Presidents' Commission procedures begin

Establishment of the first NCAA Presidents' Commission is under way, as authorized by adoption of Proposal No. 36 at the 1984 Convention in Dallas. It is anticipated the Commission can be appointed and announced by mid-March.

Delegates to the Convention approved an amendment to No. 36 to alter the nominating and electing procedure for the Commission and then overwhelmingly approved the amended proposal. About 40 minutes earlier—after two hours and 20 minutes of debate and parliamentary maneuvering—the Convention had rejected Proposal No. 35, promoted by the American Council on Education, which would have created a Board of Presidents with power to enact or delay implementation of NCAA legislation.

No. 35 received 48.8 percent of 641 votes cast, the largest one vote ever counted at an NCAA Convention. The proposal required a two-thirds majority for adoption; thus, the 313 votes in favor of No. 35 (328 against) fell 115 votes shy of the necessary two-thirds. It was not necessary to count the votes in favor of No. 36, which also required a minimum two-thirds favorable vote.

Letters were sent this week to each of the nine Division I-A conferences, which elect their own members of the new Commission. In addition, the amended proposal calls for each Division I-AA football championship region to select its own representative on the Commission, with nominees for those positions required to have the endorsement of at least five Division I-AA CEOs in the appropriate region.

Letters also were sent this week to the presidential nominating committee that will select the other 31 members of the Commission. NCAA President John L. Toner will schedule a telephone conference of the nominating committee to enable it to select its own chair.

Chief executive officers of all NCAA member institutions will receive an invitation in the near future to nominate candidates for the Commission, and those candidates will be considered by the presidential nominating committee. Once the committee determines its slate, additional candidates may be included in the balloting if they have the endorsement of at least 10 CEOs of member institutions.

When the slate is final, the initial NCAA Presidents' Commission will be elected by mail vote of the chief executives of all member institutions. Each CEO will be permitted to vote only for candidates who represent institutions within that chief executive's division.

"A highly significant structure has been put in place," NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers told a post-Convention press conference. "The NCAA Presidents' Commission will have both immediate and long-range impact for the betterment of intercollegiate athletics."

Byers predicted that the new Commission will be both effective and powerful not only because of the authorities vested in it by Proposal No. 36, but also because it "will include some of the most influential CEOs in the country" and because "the national interest will be focused on the Commission."

He stated that the Commission would be well-staffed and adequately funded. "The Commission will be able to order studies and research into any area of interest, and I am confident the Commission's proposals will be fully buttressed by supporting information."

Byers added, "I don't believe the Convention action on Nos. 35 and 36 means that one side won and one side lost."

"Views merged in the adoption of No. 36 as amended, and I believe most CEOs are comfortable with this arrangement."

Convention adoption of the amendment to No. 36 means that the presidential nominating committee announced in the December 28, 1983, and January 4, 1984, issues of The NCAA News will be replaced by a 13-member nominating committee, which will include the current elected heads and the immediate past elected heads of five Washington-based higher education associations, plus three CEOs who serve on the NCAA Council.

Delegates act on key athletics measures

By Thomas A. Wilson
Editor-in-Chief, The NCAA News

NCAA delegates in record numbers adopted legislation to strengthen the role of intercollegiate athletics in higher education at the Association's 78th annual Convention in Dallas January 9-11.

The Convention, attended by 1,712 delegates, approved legislation that will establish an NCAA Presidents' Commission to review athletics issues and activities, improve financial aid for student-athletes, expand opportunities for women in intercollegiate athletics, and affirm the NCAA's intention of increasing academic standards for student-athletes.

There were 687 voting delegates registered for the Convention, the highest total ever. They represented 80 percent of the eligible voter total, also a Convention record.

Long a goal of the Association, more effective involvement by presidents and chancellors of member institutions will become a reality through the establishment of a 44-member NCAA Presidents' Commission, which has the power to propose legislation; review any NCAA activity, including matters involving academics and finances; call special Conventions; commission studies, and structure the order of legislative business at NCAA Conventions. (Further details on the Presidents' Commission are reported in an article on this page).

Harvard University President Derek C. Bok, who led an unsuccessful campaign to establish a Board of Presidents with veto power over NCAA Convention actions, said the Commission would be "a major step forward."

Concerning academics, Divisions I and II delegates approved a proposal that specifies that a student-athlete must be in good academic standing to be eligible for athletic competition, and Division I institutions passed a measure requiring that junior college transfers meet the academic requirements of an institution and show satisfactory academic progress before becoming eligible for athletic competition.

A complete summary of legislative actions is published on page 7 of this issue.

The Convention provided Division I-A member institutions the authority to hold an annual legislative meeting in June to adopt football legislation dealing exclusively with that division, subject to the Association's rescission procedures, and to propose other legislation for consideration at the annual Convention.

Some major football-playing institutions had been sharply critical of the NCAA because that proposal was defeated January 10. It was reconsidered on the Convention floor a day later and was overwhelmingly approved.

"I see this as an opportunity to work within Division I-A without taking any rash steps," said Thomas C. Hansen, executive director of the Pacific-10 Conference. "We have two avenues," Hansen told the Associated Press, "the Presidents' Commission and the summer meeting."

Increased opportunities for women in intercollegiate athletics are ensured with the approval of measures to increase sponsorship of women's sports at Division I and Division II institutions. Division I members must sponsor at least eight women's sports by the 1987-88 academic year and

Division vice-presidents selected

Ade L. Sponberg, director of athletics at North Dakota State University, and Elizabeth A. Kruczek, director of athletics at Fitchburg State College, were approved at the 1984 NCAA Convention as vice-presidents in Divisions II and III, respectively.

Sponberg replaces Edwin W. Lawrence, University of Alaska, Fairbanks, as Division II vice-president, and Kruczek replaces Kenneth J. Weller, Central College (Iowa), as Division III vice-president.

Sponberg and Kruczek, along with President John L. Toner, University of Connecticut; Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis, Oregon State University, and Division I Vice-President Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University, compose this year's NCAA Administrative Committee.

The division vice-presidents preside at the meetings of their respective division steering committees. The Administrative Committee handles necessary items of business between meetings of the Council and Executive Committee.

A native of New Richland, Minnesota, Sponberg joined the Council in 1982 to complete an unexpired term and was reelected at the 1984 Convention to a full four-year term to conclude in January 1988.

In addition to his Council and Administrative Committee duties, Sponberg also serves on the following NCAA committees: Eligibility, Football Television and Wrestling. He is a former chair of the All-Star High School Games Committee.

Director of athletics at North Dakota State since 1973, Sponberg previously served in the same capacity at Augustana College (South Dakota) for five years, as a teaching fellow and assistant football coach at the University of Michigan, and as head wrestling coach and assistant football coach at Gustavus Adolphus College.

Sponberg is a 1958 graduate of Gustavus Adolphus. He earned his master's degree at Mankato State University in 1963 and his doctorate in physical education and athletic administration at the University of Michigan in 1968.

Sponberg is athletics director for one of the strongest overall Division II programs. Bison football teams have won seven North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference titles since his arrival in 1973. North Dakota State won the 1983 NCAA

Study of Proposal No. 48 is progressing

Cooperation from member institutions is resulting in progress toward completion of the study being coordinated by the NCAA Special Committee on Academic Research.

The study is designed to determine whether the standardized test-score requirement included in Bylaw 5-1-(j), from Proposal No. 48 as passed at the 1983 Convention, should be modified. More than 85 percent of the Association's Division I members have agreed to participate, and information already has been received from two-thirds (approximately 160) of the members.

Only 20 institutions have declined to participate, while 19 still have not responded. The research firm conducting the study, Advanced Technology, Incorporated (ATI), is making additional efforts to secure participation from those 19.

"The committee wants to compliment the institutions for their help," said Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University, chair of the committee. "We are very pleased with the progress thus far."

The committee will receive an analysis of the data from ATI by August 1. The results will be released to the membership next fall.

In addition to the Division I study, ATI is requesting data from a selected sample of Division II institutions. Commitments have been received from 12 of the 20 in the sample, and ATI is pursuing responses from the remaining eight.

The special committee will meet March 2 in Kansas City to continue designing the data-analysis portion of the study.

Coaches differ on merits of football play-off

By Bud Withers

Eugene Register-Guard

'Tis the season for controversy, at least if you are into bowl games and national play-offs. Deck the halls with teams of folly.

Answer these questions correctly and you may finish your Christmas shopping: Where do they hold the Independence Bowl? (For that matter, why do they hold the Independence Bowl?) Where is the Hall of Fame Bowl? How many consecutive years has Brigham Young played in the Holiday Bowl?

If you guessed Shreveport, Birmingham and six, proceed to this one: What bowl game took place in Havana in 1937? Why, Villanova and Auburn played to a 7-7 tie in the Bacardi Bowl, just as surely as 151-proof rum is tough stuff.

But now there is no more Bacardi Bowl; and if the great national hue and cry today is heeded, someday soon there may be no more bowls, at least as we know them.

Recently, Douglas Looney of Sports Illustrated, noting that a 10-1 Southern Methodist team was relegated to the Sun Bowl, wrote: "It provides compelling evidence that a college football play-off system to determine a national champion should be instituted. . . ."

"The bowls, of course, are opposed. They say play-offs would make the season too long, that too many classes would be missed, that pro football already has all the best dates, and so on. Don't believe it.

"Don Ohlmeyer, formerly executive producer of NBC Sports, now running his own production company in New York City . . . points out that . . . pro football now gets around $400 million for television and the college game some $90 million. 'A play-off would generate far more money,' said Ohlmeyer."

CBS Television, meanwhile, polled 101 coaches of Division I-A schools and found 58 favoring a play-off, 37 opposed and six undecided. Of the 58, some 22 wanted a 32-team format to include the current 16 Division I-A bowl games. Thirteen seek a 16-team play-off in eight selected bowls and 20 would like eight teams spread among the four "major" bowls.

The groundswell, of course, follows the usual injustices served up by bowl committees. Notre Dame gets into a bowl game with a 6-5 record, just because it's Notre Dame. Mississippi goes bowling at 6-5. Washington State, with a 7-4 record, is sitting by the hearth this season.

I enlisted the opinions of two Northwest coaches, Rich Brooks of Oregon and Don James of Washington. They differ, but not as you might expect.

"Basically, I've never been in favor of a play-off," said Brooks. "But my opinion changed this year.

"It would depend on how they select the teams, but won-lost record has to have something to do with it. I'd hate to think we could go 7-4, like Washington State, or 8-3, and sit home while some team with a 'national reputation' goes at 6-5."

The little guys of the world, the Oregons, certainly took a symbolic slap in the face, right along with Washington State.

Columnary Craft

For years, coaches have told players and fans, "If we can win seven games occasionally, we can go to a bowl game." Not so.

Failing that, coaches would like to have their teams finish strongly. But Washington State's finishing kick, rather than early speed, cost it a bowl game this year. By the time the Cougars got around to beating Washington, and becoming 7-4, they were already eliminated.

On the other hand, hear out James, who has the Huskies in their fifth straight bowl game.

"I've always been opposed to the play-off system," he said. "We played a 10-game schedule, then we went to 11. I think we have to trade off something. I don't see anybody giving the players a raise.

"We run them through spring practice, send them home in June, bring them back in August. The poor football player gets nothing but beat up. The pressure our players went through playing Arizona, then Southern California and Washington State . . . you know as well as I do, they don't study as well as in normal weeks. Then you'd up and play the likes of Texas, Nebraska, Southern California and UCLA."

True, football is the only NCAA sport in which no national champion is determined. But I would submit that football is different.

Football is big. Football is 90 players or in Washington's case, with walk-ons, 130. It is a horde of support people. It is academic counselors and trainers and equipment men. It is the band. Let's say some year Washington makes the finals of a 16-team national play-off. Imagine the logistics of playing, on consecutive weekends, in Orlando and Memphis and San Diego and Dallas.

So the Citrus Bowl isn't so glamorous. But it matches two teams of relatively equal abilities, playing sort of on their own level. And realizing it. Both of them can feel good about themselves, despite never having a sniff at the national championship.

What kind of appeal would Nebraska playing the 25th-best team in the nation generate in the Liberty Bowl? What would happen to Tennessee or Florida State in that game?

"They'd get killed," James said.

Upsets, you say, what about upsets? I suspect a play-off would be very much unlike the NCAA basketball tournament, where a player or two can cause a team to perform over its head, and where a team can hold the ball and make an opponent play the game in the 40s. You can't hold the ball on Nebraska.

Ohlmeyer, the TV producer, says a play-off system would generate more money for college football. But unless there were an equitable form of revenue-sharing, Oregon and Oregon State—already profiting from a lucrative Rose Bowl contract with NBC—would benefit little. The rich get richer.

So now there is no clear-cut, designated, bona fide national champion. So what. Year to year, we all know who it is. And if we don't, is there anything so evil about a good, healthy debate?

I think not. In the meantime, here's to the Bacardi Bowl.

Athletes need reward for effort

Frederick Klein, sportswriter

The Wall Street Journal

"What the college athlete really needs isn't a year off from his favorite extracurricular activity but some assurance that his effort for his school will be properly rewarded. The notion of paying salaries to college athletes has been gaining currency, but that would entail more problems than it would solve and, besides, such payments could hardly equal the value of the opportunity for a college education they are now being tendered.

"The college athlete's problem is how to overcome the obstacles to getting that education posed by his time-consuming participation in sports. The solution is to provide him with enough time to do both."

Eugene F. Corrigan, director of athletics

University of Notre Dame

United Press International

"I would never have left Virginia for any other place. I think you have to be Catholic to understand that. When I visited here, I really liked what it stood for. . . .

"I've always felt that one of the biggest jobs that an athletic director has is to, as much as he can, keep the pressure off the coaches.

"One of the biggest problems here is being able to approach people's expectations on a continuing basis. It's very, very difficult.

"You have some moral responsibilities because of what the school stands for, and I don't think you can shirk those. Digger (Phelps), Gerry (Faust), me, we are responsible here to run the kind of program that, no matter what anybody else thinks about Notre Dame, they can never say, 'They took the shortcuts.'"

Leon Hart, former football player

University of Notre Dame

Eugene Register-Guard

"The colleges have let the game get away from them. They have become a farm system for the pros. They have taken the game away from the kids and turned them into puppets.

"I am in favor of restoring the old substitution rule so that when a player leaves the game he can't come back until the next quarter. But, no, the colleges feel they have to keep up with the pros.

"So, what do they have? Specialization. We have college coaching staffs of 19 or 20 people, creating an economic situation that is polarizing the big schools and running the smaller ones out of the sport.

"I think colleges should quit worrying about who's No. 1 and concentrate on educating our youth, giving them a rounded athletic experience and letting them have fun."

Dolph Schayes, former basketball player

New York University

The New York Times

"I know there are reasons why they (New York University) chose Division III, but I would have liked to see them make a stab at Division I right away. Football, I can see. Hundreds of players, all that food, equipment, transportation. But basketball, what do you need? A few good, bright kids can turn a program around.

"NYU could be in the Big East in five years if they wanted. You've got NYU people in physical education all over the region. New York's got great players who want to stay home."

John L. Toner, NCAA president

Director of athletics

University of Connecticut

USA Today

"I don't see a change (in Division I-A football) until the membership of Division I-A and those who have been sponsoring and supporting the traditional bowls come forth with a request to create a championship. The NCAA is not going to initiate such a move.

"Personally, I'm a traditionalist. I like what we have done with the postseason bowl approach. It's a great experience for a tremendous number of different communities that support the bowl games. I'm not satisfied there is a sufficient substitute for that. . . .

"In Division I-A, there's no doubt such an event would be a spectacular and attractive money-making experience. But that is not enough of a factor to prompt the leadership to head in that direction.

"I do not expect a national championship play-off in the foreseeable future. We've heard the same talk, in a greater or lesser amount, about establishing a play-off in the last decade. But nothing has been done about it."

Letter to the Editor

Division III schools do care

To the Editor:

After I read and reread the comments made by Eugene F. Corrigan in The NCAA News (December 14 issue), I thought that I should write, as one athletics administrator of a Division III institution, and protest his characterization of Division III schools.

Specifically, he cites the fact that there is "less pressure on coaches, few if any rules violations, not great media hype, couldn't care less what Division I-A does." I agree only with the statement regarding media coverage. His other points are not necessarily true.

There is, indeed, pressure on coaches to be successful. I would imagine that the lack of media coverage at this level might create a false impression that coaches in Division III are not under "pressure" to produce. I believe Division III coaches feel significant pressures (from themselves and from the outside).

Second, while I grant that Division III schools are not cited for violations to the extent in Division I, this may well be due to the nature of the beast and to the importance that the NCAA puts on the visibility of Division I versus Division III schools. I believe there are fewer violations in Division III than at the Division I level. I also believe that there are significant violations on a Division III level.

Third, I most strongly disagree with Corrigan's statement that Division III schools couldn't care less what Division I-A does. We do care. We had better care. What happens in Division I-A affects the NCAA. What affects the NCAA affects all schools in the NCAA. What affects all schools in the NCAA affects my institution and the athletic program (men/women) in the institution.

If coaches and athletics directors and members of the general public think that what happens within Division I-A has no effect upon the other two divisions, they are just hiding their heads in the sand.

Responsible athletics administrators will do well to "care" about what Division I-A attempts to accomplish if the viability of the NCAA is to remain sound and if all the divisions within the NCAA are to remain viable and equitably supported.

Questions/Answers

Q. A student has been declared ineligible, because of dropping of courses, at the end of the first academic semester. If the student has preregistered for a full-time credit load for the succeeding semester, may the student compete in events or practice between terms?

A. Under the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(c) and Case No. 271 of the NCAA Manual, a student must have been enrolled in a minimum of 12 hours at the conclusion of the preceding term to be eligible between terms. If not, the student will become eligible again on the first day of classes of the next regular term (not interterm).

Football television modifications are studied

The NCAA Football Television Committee has agreed to explore five principles of modification of the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan for the 1984 and 1985 seasons, subject to the approval of the NCAA Council, ABC Sports and CBS Sports. The Council approved that approach in principle January 8 in Dallas.

ABC and CBS currently are the carrying networks for live college football television. A supplementary series of live cablecasts has been carried the past two seasons by the Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. The agreement with Turner Broadcasting expired at the end of the 1983 season, and the Football Television Committee is in the process of examining the supplementary series.

"The Football Television Committee is merely exploring the possibilities of this new concept," said Hugh D. Hindman, committee chair and director of athletics at Ohio State University. "We have not ruled out the possibility of continuing the supplementary series at this point. However, we feel this new concept offers more flexibility."

The five modifications outlined by the committee include the following:

- Authority for the approval of sellout, 400-mile and other exception telecasts and cablecasts as set forth in Article 16 of the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan would be eliminated, and the current Article 16 in its entirety would be rescinded.

- Authority for the administration of the supplementary series would be eliminated, if the principles ultimately are adopted. Article 23 of the plan would be rescinded in its entirety. The committee would consider renegotiating the supplementary series for 1984 and 1985 if the principles ultimately are not adopted.

- The authority for each conference and institution to establish and administer Saturday night exception telecasts or cablecasts (including pay-per-view presentations). A new Article 16 would be prepared by the committee, setting forth the terms and conditions for such telecasts or cablecasts, including geographic restrictions, network rights of selection, time conflicts with network series games, closed-circuit television, and standards of presentation and commercial sponsorship.

- A plan similar to the one described above would be established for telecasts or cablecasts other than on Fridays and Saturdays to be used by Division I-AA members and conferences and Division I-A conferences that are located in the same district as another I-A conference.

- Each carrying network (ABC and CBS) would have the option to select two wild-card games during the 1985 season, regardless of the appearance limitations as set forth in Article 13.

In a separate television-related matter at the Convention, members of Divisions I-A and I-AA adopted by common vote a resolution that would empower the Council to call a special meeting of those members to evaluate a pending U.S. Supreme Court decision on possible antitrust violations in the Association's administration of college football television. In effect, the resolution extends the Council's deadline for calling a special meeting under principles adopted by Divisions I-A and I-AA in a July 1983 mail referendum.

The Supreme Court is scheduled to hear arguments this spring in the antitrust suit brought against the NCAA by the Universities of Georgia and Oklahoma, challenging the Association's control of live college football television.

Delegate in Dallas hospital

Lindsey Merritt, faculty athletic representative at North Carolina Central University, was listed in critical condition at Parkland Hospital, Dallas, Texas, January 17, following surgery the previous week.

Merritt was stricken January 10 while attending the annual NCAA Convention at Loews Anatole Hotel.

Merritt underwent surgery January 10, but the hospital would not give details of the procedure. He is believed to have suffered a blood clot.

Don Harnum, director of athletics at Susquehanna University, discovered Merritt slumped in a telephone booth outside the Convention ballroom and summoned aid. An emergency squad took Merritt to Parkland Hospital.

"I went out of the Convention hall to make a phone call and there were several people crowded around the phone booth," Harnum said. "I could see that the person inside was obviously in trouble."

Harnum tried to assist Merritt, who is in his mid-50s, but got no response. He contacted the hotel bell captain, and the hospital security staff called an ambulance. Meanwhile, Harnum reentered the Convention session and informed other members of the North Carolina Central delegation of Merritt's plight.

"It all depends on how much time you have to put in to win. From my limited experience of coaching at a major college (assistant coach at Mississippi State in the late 1950s), we put in just as much time. We're up here seven days a week and work seven or eight hours on Sunday."

"I'd love to recruit in the inner cities, but those players' grades, with rare exceptions, are just too low."

"We're not able to recruit the blue-chippers, with no scholarships and no redshirting (the latter also against Ivy League rules). So you go back to the original premise. Every athlete has to make his time count because around here you can't get away with anything."

"My main objection has to do with the indiscriminate application of a given test score to all institutions of higher education. "That same student might very well have a reasonable chance of completing a given program within a large university where the median test scores of the majors of that program are in the 800s or 900s, even though the university as a whole has higher median test scores."

Olathe (Kansas) Daily News

"College athletics is big business for the schools, alumni associations, television networks, advertisers, student funds and shysters of the trade, the bookmakers. But none of the profits go to the rank-and-file, the players. Instead, high school stars are cajoled and 'recruited,' tempted and twisted. The big colleges with the big dollars to spend end up with the best recruits and biggest schedules. They have become farm leagues for professional sport, especially in football, baseball and basketball. Why deny it?"

"Professional sport should return the favor. The big leagues should finance trust funds in the major sports to pay athletes while they play in college. Salary schedules, for college athletes who qualify, would be established according to talent, performance and potential."

"This is the way other industries finance students in architecture, journalism, law, medicine, science, education and other professions. It should apply as well in sport."

"A number of times back early in my career, I had an opportunity to get out of coaching and go into business. My brother, who's in the graduation-supply business, has offered me a job a number of times that would have paid more."

"But I enjoy coaching and enjoy the association with the people who are in it. I think a coach put it very well one time when he said, 'We're like itinerant farmers. We don't make a lot of money, but we get to do a lot of things that are very nice in our profession that we probably couldn't do at even a little bit more money than what we make.'"

"A college football play-off would be an event of tremendous impact on the American public."

"College football has been, and is, a game of greater diversity and greater excitement than its professional counterpart. But its popularity and image have not maintained pace with professional football in recent years. . . ."

"A college football play-off would be in the upper echelon as a television property; and it would, in time, stand in stature with events such as the World Series or the Super Bowl."

"There have been a variety of formats advocated. I believe the important step is to break the ice and have the event utilizing almost any format."

Basketball notes

Marv Harshman is big on size over speed

Quotes of the week

Washington's veteran coach Marv Harshman, winner of 600-plus games, on the Pacific-10 scene: "There seems to be a movement throughout the league toward quickness. There are all these 6-2 and 6-3 guys who are shooting from outside and out-rebounding bigger people. I still like the idea of having a big guy. Quick guys get tired. Big guys don't shrink." (Jim Muldoon, Pacific 10 Conference SID)

First-year Dartmouth coach Reggie Minton saw his team shoot 12-for-13 from the field in the second half of a victory over Manhattan, then hit 17-for-19 in the second half of its next game, a loss to Pennsylvania. That is 90.6 percent accuracy. In the same two games, his team shot only 40.9 percent from the field in the first half (18-for-44 combined). Asked why the difference, Minton never hesitated: "That's easy. In the second half, we were shooting at the bigger basket." (Bruce Wood, Dartmouth assistant SID)

Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs to his wife after she accused him of loving basketball more than her: "But I do love you more than track."

Tubbs on future scheduling: "I like to take my teams to as many different places as possible. We'd like to be the first team in history to play the University of Mars. We'd even go up there and play, as long as they'd guarantee us a return game." (Kerry Tharp, Oklahoma assistant SID)

Southern California's Derrick Dowell, a freshman from Evansville, Indiana, was in awe after seeing the southern California homes of Bob Hope and Henry Winkler. Said Dowell: "You don't see things like this in Indiana. Who knows? Tomorrow I might see the Brady Bunch or the Partridge Family." (Nick Salata, Southern California assistant SID)

After an 8-0 start, Navy coach Paul Evans was looking forward to the Rainbow Classic when a car ran a red light and hit his car. He was hospitalized with two broken ribs and a collapsed lung and could not make the flight to Hawaii (he finally made it during the second half of a first-round loss to Tennessee). Upon arriving, the Navy contingent was met by Art Young, their tournament host, who informed them that his host college a year ago had been Oklahoma, whose coach Billy Tubbs later was hit by a car while jogging. This prompted assistant coach Pete Herrmann, speaking at the tip-off dinner, to comment: "Gee, Hawaii's beautiful, and the weather is great, but I'm afraid to leave my hotel room." Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, following Herrmann, added: "Maryland's here next year. Now I know who we should get to host Lefty (Driesell, Maryland coach)." (Rick Chryst, Navy assistant SID)

From Montana State junior Craig Kilborn, a 6-5½ guard-forward: "There is an advantage to being slow. It makes it a lot easier to look smooth." (Bruce Parker, Montana State SID)

Prairie View A&M is struggling with eight freshmen, five redshirts or walkons and two junior college transfers. If that is not enough, the Panthers played their first eight games on the road because of renovations to their home gym. Quips coach Jim Duplantier: "We're so young I tried to order six cases of Pampers and several pacifiers. The administration said no . . . they may change their minds after they see us play." (Henry Hawkins, Prairie View A&M SID)

First-year Illinois-Chicago coach Willie Little: "Last year, we let slow-down teams set the tempo. Now it takes them 30 seconds to learn that we won't play country and western."

Leon Wood of Cal State Fullerton is among the leading scorers in Division I with 24.8 per-game average

We prefer disco-upbeat—all 94 feet." (James Schmidt, Illinois-Chicago SID)

Harvard sophomore Pat Smith does not score much at point guard but is a real asset in handing out assists. But perhaps his real forte is drawing offensive fouls. After he drew a severe offensive foul late in the Princeton game, statistician Kevin Fitzgerald noted it was Smith's third time on the floor in that game and quipped: "Smith takes more charges than Bloomingdale's." (Ed Markey, Harvard assistant SID)

South Carolina, a charter member of the Atlantic Coast Conference, withdrew after the 1971 season and recently joined the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference, ending 12 years as an independent. Said coach Bill Foster after his team's first Metro victory (55-49 over Cincinnati): "Boy, it sure has been a long drought between conference wins for us." (Jamie Kimbrough, South Carolina associate SID)

UCLA women's head coach Billie Moore had reason to be concerned about the 1984 season when center Necie Thompson, the team's two-year scoring and rebounding leader, was advised last summer by doctors to sit out her senior season. The 6-1 Thompson was the Bruins' second all-time leading rebounder and fourth all-time leading scorer. Thus, when Moore heard that two members of the Netherlands' national team, 6-4 freshman center Annette Keur and 6-3 junior forward Marja VanHelvoort, were interested in playing in the United States, she was somewhat interested. "We started pursuing it as we do most any lead," she explained to USA Today's Verenda Smith, "but when we heard they were 6'4 and 6-3, we checked into it a little quicker."

Florida State women's head coach Janice Dykehouse had her Lady Seminoles ready to play a tough game when they met nationally ranked Missouri. The extra preparation seemed to have paid off when the teams ended regulation tied at 65 points. However, Missouri did all of the scoring in the overtime period and won, 81-65, prompting Dykehouse to comment, "We were well prepared for a 40-minute game. Unfortunately, it lasted 45 minutes." (J. D. Pearson, Florida State assistant SID)

Temple senior Marilyn Stephens is nationally ranked in scoring and rebounding, and holds virtually every Temple women's basketball record. She recalls a time when she was not such a great player. "I was so bad in high school," she admits, "that the coach would put me in to jump center and then call a timeout to take me out of the game." (Mary Dillon, Temple assistant SID)

After helping her team win the

Delta State's Deborah Temple is the leading scorer in Division I with an average of 32.2 points recent Buckeye Classic tournament in Columbus, Ohio, Georgia forward Janet Harris was selected as the tournament's most valuable player. During an interview with the local media, Harris was asked whether she deserved the selection. "No" was the emphatic response. Asked who should have been voted MVP, Harris named teammate Katrina McClain, a 6-2 freshman forward. "Does that mean that you are going to give Katrina your watch?" queried one of the reporters, indicating the gift awarded the MVP. Harris smiled and responded, "I said I'd have voted for Katrina. That's all." (Norm Reilly, Georgia assistant SID)

The Auburn women's team ended a two-game losing streak, which included a loss to cross-state rival Alabama, by defeating nationally ranked Mississippi. Head coach Joe Ciampi, a father of four daughters, was relieved. "Now maybe I can look my kids in the eye. Maybe now they will listen to their dad when he tells them to clean their rooms." (Joseph Hunt, Auburn graduate assistant SID)

Family affairs

Kip Jones, 6-5 junior at Bentley, is a son of K. C. Jones, former all-America at San Francisco (when the Dons, with Bill Russell, won two straight NCAA championships in 1955 and 1956) and current Boston Celtics head coach. Through his first eight games, Kip made his dad proud with some eye-popping figures—73.4 percent from the field (No. 2 nationally in Division II) and 92.3 percent at the line (No. 4). He also averages better than seven rebounds and two steals per game, leading the team to a 6-2 record. (Dick Lipe, Bentley SID)

Mercer may have the only father-son combination of head coach and play-by-play announcer. Father Bill Bibb is in his 10th season as head coach of the Bears, and son Brad is in his second season as the play-by-play man for Mercer games. (Bobby Pope, Mercer SID)

Muskingum coach Jim Burson says, "You can go to John Glenn High School games on Friday night and watch my son Jay score 54 points and then come watch my entire Muskie team score 54 points on Saturday night." (Kelly Clevenger, Muskingum SID)

Thanks to the Hinson family, Baptist's basketball future is in good hands. Ben Hinson, a freshman, scored 23 points in the championship game and was named most valuable player in the Coast Cities Classic. His sister, Priscilla, also a freshman, scored 27 points against Coker to lead the women's team to its first victory in two seasons (0-23 last year). Both are from Hamlet, North Carolina. (Howie Bagwell Jr., Baptist SID)

Donna Yaffe, Brown, is the only Ivy League representative among leading women scorers in Division I

Oregon junior Mike Matheson showed no trepidation whatever about a road trip to Brigham Young in Provo, Utah, less than an hour south of his home town of Salt Lake City. Matheson quipped: "We run that state." His uncle is Scott Matheson, governor of Utah. (Steve Hellyer, Oregon SID)

Jim and John Haufler, both blond, 6-1 and 175, are starting guards at Manhattan. They may be the first identical twins to start together at a Division I college since Kim and Kerry Hughes, a pair of 6-11 players at Wisconsin (1972-1974). They posted identical 16-point scoring averages as seniors at Elmont, New York, High School. They look so much alike that their statistics must be checked carefully after each game—sometimes even to the point of reviewing videotape. "They know each others' moves better," says coach Gordon Chiesa. "No question, it confuses other teams. Sometimes in practice our own team is confused about who they are guarding." The twins are juniors, and they say Chiesa needed two years—longer than most—to tell them apart. Says Jim, "You really have to concentrate." Says Chiesa, "Jim's better looking." (Dave Goldberg, Manhattan SID)

Mississippi women's coach Van Chancellor can sympathize with Manhattan's Gordon Chiesa. He has an identical problem, too—junior reserve guards Lindy and Lucy Noble. "Lindy and Lucy resemble each other so closely, that if it weren't for their different jersey numbers I'd hardly ever get them straight," says Chancellor. "The fact that they are twins gets the two a good deal of crowd support and has generated much outside interest in our team." Though they are only 5-4, Chancellor points out they are exceptional outside shooters who are top-notch zone players and are able to control the tempo of the offense when on the court. The Nobles, determined to be part of the Lady Rebels since the eighth grade, turned down scholarship offers from several junior colleges and smaller in-state colleges for an opportunity to walk on at Mississippi. Their perseverance was rewarded when they were granted scholarships as sophomores. "I've been thoroughly pleased with the Nobles," Chancellor praises. "They have been good for the Lady Rebel program and are a credit to our basketball team." (Leslie Williams, Mississippi assistant SID)

Twilight zone 13

On Friday the 13th of January, Florida State senior Sue Galkantas became the first Florida State player, man or woman, to reach 2,000 career points. Her historic moment, a free throw, sounds like something out of "The Twilight Zone." It came against Miami (Florida) at the 13:13 mark

Bentley's Kip Jones is hitting 73.4 percent on field goals and 92.3 percent on free throws in Division II of the first half—the 13th game of the year—and it was her 13th point of the evening. And the 76-64 victory improved Florida State's all-time series record against Miami to 13-1. (Phil Stambaugh, Florida State assistant director of communications)

Lucky gloves

One of Carleton's reserves, sophomore Cody Breuter, showed up during a warm-up drill at the first home game with gloves like those of race car drivers—the kind with half fingers and other openings. Asked about the gloves, he replied: "Coach, these are my shooting gloves." When the team came out of the gate 7-0, the gloves had reached the superstition stage. (Jack Thurnblad, Carleton head basketball coach)

The streaks

The Denver men's team now has won 63 straight home games. (Bill Scharton, SID)

Southwest Missouri State's Anthony Boggs ran his streak of consecutive free throws made to 36 Monday night with eight more in a 70-69 victory over Illinois-Chicago. That gave him the national lead in Division I free-throw accuracy at 97.6 percent on 41 of 42. (Mark Stillwell, Southwest Missouri SID)

Northwestern junior forward Anucha Browne has scored 20 or more points in 12 consecutive games dating to the 1983 season. Her string was broken on January 8 when she scored only 10 points against Michigan State. How many other players have more than 10 consecutive games scoring 20 points or more? (Sharon Miller, Northwestern assistant SID)

Chess vs. checkers

Wayne State (Michigan) assistant coach Roger Ussery on the types of players the university likes to recruit: "There are two types of players—those who play basketball like it was a game of chess and those who play like it was checkers. The chess players realize the intricate strategies, the necessity of carefully thinking out each play and understand that every player, like every piece on the board, is important. . . . Players who treat the game like checkers usually are one-man showboats. . . . We prefer the Bobby Fishers to the wily checker players." (Mike Bovino, Wayne State SID)

The name game

Morehead State has three senior starters named Jeff—Tucker, Tipton and Fultz—and the graduate assistant SID is Jeff D'Alessio. Also, there are two Sullivans—senior Arthur and sophomore Timmy—who are brothers and play guard. If that is not enough, two managers share the last name of Mason (Vince and Scott, not related) and the SID (Craig Bohnert) and part-time assistant coach (Craig Morris) have the same first name. (Craig Bohnert, Morehead State SID)

Bradford

Bradford joined the Duke faculty in 1966 and served as associate dean for medical education from 1974 to 1978. In addition to his teaching duties, he now serves as director of pediatric pathology.

A native of Rochester, New York, Bradford received a bachelor's degree from Amherst College in 1954 and a doctorate from Western Reserve University School of Medicine in 1958. He trained at Harvard in pediatrics and pathology and is board-certified in both specialties.

He was appointed faculty athletic representative at Duke in 1979 and is president-elect of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Bradford recently was named visiting scholar in the division of accreditation of the Association of American Medical Colleges. He has published more than 80 articles in his specialty of pediatric pathology and medical education.

Carvajal

Carvajal has been director of athletics at Cal State Bakersfield since 1972; and, since that time, Bakersfield teams have appeared in the nation's top 10 in eight of the 10 sports the university sponsors.

A 1964 graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, Carvajal played in the same backfield with Craig Morton. Carvajal played halfback and linebacker for the Golden Bears and was named the most valuable senior in 1963. He also participated in rugby at California and later coached the sport at the University of California, Santa Barbara.

Carvajal was an assistant football coach at California and California-

Santa Barbara. He returned to Berkeley in 1967 as assistant varsity football coach and assistant to the athletics director and remained in that capacity until 1972.

A native of Oakland, California, Carvajal earned a master's degree in administration from California.

Olson

Olson joined the Florida International staff in 1979 as assistant director of athletics. When Tom Wonderling resigned as athletics director in January 1980, Olson was named acting AD and then became full-time director for men and women in September 1980.

Prior to coming to Florida International, Olson was athletics director at Ely High School in Pompano Beach, Florida.

A graduate of Bowling Green State University, Olson has two master's degrees—one in physical education from the University of Miami (Florida) and the other in sports administration from Biscayne College.

Under Olson's leadership, five sports have been added to the Florida International program. She also has upgraded women's basketball and was responsible for moving the university's baseball program to Division I.

Olson was appointed by Florida Governor Bob Graham to the high school student-athlete improvement committee.

Yoder

A member of the West Chester staff since 1962, Yoder assumed the duties of athletics director in February 1979. He also serves the university as faculty athletic representative.

A native of West Chester, Pennsylvania, Yoder participated in football and baseball at West Chester High School and played quarterback at West Chester University, graduating in 1959.

Following graduation, Yoder was a physical education teacher and coached football, basketball and baseball in West Chester area high schools for three years before returning to his alma mater in 1962 as assistant professor in the physical education department and assistant track and soccer coach.

In 1963, Yoder assumed additional responsibilities as freshman football coach and remained in that capacity until 1972, when he was selected as offensive coordinator. Yoder earned a master's degree in 1962 from Villanova University.

Yoder also teaches graduate safety education courses in the school of health sciences at West Chester. He has served as coordinator of safety education for the past 12 years.

Hockey league adds two Michigan schools

Ice hockey's "new look" changed again last week when it was announced that Michigan Technological University and Northern Michigan University will join the Western Collegiate Hockey Association next season.

The move of the two teams from the Central Collegiate Hockey Association means that none of the Division I men's ice hockey conferences will have the same members as this season. The current Eastern College Athletic Conference ice hockey league is splitting into two groups—a "super-seven" league and a league composed primarily of Ivy Group institutions.

Michigan Tech was a charter member of the WCHA in 1959 but left in 1980 to join the CCHA along with the University of Michigan, Michigan State University and the University of Notre Dame. The Huskies have participated in NCAA championship play 10 times and have won three national titles. Northern Michigan, joining the WCHA for the first time, has made two appearances in post-season play.

"We are very pleased that old friend Michigan Tech is rejoining our conference," said George M. Schubert, WCHA chair, of the University of North Dakota. "Secondly, we are pleased to welcome a new member, Northern Michigan, to our family."

"We always have believed that the WCHA is the strongest college hockey league in the nation," Schubert added. "With the addition of two fine institutions of higher learning, which have produced excellent intercollegiate hockey programs, we believe the WCHA is stronger than ever."

Schubert said that the expansion will be incorporated into plans already announced for interleague play between WCHA teams and teams in the Eastern super-seven league.

New York considers sports lottery

New York Governor Mario Cuomo's 1984-85 budget will include a sports lottery betting system, patterned after the football pool cards offered by illegal bookmakers.

Under the plan, New Yorkers could place legal bets as early as next September on professional football, baseball and basketball. According to Russell Gladieux, deputy director of the state's lottery division, the system would be designed to offer a better payout than illegal pools, with winners taking in as much as $2,000 for a $1 bet.

Estimated revenues for the last seven months of fiscal 1984-85 would be $40 million, according to Gladieux. He said the estimated take for the following year would be about $110 million.

Under terms of the plan, half of the estimated $285 million a year in bets would be returned in winnings, 35 percent would go to fund state aid to education and 15 percent would pay for operational costs.

The state's attorney general has yet to issue an opinion on the legality of the system.

Executive Committee Summary

Following are the complete actions taken by the Executive Committee in its January 8 meeting in Dallas:

Financial

The Executive Committee took the following actions regarding financial matters:

Reviewed and approved the audited financial report for the 1982-83 fiscal year. The report showed total assets of $11,169,671. The committee reviewed the 1982-83 Annual Reports and corrected a statement on page 29. Although expenses for 1982-83 operations did increase by 3.6 percent, the committee voted to delete the statement from the 1982-83 Annual Reports that attributed the increase to legal fees resulting from two major lawsuits filed against the Association. Also, factors in the Association's 15 percent increase in revenues were acceleration in Division I championships and the football television assessment, not income from investments.

Reviewed and approved the analysis of 1982-83 men's and women's championships. The amount distributed to teams from 1982-83 championships was $12,866,735, compared to $11,636,356 in 1981-82.

Reviewed the statement of unallocated surplus for the 1982-83 fiscal year, and noted that the balance on August 31, 1983, was $204,810. The Association finished the 1982-83 fiscal year with an excess balance of revenue over expenses of $3,094,391.

Approved a recommendation to purchase loss-of-revenue insurance for the 1984 Final Four. The program will be composed of two policies, a basic "named-peril" loss-of-revenue policy for $10 million and an all-risk policy for $1 million. The named-peril policy will be underwritten by Aetna, for a premium of $5,385. This policy covers the Association for loss of gross receipts in the event any of the three games of the Final Four is cancelled because of a catastrophe, illness or injury to any of the teams scheduled to participate. The all-risk policy will be offered by Frank B. Hall and Company of Illinois, and underwritten by Lloyds of London, for a premium of $7,500. This policy would protect the Association for the loss of income if the Final Four would have to be postponed and/or relocated to another site. The total premium for the program is $12,885.

Administrative

The Executive Committee took the following actions regarding Telephone Conference No. 21 of the NCAA Administrative Committee:

Denied a proposal to preclude a team that does not have a winning record from being ranked in any official NCAA sports poll.

Delayed until its May 7-8 meeting a recommendation that the Division I Men's Basketball Championship be exempted from the requirement that participants in NCAA championships located within approximately 250 miles of the site of competition must travel via ground transportation rather than by air.

Championships

Division I Men's Basketball: The Executive Committee approved expansion of the 1985 Division I Men's Basketball Championship from 53 to 64 teams. The format includes eight first- and second-round sites, with 16 teams in each of the four regional tournaments. Afternoon/evening double-headers will be played at each of the eight first- and second-round sites. There will be no byes in the 1985 tournament. The Executive Committee also approved dates and sites for 1985 tournament sessions and seeding matchups for each of the four regionals. (These items appeared in the December 5 issue of The NCAA News.)

Regarding distribution of net receipts for the 1984 Division I Men's Basketball Championship, the Executive Committee supported the Division I Men's Basketball Committee's recommendation that the additional rights of $2,000,500 in 1984 be distributed in the following manner: 60 percent to the gross receipts of the tournament and 40 percent to the Association for emergency needs.

The Executive Committee voted to consider a change in the distribution of net receipts from the Division I Men's Basketball Championship, beginning with the 1985 championship. The Executive Committee suggested a ratio of distribution of profits from the Division I Men's Basketball Championship of 50 percent to participating institutions, 40 percent to the Association and 10 percent to a quasidowndown program, which would support basketball-related expenses such as the Association's enforcement program. The Executive Committee agreed that the establishment of this program would eliminate total dependence on current reserves. The recommendation will be studied by the Division I Men's Basketball Committee and the Executive Committee in future meetings.

Division III Football: The Executive Committee approved expansion of the 1984 Division III Football Championship from eight to 16 teams. The championship begins November 17 with first-round games, followed by quarterfinal competition November 24, semifinals December 1 and the championship December 8. The 16-team bracket provides a 1:12 ratio with the current 196 Division III member institutions.

Division II Men's Golf: The Executive Committee agreed to maintain a field of 88 participants in the 1984 Division II Men's Golf Championships, rather than reduce the field in accordance with the 1:16 participation-ratio guideline for individual-team championships. Numbers will be reviewed again after the 1984 championships.

Division I Women's Softball: The Executive Committee upheld an earlier decision by the Women's Softball Committee to deny automatic qualification to the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference for the Division I Women's Softball Championship.

Division I-AA Football: The Executive Committee granted an appeal by the Southwestern Athletic Conference that five teams in the conference be allowed to compete for one year for the conference championship in Division I-AA football. The required minimum for NCAA championships competition is six teams.

Division I Men's and Women's Indoor Track: The Executive Committee asked for further rationale from the Men's and Women's Track and Field Committees regarding a proposal to expand the number of relay teams in the Division I indoor championships from 12 to 16. A limit of 12 teams will be in effect for 1984 Division I competition.

Division III Men's Ice Hockey: With the passage of Proposal No. 85, the Executive Committee voted that institutions in Division III that are classified Division I in men's ice hockey be deleted from the total number of institutions that sponsor the sport in Division III.

Committee Recommendations

NCAA Basketball Television Negotiations: The Executive Committee approved the negotiations committee's report regarding distribution of receipts from the new contract with CBS for the 1985, 1986 and 1987 Division I men's basketball telecasts. See Executive Committee, page 12

Dropout rate said to be rising

The number of students dropping out of high school rose sharply from 1972 to 1982, according to an Education Department study. The study also showed that average college entrance examination scores of high school students have increased slightly in the past two years after a steady decline earlier.

The dropout rate was increasing during a period of marked increase in spending on public schools and, according to Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell, the Federal government should not play a larger role in funding public education because increased spending does not necessarily improve the quality of education.

Bell said money is not the only answer to education problems. "The highest-spending states were not noticeably the highest-achieving states," Bell said. The study revealed that no clear pattern existed between the level of spending on education and the level of scholastic achievement.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, criticized the study, saying, "The education statistics are misleading and could undermine efforts by states that are already making progress by spending more money on education."

$16 billion in college aid available

Financial aid available to the nation's college students is estimated at $16.1 billion for the current academic year, according to the College Board.

That figure represents a decline of $2 billion in the past two years from a high of $18 billion. The Federal government, which accounted for about 40 percent of the financial aid to college students in the 1960s, now contributes about 80 percent of total assistance through various programs, according to "Trends in Student Aid: 1963 to 1983," a study prepared by the College Board.

Allowing for inflation, the real value of student aid has declined 21 percent in the 1980s, according to the report, because of decisions by the Reagan administration and Congress to phase out Social Security benefits for college students, restrictions on eligibility for Guaranteed Student Loans and a drop in the use of veterans' benefits, the Chicago Tribune reported.

In terms of what the dollar was worth in 1982, there was $1.7 billion in aid available in 1963-64 and $18.2 billion available in 1975-76, the study said.

Student aid increased more than five times as fast as college expenditures in the past two decades and also outpaced enrollment growth.

In answering criticism of administration policy concerning financial aid, Gary J. Jones, undersecretary of education, said in a letter to The New York Times that "the Department of Education is doing nothing to deny student loan money. . . . We in the administration are well aware of how important government guaranteed loans are for college students." Jones said that misrepresentation of administration policy in the press has led many students and parents to think Federal aid was simply not available when in fact it was available to meet the needs of the students.

Reagan seeks curbs on school crime

The Reagan administration has decided that crime and violence are major impediments to excellence in education, and it plans to announce soon a program to fight those problems.

A recent report prepared for President Reagan stated, "Discipline is the public's foremost concern about schools. Three million secondary school children are victims of crime each month."

Most school crimes are not punished, the report said, and the cost of vandalism exceeds spending for textbooks.

Reagan is expected to announce the anticrime program later this month. It is not expected to require significant expenditures.

The report to the President said that black students are nearly three times as likely as whites to be victims of crime, and Hispanics are more than twice as likely as whites to be victims.

Increased discipline in the schools will present problems, the administration believes, because the Supreme Court said in 1975 that a student facing suspension must be given oral or written notice of the charges against him, and, if he denied the charges, an explanation of the evidence and an opportunity to present his version of the events.

Briefly in the News

New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean has announced a $3 million capital project to improve football facilities at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, and he has been named honorary head coach of the Scarlet Knights' football team. The money, half from the 1984-85 state budget and half from the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, has been earmarked for an artificial surface and to build a coaching and training facility and an all-weather fieldhouse. Hamilton College lays claim to the best record in men's basketball of any NCAA team in the past eight years going into the current season. The Division III school has compiled a 170-37 record during that time under coach Tom Murphy, for a percentage of .821. According to figures compiled by the Hamilton sports information office, Cheney University of Pennsylvania (.814) is second; University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill (.810) third; University of California, Los Angeles (.799), fourth, and DePaul University (.797), fifth.

Northwest Missouri State University's basketball program is the talk of NCAA Division II, with the women's team (14-0) ranked No. 3 and the men's team (11-2) ranked No. 5. . . . Two chemical-use clinics, designed to help coaches respond to drug and alcohol problems among student-athletes, are scheduled January 24-25 at East Stroudsburg University of Pennsylvania. The clinics will be under the direction of the Hazelden Foundation of Minnesota. East Stroudsburg's department of athletics is sponsoring the clinics. For information, contact Jean DeSchriver (717/424-6327).

The primary benefactor of a multisport indoor workout facility at the University of Kansas is Fred B. Anschutz of Denver. Anschutz has donated about half the cost of the $3 million building, which will bear his name. The remainder of the costs will be provided by matching private donations, according to Monte C. Johnson, director of athletics. . . . Fifty years of men's intercollegiate swimming and diving will be commemorated at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, February 11. Former coach and athletics director Herman Kluge and captains from past teams will be honored.

Northeast Louisiana University's baseball team, champion of the Southland Conference, placed 13 team members on the fall semester honor roll; and one player, Blane Lockley, registered a 4.000 grade-point average. The team members were among 78 student-athletes at the institution who were on the honor roll. . . . They were up a little too high to drag their feet on the ground, but the University of Florida men's basketball team still managed to arrive at a safe landing after an engine on its plane caught fire during takeoff from Starkville, Mississippi, last week. The Gators were aboard a DC-3, used for team travel, when the fire broke out in the left engine at about 300 feet. "It was a big ball of fire right out my window," said coach Norm Sloan. The team was returning to Gainesville, Florida, after defeating Mississippi State University.

Hatfield selected coach of year

Ken Hatfield, who led Air Force to its winningest season in 1983 before coming head football coach at Arkansas, recently was selected Kodak coach of the year in Division I-A by the American Football Coaches Association.

Air Force posted a 10-2 record this season, including a 9-3 victory over Mississippi in the Independence Bowl. It was the first Air Force team to win 10 games in a season and to appear in two consecutive bowl games. Last season, Hatfield led the Falcons to an 8-5 record, a mark that broke a streak of eight consecutive losing seasons. Air Force capped the season with a 36-28 victory over Vanderbilt in the Hall of Fame Bowl.

Hatfield, who lettered three years as a defensive back at Arkansas, was hired at his alma mater after a five-year stint at Air Force.

He was selected over four regional Division I-A finalists: Jack Bicknell of Boston College, Pat Dye of Auburn, Mike White of Illinois and Tom Osborne of Nebraska.

The coach-of-the-year winners in other divisions were Rey Dempsey of Southern Illinois in Division I-AA, Don Morton of North Dakota State in Division II and Bob Reade of Augustana (Illinois) in Division III.

All three coaches led their teams to national championships. Dempsey, who has since become head coach at Memphis State, directed Southern Illinois to a 12-1 record and the Division I-AA title. Morton, who has compiled a 46-12 record in five seasons at North Dakota State, led the Bison to the Division II championship. Reade, in his fifth season at Augustana, captured the Division III title after play-off appearances in 1981 and 1982.

Pomeroy Award to go to women

The Frances Pomeroy Naismith-Basketball Hall of Fame award will go coeducational this year.

Presented annually since 1969 to the nation's outstanding senior male collegiate basketball player under six feet tall, the men's award winner will have a feminine counterpart this season. The women's award will be presented to a player under 5-6. Both awards will be presented at a special media luncheon April 30 as part of the enshrinement ceremonies at the hall of fame in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Criteria for the women's award will be identical to the men's, with special emphasis on character, leadership, loyalty and all-around basketball ability. Donna Devlin, president, and Betty Jaynes, executive director, of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association have appointed a committee to screen women's nominations.

Owners of Garden eyeing move

Madison Square Garden—recognized for years as the "Mecca" of college basketball and home of two professional sports franchises—may be razed to make room for an office building.

Representatives of Gulf & Western Corp., owners of the Garden, have discussed the possibility with city and state government officials. Gulf & Western also owns the Garden's two professional tenants—the New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association and the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

A Gulf & Western spokesman said the Rangers and Knicks would be moved to a proposed new arena in the city, allowing Gulf & Western to "take advantage of the valuable property that is the Garden."

Riddell sued by accident victim

A former high school football player paralyzed since a head-on collision in a 1974 junior varsity game has filed a $50 million Federal lawsuit against a helmet manufacturer.

Roger Lawrence, a former Florida highway patrol dispatcher, filed the suit December 29 in Tallahassee. The suit alleges that the manufacturer of the helmet—Riddell, Inc., of Chicago—was negligent for not warning that its product, in this case its Kra-Lite-2 Helmet, would not protect players as well as other helmets on the market at that time.

Baseball-related deaths reported

In a copyrighted story, Collegiate Baseball reported recently that more than twice as many youngsters in the 5-14 age group died from injuries sustained while playing baseball than from playing football.

During an eight-year period (1973-80), the tabloid reported there were 40 baseball-related deaths in that age group compared to 19 in football. Figures were obtained from a 47-page report published by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Of the 40 deaths, 24 were caused by being struck by a ball and eight were caused by being struck by a bat.

However, the magazine reported that baseball deaths for all ages (183) were lower than football deaths (260) during the same period.

Deitre Collins

Deitre Collins selected for Broderick Cup

Deitre Collins, a two-time all-America volleyball player from the University of Hawaii, was named the 1982-83 Broderick Cup winner as the outstanding college woman athlete of the year at a banquet January 10 in Dallas.

Collins, who led Hawaii to the NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Championship the past two years, was selected from among nine other Broderick Award finalists, including last year's recipient, swimmer Tracy Caulkins of the University of Florida, in balloting by directors of women's athletics.

Collins, a 5-11 senior middle blocker, was the seventh recipient of the cup and the first volleyball player.

Nancy Lieberman, the 1978-79 Broderick Cup winner and former basketball standout at Old Dominion University, presented the award to Collins.

The other eight 1982-83 Broderick Award winners were tennis player Louise Allen, Trinity University (Texas); gymnast Jeri Cameron, Arizona State University; basketball player Anne Donovan, Old Dominion University; golfer Penny Hammel, University of Miami (Florida); field hockey player Yolanda Hightower, Old Dominion University; track and field athlete Jackie Joyner, University of California, Los Angeles; softball player Lori Stoll, Texas A&M University, and cross country runner Lesley Welch, University of Virginia.

MVC to move

The Missouri Valley Conference will move its offices to Kansas City, Missouri, July 1, 1985, after 12 years in Tulsa, Oklahoma, according to Richard D. Martin, commissioner.

"It will be for ease of travel for the conference office and the people in the league," Martin said. Faculty representatives of the nine conference schools approved the relocation in a meeting last week at the annual NCAA Convention in Dallas.

Final approval of the move is expected in May when the chief executive officers of the league's institutions meet.

A cost study showed that transferring the headquarters from Tulsa to an unspecified location in Kansas City was more practical than keeping offices in Tulsa or moving to St. Louis or Chicago, other cities considered for new offices, Martin said.

Delegates

thereafter, and Division II institutions voted to sponsor at least six sports for women by 1987-88 and thereafter.

NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers said the action represented "a strong commitment to women's intercollegiate athletics by the membership without regard to the enforcement of Title IX."

Additionally, legislation sponsored by the NCAA Council and favored by many members of Division I-A was approved to allow needy student-athletes to receive a full grant-in-aid in addition to a Pell Grant, so long as the combined total does not exceed the value of tuition, room and board, fees, and course-related books, plus $900.

Legislation was adopted to protect student-athletes from overzealous professional sports agents by authorizing a member institution to appoint a three-member panel outside the athletics department to counsel student-athletes who are considering professional sports careers.

The membership in Division I-A and Division I-AA authorized the NCAA Football Television Committee to develop an alternative football television program for 1984 and 1985 to be administered by the Association, should the Supreme Court hold invalid the current football television plan now being contested in a case before that court.

"The major football institutions clearly are interested in a coordinated approach to football on television in this country," Byers said, "which was manifested by the strong support for the resolution."

Other significant Convention actions included legislation to:

- Direct the Executive Committee to develop a program of drug testing, including sanctions against student-athletes found to have used prohibited drugs; to inform each member institution of the details of the program and to provide a list of prohibited substances by July 1, 1984, and to present the details of the program to the 1985 Convention.

- Prohibit activities related to organized gambling on intercollegiate athletics by student-athletes and coaching-staff members.

- Establish NCAA championships in Divisions II and III men's and women's indoor track and field, to be conducted during 1984-85.

- Establish a Division III men's ice hockey championship to begin in March.

- Prohibit all in-person recruiting contacts in Divisions I and II basketball beginning with the Thursday prior to the Division I Men's Basketball Championship and ending at noon on the Tuesday after the final game.

- Prohibit recruiting contacts in person, on or off campus, by a Division I institution during the American Football Coaches Association convention.

- Prohibit any in-person recruiting, on or off campus, in women's basketball by a Division I coaching staff member during the semifinal and final rounds of the Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

- Reduce the maximum awards limitation in Division I-AA football from 75 to 70, based on equivalencies.

- Provide for a meeting of primary women administrators with the Special NCAA Committee on Women's Interests prior to July 1 to develop legislation for presentation to the 1985 Convention.

During the honors luncheon January 9, the NCAA presented the Theodore Roosevelt Award, the Association's highest individual honor, to Vice-Adm. William Lawrence, a three-sport star at the U.S. Naval Academy during the 1940s and currently Navy chief of personnel.

Lawrence, who was held prisoner by North Vietnam from June 1967 to March 1973, said, "Nothing helped me endure my captivity more than the fine academic career and experiences on the athletic fields" at Navy.

The Association's Award of Valor was presented to the widow of Joseph A. Delaney, former Northwestern State University (Louisiana) running back who lost his life attempting to rescue three young boys from a pond.

Today's Top Five honorees were football players John Frank of Ohio State University, Terry Hoage of the University of Georgia, Stefan Humphries of the University of Michigan, and Steve Young of Brigham Young University, and cross-country skier Elizabeth Heiden of the University of Vermont.

Silver Anniversary awards were presented to Maj. Gen. Robert D. Beckel, former basketball star at the U.S. Air Force Academy and currently director of Air Force operations; Peter M. Dawkins, 1958 Heisman Trophy winner at the U.S. Military Academy and retired brigadier general; Stephen Friedman, former wrestling champion at Cornell University and currently an investment banker; professional golfer Allen L. Geiberger, a former all-America at the University of Southern California, and Peter Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee and former member of the U.S. Olympic water polo team. The 1985 NCAA Convention is scheduled January 14-16 at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville, Tennessee.

I Men's Basketball Championships. As payment for the rights, CBS will pay the NCAA an aggregate sum of $93,061,000. The contract also increases the 1984 tournament telecasts from 16 to 17 for $2,000,500 in additional rights. The negotiations committee recommended several options for distribution of receipts. In priority order, the recommendations are:

- Increase per diem for participating institutions in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

- Guarantee minimum per diem of $50 for all Division I men's and women's championships (22) and National Collegiate Championships (11). Estimated cost is $732,000.

- Pay $30 per diem for Division II and Division III men's and women's championships, if funds are available. Estimated cost is $999,500.

The negotiations committee recommended two other items if additional receipts are available: pay $100 to Division I members for each individual student-athlete who participates in a Division I championship or National Collegiate Championship and establish a reserve for a Division I-BB Basketball Championship in the event the membership determines it wants to establish such a tournament. The following unit formula for distribution of net receipts to participating institutions was approved: first-round losers—$147,600; second-round losers—$295,200; regional semifinal losers—$442,700; regional final losers—

$590,300, and Final Four participants $737,900.

Drug Education: The Executive Committee sent back to the Drug Education Committee a recommendation regarding the Association's involvement in drug screening at NCAA championships. The Executive Committee agreed that the recommendations adopted by the Drug Education Committee would not "increase the education of student-athletes on substance abuse."

Other Actions

The Executive Committee changed its May 6-7, 1985, meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, from the Hyatt Regency Hotel to the Alameda Plaza Hotel. Other future dates and sites approved were May 7-8, 1984, Alameda Plaza, Kansas City; August 13-14, 1984, Del Monte Hyatt Hotel, Monterey, California, and January 13, 1985, Opryland Hotel, Nashville, Tennessee.
