division I men's tennis and Division I women's swimming and diving, and Southern California won titles in Division I women's basketball and Division I women's tennis.

Among Division I conferences, the Southwest Athletic Conference was next with five championships. Southern Methodist won two of those titles in men's indoor and outdoor track. Other SWC winners were Texas (Division I baseball), Texas Christian (women's golf) and Texas A&M (Division I women's softball).

Wisconsin's victories in Division I men's cross country and Division I men's ice hockey helped the Big Ten Conference to third among Division I conferences, with four championships. Indiana (Division I men's soccer) and Iowa (Division I wrestling) were other winners.

Other Division I conferences and number of NCAA championships are Big Eight Conference (three), Atlantic Coast Conference (three), Western Athletic Conference (three), Southeastern Conference (one), Sun Belt Conference (one), Pacific Coast Athletic Association (one), Atlantic 10 Conference (one), Big East Conference (one) and East Coast Conference (one).

Seven of the 11 institutions that won two titles each during the 1982-83 season were in Division I. Besides those institutions already mentioned from the Pacific-10, Big Ten and SWC, other dual winners were Nebraska (Big Eight Conference) and Utah (Western Athletic Conference). Nebraska won titles in Division I men's gymnastics and women's indoor track, and Utah won championships in Division I women's gymnastics and men's and women's skiing.

Southern California continues to dominate the all-time list with 67 NCAA team titles. UCLA is second with 45; Oklahoma State has 36, Michigan 27, Yale 25 and Stanford 24.

Southern Methodist track and field performers won 11 individual championships in 1982-83, the most in Division I. Tied for second with eight individual titles each were Stanford, Nebraska, Tennessee and Florida.

The Trojans of Southern California also lead the all-time list in individual championships with 249. The remainder of the top 10: Michigan (182), Ohio State (163), Oklahoma State (115), Stanford (108), Indiana (106), UCLA (105), Illinois and Yale (104), and Michigan State (95).

Top winners in Division II in 1982-83 were Northridge State, Southwest Texas State and Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo with two championships each.

Northridge State, which won four titles during 1981-82, took home top honors in Division II women's softball and Division II men's swimming and diving. Southwest Texas State, in only its second year as an NCAA member, won championships in Division II football and Division II men's golf. Cal Poly-SLO ran to its victories in Division II women's cross country and Division II women's outdoor track.

TV expert focuses on CFA football plan

By Dave Goldberg

A man in television who knows whereof he speaks puts succinctly what will happen if the College Football Association's contingency plan for televised football supplants the NCAA's.

"The Rices, the Northwesterns, the Vanderbilts, the Oregon States will get their checks, but the big guys will be on the air," he says. "In other words, they're being told, 'Shut up, take your money, and get to the back of the bus.'"

What that means for the average fan is this:

Once the court hassles involving the NCAA's television plan are resolved, we will see Notre Dame, Penn State, Alabama, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Southern Cal and Notre Dame again.

No so different from what we see now, except that the regional games—where a Harvard or a Jackson State occasionally pops up—probably will be more of the same.

The College Football Association consists of 60 major football powers—the top 60 teams excluding the Big Ten and Pacific-10. At its recent meeting in Dallas, the CFA moved to bring those two conferences into its television plan, meaning that 80 football powers soon will be controlling televised football.

All this stems from last year's Federal court decision throwing out the NCAA's $262 million four-year deal with CBS and ABC. The decision has been upheld, but appeals continue.

The CFA's is a contingency plan—to take effect if the courts rule the NCAA plan out for 1983. But it also contains the seeds for seasons future.

It will give two networks 14 weeks of televised college football each and permit each school to be televised four times a year—the current limit is three exposures, five during two years. It makes no distinction between regional and national exposures, unlike the current plan, which limits national appearances.

That's a big difference for the football schools, which now can show the three or four games they want to show. Penn State, for example, can sell nationally its games with Pitt, Nebraska, Notre Dame and Alabama, but not its games with Temple or Rutgers.

The CFA plan also has an escape clause from the antitrust laws—after 7 p.m., any school or conference is free to sell its games to any stations: local, regional, whatever. But that doesn't hurt the big schools either—Arkansas-Tulsa or Texas-Texas Christian, shown at night, make good regional attractions.

The key is doing away with regional requirements.

Last October 2, for example, ABC carried five regional games. West Virginia-Pitt went to 70 markets, Houston-Baylor to 52, Georgia Tech-North Carolina to 40, San Jose State-California to 26, Boise State-Montana State to 10 and Akron-Middle Tennessee State to five.

Guess what will happen to the Boise States and Akrons under the CFA plan, even to the San Jose States and Bayers?

On that same Saturday, Nebraska played Auburn. It wasn't televised because Nebraska already had been committed to its maximum exposures. But with fewer restrictions . . .

Like someone once said. The rich get richer.

Game-fixing opportunities are real

"I think there is a strong likelihood it (that college and professional players are deeply into cocaine and in a position where they can be compromised to fix games) does exist.

"It can easily be done—especially in the over-under, where a better bet on the total points scored.

"We know many big-time athletes are involved in a very large scale using cocaine. All illegal sports book-makers will attempt to use any means possible to obtain any kind of advantages—even going so far as bribery or extortion. It is a very lucrative business. The amounts involved are unbelievable. It is, really, a money-making machine for organized crime."

"In the relatively short period of time (two years) the NCAA has been involved in women's sports, colleges football. He had us between a rock and a hard place.

"It is not our intention to rape college football programs. But some modifications must be looked at about draft eligibility. Maybe there's a review procedure appropriate for a kid with maturity who says, 'I want to go out and earn my living.' Have a committee to screen kids. If the committee says a kid is not ready, at least there is something we can deal with."

Dal Shealy, football coach

"I really believe that 90 percent of the heavy (and illegal) wheeling and dealing is done by alumni, and the head coach may not be aware of it. An assistant coach tells an alumnus, 'We've got to get this guy,' and . . .

"There are too many rules and too many shades in between, (but) they are beginning to get a better grasp of things. We're moving in the right direction. Like a false economy, for years they (NCAA) said they were doing something about illegal recruiting but really weren't."

James P. Melody, executive director

"Athletes are different because their progression toward dependence (on drugs) is much faster than their contemporaries because of the pressure they're under and the funds available to support their habits.

"Becoming the best pitcher, halfback or power forward was their primary goal. But when they begin to use these substances and their dependence progresses—no matter what they say to me or anyone else—they will use them until they can physically or emotionally use them no longer.

"They not only get sick of using, they become sick with their own proficiency in covering up their usage. They run out of lies to cover up."

Fred Jacoby, commissioner Southwest Athletic Conference

"Our reasons for making such a proposal (to move Division I college basketball season starting date to late December) are both academic and economic. Academically, December is so chopped up. The first week is studying for exams, the second week is final exams and then the students go home. There are very few students left on campus, and there is hardly any interest.

"Network people tell me that December is the worst month of the year. It seems like the month of December could be traded for another month and we could do a much better job."

Jim Wacker, football coach
Texas Christian University

Dallas Times Herald

"If I'm a winner, then my peers aren't going to like me very much. It's tough to be all that friendly with those whom you are competing with. I certainly don't like the people who beat me as much as those I can beat. It's just a competitive business. That's the way it is. . . .

"You better not look for guidance and comfort from those you have to go to war against. As a group, I love coaches. They're putting it on the line all the time. But it's tough to get real friendly with those whom I have to compete with. I don't think there are very many coaches who compete against each other and are still bosom buddies."

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

It does not surprise me in the slightest that The NCAA News now exceeds 20,000 in circulation and that there has been a rapid growth in non-membership subscriptions.

It is by far the most effective means of communication ever published by the NCAA—I'd be lost without it. Two things, in particular, which are outstanding—the News reports fairly on all happenings, even those not favorable to the NCAA, and it contains a wide range of contributor viewpoints.

I know that the News is read avidly. One of the features that I wrote last fall, on the history of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association, brought more than the usual quota of mail and comments.

Congratulations on a successful first year of a new approach.

To the Editor:

New student regulations, designed to give the Immigration and Naturalization Service better control over foreign students in the United States and over schools approved for attendance of foreign students, will go into effect on August 1.

This is a major revision of the regulations, which have required long, intense and careful evaluation to arrive at the best possible procedure for administering the student program. Although the regulations were published in the Federal Register on April 5, 1983, the effective date was delayed to allow sufficient time to develop a student's and school's enhancement to the INS computerized record-keeping system, and to make new and revised forms available to the public.

Briefly, the new regulations for F-1 students:

— Admission for duration of status for one educational program (e.g., elementary school, high school, bachelor's degree, master's degree, etc.), and any authorized practical training, plus 30 days.

— Extension of stay will be required where a student desires to pursue a course of study in another educational program or has completed one educational program and desires to complete another at the same level of educational attainment (for example, a second master's degree).

— Extension of stay will not be required where a bona fide student does not complete a course of study because of illness, academic difficulties, change in major field of study or school transfer.

— School transfer within the same educational program will be a notification rather than an adjudication. The old school will be required to notify INS of the transfer.

— A work bar will be imposed on students during their first full year in the United States.

— Applications for practical training will continue to be adjudicated by the INS.

The regulations for M-1 students include the following:

— Admission for the period necessary to complete their courses of study, plus 30 days, or for one year, whichever is less; applications will be required for extensions of stay, school transfer and practical training; employment will not be permitted except when employment for practical training is authorized; a change in educational objectives will not be permitted; a change in nonimmigrant classification to that of an F-1 student will not be permitted; eligibility for reinstatement to M-1 status will be on the same basis as for F-1 students; a job offer will not be required to be eligible to apply for practical training; a student will not be required to certify on Form I-20-M-N (Certificate of Eligibility for M-1 Student) that the education or training received in the United States can be utilized in the home country and that a course of study of comparable quality and cost is unavailable to the student in the home country.

The proposed rule that schools be required to report to INS within 60 days of each registration period each new F-1 or M-1 student who registers was not adopted. Instead, schools will be required to update computer-generated lists of F-1 and M-1 students who INS records reflect are attending the schools.

have experienced a dramatic upswing in their programs. This has been possible as a result of the extra effort by the NCAA to promote and establish women's championships.

" . . . the need for increased funding in college women's sports is not the result of the NCAA but rather the natural and expected situation resulting from Title IX and the years of efforts to upgrade programs for women. . . . Money was not the preeminent motivation for the movement of women's programs to the NCAA.

" . . . The opportunity created by involving the NCAA in women's sports has provided a forum for men and women to work cooperatively together toward the betterment of intercollegiate athletics. Sweeping education reforms urged

A task force of governors, educators and business executives has called for sweeping reforms in public education, echoing reports by the National Commission on Excellence in Education, the Twentieth Century Fund and other groups in recent months.

The Task Force on Education for Economic Growth strongly endorsed merit pay for teachers and recommended more homework for students and a longer school day and year.

The report said the Federal government should not shirk its responsibilities and financial commitment to education, but it emphasized what states and communities can do to help schools.

The task force said its members shared "a conviction that a real emergency is upon us . . . and a passionate, optimistic conviction that action, soon enough and in the right directions, can succeed."

The task force said it would stay in existence to promote its plan and to establish a clearinghouse for information and ideas on school improvement.

Members include governors of Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and Utah, and the chairmen or chief executives of such firms as RCA Corp., Texas Instruments, Ford Motor Co., Xerox, Control Data and Time Inc.

Graduates' job prospects bleak

Only about one-third of the record number of 965,000 graduating college seniors in 1983 left their campuses with jobs, according to a Northwestern University survey.

The number of on-campus recruiting interviews this year was down 20 to 30 percent from 1982, Victor Lindquist, coauthor of the study, told Time magazine.

Graduates most in demand were those who majored in electrical engineering, computer science and accounting, although a diploma in those fields does not guarantee a job.

Liberal arts graduates were having the most difficulty in landing jobs.

According to the College Placement Council, average starting salaries for liberal arts graduates is down seven percent from 1982, to $14,256. Many companies reportedly will not interview seniors who have less than a 3.500 grade-point average.

Job prospects for the class of 1983 have been termed the bleakest since World War II.

Robb seeks more pay for teachers

Virginia Governor Charles S. Robb has proposed that the state spend $250 million to raise the salaries of public school teachers and university faculty 10 percent during the next two years.

Wayne Anderson, Virginia secretary of administration and finance, said, "Teacher salaries are the touchstone and most important point of leverage in improving education."

The Virginia Education Association reacted cautiously to Robb's proposal, the Washington Post reported.

In the past two sessions, the Virginia General Assembly has allocated funds to local school boards for teacher salary increases of 10 percent and 9.7 percent, respectively, only to watch more than half of those boards decline to funnel the increased state aid to teachers.

Nonathletes fare poorly on grades

Newly enacted grade standards barring students from extracurricular activities if they fail to maintain a C average or if they receive at least one failing grade have forced the disqualification of more than twice as many high school students in nonathletic activities as those in sports programs, the Los Angeles Times reports.

A survey by the school district showed that 54.5 percent of the students enrolled in concert band programs at 49 high schools were disqualified because of grades. And 27.7 percent of the drama students at the same schools were cut.

The grade standards went into effect January 31.

Figures showed that 14.4 percent of students in baseball programs were forced out, and 10 percent of participants on girls' track teams were disqualified. Of the boys' track team members, 23.3 percent were cut.

District officials said that at least part of the relative success of athletes was the result of efforts by coaches to pinpoint students in academic trouble and offer them assistance.

Institution adds master's program

Sports management has been added to the master of science degree program in business administration at Robert Morris College. "This is a program that clearly emphasizes the business and managerial sides of sports and recreation," said Stephen Hardy, chairman of the department of sports management.

It's obviously not a 'cake' course

The University of California, Berkeley, last spring offered a class called "Botany 20: History of Chocolate." The laboratory periods were spent sampling chocolate in all its varieties, according to United Press International.

"I'm a chocolate snob, now," one student remarked.

About 800 students applied for 40 openings when the class first was offered last spring. There was a $12 fee to pay for the sweets.

The students emphasized that the course was a legitimate scientific undertaking devoted to the study of the cocoa bean-producing plant, Theobroma Cacao.

They obviously did not want their parents to think they are enrolled in just another "cake" course.

Football promotion tour begins July 30 in Kings Mills, Ohio

The eighth annual NCAA-ABC Football Promotion Tour begins July 30 in Kings Mills, Ohio, with five outstanding players and 10 of the nation's top coaches.

Brigham Young tight end Gordon Hudson, Nebraska quarterback Turner Gill, Georgia defensive back Terry Hoage, Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie and Southern Methodist quarterback Lance McIlhenny will meet with members of the media at all seven stops on the tour.

The Football Writers Association of America (FWAA) will start the tour rolling July 30 with its annual meeting at the College Football Hall of Fame in Kings Mills. The following day, David M. Nelson, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Football Rules Committee and director of athletics at the University of Delaware, will give a brief presentation to members of the press and then be available for a question-and-answer session. The media then will have the opportunity to meet individually with the five athletes for interviews.

On August 1, a press conference with Pat Dye of Auburn, Ken Hatfield of Air Force, Lou Holtz of Arkansas and Bobby Ross of Maryland will be held at the Kings Island Inn in Kings Mills.

August 2 the tour will be in New York, where Georgia coach Vince Dooley will speak to the press in a noon luncheon at the Plaza Hotel. Afterwards, the tour moves to Boston, where an August 3 breakfast and press conference at the Parker House featuring Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill will be held.

Doug Flutie

Stops in three cities are on the agenda for August 4. The first stop is Atlanta, where a breakfast and press conference with Michigan coach Bo Schembechler is scheduled at the Atlanta Hilton. The tour then departs for the Dallas/Fort Worth Regional Airport and a luncheon and press conference with California coach Joe Kapp at Gaylen's Restaurant in Arlington, Texas. The group ends its busy day by taking a late-afternoon flight to San Francisco, where a luncheon and press conference with Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer will be held at the Westin St. Francis Hotel the following day.

After the August 5 luncheon and press conference in San Francisco, the tour moves to Los Angeles that afternoon and concludes August 6 at the Century Plaza Hotel with a breakfast and press conference with Notre Dame coach Gerry Faust.

Football program series mailed

The 1983 football program series is available from the NCAA and was mailed to all football-playing institutions in late June.

The 12-page series contains 8½-inch-by-11-inch repro proofs that are ready for insertion into football game programs.

Nine of the 12 pages can be used as

'83 football videocassette is available

An overview of the upcoming collegiate football season, a special tribute to the late Paul "Bear" Bryant and a look at the proliferation of the passing game all are part of the 1983 NCAA football preview show.

For the first time since NCAA Productions began producing the show in 1977, this year's show is on a three-quarter-inch videocassette, rather than on film. NCAA Productions distributes the show free of charge to all NCAA Division I sports information directors for their use in the local promotion of college football. The show also is available through the NCAA Library of Films.

"The show is a preview of the upcoming season, highlighting the leading teams and conferences in Division I," said Ronald Schwartz, NCAA director of television news service, who produced and directed the show. "We also have two special segments. One is on the increase in passing in college football, and the other is a tribute to Bear Bryant."

Schwartz waded through 150 hours of videotape to find footage for the 22-minute program. In addition to the special segments, the show includes action footage of top returning players and interviews with leading coaches around the nation.

full pages in an 8½-by-11 program. The remaining three pages consist of NCAA seals, logos and publications order forms, which can be clipped and used as fillers on other pages.

A recent addition to the football program series is a feature on the College Football Hall of Fame. The page contains an exterior photo of the hall of fame in Kings Island, Ohio, and a photograph of two of the exhibits and a story.

Other 8½-by-11 pages in the series are the Code of Officials Signals; a feature on the process the College Sports Information Directors of America uses to select its academic all-America teams, as well as separate features on the CoSIDA football academic all-America teams; last year's NCAA honors award winners; an NCAA Library of Films listing and order form; a general information page on the NCAA, which features a photograph of the new NCAA west building, and a reduced version of the "Get High on Sports Not Drugs" poster.

Also available in the series are pages with various sizes of NCAA seals, logos, NCAA action logos and NCAA publications order forms that can be used as one-fourth- or one-half-page layouts.

Anyone interested in additional information or extra copies of the football program series should contact James W. Shaffer at the NCAA national office.

Cowboys' Wine named top baseball player

Robbie Wine, Oklahoma State University senior catcher, has been chosen college baseball player of the year by The Sporting News.

Wine batted .274, drove in 45 runs and hit 13 home runs for the Cowboys. He set an OSU career home run record with 36.

West Georgia joins Gulf South

NCAA Division III football champion West Georgia College has joined the Gulf South Conference, a Division II organization.

West Georgia had to resolve a football-scheduling problem before its membership could become official. The league requires six conference football games, and West Georgia had only five league games on its original schedule.

Maurice Townsend, West Georgia president, authorized the cancellation of a game with Livingstone College and the addition of a game with the University of Tennessee, Martin, a conference member. Townsend authorized the payment of a penalty in the contract with Livingstone if the release had been refused.

Other conference members are Delta State University, Jacksonville State University, Livingston University, Mississippi College, University of North Alabama, Troy State University and Valdosta State College.

Academy offers fellowship program

A postdoctoral research fellowship program that provides $30,000 for three research specialists in sports, health and fitness has been established by the United States Sports Academy.

The program offers a stipend and room and board for specialists in areas related to the academy's master of sport science degree programs in coaching, fitness management, sport management and sport medicine. The awards allow researchers to pursue topics for nine months at the Mobile, Alabama, institution. Three fellowships will be provided annually.

The first fellowship awards will be made in the fall for use from January to August 1984. Thereafter, awards are scheduled in the spring for September-to-June study.

The application deadline for the 1984 program is August 1. Correspondence should be sent to Dr. Albert G. Applin, dean of academic affairs, U.S. Sports Academy, Box 8650, Mobile, Alabama 36608.

California

Not to be outdone by the Pacific-10 Conference, the California Collegiate Athletic Conference, a Division II conference, led all conferences in all divisions with seven NCAA team championships, thanks primarily to the four victories from Cal Poly-SLO and Northridge State.

Other CCAC winners were Cal Poly-Pomona (Division II baseball), Bakersfield State (Division II wrestling) and California-Riverside (Division II women's volleyball).

Two Division II conferences had three winners each—Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference and Lone Star Conference. Pennsylvania conference winners were Lock Haven (Division II field hockey), East Stroudsburg (Division II men's gymnastics) and Clarion (Division II women's swimming). Besides Southwest Texas State's two victories, the other Lone Star Conference winner was Abilene Christian (Division II men's outdoor track).

Among Division III conferences, the Independent College Athletic Conference was the winner with three team champions. The ICAC winners were Ithaca (Division III field hockey), Hobart (Division III men's lacrosse) and Rochester Tech (Division II men's ice hockey). Four Division III conferences had two champions each—College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin (North Central twice), New Jersey State Athletic Conference (Glassboro State and Trenton State), Ohio Athletic Conference (Marietta and Kenyon) and the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (La Verne and Redlands).

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo and Stanislaus State remain the all-time team champions in Divisions II and III, respectively. Cal Poly-SLO leads the all-time Division II list with 19 team titles, followed by Northridge State with 16.

Stanislaus State heads Division III with eight team titles, but North Central and Glassboro State are close behind with seven titles each. Brockport State is fourth with five titles.

Northridge State's 10 individual titles in 1982-83 kept the Matadors on top in Division II with 82 all-time individual championships. Cal Poly-SLO moved to second place with 65, four ahead of California-Irvine, which now competes in Division I.

Johns Hopkins remains the all-time Division III leader in individual championships with 38, followed by Kenyon's 25. Williams was the 1982-83 leader in individual titles with 11 in Division III women's swimming and diving.

Seven notable streaks were kept alive during the past season; however, the 1982-83 season was not a good one for Texas-El Paso. The Miners had their streaks stopped in men's cross country (four), men's indoor track (three) and men's outdoor track (four).

Iowa (Division I wrestling) and Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (Division II men's tennis) ran their consecutive streaks to six, one behind the second-best mark in NCAA championship history. Southern California is the all-time leader in consecutive championships, winning nine straight Division I outdoor track titles from 1935 to 1943.

Iowa and Southern Illinois-Edwardsville will be trying to tie five other schools that have won seven championships in a row: Cal Poly-SLO (Division II wrestling, 1968-1974), UCLA (Division I men's basketball, 1967-1973), Denver (skiing, 1961-1967), Southern California (Division I men's outdoor track, 1949-1955) and Oklahoma State (Division I wrestling, 1937-1946).

Bakersfield State (Division II wrestling) and Nebraska (Division I men's gymnastics) have won five championships in a row, and three

Committee begins work on Proposal No. 48 research

The Special Committee on Academic Research has begun its work to develop research concerning academic requirements in relation to Proposal No. 48 as passed at the 1983 annual Convention. The results will be presented to the NCAA Council in October 1984, in time to prepare legislation for the 1985 Convention.

The committee, chaired by Division I Vice-President Gwendolyn Norrell of Michigan State University, met June 25-26 in Kansas City. After reviewing Proposal No. 48, a work plan was established. The research, to be conducted by an independent organization, will focus on three areas:

- Collection of data concerning graduation rates in relation to standardized test scores and high school grades. Men and women in the 1977 incoming fall class will compose the sample, and graduation during a six-year period will be examined. The study will measure all student-athletes at Division I institutions who received athletically related financial aid.

- Relation of standardized test scores by students who completed a minimum high school core curriculum, as defined by Proposal No. 48. The hypothesis is that students who complete such a basic curriculum also have met the required minimum test scores.

- Comparison of test scores by students who completed both the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and the ACT examination produced by the American College Testing Program. This study will attempt to determine whether the minimum scores of 700 on the SAT and 15 on the ACT are comparable.

Data also will be collected from selected Division II institutions, in response to a request from the Division II Steering Committee.

The research firm to conduct the study will be selected by mid-August, according to Eric D. Zemper, NCAA research coordinator. Eleven organizations are being considered and the field will be narrowed to two or three finalists July 18.

A subcommittee will meet with the contractor in August to develop plans for the data collection, which will be completed by January 1. A preliminary report will be submitted to the committee by May 15, 1984.

"We want to get off the ground as quickly as possible with this project and get solid data to the Council as quickly as possible," Zemper said.

"Time constraints make it impossible to have anything ready for the 1984 Convention," he added, "but the following year still is early enough for modification of the current legislation."

"We will be especially careful to select an organization with a good reputation for handling sensitive situations," Zemper said.

Also attending the June meeting was Clifford F. Sjogren of the University of Michigan, representing the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO).

That organization has been asked by the American Council on Education (ACE) to conduct research on the academic performance of freshman student-athletes. The NCAA committee will work closely with AACRAO in its efforts.

Zemper said that the NCAA and AACRAO would combine data-collection efforts, so that only one request is made of institutions. Once the data is collected, each organization will make an analysis.

The special committee will meet again July 23-24 in Washington, D.C.

Committee reaffirms classification position

The NCAA Long Range Planning Committee has reaffirmed its belief that an institution should have a clear and consistent philosophy of athletics for both men and women, and the committee does not support the concept of sport-by-sport classification.

Meeting June 27-28 in Monterey, California, the committee noted that some interest had been expressed in the Division I summer meeting in a more flexible classification system as a possible means of treating concerns regarding the Division I membership system.

"Essentially, the Long Range Planning Committee believes that we should not attempt to solve Division I problems by disrupting Divisions II and III," reported D. Alan Williams, University of Virginia faculty athletic representative and chair of the committee. "In addition, the concept sets students against students by treating their sports differently."

In another action, the committee began a continuing discussion of the role of the faculty athletic representative, expressing concerns regarding stability in that position and the demands of the position as they relate to the individual's academic duties on the campus.

The committee will recommend to the Division I Steering Committee that this issue and the overall process of developing institutional positions on athletics issues be on the agenda for the Division I chief executive officers meeting in September.

In discussing involvement by chief executives in athletics issues, the committee repeated its February 1983 position that CEOs can be involved most effectively within the NCAA structure, rather than through outside agencies.

In other actions at the June meeting, the committee:

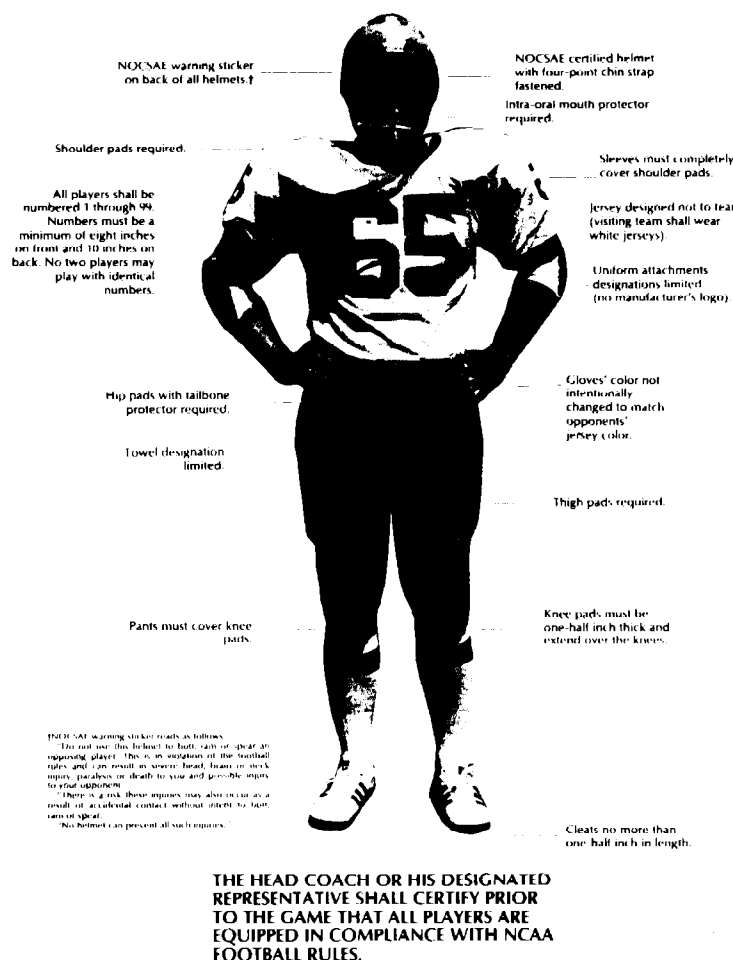

- Voted to report to the NCAA Council that it is interested in investigating the concept of a combined-scoring championship in various individual sports. Such a concept would recognize a champion for the best combined scores by men's and women's entries in addition to a men's champion and a women's champion. The committee will suggest that the appropriate NCAA sports committees consider that matter.

- Expressed interest in working more closely with high school and junior college interests, perhaps by inviting representatives of the National Federation of State High School Associations and the National Junior College Athletic Association to meet with the committee, occasionally when appropriate long-range issues are being discussed.

- Considered a comparison of sports participation data from member institutions in 1980-81 and 1981-82, noting that participation totals had increased for both men and women. [Note: The sports participation data will be featured in the July 20 issue of The NCAA News.]

- Noted a pronounced trend toward single conferences governing competition for both men and women, a goal supported by the committee in the past. [Note: A review of conference sponsorship data will appear in an August issue of the News.]

1983 NCAA Football Equipment Standards LEGAL UNIFORM

Poster mailed

The 1983 NCAA Football Equipment Standards poster was mailed last week to directors of athletics, football coaches, athletic trainers and equipment managers at all football-playing member institutions. The poster features four-color photographs illustrating mandatory equipment, illegal equipment and a legal uniform as prescribed by NCAA football rules.

New books available

Four new publications in the 1983-84 series of NCAA rules and general publications will be available in July.

NCAA Football, priced at $5, contains records in both regular-season and championship competition by both individuals and teams in all four football divisions. The publication also lists statistical leaders, all-America teams, results of bowl games, game-by-game results from 1982 and schedules for the 1983 season.

The Read-Easy Basketball Rules, which sells for $1.50, is a simplified version of the Men's Basketball Rules and Interpretations that became available to the public in June. Included among the changes for 1983-84 are a reduction in the number of timeouts in televised games and the awarding of two-shot free throws on all common fouls committed in the last two minutes of a game, if the bonus rule is in effect.

Men's Illustrated Basketball Rules ($3) is a valuable aid to officials in the sport. Drawings illustrate various situations and provide rulings.

Major changes in 1983 NCAA Men's Soccer Rules ($3) include a standardization of overtime and tie-breaking procedures, a requirement to submit a team roster to the referee prior to game time and the adoption of the three-man diagonal system of control as the mandatory system of officiating.

To place an order or to inquire about bulk rates, contact NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201. Payment, which includes postage, should accompany all orders. Those who want books mailed first class should include $1.50 postage for each book.

Letter-of-intent period added in women's basketball

An eight-day early signing period in November for women's basketball has been included in the National Letter of Intent program, which is administered by the Collegiate Commissioners Association.

The early signing period is November 9 to 16, and it corresponds to the early signing period in men's basketball.

These and other letter-of-intent signing dates were announced after the annual meeting of the association in Monterey, California, in late June.

Fred Jacoby, commissioner of the Southwest Athletic Conference and chair of the National Letter of Intent Steering Committee, said that registration forms for the letter-of-intent program were mailed to NCAA member institutions July 1. Jacoby said that forms also were mailed to other institutions and conferences that requested the material and volunteered for the program. Any other interested parties can contact Jacoby at the Southwest Athletic Conference office in Dallas, Texas.

Jacoby said he hopes to close registration for the program by August 15.

The complete letter-of-intent signing periods are as follows:

Football—February 8, 1984, to May 1, 1984. Mid-year junior college transfer—December 15, 1983, to January 15, 1984. Men's basketball—November 9, 1983, to November 16, 1983, or April 11, 1984, to May 15, 1984. All other men's sports—April 11, 1984, to August 1, 1984. Women's basketball—November 9, 1983, to November 16, 1983, or April 11, 1984, to August 1, 1984. Women's volleyball and field hockey—February 8, 1984, to August 1, 1984. All other women's sports—April 11, 1984, to August 1, 1984.

It is estimated that there were 13,000 National Letter of Intent signees in 1982-83.

Newly elected CCA President Robert M. Whitelaw, commissioner of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, said the CCA voted to support legislation at the 1984 NCAA Convention that would require a 48-hour quiet period prior to and after signing dates in the National Letter of Intent program.

No direct contact by coaches with a recruit would be allowed on or off campus. Telephone contacts would be allowed.

The quiet period would allow a prospective student-athlete to counsel with his family concerning his future. It also would lessen the recruiting pressures that some prospects encounter, the commissioners believe.

The commissioners proposed that another open period of rules experiments in basketball be allowed, and an association representative will contact Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, by letter concerning that preference.

In other business, the CCA plans to revise and distribute, with assistance from the NCAA, a brochure, "A Career in Professional Sports," for student-athletes. More than 30,000 copies were distributed last

TV in the News

Big East signs syndication pacts

Perhaps no conference in the country can match the Big East in terms of basketball television exposure, and the league is likely to enhance that position with a new three-year plan for commercial syndication and national cable network coverage.

The conference and Metrosports, a Maryland-based television syndicator, will commercially syndicate Monday night and Saturday afternoon games for nine weeks. Metrosports also will syndicate the conference's postseason tournament.

The league's Monday night television games will be cablecast on a delayed basis by the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network. ESPN also will carry a nine-week Tuesday night series with the Big East.

On Wednesday nights, the USA Network will cablecast nine games. USA also may carry selected games on Saturday evenings.

Metrosports will syndicate local commercial coverage in the markets of the teams competing in the ESPN and USA games. The conference and Metrosports also will broadcast other games on local commercial television and regional cable outlets, according to Commissioner David R. Gavitt.

Earlier this year, the conference reached three-year agreements with CBS and NBC to carry a minimum of six conference and eight intersectional games annually.

Penn State grants rights to games

A New Kensington, Pennsylvania, firm has been granted rights to syndicate Pennsylvania State University football games on radio and television.

Total Communications Systems, which has produced and syndicated Penn State football for eight years, now will handle the Nittany Lions' radio network as well under the terms of the new agreement. The agreement covers the next three years.

The radio rights include live coverage of basketball as well as football. The television package includes preseason and postseason specials and rights to four or more football games, assuming the game is not superseded by either an NCAA or another national plan.

Thomopoulos gets new ABC post

Anthony D. Thomopoulos has been named to the new position of president of the ABC Broadcasting Group.

In the new position, Thomopoulos will oversee all of ABC's television and radio operations. He had been president of ABC Entertainment, responsible for the network's programming.

The appointment is the first major move by Frederick S. Pierce, who was named president and chief operating officer of ABC in January.

TVS to air Atlantic 10 games

The Atlantic 10 Conference and the TVS Television Network have reached a two-year, 80-game agreement to televise the league's basketball action.

TVS will hold the rights to a maximum of 20 dates during the two-year period. On each of those dates, TVS will have the rights to produce and televise a maximum of two conference games over the air and/or on cable.

According to Leland Byrd, conference commissioner, the proposed syndicated network will span 12 states in the Northeast plus the District of Columbia.

Pay sports service set for fall

Group W Satellite Entertainment Communications is prepared to launch the nation's first multiregional pay cable sports service as early as this fall.

Major League baseball will be the keystone of the service, to be called The Sports Network. Group W has signed agreements with major-league franchises in Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee and Seattle and hopes to land the rights to other professional and collegiate sporting events.

TSN will begin operations this fall in Chicago, Milwaukee and Seattle, with Baltimore/Washington and Detroit to follow in the spring. Dick Glover, network vice-president for sports development, said the service is expected to cost subscribers $7 to $14 a month for 16 hours of daily weekday programming and 20 hours daily on weekends. Revenue will be generated by subscription fees and advertising.

SportsVision, based in Chicago and owned by Eddie Einhorn, will become part of TSN. It currently is providing coverage of professional baseball, basketball, ice hockey and soccer on cable and over the air in the Chicago area.

Bornstein promoted at ESPN

Steven M. Bornstein, who has served as director of programming for the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network since August 1981, has been promoted to vice-president, programming.

In his new capacity, Bornstein will have overall responsibility for the national cable network's programming efforts, including events negotiation and acquisition, scheduling, and planning.

ACC-Raycom contract pending

The Atlantic Coast Conference and Raycom Sports, Inc., of Charlotte, North Carolina, have signed a contingency agreement for the live television rights to ACC football games this fall.

The agreement grants Raycom, in association with the Capitol Broadcasting Company, Inc., of Raleigh, North Carolina, the rights to ACC football coverage pending a final decision by the courts on the legality of the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan.

"The agreement will ensure area fans of quality college football games of regional interest," said Rick Ray, president of Raycom. "The formation of the plan was indicative of the forward thinking of the ACC and the leadership role the conference has taken on the issue."

National Fitness Academy plans to be open to students by 1984

A center to fight American over-eating and underexercising—the first in the United States—plans to locate in Indianapolis. George H. Allen, chairman of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, has announced.

The National Fitness Academy is intended mainly to train fitness leaders from around the country, sponsor research of fitness programs and equipment, and be a reliable center for information on exercise, nutrition and health.

Sponsors hope the operation will be funded by private monies. Start-up funds include a $400,000 grant over three years from Lilly Endowment Inc., the charitable arm of the Indianapolis-based pharmaceutical firm, Eli Lilly & Co.

"This is an historic moment in American history," Allen, coach of the Chicago Blitz football team said.

"Now we're doing something we should have done 40 years ago. This is a great undertaking," Allen added.

The academy, which will be run by a board of trustees and a board of directors, hopes to accept students in 1984.

"Training has to be a priority," said National Fitness Foundation President Richard W. Kazmaier Jr., who is president of Kazmaier Associates Inc., a sporting goods consulting firm based in Wellesley Hills, Massachusetts. "We have to have substantial numbers of people moving through the facility to have any impact."

Kazmaier, who was recipient of the Heisman Trophy in 1951, said groups who may come for training include recreation leaders, school physical education teachers, athletic coaches for out-of-school sports, senior-citizen exercise leaders and armed-forces personnel.

Classes will be short term for a week or just a few days, he said. Instructors may be called on an as-needed basis.

In January, the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports decided to strengthen America's commitment to fitness by creating the academy and the National Fitness Foundation, a nonprofit group and the academy's primary sponsor.

Indianapolis was chosen as the academy's site after the council reviewed more than 360 possible locations and packages from 13 cities.

In recent years, Indianapolis has constructed first-class track and field, swimming, bicycling and tennis facilities. It is the home of the American College of Sports Medicine and the future home of a $182 million urban park—the White River State Park—with an emphasis on athletic facilities and a 60,000-seat domed stadium under construction.

Several sites for the academy are being considered near the proposed White River State Park and the sports facilities at Indiana University-Purdue University in Indianapolis, the site of many of the events of last summer's National Sports Festival IV, organizers say.

Among the athletic facilities already built or under construction that organizers cited as reasons for locating here are the following:

- The 13,500-seat Indiana University track and field stadium, which has been the site for USA-USSR track and field championships, National Invitational Collegiate championships and The Athletics Congress' USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

- The Indiana University natatorium, which has hosted the U.S. Swimming International Invitational, the NCAA Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships, U.S. Short Course Swimming Championships and U.S. Indoor Championships.

- The Major Taylor velodrome, a banked oval bicycle racing track operated by the city, which has hosted the six-nation International Grand Prix and will be the site of the Veteran National Track Championships, midsummer classic bicycle races and Madison National Cycling Championships.

- The 18,750-seat Market Square Arena, home of the Indiana Pacers of the National Basketball Association and host of the 1982 U.S. figure-skating competition.

- The 60,000-seat Hoosier Dome, which is under construction and headed for an August 1984 completion date. It is part of the expansion of the Indiana Convention Center, the scene of the Amateur Athletic Union's annual James E. Sullivan awards banquet and the recent USA-USSR boxing meet. City officials are trying to bring pro football and baseball to the city. The city already has the Cincinnati Reds' farm team—the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association.

- The Indianapolis Sports Center, which is the home of the annual U.S. Clay Courts Tennis Championships and the International Boys and Girls Tennis Championships.

Compliance form return date set

The 1983-84 certification of compliance forms have been mailed to all NCAA member institutions.

Officially known as the 1983-84 Institutional Certification of Compliance Form and the 1983-84 Staff Members Certification of Compliance Form, the forms must be returned to the NCAA national office no later than September 15 in order for an institution to enter team or individual competitors in 1983-84 NCAA-sponsored championship meets or tournaments. Any form received after September 15 must have been postmarked by September 8.

The institutional certification form must be signed by the chief executive officer and state that all athletic department staff members have received a careful review of the rules and regulations of the NCAA as they apply to the administration and conduct of intercollegiate athletics.

Additionally, institutions must indicate on the form the rules under which their women's programs will be conducted. Any women's program for which an institution certifies compliance for the first time with NCAA legislation during the 1983-84 academic year will be bound by those rules beginning August 1, 1983, provided the form is completed correctly and received in the national office by August 1.

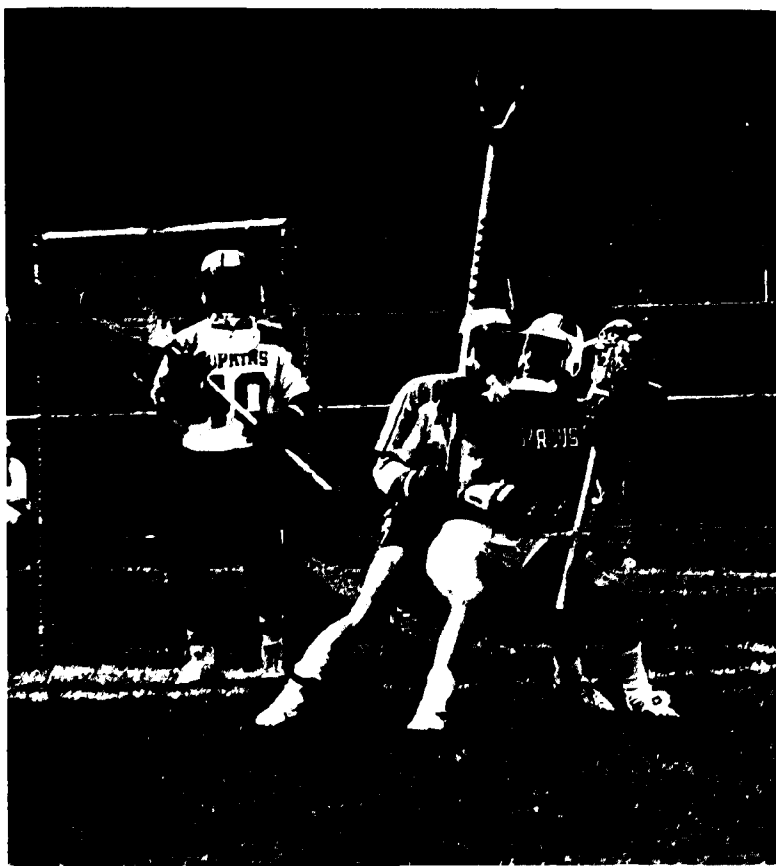

The athletic department staff members certification must be signed by all appropriate athletic department staff members.

Conference endorses USF basketball plan

The executive committee of the West Coast Athletic Conference has endorsed the University of San Francisco's decision to resume basketball with the conference in the 1985-86 season.

A conference spokesman said San Francisco would be excluded from all four conference sports if it did not organize a basketball team for 1985-86.

The Dons dropped basketball after the 1981-82 season because of infractions of conference rules and other disruptive influences. The trustees of the institution voted in June to reinstate the sport. The university remained in the conference without a basketball team.

Syracuse tops Canada for Lacrosse International title

Division I men's lacrosse champion Syracuse, utilizing a powerful and explosive offense, rallied from a six-goal deficit to edge Team Canada, 14-13, in the Lacrosse International match.

The tournament, at Johns Hopkins University, also included NCAA Division III champion Hobart and the Iroquois Nationals, a team composed of American Indians.

In opening-round action, the Orangemen trounced the Iroquois, 28-5. Attackman Tim Nelson scored 10 points on two goals and eight assists, while fellow attacker Tom Korrie found the net seven times.

Hobart's bid to face Syracuse in the championship game was thwarted when Team Canada defeated the Statesmen, 22-10. Hobart had opened the 1983 regular season with a victory over 1982 Division I champion North Carolina.

Hobart, which has never lost an NCAA lacrosse play-off game, bounced back to defeat the Iroquois, 22-14, behind four goals from Tom Grimaldi and four assists from Marc Van Arsdale.

In the championship game, Team Canada built a 6-0 lead in the second quarter to control the contest. With 3:02 left to play, midfielder Brad Kotz scored unassisted to tie the game at 13. Less than two minutes later, Kotz fed teammate Art Lux, who scored the game-winning goal.

Team Canada's John Gordon took a feed from Jim Weller and found the Syracuse net; however, time had expired, the goal was ruled too late and Syracuse got the victory.

Nelson, who totaled five goals and 13 assists in the two games, was named the tournament's most outstanding offensive player.

In addition to the round-robin tournament, fans at the four-day event in June saw the U.S. Club Lacrosse Association (USCLA) championship game, several prep all-star games and a game featuring the U.S. women's team and the Team Canada women.

NYSP expands in 15th year

The National Youth Sports Program will celebrate its 15th year of service in 1983 by expanding opportunities for disadvantaged youth to participate.

The NYSP, with $5.76 million from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Office of Community Services, will include more than 130 NCAA member institutions in 39 states this year.

"This ever-expanding program exemplifies the good we can accomplish when public and private efforts are combined toward reaching a worthwhile goal," said Margaret Heckler, health and human services secretary. "The physical and educational experiences that participating young people share in this cooperative program can prove beneficial to them throughout their lives."

Ruth M. Berkey, NCAA assistant executive director who coordinates the Association's administration of NYSP, expects the program to reach more than 52,000 youngsters, the number that took part a year ago.

"The NYSP is all about providing opportunities to the disadvantaged," Berkey said. "We are very fortunate to have been able to expand and improve the enrichment portion of NYSP. The young people taking part in 1983 will be exposed to some unique offerings in this area, in addition to the athletic skills instruction and the opportunity for competition."

Some of the enrichment topics offered by member institutions are drug, alcohol, nutrition and grooming seminars; visits to libraries, museums, planetariums and other educational institutions; jobs and employment information for fields including forestry, computers, medicine and related areas; basic computer training, and entertaining sidelights such as talent shows and trips to beaches and parks.

"Our basic goal for NYSP this year is to reach more young people with a better program," Berkey explained. "We are extremely grateful for the continued Federal support and for the support of the participating colleges and universities. They will donate more than $8 million in facilities and services to the effort this year."

Among the facilities donated by participating institutions are practice and playing fields, gymnasiums, swimming pools and lockers. For four to six weeks, NYSP participants are offered instruction in at least four sports, along with the varied topics available through the expanded enrichment program.

The Federal money is utilized for coaches' salaries, transportation and some equipment.

Subcommittee recommends sites for championships

The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Wrestling Committee has selected championships sites for 1985 and 1986 and has determined allocations of qualifying positions for the 1984 tournament that it will submit for Executive Committee approval.

In its recent meeting at the NCAA national office, the subcommittee selected Oklahoma City as the site of the 1985 Division I Wrestling Championships March 7-9 and the University of Iowa as the host institution for the 1986 Division I championships March 13-15. The 1984 Division I championships will be held March 8-10 at the Byrne Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, New Jersey.

The subcommittee also selected George Mason University to host next year's Division I East regional tournament and Indiana State University, Terre Haute, to host the West regional.

To better determine allocations of qualifying positions, the subcommittee will request that future meetings be scheduled after the Classification Committee meets. The recent Classification Committee meeting was held one week after the subcommittee met.

The subcommittee recommended that officials' fees for championships be increased from $60 to $70 and the mat judge's fee from $30 to $35. The subcommittee also selected and assigned personnel to administer the 1984 Division I championships.

In addition, the subcommittee held a conference call with Divisions II and III Wrestling Committee members to determine site recommendations and allocations of qualifying positions for those championships. Subsequently, Morgan State University was selected to host the 1984 Division II championships, and State University of New York, Binghamton, was selected to host next year's Division III championships.

Because of a reporter's error, the story in the June 1 issue of The NCAA News on the NCAA Division III Men's Outdoor Track Championships indicated that Glassboro State's Stanley Moore, Hamline's Mike Manders and Mount Union's Derrick Rippey were the only double winners. However, Tom Weatherspoon of Wisconsin-Stevens Point won both the long jump and triple jump.

Briefly in the News

California State University, Long Beach, has added two Division II opponents to its football schedule for this fall. The 49ers will play Texas A&I University (replacing the University of Southwestern Louisiana) and have added Eastern Washington University as a 12th contest (Long Beach also plays in Hawaii, which does not count against the 11-game limit). The University of Virginia men's soccer team, which enjoyed its best season ever last fall, will have 10 of 11 starters and 18 of 23 lettermen back, and two high school all-Americans have been added.

The Louisiana legislature has given its approval to a resolution asking that the new Grambling State University stadium be named for Edward G. Robinson, who has 305 career football victories at Grambling. A Louisiana state law prohibits the naming of a public structure after a living person, but the resolution specified that the 22,000-seat facility would be named Robinson Stadium in honor of the "Robinson family". Since the spring of 1935, Kalamazoo College has won 286 of 287 dual tennis meets in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association. The last setback was to Hope College April 24, 1962. George Acker has been the coach for the past 25 years, with a 150-1 record in the conference and 330-179 overall.

Pennsylvania State University's 28-sport intercollegiate athletics program (15 for men and 13 for women) compiled an overall record of 301-142-4 in 1982-83, a 67.8 winning percentage. Rick Mount, former all-America basketball player at Purdue University, has sold his sporting-goods store in Lebanon, Indiana, and reportedly is seeking an assistant coaching position at the college level.

For the second year, Trinity University (Texas) has scheduled its football opponents largely on the bases of similar size and educational goals. Included on the Division III member's seven-game slate are games at Carleton College (Minnesota), Millsaps College (Mississippi) and Colorado College. They also play Occidental College (California), Southwestern College (Tennessee), Colorado College and Nuevo Leon (Mexico) at home in San Antonio. When C. W. Post College won the Csepel International Cup competition in Hungary this spring, it was won with the help of the opposing coach. Laszlo Nemeth, the coach of the Csepel team, third-ranked in Hungary, convinced the officials that the buzzer had sounded before his team scored a basket that would have tied the contest.

Bill Dunn of the University of Virginia was named "Strength & Conditioning Coach of the Year" by the National Strength & Conditioning Association. They-do-it-all department: Chris Waszczuk, baseball player of the year in the Eastern College Athletic Conference Division I New England selections, posted a 3.550 grade-point average in civil engineering in addition to hitting .344 at the University of Massachusetts. SIU-Edwardsville drops basketball Caught in a scheduling bind, the University of Southern Illinois, Edwardsville, has canceled its 1983-84 men's basketball season.

The Cougar athletics department had hoped to move from Division II to Division I this year. However, that move was rejected May 13 by school officials.

That forced a number of Division I schools to drop Southern Illinois-Edwardsville from their schedules because of Division I limitations on playing schools outside the division. Cougar head coach Tom Pugliese said he could not find enough replacements to meet the Division II minimum of 22 games.

James R. Buck, the university's director of development and public affairs, said that the school's 10 returning basketball players would be permitted to transfer and play in 1983-84. He said the school immediately would begin putting together a 1984-85 schedule and begin rebuilding the program for that season.

Suit filed over player's death

The father of an Oregon State University baseball player killed during practice in 1982 has filed a $3 million suit against the institution and two other defendants.

The suit was filed on behalf of the estate of Scott Holbrook, 19-year-old freshman who died after a collision with another player. Doctors said Holbrook suffered a skull fracture and bruised brain after colliding with the teammate and striking his head on the artificial turf.

Also named as defendants were the state board of higher education and Monsanto Company and "others involved in the marketing and installation of the artificial turf."

League adds five championships

Five additional sports championships will be conducted in the Eastern College Athletic Conference South in 1983-84, and future championships are under consideration, according to O. Dean Ehlers, director of athletics at James Madison University, who was elected president of the conference at its May meeting.

"We are considering the addition of other sports as well as championships for women," Ehlers said.

The conference holds a postseason championship in basketball and will add championships in golf, tennis, cross country, soccer and outdoor track.

Also elected to conference positions were Charles S. Boone, director of athletics at the University of Richmond, vice-president, and Kenneth Karr, director of athletics at East Carolina University, treasurer. Other institutions represented in the conference are George Mason University, U.S. Naval Academy and the College of William and Mary.

Grove City joins conference

Grove City College has joined the Presidents' Athletic Conference and will begin competition in the league in 1984-85.

Other conference members are Bethany College, Carnegie-Mellon University, Hiram College, John Carroll University, Thiel College, and Washington and Jefferson College.

c. Prefontaine, 1970 through 1973. Nyambui later won four straight 10,000-meter titles (1979-1982), and Neilson won four consecutive hammer championships (1976-1979).

Balloting

for the stay, the plaintiffs in the case—the University of Georgia Athletic Association and the University of Oklahoma—petitioned the appellate court to deny the Association's request. Should the stay be granted, the plaintiffs asked that the court require the NCAA to post a $3 million bond to cover the plaintiffs' presumed television revenue losses this fall.

NCAA legal counsel asked the court for additional time to respond to the bond request.

In its brief requesting the stay, the NCAA cited the likelihood that the Supreme Court would accept the case and that the Association and a great many member institutions would be harmed if a stay were not in effect this fall. NCAA legal counsel believes that the Supreme Court probably would not act on the request to review the case until some time in October or November.

"(The review by the Supreme Court) . . . is likely to be granted in this case because the Supreme Court's rules and practice call for review of cases of substantial public importance," the NCAA brief stated. "This may mean either great importance standing alone or importance in light of the general applicability of the legal principles. . . . This case calls for review on either standard."

The brief also stated that a stay for the 1983 season is essential "until the validity of the NCAA football television plan and network contracts are finally determined, because otherwise the benefits of the plan and contract will be irretrievably lost."

Further, the NCAA brief noted that the case presented issues suitable for resolution by the Supreme Court and that there are four separate conflicts, counting the subject case, among circuit courts of appeals on issues of substantial antitrust importance.

The brief also noted the appellate court's earlier decision to remand the case to district court for clarification and the time factors involved in negotiating contracts for the 1983 season.

The answering brief filed by Georgia and Oklahoma challenged the Association's claim that it would suffer irreparable injury if the stay were not granted. The plaintiffs also claimed that the NCAA did not address all the factors that should be considered in determining whether to stay an injunction pending an appeal.

12-place scoring in track retained

Twelve-place scoring in individual track and field events will continue to be used in all three NCAA division championships in 1984.

That was one of the decisions regarding rules and championships formats made by the Men's and Women's Track and Field Committees at their combined meeting last month.

The committees also voted to return to imperial measurements for field events in 1984, reaffirmed their desire to add the triple jump to the women's program and recommended qualifying standards for the NCAA Executive Committee's approval in August.

The decision to retain the 12-place scoring format also means that qualifiers for the finals will advance directly from the preliminary heats, with all but the heat winners advancing on time.

"This issue was discussed at great length by all of the divisions," said Albert Buehler, chair of the Men's Track and Field Committee. "The Division II subcommittee voted for eight-place scoring, but the full committee voted to wait a year and conduct a complete survey in all three divisions."

The two committees had received the results of a vote taken at the Division I championships by both the Division I Track Coaches Association and its women's division that strongly supported eight-place scoring. However, there had been no decision by the Divisions II and III coaches associations.

"This was a major point of discussion," Buehler said. "We want complete information from all coaches regarding scoring and a format of preliminaries, semifinals and finals."

Bob Ehrhart, men's track coach at Drake University and president of the coaches association, noted that "when the coaches met, they did not support 12-place scoring. I think they will be disappointed."

"There was overwhelming sentiment in our meeting for something other than 12-place scoring," said Gary Schwartz, women's track coach at Pennsylvania State University and president of the women's division. "I don't know how long we need to discuss it. Most of the coaches are traditionalists, and we want to return to a more traditional format."

Although running events still will be conducted over metric distances in NCAA championships, the committee voted to measure and report field-event performances imperially, with the exception that record performances will be measured metrically. Qualifying performances for NCAA championships also may be measured imperially.

"The committee felt this decision was in the best interest of track and field in the United States," Buehler said. "The American people have not become familiar with the metric system, and it doesn't appear that they will in the near future."

"The committee felt that some of the excitement was lost when the height of the bar in the pole vault was announced at 5.50 meters rather than 18 feet."

In addition to adding the triple jump to the women's championships program, the committee voted to switch the men's and women's 5,000-meter run in the championships program to reduce the impact of heat on the women's event.

Among other championships recommendations to be presented to the Executive Committee, the track and field committees approved moving Missouri to the Midwest region for Division III cross country qualifying competition and approved Ohio Wesleyan University as the site for the 1984 Division III Men's and Women's Cross Country Championships.

The University of Wisconsin, Parkside, was approved as the site for the 1983 Division II Men's and Women's Cross Country Championships.

The committee also will ask the NCAA Council to sponsor legislation to establish combined men's and women's indoor championships for both Divisions II and III, with no advancement to the Division I championships.

Two institutions move to Division I

Eastern Washington University and Monmouth College (New Jersey) were reclassified to Division I at the June 23 meeting of the Classification Committee in Kansas City, Missouri.

Eastern Washington will remain Division II in football but will compete in Division I in all other sports. Monmouth, which does not sponsor intercollegiate football, will compete in Division I in all sports. Both actions are effective September 1, 1983.

Southwest Texas State University, two-time defending NCAA Division II football champion, was reclassified to Division I (Division I-AA in football) effective September 1, 1984. The Bobcats will remain in Division II for the 1983-84 season.

In other division changes, Queens College moves from Division III to Division II, although its women's basketball program will continue to compete in Division I. Pratt Institute, which does not sponsor intercollegiate football) effective September 1, 1984. The Bobcats will remain in Division II for the 1983-84 season.

The committee approved petitions for multidivision classification in a men's sport for seven institutions. Heading that list is West Georgia College, the 1982 NCAA Division III football champion. West Georgia now will compete in Division II in all sports, effective September 1, 1983.

Other institutions that had a men's sport reclassified, effective September 1, 1983, are California State University, Los Angeles (Division II baseball); Indiana University-Purdue University, Fort Wayne (Division II volleyball); Liberty Baptist College (Division I baseball); University of Lowell (Division I ice hockey); Morris Brown College (Division II track), and St. John Fisher College (Division II golf).

The committee approved the following petitions for multidivision classification in a women's sport:

Bemidji State University (Division III field hockey); University of Connecticut (Division I gymnastics); University of Dayton (Division I basketball); University of Denver (Division I gymnastics); Georgia Southern College (Division II swimming); Iona College (Division II softball); University of Maine, Orono, (Division II swimming); Randolph-

Macon College (Division III field hockey); Virginia Commonwealth University (Division II swimming), and Xavier University (Division I volleyball).

Fourteen institutions will be unclassified for the 1983-84 season, meaning that a particular sport or the entire athletics program does not qualify for membership in any division. An institution that is unclassified is ineligible, for a minimum of one year, for NCAA championships and postseason football contests in the sport or sports in which it is unclassified.

The following institutions are unclassified in the sports listed for the 1983-84 academic year: University of Alaska, Anchorage (Division II, all men's sports); Ashland College (Division II, men's basketball only); Davidson College (Division I-AA, football only); Florida International University (Division II, men's basketball only); Franklin College (Division II, men's basketball only); Kentucky State University (Division II, all men's sports); Miles College (Division III, men's basketball only); Morris Brown College (Division II, all men's sports); St. Francis College of Pennsylvania (Division I, all men's sports); Savannah State College (Division II, all men's sports); Southern Oregon State College (Division II, all men's sports); Southern University, New Orleans (Division III, men's basketball only); Tri-State University (Division III, men's basketball only), and Wichita State University (Division I-A, football only). The division listing after each institution is the division for which it seeks to qualify.

In other action, the committee removed the unclassified status from the following institutions: Fort Lewis College (Division II), Knoxville College (Division III), Salisbury State College (Division III) and St. John Fisher College (Division II). New York Institute of Technology (football only) and Northern Kentucky University (all men's sports) remain unclassified for another year.

Collegians play well at Wimbledon

Collegiate tennis stars turned in a number of impressive performances at the Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

Rodney Harmon, Southern Methodist, and Louise Allen, Trinity (Texas), advanced to the third round of their respective brackets before losing. That pair, both juniors last season, were semifinal losers in 1983 NCAA championships play.

Two other 1983 collegiate stars were second-round losers: Stanford's Elise Burgin and Southern California's Beth Herr. Herr, who won the singles title at this spring's NCAA Division I Women's Tennis Championships, lost to veteran Billie Jean King, 6-7, 6-2, 8-6.

Other college players at Wimbledon included Scott Davis, Stanford; Heather Ludloff, UCLA, and Heather Crowe, Indiana. All were first-round losers.
