Two coaches seek 700th basketball victories

By Jim Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Early this season, Clarence "Big-house" Gaines of Winston-Salem State and Ray Meyer of DePaul will become the fifth and sixth coaches in all of college basketball—all divisions and associations—to reach 700 career victories.

Gaines starts his 38th season, all at Winston-Salem State, with a 699-311 record. Meyer starts his 42nd and final season, all at DePaul, with a 697-351 record. Gaines hopes to reach No. 700 in the season-opening Bighouse Invitational November 25-26 at home. DePaul's third game is December 3 against Illinois State at home.

The last time any coach in any division of any association reached 700 victories was 20 seasons ago—the 1963-64 season. Kentucky's Adolph Rupp started that season behind Oklahoma State's Henry Iba but passed him during the season and reached 700—well ahead of Iba, who did not make it until the final game of the season.

Kansas' Forrest C. "Phog" Allen was the first to win 700, and he did it during his 1952 NCAA championship season. Western Kentucky's Ed Diddle was next, reaching 700 in 1960. Rupp finished at 875, Allen 771, Iba 767 and Diddle 759.

Next after Gaines and Meyer on the all-time victory list are John Wooden, 667, mostly at UCLA, ending in 1975; Bloomer Sullivan, 662, all at Southeastern Oklahoma; Ed Adams, a Tuskegee graduate whose father founded what is now Grambling State, 645 at North Carolina Central, Tuskegee and Texas Southern; John Lance, 643, mostly at Pittsburg State in Kansas, and Cam Henderson, 611, with the last 20 seasons at Marshall.

A total of 32 college coaches have won at least 500 games. Eight are active this season—Gaines, Meyer, Washington's Marv Harshman (596), Oregon State's Ralph Miller (542, not including 15 victories in 1976 forfeited by NCAA Council action), Grambling's Fred Hobdy (532), Mount St. Mary's Jim Phelan (530), Houston's Guy Lewis (530) and Florida's Norm Sloan (507).

The 500-victory list includes Leo Nicholson, 505-281 in 33 seasons at Central Washington, ending in 1964. His son, Dean Nicholson, succeeded him at Central and has won 435 games in 19 seasons, making 940 wins and still counting by one father-and-son combination at one college over 52 seasons.

Comparing the 500-victory coaches on a percentage basis, the top five are Rupp at .822, Adams .808, Wooden .806, Allen .768 and John McLendon Jr. .760 (523-165) at five colleges, including Tennessee State.

Interestingly, Allen learned the game at Kansas in his undergraduate days under the game's inventor, James Naismith (who once told Allen, "Forrest, you don't coach basketball, you just play it"), and three 500-victory coaches were Kansas graduates and Allen pupils—Rupp (1923), McLendon (1936) and Miller (1942).

Another Allen pupil, North Carolina's Dean Smith (1953), is next in line to join the 500-victory list. Smith has 496 victories and a .764 percentage, which would put him ahead of McLendon's .760. No other college has more than one graduate on the "500" list. (Rupp is not the all-time percentage leader among coaches with at least 10 seasons in Division I; that honor goes to

Official Notice to be mailed

The Official Notice of the 1984 NCAA Convention will be mailed November 22 to the chief executive officer, faculty athletic representative, director of athletics and primary woman administrator of athletics programs at each active member institution, as well as to officers of allied and affiliated members.

Included in the annual publication are all 162 proposed amendments to the Association's legislation that were submitted by the November 1 deadline.

Chief executive officers receive with their copies the official forms on which CEOs appoint their delegates to the Convention, which will be held January 9-11, 1983, at Loews Anatole Hotel, Dallas, Texas. A special notice will be included in copies to athletic directors, reminding them that the chief executive officers of their institutions receive the delegate appointment forms.

Also included in the Official Notice is an up-to-date schedule of meetings being held January 6-12 in conjunction with the 78th annual NCAA Convention.

All members are urged to review the opening section of the Official Notice, which sets forth in detail the procedure for appointing delegates and other pertinent policies regarding Convention operations and voting.

The Official Notice also contains an appendix listing the candidates being proposed for NCAA officers (Divisions II and III vice-presidents) and vacancies on the NCAA Council, as proposed by the Nominating Committee.

This is the second year that the Nominating Committee's recommendations have been distributed to the membership prior to the Convention. The committee's recommendations also will be featured in the November 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Accompanying the Nominating Committee's recommendations in the Official Notice is a review of the Council-approved procedures for nominating and electing members of the Council and NCAA officers. That information also will be reprinted in the Convention Program, which is distributed at the Convention itself.

Convention delegates to review 11 academic-related proposals

Editor's Note: The following is the first in a series of articles covering legislation to be considered at the 78th annual Convention. The topical grouping to be considered in this issue is academics. In the remaining issues of The NCAA News leading up to the Convention, legislation in the following topical groups will be considered: governance, financial aid, eligibility, championships, recruiting, membership/classification, amateurism, playing and practice seasons, personnel limitations, and general.

Delegates to the 78th Convention will consider 11 amendments relating to academic requirements, with six of the 11 dealing with the satisfactory-progress rule.

Proposal No. 24, sponsored by the Big Ten Conference, seeks to establish qualitative academic progress requirements for eligibility. The proposal would require a student-athlete to earn a 1.700 accumulative minimum grade-point average (based on a 4.000 maximum) to be eligible for the first season of competition after the freshman year. The GPA requirement would increase to 1.850 after the second season and 2.000 after the third or fourth season.

Developed by the American Council on Education and sponsored by seven NCAA member institutions, Proposal No. 25 would require a student-athlete to be in good academic standing and not on academic probation as defined by the certifying institution in order to meet the requirements of the satisfactory-progress rule.

The proposal also would require Divisions I and II members to certify annually to the NCAA Academic Testing and Requirements Committee their compliance with the satisfactory-progress rule, and it also would authorize spot checks by authorized representatives of the NCAA to verify compliance.

Two other satisfactory-progress proposals deal with junior college transfers. Proposal No. 27, sponsored by the NCAA Council as recommended by the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education, would require a junior college transfer who was a 2.000 nonqualifier to show satisfactory progress toward a specific baccalaureate degree, as well as graduate from the junior college, to be eligible immediately for financial aid, practice and competition upon transfer to a Division I member institution.

To be effective August 1, 1984, the Council's proposal would require a 2.000 nonqualifier to complete a minimum of 48 semester or 72 quarter hours of transferable credit that is acceptable toward a specific baccalaureate degree to be eligible at the certifying institution.

In a related proposal, the Atlantic Coast Conference is sponsoring No. 28, which would require a junior college transfer who was a 2.000 qualifier, but who has not graduated from junior college, to demonstrate satisfactory progress toward a degree

There is no magic diet to aid the athlete

By Bruce Lowitt

Steak and eggs are the best training-table meal for football players. Loading up on carbohydrates gives wrestlers extra clout, and bee pollen gives them more stamina. Vitamin B is a quick-energy builder for cyclists.

Wrong, wrong, wrong—and wrong again, says Ann Grandjean, nutrition consultant to the Chicago White Sox and the U.S. Olympic Committee's Sports Medicine Division.

She says those myths are a few of those perpetuated by athletes, pro and amateur, in the drive to be stronger, faster, bigger, better.

"One thing we run into is that most athletes at the Olympic level don't tend to have as many misconceptions as other athletes," says Grandjean. "I don't know if it's because the right kind of information is being provided at that level or if it's because the performers who do the wacky things just don't make it that far."

She says some trends seem to develop gradually at the high school and college levels, while others emerge full-blown as fads followed by both everyday and weekend athletes.

"We run into football players who still believe extremely high protein diets are necessary to maintain their strength," she says. "Not true. We now know it's just the amount of training that determines it.

"Steak 'n' eggs? Listen, there's no magic to any food eaten as a pre-competition meal. There's not a single food or diet or vitamin or combination of them that's going to make a major difference in immediate athletic performance."

But the psychological effects of a pregame meal, or of loading up on one food or vitamin, are quite a different matter, she admits.

"There's a lot of magic in having a team eat together before a game. The players can get psyched up or calmed down or whatever is necessary. If the kind of food is something they hate, they may think it'll affect them adversely and they won't do well. If it's something they like, they may believe it helps them. But the properties of the food itself are the least significant thing.

"For instance, the concept of carbohydrate loading for wrestlers and football players and the like, in order to do better in a hurry, got blown out of proportion. It started as an interesting laboratory experiment that showed maybe athletes can go a little longer—and that only applies in something that goes perhaps two hours or more."

For some athletes, she continues, pouring on the carbohydrates can even be detrimental. For every molecule of glycogen deposited into the muscle, 2½ molecules of water are deposited, too. What has been reported as stiffness is due to excessive water in the muscles—and in wrestling, where flexibility is a must, that can be a hindrance. Besides, water can add unnecessary weight.

And what of those weekend runners who load up on the carbohydrates in the form of spaghetti? "It's just in vogue," said Grandjean, associate for the Swanson Center of Nutrition at Omaha, Nebraska.

At Air Force, commitment carries on after the game

By Jeff Metcalfe

Colorado Springs Sun

The world has changed a lot in a week. Air Force is victorious again in football, but bowls have given way to Beirut. And say, don't we know a lot more about Grenada after Saturday's 41-20 victory over Army then after last Saturday's 33-31 victory over Utah?

The flags flew at half mast at Falcon Stadium, at Memorial Stadium in Champaign where Michigan faced Illinois, and probably at every other stadium big and small across this country. But somehow, it meant a lot more here, with the boys of future wars on the field below.

Beirut and Grenada, not the National Football League, are what the men at Air Force and Army face; and as we've so sadly seen, the future in those places can be a lot shorter than the shortest NFL career.

The real world was not lost on Saturday's participants, just put aside for a few pleasurable moments. Today, it's back to the books and the training that will land some of these very same players in the midst of a yet unknown crisis.

For Mike Kirby, his four catches for 90 yards that place him two behind Charlie Longnecker in all-time receptions are just so many statistics. When he graduates next June, Saturday's leaping grab will count only in the record books.

"There's no doubt that hits home," said Kirby, "because in another year or so, we're going to be out there flying jets and involved in things like that."

"I just leave those things in God's hands. You don't really have any control of the future. But as far as the game goes today, you saw two teams out there that will never quit. I think that's something that's good for our country, and that's the kind of things we're learning at the academies. You can't quit, you never give up because no matter what the score is, there's always a chance."

"If people look at it that way, this game means more than just a game."

The kind of character Air Force has displayed in reviving its football program this year and last is certainly embodied in those who will defend our country tomorrow and the coaches entrusted with their care today.

Like Ken Hatfield, who always has cared more about the man than the player.

"Nobody at Oklahoma worried a thing about it," said Hatfield of Beirut and Grenada and its impact on his team. "That's just the nature of it. We're closer to it because we may have friends or grads who might be involved in that situation."

"But that's the whole secret of football at the academy. What have they learned to help be a better officer and leader when they finish playing, that's the end result of coaching at the academy. I think they learned a lot of that today."

"What makes me proud when I see any academy team is to know those guys are going to be out there representing us, and they've already made a commitment to make their life count for America. Not everybody at another school has made that commitment yet."

We should be thankful for those who have.

Interest in Big Ten reaches a peak

"Interest in Big Ten football is at a zenith, and Big Ten football may be at a zenith. I'm amused that professional football emphasizes the 'no shows,' whereas, we emphasize the showups."

"I see no reason for any change in the Rose Bowl situation. In fact, there is more support than ever before for the present setup. The Rose Bowl is the greatest attraction of all postseason games."

"The limitations (on grants-in-aid) are the most important. Giving quality, sanity and economy towards the salvation of college football."

Tex Schramm, president
Dallas Cowboys
National Football League

Associated Press

"There is intense competition between the agents for a growing number of clients (college football players)."

"It will come to a head in some fashion, where somebody will blow the whistle on the other guy."

"When you get people (agents) who don't have a stake in the success of the college program, or our program for that matter, people who are guided by purely selfish motives, then they have no compunction about what gives them an advantage."

"We're able to talk to better players (while recruiting)."

Survey gives views on education

About 68 percent of Americans think the overall quality of higher education in the United States is good or excellent, according to a survey sponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education, the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education, New England Board of Higher Education and Texas A&M University.

Last year, however, 72 percent of Americans thought higher education to be good or excellent.

Americans overwhelmingly favor interstate cooperation in higher education, if such cooperation can reduce costs and increase academic options available to college and university students. Those surveyed said they were extremely concerned about the rising cost in education, and four out of five persons said they are convinced that costs are climbing out of reach of the average person.

Still, one-fourth of all Americans—no matter what their current level of education—intend or hope to complete additional schooling in the years ahead.

By a nine-to-one margin, Americans are strongly in favor of continued Federal funding of low-income loans for college-bound middle-income students. By an 85 percent to 13 percent favorable response, those who participated in the survey strongly favor continued Federal grants for low-income students.

Some colleges requiring computers

A number of colleges are requiring that all freshmen have personal computers next year. In most cases, the cost of the microcomputers will be included in tuition.

Drew University of Madison, New Jersey, which for 117 years has followed a rigid liberal arts curriculum, is one of the schools to include the requirement for next year's freshmen.

Some colleges, including Clarkson College of Technology, Carnegie-Mellon University and Stevens Institute of Technology, either are requiring students to own computers or are planning to do so.

Fifth graders find textbook error

Crescent moons shown in their science books looked a little loony to fifth graders at Horace Mann Elementary School in Springfield, Missouri, according to the Associated Press.

The students discovered an error while making sketches of the moon's stages and comparing them with photographs in the textbook.

"In the book, during the moon's early stages, the crescent was on the left-hand side," teacher Barbara Amos said. "But in the Northern Hemisphere, the crescent should be on the right."

The class verified its finding with John Northrip, a physics professor at Southwest Missouri State University, before sending a letter to the book's author, who will correct the error.

Scholarship plan implemented

More than 25 colleges and universities now are offering designated scholarships for alumni of American Field Service high school exchange programs. A newly issued catalog lists those institutions that have agreed to put aside certain amounts for scholarships for those American students who have spent either a summer or a school year living in another country under the auspices of AFS.

"It is heartening to know that four years after the publication of the Presidential Commission Report on Foreign Languages and International Studies, a growing number of colleges and universities are recognizing the value of the high school experience abroad," said Joseph Lurie, vice president of AFS.

Colleges and universities interested in being considered for inclusion in the next edition of the AFS catalog can contact Lurie at AFS International/Cultural Programs, 313 East 43rd Street, New York, New York 10017.

High schools look to corporations

As public funds for high school athletics in California have dwindled in the wake of Proposition 13, enterprising school officials have turned to a new source of funds—corporations.

The Associated Press reports that corporate names like Dr. Pepper, Wilson and Puma are emerging in connection with high school sports.

The corporation's tax-deductible donations allow them the right to market their products on a limited scale at postseason activities, using banners, literature or announcements; the right to exclusive advertising in a program, and the right to have their association with high school athletics disseminated through such means as press releases, logos on awards and mailing to schools.

"I figured, why should we give this sort of thing away free? As long as there are no strings attached, I don't see any problem with corporate participation in high school athletics," said Ray Plutko, commissioner of athletics for the California Interscholastic Federation's southern section.

Larry Zucker, director of marketing for the southern section, said, "There's a very fine line between corporate sponsorship and commercialism. We do not approach everyone for funds. We go after the wholesome-type companies."

College enrollment appears steady

Overall enrollment at the nation's colleges and universities appears to be holding steady, according to The Chronicle of Higher Education, with individual institutions gaining or losing students in response to economic influences.

At some campuses, enrollments are rising because of lack of competition from the job market or because of increased recruiting. Higher tuition rates and enrollment ceilings dictated by budget limitations have caused enrollment declines on some campuses.

A survey of enrollment at private colleges and universities found a reversal of last year's decline in freshman enrollment, although total enrollment remained stable.

Data being collected from public institutions is expected to show enrollment stable at large land-grant universities and increasing slightly at other public four-year schools.

1899 'ironman' team at Sewanee remains unequalled for endurance

By Dick Kishpaugh

Special to The NCAA News

History and nostalgia surround the mountaintop domain of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tennessee. One almost expects to still find the Fighting Bishop, Leonidas Polk, planning the original 1857 campus, or his fellow Confederate General, Professor Edmund Kirby-Smith, enchanting postwar students with tales of danger and daring.

A keen ear might still hear the roar from the mighty mallets from the era of steam power in the valley below, helping speed the Dixie Flyer over Cumberland Mountain from Cowan to the southland.

But for nostalgia, nothing compares with the exploits of Sewanee's 1899 football team—feats unequalled in eight decades since.

Sewanee, with just over 100 students, took on the giants of the South that season, and with virtually no rest between encounters, won all 12 games, 11 by shutout. In one marathon period of six days and 2,500 miles of rail travel, Sewanee posted five major shutout victories. Some 1899 details are obscure, but the game record is there for posterity; a plaque at the flagpole at McGee Field reminds football fans of today of the great record.

Few teams chose to make the trip to the mountaintop domain in 1899, so nine of the 12 games, including the five on the marathon trip, were played on the road. The "domain," incidentally, refers to Sewanee's ownership of 10,000 acres—the entire mountaintop—perhaps the largest single campus area in the world. The school was located there after a predecessor to United States Steel donated the entire tract to the fledgling school in 1857.

As the 1899 season neared, manager Luke Lea of Sewanee set out to assemble his football powerhouse. As coach, he landed Herman Suter, recent Princeton graduate who had earned undying fame for his 95-yard run against Harvard. The team never had more than 18 players; often only 12 to 14 were available at one time. But the team included Ringwell (Rex) Kilpatrick, lured away from Yale where his brother, John Reed Kilpatrick, already was a legend; Henry Seibels, a bona fide hall of fame entry; General Kirby-Smith's son, Joseph, and a tough-as-nails, one-eyed guard named Wild Bill Claiborne.

The fabulous string of five shutout victories in six days included games against Texas, Texas A&M, Tulane,

Monday, November 20	Cumberland at Sewanee	71-0
Thursday, November 30	Auburn at Montgomery	11-10
Saturday, December 2	North Carolina at Atlanta	5-0

(Won 12, lost none—11 shutouts, scored total of 322 points to 10 for opponents. Five games in a six-day period; average of fewer than four days between games for entire season.)

Louisiana State and Mississippi.

The team was not permitted to play on Sunday, November 12, but it was not a day of rest—the players spent the day touring a Louisiana sugar plantation. Estimates of the total mileage on that trip range from 2,000 (shown in the flagpole plaque) to 3,000 miles, reported in Dean Hill's 1940 anthology, Football Through The Ages. A good compromise would be 2,500 miles, that being the figure that Suter himself quoted to Grantland Rice in a 1944 interview.

Many anecdotes about the trip survive today. Rail service via the "Mountain Goat" from the mountaintop campus down to the mainline junction at Cowan was erratic, to say the least; when the team reached Cowan for the start of the famous trip, it was discovered that the uniforms had been left behind in Sewanee. There was no way to get back up the mountain in a hurry, so the team departed, and it took heroic measures to have the missing uniforms catch up with the squad in time for the first game at Austin.

Other stories attest to the true "ironman" quality of the famous trip. Suter told Rice that eight players played all five games on the trip without substitution, and that the other three starters averaged 55 minutes each. Suter also estimated the average weight of the squad members at 161 pounds.

Sewanee played three more games after the long trip, including a special season-ending challenge against North Carolina at Atlanta. That game was a matchmaker's dream—Carolina coach William Reynolds had been Suter's roommate at Princeton. Sewanee won that championship contest, 5-0, on Kilpatrick's field goal, to finish with a 12-0 record.

Sewanee remained in the major football arena for four decades after 1899. Into the 1930's, Kentucky, Florida, Mississippi, Vanderbilt, Mississippi State and Tulane still appeared on the Sewanee card as the school remained in the Southeastern Conference, but major victories became fewer as the years passed.

The 1924 team scored consecutive shutout victories over Mississippi, South Carolina and Vanderbilt; the 16-0 victory over Vanderbilt that year marked Sewanee's last big triumph in what was then a major intrastate rivalry. The 1931 team scored shutout victories over Virginia, Louisiana State and Mississippi, but a few years later the administration decided that the time had come to return to a small-college schedule. The record of 10 victories over Alabama and 11 triumphs over Tennessee became a footnote to history.

Football always has been an integral part of Sewanee campus life, in both the major- and small-college eras. When the unfortunate George Rice died of football injuries in 1927, his memorial indicated that he "died from injuries received on the football field in the service of his alma mater." When Frank Juhan, a great player in the early 1900s, retired after serving both as chancellor and director of development for the college, he was asked what he was going to do after retirement. His quick response—"Part my hair in the middle and play Vandy."

The days of Sewanee versus Vanderbilt are long past, but the memories remain. Today, you can pass the Leonidas Polk Memorial Carillon, turn left at Kirby-Smith's corner and there, at McGee Field, is the plaque as a silent reminder: Team of 1899—Undefeated and Untied—Champions of the South.

"Carbohydrate loading is only useful for athletic events of two hours or more. We offer plenty of carbohydrates, but also steak and eggs. The key is moderation and making sure that each player gets something he's comfortable with."

"Cross country always has been a team sport. I like that aspect. I've always tried to get them to do things together—the easy stuff that they can. Say running five miles at five-minute pace."

"But I also believe every runner should run his best. If you get five or six together, that's great; but you want them to try to run their best, and that does not necessarily mean together."

"Changes are difficult to accommodate in the sense that everybody expects business as usual. When it doesn't happen, there is a knee-jerk reaction to blame the coaches, or a different approach to strategy. I think some of the negative talk itself has a self-fulfilling prophecy. The booing can't help but be demoralizing to players who are just as eager to produce winning football as anyone else."

Frank Boggs, columnist

Colorado Springs Sun

"We place such importance on sports in this country that when one popular athlete checks into a rehab center, it's an immediate national conversation piece. The truth, we all know, is that it is much sadder for two little guys we never heard of to get hung up on drugs than for one starting tackle to be involved."

William Fuller, football player
University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

The Washington Post

"There's a stereotype attached to the ACC that I don't like, and it's that we don't play high-caliber football like they do in the Midwest and way down South. I think the Carolina program is getting more and more exposure every year but not what some other teams are getting and probably don't deserve."

Sam Wyche, head football coach

"I think that (television instant replays and appeals of referees' calls) would help officiating. Officials need to be critiqued regularly after every ball game. We need to have finite rules. Officials need to have as few judgment calls as possible."

"There's always room for improvement. I think they're also very handy whipping boys. It is a tough job, and you're going to make some mistakes; I think we need to help them as much as we can."

Football notes

Two left unbeaten, untied in I-A, I-AA

Only two perfect-record teams are left in Division I-A and none in I-AA after Toledo and Southern Illinois were ambushed last Saturday. It is worth noting, perhaps, that Nebraska and Texas have something else in common—both prefer the running game in a year of record passing yardage.

Nebraska is making 72.6 percent of its total yards on the ground (404.9 of 557.8), while Texas is making 63.5 percent by rushing (203.8 of 321). The rest of the country is making only 47.2 percent of total offense by ground and 52.8 percent by air. Nebraska leads in rushing offense by a huge margin, while Texas is far in front in scoring defense—only 7.8 points per game.

Season superlatives

Nebraska's Mike Rozier, with 28 touchdowns, is just one short of the all-time Division I-A season record of 29 by Lydell Mitchell of Penn State. His 174 points also is the season record. Rozier needs two TDs against Oklahoma November 26 to break it (all of his 28 were by rushing, breaking Mitchell's record 26 by rushing; Rozier is playing 12 games, while Mitchell played 11 in 1971, his record year).

Rozier, with 1,943 yards and an amazing eight yards per carry, seems certain to become the college game's second 2,000-yard runner (Southern California's Marcus Allen had 2,342 in 1981 when he won the Heisman Trophy). Rozier also seems likely to break the record 7.63 yards per carry by Oklahoma's Billy Sims in 1978.

Brigham Young's Steve Young is averaging a remarkable 408.4 rushing-passing yards per game and seems almost certain to break the all-time I-A total offense per-game record of 385.6 by BYU's Jim McMahon in 1980. Young needs only 158 yards against Utah Saturday at BYU to break it.

In six-year-old Division I-AA, six individual season records seem likely. In fact, one of these is in the bag—Colgate's Rich Erenberg already has 2,062 all-purpose yards—83 above the record. Erenberg's 171.7 rushing yards per game, the 172.3 rating points in passing efficiency by Mississippi Valley State's Willie Totten, the 11.6 points per game by Boston's Paul Lewis, the 10.2 catches per game by Totten's teammate Jerry Rice and the 33.7 average in kickoff returns by Eastern Kentucky's Tony James all are above the I-AA season records.

Remarkable careers

Duke's Ben Bennett needs only 246 passing yards Saturday at North Carolina to break the all-time I-A career record. The record is 9,536 by BYU's McMahon (1981 was his final season). Mississippi State's John Bond has reached 4,539 passing and 2,151 rushing, making him only the second player in history to reach 4,000 passing and 2,000 rushing (Wichita State's Prince McJunkins was the first, a year ago).

Rozier needs 141 rushing at Oklahoma to move past Ed Marinaro (Cornell 1969-1971) and rank second only to Herschel Walker in career rushing among three-year players. Rozier's career 7.19 yards per carry is well above the record 7.09 by Billy Sims.

In I-AA, Nevada-Reno senior Tony Zendejas, with one game left, has 66 field goals—an all-time, all-divisions NCAA record. And get this—he did it over three seasons. He has been 81.5 percent accurate.

Quotes of the week

Harvard had used a screen pass numerous times in the second half at Brown and, now, with the score tied, 58 seconds left, first down at its own 35, Harvard called time out. "Why don't you run that dumb screen pass you've been running the whole second

Dartmouth's Frank Polsinello is among the top five in Division I-AA in passing efficiency half," a Brown fan shouted at the Harvard assistants perched in the press box. You guessed it, senior fullback Steve Ernst took a screen pass, went all the way for a touchdown and Harvard won, 17-10. (Jim Greenidge, Harvard SID)

How important was Kansas State's upset victory over Oklahoma State? Said K-State coach Jim Dickey: "We needed a win like a vampire needs blood."

Kansas offensive guard Quinton Schonewise is from Beatrice, Nebraska, and his parents have had Nebraska season tickets for 25 years. He says he'll never forget the game two years ago: "They are in a really rabid section, and it's all a sea of red. I looked up there and they were the only people with blue on... I could have kissed them." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID)

Stanford coach Paul Wiggin on Washington coach Don James: "He recruits great athletes and after he gets them there, he doesn't screw them up."

Arizona coach Larry Smith on what he did to end his team's losing streak: "Anytime a coach gets in trouble, he goes back to basics. We gave the players three days off before the open date. I didn't want to see them; I didn't want them to see me... Now we will work together and think together and shoot for the stars." (Final score: Arizona 27, UCLA 24.) (Jim Muldoon, Pacific-10 SID)

Canisius coach Tom Hersey on freshman tailback Mike Panepinto, who rushed 110.8 yards per game the last five games and helped the team finish 5-4 after a 1-4 start: "He's really only about 5-4—he's the only running back I know of who has to leave his feet to get the handoff." (John Maddock, Canisius SID)

Think blue

After his team's big victory over Michigan, Jack Trudeau, Illinois' sophomore quarterback, was asked how he coped with that day's adversity—his two center-exchange fumbles that might have cost the game. "I've been playing football since I was eight," Trudeau told Bob Oates of the Los Angeles Times. "My high school coach had a passing philosophy and always said, 'if you make a mistake, forget it already.' My personal philosophy is, never get upset. And my psychological training is, relax. So I went over to the bench, sat down, closed my eyes and thought of the color blue."

That left one more question. Why blue? "We relax that way before every game," he said. "Before we get on the bus, we go into a dark room. We think blue, and we envision ourselves playing the game. I think of the whole thing—the snap, the dropback, reading, throwing." This is known as visual imagery and is brought to the team by Dan Smith, on White's staff as the Big Ten's first full-time sports psychologist.

Washington's Darren Wilson, only 5-6½ and 165, is the consummate walk-on, a 23-year-old senior who enjoys his role. On the practice field, he stands out because he is so small, but he will not be intimidated ("I have always been aggressive"). After one recent face-off with a varsity defender, a teammate took the antagonist aside and said, "Hey, don't mess with 'The Grasshopper.'" Said Wilson to Chuck Ashmun of the Seattle Times: "I do get a little banged up. Some say I'm a fool; I shouldn't be out there; I'm too small. I ask them, 'How many Rose Bowl rings and watches do you have? This is something I want to do, so don't knock it.'" (Mike Wilson, Washington SID)

A special season

After Northeast Louisiana's seventh straight victory, all but a few of the players showed up on campus with varying degrees of crew cuts after calling the campus barber back to his shop the previous evening. "This is a special season and we decided to do something in honor of that," said senior flanker Tag Rome. Added senior offensive tackle Chris

Homecoming nearly perfect

Homecoming is nearly perfect at Jacksonville State. Just look at the team's all-time homecoming record—36 won, none lost, two tied. Can any college top that? (Rudy Abbott, Jacksonville State SID)

People don't understand

For Tim Meamber, an inside linebacker at Washington who calls the defensive signals, the big discovery was how much commitment is essential to play college football. "People don't understand," he told Georg Meyers of the Seattle Times. "In season, it's six to seven hours a day. We've got meetings at 2:30, just in time to get taped before practice at 3:30. By the time you unwind in the training room and eat the team dinner, it's 7:30. That doesn't include the hour and a half in the weight room twice a week and three to four hours of film study you have to work into your own time. By the time you get home, you're physically exhausted. You read four or five pages in a textbook and zonk."

Division III—pure competition

Bob Ricca took over as St. John's (New York) head coach in 1972,

Scotty Caldwell is averaging more than 100 yards per game for Texas-Arlington when it was a club football team. Varsity football status came in 1978, and Ricca says, "We figured it would take 15 years to get a shot at the national title." Now the team is 8-1, recently had a 15-game winning streak, and is ranked 14th nationally. "I don't know why it has happened so soon, except that we've had a fantastic group of kids," he told William Rhoden of the New York Times. "In a lot of ways, Division III represents one of the purest forms of competition. The kids are out there because they want to be out there. There is nothing holding them but a desire to win and excel." (Katha Quinn, St. John's SID)

Walk-on excellence

All of Missouri's points in that 10-0 victory over Oklahoma were produced by players who came as walk-ons. Quarterback Marlon Adler threw a 20-yard touchdown pass to Andy Hill, and Brad Burditt kicked the PAT plus a field goal. Adler, Hill and Burditt all came to Mizzou as walk-ons, as did three other starters. (Bill Callahan, Missouri SID)

Kevin Collins came to Santa Clara as a walk-on in 1982, and the coaching staff was hesitant about keeping him on the squad because the team was deep at his position. This season, he got his chance and he has been phenomenal, with 27 catches for 827 yards—a remarkable 30.6 average. He has five touchdowns on plays of 32, 68, 35, 80 and 70 yards. (Mike McNulty, Santa Clara SID)

Rick Neuheisel walked onto the UCLA campus without an offer from a major football power and waited to show coach Terry Donahue what he could do. He waited behind Rick Bashore. He waited behind Jay Schroeder. He waited behind Tom Ramsey. And this fall, he waited behind Steve Bono. Now, he is among the nation's leaders in passing efficiency. His 25-for-27 day against Washington set an all-time NCAA record of 92.6 percent in completions (the former record holder, Dick Norman of Stanford, watched the game; both Neuheisel and Norman were coached by Homer Smith, now UCLA offensive coordinator).

"I always had confidence," Neuheisel said. "I have always felt like I had been a winner. Even if I had not gotten the job back, it still would have been worth it. I reached my goal. I proved to myself that a walk-on player could play major college football." (Gary Rausch, UCLA SID)

A perfect 4,000

Senior split end Lennie Jacosky is a standout on the field and in the classroom, with a perfect 4,000 grade-point average as an accounting major. (Mike Bovino, Wayne State, Michigan, SID)

I-A attendance moves up again

Division I-A attendance moved back ahead of last season's all-time record pace last Saturday, boosted by a turnout of 807,295 by the top 10 attendance games—third highest in history (the record of 833,285 was set October 22 and second place is the 809,302 September 22, 1979). Tennessee led with 95,585, while Ohio State, Penn State, Georgia and Clemson all were above 80,000.

The I-A season average is 42,198 per game, or 152 above (0.36 percent) the average for the same 105 teams at this stage of last season. There is some doubt as to whether the division will surpass the 1982 record, but one thing is certain—the seven conferences that draw more than one million spectators every season are quite healthy.

The Big Ten (averaging an all-time national-record 67,309 per game), the Southeastern (64,304), Atlantic Coast (42,781) and Western Athletic (30,430) all are above the record averages they set a year ago. The Big Eight (51,920) is behind its record 53,900 set in 1977 but up 2,391 over last season's final figure—the biggest increase in the country among the seven one-million conferences. The Pacific-10, with big traditional games coming up, has an excellent chance to surpass last year's final 46,537 average. Only the Southwest Athletic Conference figures to be down from 1982 and then by only about 3.8 percent in per-game average (from 42,808).

The number of home games by the big-attendance conferences is a factor. The Big Ten, for instance, is playing five fewer home games this fall compared to 1982, while the Pac-10 is playing three fewer.

In Division I-AA, the current 10,838 per-game average is 3.47 percent behind this stage of last season. Here is the chart:

Picking Division I champion is tough chore

By Timothy J. Lilley
The NCAA News Staff

Mustangs, Longhorns, Gators and maybe even a Bruin or two will be there, battling the Cardinal and the Crimson Tide. Fairy tales? A surreal science-fiction yarn? No. This is nothing more than the annual battle for dominance in Division I men's swimming.

Southern Methodist's Mustangs missed the pinnacle by a clock's tick last season, edged in the final relay event by Florida's Gators. Both had been prodded by the Texas Longhorns, which finished just ahead of the Stanford Cardinal. Olympic coach Don Gambril was not far behind with his Alabama Crimson Tide.

Throw the names in a swimming cap, mix them up and try to pick the best team. That might be the best solution until March 21, when the best in Division I converge at Cleveland State University for the NCAA championships.

Florida, coached by Randy Reese, lost twice during the 1983 dual-meet season; but his Gators won the Southeastern Conference title and edged Southern Methodist for the NCAA crown last March. Florida became the fifth Division I champion since 1977, when Southern California's streak of four straight victories was halted by Tennessee.

Only California (1979 and 1980) has won more than one team championship since that time. With 10 all-America swimmers and divers and a good recruiting class, Reese has reason to be confident as the new year begins.

Seniors Geoff Gaberino and Doug Soltis return to lead Florida. Gaberino swam on the winning 400-yard freestyle relay team that defeated Southern Methodist by less than a second (0.48). Gaberino also finished among the top 12 in both the 100 and 200 freestyle events.

Soltis earned all-America status in the breaststroke events last season and will be among the country's fastest this year. Gaberino and Soltis will be joined by three sophomores who made an impact as rookies last season.

Mike Heath and Albert Mestre were key members of Florida's freestyle relay teams, and Heath advanced to the finals of both the 200 and 500 freestyle events. Sophomore Pat Kennedy, third-place finisher in the 400-yard individual medley, is another top performer.

Before next year's championships, the Gators must battle tough Southeastern Conference foes Alabama and Auburn.

Gambril coached the Crimson Tide to a 12-0 dual-meet record a year ago, although Florida won the SEC crown and the national championship. Alabama finished fifth overall in the SEC.

Nine all-America performers and a host of underclassmen should keep Alabama in the thick of the race again. The Crimson Tide has five outstanding sophomores, including three who set school freshman records—freestyler Don Berger, backstroker Bryan Jennings and individual-medley swimmer Ron Kutzavitch. Other top sophomores are Filiberto Colon, a butterfly specialist who set a school record last year, and diver Mike Marmann.

Senior Glenn Milles and juniors Jay Posey, Andreas Schmidt and

Division I women

Stanford set for title defense

George Haines must feel like a youngster on Christmas morning. Stanford's head women's swimming coach was presented with the NCAA Division I championship by his 1983 team, and they all have returned to stuff the Cardinal stocking with impressive performances on the way to Indianapolis, where the 1984 NCAA Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships will be held March 15-17.

Stanford won last year's championships by 29 points over Florida, a team that included the most prolific champion in swimming history, Tracy Caulkins. Caulkins is back this season, but some of her teammates have opted to train for the Olympics.

In addition to Stanford and Florida, Texas, Alabama and North Carolina again will be top-flight contenders.

Stanford's depth is reflected in the fact that Cardinal swimmers won only five of 24 events at the 1983 championships. Relays were strong and should be at least as good in 1984. In addition, senior Anne Tweedy has shown improvement and may become the surprise of the Division I season.

Newcomer Beth Washut, a sprinter from Ashtabula, Ohio, also may be in the scoring picture for the Cardinal.

The loss of Theresa Andrews and Lynette Gernaat, who will be training for the 1984 Olympics, would have many coaches in a state of panic. Randy Reese may not be overjoyed about their departure, but Florida's head coach certainly has reason for optimism. In Gainesville, swimming is spelled Caulkins... and Neyer... and Treible.

The National Collegiate Championships records book lists the top five Division I women swimmers in terms of most career championships; and Caulkins, Megan Neyer and Kathy Treible are among the five. Of the 38 individual championships that have been contested in the two NCAA Division I meets, this trio owns 15 victories, and Treible is the only senior.

Sophomores Christi Woolger and Holly Green will add punch to the Gator attack, and Reese has recruited two swimmers with United States Swimming championships.

Mary Wayte, Mercer Island, Washington, owns a national title in the 200-yard freestyle in long-course competition, and Patty King, a native of Nashville, Tennessee, won a short-course championship in the 200-yard butterfly.

Southwest Athletic Conference champion Texas loses Jill Sterkel, but seniors Joan Pennington and sophomore Kirsten Wengler are among a group of eight all-America returnees. The Sterkel name is still on the Longhorn roster—sophomore Jodi will compete in the middle-distance freestyle events.

Texas coach Richard Quick has put together one of the toughest schedules in the division. Several invitational meets—including the Longhorn Invitational with Kansas, North Carolina, Southern California, Auburn and Southern Illinois—highlight the slate.

The middle-distance freestyle races are the strength for Alabama. The Crimson Tide return eight swimmers and one diver who earned 28 all-America awards, but coach Don Gambril has a few troublesome areas.

Bright spots include Angelika Knipping and Carol Landry and freshmen Beth Gardner (freestyle) and Sandy Sciples (butterfly).

North Carolina won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship a year ago, and senior Sue Walsh will lead the Tar Heels in defense of that crown.

Walsh is second to Caulkins in NCAA career championships with six, and she holds the American record in the 100-yard backstroke.

Newcomer Betsy Mitchell will team with Walsh in the backstroke events. Sophomore Polly Winde and seniors Amy Pless and Jenny Strickland return, adding talent to a squad that also possesses good depth.

Weaknesses in the Tar Heel attack are the freestyle and butterfly events. North Carolina also will be trying to improve its relay teams.

Kansas will try for its 10th consecutive Big Eight Conference title, but the Jayhawks will be without the services of Tammy Thomas, who upset Texas' Jill Sterkel in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle events at the 1983 NCAA championships.

Senior Jenny Wagstaff, junior Celine Cerny and sophomore Tammy Pease top the list of returning talent for Kansas coach Gary Kempf.

Auburn has eight all-America swimmers, but the fight will be uphill for the Lady Tigers. Senior Annie Lett set a school record in the 50-yard freestyle at the 1983 NCAA championships and has been named

Northridge heads Division II race

Pete Accardy has had a successful decade as head coach of the swimming program at Cal State Northridge. His men's teams have won seven NCAA Division II championships, and the women's squad won the inaugural Division II championships in 1982.

Accardy, it seems, never restores; he simply reopens. As the 1983-84 Division II men's swimming season begins, Cal State Northridge will be challenged by Oakland, Clarion and others, but it appears that the Matadors are prepared to stay on top.

Accardy has added four junior college all-Americans to a roster that includes a number of top veterans. Three-meter diving champion Bill Travis heads a group of five seniors who include Ed Althof, Tory Betz (butterfly), Dave Varney (butterfly) and Todd Moore (breaststroke).

The transfers include Doug Burchell (freestyle) from Golden West (California) Junior College, Steve Franklin (freestyle) from El Camino (California) College, Scott Grigsby (butterfly/freestyle) from Santa Monica (California) College and Danny Kleiser (freestyle/individual medley), also from Santa Monica.

Oakland coach Pete Hovland also has a group of transfers to match those from Cal State Northridge. In the past five NCAA championships, Oakland has finished second to the Matadors three times (1979, 1981 and 1983) and won the 1980 title.

Heading the list of Pioneer newcomers is Matt Croghan, a junior college all-America a year ago. Mike McCloskey and Steve Larson also join the squad and will fortify the individual medley, butterfly and sprint events.

Three defending national champions and two other all-America swimmers form the nucleus for Oakland. Tracy Huth, Mike Schmidt, Alan Faust and Darin Abbasse are seniors; Jeff Colton is a sophomore.

Oakland yielded 70 points in diving to Cal State Northridge at the 1983 NCAA championships, and the Pioneers will have to rely on experience and added depth by the transfers to offset the return of Matador divers Billy Travis and Blair Nogosek.

Clarion finished fourth in the NCAA championships a year ago, and head coach Bill Miller returns almost his whole team. Transfer Mike Cherwenka won the national junior college diving championship in 1983 and should add points for the Golden Eagles.

In five years at the school, Miller has lost only four dual meets and won 13 consecutive Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference championships.

Three seniors—Tom Janton, Jay Nash and Jeff Tynes—head the attack at Tampa. Janton will swim both backstroke events, Nash will compete in the individual medleys and Tynes will swim the distance freestyle events.

Shippensburg coach Don Miller finished second to his namesake at Clarion in the PSAC championships, and the Raiders have almost everyone back in 1984.

Doug Myers and Mike Wolper are threats in their individual events, and they will combine with Rob Spence and Greg Chew in the 400 medley relay and the 400 free relay.

Puget Sound scored fewer points in the 1983 NCAA championships than in 1982, when the Loggers finished second to Cal State Northridge. Head coach Don Duncan returns all performers, and the addition of three freshmen will help.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo coach Mike Smithers will depend on Loren Gerhardt, Brian Wilkerson and Kirk Simon for leadership as the Mustangs try to improve their 1983 dual-meet record of 4-6.

Missouri-Rolla coach Bob Pease has a young team that will display more depth and balance than any of his previous Miner squads. Pease has only one senior.

Two of the better teams in the division may move in different directions this season. Lowell coach Dick Kenney has a small team, although strong diving may keep the Chiefs from slipping too far.

In his first season, Wright State coach Jeff Cavana guided the Raiders to their best NCAA finish (14th) in 1983. The addition of a good recruiting class and the return of Scott Jurs and Rick Miller should allow the team to move up in 1984.

Notes: St. Cloud State has a new coach in Craig Altmeyer; but, with 15 returning lettermen, the Huskies could defend their North Central Conference championship. . . . Young swimmers dominate the Ferris State roster, but the youthful Bulldogs challenged perennial power Oakland for the Great Lakes Valley Conference championship and should do so again this season. . . . Denver is the favorite to repeat as the Intermountain Swimming League champion.

Division III men

Kenyon has been king of the hill in Division III men's swimming the past four years. In the Ohio Athletic Conference, that dominance has spanned three decades. The new season brings with it the same old story. Head coach Jim Steen has a wealth of talent, including seven freshmen who should add depth in key areas.

Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, Williams, Johns Hopkins and several others will be battling for the top spot. In the final analysis, however, all the fighting may be for second place.

With a fitting nickname, the Lords of Kenyon ruled the division with a powerful hand last season. Kenyon had 15 all-Americans last year, and Steen's roster is dotted with underclassmen.

Key losses for the Lords are Chris Shedd, who won nine Division III titles, Jack Emens and John Robrock. All three earned all-America status in each of their four seasons.

Returning seniors for Kenyon include Brian Horgan, Peter Loomis, Steve Neri and Michael Solomon. John Callinan, Chris Cunningham and Stuart Gutsche are the top juniors, and key sophomores include Jim Born, Jeff Prosswimmer and Karel Starek.

Adding to the Lords' incentive is a Kenyon women's squad that is an annual contender for the Division III title. Steen coaches both squads and may earn a unique double in the future.

Claremont-Mudd-Scripps coach Michael Sutton, Division III coach of the year in 1983, seems to have good news and bad news as the season approaches.

The Stags were 10-1 in dual meets, won the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title and were runners-up to Kenyon in the NCAA championships. His top swimmers are back and will be joined by three fine freshmen.

The bad news? The Stags may lose team captain.

Standing in the way of Auburn are SEC rivals Florida and Alabama. The Crimson Tide visits Auburn January 20 and a dual-meet victory would be gratifying for head coach John Asmuth.

Southern Illinois swimmers set 15 school records last season, won the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference title and finished in the top 10 at the NCAA championships.

Counting participants in relay events, 10 all-Americans return for Saluki coach Tim Hill.

Ohio State, the Big Ten Conference champion, returns six conference champions, including three swimmers who advanced to the NCAA finals.

The Lady Buckeyes should be strong in the backstroke, breaststroke, distance freestyle and medley relay events.

Notes: Penn State, the defending Eastern Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (EAIW) champion, returns 22 swimmers, including EAIW diving champion Mary Clark. . . . Miami University (Ohio) will defend its Mid-American Conference championship with an experienced group of returners, and coach David Jennings has recruited five high school all-Americans. . . . Three juniors lead Drexel in 1984, as the Dragons will defend their East Coast Conference championship. Eileen Farrell (backstroke), Karen Kreitzberg (backstroke) and diver Veronica Roe all won individual ECC titles last season and are favorites to repeat. . . . California coach Karen Moe Thornton is without the services of 1983 NCAA 200-yard butterfly champion Mary T. Meagher, who is sitting out the 1984 season to prepare for the Olympics. The Golden Bears should repeat as Northern Pacific Athletic Conference champion, with the return of all-America swimmers Cindy Tuttle, Talli Dent, Helen Jameson and Agneta Martenson. . . . Ivy League champion Brown returns Elaine Palmer, who holds six school records. . . . Arkansas men's swimming coach Sam Freas has taken over leadership of the Lady Razorbacks this season, and he will work with a youthful squad containing only one senior. . . . Northern Arizona, Marist and Georgia State will be entering their first year of intercollegiate women's swimming competition.

Clarion, Williams favored in Divisions II, III

Jeanne O'Conner scored a lot of points with Clarion coach Becky Rutt Leas last March, but more important, those points led Clarion to the NCAA Division II Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

The victory was the Golden Eagles' sixth in national championships competition since 1977 (including Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women championships). The team had moved to the 1983 NCAA event after winning the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference title, its eighth straight.

A senior-dominated squad makes Clarion the Division II front-runner this year, too. But the Golden Eagles will not be without challengers.

The competition was relatively close a year ago. And Air Force, Cal State Northridge, California-Davis and Oakland will have an impact this year when the squads gather at Hofstra University next March for the championships.

O'Conner is one of four Clarion seniors who have been major scorers.

Teri Peot may be the most versatile of all. Her third-place time in the 500-yard freestyle in the championships last season is being improved and should mean a higher finish this season.

Joyce Skoog will join Peot and O'Conner to help keep the Golden Eagle relay teams strong. In 1983, Clarion finished no lower than third in four relay events, including a victory in the 400-yard freestyle.

Senior divers Karen Hawkins and Tina Kiser round out the Golden Eagles' scoring potential. Junior freestyler Nan Jackson has recovered from mononucleosis and should be of help.

At Air Force, coach Kelly Kemp guided the Falcons to a 21-0 dual-meet record in 1983 in his first year and watched his charges finish nine points behind Clarion in the NCAA championships.

Air Force will be strong in diving with all-America performers Tina Landschultz and Dana Strong.

Freestyler Karen Burton and sophomores Beth Haney and Barb Smith will try to defend the national championships (individual medley and butterfly events, respectively) they won in 1983.

Cal State Northridge coach Pete Accardy won a national championship last season when his men's team defeated Oakland. His women's squad finished third. But the best part of last year's team is back, so the Matadors should contend for the top spot in 1984.

Juniors Michelle Barnett, Kathy Danforth, Michelle Hampton and Tracy McCluskey form the backbone of the team. Senior Lisa Hill and sophomore Amy Schlegel also are veterans.

Accardy has added more depth with junior college transfer Laurie Kent, who earned all-America honors at El Camino College in California last season.

Furman coach Howard Wheeler went back to Greenville, South Carolina, with eight all-America swimmers after the 1983 Division II championships. Seven of them are back.

Freestylers Beth Scheimann and Rita Broadniak and sophomore butterfly specialist Sandra Schenke could give Furman its best team.

Oakland will lack depth but possesses talent this season. Head coach Mary Ellen Wydan's roster contains only 11 names, but that number could prove lucky.

Patty Doherty, Karen Enneking, Linda Scott and Karen Van Valkenburg must carry most of the workload, but they have all-America honors to their credit.

Kim Pogue also will be vital to Oakland's chances as the Pioneers try to maintain their place among the top five in the division.

South Florida has 10 performers returning, and head coach Bill Mann has made an excellent addition in the form of junior college all-America diver Jill Kravitz. She will team with sophomores Nancy Bercaw, Theresa Day and Maggie Mortell and juniors Tracy Mischler, Alicia McHugh and Michele Mongilia.

Division I champion Florida appears on the 1984 dual-meet schedule, as do Florida State and Louisiana State.

Rice finished in the top 10 last season for the first time. Third-year coach Kris Wingenroth seems to have the swimmers who can continue that effort in 1984.

The team will be led by seniors Kathy Batho and Barb Demorotski, and sophomores Anita Heil, Kathy Jenkins and Kathy Benzick are expected to score consistently.

Five all-America swimmers lead Vanderbilt, and the times turned in by Ming Hsu, Mary Lou Baldwin, Maribeth Malecki, Myra Creighton and Anna Litkenhous at the 1983 championships were school records.

All of the Lady Commodores' best performers return.

Notes: Stronger relay teams could make Wright State a contender this season. . . . Bloomsburg will battle Clarion for the PSAC title with nine returning all-America performers. . . . North Dakota won the North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference championship last season, and head coach Mike Stromberg has three all-Americans returning. . . . Montana had a 12-1 dual-meet record last season, with eight swimmers earning all-America at the NCAA championships. Six of those athletes return, and coach Doug Brenner has added talented newcomers Kolondra Harvey, Michelyn Rudser and Karin Schanzle. . . . Boston College won the New England Division A championship last season, and all of the Eagles scorers are back. . . . Army won the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference title, and strong breaststroke performers and improvement in the freestyle events will make the Cadets strong again.

Division III women

Williams head coach Carl Samuelson believes his defending Division III swimming and diving championship team this year "should be as strong as 1982-83."

Should that prediction prove true, the possibilities would include the following:

—A 44-point margin of victory in the Division III championships.

—A clean sweep of the relay events.

—Numerous all-America honors by the end of the season.

Four straight New England Division B championships and two consecutive NCAA championships have made the Ephs the dominant force in the division, and Samuelson apparently is confident that reign will continue.

Like Pete Accardy (Cal State Northridge) in Division II, Samuelson works with both the men's and women's squads.

Kim Ekrich and Kathy Kirmayer will lead the Williams attack, as Samuelson tries to replace Elizabeth Jex, winner of four events at last year's championships.

Pomona-Pitzer coach Penny Lee Dean has a young squad this season, but the potential for a challenge to the Williams dynasty is there.

Senior Erin Riley, junior Martha Andrews, and sophomores Amy Dantzier and Ellen Roe are being joined at Pomona-Pitzer by newcomers Lyn Cunnliffe, Karah Coe, Kristin McQueen, Daniela Stepman and Debra Whitehouse.

A season-opening date with Cal State Northridge will give Dean an excellent opportunity to gauge her team's chances against the best.

Lots of returning talent greeted Kenyon coach Jim Steen this fall, but the eighth-year coach will have to improve his chances in the backstroke and butterfly.

Winners of the Ohio state championship for the seventh straight year, the Ladies have good depth in the freestyle events. If Steen is successful in improving the back and fly events, Kenyon could move into contention.

UC San Diego coach Bill Morgan will have a new home for his charges this season. A complete aquatics facility has been opened. Possibly the biggest advantage for the Triton program is the addition of a diving program.

NCAA championships record-holder Lee Morrow (200-yard butterfly) will be back for her junior season, and a bevy of underclassmen make UC San Diego a team to watch.

A double-dual date with Pomona-Pitzer and Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, along with a home meeting with Cal State Northridge, highlight the Tritons' 1984 schedule.

Smith returns five all-Americans, including senior Maureen McMahon. Three of the four team members who swam most of the 1983 relay events are back, and the recruiting class looks strong.

Williams will travel to Smith for a January 25 dual meet that will preview regional and national postseason action.

St. Catherine sophomores Katie McCarthy and Liz Hammer return in the freestyle events, and junior butterfly specialist Cathy Beskar is back.

A highly competitive conference schedule will keep coach Dave Luedtke busy during the regular season, and the challenge should help get this young squad ready for championships competition.

Ithaca emerged as the leading Division III team in New York a year ago, and coach Jim Perkins has most of his scorers back. Among them is junior Catherine Lyons, who tied with Williams' Jex in the record-setting 50-yard freestyle at the 1983 NCAA championships.

Lake Forest put together a 10-0 dual-meet season in 1983, won the Division III state championship and finished the season among the nation's top 10.

Sue Leonard is the only senior on the team, so coach John Leonard expects freshmen Denise Barrett, Nancy Dryden and Mary Ellen Bult to fill the Lady Foresters' graduation losses.

Notes: In five years at Lake Forest, Leonard has averaged 11 victories against only one loss per season. . . . Trinity (Connecticut) also had an undefeated (10-0) dual-meet campaign a year ago, and five all-America returners will make the team strong again. . . . Tufts head coach Nancy Jannarone must replace four-time all-America Brenda Kay, but she has recruited well.

Fencing traditions still rule

By David P. Seifert
The NCAA News Staff

One of the ironies of life is that the more things seem to change, the more they remain the same. It can apply at any level of activity, including sports.

Despite all the changes that appear to bring men's and women's college fencing closer together, they still remain on separate courses as the 1983-84 season approaches.

National-championship competition for both men's and women's fencing will be held at Princeton University in 1984. But unlike several common-site championships, the 1984 NCAA Men's Fencing Championships will be held March 20-21, and the women's competition is set for March 22-24.

Championships formats also appear to be moving closer together, yet remain different. The men's championships have been changed from a three-day meet to a two-day event; and two individuals per institution may compete in each event, rather than one. Also, a direct-elimination format will be used for individual competition. These changes should emphasize team depth but do not constitute a true team format as is used in the women's championships.

The contending teams and individuals appear to be changing, yet basically remain the same. Wayne State (Michigan), which finished first in the men's competition and second in women's action, is a preseason favorite to repeat as men's champion and should be a factor in the women's meet. But with a new coach for the second straight year and the loss of some key fencers, the Tartars do not appear as dominant.

Wayne State coach Aladar Kogler has departed to coach the women's team at Columbia University, leaving first-year coach Gil Pezza in charge of the men's championship trophy. These rapid changes defy tradition at the Detroit school, where Istvan Danosi coached the Tartars to four national titles in a 30-year tenure.

Kogler took with him his son, Attila, who placed third nationally in sabre competition last year. But he left two other all-America performers—second-place epeeist Ettore Bianchi and fourth-place foilist Stephan Kogler. They and sabre hopeful Giovanni Giroto make Wayne State an early favorite to win its third straight national title and fifth in six years.

There are serious challengers in all three regions, though. Last year's runner-up, Notre Dame, and Wisconsin should be the toughest Midwest teams. Notre Dame has two 40-victory sabre performers returning. Wisconsin is strong in all three events, particularly with Tim Gillham (third nationally) in epee.

The East had five of the nation's top 10 teams last year and could repeat that performance. Pennsylvania unexpectedly lost all-America epeeist Steve Trevor, like Attila Kogler a transfer to Columbia, but has Doug Powell returning in sabre and is regarded as the best in the East. Columbia, led by Russel Wilson (sabre) and Ed Bardakh (epee), and Princeton also are contenders. Farther south, North Carolina and Duke are expected to be the best.

In the West, Stanford and San Jose State appear to be the strongest teams. Both have veterans returning in all three events, including Elliot Cheu of Stanford (foil) and Michael D'Asaro of San Jose State (sabre). Long Beach State and Cal State Northridge, with all-America epeeist Christian Scherpe, also could be factors. Foilist Andrew Leask of UC San Diego might be the best individual performer in the West.

These national contenders will have a two-day, direct-elimination format awaiting them at Princeton. Neale R. Stoner, director of athletics at the University of Illinois, Champaign, and chair of the Men's Fencing Committee, said that the changes were made "to heighten excitement in the meet" and so that "the best six fencers would be competing in the finals competition." In the old format, Stoner said, the most crucial match in an event might have taken place in an early round. He added that the change to allow two fencers from an institution to compete in each event (epee, sabre, foil) also should be significant.

"Theoretically, one school could have the two best foilists in the world," Stoner explained. "This way, both can compete for the national title. This change could have a dramatic effect on the team competition."

The total number of competitors has been reduced from 108 to 90, in line

MIT coach's help lets blind 'see' success

By Bob Monahan
Boston Globe Staff Writer

It is hard to believe at first, but blind people have been learning to fence at the Carroll Center for the Blind in Newton, Massachusetts, for more than 20 years.

The man in charge is Eric T. Sollee, head coach at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His rewards are many.

Sollee teaches at Carroll twice a week. He conducts 16-week courses, with each class limited to eight students.

He says, "There are numerous psychological problems for the blind, especially for people who have lost their sight as young adults.

"Life is a road of frustrations. The blind person feels anger, resentment and disappointment, at almost every turn as he or she tries to adjust to life without sight. Simple things like eating or walking up and down stairs make for frustration and danger.

"Fencing can help alleviate these worries. When a student can score a touch on me during a bout while I am blindfolded, there is a sense of accomplishment. Each victory increases a student's confidence."

Sollee, 58, is a Californian whose parents moved to Manila after the financial crash in 1929. His father was successful in business there until World War II began.

"The Japanese put us in prison camps, and it was like being back in the Depression again," he said.

Sollee returned to the United States after the war and joined the army. One of his jobs was to teach soldiers how to fight.

Sollee remembers, "I was stationed in Korea, and I had this big kid who didn't know how to fight. I tried everything. Then the kid said that he would like to fight me with a stick as if we were fencing. I just laughed, because I didn't know anything about fencing.

"I was all set to belt him across the belly with my stick, and he used his stick to flip mine right out of my hand. The kid laughed and said, 'When you get out and go home to college, you should take up fencing.'"

Sollee entered Harvard University under the GI Bill and took up fencing. He picked it up quickly, was captain of the freshman and varsity teams, and earned all-America honors.

After winning several national and international titles, he returned to the Philippines from 1960 to 1962 and taught fencing at the Manila YMCA.

He returned to the United States and met Larry Dargle, who was the first fencing instructor at Carroll. Dargle invited him to match foils with three of his students while Sollee was blindfolded.

Craig Ford are other key returnees for the Crimson Tide.

Auburn had nine all-Americas last season, and coach John Asmuth undoubtedly is pleased that eight of those swimmers are back.

Sophomore Per Johansson, a native of Sweden, followed his fourth-place finish in the NCAA 100-yard freestyle by winning his second consecutive European championship at the same distance.

Senior Chris Rowe leads Auburn in the individual medley, and juniors Andy Bauer (breaststroke) and Richie Hughey (backstroke) are other top contenders.

The Tigers host Alabama January 21 in a confrontation that may provide a gauge of the teams' chances for postseason success.

That same day, Texas coach Eddie Reese will showcase his squad against UCLA and Florida in a double dual match. With world-record holder Rick Carey, the Longhorns must be considered a threat to Florida and the rest of the field.

Like Florida, the Longhorns were 5-2 in dual meets and won their conference championship. Third place was the highest they could climb at the national championships, however.

The return of redshirt Asa Green will strengthen the squad, as will the addition of freestylers Mike Ellison, a transfer, and Chris Jacobs, a freshman.

Junior Matt Scoggin, who won the NCAA one-meter diving competition and finished third on the three-meter board last year, and all-America Mike Wantuck and David Lindsey, form one of the strongest diving contingents in Division I.

Southern Methodist lost Steve Lundquist, one of the best collegiate performers of all time. Sophomore Richard Prado should help offset the loss of Lundquist, however.

Prado won the 200 butterfly and 400 IM events and finished third in the 200 IM at last year's NCAA championships. Teammate Mark Rhodenbaugh, also a sophomore, was runner-up in the 100 backstroke and sixth in the 200 backstroke and 200 IM.

Diving was a weakness for coach George McMillion's squad last season, but the addition of coach Jim Stillson and five new divers should help.

Pacific-10 Conference champion Stanford should field one of its best teams. Coach Skip Kenney recruited two of the best freshmen in the nation—Jeff Kostoff and Pablo Morales.

Among other things, Kostoff recently defeated Vladimir Salnikov of Russia in the 400 freestyle, an event in which Salnikov is ranked No. 1 in the world.

Kostoff, Morales and freshman David Loudon will join sophomores John Engs and John Moffet, junior Dave Bottom, and senior Dave Sims to lead Stanford.

South of Stanford, UCLA coach Ron Ballatore is hoping to put together the kind of performance that earned his 1982 Bruin squad the NCAA title.

Four juniors, two seniors and two sophomores provide an excellent basis of talent for Ballatore. The key returnee for UCLA is Tom Jager, last year's 100-yard freestyle champion.

In-season competition with SMU and Stanford, along with the double dual date with Texas and Florida, will give Ballatore an excellent indication of his squad's strength.

Notes: Other teams that could be challengers include Ohio State, Arizona, Southern Illinois and Arkansas. . . . Houston should have a good year if the Cougars can get help for outstanding freestyler Peng Siong-Ang. . . . There will be at least two brother acts in Division I this season. Mark and Mike Ahonen will swim for Butler, and Brad and Bren Howe compete for Boston University. . . . Graeme McGufficke, a sophomore at Illinois, will sit out this season to train for the Olympics. He will try to earn a spot on his native Australia's squad. . . . Another NCAA performer who is training for the Olympics is Arkansas diver Ron Meyer. . . . Holy Cross will spend its first season in its brand new pool, opened last January. . . . Harvard will be looking to win its seventh straight Ivy League title. . . . Eastern Michigan will aim for its fifth straight Mid-American Conference title. . . . Cleveland State, host of the Division I championships, is coming off a Penn-Ohio Conference title in 1983.

Doug Jones, a Division III multievent champion and record-holder, who may not return. The loss of Jones would hinder Claremont's ability to challenge Kenyon. Only a junior, Jones has swum on a winning relay team and won six national championships in his first two seasons.

Stag sophomore Tom Harrison won three championships in his first Division III appearance last season and is capable of considerable scoring. The same can be said for classmates Nick Baelatelos and Ned Busch.

Junior Dave Neault and seniors Bill Burk and Bill Johnsons also are top-flight swimmers. Freshmen Derek Eberhart, Eric Ryba and Greg Stoll will strengthen the squad; and if Jones decides to compete, the Stags may splash into the winners' circle next March.

Like Kenyon coach Jim Steen, Carl Samuelson at Williams heads both the men's and women's programs, and both squads are annual challengers for the national championships.

A year ago, the Ephs won their fifth straight New England College Athletic Conference championship and came within a dozen points of second-place Claremont at the NCAA Division III championships.

A well-balanced group of veterans returns for Williams—seniors Jeffrey Mills and Robert Sommer, juniors

Robert Kirkpatrick and Peter Orphanos, and sophomores William Andrew and William Couch.

Improved diving is the big news at Johns Hopkins, where Tim Welsh guided the Blue Jays to their 13th consecutive Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference championship in 1983. Freshmen Dan Frisch, Matt Hepler and Chris Anderson will add balance and points to the squad.

Four juniors lead the way for Allegheny, as the Gators try to improve a 9-1 dual-meet record and fifth-place NCAA finish in 1983.

Ron Beegle, Kevin Treu, Bill Glass and Bruce Harvey earned all-America status as sophomores and were part of a group of nine Allegheny swimmers who earned that recognition a year ago.

A new aquatic facility, a new diving program, seven returning all-America performers and a good recruiting year have UC San Diego coach Bill Morgan excited.

All relay teams return intact, so the Tritons have the potential to make some waves in Division III.

Fencing

with the NCAA Executive Committee's standard formula (approximately 6.25 percent of the regular-season competitors). Thirty will compete in each weapon, fencing in five pools of six fencers each.

Competition in three weapons has been a traditional part of men's fencing, just as competition in a single weapon (foil) has been a traditional part of women's fencing.

That tradition remains intact this season, along with the "true" team championship format to determine a national champion.

The Women's Fencing Committee has changed the meet format, though, to further emphasize the team segment. Now, the individual competition will be held on the first day of the meet, with team competition the second and third days. The change was made, according to Tamatha J. Gannon, NCAA assistant director of championships, "because the committee believes the team competition is the most exciting part of the meet."

The committee also altered the individual allocations. Six fencers will be selected from the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic/South, and five will be chosen from the Midwest. Four teams will be chosen from the West. The final three qualifiers will be picked on an at-large basis, a decrease of two at-large berths from last year.

One of those individual berths, whether regional or at large, certainly will go to Jana Angelakis of Penn State, defending national champion and preseason favorite to repeat. Angelakis was 27-0 in dual-meet competition last year after a 46-1 mark in 1981 (she did not compete during 1982) and has been the nation's top-ranked women's fencer for the past five years. She was the youngest person to win the U.S. Open title.

Last year, Angelakis not only won the NCAA individual title but also helped Penn State to the team crown. This year, the Lady Lions may not be able to duplicate that feat since three of their top five fencers graduated. Also, area rivals like Cornell, Temple and Pennsylvania should be stronger than last year when all three finished in the top 10.

Cornell has two second-team all-Americas—Christine Hamori and Sio Moss—and all-America Mary Jane O'Neill returns for Penn. Temple, led by 1983 coach-of-the-year Nikke Franke, returns twin sisters India and Rachel Hayes (18th nationally). The Lady Owls also will have Mary Bildeaux, who missed last season for medical reasons after earning all-America honors in 1982.

Wayne State was the 1983 NCAA runner-up and has three veterans returning, led by Joyce Latrigue. Ohio State and Notre Dame are other top Midwest teams.

Penn State's top challengers could come from the West, though, as sixth-place Stanford and eighth-place San Jose State both return two of the nation's top 25 individuals (Jennifer Yu and Alison Reid of Stanford, Katie Coombs and Cathy Kay of San Jose State). In addition, Laurel Clark returns to San Jose State's team after spending a year studying and fencing in Europe. Clark was 56-11 in 1982 and finished sixth nationally.

Top-ranked Augustana's leading scorer and rusher Craig Allison

New champion will be crowned in Division III football showdown

A new champion will be crowned December 3 at a new site in the 1983 NCAA Division III Football Championship.

Last year's champion, West Georgia, is competing in Division II. And, for the first time in the 10-year history of the Division III Football Championship, the title game will be played at a different site—Galbreath Field in Kings Island, Ohio, instead of Phenix City, Alabama.

Eight teams were selected for this year's championship. Two teams chosen from each of four regions will play first-round games November 19 at on-campus sites. The semifinals will be played November 26 at on-campus sites.

In the South region, Carnegie-Mellon will square off against Salisbury State, which finished the regular season with a 9-0-1 record. Carnegie-Mellon has a powerful rushing attack led by running back Joe Vasalani, who was ranked among the division's top 10 in scoring with a nine-points-per-game average. The Tartans finished the regular season with a 9-0 record, won the Presidents' Athletic Conference title and were ranked No. 2 in the last NCAA poll.

Augustana (Illinois), the No. 1-ranked team all season, will present a tough challenge to the defense of Adrian, the No. 6-ranked team in the North region. As expected, Augustana, which finished second in last year's championship, has used a relentless ground attack in compiling a 9-0 record and defending its College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin title. The Vikings have averaged more than 360 yards and 30 points a game and are the early favorites to win the title.

In the East region, No. 3 Hofstra faces the rugged defense of Union (New York). The Dutchmen's defense held opponents to fewer than 65 yards per game in its first eight games. Union was ranked seventh in the last poll.

A pair of newcomers to the Division III championship will meet in the West region. Wisconsin-LaCrosse, the No. 8-ranked team meets Occidental, which was ranked fourth in the last poll.

two-time all-America setter Louise Schwartz.

Elmhurst, champion of the Chicago-Metro Women's Conference, was awarded an automatic berth and is the No. 2 seed. Elmhurst, which returned all but one starter, was ranked second in the latest poll with a 48-4 record.

Occidental, No. 3 seed, won the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title. The Tigers, ranked third with a 23-3 record, turned the tables on conference rival La Verne. La Verne, which has received an at-large berth in the championship, won the SCIAAC title last year and went on to win the NCAA championship. La Verne was expected to be one of the top teams in the country but has been hampered by injuries.

After being ranked second this season, the Leopards dropped into a two-way tie for 17th in the latest poll. If La Verne manages to advance to the final four, it will have a home-court advantage to begin the defense of its title.

Other automatic berths went to Juniata, the champion of the Middle

Tritons rate the edge in Division III volleyball

This has been quite a rebuilding season for UC San Diego's women's volleyball team. Despite the loss of several key players from last year, the Tritons have been ranked No. 1 throughout the season and are considered the favorites for the NCAA Division III Women's Volleyball Championship.

Sixteen teams begin first-round play this weekend. Eight teams receive byes to second-round play December 2-3. The semifinals and final will be December 9-10. One team from each of six regions was selected to the play-off field, and four conference champions automatically qualified. The rest of the field was selected at large. Competition for the championship will be single-elimination, best-three-of-five-game matches.

UC San Diego, the tournament's No. 1 seed, received the West region berth. By November 7, the Tritons had compiled a 21-12 record against a tough schedule. Coach Doug Dannevik's Tritons won the 1981 title and were runners-up last year. Dannevik's lineup is dominated by juniors and seniors who have had play-off experience. To stop UC San Diego, opponents will have to handle

Division I men's soccer

Selecting the teams can be hardest part

Tom Griffith has one of those "dirty" jobs that someone has to do.

Griffith is the head soccer coach at Dartmouth College, but he also serves as the current chair of the NCAA Men's Soccer Committee. That committee's Division I representatives annually face the unenviable task of selecting a 23-team field for the NCAA Division I Men's Soccer Championship.

What makes that task so difficult is that there are more than 23 teams worthy of consideration this year.

"I don't think there is any question about that," Griffith said. "Every year, it gets tougher and tougher. There are more good teams each year."

Topping the list of good teams are last year's finalists—Indiana and Duke. The Hoosiers won a 2-1, eight-overtime decision in the 1982 championship game. The two played a scoreless tie earlier this season at Indiana.

A number of other preseason favorites have remained highly ranked throughout the season. Columbia has dominated the New York region and the Ivy League. Eastern Illinois (Midwest) and Virginia (South Atlantic) also have stood out.

Then, there have been the surprise teams—Rutgers and, to a lesser degree, Fairleigh Dickinson-Teaneck in the Middle Atlantic; Providence in New England; William and Mary in the South Atlantic; Wisconsin-Green Bay in the Great Lakes, and Nevada-Las Vegas in the Far West.

National powers Clemson and Alabama A&M will be formidable foes for Duke in the South. The Far West has one of its more balanced looks in years. UCLA, perhaps, has been the most consistent, but California has been impressive and owns a 2-1 victory over the Bruins.

Veterans such as Gary Escher (goalkeeper, Columbia), Dale Ervine (midfielder, UCLA), Agyeman Prempeh (midfielder, Eastern Illinois), Jeff Gaffney (forward, Virginia), John Stollmeyer (midfield, Indiana), Tom Kain (forward, Duke), Adubari Otorubio (back, Clemson) and Michael King (forward, FDU-Teaneck) have responded with the kinds of seasons one would expect. And, freshmen have made a difference, too—Gary Conner (forward, Clemson), Andrew Grett (goalkeeper, FDU-Teaneck), Jeff Hooker (forward, UCLA), Bobby Joe Esposito (forward, Rutgers), George Gelnovatch (midfielder, Virginia) and Theo Narvestad (midfielder, San Francisco) have been impressive.

Those will be just a few of the names to watch when first-round play gets underway November 16. Second-round (to be completed by November 20), third-round (completed by November 27) and the semifinal games (to be completed by December 4) will follow, all at on-campus sites. The national final again will be held at Lockhart Stadium in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, this year on Saturday, December 10.

Following are the selections for the 1983 NCAA Division I Men's Soccer Championship (note: all first-round games will be played November 16; second-round dates are to be determined except where noted otherwise):

Fields set in Divisions I, III cross country

Wisconsin will return to defend its title and UTEP will return to avenge its fifth-place finish when the NCAA Division I Men's Cross Country Championships begin November 21 at Lehigh University.

The Badgers captured the Region 4 meet, with John Easker winning individual honors. Wisconsin placed all five of its scorers in the top 15.

UTEP won the Region 7 meet on a course covered with seven inches of snow. Zakarie Barie, the top returning individual runner from 1982, led the Miners.

Other teams that will be in the running for the team championship are Michigan, which finished second behind Wisconsin, and Oregon, which captured the Region 8 title.

Bloomsburg, Trenton State claim crowns

Division II Field Hockey

Bloomsburg used offensive control in the first half and a goal by senior midfielder Deb Long to defeat Lock Haven, 1-0, and capture the NCAA Division II Field Hockey Championship November 12 at Hubert Jack Stadium in Lock Haven, Pennsylvania.

Sloppy field conditions hampered both teams' attacking efforts; the Huskies' defense contributed decisively to the winning effort, allowing Lock Haven only five shots on goal.

Long's tally came at 21:22 in the second half on an assist from junior attacker Linda Hershey. Bloomsburg goalie Laurie Snyder then took over and recorded three saves to preserve the triumph.

The victory avenged a regular-season loss by the Huskies to their Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference rival, Lock Haven had taken a 2-0 decision in the October 1 confrontation.

Along with the championship victory over Lock Haven, Bloomsburg defeated Keene State, 2-1, in the semifinals. The title is the first national collegiate team championship in school history.

Only 11 goals were scored in the five-game tournament, the lowest total in the three-year history of the Division II championship. Four of the five contests were shutouts, and Bloomsburg becomes the first titlist to score fewer than six goals in the tournament.

Division III Field Hockey

Trenton State avenged its 1982 Division III championship-game loss to Ithaca with a 2-1 victory over the Bombers, as the Lions won their second Division III field hockey title in three years November 13 in Ithaca, New York.

After dominating the first half, Trenton State held off a furious second-half attack from Ithaca that saw the Bombers fire 22 shots on goal. Only Heather Doyle was able to connect; her score at 30:43 of the second half, on an assist from Barb Wachowiak, proved to be the only Ithaca goal.

Trenton State's Lori Jung opened the scoring at 13:42 of the first half when she converted an assist from Bridget Roun. Four minutes and 10 seconds later, Holly Trumpovicz added what turned out to be the game-winning goal when she scored at 17:52 with an assist from Diane Smith.

Lion goalkeepers picked up 13 saves, 12 in the second half, to preserve the victory. In winning its second Division III title, Trenton State becomes the only squad to reach the championship game in all three Division III tournaments.

Trenton State placed four players on the all-tournament team, and Ithaca added three. The team included Charlotte Heenan, Jung, Trumpovicz and Carol Whitehouse of Trenton State; Linda Amuso, Clare Lamont and Mildred Picopo of Ithaca; Kristen Hull and Tara Maloney of Denison, and Rebecca Orr and Donna Zaccaria of Franklin and Marshall.

The semifinals and finals of the tournament, originally scheduled for November 11 and 12, respectively, were postponed a day due to bad weather and adverse playing conditions at Ithaca.

Coach's comment leads team to a remarkable season

By Michael V. Earle
The NCAA News Staff

When the 1983 Carnegie-Mellon football season is completed, coach Chuck Klausung may look back and realize that a passing remark he made last September led to an undefeated season and the Division III title.

In a moment of enthusiasm, Klausung told his second-team offensive unit that if it continued to practice well, he would put it in for the second quarter of the season opener. Klausung pretty much forgot about the remark; his second-team offensive unit did not.

"At the close of the first quarter, I looked around, and my second team was warming up," Klausung recalled. "It was then that I remembered what I had said. I had to put them in."

The second team promptly marched 80 yards for a touchdown.

"I put the first team back in for the third quarter," Klausung continued. "We were about to begin the fourth quarter, and the second team was ready to go again. So we put them back in."

Carnegie-Mellon won the game, 14-11. Both offensive teams scored a touchdown. Both gained equal yardage. The game marked the end of the first- and second-team designations and gave birth to two offensive units—the "white" team and the "go" team.

Klausung continued to play the "white" team in the first and third quarters and the "go" team in the second and fourth quarters through the first three games. Then, he changed his shuttle system.

"Some of the older kids didn't like it at first," Klausung said. "So we borrowed some schoolyard basketball strategy. In schoolyard basketball, if you score you get the ball back. With us, if you score, you go back in. We're using that as an incentive."

"It has really helped us morale-wise. The 'white' team is made up of older kids. The 'go' team is a group of younger kids. They're pretty balanced. We do this out of strength."

We have numbers. We have quantity; and within quantity, there should be some quality."

Judging from the Tartans' success, Klausung has an abundance of quality. Carnegie-Mellon (9-0) was ranked second among Division III teams in the final NCAA football poll.

The weekend of November 5, the Tartans defeated John Carroll, 19-0, for an undefeated, untied season, and a Presidents' Athletic Conference title and a berth in the Division III play-offs.

Klausung reached into his past for the "white" and "go" teams idea. He was an assistant to Paul Dietzel at Army in the early 1960s. Dietzel came to Army from Louisiana State, where he led the Tigers to an undefeated season and the 1958 national championship by using two offensive squads—the white team and the "go" team.

Klausung also called on his experience to revamp his offensive strategy this season. Since Klausung took over in 1976, Carnegie-Mellon primarily used a pro-set offensive formation, relying on strong-armed quarterbacks and fleet receivers. After a look at the personnel coming back for the 1983 season, Klausung unveiled the wing-T that he used in his earlier days as head coach at Indiana (Pennsylvania), where, over a six-year stretch, he coached three teams that had only one regular-season loss.

Klausung, who entered the season as the third-winningest coach in Division III, also has enjoyed success at the high school level. Klausung led Braddock (Pennsylvania) High School to six conference titles and a 55-game winning streak that stood for several years as a national high school record.

This is not the first season that Klausung has used two offensive teams. And with only three seniors on this year's teams, it probably will not be the last.

"We'll probably use two teams again next year," Klausung said. "We get 40 or 50 freshmen out for the team every year, and out of that, 20 or 25 will stick with the program. I feel that if a young man comes out and works hard and has some athletic ability, we should give him more than just a chance to participate. I feel that he should get a chance to play."

Membership is urged to guard TV copyright

Protection by NCAA members of copyright ownership of telecasts of their sports events and the right to collect cable royalty fees attributable to those telecasts is more important than ever before because of a recent court decision.

The decision, by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, increases the need for member institutions and allied conferences to protect their rights by including in all contracts for television coverage of their sports events provisions that reserve copyright ownership of those telecasts and the right to receive all cable royalties attributable to those telecasts.

Members that wish to secure those rights also should include language assuring that the originating station is "fixing" (taping) the broadcast, according to NCAA legal counsel.

The decision affirmed, in most respects, a determination by the Copyright Royalty Tribunal concerning distribution of 1979 cable royalty fees. But it sent the case back to the tribunal for further consideration of claims by the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB) to royalties for sports programming and of claims by devotional programmers and commercial radio broadcasters.

The tribunal is not required to revise its 1979 distribution but may award the NAB a portion of the sports royalties now being shared by the Joint Sports Claimants (NCAA, Major League Baseball, National Basketball Association, National Hockey League and North American Soccer League).

The court's decision "underscores the importance of having specific contractual provisions reserving copyright," said NCAA legal counsel Judith J. Semo of Squire, Sanders and Dempsey. "The only way to guarantee that sports teams will receive all of the royalty fees for sports programs is for each allied conference and member institution to have a written contractual provision vesting in it copyright ownership."

The NCAA has filed a joint claim for cable royalty fees on behalf of interested member institutions and allied conferences that have had qualifying telecasts annually since 1978. Royalties are paid by cable systems to the U.S. Copyright Office. NCAA members then receive a portion of those royalties for all nonnetwork broadcasts of their athletic events that are retransmitted by cable systems on a "distant-signal" basis—outside the local service area of the transmitting television station.

Although distribution of the fees has been slowed by legal battles, payments for 1978 telecasts were distributed to member institutions in September 1982. Payments to members representing approximately 25 percent of the total 1979 royalties (nearly $55,000) will be mailed to participating institutions later this month.

To date, the tribunal has distributed only 50 percent of the 1979 fees. The remaining royalties received are not being distributed because of unresolved legal issues, including, most importantly, the right of the NAB to a portion of the royalty fees for sports programming. NCAA Controller Louis J. Spry said that he hopes to make a similar distribution of a portion of the 1980 royalties within the next few months.

Sample language for reserving copyright ownership, as well as sample language for reserving the right to receive statutory cable royalty fees, is available to interested members from David E. Cawood, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office. In addition, members may obtain from Cawood sample language for inclusion in contracts to assure "fixation" of telecasts of their events.

The Copyright Act requires that a work be "fixed in a tangible medium of expression" to qualify for copyright. "In order to claim copyright fees for telecasts of sports events—which by nature are ephemeral—it is important to have proof of fixation available," Semo explained. "Stations often record sports telecasts simultaneously by means of a videotape of the entire broadcast, replay tape or audiovideo logger. Institutions should obtain a statement to that effect from the originating station."

Semo said that the importance of these contractual provisions is increasing as the pool of statutory royalty fees grows each year. For 1978 telecasts, NCAA members shared $168,447.76, or $177 per event. In contrast, for 1982, if sports teams receive all of the royalties for sports programming, NCAA members will share more than $500,000.

Baseball committee satisfied with status quo

Satisfaction with the status quo resulted in few recommendations for change by the NCAA Baseball Committee at its meeting November 7-10 in Kansas City.

The committee considered several proposals for changes in the structure of championship competition in Division I and in regular-season play but, in general, left the structure unchanged. The ideas studied included:

—Modification of the current system of regional competition in the Division I championship. A proposal supported by many coaches would have matched the 36 tournament teams in head-to-head, best-two-out-of-three competition. Although this concept might increase interest at each site, it would add two weeks of play to the season. The committee will continue to study the idea at its July 1984 meeting.

—Delay the start of regular-season play to minimize the effects of bad weather in the spring. This change, suggested by Mark Newman, baseball coach at Old Dominion University, was not supported, primarily because of the large differences that would result at many institutions between the end of the academic year and the end of the baseball season.

—Expansion of the number of teams eligible for selection for Division I championship play from conferences whose champions qualify automatically. The limit of two was left in place, primarily to retain the national character of the event. There was some sentiment expressed for relaxing the limit if the size of the tournament field is increased.

—Revision of the scoring system at the College World Series to include a three-person panel of official scorers. The committee decided to keep the one-person system because of satisfaction with the current quality of scoring and uncertainty that the change, recommended by the National Collegiate Baseball Writers Association, necessarily would result in better scoring decisions.

The committee also will recommend to the Executive Committee an increase in automatic-qualifying conferences in Division I. The proposal would give automatic qualification to champions of 25 conferences, with the Midwestern City Conference champion added to the 24 granted the privilege in 1983.

In other business, the committee: —Endorsed a recommendation by the Public Relations and Promotion

Fencers advised to check NCAA rules

Collegiate fencers should be aware that current regulations of the United States Fencing Association concerning club competition during the collegiate season are not consistent with NCAA legislation, and such participation could affect an individual's college eligibility.

Current USFA regulations specify that "a college or scholastic fencer who is also a member of another recognized club may represent his school in dual meets and other inter-scholastic or intercollegiate events, and also represent the other club in USFA events. In addition, if the rules of his school conference require it, he may represent his school in all USFA individual events held during the school fencing season, while representing his club during the other portions of the USFA year."

Such participation on a USFA club team is prohibited during the Committee that a member of an institution's sports information staff be included in the official traveling party for championship play.

—Proposed that umpires for Divisions II and III championship competition receive $50 per game in regional play and $60 per game at the final site, instead of the current $40 fee.

—Reviewed its pool of umpires currently recommended for championship competition and approved a new evaluation form to be used in considering the performance of umpires at all sites.

institution's competitive season (i.e., opening of practice until last contest), however, under the provisions of NCAA Constitution 3-9(c), which limits outside competition. The NCAA legislation also applies to women's programs that are conducted under NCAA regulations.

Questions about this legislation should be directed to Daniel B. "Tucker" DiEdwardo, assistant director of championships, at the NCAA national office.

The Lambert awards, presented annually since 1936 in recognition of college football supremacy in the East, now will be known as the Lambert-Meadowlands awards. The Lambert family asked Meadowlands officials to take over management of the awards and to expand the impact of the four awards, which go to the top teams in all NCAA football divisions. . . . Women's athletics director Virginia Hunt has announced that Montana State University has suspended its women's gymnastics program for the season. The team fell below the NCAA minimum of seven participants in the program. . . . Memphis State University basketball players Keith Lee and Diane Jones became man and wife this month in a civil ceremony in Arkansas. They were married on a Monday, and where did they go on their honeymoon? Both attended practice with their respective teams that afternoon.

After 50 years, Yeshiva University is getting a home court for its basketball program. The university announced it would break ground November 14 for the Max Stern athletic center, a $2.5 million facility. Yeshiva has played its "home" games in other areas of New York. . . . Haverford College joined the University of Pennsylvania as the only teams in intercollegiate men's soccer with 500 victories or more. Haverford's 500th came with a late-October victory over Widener University. Haverford is in its 81st season of soccer.

Georgia Southern College has announced four individual gifts totaling more than $2 million toward its stadium fund drive. The goal is $4.5 million. Completion of the stadium is expected by the 1984 season. . . . California State University, Northridge, has canceled all home track meets for 1984 because of the condition of the track, according to Sam Winningham, chair of the physical education and athletics department. The inside lane is in disrepair, and officials decided that conditions might result in injuries to athletes. . . . Six intercollegiate athletics administrators have been awarded the James Lynah award, the highest honor given by the Eastern College Athletic Conference. The award is given to "an Eastern collegiate athletics administrative official who has achieved outstanding success in his career and has made an unusual contribution in the interest of intercollegiate athletics and their sound conduct."

She begins her senior season with 2,296 points. Bauman also has 834 rebounds and could reach 1,000 this season. Both could be Division I career records for women, which will be compiled for the first time following this season.

Division I to vote on statement of philosophy

Voting delegates from Division I members will have the opportunity at the 1984 NCAA Convention to adopt that division's first formal statement of philosophy.

NCAA Divisions II and III have had approved philosophy statements for the past five years. They were printed for the first time in the 1983-84 NCAA Manual (pages 184-185), and the Division I statement, if adopted, will be included in the 1984-85 edition of the Manual.

Division statements of philosophy are not binding on the members of the divisions. They are intended as an expression of the beliefs held by the great majority of the members of the division involved; as such, they serve as guidelines for an institution's use in determining the most appropriate division for its NCAA membership.

During the past year, both the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education and the Special Committee on Division I Criteria discussed the lack of a formal philosophy statement in Division I. Both committees agreed that adoption of such a statement might be helpful in considering means of treating the ongoing proliferation of members in Division I.

The Special Committee on Division I Criteria—which included six chief executive officers, three faculty athletic representatives, three directors of athletics and a primary woman administrator—developed the statement that will be voted upon during the Division I meeting table at the 1984 Convention January 9 in Dallas. NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis, Oregon State University, chaired the special committee.

The statement was approved by the Division I Steering Committee during its October meeting.

Following is the proposed statement of philosophy that will be voted upon by the Division I membership:

In addition to the purposes and fundamental policy of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, as set forth in Constitution 2, members of Division I support the following principles in the belief that these statements assist in defining the division.

1. A member of Division I subscribes to high standards of academic quality, as well as a breadth of academic opportunity. Its athletics program similarly strives for regional and national prominence and excellence. Accordingly, its recruitment of student-athletes and its emphasis on and support of its athletics program are regional and national in scope.

2. A member of Division I recognizes the dual objective in its athletics program of serving both the university community (participants, student body, faculty-staff, alumni) and the general public (community, area, state, nation), and it emphasizes the latter to a substantial degree.

3. A member of Division I believes in offering extensive opportunities in Division I for participation in varsity intercollegiate athletics for both men and women. A Division I member sponsors at the highest level of intercollegiate competition one or both of the traditional spectator-oriented, income-producing sports

139 radio stations carry NCAA-funded program

"College Sports USA," an NCAA-funded biweekly radio show, is well into its second season of production, with 139 stations across the country broadcasting the show.

The concept for the show originated with the NCAA Promotion Committee (now the NCAA Public Relations and Promotion Committee) in the summer of 1981. A special target of the show was, and remains, the promotion of baseball, women's gymnastics and women's basketball.

Funding was approved, and "College Sports USA," produced by Host Communications, Inc., was aired for the first time in January. A total of 48 twice-weekly shows were distributed to CBS Radio affiliates.

The current 52-week schedule began this fall. The show is "cleared live" on 112 of the 139 stations, all CBS affiliates. A five-minute segment is distributed on Saturday, and a new show goes down the line Sunday.

Producer Dick Gabriel has found that programming ideas are as varied as college athletics itself. In addition to previewing NCAA fall sports championships, "College Sports USA" has taken a look at the upcoming men's and women's basketball seasons. Gabriel also is planning a show on the behind-the-scenes administration of these popular events.

A segment on the promotion of women's sports was one that Gabriel found particularly interesting.

"It was almost a bittersweet story," he said. "Women's sports are growing so much in terms of popularity and talent, but there was a definite feeling that the shape of the economy has really hurt its growth."

Bill Pickett, an executive vice-president at Host Communications, said his firm is working hard to sell the show in more of the nation's leading markets, although current figures are good—14 of the top 31 markets and 25 of the top 75.

"We think that in terms of content and the material we've looked at, the show really provides a very good cross section of college athletics," said Pickett.

to be eligible immediately upon transfer to a Division I member institution.

The remaining satisfactory-progress proposals come from the Pacific-10 Conference and from the NCAA Council, the latter by way of the Academic Testing and Requirements Committee.

Proposal No. 26, sponsored by the Council, would delete repetitive language in Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(ii). The Pacific-10 proposal, No. 29, would change the time by which a student-athlete must declare a major in order to meet the requirements of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(iii) from the beginning of the third year of enrollment to the beginning of the third year of athletic competition or fourth year of enrollment; i.e., the seventh semester or 10th quarter rather than the fifth semester or seventh quarter.

Among the other five academic proposals is a resolution, Proposal No. 30, sponsored by the University of California, Los Angeles, regarding freshman eligibility in varsity basketball and football.

The resolution directs the Council to sponsor legislation for the 1985 Convention that would limit freshman participation in Division I football and basketball to practice and competition on varsity teams.

In addition, the resolution—which incorporates the recommendations of the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education—recommends:

- Limiting financial aid to those freshmen with a minimum accumulative 2.000 high school grade-point average.

- Limiting eligibility for practice and subsvarsity teams during the freshman year to those freshmen who have met academic standards of the 2.000 rule as amended by the 1983 Convention.

- Limiting varsity participation to three years of competition in the four-year period after the freshman year.

- Limiting a Division I-A institution to 26 initial and 104 total grants-in-aid in football and a Division I member to four initial and 16 total grants-in-aid in basketball, with the limits to include freshmen.

In other academic proposals, the Pacific-10 Conference is sponsoring Proposal No. 31, which would use only the last grade earned in a course that has been repeated at a junior college to calculate the junior college grade-point average for a junior college transfer.

Proposal No. 32, sponsored by 10 NCAA members, would permit the eligibility of a graduate or professional student for the time period set forth in Bylaw 4-1 (five-year rule) rather than limiting the period to within five years of initial enrollment in a collegiate institution.

The two remaining proposals (Nos. 33 and 34) deal with the 2.000 rule and are sponsored by eight members of the Pacific-10 Conference. No. 33 would permit exceptions to current legislation in Bylaw 5-1-(j) to allow outstanding high school students who enter a Division I member institution's early admissions program before high school graduation to be eligible for practice, competition and financial aid during their first year of residence. Such students would be required to have a high school GPA of at least 3.500 and be ranked in the top 20 percent of their high school class.

No. 34 would apply the same exception to the Bylaw 5-1-(j) provisions that will become effective August 1, 1986.

of football and basketball. In doing so, members of Division I recognize the difference between national and regional objectives in support in football, and, therefore, the division provides competition in that sport at two different levels, Division I-AA and Division I-AA.

4. A member of Division I believes in scheduling its athletics competition with other members of Division I, especially in the emphasized, spectator-oriented sports, as a reflection of its goal of maintaining an appropriate level of excellence in its sports program.

5. A member of Division I finances its athletics program to a great extent from revenues generated by the athletics program itself and controlled by the institution.

6. While a member of Division I understands, respects and supports the desire of institutions in the other divisions occasionally to seek membership in Division I, it believes that such institutions should be required to meet, over a period of time, significant criteria for Division I membership in order to assure that such institutions agree and comply with the principles and program objectives reflected in this statement.

St. John's, Berry drop lawsuit

St. John's University (New York) and prospective student-athlete Walter Berry have decided to withdraw their lawsuit filed against the NCAA in Federal district court in Brooklyn, New York. In September, U.S. District Judge Charles P. Sifton refused to issue an injunction to permit Berry to compete in intercollegiate basketball this season at St. John's.

The plaintiffs filed suit shortly before the start of the academic year in an effort to have Berry declared eligible to compete at the Division I institution. The Division I Steering Committee had reviewed Berry's situation at its meetings in April and August and had determined that he would not be eligible to represent St. John's during the 1983-84 academic year.

Berry left high school in June 1982 without graduating and with a grade-point average below 2.000. In 1982-83, he accumulated 24 credits as a nonmatriculated student at St. John's and obtained a high school equivalency diploma under a St. John's program approved by the state of New York.

He did not take a General Education Development (GED) test for his diploma. Division I regulations require a score on the GED equivalent to a 2.000 high school grade-point average for initial eligibility for an entering freshman who did not graduate from high school.

Berry, who enrolled in San Jacinto, Texas, Junior College in September, indicated he did not wish to pursue the litigation because he did not intend to attend St. John's.
