Six selected as finalists for Today's Top Five

Five football players and a volleyball player who led her team to a National Collegiate Championship have been named fall finalists for the Today's Top Five awards, which will be presented at the NCAA honors luncheon during the Association's annual Convention in Dallas next January.

Dana Smith of the University of Southern California is the volleyball standout. Joining her are football players Doug Dawson, University of Texas, Austin; John Frank, Ohio State University; Terry Hoage, University of Georgia; Stefan Humphries, University of Michigan, and Steve Young, Brigham Young University.

Normally, five finalists are chosen. It was discovered, however, that winter-spring finalist Sue Walsh of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has one year of eligibility remaining. Student-athletes must be seniors during the current academic year to qualify.

Thus, six fall finalists were selected to bring the total to 10. Walsh automatically will be a finalist for the Today's Top Five awards next year.

All of the finalists were judged on their participation in sports during the 1982-83 academic year. Character, leadership, extracurricular activities and academic achievement also were considered.

Joining the six fall finalists are winter-spring nominees John Paxson, University of Notre Dame; Anne Donovan, Old Dominion University; Elizabeth Heiden, University of Vermont, and Randy Wittman, Indiana University, Bloomington.

Doug Dawson

A four-year starter on the Texas offensive line, Dawson was a unanimous preseason all-America selection.

He has earned all-Southwest Athletic Conference honors twice and is serving as a co-captain of the 1983 Longhorn squad.

A petroleum engineering major at Texas, Dawson maintained a 3.234 cumulative grade-point average and earned numerous academic honors. He was selected honorable mention on the academic all-America team chosen by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) and received the Marvin Wright Engineering-Athlete Award at the university.

An Endowed Presidential Scholarship recipient, Dawson has been involved with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and several campus honoraries, including Silver Spurs, Phi Eta Sigma and Pi Epsilon Tau. He also has been active in the Society of Petroleum Engineers and the Phi Gamma Delta social fraternity.

John Frank

The Ohio State tight end has averaged more than 11 yards per reception during his career. Frank holds all records for tight ends at the school and is fourth on the all-time pass-catching list. He was named all-Big Ten Conference, and the team captain has earned three varsity letters.

17 financial aid proposals to be considered

Editor's Note: This is the third article in a series on legislation to be considered at the 78th annual NCAA Convention. The topical grouping treated in this issue is financial aid. In the remaining issues of The NCAA News preceding the Convention, legislation in the following topical groups will be discussed: eligibility, championships, recruiting, membership and classification, amateurism, playing and practice seasons, personnel limitations, and general.

Among the 17 financial aid proposals to be considered at the 1984 NCAA Convention in Dallas is a proposed amendment that would give each division within the Association the authority to determine its own financial aid limitations by moving the current limitation on a grant-in-aid from the constitution to the bylaws.

Offered as Proposal No. 49, the legislation was a recommendation made by the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education during its 18-month NCAA-authorized study.

If approved, the NCAA Council-sponsored amendment would become effective immediately.

The select committee also agreed with the intent of Proposal No. 50, which would exempt up to $900 of the Pell Grant from the NCAA aid limitation. This would permit a student-athlete who receives a Pell

Committee developing guidelines to use if membership decides on drug testing

Although recognizing that testing of student-athletes is not a solution to any drug-use problems in college athletics, the NCAA Drug Education Committee is developing guidelines for use if the Association or member institutions decide to begin drug testing.

Recommendations for use at NCAA championships will be considered by the NCAA Council and Executive Committee in January. If adopted, testing of athletes at NCAA events could begin by the 1984 winter championships. A second set of guidelines, to be used at member institutions, also is being developed.

Committee Chair Carl S. Blyth of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, said the committee still believes that the primary emphasis should be on education, not testing.

"There still are too many technical, logistical, legal and economic uncertainties involved with drug testing," Blyth said, "because there still are no available testing procedures for the variety of drugs of interest that are quick, inexpensive, and of complete and consistent accuracy."

"Because of the high interest in NCAA involvement in drug testing and the public attention received by the subject, the committee believed that guidelines for a specific, well-designed and responsible program could be useful to the Association and its member institutions," he said.

The committee had opposed NCAA involvement in drug testing but recently reexamined its position. The new set of recommendations will suggest the following limitations on testing at NCAA championships:

1. The testing should be nonpunitive and informational only. Blyth noted that many college athletes also participate in competition sponsored by other agencies and should know what to expect in the way of drug test-

Charles Alan Wright sees 'signs of hope' in athletics

Editor's Note: Charles Alan Wright, professor of law at the University of Texas, Austin, and one of the nation's leading authorities on constitutional law, recently completed 10 years as a member of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, serving the past five years as chair of the committee. He also served on the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education, which recently submitted its report and recommendations on problems and abuses in college athletics. The NCAA News posed the following questions to Wright to obtain the views of one of the most articulate and objective observers of the current state of intercollegiate athletics. At his request, his answers are unbridged and unedited.

Q. From the standpoint of operating integrity and the welfare of the student-athlete, is college athletics in better or worse condition than it was 10 years ago?

A. My feeling is that things are not much changed from ten years ago. It is true now, as it was then, that conditions vary greatly among the institutions that belong to the NCAA, in terms both of operating integrity and the welfare of the student-athlete. In 1982 I was asked to speak on enforcement at the meeting the NCAA sponsored of chief executive officers. The meeting was divided, with the three divisions meeting separately. My friend Don Russell, the athletic director of my own alma mater, Wesleyan University, was in charge of the Division III meeting. He apologized for the fact that I had not been asked to repeat my remarks to his group, but said "In Division III we don't break the rules so we don't need to hear about enforcement."

Clearly that was an exaggeration. We have found violations by institutions from every division. At all levels of competition there are those who have not learned to treat triumph and disaster as "twin impostors." Even so, the temptation to cut corners on the rules and to exploit student-athletes is greater at Division I-A institutions with multi-million dollar budgets than it is in the more relaxed atmosphere of Division III. Fortunately many of the institutions with major programs have been able to resist those temptations.

I do not believe I am Pollyannaish in thinking that there are signs of hope. The new emphasis on academic standards evident at the 1983 Convention is encouraging. I thought that the very existence of the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education was a good omen and that its report has concrete suggestions for how to improve things.

Q. Do you believe that there are more, fewer or about the same number of rules violations and abuses in college athletics than when you began your service on the Committee on Infractions? Are there more or fewer major violations?

A. I am greatly dependent on hearsay in answering this question. All that I know about directly are those that have come before the Committee on Infractions and these must be only the tip of the iceberg. Several football

Analysis of NCAA, ACE governance proposals

Delegates to the 1984 NCAA Convention will consider three proposals dealing with involvement of institutional chief executive officers in the NCAA—Proposal No. 35, the American Council on Education's plan for a Board of Presidents; Proposal No. 36, the NCAA Council's plan for an NCAA Presidents' Commission, and Proposal No. 39, also sponsored by the NCAA Council, to require a minimum of six chief executive officers on the Council. Proposal No. 39 could be adopted either in addition to or instead of Proposal No. 35 or No. 36.

This analysis of the three proposals was prepared by the Special Committee on Governance Review and has been approved by the NCAA Administrative Committee.

Proposal No. 35 (ACE)	Proposal No. 36 (NCAA)	Proposal No. 39 (NCAA)
Intent
Creates 44-member Board of Presidents with authorities exceeding those of NCAA Convention as well as NCAA Council.	Creates 44-member NCAA Presidents' Commission with substantial authorities but not paralleling those of ACE proposal.	Creates no special organization of CEOs but requires minimum of six CEOs (minimum of two from each division) on NCAA Council.
Authority
May act on "matters that significantly affect academic standards, financial integrity or reputation of member institutions." Board itself would make that determination.	May review, comment upon or place any subject on any Council or Convention agenda; Commission can establish order of legislative proposals in Convention agenda.	In lieu of special authorities for a presidential panel, Council would attempt to enhance involvement of CEOs via their existing authorities and opportunities.
Enact by majority vote new bylaws, interpretations or resolutions, or constitutional provisions by two-thirds vote; suspend any Convention action; suspend any Council or Administrative Committee interpretation. Permits all of these actions apart from NCAA Convention; gives Board authority greater than NCAA Convention since Convention can only reverse Board by a two-thirds vote.	Affirms Convention as only authority for adopting or amending legislation.	Affirms Convention as only authority for adopting or amending legislation.
Board can call special Convention; no specified number on Board required for such action.	Commission can propose legislation directly to Convention and designate when it will be considered.	Council would establish order of legislative proposals in Convention agenda to facilitate CEO involvement.
No "enactments, amendments or suspensions" effective until next NCAA Convention (annual or special) has opportunity to overrule by two-thirds vote, and such vote shall be by roll call if the Board's Executive Committee requests. No provision for Convention voting by division.	Maintains right of member institutions to determine all legislation and preserves majority by division or full Convention as controlling vote, except for constitution where two-thirds majority necessary as currently required. Maintains federated approach on divided bylaw issues.	Maintains right of member institutions to determine all legislation; maintains current federated approach on divided bylaw issues.
Board to be superior to NCAA Council in interpretations, resolutions and Association policy.	Maintains role of Council as membership-elected policy-directing body between Conventions.	Maintains role of Council as membership-elected policy-directing body between Conventions.
Approve appointment of any new executive director; periodically evaluate executive director and staff.	Staff considerations remain the purview of the NCAA Executive Committee, with approval of the Council.	Staff considerations remain the purview of the NCAA Executive Committee, with approval of the Council.
Quorum and Voting
Majority of Board constitutes quorum; majority vote of Board required for action (except for constitution); no voting quorum or other requirements specified for Board divisions (i.e., Divisions I, II and III).	Majority of Commission or division subunit constitutes quorum; majority vote of commission or division subunit required for action.	Majority of Council or steering committee constitutes quorum for action. Council voting requirements are specified in legislation; majority required in steering committee.
Initial Nomination
Slate prepared by heads of five Washington-based higher education associations and three Council CEOs (one from each division). No provision for federated selection.	Slate prepared by Council-appointed ad hoc nominating committee (announced prior to 1984 Convention) of 12 CEOs (six Division I, three each Divisions II and III, with other composition specified); selection on federated basis.	CEOs to serve on Council nominated by NCAA Nominating Committee, with any NCAA member invited to submit nominations; also, nominations from floor at Convention. Selection on federated basis.
Composition
No guaranteed positions for women.	Minimum of three positions guaranteed for women.	Currently minimum of 12 women required on 44-member Council, 6-3-3 by division.
I-A conferences do not select their own representatives; no earmarking of at-large Division I positions.	Each I-A conference selects its own representative; at-large positions earmarked, one each for I-A, I-AA, I-Other; provides I-A majority among Division I members.
Does not permit man and woman from same conference to serve.	Permits man and woman from same conference to serve.	Man and woman from same conference permitted on Council.

coaches tell me that they think there are fewer violations than in the past, while a basketball coach I respect immensely tells me that he and most basketball coaches think there are more violations than ever. David Berst, the Director of Enforcement for the NCAA, has been quoted as saying that he thinks the incidence of violations remains fairly constant.

I do have a clear feeling that the number of major violations has declined. When I first went on the Infractions Committee we heard cases involving many thousands of dollars and other quite flagrant violations. Then we went through a period, which happily seems to be about ended, of faked transcripts, unearned credits, and other outrageous departures from academic integrity. Today the bulk of the Committee's work concerns excessive contacts, violations of the misnamed "tryout" rule, airplane tickets for student-athletes to return home for vacation, and similar matters that, while serious, are not of the dimension of the things we saw in earlier days. I do still worry, however, about how it is that so many student-athletes, often from impecunious backgrounds, manage to own Trans Ams.

Q. You have been quoted as saying that perhaps the most significant fact about the NCAA enforcement program has been the willingness to learn from experience and to make continual changes and improvements in that process. What would you cite as the most important improvements in the procedure in the past 10 years?

A. When I went on the Committee individuals named in allegations of violation were not present at our hearings unless the Committee specifically requested their presence or the institution brought them as representatives of it. Now any present or former institutional staff member, and also any prospective, present, or former student-athlete whose eligibility could be affected based on involvement in the alleged violation, has an absolute right to submit, either in writing or orally, any information the individual desires and also has the right to be present, and to have legal counsel, when the Committee considers allegations in which the individual is involved. The NCAA remains an organization of institutions and for the most part the institutions adequately represent the interests of persons named in allegations, but findings by the Committee on Infractions can have adverse effects on the eligibility, job prospects, and reputation of individuals. The procedures now in effect ensure that each person involved can speak for himself, if he wants to, and in this way be certain that the Committee was fully aware of his position.

The other major development is that the process has become more truly cooperative and less adversarial. The prehearing conference now provided for in § 12-(b)-(6) has been an important step in this direction, but changes in attitude both by the NCAA staff and by those who represent institutions have been as important as anything written in the Manual.

There has been one important development in enforcement that is outside of the committee hearing process with which I am familiar. The Operation Intercept and Big Brother programs seem to me to have worked extremely well. They not only reduce the number of violations but permit the staff to learn about a higher percentage of violations that do occur and to bring those violations to the Committee much more promptly than in the past.

Q. What additional changes would you propose in the enforcement procedure? How would you revise or improve the penalty structure?

Charles Alan Wright

A. If I knew of changes that would improve things further, I would have pushed the Committee to adopt them while I was still a member of the Committee. The membership of the Committee has changed considerably in the last three years. Only the new chairman, Frank Remington, was on the Committee before 1980, and three of the six members have joined the Committee in the last 14 months. I am sure that these new people will view the enforcement procedures with a fresh eye and will have constructive proposals for changes that were not noticed by those of us who had been accustomed to the way things always had been done in the past and who therefore were inclined to confound the familiar with the necessary.

The vexing subject of penalty structure has been on the agenda of the Committee at almost every meeting in the past and I am sure it will be there in the future. All of us recognize the problem in devising penalties that will be meaningful, that will deter future violations, that will punish those who broke the rules without needlessly penalizing others who were not party to violations, and that will not permanently cripple a school's athletic program. The Committee has made more use recently of show-cause orders against individuals as well as reduction in grants-in-aid as alternatives, or in addition, to the traditional probation with or without sanctions.

Q. What do you believe are the two or three greatest problems in college athletics today? Would you propose solutions to those problems?

A. I think the problems have been correctly identified in the report of the Select Committee. I had the privilege of serving on that Committee and I join fully in its proposals for change.

In particular, I think the single most important step that could be taken toward improvement would be to end freshman eligibility in football and basketball. It was extremely disappointing to me that the NCAA Council thought that this requires more study before it can be put on the agenda for debate at the Convention. I think that to go back to the time-tested procedure of not allowing freshmen to compete would do more than anything else could to make our football and basketball players students and not merely athletes.

There is, however, one matter not mentioned by the Select Committee that gives me great concern. I believe that rules must be obeyed. I do not feel that I properly can disobey a law because I think Congress or the legislature made a mistake in adopting it. Similarly I do not believe coaches and boosters can pick and choose which of the rules in the NCAA Manual they will follow. So long as a rule is on the books it must be obeyed and those who do not obey it must be disciplined.

It is because I feel this way that I have felt such deep concern for several years about the total lack of enforcement of Bylaw 2-2-(j) and (k). This is the rule that sets the date in November before which bowls are not to extend, and institutions are not to consider, "any formal or informal invitations, directly or indirectly, from any official or unofficial representative or agent" of a bowl. Every November that rule is flagrantly broken by almost every bowl except the Rose Bowl, which is exempt from the rule by virtue of Bylaw 2-2-(k)-(3). Anyone who doubts that this rule is routinely broken must also believe in Santa Claus and the tooth fairy. Yet the Infractions Committee has never found a violation of this rule. On the one occasion that an allegation of a violation of this provision was included in an official inquiry, the staff withdrew the allegation at the hearing.

The Infractions Committee is required to assess serious penalties for rule violations by high school seniors, often of no more than average intelligence. It is required to take action because of violations by boosters, ignorant of the rules or so drunk with power (or other substances) that they feel they can ignore the NCAA. It is required to make findings against coaches who have cut corners with the rules because they feel that their jobs, and thus their livelihood, depend on it.

I have more sympathy with all of these than I do with the people involved in violation of the bowl signing date. Here the culprits are the community leaders who serve on bowl committees, as well as university presidents, athletic directors, and members of faculty athletic committees. These violations are not inadvertent or out of ignorance. Perhaps it is because these violators are sophisticated and well-educated that they are able to hide their tracks so well that no evidence of these violations is ever found.

It is wholly immaterial to me whether there is a rule on when bowl invitations can be extended. So long as the rule is on the books, however, it must be enforced with the same vigor and determination as every other rule. I think the NCAA does a good job in controlling intercollegiate athletics and that it suffers much abuse from uninformed critics. I fear, however, that it casts a cloud on its credibility when it allows repeated, deliberate, and well-publicized violations of this Bylaw to go unchallenged.

Q. Do you believe that changes could be made in the NCAA itself—for example, in the organization's administration, structure or procedures—that might make it more effective in administering college athletics on a national basis?

A. I have never been a faculty representative nor served on the Council, so that my only feelings about this are based on the limited perspective I had from the vantage point of the Infractions Committee and what I heard from my colleagues on the Select Committee. I think the movement toward a federated structure, with greater autonomy for similarly situated institutions to govern their own affairs, has been a desirable thing and that the proposals of the Select Committee for further steps in this direction, and for a separate summer meeting of Division I-A, are good ideas. My guess is that experience will show that enlargement of the Council to 46 members was a major mistake. I fear that a Council that large cannot possibly be an effective deliberative body and thus inevitably will become in large measure a rubber stamp for the committees and the staff.

Q. Would greater involvement and control by college chief executive officers in athletics matters be beneficial for intercollegiate athletics?

A. Yes! Yes! A thousand times yes! This seems to me overwhelmingly important. It cannot help but produce beneficial results if the chief executive officers, who can see athletics as but a single part of a great educational enterprise rather than as an important end in itself, will take an active role in the governance of athletics. Proposition 48 is only the first fruit of such involvement and control.

The opportunity has always been present for institutional heads to determine what the position of the NCAA is to be. It is the institution that votes, and the chief executive officer can direct how that vote is to be cast. In the years I have been close to these matters at The University of Texas I know that first Neils Thompson and now Tom Morgan have always been punctilious about reviewing the Convention agenda with our president and taking instructions from the president on how to vote. Some chief executive officers are interested in athletics and take the time to familiarize themselves with the issues that are to be voted on. Many more should do so.

Q. The recommended plan of Harvard President Derek Bok and the American Council on Education's Committee on Division I Athletics is radically different from that of the select committee on which you served. What are your thoughts about these two approaches?

A. That question was put to me two months ago by our student newspaper. The next day it carried a large headline: "LAW PROFESSOR SAYS COUNCIL'S PROPOSAL 'INSANE'." I am embarrassed by that headline.

The Daily Texan quoted me accurately enough, and I said to its reporter only what I truly believed (and still believe). Even so, I have genuine respect for Derek Bok and would prefer not to have used so strong and emotive a word. If I had it to do over again, I would say only that the ACE plan is ill-conceived, misdirected, and seriously detrimental to both intercollegiate athletics and higher education. I made clear in my answer to the previous question that I think presidential involvement in and control of athletics is greatly to be desired. I think, however, that the primary focus of this involvement must be at the institutional level. In addition, the proposal of the Select Committee would give presidents as a group a collective voice in NCAA deliberations that would be quite constructive. But I feel that it would be a tragic mistake to give a small group of presidents even a suspensory veto over actions taken democratically by hundreds of institutions at a Convention.

Q. Do you have other comments regarding intercollegiate athletics that you would like to share with the NCAA membership from the perspective of your decade of service?

A. I have several. First, I think the membership is extremely fortunate in the extraordinarily high quality of the people on the staff. Bill Hunt and David Berst and those who work under them are people of great ability and dedication. What is even more important is that the people on the enforcement staff be, as they are, people of absolute integrity. Self-enforcement of rules, without subpoena power, in an area in which the stakes are high, is a fragile plant under the best of conditions. It would be totally impossible if the honesty and fairness of the staff were subject to legitimate question.

Second, membership on the Infractions Committee is both time-consuming and emotionally draining. It is also immensely rewarding. Those of us on the Committee see the pathological side of intercollegiate athletics. We see the cheating and the rulebreaking that sometimes occur. Even so, I have not been shaken in my view that athletics has an important and positive role to play in higher education or in my belief that the term "student-athlete" is not an oxymoron and that many young people derive great benefit from both their education and from their athletic participation.

Third, the essence of sports is fair competition, and this means that institutions must compete under the same rules both on and off the field. No one would dream of saying that State must play with only ten men on the field while Tech fields eleven or that one team will be allowed to block below the waist while the other is not. It seems to me just as important that in recruiting athletes and in providing benefits for them while they are enrolled, schools must be held to the same rules. That is why we must have an enforcement program and why it merits the increasingly large staff and budget that the membership has provided for it. This is money well spent.

It is quite apparent that there are abuses in college athletics and that there are violations of NCAA rules that go undetected. I think, however, that the enforcement process over the past ten years has become more effective in deterring violations and in detecting and penalizing those who do violate, while at the same time it has become even fairer than it was in the past to those who are suspected of violations.

Two proposals deal with maximum grants-in-aid in Division I men's sports and Division I-A football.

Proposal No. 60 would eliminate the overall limitation of 70 awards in Division I men's equivalency sports. Sponsors of the proposal are the Pacific-10 Conference and six members of the Big Ten Conference. The legislation would go into effect August 1, 1984.

Proposal No. 61 would establish a limit of 40 on the number of initial awards that may be made in any two-year period in Division I-A football and eliminate the limit of 30 initial awards in any one year and the limit of 95 total awards in football. The effective date would be August 1, 1985.

The seven members of the Southland Conference are sponsoring Proposal No. 62 to increase the maximum awards limitation from 75 to 80 in Division I-AA football and base the limitation on head count rather than equivalencies. The effective date would be August 1, 1984.

Conversely, all eight members of the Ohio Valley Conference are seeking a reduction of the maximum awards limitation in Division I-AA football from 75 to 70, continuing to base the limitation on equivalencies rather than head count.

This is the intent of Proposal No. 63, to become effective August 1, 1985.

Of the 11 remaining proposals, three have been considered at previous Conventions.

Proposal No. 57, sponsored by six Pacific-10 Conference institutions, seeks to exclude financial aid that is not based in any degree upon athletic ability from counting against an institution's maximum awards permitted in an "equivalency" sport.

All Pacific-10 Conference members are asking, in Proposal No. 58, that a maximum amount ($1,000) for tuition and fees be established in the equivalency computational method and that member institutions be permitted to subsidize any tuition over the amount without the subsidy being counted in the equivalency

Some teams just keep bowling 'em over

23 bowl repeaters

This season's major bowl lineup certainly looks familiar. Of the 32 bowl teams, 23 went bowling a year ago. Of the other nine, five have gone bowling at least once in the 1980s. And of the eight teams in the four big traditionals—Rose, Orange, Sugar and Cotton—four are repeaters to the Big Four: UCLA, Nebraska, Michigan and Georgia (Georgia for a fourth straight year).

Kentucky, Mississippi, Northern Illinois and Cal State Fullerton are the four that have not been to a bowl in the 1980s. Kentucky's last bowl trip came in 1976—to the Peach—but this is only its second bowl in 32 years. Mississippi is making its first bowl trip since 1971.

Northern Illinois and Cal State Fullerton, opponents in the California Bowl, have never been to a major bowl. This is only the 14th season of football at Fullerton. Northern Illinois was in Division II in 1965 when it went to the Mineral Water Bowl.

Although Miami (Florida) played in the Peach Bowl after the 1980 season, this is only its second bowl in the past 16 years. And Illinois was in the Liberty Bowl a year ago, but this is its first Rose Bowl in 20 years.

This is Alabama's 25th consecutive bowl trip—the first 24 under Paul "Bear" Bryant. That is an amazing feat. And this is Alabama's 37th bowl game—a record. Nebraska is next with its 15th straight bowl season—the last 11 under coach Tom Osborne (and the 20th in the 22-season Bob Devaney-Osborne era).

Penn State's bowl streak now is 13 seasons, all under Joe Paterno. Ohio State now has 12 straight bowl seasons, Pittsburgh nine, Michigan nine and Texas seven.

Of the 12 colleges that have made at least 20 bowl trips, seven are in the 1983 field:

*Repeater from 1982 bowl field.

North Carolina and Penn State are working on streaks of four bowl victories in four years. The record is six in six years, held by four teams.

Southeastern: seven bowl teams

The Southeastern Conference boasts seven bowl teams this season. That ties the record the SEC set in 1974 (the year before the Big Ten and Pacific-10 first allowed non-Rose Bowl teams to go bowling) and which it equaled in 1982.

Since 1975, the SEC has had 37 bowl teams, the Southwest 33, Big Eight 32, Big Ten 30, Pac-10 24, Atlantic Coast 22 and Western Athletic 12. A total of 53 teams came from the independent ranks, with a high of 10 in 1980 (seven this year).

On a percentage basis since 1975, the Big Eight leads at 44.4 percent (eight members times nine years is 72, divide 32 bowl trips by 72). Next is the SWC at 41.3 percent (it had eight members in 1975, in case you are figuring with us), then comes the SEC at 41.1 percent.

Rozier's records

Nebraska's Mike Rozier smashed two all-time Division I-A records and tied two more Saturday with that 205-yard game against Oklahoma, and that made him only the second player in history in any division to reach 2,000 yards rushing in a season (he had 2,148 in 12 games; Southern California's Marcus Allen 2,342 in 11 in 1981).

Rozier's average of 7.81 yards per carry this season broke the 7.63 by Billy Sims of Oklahoma in 1978 (his Heisman Trophy season) for rushers with at least 225 carries. Rozier's career average of 7.16 broke the 7.09 by Sims (1975-1979) for rushers with at least 500 carries. Also, Rozier's 29 touchdowns and 174 points equaled the records by Lydell Mitchell of Penn State in 1971.

In career yards, Rozier's final 4,780 ranks sixth; but among those with three-year careers (he played junior college football as a freshman), it is second only to the 5,259 by Herschel Walker, Georgia 1980-1982. (The final I-A story will be next week).

I-AA career leaders

Idaho's Ken Hobart dominates the picture in Division I-AA career total offense with a remarkable 11,127 rushing-passing yards over four seasons, resulting in 105 touchdowns. This is the 47th season of official NCAA national rankings, and in all that time, only one player in any division has surpassed Hobart. He is Portland State's Neil Lomax, with an incredible 13,345 yards from 1977 to 1980. Lomax was responsible for 120 touchdowns, including 106 TD passes.

Hobart ran for 1,827 yards during his career—a I-AA record for quarterbacks—and scored 26 TDs, while passing for 9,300 yards and 79 TDs.

He is a legitimate 4.5 for 40 yards and was state triple jump champion in high school. Only 5-10 and 155 then, he accepted a baseball scholarship at Lewis-Clark. When he grew to 6-1 and 180, he invited himself to football at Idaho against the advice of friends: "I got tired of hearing 'You can't.' How did they know?"

Columbia's John Witkowski reached third on the all-time I-AA career total offense list with 7,748 rushing-passing yards; but on the per-game list, he is second at 258.3 to Hobart's 252.9, because he played only 30 career games to Hobart's 44.

Witkowski, 6-2 and 200, is a B student in economics at Columbia where you need much perseverance to play football. The team must take a 100-block bus ride through Harlem to the tip of Manhattan for practice, and all games this season were on the road because a new stadium is being built. Witkowski is from the village of Lindenhurst on Long Island and has been playing quarterback since he was seven. His father, an ex-Marine, seldom misses a game.

Lafayette's Frank Novak, whose 6,439 yards ranks fourth on the six-year-old I-AA list, reached third in career passing efficiency at 133.1 (Hobart reached sixth at 130.2).

Mississippi Valley State's Jerry Rice heads the career receiving list, even though he is only a junior. His 198 catches already is the record, and his 3,011 yards is only 176 short of the record. He also has 23 TD catches, nine short of the record. Another season like 1983 and Rice will hold the all-time, all-divisions NCAA records for career catches, yards and TD catches.

Rice is 6-3 and 205 with 4.45 speed for 40 yards. He has rough, strong hands, the result of helping his father, a brick mason in Crawford, Mississippi. Rice does some of his best work after he catches the ball: "I'm always looking to turn it upfield and run over some people."

The I-AA record for career catches took a beating, as Princeton's Kevin Guthrie (a B student in engineering) finished with 193 catches. Columbia's Don Lewis (176) and his teammate Bill Reggio (170) also surpassed it.

Behind Rice in career receiving yards are some talented seniors—Tennessee State's Golden Tate 2,885, James Madison's Gary Clark 2,863, Guthrie 2,645, Florida A&M's Ray Alexander 2,608 and Northern Arizona's Pete Mandley 2,598.

In career rushing and scoring, McNeese State's Buford Jordan leads the list with 4,106 yards and 266 points, with Furman's Stanford Jennings right behind at 3,868 and 262.

Mandley set a I-AA record for career all-purpose running at 5,925. Rich Erenberg of Colgate was next at 5,695.

Nevada-Reno's Tony Zendejas, a cousin of the Arizona-Arizona State kicking brothers, not only is the most productive kicker in the family, he is the most productive in collegiate history. His 70 field goals—in just three seasons, please note—is an all-time, all-divisions NCAA record. And his 81.4 percent accuracy mark during his career is a I-AA record and just short of the all-divisions record.

I-AA season records

Erenberg set three I-AA season records—171.2 rushing yards per game, 203.7 all-purpose yards per game and 12.4 points per game. Willie Totten of Mississippi Valley State established a record in passing efficiency at 172.3 points. Rice set records for catches per game at 10.2 and receiving yards at 1,450. (See the statistics page for the other I-AA

Furman's Stanford Jennings finished the I-AA season among the rushing leaders with a 114.5 yards per game average national champions, individual and team).

Division III leaders

The career rushing leader in Division III among current seniors is Ripon's Tim White, a 5-7, 170-pounder from Beaver Dam, Wisconsin. He finished with 3,649 yards. Next at 3,341 is Luther's Larry Davis.

Duquesne's Pedro Bowman tops the juniors at 3,011 yards in career rushing, and Joe Dudek of Plymouth State leads the sophomores at 2,298. The season championship was won by Wagner's John Franco, who missed the last two games with an injury.

The career leader in passing yardage among current seniors is Marty Barrett of Buffalo, at 6,945 yards. In total offense, the leader is a junior, Bishop's David Parker, at 6,929 rushing-passing yards. Joe Shield of Trinity (Connecticut) is the season passing-efficiency champion at 149.1 points. The total-offense title went to Wheaton's Keith Bishop. Both are juniors. Mark Peterson, Nebraska Wesleyan sophomore who finished second, now has 4,371 yards in just two seasons.

Ripon's Jeff Szymczak is the career leader in receiving among seniors with 181 catches for 2,828 yards. (See statistics page for other season champions in III.)

Quotes of the week

Dean Nesmith, retiring after 46 years as head trainer at Kansas, was awarded the game ball after the Jayhawks' 37-27 victory over Missouri. It was the 475th consecutive football game for Nesmith, who has ministered to many all-America and Olympic athletes. A half century ago, Nesmith played for a Kansas team that beat Missouri, 27-0, on Thanksgiving Day, 1933, then boarded a train for Washington, D.C., and beat George Washington that Saturday, 7-0. Said Nesmith with a smile to Chuck Woodling of the Lawrence Journal-World: "Two shutouts in three days—we set coaching back 10 years." (Doug Vance, Kansas SID).

Noting that the goal posts had gone down after two season-ending victories in the Big Eight (at Kansas and Colorado), Colorado coach Bill McCartney quipped: "Geez, it doesn't take much to get them excited." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID).

Northeast Louisiana defensive end Garry Hines, who began his career on a 4-6-1 team in 1975 and after army service has seen the team go 16-6 the past two years: "It used to be, the seniors would say they were glad when the season was over. Now, we want to keep going as long as we can and get in the Division I-AA play-offs."

Northeast coach Pat Collins heading into the North Texas State game:

Keith Edwards of Vanderbilt has averaged 8.8 pass receptions per game to lead that category

"This will be a real blood-on-your-nose type of football game." (Final score: North Texas State 27, Northeast Louisiana 7.) (Bob Anderson, Northeast Louisiana SID)

Missouri offensive lineman Conrad Goode on bowl opportunities awaiting the Tigers: "I just want to go anywhere you can use Hawaiian Tropic (suntan lotion)."

Former Nebraska receiver Jerry List, who played on two national-championship teams and battled through a tough session of multiple sclerosis last summer: "Because of football, I have a lot of rings and watches. But this summer, I would have traded them all in just to walk around the block." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID)

Pat Viancourt came to Pittsburgh as a walk-on from Holy Name High School near Cleveland, where he played nose guard and kicked field goals and extra points. The coaches gave him some time but not much—the players the same. Few fans had ever heard of him until he kicked the field goal that beat Syracuse, 13-10. "I was apprehensive, but it went right through," he told Bob Smizik of the Pittsburgh Press. What followed was chaos. "I was on the bottom of a pile of about 2,000 guys," Viancourt said. It wasn't over. Viancourt kicked off to Harold Gayden, who returned it down the sideline. When he reached the Pitt 40, there was Viancourt, his high school nose guard experience coming to the fore. He made the tackle to end the game. In the dressing room, he was passed overhead by joyous players, a no-name no longer. (Jim O'Brien, Pittsburgh SID)

Matt Monger, starting middle linebacker at Oklahoma State who had a team-leading 17 tackles against Oklahoma, has a 3.600 GPA as a marketing major and serves on the athletic council. He was the only student on the search and screening committee for the new athletics director. Monger came as a walk-on from Miami, Oklahoma, and now he is fulfilling all his dreams. (Pat Quinn, Oklahoma State SID)

Texas A&I wide receiver Greg Hicks is never without his own cheering section. He has 12 brothers and sisters, he says, "and anywhere we play, there is at least one of them in the stands." His parents had 10 children and then adopted three more. Says Hicks, "My dad said, 'What's three more?'" (Fred Nuesch, Texas A&I SID)

California coach Joe Kapp, reminded that the Bears have not beaten UCLA since 1971, replied: "I know exactly why. They scored more points every time."

Division I Men's Cross Country

Zakarie Barie won the individual championship, and his UTEP teammates returned to the throne as the Miners won the NCAA Division I Men's Cross Country Championships November 21 at Lehigh University.

The Miners scored 108 points. Defending champion Wisconsin was second at 164, and Oregon was third at 171.

Barie, runner-up last year, broke to the front halfway through the 10,000-meter race and never gave up the lead. Iowa State's Yobes Ondieki was second, 21 seconds behind Barie. Wisconsin's John Fasker was third.

UTEP now has won seven of the past nine championships.

Proof of the balance among the teams and individuals in the meet is the fact that the Miners' 108 points is the third highest winning score in the 45-year history of the championships.

The Badgers of Wisconsin, with their home-grown crew of runners (all seven are from Wisconsin), trailed the Miners by only five points through the first four runners; but UTEP's Mathews Motshwarateu finished in the 47th spot, and Wisconsin's Mark Sisson finished 98th.

UTEP coach Larry Heidebrecht indicated before the season that Motshwarateu, the 1981 individual champion who missed last year with an injury, would be the key for the Miners this year.

Other scorers for the Miners included Gidamis Shahanga, eighth; Sam Ngatia, 23rd, and Mohamed Rutiganga, 29th.

Division I Women's Cross Country

Trailing by nine points after its first four runners crossed the finish line, Oregon used its fifth and sixth runners to claim the team title at the NCAA Division I Women's Cross Country Championships.

The meet was held November 21 at Lehigh University.

Only 12 points separated the top five teams. Oregon, with 95 points, emerged a three-point winner over Stanford.

North Carolina State (99) was third, Tennessee (103) was fourth and Wisconsin (107) was fifth.

Betty Springs, the 1981 champion from North Carolina State, was the individual winner. Her 16:30.7 time over the 5,000-meter course was 11 seconds off her own meet record. Iowa's Nan Doak was second.

Kathy Hayes led the Ducks with her third-place finish that represented a second place in team scoring.

After four finishers each, Stanford held a 50-59 edge over Oregon. The Ducks' Gretchen Nelson finished 36th, and the Ducks' nonscoring sixth runner finished 45th, pushing Stanford's fifth runner to 48th.

The other scorers for Oregon included Lisa Martin, 11th; Kim Roth, 13th, and Kim Ryan, 28th.

In a sidelight, two-time Division III women's champion Tori Neubauer from Wisconsin-LaCrosse had set a preseason personal goal of winning her division championship and finishing in the top 15 in Division I. After breaking the Division III meet record November 19, two days later she finished 11th, 30 seconds behind the winner, in the Division I meet.

Women's Soccer

North Carolina won its second straight NCAA Women's Soccer Championship with a 4-0 victory over George Mason November 21 at Central Florida University in Orlando.

April Heinrichs' two goals triggered the Tar Heels, who captured last year's inaugural NCAA championship with a 2-0 triumph over Central Florida. Heinrichs headed in a cross from Kathy Kelly at 36:02. Her unassisted goal at 75:03 started an 11-minute span that saw the Tar Heels slot three goals past Patriot goalkeeper Linda Hilbreath, breaking the game open.

Hilbreath had been tough to beat in the early going. In all, she faced 34 shots and registered 18 saves. Heinrichs' two goals equaled the tournament single-game record, and she set tournament records for most goals and points.

The contest marked the third meeting of the year between George Mason and North Carolina. The Tar Heels won the previous games, 5-0 and 2-1.

"I think right now there is a sense of relief that we won," said Tar Heel coach Anson Dorrance. "Coming into the final, we were in the position against George Mason of playing a team we already had beaten twice.

"I don't think we have an attitude of 'yes, we won,' but that we were able to fend them off three times. I was afraid we might take them lightly, but we didn't and played well enough to win."

Chris Taggart of third-place Massachusetts was named the tournament's outstanding all-around player. Lisa Gmitter, George Mason, was named outstanding offensive player, and Sue Cobb, North Carolina, was named outstanding defensive player.

The championship game was postponed one day. After Massachusetts' 1-0 victory over Connecticut in the third-place game, torrential rains and tornado warnings forced the delay.

Division I volleyball field has a familiar look

The 1983 NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Championship will not be held in the state of California, but it is doubtful the change of scenery will cause any new developments.

In all likelihood, Hawaii, along with three teams from California, will spend the weekend of December 17-19 in Lexington, Kentucky, determining the No. 1 team.

The tournament gets under way with first-round games December 2-4 at on-campus sites, followed by four regional tournaments December 8-11 that will determine the final-four participants.

More than half of the 28-team field has been determined, with champions from 14 conferences that are granted automatic qualification. The remaining teams and pairings will be announced early this week.

Although Hawaii is not in an automatic-qualifying conference, the defending champions should receive a berth. The No. 1 ranked Rainbow Wahines received a jolt when middle blocker Deitre Collins recently strained ligaments on her hitting hand. But Collins, last year's Broderick Award winner in volleyball, should be at full strength for the tournament.

The state of California will be well represented in the tournament. Automatic berths went to Pacific, champion of the Northern Pacific Athletic Conference, and UCLA, champion of the Western Collegiate Athletic Association. At-large berths were expected to be awarded to Southern California, San Diego State, Stanford, California, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo and California-Santa Barbara.

Southern California finished second in last year's championship in an exciting match in which the Rainbow Wahines came from two games down to win. San Diego State edged Stanford for third place last year.

Perhaps the biggest surprise in California is the emergence of UCLA. The Bruins have one of their youngest teams but have come together under coach Andy Banachoski, who led the 1981 UCLA team to second place in the championship.

There were several interesting matches among the teams battling for their respective conference championships. Northwestern rallied in the fifth game to upset Purdue for the Big Ten Conference championship and another trip to the play-offs. In the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference, Illinois State lost two games, rallied to tie things up and then had to hold on in the fifth game to edge Southwest Missouri State, 8-15, 8-15, 15-8, 15-1, 17-15, for the title.

In the Big East Conference, Providence earned its first trip to the play-offs by defeating Pittsburgh. Other automatic qualifiers making their first tournament appearances include Florida State, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference; Kentucky, Southeastern Conference, and Lamar, Southland Conference.

Western Michigan, the only undefeated team in the nation as of November 22 with a 28-0 record, assured itself of another tournament appearance by winning the Mid-American Athletic Conference title. Nebraska, which has won the Big Eight Conference title for the past eight years, also will be in the tournament field.

Other conference champions that received automatic qualification were North Carolina, Atlantic Coast Conference; Penn State, Atlantic 10 Conference; Brigham Young, High Country Athletic Conference, and Texas, Southwest Athletic Conference.

Eight newcomers are in the field for Division II volleyball play-offs

Assuming there is no substitute for experience, half of the teams in the 1983 NCAA Division II Women's Volleyball Championship field could be out of their class.

Eight of the tournament's 16 teams will be making their first appearances in the championship. The remaining teams have made at least one trip to the championship, and three have been to the final four.

Four regional tournaments of four teams each will be conducted December 2-3 at on-campus sites. The four winners will meet December 9-10 at Florida Southern to determine the national champion.

Although Portland State was ranked No. 1 and was the top seed in the tournament, the Vikings will have to survive the tough Northwest/North Central regional.

In their first match, the Vikings face No. 12 North Dakota State, which was in last year's tournament. The winner will play either California-Davis or Cal State Sacramento.

Fourth-ranked Cal State Sacramento, which will have the home-court advantage, placed fourth in last year's championship. California-Davis, ranked No. 8, had a 25-9 record and has been in the previous two tournaments.

The finalists in last year's championship match—Cal State Northridge and California-Riverside—could meet in the finals of the Southwest/South Central regional, but third-ranked Northridge must defeat No. 11 Central Missouri State, and seventh-ranked Riverside must get past fifth-ranked Cal Poly-Pomona. Given the experience factor, Northridge and Riverside should rate as favorites. Central Missouri State and Cal Poly-Pomona never have been in the championship. Riverside defeated Northridge in last year's championship final.

Two newcomers to the final four will come from the Great Lakes/Northeast and South/Atlantic regionals.

In the Great Lakes/Northeast regional, sixth-ranked Nebraska-Omaha has the home-court advantage and an edge in play-off experience over No. 18 New Haven. In the other half of the bracket, ninth-ranked Wright State plays its first tournament match against 10th-ranked Ferris State, which reached the finals of regional play last year. The survivor will be making its first final-four appearance.

The four teams in the South/Atlantic regional are newcomers to the championship. Second-ranked Air Force takes on Tampa, with the winner facing either Jacksonville or Mansfield.

The pairings for the 1983 NCAA Division II Women's Volleyball Championship (with records as of November 22 in parentheses) are: Portland State (30-5) vs. North Dakota State (43-18) at Cal State Sacramento; California-Davis (25-9) vs. Cal State Sacramento (29-5) at Cal State Sacramento; Wright State (38-11) vs. Ferris State (31-11) at Nebraska-Omaha; New Haven (29-8) vs. Nebraska-Omaha (52-6) at Nebraska-Omaha; Cal State Northridge (26-6) vs. Central Missouri State (46-7) at California-Riverside; California-Riverside (21-10) vs. Cal Poly-Pomona (23-7) at California-Riverside; Jacksonville (34-8) vs. Mansfield (43-5) at Jacksonville; Tampa (31-11) vs. Air Force (41-10) at Jacksonville.

Men's Water Polo

Tournament favorite California held on to its No. 1 ranking and won the 1983 NCAA Men's Water Polo Championship with a 10-7 victory over Southern California.

The Bears also defeated Slippery Rock and Long Beach State during the tournament, played November 26-27 in Long Beach, California. It was California's fifth NCAA men's water polo title but the first since 1977. Long Beach State defeated California-Irvine, 9-6, to capture third place.

California, which finished the season 29-3-2, led 7-2 at half time in the final game. All-America Alan Gresham had four goals; teammate Peter Cutino Jr., bothered by injuries much of the season, scored five times. The Bears won 11 straight games after Cutino rejoined the team late in the season.

Southern California (22-8-1) was led by Kile Harding's two goals.

This may have been the last water polo championship because few NCAA member institutions sponsor the sport. Legislation that will be considered at the 1984 annual Convention, however, could save the event.

Gresham, Cutino and Jeff Campbell of California-Irvine shared most outstanding player honors. Other members of the all-tournament team were: Dan O'Connell, Loyola (Illinois); Mike Spicer, Southern California; Jim Birdsell, Long Beach State; Mike Evans, California-Irvine, and Shaun Cleary, California.

Proposal No. 51, which previously has been submitted to a Convention, would permit an incoming student-athlete to receive financial aid during the summer term prior to the student's freshman year. This proposal is sponsored by seven Big Ten Conference institutions.

Also pertaining to summer school is Proposal No. 56, sponsored by all members of the Pacific-10 Conference. It would authorize the Council to grant exceptions to institutions that cut short their summer terms to allow use of their facilities for the Olympic Games, permitting the institutions to provide financial aid to continuing student-athletes to attend summer school at other institutions.

Eight member institutions, ranging from the University of California, Berkeley, to the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, are asking in Proposal No. 65 that a woman student-athlete who is counted in the

2. The testing should be done by a single laboratory at an NCAA member institution. Although there have been invitations to participate in other testing programs, the committee believes this should be an NCAA project.

3. If testing at championships is desirable, it should be started immediately. A sample of approximately 1,000 athletes would be tested at 1984 winter and spring championships in sports in which Olympic competition has not been completed. The sample would include the top two or three place finishers from men's and women's individual-team championships and 10 to 15 participants from the top two finishers in team championships. Seventy percent of those tested would be from Division I. If the program is continued, the committee urges that it be expanded to include all sports, particularly football.

Women's basketball spotlight scheduled

The second annual Spotlight on Women's Basketball will be held December 14 at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles, California.

Seven of the nation's top players and five coaches from highly ranked women's basketball teams will speak at the press conference and luncheon, which is used to promote the women's college basketball season, the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship and the Olympic team.

Three players from last year's NCAA champion Southern California—Pam McGee, Paula McGee and Cheryl Miller—will attend, along with Trojan coach Linda Sharp.

Other players scheduled to appear are Janice Lawrence of Louisiana Tech, Janet Harris of Georgia, Annette Smith of Texas and Tanya Haave of Tennessee.

Coaches who will speak at the press conference are Sonja Hogg (Louisiana Tech), Andy Landers (Georgia), Jody Conradt (Texas) and Pat Head Summitt (Tennessee). Summitt is coach of the 1984 women's Olympic team.

The press conference is scheduled for 11 a.m. December 14, followed by individual interviews at noon and the luncheon at 12:30 p.m.

More than 100 members of the media will be invited to attend this second focus on women's basketball. Last year's spotlight was held in New York City.

maximum awards limitations and practices or competes in field hockey and one or more other sports (other than basketball or volleyball) be counted in field hockey.

Proposal No. 64 seeks to amend Bylaw 6-5 of the NCAA Manual to remove the permitted 20 grants-in-aid in men's ice hockey from the overall limit of 70 in equivalency sports in Division I. No. 64 is sponsored by eight members of the Big Ten Conference.

All members of the Big Ten Conference are sponsoring Proposal No. 59 to establish a method of having equivalency calculations based on in-state tuition and fees, on-campus room and board, and books—utilizing a total dollar value.

Eight members of the Big Ten Conference also are asking that an undergraduate student-athlete be allowed a maximum of five years of financial aid in a six-year period. This is the intent of Proposal No. 53.

Six member institutions, representing five conferences, are sponsoring

Proposal No. 55, which would exempt from financial aid limitations the money received by student-athletes (at a rate normally paid by the institution) from officiating intramural contests at the student's institution.

Sponsored by the NCAA Council, Proposal No. 52 would exclude the costs of room and board in the athletic dormitory from the averaged board and room expenses of on-campus students in determining the board and room allowance for a student-athlete living off campus.

All nine members of the Western Athletic Conference are sponsoring Proposal No. 54 to allow a student-athlete to receive an established financial aid award, based on past academic and athletic performances, so long as the award does not limit the choice of institution, is disbursed through the student's institution, is not representative of any athletics interests of a member institution and is limited to one $1,000 award for one academic year.

Wisconsin placed on probation

The University of Wisconsin, Madison, has been placed on probation for one year by the NCAA Committee on Infractions, primarily as a result of a recruiting violation in the institution's intercollegiate football program.

The penalty includes television sanctions that will preclude the university's football team from appearing on any NCAA-controlled television program or on any other "live" football telecast during the 1984 regular season. The penalty will not affect postseason play, and the university remains eligible for post-season competition.

Also, in accordance with the show-cause provision of the NCAA penalty structure, the university will preclude one outside athletic representative from assisting the university's football program in summer employment and recruiting activities during the probationary period.

In addition, the eligibility of one football team member was affected in the case as a result of his involvement in a recruiting violation, it being understood that the university may appeal to the NCAA Eligibility Committee for restoration of eligibility if the university believes such an appeal to be appropriate.

"The primary issue for the Committee on Infractions in this case," said Thomas J. Niland, Le Moyne College, acting chair of the committee, "was to review arrangements that resulted in improper airline transportation for two prospective student-athletes in football when they traveled to the university to enroll in January 1983. Ultimately, the committee determined that the transportation was provided at the expense of an athletic representative and that the football recruiting coordinator advised the young men to contact this representative regarding transportation."

Niland noted: "Two additional violations were found in the case, one in basketball and the other in tennis. Neither of these violations, however, was considered to be a significant factor in the consideration of a penalty in this case."

"In arriving at an appropriate institutional penalty," Niland stated, "the committee was concerned that in 1981, the university was placed on probation for one year for violations in football, including a violation involving improper airline transportation for a prospect; and in 1982, the university was publicly reprimanded for violations in basketball. Accordingly, the committee believed its penalty in this case was fully justified."

The violations involved ethical conduct, recruiting inducements, transportation and the NCAA's tryout regulation.

Beginning with the 1985-86 academic year, Division II basketball-playing institutions will be required to schedule a minimum of 18 contests against Division I and/or Division II opponents to be eligible for consideration for the Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

The NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Committee earlier had recommended this change for the 1984-85 academic year. However, the NCAA Executive Committee delayed implementation for one year.
