Today's Top Five award winners selected

Three National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame scholar-athletes, an academic all-America selection with medical-school aspirations, and a three-sport standout who has won an NCAA cross country skiing title have been named recipients of the Association's Today's Top Five awards.

The student-athletes selected are tight end John Frank, Ohio State University; three-sport star Elizabeth Heiden, University of Vermont; defensive back Terry Hoage, University of Georgia; offensive lineman Stefan Humphries, University of Michigan, and quarterback Steve Young, Brigham Young University.

These current student-athletes will join five former varsity letter winners who will receive Silver Anniversary awards to become the College Athletics Top Ten for 1983. The Silver Anniversary winners will be announced in the December 21 issue of The NCAA News.

The awards will be presented at the 19th annual NCAA honors luncheon, to be held January 9, 1984, in conjunction with the NCAA Convention. CBS news correspondent Charles Kuralt will serve as master of ceremonies for the event.

The Today's Top Five awards are presented to student-athletes who have achieved athletic success, shown leadership qualities and displayed academic prowess. Only seniors from the current calendar year are eligible.

John Frank

The Ohio State tight end has averaged more than 11 yards per reception during his career. Frank holds all records for tight ends at the school and is fourth on the all-time pass-catching list. He was named all-Big Ten Conference, and the team captain has earned three varsity letters.

Frank is one of three National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame (NFFHF) scholar-athletes among the winners. He maintained a 3.820 grade-point average with a chemistry/premedicine major. Twice named CoSIDA academic all-America, Frank also has received the John Galbreath Outstanding Student Award and the Ohio State Scholar-Athlete Award.

He has been active in the Big Brothers of America volunteer program, the Sphinx service organization, and the Bucket and Dipper and Romophos campus service organizations.

Frank has served as a research assistant at Ohio State for three years and has coauthored a published medical-research paper.

Terry Hoage

The 1982 NCAA leader in pass interceptions (12), Hoage is a two-time consensus all-America selection.

NCAA Award of Valor will go to Joe Delaney

Joseph Alton Delaney, a former all-America performer in football and track at Northwestern State University (Louisiana) who died last June 29 while trying to save three youngsters from a rain-swollen water hole, is this year's recipient of the NCAA Award of Valor.

Delaney, who was a budding star with the Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League, will be recognized January 9 at the NCAA honors luncheon in Dallas, held in conjunction with the NCAA Convention. Delaney's widow, Carolyn, will accept the award, the first Award of Valor made posthumously.

According to newspaper accounts, Delaney's love for children had led to his driving a group of neighborhood youngsters to Monroe, Louisiana, from his home in Houghton for a "Kids Day" event sponsored by a local television station.

While at the park in Monroe, Delaney responded to cries for help from three youths who were floundering in a water hole left by recent construction work. The 24-year-old rushed to their aid and died trying to rescue them. Only one of the three boys was able to make it to shore.

Delaney was recovered from the water hole after the two youths who drowned, and attempts to revive him were unsuccessful.

Delaney twice was named all-America in football while attending Northwestern State, and he also earned all-America recognition as a sprinter. He earned four varsity letters in football and three in track and was in the process of completing the requirements for his undergraduate degree at the time of his death.

Delaney played in 15 games in the NFL, spanning the 1981 and 1982 seasons. His 1,121 yards in 1981 ranked as the seventh highest total for a rookie in NFL history.

He was selected to the 1981 Pro Bowl after setting Chiefs' records for most yards in a season (1,121), most yards in a game (193 vs. Houston), most consecutive 100-yard-plus games (three) and most 100-yard games in a season (five). He averaged 4.6 yards per carry and 9.1 yards per reception during his brief career.

The NCAA Award of Valor is not awarded automatically on an annual basis. The award may be presented to a coach or administrator currently associated with intercollegiate athletics or a current or former varsity letter winner at an NCAA institution who, when confronted with a situation involving personal danger, averted or minimized potential disaster by courageous action or noteworthy bravery.

Previous award winners have included Timothy J. McCarthy, a graduate of the University of Illinois, Champaign, and member of President Ronald Reagan's security staff, 1982; Dwayne A. Wright, a former baseball player at St. Mary's College (California), 1977; Charles G. (Lefty) Driesell, a graduate of Duke University and head basketball coach at the University of Maryland, College Park, 1974, and the 1973 Ursinus College basketball team.

Legislative proposals aimed at expanding championships

Editor's Note: This is the fifth article in a series on legislation to be considered at the 78th annual NCAA Convention. The topical grouping treated in this issue is championships. In the remaining issues of The NCAA News preceding the Convention, legislation in the following topical groups will be discussed: recruiting, membership and classification, amateurism, playing and practice seasons, personnel limitations, and general.

Proposals to modify the requirements for establishing and maintaining NCAA championships are among 14 championships legislative proposals to be voted on by delegates to the 1984 NCAA Convention.

Other proposals in this category deal with specific championships in the various divisions, including the establishment of men's and women's indoor track championships in Divisions II and III and a men's ice hockey championship in Division III.

Proposal No. 80, the first in the championships package, seeks to permit women's championships in sports that had no NCAA championships prior to 1979-80 to be organized before 1986-87 in accordance with Executive Regulation 1-1-(a) rather than Executive Regulation 1-1-(b). This action would lower the sponsorship requirement to seven percent of the Association's membership to establish a National Collegiate Championship and 20 percent of a division's membership to establish a championship within that division. Executive Regulation 1-1-(b) requires 25 percent sponsorship in either situation.

The proposal is sponsored by 29 member institutions and carries an immediate effective date.

Proposal No. 81, sponsored by 15 institutions, would apply the provisions of Executive Regulation 1-1-(a) (seven percent and 20 percent) to all championships established prior to 1982-83 and would apply the provisions of Executive Regulation

1-1-(b) to all championships instituted in 1982-83 or after. The effective date would be immediate.

Going a step further in modifying championship requirements, Proposal No. 82 would exempt any current championship in an Olympic sport established prior to 1982-83 from the sponsorship requirements of Executive Regulations 1-1-(a) and 1-1-(b) so long as other championship

Majority should act on television matters . . .

By Wayne Duke

The central issues concerning the present struggle over college football television controls too often have been obscured by emotional rhetoric and diversionary, ad hominem references to some of the personalities involved. The real issues are these:

1. Are five to 10 major universities going to dictate national college football television policies for the 104 football-playing members of NCAA Division I-A?

2. Are the financial and publicity windfalls from national- and regional-television exposures going to be distributed reasonably among major football institutions so that the exciting competitive balance that is a part of college football today won't be eroded, or are the powerful few to become even more powerful?

Please bear in mind that national and regional television contains two critical ingredients that constitute the lifeblood of major college football—money to finance the program and publicity to enhance recruiting.

Those who believe that college football controls should be determined through the College Football Association or a "coalition" essentially are arguing that national football television policy be determined by a handful of institutions; i.e., five to 10. This procedure enables that handful of institutions of television significance to dictate the terms of the plan they want, or they can refuse to participate in the voluntary CFA or coalition effort.

The point to remember is that neither the CFA nor a "coalition" has any binding authority or disciplinary tools to enforce observance of a national television policy and, consequently, an agreed-upon policy can only be obtained if the few most powerful institutions agree and contractually commit to it. Any "voluntary" plan pursued through the CFA and coalition can only be operative if it meets the demands of the most powerful few.

It would be like trying to control recruiting through a voluntary "coalition" effort. In the early years, there were many "handshakes" and commitments to honor among coaches and administrators on how they would conduct their recruiting, and the record is replete with evidence that "voluntaryism" in an activity so vital as recruiting is ineffective. The same will be true if voluntaryism is attempted in television.

For those who believe that national football television policies should be determined by a majority of Division I-A—that is, 53 of the 104 members—then they should pursue their television objectives through the NCAA. In the NCAA, there is an existing organization with authority and power to enforce the rules adopted by the membership, and the powerful few who may wish to shape the policy to their own desires and needs must conform to the vote of the majority.

Quite frankly, I firmly believe that all 104 members of I-A have a vital equity in college football television controls and that surely a minimum of 53 should be satisfied as to the welfare of college football before television rules are imposed by a handful.

Further, I think it is wrong for those institutions that can roll up "megabucks" through football television to ignore the responsibilities they owe to the game itself and the great traditions that their predecessors have contributed to making college football the all-American game it is. The powerful do owe an obligation to the less powerful.

The one thing that I do not understand is how a number of major college football administrators believe that professional football has done a great job in marketing its program on television, but at the same time seem to ignore the fact that professional football does many, many things to try to maintain competitive balance within its leagues so the pro game will be exciting. What is to be gained in the long run by making the powerful more powerful in college football so that we have less balance and fewer good, competitive games?

Please bear in mind that in Division

I-A, the policies on grants-in-aid, coaching limits and like football matters are determined by a majority vote of the members. The members of the College Football Association, Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences represent 81 or 77 percent of the institutions in I-A. Thus, these groups of institutions can have their way in Division I-A if they are united in their pursuits.

The so-called "majors" control Division I-A, but, I repeat, the reason that some powerful institutions want television policy outside of Division I-A is so that they (again, five to 10 of them) can dictate the policy they want to pursue.

Most everyone seemingly has an opinion about football television ratings. Some think there is an oversaturation of football, and sports, on television. Others insist that a relaxation to four a year as to the appearance requirements in the NCAA television plan (i.e., permit networks to select an institution four times each year) would attract more viewers. As long as there is no central scheduling authority to arbitrarily dictate the matchup of the best teams for college football—as there is for professional football—college ratings are not going to change dramatically. For that matter, what's wrong with the situation? We have great in-stadium interest and similar television interest. The networks and TV packagers want to buy the product. It's a great blend.

The United States Supreme Court will determine this winter if the NCAA can continue to administer football television on behalf of its membership. I hope the Supreme Court decides in the NCAA's favor.

If national controls are no longer permissible through the NCAA, it is my personal view that there will not be unity in the development of a CFA or coalition package for the reasons I stated earlier in this article. In my view, the Big Ten Conference will have a choice of either developing its own offering for television or possibly cooperating in some kind of inter-regional plan with Eastern institutions and the Pac-10 Conference. Possibly Notre Dame and Penn State would be interested in joining in this effort. I suspect, however, that such negotiations will fail for the same reasons that "a coalition" will not work, and the Big Ten Conference will have to make its own offering to television entrepreneurs.

We are indeed fortunate because of Big Ten tradition, the great following of our institutions, their large student and alumni support, the competitive balance we have in the conference, and the fact that we are located in a very populous part of the United States. The Big Ten Conference will do well in whatever television climate finally exists. Sometimes, I wonder if the detractors of the present NCAA plan overestimate the salability of their products in an open market. If there is a free market, I hope they have not made a mistake of judgment, because there are only a few conferences and a few institutions that will do as well in the open market as they do under the present NCAA plan. I believe the Big Ten Conference is one of those few.

. . . although some members of CFA disagree

By Eugene F. Corrigan

To understand all that's going on with the courts and the current NCAA television situation, it is necessary to have an understanding of the individuals involved and the items about which they are arguing.

The Cast

•The NCAA: A monolithic grouping of institutions put together to administer intercollegiate athletics. It's a voluntary organization made up of three competitive divisions, eight geographic districts and 800 members.

•Division I: Subdivided into Division I-A football (larger schools with big stadiums and $5 million to $10 million budgets), I-AA football (not as big in stadium size or budget, but includes Ivy League) and Division I-other (they don't play Division I football, but they play basketball and are eligible to play in the NCAA tournament).

•Division II: Not divided, not rich, more homogeneous, inclined to let Division I-A members do what they want.

•Division III: Not divided, mostly private schools, no athletic scholarships, less pressure on coaches, few if any rules violations, not great media hype, couldn't care less what Division I-A does.

•The CFA: A Division I-A grouping of 60 collegiate institutions formed out of frustration because of the lack of satisfaction with the NCAA on such diverse issues as academic standards, limitations on numbers of football coaches and scholarships, recruiting rules, and reorganization of the NCAA. The membership includes the Big Eight, ACC, SEC, SWC, WAC and 17 major independents—all members in good standing in the NCAA. (The Big Ten and Pac-10 have refused membership, although they were in on the early planning of the CFA.)

•Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA: A very bright, tough-minded man who has been at his job for 30 years (roughly the same length of time the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh has been running Notre Dame). He's sometimes known as the czar of intercollegiate athletics, sometimes as a heavy-handed autocrat. He's a brilliant negotiator, and he believes that college football television is the business of the NCAA—which puts him in conflict with . . .

•Chuck Neinas, executive director of the CFA: Also a very bright, tough-minded man who once worked for Walter Byers and, more recently, was commissioner of the Big Eight Conference. He has been at his job for four years, during which time he has coordinated CFA efforts to propose some new and change some old NCAA legislation.

The Issues

•Football television: Controlled by the total membership, which votes on the plan each time it is negotiated by Byers and the NCAA Football Television Committee. The latest plan set off a furor because it was for four years rather than two, and it included guaranteed appearances for members of Division I-AA, Division II and Division III, including their championships. All of this is complicated by the facts that CFA members were receiving a smaller slice of the pie and the Nielsen ratings for NCAA football steadily have fallen for the last four years.

•Reorganization: A burning issue that has been addressed by the NCAA membership on several occasions, but not in any way satisfactorily until the recent I-A/I-AA/I-other split. Most of the major schools (I-A) want to be able to meet and discuss legislation that affects their multi-million-dollar programs. The latest attempt came close, and there is still a chance that it might all work out.

•The lawsuit: Oklahoma and Georgia, with support of most—but not all—members of the CFA, took the NCAA to task over whether it could control the in-season television rights to college football. The original point in question was whether the NCAA had the authority to do other than 1) make rules for the conduct of play in all sponsored sports, 2) legislate rules for the conduct of athletics programs (recruiting, eligibility, academic standards, competitive seasons, satisfactory progress, certification, etc.) and 3) conduct championships. Most, if not all, of the CFA members refused to vote for the present television plan; and because many of the CFA schools were those most desired by the networks, they felt disenfranchised by the fact they were overwhelmingly defeated by the rest of the membership. At this point, the CFA organized its own television plan and offered it to the networks, one of which agreed to its provisions. At a meeting in Atlanta in August 1981, the CFA, in a split vote, tentatively accepted the plan. On a later, final vote, only a few actually went along with it for fear the NCAA would take sanctions against them—sanctions that would include keeping them out of NCAA championships in all other sports. At this point, it became Oklahoma and Georgia vs. the NCAA.

In the first trial, Judge Juan Burciaga ruled in favor of Oklahoma and Georgia, saying in effect the NCAA did not have the right to control what is owned by the schools, namely their television rights. Burciaga, a West Point graduate, went a step further and said the NCAA was in violation of antitrust laws.

The NCAA appealed to the 10th Circuit Court in Denver, which basically upheld Burciaga's decision but suggested that Burciaga might have been too tough on the antitrust issue.

The NCAA then asked the Supreme Court to hear the case, which it decided to do—and thus a decision has been delayed for at least eight months.

Where do I come down on all this? As a personal preference, I would hope:

1. The NCAA gets out of the in-season football television business.
2. We all stay in the NCAA and live happily ever after.
3. The major schools develop a package for a particular time period each Saturday for sale to the networks.
4. This coalition will lend financial support to the NCAA.
5. All conferences and independents have a time period when they can televise in their own geographic

Two presidents differ on CEO involvement

The Chronicle of Higher Education, in its issue dated December 14, presented in its opinion section the viewpoints of two presidents regarding plans for greater CEO involvement in the NCAA that will be voted upon at the 1984 NCAA Convention.

Derek C. Bok, president of Harvard University and chair of the American Council on Education's Committee on Division I Intercollegiate Athletics, submitted an article supporting the ACE's proposal to create a Board of Presidents within the NCAA, which appears as Proposal No. 35 in the Official Notice of the 1984 Convention.

The Chronicle requested a counter opinion, and Arliss L. Roaden, president of Tennessee Technological University and a member of the NCAA Council and the Special NCAA Committee on Governance Review, provided the Chronicle with an article in support of the NCAA Council's approach to more meaningful CEO involvement—creating an NCAA Presidents' Commission (Proposal No. 36) and assuring a minimum of six CEOs on the NCAA Council itself (Proposal No. 39).

Bok's article argues that a body of presidents within the NCAA would be ineffective if it did not have the power to enact rules that would be binding on the NCAA member institutions if they were not overridden by at least a two-thirds vote of all members at the next NCAA Convention.

Roaden's statement, meanwhile, notes that CEOs already have the authority to control the NCAA, and that the existing authority should be enhanced by developing a highly influential presidential commission while maintaining the present voting authority of member institutions.

Bok, president of Harvard since 1971, served as assistant professor of law and then dean of the law school at Harvard before assuming the presidency. His juris doctorate is from Harvard Law School. He was a Fulbright scholar.

Roaden, president of Tennessee Tech since 1974, has attended 10 NCAA Conventions. Prior to becoming president of Tennessee Tech, he served 12 years at Ohio State University as a professor, vice-provost for research and dean of the graduate school. He previously was a faculty member at Auburn University and Indiana University, Bloomington. He earned his doctorate at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

Following are excerpts from the two articles:

President Bok

"If colleges have teams in which the vast majority of players never graduate, let alone take a serious academic course load, and if they pay these players thousands of dollars each year for room, board and incidentals, then their teams are semi-professional in everything but name."

"If some institutions choose to ignore admissions standards for athletes and are indifferent to whether their athletes ever graduate, other colleges will find it hard to compete with them on the playing field. In a world in which television revenues are so lucrative, alumni and legislators care so much about winning, and gate receipts are so important in meeting athletic costs, many institutions will find it very hard to maintain reasonable academic standards if their competitors refuse to do likewise."

"... a body of presidents can continue to be effective and achieve legitimacy only if members are chosen by their peers and armed with at least minimum powers to establish rules to safeguard academic standards."

"The Board would have nothing to do with purely athletic matters; its authority would extend only to important policy issues significantly affecting the academic standards, financial integrity or reputation of the member institutions."

"... the Board could propose new bylaws or suspend existing rules. Such actions would stand unless overruled by two-thirds vote of the NCAA Convention."

"... the Board proposed in Proposition 35 would be clearly determined by the member presidents, while the composition of the NCAA Commission would be subject to greater influence from established interests within the NCAA."

"Proposition 35... would give the Board at least a limited authority to act in defense of academic values and other important institutional concerns."

"Individual presidents are extremely busy. Even if they can spare the time to attend a Convention, they have no reason to believe that their presence will make a difference. Since most proposals coming before the Convention are technical and involve matters of purely athletic significance, few chief executives take the time to study the proposals with care or to instruct their representatives how to vote. As a result, most decisions at NCAA Conventions reflect the wishes of coaches, athletic directors and faculty athletic representatives rather than the will of the presidents."

"Recognizing the problems that have beset intercollegiate athletics in the past and the serious difficulties that still persist, are we content to leave all responsibility and power in the hands of the traditional groups and organizations within the NCAA? Or do we wish to insist on a new, representative body of presidents, with limited power to create common safeguards to protect the academic standards, financial integrity and reputations of our institutions? It is for college presidents to choose, for we instruct our delegates to the NCAA Convention how to vote on Proposition 35."

President Roaden

"I strongly favor the approach of the NCAA's Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education, and I am equally opposed to the approach of the American Council on Education's Committee on Division I Intercollegiate Athletics. Thus, I argue for support of Proposal Nos. 36 and 39, since they embellish and perfect the concept advanced by the select committee."

"The NCAA proposals do not create a presidential "advisory committee," as frequently alleged by the ACE proponents. The NCAA proposals create a highly influential presidential commission that has authority to place specific items on the NCAA Council agenda, place specific items on the agenda of the annual Convention and determine the order of agenda items at the annual Convention (so that chief executive officers can attend for a brief period of time and determine by their votes how those agenda items should be treated.)"

"Bear in mind that the present NCAA structure provides the opportunity for chief executive officers to control completely the NCAA apparatus. The fact that they haven't done so in the present circumstance indicates that they have not desired to do so. With the present procedures of the NCAA enabling CEOs to run the organization, and with the addition of the Presidents' Commission in a role of powerful direction and influence, then I think that clearly provides more than a fair opportunity for chief executive officers to work within the system and mold the NCAA in a different direction if, in fact, a majority of the CEOs wish to do so."

"Most importantly, the NCAA plan, as opposed to the ACE plan, keeps intact the present divisional structures of the Association and, particularly, does not obliterate the effectiveness of Division I-A, which the ACE plan does. . . . The ACE plan is ill-conceived and based on erroneous premises."

"The ACE plan is based on the premise that if the chief executive officer cannot attend the NCAA Convention, he cannot trust his appointed delegate to vote the official university position. This carries a highly disturbing inference. . . ."

"Another regrettable premise of the ACE plan is that the chief executive officer of Institution A should have more confidence in the decision-making capacity of the chief executive officer of Institution X (who serves on the ACE Board) than in the people who work for him at Institution A. Specifically, is the CEO of Institution X going to better represent Institution A than the employees of that institution?"

"The ACE committee argues that only chief executive officers are interested in higher academic quality. My experience is that faculty members are just as interested in demanding academic standards as chief executive officers, and in some cases more so."

"I become uneasy in thinking that the eligibility of athletes at 270 or so members of Division I will be determined by a small board in a closed meeting. . . . I am concerned about the 15-minute, Band-Aid approach inherent in the ACE concept."

Unflinching academics booster put to the test in Texas

By Blackie Sherrod
Dallas Times-Herald

Just recently a wealthy and recognized citizen of our town made some statewide recommendations that caused several little mushroom clouds to puff from the countryside.

As chairman of the governor's special education committee, Ross Perot had the temerity to suggest that high schools were primarily intended for educating youngsters and not for winning district football titles. Gracious, to some, Mr. Perot spit on the Alamo.

Now I wouldn't know Mr. Ross Perot if he walked into my back yard and ate one of my prize periwinkles, but he obviously isn't afraid to take a stand. Of course, if you and I had all those millions, we might talk back to a traffic cop, too.

Most of us haven't studied the Perot proposal in detail, but when he says educational demands for high school jocks should be toughened, I say bully for him. As we understand it, a high school athlete now must pass three of his five courses in order to participate and it seems to me that we are offering gravy trains. The last time I looked, roughly a century ago, we had to pass every course to play football or anything else. As I recall, there were four years of English and math required, two years of foreign language and two years of science, and four years of a combination of history, government, civics and whatnot. And a failing grade in any of these and you sat out for a year while you brought your grades up, or you joined forces with a wheelbarrow or hoe. Studying, in comparison, seemed less conducive to hand blisters and could be done in the shade.

Somehow over the years, these requirements have slackened until now a student must pass only three of five courses, and those courses do not necessarily have to be "basic." Mr. Perot wishes to raise requirements to four passing grades, and I do not see how any discerning citizen can object to this. We all know many schoolboy (and college) jocks do classroom work at the minimum. Raise the minimum, and he will somehow match it.

What Mr. Perot suggests is akin to Proposition 48, which has been adopted for the future by the NCAA. This new rule requires incoming jocks to show a C average in basic courses (English, math, science, etc.) before they qualify for college scholarships. What happened is that college presidents were embarrassed when some of their products showed up on teevee unable to grunt intelligibly,

A select committee on athletic problems-higher education [Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education], appointed by the NCAA, has just issued a report. It found, in part: "Academic standards for student-athletes should be more demanding than they are now. . . . Precollege education must be strengthened so that all students receive educational experiences necessary for success at the collegiate level. . . ."

There will be objections from those who say some football jocks will be discriminated against, that tougher requirements will prevent some youths from attending college and therefore qualifying for the livelihood of a professional footballer. The answer there, it seems to me, is that colleges weren't established to groom pro athletes. A pro jock should not be forced to attend college if he is not qualified. Let the football pros sign him out of high school, if they wish, and train him themselves, as they do in baseball or basketball. Or maybe lease a ranch and breed their own.

If Mr. Perot is saying that football is overshadowing the main purpose of high schools, it says here he is right again. There was a time, before other interests were available, when Texas towns were focused solely on their high school football teams. It was the rally flag. The smaller the town, the more emphasis. The high school coach was the most important figure in the community, the most admired or most maligned.

The high schooler became popular and respected in direct proportion to his talent as a football player. Not basketball, understand, nor saxophone nor physics, but football. Players acquired exaggerated ideas of their own eminence. They became overbearing. If a lad did not play football, he was a second-class citizen, a role he seemed to accept. He was tolerated maybe, but not admired as was the halfback who scored twice in the district play-off, despite the fact he was an 18-k crumbum.

Perhaps it's not that way anymore. In my little Texas hometown, too late we became smart. We eventually learned that football talent does not necessarily make big men. The biggest man we had, it developed later, was a Czech lad, quiet, fair, short and slight of build. He wasn't around too much, because he hurried home after the last class to grub on his pa's farm until dark. He joined the National Guard, not from any sense of patriotism, but because it paid $2 a week for the drills, and $2 was a bundle.

He was mobilized with the 36th Division. Ernie Pyle, the correspondent, was there when they brought his body down from a mountain in Italy and wrote a story about him, and the story won a Pulitzer and somebody made a movie out of it, with Robert Mitchum. Henry Waskow was the biggest hero our little town ever had, and he couldn't, or didn't, throw a football from here to there, and that's how it should be.

Old Dominion's Stanley tops coaching list

Winningest Active Coaches

Here, to begin the 1983-84 series of basketball notes, are long-awaited winningest active coaches lists for all three divisions in NCAA women's basketball.

The top 20 coaches by percentage and the top five by number of victories are listed. Hopefully this will whet appetites for the main course—a complete list (the first ever) of all active coaches in all divisions and their records through the 1983 season, which will be the main feature of the 1984 women's basketball press kit.

The list will include all information on file with the statistics service on active coaches at member institutions. Publishing this information not only will make it available to interested sports information directors, members of the media and basketball fans, but will help the statistics service correct erroneous records and collect new information (if you see any errors, or know of additional seasons for any coach, please let us know).

This list below does not include percentages or victories for coaches with fewer than five years in Division I. These coaches will, however, be included in the press kit in a separate category. In all divisions, only records as head coaches at four-year institutions are considered, with a minimum of five seasons.

Only one coach in the Division I top 20 has a new job in 1984. Vivian Stringer, formerly at Cheyney, is the new coach at Iowa. Stringer's husband, Bill, is lending more than moral support—he is also on the Iowa athletics staff and has been responsible for designing a weight-training program for the university's women athletes. "We've got our work cut out for us," Stringer says of her task. (She will try to rebuild a team that was 7-20 in 1983.) "I haven't taken winning for granted. If we lose a few games, I will still remember what it feels like to win."

The Immaculata Connection

Immaculata, a Division II school in Pennsylvania, can claim a connection to women's college basketball similar to Miami University's (Ohio) claim to fame in college football. Miami bills itself the "cradle of coaches" because of the college and professional football coaches it has produced. Immaculata can boast of three alumni among the top 20 Division I coaches—Theresa Shank Grentz of Rutgers (Immaculata '74), Rene Portland of Penn State ('75) and Marianne Stanley of Old Dominion ('76). All three played for former coach Cathy Rush, who is now a well-known television sports commentator. Portland says she and her college teammates are indebted to their coach. "Theresa, Marianne and I attribute a lot of our success to Cathy. She gave up all that time for the team. When you see that, you start to appreciate it and you think, 'Hey, we're all in this together.' You want to win for the coach and the team." (Mary Jo Haverbeck, Penn State SID)

Jody Conradt

Pat Head Summitt

Quotes of the week

With just three seconds left, Texas-Arlington's Andre Allen hit a 22-foot baseline jumper to beat Southeastern Louisiana, 42-41. The next day, Maverick men's coach Bob "Snake" LeGrand said: "I've had some time to think about that game. You're depending on a 19-year-old to sink a 22-foot jump shot so you can keep your job. Now that's a heckuva way to make a living!"

LeGrand on the big man: "Big men are hard to find nowadays. You have to have them, though, because you can coach a lot of things, but you can't coach growin' big."

LeGrand on recruiting: "Joe (assistant coach Cravens) and I divided up the recruiting territory evenly. I have the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex and he has the rest of the world." (Gerry May, Texas-Arlington assistant SID)

After his team lost by 27 points to highly ranked Memphis State in Memphis, Middle Tennessee State coach Stan "Ramrod" Simpson reflected: "I felt we were in trouble even before the game started, when a half-dozen policemen stormed into our dressing room demanding to know where our bus driver was. We had blocked the mayor's parking space." (Ed Given, Middle Tennessee State SID)

Memphis State senior guard Phillip Haynes always has preferred his nickname, "Doom," instead of Phillip. Asked recently whether he spelled Phillip with two l's, Haynes replied, "I spell Phillip with two o's." (Bob Winn, Memphis State SID)

Billy Tubbs, Oklahoma men's basketball coach, glanced over his roster and smiled, with good reason. He has 6-9 Wayman Tisdale at 240 pounds, 6-6 Calvin Pierce at 230 and several others in the 220 range. "I think," Tubbs told Rick Plumlee, Knight-Ridder Newspapers, "we'll lead the league in first downs."

Says Southeast Missouri State coach Ron Shumate, "Next to my mother, I love defense best of all." (Ron Hines, Southeast Missouri State SID)

From Bob Hentzen, Topeka Capital-Journal: "Louisiana State basketball coach Dale Brown, you might remember, climbed the Matterhorn last year. Brown, you probably don't know, fell down the stairs at home and broke four ribs."

The American University Eagles are known as the "Young Americans" this season, with less than five minutes of collegiate experience per player. In its first four games, American averaged 22 turnovers per game, prompting American coach Ed Tapscott to remark: "I know it's all part of growing up, but I wish it weren't so painful."

Joel Bell, one of the Young Americans, heard SID Terry Cornwell mention a low grade he had received in a graduate course and quipped: "Gee, Terry, maybe you won't be able to make the travel squad." (Terry Cornwell, American SID)

North Carolina State coach Joe Valvano when asked how many speeches he gave in the off-season (after his team won the NCAA championship): "If there are four people in the country I haven't talked to, give me their phone numbers."

While lining up for the team picture, Cal State Northridge forward Cliff Higgins (who is Black) told the forwards and centers to line up "salt and pepper." To which center Tom Ruetten (who is white) replied: "Cliff, I don't think we have enough salt." (Greg Badovinac, Cal State Northridge assistant SID)

Cal State Dominguez Hills coach Dave Yanai on how he would defend 7-foot-7 Yasutaka Okayama of the Japan national team: "The only way I would know would be to stack two players on top of each other." (Steve Barr, Cal State Dominguez Hills SID)

Point guard to pulpit

In addition to serving as Alaska-Anchorage's starting point guard again this season, 5-11 senior Chris Bullock is also an ordained Baptist minister. Among the national leaders in free-throw accuracy at 84.8 percent last year, the Wichita, Kansas, native takes his place behind the pulpit every fourth Sunday at the Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church in Anchorage. A social work major at UAA, Bullock plans to go for a master's degree and doctorate in divinity at Morehouse School of Religion in Atlanta, Georgia, after his basketball career. (Tim McDiffett, Alaska-Anchorage SID)

Grace under pressure?

Louisiana Tech senior guard Kim Mulkey was a member, along with several other college stars, of the U.S. women's basketball team that won the gold medal at the Pan American Games in Caracas, Venezuela, last August. Pan Am rules require that after each game, one player on the winning team is chosen at random to provide a urine sample for chemical tests. After the game with Venezuela, Mulkey was the choice. She dutifully accompanied a games official to the designated restroom and, watched by the official, tried to provide the sample. A half-hour, then 45 minutes, passed. Mulkey was still trying to produce results. Her teammates, sitting on the bus waiting, applauded and shouted words of appreciation and support when she finally walked out of the arena and sheepishly boarded the bus one hour and 15 minutes later. "It's hard to make yourself go when you don't have to," she explained. The catalyst? "I told them to get me a soda."

... And grace under pressure

One of Mulkey's teammates at the Pan Am Games will return to the role of nemesis this season. Southern California's Cheryl Miller, who played against Mulkey in the NCAA championship last April, has discovered the pressures of big-time basketball. She not only will be expected to lead her team in defense of its national championship, but will be expected to make her presence felt on the U.S. Olympic team, which anticipates defeating the long-dominant Soviet women's team in Los Angeles next summer.

The expectations are nothing new, though the constant demand for excellence sometimes wears her down. "There's enough pressure as it is that I'm supposed to dominate the game," she told David Leon Moore of USA Today. "I had a good year last year, but people will want me to be more spectacular next year. By the time I'm a senior, they'll be expecting miracles."

Miller, a 19-year-old broadcast journalism major, has virtually no spare minutes. She maintains a 3.500 grade-point average, spends three to four hours a day at basketball practice and tries to accommodate the many requests for her time. "We get calls for interviews every day," explains Southern Cal publicist Elise Frantom, who has to keep a separate appointment book just for Miller.

She has appeared on numerous television programs and in several magazines. "It's a lot of hours," she admits, "like Tuesdays (when most interviews are scheduled) might be four or five hours with the media. Then you come home, get dressed, go to practice, go to classes and do homework."

"No one gets near as much attention as Cheryl Miller has," says coach Linda Sharp. "But I think rightfully so. She is a phenom." Miller's teammates are not jealous of the attention accorded her. "They know that without them, I wouldn't be the top player that I am."

Susquehanna's Deb Yeasted ranks ninth in scoring among Division III women with a 21.7 per-game average

Freshman Doug Peterson of Plymouth State is second in Division III men's scoring with a 28.3 per-game average

North Dakota State wins II football title

North Dakota State, led by freshman quarterback Jeff Bentrin, scored on its first three possessions and then coasted to a 41-21 victory over Central Ohio December 10 in the 11th annual NCAA Division II Football Championship at the Palm Bowl in McAllen, Texas.

Bentrin directed North Dakota State's option offense almost flawlessly as the Bison won their first Division II title after appearing in the play-offs the past two years.

North Dakota State took advantage of the wind in the first quarter, starting two of its first three drives inside Central Ohio territory.

Bentrin passed 10 yards to split end Stacy Robinson for the first touchdown, ran 34 yards for the second score and culminated the first-quarter blitz with an option play to running back Chad Stark, who leaped into the end zone with 53 seconds remaining.

The Bisons' first touchdown came on a six-play, 35-yard drive after a punt of only nine yards by Central Ohio. North Dakota State linebacker Jim Dick set up the second touchdown when he intercepted a pass at the Central Ohio 40-yard line.

Central Ohio got out of its own end of the field only once in the first quarter, when quarterback James Woody attempted to pass, had the ball batted into the air, caught it and ran 17 yards to the North Dakota State 39.

Woody rallied the Marauders with the wind at his back in the second quarter, directing a 57-yard scoring drive to set up Kevin Cummings' one-yard dive and a 51-yard drive that was capped by a two-yard run by Mark Corbin.

But Bentrin countered the comeback attempt by taking the Bison 80 yards against the wind to set up Jeff Willis' three-yard run with 57 seconds left in the half.

North Dakota State chose to fight the wind to start the second half and opened a 38-14 lead on a 31-yard field goal by Ken Kubisz and a four-yard scamper by running back James Molstre.

Central Ohio cut North Dakota State's lead to 17 in the third quarter on a 25-yard run by Corbin, but North Dakota State got the final points on a 27-yard field goal by Kubisz with 4:14 left in the game.

Bentrin, who took over the starting quarterback job in the fifth game of the season, and freshman running backs Stark and Molstre were dubbed the "kiddie corps" during the regular season. But the three-some showed the poise of veterans in the national-championship game.

"We learned to keep our composure this season," said Bentrin, who rushed for 121 yards. "Personally, I learned to keep my feelings inside; because if I let my emotions gain control, it can affect my performance."

Central Ohio coach Billy Joe, who guided the Marauders to a 13-1 record, said, "I'm proud of our guys. They played their hearts out and gave 110 percent. But the essence of what happened is that we played a team that was much better. We didn't have enough firepower to counter their size, good program and great coaching."

Central Ohio defeated defending champion Southwest Texas State, 24-16, and North Alabama, 27-24, to gain a championship berth.

Division II women's volleyball

Northridge stops Portland State rally

Cal State Northridge stifled a rally by top-seeded Portland State to win the 1983 NCAA Division II Women's Volleyball Championship, 15-6, 15-10, 10-15, 15-6, December 10 at Lakeland, Florida.

Cal State Northridge, the No. 2 seed, had reached the final four in the previous two championships, but came away third in 1981 and runner-up last year.

Portland State reached the final by defeating Nebraska-Omaha, 15-6, 15-7, 15-13. Cal State Northridge advanced to the championship match with a 15-10, 15-8, 15-6 victory over

Air Force.

"We went three-two-one, which is a nice way to go," Cal State Northridge coach Walt Ker said. "I'm extremely thrilled with all of my players."

"We asked them to make a lot of sacrifices at the beginning of the year, which most teams do. But this is something they'll have for the rest of their lives."

The Matadors, who finished the year with a 29-6 record, were led by hitter Heather Hafner, who finished the championship match with 28 kills. Hafner led a well-balanced scoring attack for Cal State Northridge. Kristy Olson recorded 18 kills, Linda Wilson 15, Amy Barbera 13 and Debbie Wooldridge 12.

After falling behind by two games, Portland State, 32-6 for the year, stormed back to win the next two games and force a fifth game.

With Portland State leading 3-0, the Matadors rallied for a 9-3 lead. Portland State subsequently closed the deficit to three points, but the Matadors shut the door and scored six consecutive points to win the match, 15-10, and the championship.

Hafner was joined on the all-tournament team by teammates Shelli Mosby, Kristy Olson and Wooldridge. Portland State's Theresa Huitinga and Linda Johnson also were named to the team.

In the third-place match, second-seeded Air Force ran its record to 44-10 by defeating fourth-seeded Nebraska-Omaha, 15-7, 15-7, 16-14. Nebraska-Omaha finished the season 54-6.

To advance to the final four, Cal State Northridge defeated Central Missouri State, 15-9, 13-15, 15-10, 15-11, and California-Riverside, 15-4, 7-15, 12-15, 16-14, 15-12. Cal State Northridge is the only team to make the final four in all three NCAA Division II Women's Volleyball Championships.

Indiana outlasts Columbia, 1-0

It was not quite as long as last year's finale, but Indiana again showed its stamina by defeating Columbia, 1-0, to win its second consecutive title December 10 at the NCAA Division I Men's Soccer Championship in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

Just over 12 minutes into overtime play, Indiana's Pat McGauley scored the winning goal, with the help of an assist by Rodrigo Castro on the right wing and a pass from midfielder Greg Kennedy.

Last year, Indiana went eight overtimes and 159 minutes to defeat Duke, 2-1; and again this year, depth, stamina and experience proved to be the difference.

"I felt we created the opportunities to win the game, and I think we deserved to win," said Indiana coach Jerry Yeagley. "We knew about the heat and humidity from last year and knew we had to keep changing our players. I think they got tired, and that was a big difference. We had a little more depth, and we can play a lot of players and not change the tempo of the game."

Aly, who was injured in the Hartwick game earlier in the play-offs. Columbia used only two substitutes in the match, while Indiana interchanged players throughout the game.

Columbia goalie Gary Escher made several key saves in the final 10 minutes of regulation play, including a shot by Indiana's Keith Meyer in the 88th minute. Indiana goalie Chris Peterson was forced to make only three saves in the game, all in overtime.

Columbia, which was undefeated coming into the game, played without U.S. Olympic team member Amr since San Francisco in 1975 and 1976. It also was the fourth consecutive year that the championship match was extended to overtime.

Columbia, which finished 18-1, was the first Ivy League team ever to reach the Division I championship.

Elmhurst surprises tournament favorite

Spiking by Cathy Dulkowski and a strong defensive effort fueled Elmhurst to a 15-10, 15-11, 9-15, 15-13 upset of No. 1-seeded UC San Diego in the NCAA Division III Women's Volleyball Championship December 10 at La Verne, California.

Elmhurst, the No. 2 seed, advanced to the final by defeating defending champion La Verne, 5-15, 15-2, 15-9, 15-10. UC San Diego reached the final with a 15-1, 15-7, 16-18, 15-4 victory over MIT.

"It feels very good," Elmhurst coach Bill Walton said. "It makes it a little sweeter, because I have played and coached for a number of years against West Coast teams, and hopefully this will help to dispel some of the mystique and dominance California schools have had."

"We'll see what effect it will have in the future. I'd like to see volleyball teams from the Midwest improve their standing and respectability, and maybe this will show that we have players and coaches that are just as good as California schools."

Elmhurst, 56-4 this season, relied on a strong defensive effort in its semifinal and championship victories. Because of its relatively short lineup, the Blue Jays utilized their quickness to defend against the kill and successfully concentrated their attack on seams left open by the opposition's blockers.

In the first game of the championship match, Elmhurst faced a 7-1 deficit but came back for a 15-10 victory. After dropping the third game, Elmhurst and UC San Diego fought to 12-12 in the fourth game before the Blue Jays pulled away for the 15-13 victory and the championship. Dulkowski led Elmhurst with 24 kills in 64 attempts for a .375 percentage.

Dulkowski and teammate Karen Olmstead were named to the all-tournament team. UC San Diego, 26-14, was represented by Lulu Schwartz, Molly Wheatley and Karin Kalk. Laura Argonza of La Verne also was named.

In the third-place match, La Verne, 18-16, defeated MIT, which finished with a 40-2 record, 15-7, 15-5, 11-15, 15-5.

Division III football bracket may increase to 16 teams

The NCAA Division III Football Committee again has made a recommendation to the Executive Committee to expand the Division III championship bracket for the 1984 championship from eight to 16 teams.

The football committee's previous recommendation was denied by the Executive Committee at its August meeting; however, the proposal was sent back to the football committee for further study. The Executive Committee is expected to consider the recommendation at its January meeting in Dallas.

Citing the Executive Committee's guideline that a championship should have one participant for every eight teams in the division, the committee noted that the current ratio is one to 24.5. A 16-team championship for Division III, which currently has 196 teams, would create a 1:12 ratio.

Two undefeated teams—Susquehanna University and Worcester Polytechnic Institute—did not receive berths to this year's championship, and the committee thought that 16 teams should have received berths this year.

The championship field consisted of four teams in 1973 and 1974. It was expanded to the current eight-team field in 1975.

The proposed expansion would result in the two finalists playing one additional game. Under the recommended format, the 1984 championship would begin Saturday, November 17, with first-round games, followed by quarterfinal competition November 24, semifinals December 1 and the final December 8.

In other action, the committee recommended that the agreement with International Management Group, which has held discussions with the Japanese American Football Association regarding a game between the NCAA Division III champion and an all-Japan collegiate champion, be extended to March 1. The game would be conducted next December in Tokyo.

Texas foursome selected to AP all-America teams

For the first time in 38 years, one school has placed four players on the Associated Press all-America football team. Four players from Texas and two each from Nebraska—including Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier—and Brigham Young recently were named to the 1983 team.

Only once since the Associated Press began naming all-America teams in 1925 has a school placed more than four players on the team. That was in 1945, when Army placed five players on what then was an 11-member team. The Associated Press named all-America teams on offense and defense from 1950 to 1952 and again from 1964 to the present.

Texas players named were offensive guard Doug Dawson and three members of the nation's No. 1-ranked defense—linebacker Jeff Leiding, cornerback Mossy Cade and free safety Jerry Gray.

This year's 24-member team, which consists of 19 seniors, four juniors and sophomore running back Bo Jackson of Auburn, also features Brigham Young quarterback Steve Young, who led the nation in total offense with 4,346 yards and an NCAA record 395.1 yards per game.

The team, which is selected by a panel of the wire service's sportswriters, will be featured on Bob Hope's Christmas show at 8 p.m. Eastern time December 19 on NBC Television.

In addition to Rozier, Nebraska wide receiver Irving Fryar was named to the team. Joining Young from Brigham Young was tight end Gordon Hudson, one of four repeat members on the team. Others who made the team for the second year in a row are offensive tackle Bill Fralic of Pittsburgh, outside linebacker Wilber Marshall of Florida and inside linebacker Ricky Hunley of Arizona.

The juniors named to the team are Fralic, place kicker Luis Zendejas of Arizona State and middle guard William Perry of Clemson.

The rest of the offense consists of wide receiver Gerald McNeil of Baylor, tackle Brian Blados of North Carolina, guard Terry Long of East Carolina and center Tom Dixon of Michigan.

Others named to the defensive team include outside linebacker Ron Rivera of California, tackles Rick Bryan of Oklahoma and Reggie White of Tennessee, inside linebacker Carl Banks of Michigan State, defensive back Russell Carter of Southern Methodist and punter Jack Weil of Wyoming.

Following are the 1983 Associated Press all-America football teams:

Scheduling arrangement announced by WCHA, 'super' hockey league

they had with just six teams."

Each team will play two games against each member of the other league, plus three games against each team in its own league. The combination will give super-seven teams 30 games and WCHA teams 34 games. Interleague games will be included in regular-season standings, but separate postseason tournaments will be held.

"This is merely a scheduling arrangement," Lamoriello said. "We are separate leagues, with no intention of becoming one league."

"We are excited about this opportunity," said WCHA Chair George Schubert of the University of North Dakota. "In the past, some of our teams have had to play each other six times."

"It is a nice arrangement for the kids—the travel should be a great experience for them," he added. "Also, we believe we are compatible academically with these institutions as well as with our hockey programs."

Lamoriello and Schubert both said that additional travel costs are expected to be minimal. Profits from the Eastern league's postseason tour-namment will be used to offset any increase, while WCHA teams will realize a savings from less travel within the conference. Additionally, some teams from the two leagues already were competing against each other.

The super-seven league was formed last summer after the creation of a new ice hockey league by Ivy Group institutions. Super-seven members are Boston University; Boston College; University of Lowell; University of Maine, Orono; University of New Hampshire; Northeastern University, and Providence College. League officials are expected to unveil a logo and official name for the conference next month.

Members of the WCHA are Colorado College; University of Denver; University of Minnesota, Twin Cities; University of Minnesota, Duluth; University of North Dakota, and University of Wisconsin, Madison.

WCHA teams discussed a merger with the Central Collegiate Hockey Association last spring but were unable to reach an agreement. Schubert said, however, that the Eastern scheduling plan does not close off the CCHA option.

"Also, there still will be room for additional games, even if the proposed 38-game limit is adopted at the NCAA Convention. Some natural rivalries exist between WCHA teams and CCHA teams, and I am sure they will continue," he said.

The two groups include many of the traditionally strong teams in collegiate men's ice hockey. Members of the super-seven league and the WCHA have won 22 of the 36 NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championships, including the last eight. WCHA teams have won the last five NCAA titles.

Invitational competition not allowed

The NCAA Council has affirmed an earlier decision by the Association's Administrative Committee that high school and junior college invitational competition conducted by a member institution is not permissible under the provisions of Bylaw 1-6-(c) [tryout rule].

In taking this position, it was noted that such invitational competition involving prospective student-athletes and conducted by a member institution would not be considered regularly scheduled and could not meet any of the waiver provisions of Bylaws 1-6-(c)-(1) through (5) and, therefore, would not be permitted under the tryout rule.

Zendejas tops Kodak Division I-AA picks

Nevada-Reno kicker Tony Zendejas, who finished the season as the top field-goal kicker in Division I-AA, was named to the Kodak Division I-AA all-America football team for the second year in a row.

Defensive backs Ernest Gibson of Furman and Robert Williams of Eastern Illinois and linebacker Gary Reasons of Northwestern State (Louisiana) also were selected for the second consecutive year. The team is chosen by the American Football Coaches Association.

All-America teams also were announced for College Divisions I and II, composed mostly of players from NCAA Divisions II and III institutions.

Running backs named to the Division I-AA first team were Colgate's Rich Erenberg and Boston's Paul Lewis, who finished first and third, respectively, in the final NCAA Division I-AA individual rushing statistics.

Erenberg, a senior, led Division I-AA with 1,883 yards, good for a 171.2 per-game average. He also led the division in all-purpose running (203.7 yards per game) and scoring (12.4 points per game). Lewis, a junior, was third in rushing with 1,368 yards, 20 touchdowns and a 136.8 per-game average. Following are the three 1983 Kodak all-America football teams.

Convention meeting rooms at Dallas' Loews Anatole

Loews Anatole is dream hotel for delegates

Delegates attending the 78th annual Convention January 9-11 in Dallas will only have to push an elevator button to find activities to occupy their free time.

Loews Anatole, the largest hotel in Dallas (1,620 rooms), will host the 1984 Convention, and the recently expanded hotel offers Convention delegates everything from 18 restaurants/lounges and a nightclub to a 72,000-square-foot spa and sports center.

Listed below are some of the restaurants and lounges, with their basic menus, and some other features of Loews Anatole:

Restaurants

La Esquina—Located in Atrium II, the specialty here is Mexican dishes. Lunch is served from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Dinner is 6 p.m.-10 p.m. nightly.

L'Entrecote—Located in Atrium I, this highly rated restaurant has French/continental cuisine. Lunch buffet is served 11 a.m.-2 p.m., Monday through Friday. Nightly dinner is served from 6 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.

Plum Blossom—Oriental food is the specialty in this restaurant, located in Atrium II. Dinner is served Monday-Saturday, 6 p.m.-10:30 p.m.

Chanticleer—Danish coffee house featuring complete breakfast, lunch, dinner or snacks. Located in Atrium I, hours are 6 a.m.-11 a.m. for breakfast, 11 a.m.-5 p.m. for lunch and 5 p.m.-midnight for dinner. Brunch is served Sundays, 11 a.m.-2:30 p.m.

Mirage Kiosk—Sandwiches or salads are served here with carry-out service available. Located in Atrium II, the Mirage Kiosk is open 24 hours daily.

Garden cafe—Located adjacent to the main lobby, the service is a la carte, or from two buffet islands. Selections include fresh-made pastas, with savory sauces to mix and match. Full service until 3 a.m.

Lobby bar—Close to the garden cafe, the atmosphere here is slightly Far Eastern.

Southern-style lounge—Located in the spa complex across the park. Business-day lunches and dinners, with a dash of Dixie, are served in the dining room. A garden-view grille, featuring healthful snacks, also is located in this area.

Nana's Restaurant and Bar—Cooking is done center stage, beneath a hood of radiant copper. Features include iced ranks of Gulf fish, Texas steaks, kabobs and chops.

Rathskeller—Plain wooden chairs and plank tables are set on a stone floor. Features include beers and wine, plus thick German soups, knackwurst, bratwurst, strudel and more.

Activities

Nightclub—Four-level, 8,000-square-foot club with laser-lighted ceilings, video-projected game boards and a sound-drenched dance floor.

Theaters—Just beyond the nightclub are two companion Loews motion-picture theaters. They share an art nouveau/deco lobby. The traditional candy counter offers gourmet popcorn and imported chocolates.

Verandah—Although it appears to be a two-story Southern mansion, the Verandah is, in fact, a 72,000-square-foot world class spa and sports center. Outside are six tennis courts, all lighted for nighttime play; a carpet-like putting green, and a swimming pool. Inside are eight racquetball courts, two separate squash courts, a full gymnasium with basketball court and a coed exercise room.

Other features of the Verandah include a whirlpool therapy tub, steam rooms, saunas, indoor swimming pools, barber shop and beauty salon.

If time permits for an early-morning jog or afternoon sightseeing, here are some additional sights and activities in Dallas not listed in the December 5 issue of The NCAA News.

Sightseeing

Dallas Museum of Art—Downtown on a nine-acre site bounded by Harwood, Ross, St. Paul and Woodall Rodgers Freeway. The museum is the cornerstone of a planned arts district that will encompass a 60-acre site.

DeGolyer Estate—8525 Garland Road, 324-1401. Spanish colonial-style mansion and 43-acre garden built in 1939 by Texas oilman and geologist Everette DeGolyer. Guided tours of house include history, unique architecture, antiques and art. Gardens open daily; house open Tuesday, 1 p.m.-4 p.m., and Wednesday-Friday, 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

Reunion Tower—300 Reunion Boulevard. Hyatt Regency Hotel operates 50-story tower with observation deck and restaurant at top. Charge for elevator ride to top is free, unless visitors have lunch, dinner or drinks.

The Vineyard—Bounded by Maple Avenue, Cedar Springs and McKinney Avenue, the Vineyard is a mixed commercial/residential area. Many of the businesses—antique stores, art galleries, neighborhood pubs, continental restaurants—are housed in turn-of-the-century houses and churches and modern buildings that harmonize with the surroundings.

Shopping

North Park Mall—Located at intersection of Northwest Highway (Loop 12) and North Central Expressway. About 135 stores, including Neiman-Marcus, J. C. Penney, Lord and Taylor, and Titch's. Also contains four theaters, restaurants, discotheque and racquetball courts.

Olla Podrida—Coit Road between Interstate 635 (LBJ Freeway) and Forest Lane. Shopping hours are 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m., except Thursday, 10 a.m.-9 p.m. A marketplace to purchase creations of local artists and craftsmen.

Neiman-Marcus—Located at corner of Ervay, Commerce and Main.

Travel time will be minimal

Delegates arriving at either Dallas/Fort Worth Airport or downtown Love Field for the 1984 Convention will have short trips to Loews Anatole.

Delegates arriving at D/FW Airport should leave the airport heading south and turn east on Airport Freeway (Highway 183). Highway 183 bends to the right at Texas Stadium and then connects with Stemmons Freeway (Interstate 35E). Delegates then should exit Stemmons at Industrial Boulevard. Expected travel time is about 15 to 20 minutes.

Convention delegates arriving at Love Field have only a five-minute drive to Loews Anatole. Those arriving at Love Field will exit the airport to the right on Mockingbird Lane and turn left on Harry Hines Store is distinguished by its merchandising techniques and quality.

Activities

Municipal golf courses—The city parks and recreation department maintains golf courses not far from the downtown area: Cedar Crest, 1800 Southerland, 943-1004; Stevens, 1005 North Mont Clair, 946-5781; Tenison, 3501 Samuell, 823-5350.

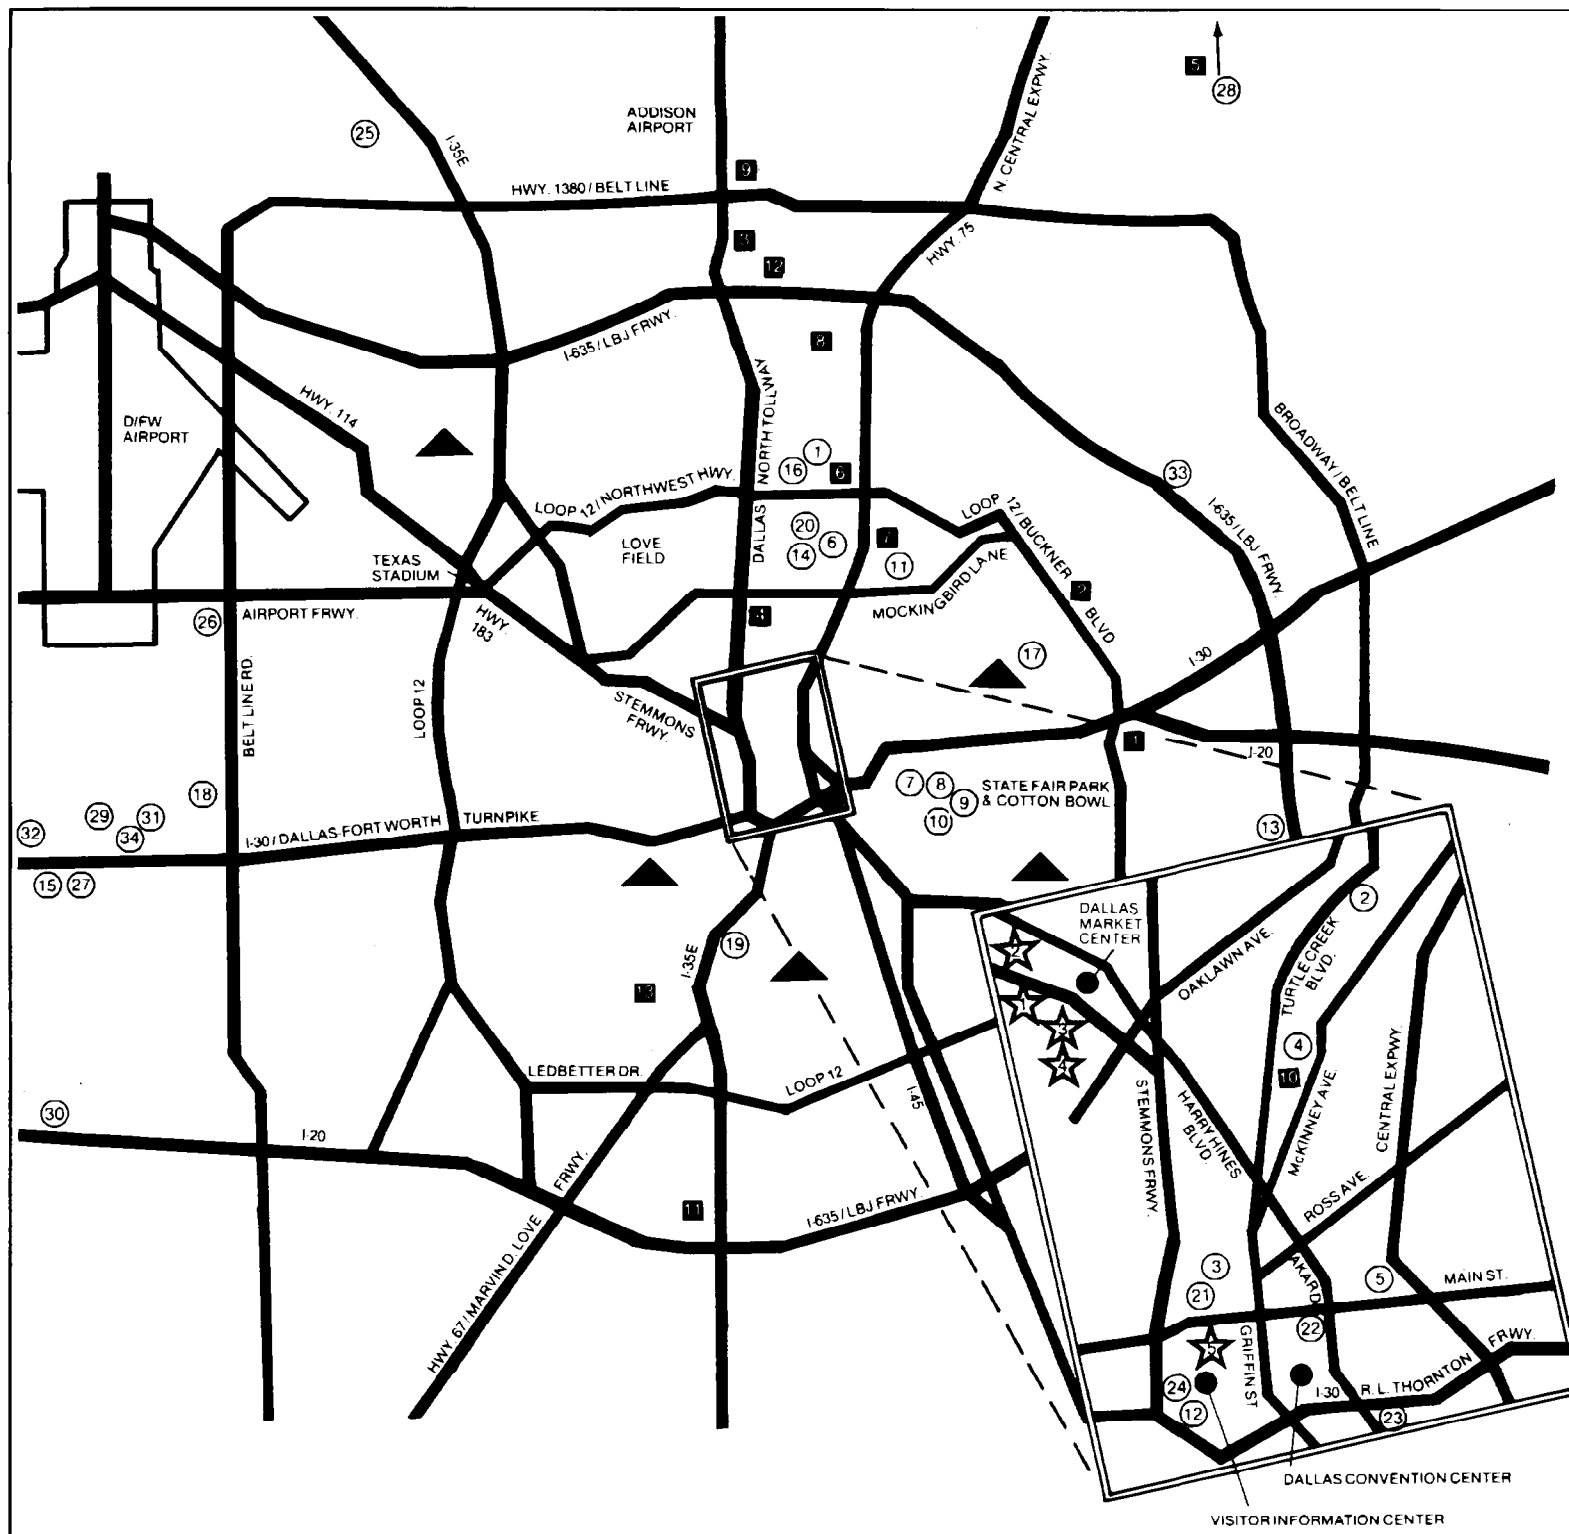

Municipal tennis center—Samuell Grand Tennis Center, 6200 East Grand Avenue, 821-3811. Center has 20 outdoor, lighted courts and a pro shop.

Municipal jogging trails—Bachman Lake has a three-mile trail at Northwest Highway and Bachman. White Rock Lake, site of the annual Dallas White Rock Marathon, has a 15-mile trail at Mockingbird and Lawther, near Buckner Boulevard.

Boulevard (about three blocks). Delegates then should proceed on Harry Hines until it splits at Industrial Boulevard. The hotel will be just ahead on the south side of Stemmons.

No special travel arrangements have been made at D/FW or Love. Delegates should plan for their own transportation from either airport to Loews Anatole. The first official NCAA function is the delegates' reception at 6:30 p.m. January 8, although registration begins earlier that day at 10:30 a.m.

Information regarding Dallas restaurants, nighttime activities and other sights to see not listed in The NCAA News will be available at the NCAA registration tables, courtesy of the Dallas Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Leonard resigns Fisk presidency

Walter J. Leonard, president of Fisk University since 1977, will leave his post at the end of the academic year.

Supporters of the 117-year-old liberal arts school are said to be scrambling to avert the financial collapse of the school, which has approximately $2.8 million in debts and no way of paying them off in the near future, according to The New York Times.

In October, the 28-member board of trustees relieved Leonard of his day-to-day administrative duties so that he could concentrate on fund-raising. The loss of students and the erosion of Federal and private support have worsened the university's financial position.

ACE names officers, board members

The following officers were elected for the 1983-84 year by the American Council on Education at a business meeting in Toronto:

Vice chair and chair-elect—Ronald W. Roskens, president, University of Nebraska system; secretary—Stephen Joel Trachtenberg, president, University of Hartford; chair of the Council—the Rev. Timothy S. Healy, president, Georgetown University.

Also elected to the board, with terms expiring in 1986, were Harold W. Eickoff, president, Trenton State College; Virginia L. Lester, president, Mary Baldwin College; Bill F. Stewart, president, Kirkwood Community College, Iowa; Stelle Feuers, president, Los Angeles City College; Frank H. T. Rhodes, president, Cornell University, and Jesse N. Stone Jr., president, Southern University, Baton Rouge.

Arkansas approves competency test

Arkansas legislators have approved a bill to require eighth-grade students to pass a competency test in reading, writing and math before entering high school.

The tests will begin in 1986-87. Students who fail will have to repeat the eighth grade.

Arkansas is believed to be the first state to require a high school entrance test. Florida requires a competency test before graduation, and Tennessee requires one in the 10th grade.

Bell predicts education turnaround

A dramatic turnaround by 1985 in student achievement test scores is predicted by Terrel H. Bell, secretary of education, because of the campaign to revitalize schools.

Bell is predicting a 10 percent increase in college entrance exam scores, which would return those scores to the level reached more than 10 years ago.

Bell noted that in recent months, 36 states have initiated curriculum reforms, 40 have started to raise high school graduation requirements and 11 are advancing with plans for merit pay for teachers.

The secretary also said he sees a reduced dropout rate because classwork will be more meaningful. "There are those critics who say you're going to make school too rigorous and push out the poorer students. I think the opposite is going to happen."

Fewer Chicago pupils flunking

Nearly 7,000 fewer elementary pupils in Chicago public schools were flunked this year than last, and school officials are crediting a controversial reading program and increased involvement of parents for the improvement.

The number of students who were not promoted fell nearly 24 percent from June 1982 to June 1983. The previous failure rate had remained fairly consistent from 1978 through 1982, according to a report in the Chicago Tribune.

School officials say much of the credit for the improved rate must be given to what is called the Chicago Mastery Learning Reading Program, a system that emphasizes basic vocabulary and reading skills.

"More students are being promoted because they are mastering more skills in the reading program," said Mattie Williams, director of the school board's bureau of language arts. "Teachers are more familiar with the program (in its second year); children are moving faster and spending more time on tasks."

No boost in student aid planned

President Reagan has stated that he does not plan to seek an increase in spending next year for aid to college students.

Reagan said he thought adequate funds had been set aside in the 1984 budget for students who can't afford to pay their way through college. The Washington Post reports. Reagan also stated that 40 percent of college students are getting some form of financial aid from the Federal government.

The White House has announced that spending for six categories of college student aid is expected to be about $5.5 billion in the current fiscal year.

Reagan emphasized that he believes additional Federal aid would not improve the quality of education. He pointed to the expansion of Federal school aid in the 1960s and 1970s with simultaneous declines in the student test scores.

Most students fail writing test

More than half of Maryland's 53,000 ninth-grade students failed a statewide writing proficiency exam last spring, according to The Washington Post.

State school officials say students are spending too much time on the telephone and watching television.

The 52 percent of students who failed were noticeably weak in grammar and content, officials said.

Last May, school officials announced that more than 60 percent of all Maryland students who had taken a mathematics competency test had failed.

The tests are part of a program called Project Basic, begun in 1977 by David Hornbeck, state superintendent of schools. The goal was to raise school standards.

Maryland students graduating in 1987 will be required to pass a test in citizenship and exams in reading, math and writing. Those who fail will be given remedial work. If they fail the writing test, they will be given a one-page analysis of their weaknesses.

Julia Jones as a fencing student and as a coach (inset)

Hunter's Julia Jones

The right touch: fencing coach still going strong after 40 years

By David P. Seifert
The NCAA News Staff

Herbert Hoover was preparing to succeed Calvin Coolidge as President. Prohibition was the law of the land. The Great Depression was waiting to happen.

And as the Roaring '20s closed, a young woman named Julia Jones took her first fencing lesson.

Julio Martinez Castello, a visitor from the Court of Spain, had traveled to America to teach fencing. An invitation from Miguel deCapriles—later to become one of the leaders in American fencing activities—brought Castello to New York University. One of the NYU students who responded to a notice in the school newspaper about Castello's visit was Julia Jones, primarily because "it sounded so romantic."

The romance of fencing quickly turned into a love affair that still is going on. Jones, 75, is in her 27th year as coach at Hunter College and has spent 40 years as a college fencing coach. Part of the reason for her longevity is her fondness for the sport.

"Fencing is an adult sport," she said. "It has everything the other sports have, plus the history, romance and upper-echelon tradition. And besides, once you put on the mask, you can be anybody you want to be."

Castello's lessons started her on the road to world-class competition. The diminutive Jones captained the 1929 NYU team that competed against Cornell in the first women's collegiate fencing match; Pennsylvania and Bryn Mawr were kept out of the match by a snowstorm. She was the collegiate champion that year. In 1932, she was a member of the first U.S. Olympic women's fencing team.

At a time when few female college students even thought about sports, Jones was reveling in the competition.

"I began to grow when I started fencing in college," she remembered. "Meeting so many other people and traveling was a whole new world for me."

That world expanded further in 1930 when the head of NYU's physical-training department asked her to coach the women's fencing team. She stayed at her alma mater, also coaching archery, until 1943.

Her husband's participation in World War II precipitated her departure. She spent the next 13 years caring for him, after he suffered war injuries, and raising four children. After his death in 1956, she returned to her other romance.

"I picked up my trusty old sword and came back," she said.

Her record at Hunter, and earlier at NYU, is filled with honors, although no won-lost record is available. She is the only coach to win National Intercollegiate Women's Fencing Association championships at two colleges—1932, 1933 and 1938 at NYU; 1970 at Hunter. She was on the coaching staff for the World University Games in 1970, becoming the first woman to coach a U.S. team in international fencing competition.

Also, she was chairman and coach of the U.S. men's and women's fencing teams at the Maccabiah Games in Israel in 1977 and cochair and coach in 1981. Her team at Hunter won the City University of New York championship last year.

In her mind, though, these achievements pale in comparison to her relationships with the students.

"We have no scholarships at Hunter; most of the students work, so travel is a problem," she said. "But with my family grown, I have the time to work around these things."

"I take anyone who has the desire to learn," she added. "If they show an interest, then I feel I owe them my time as part of their education."

That does not mean an easy ride for the students, though.

"I often have told fencers that the coach does not tell them to kneel and then touch them on the shoulder with the sword and pronounce them a fencer," she said. "They have to work."

And she continues to work, serving as codirector of a youth program (ages 12 to 17) in addition to her duties at Hunter. She also has been involved in the Empire State Games the past five summers. There are no plans for retirement.

"I do my exercises every day and walk six miles on the beach, except on weekends when family or friends visit," she said. "If I stay in good health, I feel I can contribute."

It is with her current contributions that the romance continues. During a recent tournament, she was up until 2 a.m. and had a 5 o'clock wake-up call the next morning. She talked of that work with joy, just as she talks about her students.

"I am proud of what I have done, and I can walk out at any time," she said. "But I enjoy teaching and seeing young people grow by participating at Hunter. I feel I touch anyone who comes in contact with me."

Football foundation honors scholar-athletes

Eleven college football seniors who excelled in the classroom and on the football field were presented $3,000 fellowships at the 26th annual National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame awards dinner December 6 at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City.

The scholar-athletes will receive the money if they pursue an advanced degree. For the first time, the foundation also will present honorable-mention plaques to 28 runners-up for its Graduate Fellowship Scholar-Athlete Awards.

"Competition was keener than ever for our 11 graduate fellowships," Vincent dePaul Draddy, NFFHF chairman of the board, said. "so we are sending honorable mention plaques to the other outstanding football players who excelled in the classroom as well as on the football field and who received strong consideration this year."

The foundation also will award $1,500 grants to scholar-athletes from Divisions I-AA, II and III and National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics schools later in the 1983-84 academic year.

The NFFHF has awarded fellowships to senior scholar-athletes since 1959. The selection process begins in June. The foundation sends nomination forms to directors of athletics, who nominate seniors they believe are worthy of the fellowships. The foundation then selects 11 scholar-athletes.

Winners of the scholarships this year are John Bergren, Stanford defensive end, 3.540 grade-point average in biology and chemical engineering; Michael Favorite, Notre Dame split end, 3.600 in business administration/accounting; John Frank, Ohio State tight end, 3.820 in premed; Terry Hoage, Georgia defensive back, 3.710 in genetics; Jeff Hostetler, West Virginia quarterback, 4.000 in finance; Stefan Humphries, Michigan offensive guard, 3.770 in engineering science; Jeff Kubiak, Air Force punter, 3.780 in international affairs; William Obremsky, Duke defensive back, 3.640 in economics; Brian O'Meara, Southern Methodist tackle, 3.650 in biology, chemistry and psychology; Anthony Romano, Syracuse middle guard, 3.860 in accounting; and Steve Young, Brigham Young quarterback, 3.380 in international relations and business finance.

Scholar-athlete honorable mention plaques will be awarded to the following: James Mitroka, Army; James Villanueva, Harvard; Bruce Kozerski, Holy Cross; Derrick Harmon, Cornell; Joseph Potter, Brown; David Fuhrman, Dartmouth; Paul Andrie, Yale, and Harry Hamilton, Penn State.

Also, David Schulman, Pennsylvania; Michael Conna, Virginia Tech; Kevin Guthrie, Princeton; William Weidenhammer, Navy; William Smith, Virginia; Scott Stankavage, North Carolina; Philip Roach, Vanderbilt; Keith Martin, Kentucky; Malcolm Nesmith, Mississippi, and Jon Moyle, Florida.

Also, Richard Render, Florida State; Stephen Carmody, Southern Mississippi; James McQueen, Alabama; Mak Kidd, Northwestern; Ernest Alder, Purdue; Mark Mistler, Arkansas; Matthew Monger, Oklahoma State; Doug Dawson, Texas; Ivan Lesnik, Arizona, and Patrick

National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame scholar-athletes for 1983 are: Back row, left to right, John Bergren, Stanford University; John Frank, Ohio State University; Brian O'Meara, Southern Methodist University; Terry Hoage, University of Georgia, and Jeff Hostetler, West Virginia University. Hoage, Hostetler head CoSIDA academic all-Americans

Two-time all-America Terry Hoage of Georgia and West Virginia quarterback Jeff Hostetler, who has a 4.000 grade-point average, head the 24-man 1983 academic all-America football team selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Hoage, one of seven repeaters from last year, has been one of the best defensive backs in the country the past two years. He has been pretty tough in the classroom also, having compiled a 3.710 grade-point average in genetics.

Hostetler passed for 2,257 yards and 14 touchdowns to lead West Virginia to an 8-3 record and a berth in the Hall of Fame Bowl. He completed 163 of 287 passes, 56.8 percent. His perfect GPA was recorded as a finance major.

Lombardi Award finalist Doug Dawson, Texas guard, heads the offensive line. Dawson, who has been named to three all-America teams, has a 3.240 GPA in petroleum engineering.

Besides Hoage, other repeaters from last year are running back Derrick Harmon of Cornell, wide receiver Kevin Guthrie of Princeton, tight end John Frank of Ohio State, offensive guard Stefan Humphries of Michigan, linebacker Harry Hamilton of Penn State and defensive lineman John Bergren of Stanford. Bergren is the squad's only three-time choice.

To be eligible for the team, a player must be a regular performer and have at least a 3.200 grade-point average (on a 4.000 scale) for his college career.

The 12-man offensive unit combined for a 3.590 average GPA, and the defensive squad was a little better at 3.650. Seventeen players had an overall GPA of 3.500 or better.

Nebraska, the top offensive team in the country, was the only team with more than one representative on the university division first team. Both selections were on defense—linemen Rob Stuckey and Scott Strasburger.

Jeff Hostetler

Four repeaters were named to the college division academic all-America team selected by CoSIDA.

Running back Jim Donnelly of Case Reserve and tight end Tom Schott of Canisius are the offensive repeaters, and defensive back Kenny Moore of Indiana (Pennsylvania) and defensive back Kirk Hutton of Nebraska-Omaha return.

Following are the 1983 CoSIDA academic all-America teams.

CoSIDA selects volleyball teams

Thirty-six collegiate women volleyball players have been selected to the 1983-84 academic all-America team by the College Sports Information Directors of America. This is the second year that CoSIDA has recognized women volleyball players for their achievements on the volleyball court and in the classroom.

First-, second- and third-team academic all-America teams of six players each were selected for both university and college divisions.

Five players—Virginia Lessmann of Virginia Tech, Sylvie Monnet of California, Karen Yelich of New Mexico State, Dana Smith of Southern California and Martie Larsen of Minnesota—were selected to one of the three teams in the university division for the second consecutive year. College division players named to one of the teams for the second year in a row include Jamie Pybas of Oklahoma Baptist and Sue Stremming of Millikin.

Joining Lessmann, Monnet and Yelich on the university division first team were Jill Broker of Southern Illinois, Denise Cooper of Utah State and Julie Maginot of Pacific.

Three universities placed two players each on one of the three teams. Minnesota's Larsen and Chris Donnell were named to the university division third team. Central Missouri State placed Beth Maurer Cook on the second team and Lori Hackett on the third team in the college division. MIT's Annella Munro and Barbara Wesslund were named to the second and third teams, respectively, in the college division.

Following are the 1983-84 CoSIDA academic all-America teams:

UNIVERSITY DIVISION

First team

Setters—Jill Broker, Southern Illinois, 3,890 grade-point average in biomedical engineering; Virginia Lee Lessmann, Virginia Tech, 3,800 in electrical engineering; Hitters—Denise Cooper, Utah State, 3,980 in languages; Julie Maginot, Pacific, 3,800 in computer science; Blockers—Sylvie Monnet, California, 3,600 in humanities/French; Karen Yelich, New Mexico State, 3,850 in premedicine.

Second team

Setters—Bonnie J. Kenny, Tennessee, 3,200 in secondary physical education; Alison Nobel, Michigan, 3,930 in computer engineering; Hitters—Kathy Cogan, Wisconsin, 4,000 in chemical engineering; Dana Smith, Southern California, 3,400 in education/recreation; Blockers—Sue Harbour, Oregon, 3,900 in mathematics; Leslie K. Schutz, Mississippi, 3,800 in premedicine.

Third team

Setters—Chris Donnell, Minnesota, 3,790 in psychology/anthropology; Lynda Green, Duquesne, 3,940 in child psychology; Hitters—Jan Hoosline, Purdue, 5,880 (on a 6,000 scale) in management; Judy Young, Pittsburgh, 3,510 in pharmacy; Blockers—Jackie Backus, Western Michigan, 3,360 in interior design; Martie

Larsen, Minnesota, 3,370 in youth ministry.

COLLEGE DIVISION

First team

Setters—Cheryl Brown, Mercy, 3,860 in business management; Diana Ford, Kansas Newman, 4,000 in biology; Hitters—Michele Anderson, Nebraska Wesleyan, 4,000 in premedicine; Jamie Pybas, Oklahoma Baptist, 3,940 in prelaw; Blockers—Kathy Meehan, Southern Colorado, 4,000 in mathematics; Lisa Rupp, Northern Colorado, 3,800 in nursing.

Second team

Setters—Jayne Marianni, Rockford, 4,000 in mathematics/economics; Diane Weder, Portland State, 3,800 in business administration; Hitters—Beth Maurer Cook, Central Missouri State, 3,500 in earth science; Annella E. Munro, MIT, 4,400 (on a 5,000 scale) in mechanical engineering; Blockers—Lori Appel, California-Davis, 3,700 in zoology; Cheryl Devita, Air Force, 3,500 in computer science.

Third team

Setters—Lori Hackett, Central Missouri State, 3,350 in general management; Sue Stremming, Millikin, 3,780 in nursing; Hitters—Barbara Wesslund, MIT, 4,700 (on a 5,000 scale) in architecture; Ellen Borowy, Clarion, 3,630 in mathematics; Blockers—Kerri Connelly, Regis (Massachusetts), 3,590 in elementary education; Carina Svensson, Tampa, 3,600 in physical education.

Bibliography is available

Researchers at member institutions may be interested in obtaining a copy of the NCAA Research Committee's "Bibliography of Theses and Dissertations Relating to Intercollegiate Athletics."

The bibliography, which contains titles of more than 175 papers pertinent to various aspects of intercollegiate athletics, has proven helpful to both graduate students and faculty, according to Eric D. Zemper, NCAA research coordinator and liaison to the Research Committee. The list was compiled in 1978 and is updated every three years; the current edition was issued in December 1981.

Among the areas included in the theses and dissertations listed are studies relating to the history, sociology and administration of intercollegiate athletics. The current edition also includes a special section of papers that pertain to women's athletics.

Copies of the bibliography can be obtained by contacting Zemper at the NCAA national office.

Briefly in the News

DePaul University basketball coach Ray Meyer coached the Blue Demons to his 700th career victory December 3 with a three-point victory over Illinois State University. On the same night, Dean Smith, head coach at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, won his 500th game when the Tar Heels defeated Stanford University by seven points. Earlier this season, Clarence "Big House" Gaines claimed his 700th coaching victory at Winston-Salem State University. . . Louisiana State University will be the host for next year's United States Junior Olympic Track and Field Championships. The University of Washington has been awarded the 1985 competition. Junior Olympics competition involves preliminary meets at local, state and regional levels, with the top regional finishers qualifying for the nationals.

If she ever runs out of golf stories, Izzy Johnson, women's golf coach at Dartmouth College, can turn to fishing tales. She will not have to stretch the truth, either. During a fall vacation, Johnson reeled in a four-foot, 35-pound kingfish off Freeport, the Bahamas, to walk away with "Fish of the Day" honors. . . George Mason University helped sponsor a free clinic for area youth league basketball coaches. The clinic was conducted by Joe Harrington, men's basketball coach, and Pat Layne, women's basketball coach. . . Carol Weinmann, professor at California State University, Fullerton, will conduct her fifth annual softball coaching clinic at Fullerton January 21. Assisting in the clinic will be Gary Torgeson, head coach, California State University, Northridge, and John Scolinos, head coach, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona. . . The University of Akron basketball team has a new 7,002-seat home, a new health and physical education building, which required $12.5 million to complete. The Zips have been playing in Memorial Hall since 1954. The new building also has additional basketball and volleyball courts, tennis courts, locker rooms, a laboratory, classrooms, and offices. There also is a jogging track and five multipurpose labs suitable for athletic team practice.

Football attendance in the Mid-American Conference was at an all-time high of 2,091,629, an increase of more than 500,000 over any previous year for home and away games. A single-game attendance record of 33,527 was set October 8 when the University of Toledo played at Bowling Green State University. . . Northeast Louisiana University has produced and distributed a poster with the theme "Get High on NLU Basketball Not Drugs" as part of its program against drug abuse. The poster features photographs of the Indians' basketball team and coach Mike Vining. For information concerning the poster, write Tom Schuberth, assistant basketball coach, Northeast Louisiana University, Department of Athletics, Monroe, Louisiana 71209.

He was selected for a weekly honor on five different occasions during his junior season, and he is a three-time consensus all-Southeastern Conference defensive back. Hoage has earned four varsity letters and holds Georgia records for interceptions in a game (three) and in a season (12).

Hoage will attend medical school and has maintained a 3.710 GPA with a major in genetics. A first-team CoSIDA all-America selection, Hoage also is on the dean's list at Georgia.

He participated in the 1983 NCAA/ABC Football Promotion Tour last August.

Elizabeth Heiden

Beth Heiden has excelled in three sports. She owns world championships and Olympic (1980) medals in speed skating and has won three world championships as a cyclist. As a member of the 1982 and 1983 all-East collegiate skiing teams, she never finished lower than fourth in a collegiate cross country event. Heiden is the 1983 NCAA women's cross country skiing champion.

A math major, she has carried a 4.280 grade-point average (on a 5.000 scale) and made the dean's list at Vermont and the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Heiden has been a coach with the Special Olympics International Year of the Handicapped. She was named Wisconsin athlete of the year in 1978, 1979 and 1980 and earned the same award in Vermont in 1983.

Stefan Humphries

Another consensus all-America, Humphries was a four-year letterman and three-year starter on the offensive line for coach Bo Schembechler. He received the 1982 Meyer Morton Award, given annually to the Wolverine player who shows the greatest development in spring drills.

Another NFFHF scholar-athlete, Humphries also has earned academic all-America and academic all-conference laurels. He has a 3.770 grade-point average in engineering science.

He has been active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and several Michigan honoraries, including Tau Beta Pi and Michiguama.

Steve Young

In 1983, this descendant of Brigham Young led the NCAA in passing efficiency and total offense. Young holds 11 NCAA records and shares three others.

He has been named all-Western Athletic Conference twice and was that league's player of the week three times this season. He was picked as player of the game in network telecasts of Brigham Young's contests with Nevada-Las Vegas and San Diego State.

Majoring in finance and international relations, Young has maintained a 3.400 GPA. He, too, is a NFFHF scholar-athlete. Academic all-conference and all-America awards also have been awarded to Young.

He has served as state youth chairman of both the American Cancer Society and the Utah Lung Association. He has participated actively in fund-raising efforts for the Muscular Dystrophy Association of Utah and various church organizations and programs.

presented by state and national governments. Louisiana Governor Dave Treen presented the Louisiana State Civilian Bravery Award and Vice-President George Bush the Presidential Citizens' Medal to Carolyn Delaney in recognition of her late husband's selfless act.

Former teammate Tom Condon, an offensive guard for the Chiefs, summed up Delaney's love for children in a comment to United Press International writer Rick Gosselin.

"When those little kids needed help, he gave up his life trying to save them. He wasn't a swimmer. He didn't have any business being around water, much less trying to save someone else who was drowning. You just can't put it in words. The man had a tremendous heart; he was special."

Two updated rules books available

Two new editions of NCAA rules are available this month from NCAA publishing. The two are the 1984 Baseball Rules and the 1984 Men's Lacrosse Rules.

Each publication costs $3.

To place an order or to inquire about bulk rates, contact NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201. Payment, which includes fourth-class postage, should accompany all orders. Those who want books mailed first class should include $2 for postage for each book.

Coaches favor football play-off

A postseason football play-off to determine a national champion is favored by a majority of major-college football coaches, according to a poll by CBS-TV.

The network polled head coaches at 101 of the 105 Division I-A institutions, and the results showed 58 favored a play-off, 37 were opposed and six were undecided.

Of those polled, 64 coaches said a postseason play-off system would diminish the importance of bowl games, and 34 said it would not.

An extended season to include a play-off would have a negative effect on players, according to 57 coaches.

Freedom Bowl set for January

A postseason all-star football game between the Southwestern Athletic Conference and the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference has been named the Freedom Bowl All-Star Classic.

The first Freedom Bowl, matching 35 seniors from each conference, will be played January 14 in Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium. Kickoff is 1 p.m.

James Frank, commissioner of the SWAC, and Kenneth A. Free, commissioner of the MEAC, made the announcement in Atlanta in conjunction with Unique Affairs, Inc., the game's marketing agent.

Members of the MEAC are Bethune-Cookman College; Delaware State College; Florida A&M University; Howard University; University of Maryland, Eastern Shore; North Carolina A&T State University, and South Carolina State College.

SWAC members are Alabama State University; Alcorn State University; Grambling State University; Jackson State University; Mississippi Valley State University; Prairie View A&M University; Southern University, Baton Rouge, and Texas Southern University.

Jackson State reprimanded

Jackson State University has been publicly reprimanded and censured by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions for violations of NCAA legislation occurring in the conduct of its intercollegiate football program.

The penalty does not include sanctions and will not affect the university's eligibility for postseason competition or television appearances.

The case primarily involved violations related to the recruitment of one prospect during the 1982-83 academic year. The individual did not enroll at the university.

"After reviewing the information developed in this case," said Frank J. Remington, chair of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, "the committee concluded that the violations in this case demonstrated an inadequate understanding of NCAA recruiting legislation by athletics department staff members and a representative of the university's athletics interests, rather than an intentional effort to circumvent the legislation.

"Although corrective action has been taken by the university in reference to the involved individuals," Remington continued, "the committee determined that a public announcement of this case would be appropriate to confirm the committee's position that the university should exercise more diligence in the future to ensure full compliance with NCAA recruiting legislation."

The committee found violations related to the principles governing recruiting.

Charley Scott

Mississippi State names Scott AD

Charley Scott, associate vice-president for academic affairs at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, and a member of the NCAA Executive Committee, has been named director of athletics at Mississippi State University.

Scott has been active in NCAA affairs since his election as Alabama's faculty athletic representative in 1973, including membership on the NCAA Council (1976-1979), Governmental Affairs Committee, Recruiting Committee, Division I Steering Committee, Executive Committee and several special committees.

A 1944 graduate of Mississippi State, Scott holds a master's degree from Georgia Institute of Technology (1949) and a doctorate from Purdue University (1953). Scott, a Meridian, Mississippi, native, formerly was on the engineering faculty at Mississippi State.

Scott succeeds Carl Maddox, who retired December 10 after four years at the Starkville school.

Steinkuhler wins awards as top college lineman

Dean Steinkuhler, Nebraska's 6-3, 270-pound offensive guard, has become the seventh player to win both the Outland Trophy and the Lombardi Award in the same season.

The Outland Trophy is awarded by the Football Writers Association of America, and the Lombardi Award is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Houston. The awards are presented to the nation's top lineman each year.

Other linemen who have won both awards in the same season: Dave Rimington, Nebraska, 1982; Lee Roy Selmon, Oklahoma, 1975; Randy White, Maryland, 1974; John Hicks, Ohio State, 1973; Rich Glover, Nebraska, 1972, and Jim Stillwagon, Ohio State, 1970.

Legislative

requirements were met. This proposal is sponsored by two member institutions in the East and four on the West Coast, plus one other institution, and would become effective immediately.

Proposal Nos. 83, 84 and 85 would establish new NCAA division championships in two sports.

Proposal No. 83 seeks NCAA championships in men's and women's indoor track in Division II, with the first championships to be conducted during the 1984-85 academic year. All 14 members of the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association are the sponsors.

Championships in Division III men's and women's indoor track would be established upon approval of Proposal No. 84, and the first championships also would be conducted in 1984-85. The Division III Steering Committee is the sponsor.

On the recommendation of the Division III Steering Committee, the NCAA Council is sponsoring Proposal No. 85, which would initiate championship competition in Division III men's ice hockey. The first NCAA play-off would be held in March 1984. This proposal was adopted by the 1983 NCAA Convention but was not implemented because Division III men's ice hockey did not meet Association sponsorship requirements.

Proposal Nos. 89, 90 and 91 deal with Division I men's basketball, with Proposal No. 91 being presented in the form of a resolution to increase the field in the division championship from 53 to 64 teams. That recommendation was made to the NCAA Executive Committee at the December meeting of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee. All eight members of the Midwestern City Conference are sponsoring Proposal No. 91.

Proposal Nos. 89 and 90 deal with automatic qualification for the Division I men's championship and would become effective immediately upon approval.

Eight member institutions are asking in Proposal No. 89 that automatic qualification be retained by a Division I conference if that conference admits a new member that has not been a Division I member for five years, with the stipulation that the new member not be allowed to receive automatic qualification until it has been a Division I member for three years. The legislation would become effective immediately.

In Proposal No. 90, all seven members of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference are asking that a Division I conference with fewer than eight members that is receiving automatic qualification in men's basketball be allowed to expand its membership to a maximum of eight with new Division I members without losing its automatic qualification, effective immediately.

Seven institutions of varying conference affiliation are seeking in Proposal No. 92, a resolution, to revise the championship format and calendar in Division I-AA football. The reasoning stated is that chancellors and presidents of many Division I-AA institutions believe that the 14- or 15-game football season necessitated by the play-off format places excessive demands on student-athletes and interferes with the academic calendars at some institutions.

Another resolution, Proposal No. 93, seeks to assign at-large allocations for the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship, effective for the 1984-1985 play-offs only.

All 11 members of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association are asking that, in addition to the automatic qualifications for the three conference champions, at-large selections be made on a basis of one additional berth each for the East, Central and West regions in arriving at a field of eight play-off teams.

Another proposal dealing with play-off selection is Proposal No. 88, sponsored by 19 member institutions.

The proposal asks that in team sports championships, 25 percent of the field, or four teams, whichever is greater, be seeded and placed in the bracket regardless of geographic location. The effective date would be September 1, 1984.

Proposal Nos. 86 and 87 concern the Division III Football Championship.

Proposal No. 86 seeks to prohibit Division I or Division II institutions that were initially classified in Division III football after September 1, 1983, from participating in the Division III Football Championship.

The proposal, recommended by the Division III Steering Committee, is being sponsored by the Council.

The Council also is sponsoring Proposal No. 87 on the recommendation of the Division III Steering Committee. This legislation is an alternative to Proposal No. 86, permitting a Division II school that initially was classified in Division III football after September 1, 1983, to compete in the Division III football play-offs only after a two-year waiting period.

The two proposals concerning the Division III Football Championship will require a vote by all divisions.

All of the championships legislative proposals require a majority vote of the Convention or the involved divisions for approval.
