Howard Schnellenberger, coach of national champion University of Miami (Florida), heads a group of 10 coaches who have been selected to participate in the College Football '84 Preview February 26-28 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

Other coaches who will attend the eighth annual NCAA-sponsored preview are Rey Dempsey, Memphis State University; LaVell Edwards, Brigham Young University; Don James, University of Washington; Charley Pell, University of Florida; Mike White, University of Illinois, Champaign; Ed Emory, East Carolina University; Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M University; Jim Johnson, Oklahoma State University, and Bobby Ross, University of Maryland, College Park.

Included among the agenda items for the three-day preview is a question-and-answer session February 27. Each coach will preview his team and conference, and the media then will have a chance to question the 10 coaches. Approximately 50 sportswriters are expected to attend.

The preview is designed to generate interest in the 1984 football season. The nation's top sportswriters will have an opportunity to meet with coaches from different parts of the country in addition to those from areas they normally cover.

Following are capsule summaries on the 10 coaches selected for this year's preview:

Schnellenberger

Schnellenberger capped an amazing four-year turnaround of the Miami program this year with an Orange Bowl victory over Nebraska and a subsequent No. 1 ranking by both wire service polls.

Schnellenberger's five-year record at Miami now is 41-16, a stark contrast to the 14-29 record compiled by the Hurricanes in the four years prior to his arrival. Included in that record is a 24-2 log at home.

After assistant coaching jobs at the University of Kentucky and the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, from 1959 to 1965, Schnellenberger moved to the professional ranks from 1966 to 1978, serving as an assistant coach for the Los Angeles Rams and Miami Dolphins and head coach of the Baltimore Colts.

An all-America end at Kentucky, Schnellenberger was named Southern independent coach of the year by The Associated Press in 1980 and national coach of the year in 1981 by Football News.

Dempsey

Dempsey was named head coach at Memphis State in December after leading Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, to a 13-1 record and the 1983 NCAA Division I-AA Football Championship.

The Salukis' 43-7 victory over Western Carolina in the I-AA championship improved Dempsey's eight-year record at Southern Illinois to 54-37. Dempsey rejuvenated the Southern Illinois program in 1976, compiling a 7-4 record after a 1-9-1 showing in 1975.

Dempsey earned Division II

coach-of-the-year honors in 1974 while coaching at Youngstown State University. His other coaching experience is at the high school level in Ohio and as a special-teams coach for the Detroit Lions.

Edwards

All Edwards has done in 12 years at Brigham Young is compile a 105-37-1 record, win nine Western Athletic Conference titles, lead the Cougars to eight bowl games and direct an offense that has led the nation in passing six times.

Edwards, a 1952 graduate of Utah State University, joined the Brigham Young staff in 1962 as an assistant and assumed the head job in 1972. He is ranked in the top 10 in winning percentage among active coaches.

Following an 11-2 campaign in 1981, Edwards was named head coach for the Hula and Japan Bowls and won the BYU alumni distinguished service award and the outstanding man-of-the-year award by the Provo American Freedom Festival.

James

Dean of Pacific-10 Conference coaches, James completed his ninth season at Washington this past year with an 8-4 record, improving his Husky career mark to 73-32. Prior to taking the Washington job in 1975, James was head coach at Kent State University.

In nine years at Washington, James has led the Huskies to six bowl appearances (Rose Bowl three times) and three Pacific-10 championships. His 1972 Kent State team also participated in a bowl (Tangerine), giving him seven bowl appearances in 13 years as a head coach.

Prior to landing a head-coaching position in 1971, James served apprenticeships at Florida State University (1959-1965), the University of Michigan (1966-1967) and the University of Colorado (1968-1970). James was named coach of the year by the American Football Coaches Association in 1977 after leading the Huskies to a 10-2 season and a Rose Bowl victory.

Pell

Pell has a penchant for turning lagging football programs into consistent winners.

His 1983 Florida Gators were ranked sixth in both wire service polls and defeated Iowa in the Gator Bowl. It was the first time Florida had finished a season ranked in the top 10.

Pell began his coaching career at Jacksonville State University and compiled a 33-13-1 record before taking the head-coaching position at Clemson. Under Pell, the Tigers were 18-4-1 in two seasons. They had won only five games in the previous two seasons.

Pell took the Florida post in 1979, and his team went 0-10-1. But the Gators have participated in four bowls in the past four seasons and have compiled a 32-16-1 record.

He was Southeastern Conference coach of the year three times in four seasons.

White

In his fourth year as head coach at Illinois, White led the Fighting Illini to their first Rose Bowl appearance in 20 years after having become the first coach in Big Ten Conference history to defeat all nine conference opponents during a regular season.

White was named 1983 national coach of the year by The Sporting News, the Walter Camp Football Foundation and United Press International.

He took over at Illinois after having been assistant coach with the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League for two seasons.

White was offensive coordinator at Stanford University for eight seasons, and two of those Cardinal teams were Rose Bowl champions.

He made his head-coaching debut at the University of California, Berkeley, his alma mater, and during six years his teams went 35-30-1.

Under White's direction, Illinois teams have set seven NCAA passing records and more than 30 Big Ten Conference passing marks.

Emory

Emory's East Carolina University teams are making a name for themselves among the nation's major college football powers.

CEO Commission nominations sought

Chief executive officers at all NCAA active member institutions have been invited to submit nominations of candidates to serve on the new NCAA Presidents' Commission, as established by the 1984 NCAA Convention.

In a January 27 mailing, NCAA President John L. Toner asked CEOs to submit nominations for service on the Commission not later than February 15. Because the presidential nominating committee that will prepare the slate of candidates for the first Commission is still being organized, the nominations are to be sent to the NCAA national office. They will be delivered unopened to the nominating committee when it becomes operative.

The chief executives can submit nominations for 31 of the 44 positions on the first Commission. The other 13 positions will be filled by the nine Division I-A conferences, each of which is entitled to select one of its member CEOs to serve, and the four Division I-AA football regions, where the chief executives in each region will elect their own representative.

That will leave the nominating committee with the task of preparing a slate for 31 positions—two representing Division I-A independents, one Division I-A at-large position, one Division I-AA at-large position, five positions representing Division I institutions that do not sponsor football in Division I or not at all, 11 Division II positions and 11 Division III positions.

Each Division I-A conference has been asked to designate its representative by February 1, if possible. Division I-AA chief executives received a separate mailing dated January 26, asking them to nominate and endorse a Division I-AA CEO from their Division I-AA football region. The legislation adopted by the Convention specifies that each nominee for the Division I-AA regional positions must be endorsed by at least five CEOs from the region involved. If more than one candidate is properly nominated from a region, there will be a mail vote of the CEOs in that region to select the individual to serve on the Commission.

In another January 27 letter, President Toner notified the presidential nominating committee specified by Convention action of its task, expressing hope that each of the 13 chief executives named to serve on that committee (see January 18, 1984, issue of The NCAA News) would be able to accept the assignment. Toner will schedule a telephone conference of the nominating committee as soon as possible to enable the committee to select a chair and to review its charge.

Athletes to get career counseling

Panels to provide athletic career counseling to student-athletes may now be appointed in accordance with an amendment to NCAA Constitution 3-1(h)-(4) adopted at the recent Convention.

Proposal No. 118, as amended by 118-1, authorizes an institution's chief executive officer (or his or her designated representative from outside the athletics department) to appoint a three-member panel from among the institution's full-time employees who work outside of the athletics department. The purpose of the panel is to provide advice to student-athletes about future professional athletic careers.

The legislation, which was sponsored by the NCAA Council, was originally proposed by the Association's Special Committee on Player Agents. It provides the authority for institutions to appoint such panels but does not make their appointment mandatory.

Concern over whether existing NCAA regulations provided sufficient opportunity for student-athletes to receive objective advice in making informed choices about when to pursue a professional athletic career or whether to employ an agent prompted the special committee to suggest the legislative amendment. The committee also believes that the See Athletes, page 12

Scoring is leveling off for Division I men

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

If you like major college basketball the way it is being played, this story on national midseason trends in men's Division I will be good news.

Both scoring and field-goal shooting accuracy have leveled off. You might say the graph in each case has become virtually a horizontal straight line.

Scoring started back up last season, reversing a seven-year downward plunge. From 153.1 points per game (both teams combined) in 1975, it fell to only 135.1 in 1982—lowest in 30 years. Last season brought a welcome increase to 138.7, caused only partly by the rash of experimental rules. The 60 percent of the country using the same old rules averaged 137.2, so the increase was coming regardless of the experiments.

Instead of nine conferences using the three-point play in 1983, we now have just two, so experimental rules are virtually no factor now. At midseason, the national Division I scoring average is 136.8 vs. 136.4 at midseason a year ago.

A small part of this tiny 0.4 increase doubtless was caused by the ill-fated two-shot rule for fouls in the last two minutes, which was rescinded by the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee in late December. Scoring usually increases slightly in the second half of the season, so the final figure may top 1983. It will be close.

In field-goal shooting accuracy, the trend was just the reverse. Accuracy went up, up, up, almost every year from 1948 (the first year of official NCAA trends and statistics rankings), when it was 29.3 percent, to 1981, when it hit a record 48.0 percent. In 1982, accuracy fell a tiny bit to 47.9 percent, and last year it dropped again to 47.7. Accuracy also was 47.9 in 1980 and 47.7 in 1979, so the leveling off is more of a See Scoring, page 4

Louisiana's rich basketball tradition is intact

By O. K. Davis

Ruston (Louisiana) Leader

Outstanding collegiate basketball players have been as numerous through the years in Louisiana as tasty seafood restaurants.

Familiar names from the past in the state include Willis Reed, Pete Maravich, Bob Pettit, Jackie Moreland and Dwight Lamar.

Now, Louisiana offers three highly regarded performers who could be candidates for all-America honors and possible berths on the Olympic team.

The trio: Karl Malone of Louisiana Tech, Willie Jackson of Centenary and Joe Dumars of McNeese State.

Although they are largely unknown throughout the country, the professional scouts know about them, even though Malone, a sophomore, and Dumars, a junior, will continue to haunt the opposition in the future. Jackson is regarded as one of the leading prospects in this year's draft.

"That would be three super players to start an all-star team with," said Louisiana Tech coach Andy Russo, "You'd have scoring and rebounding strength, good defense and a willingness to work and play to the ultimate of their ability."

In the latest NCAA Division I statistics, Dumars ranked No. 3 in scoring with a 28.6 average and Jackson was 16th at 23.4. Malone is averaging 19.7 points per game and scored 40 in one outing this season.

What they have in common is the ability to turn a game around—almost singlehandedly—with their offensive talents.

Malone, at 6-8 and 240 pounds, is appropriately called "the Franchise" for the Bulldogs. Last year, he became the first player in the 19-year history of the Southland Conference to be chosen most valuable player and newcomer of the year in the same season. He averaged 20.9 points and 10.3 rebounds per game and led Tech to a 19-9 record and runner-up finish in the Southland—not bad for a gentle giant who once considered himself too clumsy for the sport.

"Until I reached my sophomore year in high school, I was too slow and uncoordinated to be much of a threat to anybody," he said. "Then the good Lord must've blessed me with some unknown talents, because I started playing well and everything fell into place."

Malone led Summerfield High School to three consecutive Louisiana Class C championships and finished his career with averages of better than 30 points and 20 rebounds per game.

College coaches quickly found out where Summerfield was, and Malone was the recipient of more than 100 scholarship offers.

"I wanted to stay near home because, deep down, I'm a small-town guy who wants to be near friends and relatives," he said. "The bright lights of the big city are really not for me. I like it when you can walk down a street and say hello to everybody."

"There's no doubt he's already one of the finest players in the nation, even after less than two years," said Lamar coach Pat Foster. "We certainly hate to have to find a way to defense him, but he is good for our league. He's brought a lot of recognition to us."

Malone earned a berth on the U.S. team for the World University Games last summer and barely missed being chosen for the Pan American squad.

"He's got a lot of great basketball in front of him," said Kansas State's Jack Hartman, who coached the Pan American team. "His work habits were particularly noteworthy during the trials. He had a tremendous attitude and showed a lot of hustle."

Dumars didn't get invited to those trials, which McNeese State coach Glenn Duhon finds hard to believe.

As a freshman, the 6-3 Dumars led the Southland in scoring with an 18.2 average and ranked third last season with a 19.6 average. The two-time all-Southland selection has played both the playmaking and the scoring guard this season.

"Making a contribution is the main thing, and it doesn't matter where they play me," Dumars said. "My main concern has always been to make a complete contribution to the team, both offensively and defensively."

A National Sports Festival participant in 1982, Dumars entered this season as the 13th-leading scorer in school history and should surpass the school record of 1,986 points.

"If you start an all-star team in our league and are picking guards, he's definitely one of the first two you choose," North Texas State coach Tommy Newman said of Dumars.

Dumars, a former all-state performer at Natchitoches (Louisiana) Central High, is off to the finest start of his career and is one of the main reasons conference coaches made McNeese State the preseason favorite in the Southland.

Duhon stresses that Dumars' statistics have been somewhat misleading "because we've asked him to be our floor leader in addition to top scorer."

There's no doubt about Jackson's contributions at Centenary, whether it's as a scorer or a rebounder.

When the season began, he was the national career-scoring leader among active players. By the time the season ends, he should become only the 40th player to record 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds.

He also should break Centenary's all-time scoring record of 2,334 points, held by Robert Parish of the Boston Celtics.

The newcomer of the year as a rookie and most valuable player for the past two seasons in the Trans America Athletic Conference, he has led the conference in scoring throughout this season.

"Basketball comes easy to me, and it's something I like playing just for the fun of it," he said. "It's nice to have some records and such, but I just like going out there and playing, like we used to do when I was growing up."

The 6-6 forward was a two-time Class B all-state performer at Sibley High after leading the team to the Louisiana Class B championship as a junior and senior.

"When I was in fourth grade, the coach at our school told me he thought I had some basketball ability, so I stayed with it," he said. "I'd like to play this game as long as I could, because you meet a lot of great people in it."

Jackson, who had scored in double figures in 85 of 86 games going into the 1983-84 season, surely will get his chance.

One scout called him "the best offensive player I've seen in the last three years." Jackson is expected to be moved to small forward or guard in the pro ranks.

"I consider myself as a finesse player, one who has to take advantage of my opponents' weaknesses and work for the good shots," he said. "I'm looking forward to a pro career. It's something that's always been in my dreams."

"Life is adjusting, and when one wants to do something bad enough, he can adjust anywhere," he said of professional basketball. "When I left high school, I knew it would take awhile to become accustomed to a college atmosphere. It will be the same thing if I get the opportunity to play in the pros."

Jackson, who has started in all but one game in his college career, set a tournament scoring record (51 points) and was chosen to the all-tournament team in the Dallas Morning News Classic earlier this season.

"He's as good a forward as there is in the country," Oklahoma State coach Paul Hansen said of Jackson. "He gave us more difficulty than any single player we faced last year. We faced players who scored more against us, but none that gave such an all-around performance as he did."

Swim meet a noteworthy event to Brown's band

By Dave Philips
Providence Journal-Bulletin

Most women's college sports teams, whether they like it or not, find themselves having to compete under a veil of obscurity, but not the Brown women's swimming team.

The Brown women swimmers emerged into the limelight three years ago, and now, whenever they have a meet at the Smith Swimming Center, students turn out in droves. The Brown band also joins in saluting the winningest team on the campus.

Coach Dave Roach's women have lost only four of their last 53 meets, none this year. Since November 19, when this season began, they have romped over Kenyon, Ohio State, Dartmouth, Boston University, Yale and Princeton. Another Ivy championship seems within their reach. Winning the Eastern championships February 23-25 at Brown seems like another realistic goal. So does finishing among the top 30 teams at the NCAA women's national meet.

Brown has had a women's swimming team since 1971—it was a club sport then—but the team's fortunes took a big jump when the present senior class arrived on campus three years ago.

"The first year I was here, we were 9-1 and third in the Ivies, but we didn't have that great a schedule," says Roach. "Next year, we were 7-2 and were second in the Ivies. The big jump came the next year when we were 10-0."

More significantly, eight people from the 1980-81 team qualified for the nationals. The previous year no one had made it.

The current squad is built around a strong corps of seniors, the biggest and best senior class Roach has ever had. They are backed by an equally solid group of underclasswomen and new recruits.

A key element in the Brown success story is Roach's nationwide recruiting program, something he works very hard on. He regularly attends regional and national championships, sends out roughly 4,000 letters to swimming coaches and stays in touch with hundreds of good candidates every year.

"We've gone from having 35 apply to having 90 apply," he says. "If you have 90, 25 will be accepted, and 12 will matriculate."

Roach continues to be a success in luring talented swimmers away from scholarship schools. The current freshman class includes one prep school and two high school all-Americans, a finalist in the junior nationals, and an all-state diving champion.

"It seemed like every year a higher quality of swimmer was interested in us," says Roach. "The difference now from people who were looking at us four years ago is really amazing."

Getting the good swimmers in is one thing. Getting them to swim well is something else again. "The worst thing is to have someone really good come and not swim well," says Roach.

He guards against that with a rigorous training program and by continuously motivating his swimmers to do their best.

"He's reaching for a total commitment from all of us," cocaptain Cathy Carolan says.

The Brown women now swim an average of 12,000 yards a day in the pool, including an hour and 20 minutes of interval training every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning and two hours and 15 minutes every afternoon. On Tuesday and Thursday mornings, they visit the weight room at the Olney Margolies Athletic Center for half an hour of lifting.

"If someone came in now who'd been with us four or five years ago, they'd think our program was totally different," says Roach. "We're training harder. Our workouts are different. They're probably more intense, and we're utilizing our time better."

"The biggest change I've seen since I've been there is in our attitudes with regard to how far we want to go and what we want to go after," cocaptain Elaine Palmer says. "As freshmen, we were thinking about making it to the top of the Ivies; now we've set our sights on winning the Easterns, that's our goal. We've oriented ourselves toward swimming faster, getting better competition and bettering ourselves all around."

"We don't consider swimming an individual sport. We consider it a team sport," says Roach. "We really emphasize the team part of it, and we do different things so everybody on the team will know what everyone else is doing."

"What this means," he says, "is if the slowest swimmer on the team beats her best time by two-tenths of a second, 10 other people will walk over and congratulate her for that because they know what she was trying to do."

"It's hard for frosh to come in and make that big adjustment," says Roach, "and it's a real help if they have 25 to 30 other friends, people they can identify with. Right away they've got friends. Right away they've got someone looking out for them."

Combining swimming and studies is a tough challenge for most of the Brown women swimmers, but by and large, they've measured up to it very well.

"It is tough, and Dave demands a lot from us in the water, but somehow you get it done," cocaptain Carolan says. "You're very organized. You have to be. You're forced to plan the rest of your life much more than if you didn't have anything else to plan around."

Motivation isn't a serious problem, not to the ones who've stuck it out for the full four years.

Letters to the Editor

Lower categories hold the key

To the Editor:

Just an echo to Bill Stier's letter (The NCAA News, January 18) on the comments of Gene Corrigan about Division III not caring what Division I schools do. We all know that what affects Division I usually has the "filter" effect on I-AA, II and III. On the opposite side of that coin, we don't get much mushroom effect as the things that go in reverse don't seem to matter much. I think Corrigan's remarks should have been made opposite—I don't care what III does, or II or I-AA for that matter.

It is very disturbing to larger institutions to think that at some times the tail should wag the head, especially when it has that "filter" effect. It's not bad enough to usurp all publicity, to want all TV money and to want to complete autonomy. They do this at our expense.

I respect large universities for the impact they have had on our educational and athletic systems, but many have forgotten from whence they came and all cannot reach the lofty heights. If so, the nation would be all chiefs and no other category. It's really the ones in the lower categories who keep everything we hold dear in this nation, and sports should be included.

I only wish Division I cared as much for the others of us as we do about them. It appears that "self" is their only concern—the rest of us can go wherever we want as long as they have their way. Sounds very democratic and philanthropic when "those that has gets, but those that has not, gets not."

Slowdown offense can be exciting

To the Editor:

I can appreciate Doug Fullerton's comments about the slowdown game Cincinnati tried against Kentucky (The NCAA News, January 4). Although I don't particularly care for a slowdown, keep-away offense, it can produce a tense, exciting ball game.

But Indiana University created a great argument for the shot clock when it played the University of Illinois recently. Tied during regulation play, Indiana did not attempt a single field goal during the entire five-minute overtime period. During the five-minute overtime period, they made 12 free throws to beat Illinois by five points.

I have always been under the impression that the object of the game was to score field goals, and free throws were really penalty shots for the infraction of rules. A "free throw" offense I don't care for at all.

A professor's letter to a coach

By Paul Lermack

Dear Coach:

Thank you for your recent letter, in which you say that your athletes are students first and ballplayers second, that you want to make sure they graduate, and that you are willing to give me all possible assistance to make sure they do well in their studies. Even though the letter was mimeographed, I am sure it is a sincere expression of your views. I share them.

Unhappily, there has been some friction between us in the past. So that we can work together harmoniously in the future, I want to suggest some ground rules:

Attendance. I don't mind if an athlete misses a few classes. But there's a limit. I know the literature is full of criticisms of the lecture method, among them the claim that it wastes the student's time by making him listen to the teacher reading something the student could read much faster on his own. But I don't know of a single teacher who lectures any more. Most of us were so

We've designed our courses so that viewing is not the same as participating.

That is why I have to say "No" when an athlete tells me that he will be gone for three weeks on a road trip and will call me when he gets back if he has any questions, or when you inform me (by mimeographed notice) that your kids will miss every Wednesday for the entire semester.

How would feel if your quarterback took off for three weeks? Could a football player who consistently missed blocking practice keep up by reading the play book or by watching videotapes of the games the team played in his absence?

I propose a 10-percent rule: If a class meets 48 times during the semester, I will allow an athlete five absences.

Exams. I try to be flexible, but again there's a limit. An exam is partly evaluative, but it's partly diagnostic as well. It lets me know how well the student is progressing, so I can give special help if necessary, and it tells him whether his work is paying off. And the classroom critique of the exam is a little like one of those postgame film-watching sessions where you point out all the errors to the players who made them. Timing is critical; if I move an exam for an athlete, it will lose this diagnostic value.

One of your boys asked me last year if he could take all four of my exams, plus the final, on the last day of the course. He was surprised that I laughed at him. But I am sure that you will not be.

I propose the following: At your request, I will reschedule one exam per semester for an athlete, but even this rule must be qualified. By university regulations, I cannot move the final exam from its scheduled time except, with consent of the dean, in emergencies. You will just have to live with that. But since finals are scheduled well ahead of time, you should have no problem planning around them.

It would be good for the sports program if you asked other teachers to make similar rules. It would be even better if you asked the university senate to develop rules for the whole university. After much experience, I'm convinced that such explicit rules are necessary.

Too many athletes have tried to take advantage of my old flexible approach and get out of too much work. I'm sure you haven't encouraged them. But good fences make good neighbors; if we have precise rules and know what we can expect of each other, we can work together toward our common goal—which is, as your letter says, not to win tournaments but to educate our athletes and make them upstanding members of the community.

As things are now, most of them do not graduate. That will change when athletes work as regularly on their academic skills as they do on their sports skills. Of course, you want them to do that; after all, if they put sports first, to the exclusion of studies, then they are professionals. I'm sure you don't want to have to tell the university administration and the NCAA that that is the way things are on this campus.

repelled by the example of our own teachers, who mumbled over their brown-edged lecture notes year after year, that we are determined to put our own class periods to some use other than mere fact-spouting. By discussion, recitation or demonstration, we try to make our students participate in classroom work and, by participating, develop their language skills and critical thinking.

Just as you can't learn to block or tackle except by practicing, you can't learn French verbs or computer operation or quadratic-equation solving except by making mistake after mistake until you get things right. Just like muscles, such skills develop only with regular exercise.

I won't argue that every class period is uniquely valuable. We have our failures and our off days. But we succeed often enough so that a student who misses too many classes will suffer. His intellectual skills will fail him when he most needs them—during a final exam, say, or a job interview—just as the muscles of a poorly conditioned athlete will fail him when he puts pressure on them.

"Getting the notes" from someone else is not a substitute for participating in class discussions, nor is taping the classes so the athletes can listen to me later. I've never objected when you've put your tape recorder on my desk but quite apart from the distracting effect the machinery has on the other students in the class, taping just doesn't do the job. Sound tapes pick up what I say, but they usually miss the comments of the students and cannot record the things I write on the blackboard.

Videotaping is more distracting and little better. There is a world of difference between being in the class and watching the class. It is the difference between playing in a game—even if you spend most of the time on the sidelines—and watching it later on television.

At midseason, accuracy is 47.7 percent, the same as at the end of last season and above the 47.3 at midseason a year ago (47.5 without the three-pointers).

Better defense the reason

Why has scoring and shooting leveled off? Two big reasons are zone defenses and television. Tough zone defenses abound. Even long-time zone-hating coaches are using zones occasionally. So many games are on television now that virtually every opponent can be well-scouted over a period of games. A third reason might be the many more leapers and shot-blockers in the major-college game. More blocks mean more misses and a lower shooting figure.

Shooting skill as measured by free-throw accuracy has not changed much in 20 years. Free-throw percentage nationally was 68.3 percent in 1964. It was 68.5 percent last year and now at midseason it is 68.6. It never has been lower than 68.1, or higher than the record 69.7 (1979) over the 20-year period.

Why, then, did field-goal accuracy rise from 42.5 percent in 1964 to its current level? Probably it was due mostly to more leapers, thus more point-blank shots.

Atlantic Coast leads conferences

Long the perennial national leader in field-goal accuracy, the Atlantic Coast Conference did not come close to first in 1983, undoubtedly because it had the shortest three-point distance (thus by far the most three-point attempts) in the country. The Southeastern Conference was No. 1 last year in field-goal accuracy.

With the three-pointer gone, the ACC again leads all conferences at 51.3 percent, barely below its national record of 51.4 set in 1980 and the same as its 51.3 in 1982. In five of six categories, the ACC ranks first, missing only in scoring defense, where it ranks fifth. It is the only conference to make the top five in all six categories. The Big Eight Conference makes the top five in four categories; the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference and the Big East Conference are in three:

Scoring offense	Avg.
Atlantic Coast	75.54
Big Eight	74.71
Missouri Valley	74.02
Southwestern Athletic	73.92
Big East	73.80

Scoring defense
Pacific-10	61.81
Big Ten	62.45
ECAC South	63.56
Southeastern	63.94
Atlantic Coast	63.99

Scoring margin
Atlantic Coast	11.55
Big Eight	8.13
Big East	7.07
Metro	6.11
Sun Belt	5.99

Field-goal percentage	Pct.
Atlantic Coast	51.29
Big East	49.60
West Coast Athletic	49.57
Big Eight	49.41
Metro	49.34

FG pct. defense
Atlantic Coast	44.12
Southwestern Athletic	45.02
Big Eight	45.09
Metro	45.28
Western Athletic	45.52

Free-throw percentage
Atlantic Coast	71.78
Mid-Continent	70.60
Midwestern City	69.91
Ivy	69.79
Mid-American	69.63

Field-goal percentage allowed may be a better indication of defensive strength than points allowed. A seventh category could be created—field-goal percentage margin. Here the ACC would again lead at 7.17 (51.29 percent made, 44.12 allowed) with the Big Eight next at 4.32, then the Metro 4.06, Big East 3.70 and Southwest Athletic 3.54. Scoring margin, of course, is the No. 1 indication, since the object of the game is to outscore the opponent.

All midseason figures are through

Longwood's Jerome Kersey is the leading rebounder in Division II with 13.4 per game

Dartmouth's Jayne Daigle, a sophomore, is averaging 21.6 points per game

Erma Jones, Bethune-Cookman, ranks seventh in scoring with 27 points per game

Alabama State's Lewis Jackson is fifth in scoring in Division I with 26.4 points per game games of January 21 and include all 4,184 games involving at least one Division I team. More than anything, scoring margin shows which conferences have had the most success against teams outside their conference, as we shall see later in this story. Most of these outside games already have been played. Conference play now predominates, so the figures above will level off somewhat by the end of the season.

ACC stands 74-7

The Atlantic Coast Conference is back in first place nationally in won-lost percentage against Division I nonconference opponents with an incredible 74-7 for .914 through games

	Won-Lost	Pct.
Atlantic Coast	74	.914
Big East	55	.724
Big Ten	59	.686
Southeastern	54	.684
Sun Belt	51	.680
Big Eight	58	.674
Western Athletic	59	.628
Missouri Valley	46	.622
Metro	41	.594
Metro Atlantic	45	.577
Pacific-10	47	.560
Southland	41	.526
ECAC South	31	.525
Southwest Athletic	40	.506

A good portion of the remaining games will be tournament competition, so these figures can be expected to level off somewhat by the end of the year.

The 1980s picture

Through the first four seasons of

Basketball Notes

of January 21—highest ever at this stage of the season.

This is the 11th season of non-conference compilations. The ACC led in the final rankings for the first nine years; then its domination was ended last season by the Big Ten, which finished on top at 84-26 for .764, with the Southeastern second at .750 and the ACC third with .729.

The Big East, fourth a year ago at .689, ranks second at midseason with .724, with the Big Ten third at .686 and the SEC fourth at .684. The Metro ended up fifth last season at .687 and now ranks ninth. The Big Eight, sixth in 1983 at .649, is now up to .674 but still ranks sixth.

Showing the biggest improvement are the Sun Belt, 51-46 a year ago but now fifth at 51-24 for .680; the Western Athletic, 43-47 last year but now sixth with .628; and the Missouri Valley, 37-39 in 1983 and now seventh at .622.

The Pacific Coast was 60-35 for seventh at .632 last year and the Atlantic-10 was 55-54, but both were under .500 at the time of this compilation.

Remember, all games against opponents below Division I are deleted in these comparisons. This is because the major colleges regularly win 90 percent against the nonmajors, with about 600 such games each year. Nearly all of them already have been played, with the majors winning 493 and losing 51 for 90.6 percent.

The winningest conferences play the fewest games against nonmajors and almost never lose. At midseason, for instance, the 14 conferences over .500 against Division I nonconference opponents were 177-7 against nonmajors, while the other 16 major conferences were 316-44 against nonmajors.

Here are the 14 conferences over .500 against Division I nonconference opponents through January 21 (12 of them—all but the Missouri Valley and WAC—also were over .500 at the end of last season):

the 1980s, the ACC, Big East, Big Ten and Southeastern Conferences rank 1-2-3-4—the same order as they rank in the above table at midseason 1984. Why not look back longer than four seasons? Because the current conference structure has developed in 1980, 1981, 1982 and 1983.

Numerous new conferences have been formed in the last decade, with the Big East, Metro, Sun Belt and Atlantic 10 being the most successful. None of the four was in existence in 1974. Now they rank 2-6-11-12 among the 14 conferences over .500 through the first four seasons of the 1980s:

	Won-Lost	Pct.
Atlantic Coast	322	.88
Big East	313	.705
Big Ten	301	.703
Southeastern	237	.693
Big Eight	215	.627
Metro	245	.623
Pacific-10	189	.585
Southland	207	.585
Southwest Athletic	185	.567
Missouri Valley	178	.556
Sun Belt	192	.532
Atlantic 10	219	.520
Pacific Coast	175	.513
Western Athletic	183	.507

Please note that the actual conference lineup competing for the championship is used each season in each conference, while the comparisons involving National Collegiate Division I Basketball Championship history in last week's issue of The NCAA News used only current 1984 lineups (because of the many lineup changes and births and deaths of conferences in a 45-year period).

Also, the above 14 conferences all have been on the scene through the 1980s. Two more above .500 have existed in their present form only in 1982 and 1983—the Metro Atlantic (92-84 for .523 those two seasons) and the ECAC South (112-87 for .563). Both will be included in next year's look-back at the first half of the decade of the 1980s.

1980s tournament leaders

You might expect the Atlantic Coast, with a remarkable .785 record against outside majors in the 1980s (which does include NCAA tournament play, of course) to also have the best record in NCAA tournament play over the same four years.

And that is exactly what happened. The ACC's 17 entrants won 33 NCAA tournament games, lost 15 for a leading .688 percentage, reached the Final Four four times and won two national championships. The Big Ten is next with 25 victories, three Final Four teams and one championship; the Big East follows with 22 victories.

The Metro is second in winning percentage at .682; its eight entrants won 15 games, reached the Final Four three times and won one title. The Southwest's .619 is third, and it produced two Final Four teams.

Here are the 15 conferences that won at least three NCAA tournament games in the first four years of the 1980s, ranked by victories (note that all 16 Final Four teams came from seven conferences):

Conf. (entrants)	Won-Lost	Pct.	FF
Atlantic Coast (17)	33	.688	4
Big Ten (16)	25	.610	3
Big East (15)	22	.595	1
Southeastern (14)	16	.516	2
Metro (8)	15	.682	3
Southwest (8)	13	.619	2
Big Eight (10)	12	.545	-
Pacific-10 (11)	9	.450	1
Western Athletic (6)	8	.571	-
Sun Belt (7)	6	.462	-
Southland (4)	5	.556	-
East Coast (4)	4	.500	-
Atlantic 10 (6)	4	.400	-
Ivy (4)	3	.429	-
Missouri Valley (5)	3	.375	-

No other conference won more than two NCAA tournament games in the 1980s. In fact, all the other conferences combined (15 in all) were 14-52 for the four years and Division I independents only 2-9. That is rather surprising considering that DePaul, Marquette, Notre Dame and Dayton have 68 tournament victories in history and six Final Four teams. This illustrates how the number of Division I independents has fallen from almost 70 a decade ago to just 19 now. The others have formed conferences to obtain a chance at automatic qualification.

Matters of size

Virginia's quick little (5-10) Ricky Stokes played in his 117th consecutive game last Saturday against Georgia Tech, breaking the school record of 116 set by his brother Bobby (1976-1979). Depending on postseason play, Stokes could break the total-games record of 132 by Ralph Sampson from 1980 to 1983 (Sampson missed three games). (Gary Izzo, Virginia assistant SID)

Kansas freshman Mark Turgeon, listed as 5-10 but who is probably only 5-9, has the appearance of a guy who can only hope puberty someday catches up with him. Just 140 pounds, he wears braces on his teeth and had to have his uniform altered by his grandmother after the season opener at Houston so it would fit. Now he has become the starting point guard and the darling of the Jayhawk home crowd, with banners calling him "Turgeon the Surgeon," after the way he knifes through opposing defenses and hands out assists. Why did coach Larry Brown award him a grant-in-aid? Maybe Brown, 5-9 himself and a hustling guard in his playing days at North Carolina two decades ago, sees himself in the little guy. "He told me, 'Quite honestly, I think I am better than the guards you have,'" Brown told Steve Richardson of the Kansas City Times. "You look for that kind of great self-confidence in a guard." (Doug Vance, Kansas SID)

As a 5-10, 170-pound junior, Jim Rowinski was cut from his high school team in Syosset, New York. Now, he is a 6-8, 240-pound senior center for Purdue's surprising Big Ten contenders and possesses one of the most amazing physiques in college basketball. He came to Purdue as a walk-on and made the Renegade squad—the scout team—and spent the year practicing against 7-1 all-America Joe Barry Carroll. By then, he was 6-4 and 185. Hours and hours of weight-room work and self-driven work on the court after a leg fracture in December 1981, during the second start of his career, have finally paid off. Now he looks like chiseled granite. (Jim Vrugink, Purdue SID)

Quotes of the week

Kutztown coach Bob Valvano, responding to a pregame interviewer's observation ("You look, sound and even act like your brother Jim; perhaps spectators will forget for a moment and think they are watching North Carolina State"): "Just have them meet me on the first or the 15th of the month . . . then there will be no doubt which Valvano is which." (Kelley Neyhart, Kutztown SID)

American University coach Ed Tapscott after a four-overtime loss to Lehigh: "It was like watching one of those never-ending television mini-series . . . You know, the kind with the sad ending." (Terry Cornwell, American SID)

Bethany (West Virginia) coach Jim Zalacca, commenting on five of his first seven players out with injuries, including four starters out for the season: "We have decided to replace the national anthem with the Battle Hymn of the Republic." (Jim Connelly, Bethany SID)

Geneseo State coach Tom Pope said his team was practicing well after a 39-day holiday layoff but was leery as to how it would respond in a game: "It's like turning on a faucet that isn't labeled." (The faucet was cold. Geneseo lost its first two games after the layoff.)

Wright brothers flying again

The Wright brothers are flying again. Not Orville and Wilbur, who invented the airplane, but Tony, Terry and Daniel Wright, North Carolina Wesleyan's front line from Bunn, about 30 miles from the campus at Rocky Mount. "They play great together," said coach John McCarthy. "They're good, tough kids."

UCLA ready to deal foes a crowning blow

By Michael V. Earle
The NCAA News Staff

One might expect UCLA's domination of men's collegiate volleyball to wane in 1984 with the loss of Steve Gulnac, one of the most devastating hitters ever to play the game.

But it does not seem to matter how many all-Americas come and go, the Bruins just keep winning. UCLA has won 10 of 14 NCAA Men's Volleyball Championships, and the defending champions appear to be headed toward No. 11.

Last year, en route to its third consecutive NCAA championship,

Al Scates

UCLA started slow and finished fast. The race for the California Intercollegiate Volleyball Association title was wide open for most of the season before the Bruins eventually broke from the middle of the pack.

CIVA opponents can expect no such luck this year. According to coach Al Scates, this year's squad should "start faster and be stronger (than his 1983 team) in the end."

Scates, who has guided UCLA to all of its NCAA titles, has reasons for his optimism. Five starters, including all-Americas Ricci Luyties, the most outstanding player in last year's NCAA championship, and Doug Partie, a powerful 6-6 quick hitter, return to spark the offense and lead the "roof" attack on defense.

With no starter under 6-4 and Asbjorn Volstad, a talented newcomer from Norway who can play in the middle or outside, the Bruins should not have difficulty continuing to win, particularly since this year's championship will be played at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion.

Although UCLA once again is the preseason favorite, several schools will field outstanding teams. Following is a team-by-team sketch of the top squads:

Pepperdine

The Waves proved that UCLA was not invincible last year. A relatively young squad snapped the Bruins' seven-year unbeaten streak at Pauley Pavilion, as well as UCLA's six-year winning streak at the Collegiate Volleyball Classic, which features the nation's top four teams. A trio of talented juniors will lead the Waves' attack. Jeff Stork, an all-America who is one of the best setters in the nation, will key coach Marv Dunphy's offensive attack. Dunphy, the 1983 coach of the year, also will rely on middle blockers Robert McNutt and Mike Fitzgerald to anchor the Waves' front line. Pepperdine will be without freshman Troy Tanner, who is on a one-year religious mission in Japan; but Dunphy has top recruits in Matt

Rigg and Rob Scott for outside strength and can count on 6-5 middle blocker Mark Arnold and Steve Friedman, a 6-5 outside hitter who redshirted last season.

Southern California

Last season was not a memorable one for Southern California after a seventh-place finish in the CIVA. Coach Bob Yoder sees better times ahead with a much stronger team this year.

Preseason all-America Bill Yardley will bolster the outside and, with a year of experience behind him, Rudy Dvorak should get Southern California's 5-1 offense on track. The middle attack, which was almost nonexistent last year, will be improved with senior Adam Horstman, converted setter Cao Zhang and two top recruits—6-8 Junior Utu, whom Yoder describes as a "potentially dominating blocker," and 6-4 stand-out Mike Hurlbut.

California-Santa Barbara

With four senior starters, 1983 looked very promising for Santa Barbara coach Ken Preston. But the Gauchos fell to UCLA and Pepperdine, and their title aspirations dimmed. With only one returning starter, California-Santa Barbara enters the 1984 season without great expectations and raw talent. The Gauchos will look to preseason all-America middle blocker Randy Ittner for offensive firepower and defensive support. Setters Casey Gorman and Jared Huffman, part-time starters last season, should lead the offense. The Gauchos are untested at the outside-hitter positions but have promising talent in junior college transfers John Kosty and Sean Fallowfield.

Stanford

A young and talented Stanford team could make the CIVA race very competitive. Setter Craig Lauchner and middle blocker John Root return, along with two other starters. In addition, five promising recruits will give the Cardinal depth at every position.

San Diego State

"Solid" is the most appropriate adjective to describe San Diego State. Five starters, four of whom are seniors, return for coach Duncan McFarland. The Aztecs' outside hitting is strong with Mike Sagely and Kevin Droke; McFarland's brother, Dana, a two-year starter, and sophomore Jon Eddo are exceptional setters. Up the middle, the Aztecs will count on Matt Simpson, apparently fully recovered from two broken ankles, and Eric Barton. The Aztecs' lineup is more imposing with the addition of 6-7 Rocker Meadows, a converted basketball player; 6-4 Pete Nollendorfs, and 6-7 Greg Melendez.

Ricci Luyties of UCLA and Jeff Stork of Pepperdine, regarded as the two best setters in collegiate volleyball, received the most votes in the Volleyball News coaches all-America preseason poll.

Luyties, named the most valuable player in UCLA's national-championship effort in 1983, was named on every ballot. The Bruins had four players named to the team and were selected by the coaches to repeat as

UCLA sophomore Reed Sunahara against California-Santa Barbara

Penn State

Penn State came roaring into last year's NCAA championship as a legitimate contender. With five starters returning from a fine 1982 team, the Nittany Lions were considered to be on par with the top California teams and were tabbed by many to win the national title. But Penn State fell flat in the championship, losing to Pepperdine in three games in its first match and falling to Ohio State in the match for third place. Although coach Tom Tait lost three starters, most notably floor leader and setter Bruce Van Horn, he is not conceding anything. With 6-6 Steve Hunkins on the outside, 6-4 Boriz Kaz in the middle and several part-time starters and fine recruits, Penn State could be in the hunt again for a national title. Kaz will receive some much-needed help in the middle with the addition of 6-5 Ole Lachenmeier, a newcomer from Denmark, and 6-4 Jose Rubayo, who was regarded as the finest player in Puerto Rico last season.

Hawaii

With three weeks left in the regular season last year, Hawaii was in first place in the CIVA and ranked No. 1 in the nation. Within 10 days, the Rainbows lost five times and fell from the national spotlight. A return to prominence will not be easy for Hawaii coach Dave Shoji. Four starters have graduated, and one of the team's top setters, Dan Vrebalovich, transferred. However, Shoji has Pono Maa, one of the nation's top outside hitters, and some fine players who saw limited action last year.

Ball State

Coach Don Shondell calls this year's squad the most talented team

he has had in his 24 years at Ball State. The Cardinals return eight players, some of whom were part-time starters last season. Shondell will build his team around three seniors—setter Randy Litchfield, middle blocker Brian Hyde and outside hitter Corky Robertson. Shondell also has talented recruits in 6-3 Fernando De Armas, 6-6 John Waite and 6-4 Gary Granell.

Ohio State

Ohio State came on strong late last season, advancing to the NCAA championship and placing third. The Buckeyes will pin their 1984 hopes on all-America Edwin Fernandez and Dave Jandasek, both of whom can play outside hitter or setter. Coach Jim Smoot has some holes to fill in the middle of his front line and is counting on two recruits—6-5 Mark Edinger and 6-6 Don Hagemaster—to do the job.

Bruins place four on preseason all-America

national champions.

Also selected to the first team were two-time all-America Doug Partie of UCLA, outside hitter Bill Yardley of Southern California, outside hitter Edwin Fernandez of Ohio State and middle blocker Randy Ittner of California-Santa Barbara.

UCLA led team balloting, followed by Pepperdine. Southern Cal, Santa Barbara and Stanford round out the preseason top five teams.

San Diego State, Penn State, Hawaii, Ball State and Ohio State compose the rest of the top 10, according to the coaches.

Rounding out the top 10 player selections were outside hitter Reed Sunahara and setter Wally Martin of UCLA, middle blocker Jon Root and setter Craig Lauchner of Stanford, and middle blocker Robert McNutt of Pepperdine. Root was the only sophomore named to the all-America team.

UCLA and Pepperdine reached the final of the NCAA championship last year, and coaches are predicting a repeat in 1984, which again would match Luyties and Stork as their respective team leaders. Both were all-Americas in 1983.

Ohio State defeated Penn State for third place in the 1983 championship.

Emory became the Pirates' head coach in 1980 after 20 years as a high school and college coach. He has served on the staffs at Wake Forest University, Duke University, Clemson University and Georgia Institute of Technology.

In the past two seasons, Emory's teams have compiled a record of 15-7 against top college competition.

As a player at East Carolina, Emory was a starting guard for three seasons, and he started at tackle his senior year. He was named to the Eastern College Athletic Conference South all-star team three years.

Sherrill

Before assuming the head-coaching job at Texas A&M in 1982, Sherrill was head coach at the University of Pittsburgh, where his Panther teams were 50-9-1 for five seasons, the most successful period in the school's football history.

In his last three years at Pittsburgh, Sherrill's teams won consecutive bowl appearances.

Sherrill serves the Aggies as athletics director in addition to his football duties.

At Alabama, Sherrill played seven positions during his career, helping the Crimson Tide to national championships in 1964 and 1965.

Despite a heavy schedule, Sherrill is active in several charitable organizations.

Johnson

Oklahoma State University's football fortunes are improving steadily under head coach Johnson, who directed the Cowboys to one of their best seasons in 1983 at 8-4, including a victory in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

It was Oklahoma State's second bowl trip in three years.

Since Johnson became head coach, attendance at Cowboy home games has increased 10 percent and is averaging 45,000 per game.

Johnson's coaching experience includes assignments at six Division I institutions prior to the Oklahoma State job, which he accepted in December 1978. He was named Big Eight Conference coach of the year in 1979 when he led the Cowboys to a 7-4 finish.

Johnson was a defensive lineman and captain on the 1964 University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, team that was selected as national champion by the Football Writers Association of America.

Ross

In only two seasons at Maryland, Ross' teams have appeared in two bowl games, won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and compiled a 16-8 record.

Ross became head coach of the Terrapins after four years with the Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League.

Previously, he had coached at Rice University, the College of William and Mary, Virginia Military Institute, and The Citadel.

While a student at VMI, Ross lettered in football, basketball and baseball.

At Maryland, Ross' brand of offensive football has captured the imagination of fans, who broke every attendance record at the institution during the past season.

Research to improve knee brace encouraged

Football-related issues drew the attention of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports at its January 19-20 meeting in Kansas City.

The committee reviewed a wide range of such issues, including examination of a knee brace designed to prevent injuries, in place of those that support already injured knees. Offensive and defensive linemen at several member institutions are using the brace in practice and in games. The committee is encouraging development of research on the possible benefits of the lighter and less-cumbersome brace.

The committee voted unanimously to recommend that the Football Rules Committee instruct television announcers on NCAA-controlled telecasts to avoid praising tackles made using the head, noting that such tackles are illegal and dangerous and that praise from announcers may encourage their use.

The group read a report on the growing popularity of summer football camps where junior high school and high school athletes participate in full contact and wear full equipment. There is concern about possible injuries to those participants and the potential liability to sponsoring NCAA member institutions.

Additionally, the committee discussed proposing legislation that would set a minimum number of practices prior to participation by a student-athlete in football games to minimize the chance of injury and reviewed preliminary results of the annual study of catastrophic injuries and fatalities in football. The entire report will be summarized in The NCAA News.

In other business, the committee:

- Examined a study of alumni contests sponsored by member institutions. The staff was directed to develop information for institutions detailing potential liability for injuries occurring in such competition.

- Received a report on dental injuries in women's field hockey. It was recommended that this research be extended to include additional teams, particularly those that use external face guards.

- Approved modifications in the Sports Medicine Handbook to include a policy for skin examinations in wrestling and a new policy for participation by student-athletes who are missing one of a paired organ. The policies will be published in the News.

- Appointed a subcommittee to develop guidelines for participation by student-athletes who are pregnant.

Deadline set for research funding requests

April 1 is the deadline for submitting requests for NCAA funding of research projects.

Applications received by that date will be considered for 1983-84 funding by the NCAA Research Committee at its summer meeting, according to

MEAC adds member

The Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference has admitted Morgan State University as the eighth member of the 13-year-old league.

Other conference members are Bethune-Cookman College; Delaware State College; Florida A&M University; Howard University; University of Maryland, Eastern Shore; North Carolina A&T State University, and South Carolina State College.

Fred Jacoby, commissioner of the Southwest Athletic Conference and chair of the Research Committee.

The committee will consider all requests that comply with the published procedures and guidelines developed by the Research Committee and the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports. The guidelines for evaluation and the procedures for submitting proposals can be obtained from Eric D. Zemper, research coordinator, at the NCAA national office.

Jacoby said that the committee annually encourages applications in specific areas, including:

- Health and safety factors in athletics. Recommendations in this area come to the committee through the competitive safeguards committee, which hopes for development this year of a "prospective" study concerning a brace being used to prevent knee injuries.

- The value and justification of intercollegiate athletics.

- The relationship between institutional athletics recognition and the institution's enrollment applications, development funds and other tangible measurements of the benefits that athletic programs may bring to an institution.

Jacoby emphasized that those requesting NCAA funding should suggest projects that have practical application to the membership. The committee usually does not fund projects dealing with technical analysis or performance in a sport, believing that coaches associations are more appropriate sources of funding for specific-sport research.

In addition, proposals should include a detailed research methodology and a thorough justification of costs. The Association traditionally has been successful in supporting research projects at a relatively modest cost and has no provision for support of major-funding requests. Few NCAA-funded projects have exceeded $10,000, with the average award being $5,000. Most awards fall in a range from $500 to $12,000.

The committee generally does not fund indirect costs to institutions or salary costs for principal investigators. Finally, any studies that involve the use of human subjects must be cleared by the human subjects committee of the institution where the project originates.

Further information is available by contacting Zemper.

Elsewhere in Education

Need for more teachers seen

The Labor Department's bureau of labor statistics projects that the country will need 755,000 additional teachers to staff preschool, kindergarten, elementary and high school classes between now and 1995.

At the same time, the bureau estimates a 15 percent drop in college faculty positions from 744,000 in 1982 to 632,000 by 1995.

According to the National Education Association, the pool of college graduates certified to teach has decreased from 317,000 in 1972 to 139,000 in 1982.

The report forecast a need for 128,000 more secondary school teachers, but the increased need will not come until after 1990. Job prospects in high schools are expected to get worse during the rest of the 1980s before turning around.

Some states have considered relaxing their certification requirements to make it easier for liberal arts college graduates who did not major in education to get teaching jobs, according to the Associated Press.

Teacher-pay increase sought

Donald Gill, Illinois superintendent of schools, has recommended salary increases for beginning teachers in the state be increased 53 percent over the next three years and has proposed that the state provide as much as $49.6 million in additional school aid to meet that goal.

However, Gov. James Thompson said he thought the state could afford to spend no more for education next year than it is spending now, according to the Chicago Tribune.

Gill's total education budget for state aid to elementary and high schools is $3.056 billion for 1984-85. The total is 18.3 percent higher than this year's state aid.

"With a (surcharge) tax extension," Thompson said, "there could be more money, but certainly I couldn't support it at 18 percent."

Under Gill's plan, the state should reach a goal of providing a statewide average beginning-teacher salary of $17,000 in the first year of the program, $19,500 in the second year and $22,500 in the third year.

The average beginning salary in Illinois now is estimated at $14,800.

School-crime report disputed

A subcommittee of the House Education and Labor Committee heard testimony last week that the Reagan administration has presented a distorted picture of violence in the nation's schools (The NCAA News, January 25).

The witnesses, representing education groups, charged that statistics were being misrepresented to paint a picture of a "blackboard jungle" in an attempt to distract attention from inadequate Federal aid for education.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, said that although discipline was a problem in schools, the public schools are not "blackboard jungles." She said the violence problem had improved recently, mainly through the efforts of administrators and teachers.

Another witness said the report charged that 282,000 students were physically attacked each month but failed to state that the figure represented only 1.3 percent of all students.

Reliance on computers criticized

Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell has criticized computer-learning programs used in the nation's schools as "electronic page-turning" and said he would support research on new ways of teaching children algebra and the basics of writing.

Bell said computer buying was almost a fad among schools, adding that computerized educational programs on the market "leave a great deal to be desired."

He said schools need programs capable of analyzing pupil responses, providing remedial tutoring or moving the pupil on to the next level and then giving the teacher a printout showing how the pupil performed.

"I don't think we're ever going to get to where we can teach writing and have it all automated," Bell said.

Bell said most computer software available now hasn't been designed to do a good job of interacting with the mind of the student. He suggested that much of the difficult work of checking grammar, spelling, punctuation and structure could be done by a computer, leaving the teacher free to assess style and content in writing.

Deadline for nominations for scholarships March 1

Postgraduate scholarship nominations of male and female student-athletes in basketball must be mailed by March 1. The nominations should be sent to the appropriate district selection committee chair, as specified in the nomination folder that has been mailed to member institutions.

A total of 20 (10 men's and 10 women's) $2,000 scholarships will be awarded by the NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship Committee. Eight (four men's and four women's) will be allocated to Division I, and eight (four each for men and women) will be awarded to Divisions II and III. Four scholarships (two each) will be awarded on an at-large basis.

Each institution is asked to limit its nominations to no more than one male student and one female student. Institutional representatives and student-athletes must complete five forms found in the scholarship folder. The application also should include the nominee's transcripts, entrance or placement examination score and Graduate Record Examination score (if available).

The NCAA awards 90 postgraduate scholarships each year.

Championships Corner

Nissen will supply all equipment, excluding vaulting boards, for the 1984 NCAA Division II Men's and Women's Gymnastics Championships. AMF will supply three heavyweight and three lightweight fiberglass, leaf-springs vaulting boards for the championships.

Guidelines issued for institutions planning drug testing of athletes

Member institutions considering drug screening of its student-athletes now have a plan to follow. The NCAA Council has approved the following set of suggested guidelines for institutions contemplating such action.

The guidelines were developed after the NCAA Drug Education Committee began receiving questions from member institutions about how to proceed in local drug screening. More information is available from Eric D. Zemper, research coordinator, at the NCAA national office.

Suggested guidelines for drug screening are:

1. A member institution considering drug screening of student-athletes should involve the institution's legal counsel at an early stage, particularly in regard to right-to-privacy statutes, which may vary from one state and locale to another. With the use of proper safeguards such as those listed below, drug screening is considered legally acceptable; however, the legal aspects involved at each individual institution should be clarified.

2. Before initiating drug-screening activity, a specific written policy on drug screening should be developed, distributed and publicized. The policy should include such information as: (a) a clear explanation of the purposes of the drug-screening program; (b) who will be screened and by what methods; (c) the drugs to be screened, how often and under what conditions (i.e., announced, unannounced or both); and (d) the actions, if any, to be taken against those who test positive. (It is advisable that a copy of such a policy statement be given

Schools planned for certification of track coaches

The Athletics Congress will be conducting coaching schools during 1984 to certify track and field coaches in three levels of competency.

According to information distributed by TAC, the certification program has been established to set standards for coaching competency and to upgrade the competencies of coaches already in the field, to increase the number of certified coaches throughout the country, to increase the number of participating athletes, and to improve the performance levels of competing athletes.

The program provides instruction in three areas—sports science, technical (event specific) and practical—with certification in three levels—local coach, regional coach and senior coach.

Information about specific locations and dates of coaching schools may be obtained by contacting the following regional directors: East—Kevin McGill, Columbia University; Southeast—Loren Seagrave, Louisiana State University; South—Dorothy Doolittle, University of Houston; Midwest—Joe Rogers, Hillsdale College; Rocky Mountains—Michael MacEachen, University of New Mexico; West—Bob McGuire, California State University, Hayward; Northwest—Art Hutton, University of Washington.

The coaching schools include 14½ hours of instruction and two hours of discussion.

to all student-athletes entering the institution's intercollegiate athletic program and have them confirm in writing that they have received and read the policy.)

3. At many institutions, student-athletes sign waiver forms regarding athletics department access to academic and medical records. It is recommended that specific language be added to such waiver forms wherein the student-athlete agrees to submit to drug screening at the request of the institution in accordance with the published guidelines.

4. An institution considering drug screening should develop a list of drugs for which the student-athlete will be tested. The Drug Education Committee recommends the following categories as a minimum group of drugs for this purpose:

a. amphetamines;
b. anabolic steroids (including testosterone and epitestosterone), and
c. "street drugs" (e.g., marijuana, cocaine, LSD, PCP, quaaludes, heroin).

Alcohol, although by far the most commonly used and abused drug by student-athletes, is not included in this list primarily because it is cleared from the body quite rapidly. Therefore, testing for alcohol generally would be futile; however, if unannounced tests are part of an institution's screening policy, alcohol should be included.

5. Any institution considering drug screening of student-athletes must confront several logistical, technical and economic questions. Among them are:

a. When and how samples will be collected, secured and transported.
b. What laboratory should be used.
c. How samples will be stored, and for how long before analysis.
d. What methods of screening should be utilized in the laboratory.
e. What costs are involved.
f. How accurate are the tests. What are the false-positive and false-negative rates. (These will vary from one type of test to another and from one laboratory to another.)

g. How will false-positives be confirmed and handled.

h. Who will get the results and how will the results be used.

Many of these issues cannot be dealt with at this time because answers will vary from one institution to another. The NCAA Drug Education Committee recommends that each institution considering drug screening of student-athletes appoint a committee of representatives from various relevant academic departments and disciplines (e.g., biochemistry, chemistry, medicine) to deal with the issues.

The question of where the samples will be analyzed is critical. No matter where the analyses are done, data on false-positives and false-negative rates for the specific tests to be used should be provided. If the laboratory cannot provide such information, another laboratory should be considered.

Costs obviously will be a factor in deciding where analyses will be done, how many tests will be conducted and how often they will be done. The cost of a test is not necessarily directly proportional to its accuracy, which is critical. Institutional committee members familiar with the equipment and analysis procedures can be invaluable in this regard.

How the results of drug screening will be handled should be specified before any screening program is begun. Of particular importance is the question of how any student-athlete with a positive test will be handled. Again, it is recommended that specific written policies be formulated. Member institutions are referred to the Drug Education Committee's recommendations concerning drug education and treatment programs that were published in the June 16, 1982, edition of The NCAA News. Such programs should emphasize rehabilitation rather than punishment.

Briefly in the News

The United States Olympic Committee has awarded its 1985 National Sports Festival VI to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where athletes will compete in 33 sports. Attendance exceeded 250,000 at the past two sports festivals, in Indianapolis, Indiana, and Colorado Springs, Colorado. The festival was inaugurated by the USOC in 1978 as a showcase for the nation's Olympic hopefuls. . . . George Bennett, associate athletics director at Vanderbilt University, wants to let NCAA members know that the site of next year's Convention, the Opryland Hotel in Nashville, Tennessee, made a big hit with the representatives of Major League Baseball clubs who held their winter meeting there. Larry Schmittou, vice-president of the Texas Rangers, wrote the Nashville Banner that "plaudits are being received from throughout the baseball world on what a great city Nashville is and what a great hotel Opryland is. . . . almost every major and minor league club has written expressing the treatment they received from the staff of the Opryland Hotel."

Harvey P. Shapiro, head coach of the baseball and women's basketball teams at Bowdoin College, has been named head coach of the Dutch national baseball team. Shapiro, who will assume his duties in May, will select a national team and prepare a 36- to 40-game schedule. . . . The University of South Carolina will host a nationwide teleconference on strength conditioning for athletic programs February 25. The program, which will be broadcast in numerous states, begins at 10 a.m. and continues until 5 p.m. For information, contact Braden Kuhlman, 803/777-7210. . . . Jim Goostree, athletic trainer at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, responded to a request a year ago by George Klein of a Memphis, Tennessee, radio station for an autographed football with the names of coach Paul Bryant and his team that played in the 1982 Liberty Bowl. During the recent holidays, the ball was auctioned at a charity fund-raising event for $6,050.

Arnold Sgalio, sports information director of the Big Sky Conference, reports that figures from the first week of conference play with the new 45-second clock showed that 84.9 percent of the time a shot was taken in the first 20 seconds, 12.5 percent in the next 15 seconds and 2.6 percent in the final five seconds. The only violation at that point occurred on the first possession of the first conference game between Weber State College and the University of Nevada, Reno. Weber State let the time expire, although the Wildcats were not being particularly pressed. They simply were taking their time looking for a good shot and forgot about the clock. Weber State eventually earned an 80-62 victory.

Because of its television contract with Turner Broadcasting System, the Hall of Fame Bowl was able to increase its payout to participating teams—the University of Kentucky and West Virginia University—to almost $490,000 each. Last year, the participants received $454,536 each. Bowl officials said that a prime-time telecast at 7 p.m., rather than a 1 p.m. starting time, allowed for greater exposure and more advertising revenue.

CEO

NCAA Presidents' Commission," Toner wrote. "The NCAA membership clearly anticipates the Commission will be a highly influential body in determining the direction and policies for intercollegiate athletics."

Toner also wrote to the 12 members of the presidential nominating committee that had been selected prior to the Convention, noting that the committee would not operate in view of the Convention action to establish an alternative nominating procedure. He expressed the Association's gratitude to those individuals for their willingness to participate in the Commission process.

The January 27 letter to all CEOs reminded them of the significant steps taken by the 1984 Convention toward enhancing the involvement of presidents and chancellors in the national athletics governing process.

Toner noted that the Convention not only established the NCAA Presidents' Commission and created a presidential nominating committee to develop the slate for the first Commission, but also took action to:

- Mandate that at least six CEOs—a minimum of two from each division—will serve on the NCAA Council in the future.

- Affirm that the CEO is the individual responsible for NCAA legislation proposed by the institution by specifying that the CEO must sign submissions of proposed legislation or designate the individual at the institution who is authorized to do so.

- Authorize the NCAA Presidents' Commission to designate, at the time the Official Notice of the NCAA panels can assist student-athletes in understanding the application of institutional, conference and NCAA rules to their specific situations.

Institutions that choose to appoint athletic career-counseling panels shall send written notification, including the names and positions of those appointed to the panel, to the legislative services staff at the Association's national office.

Convention is printed, proposals on which voting will be by roll call at the Convention.

"We hope you will feel that all of this represents positive steps toward enhancing the chief executive officers' role in determining intercollegiate athletics policy at the national level," Toner stated.

In addition to requesting nominations for service on the Commission, the letter included a ballot for each chief executive's use in participating in the mail vote on Convention Proposal No. 36-2, which authorizes the Commission to designate roll-call votes. The proposal was adopted by the Convention with the provision that it be referred to the entire membership for mail vote under the procedures specified in Constitution 6-4 (b). Approval by two-thirds of all participating NCAA members will mean the roll-call designation can be put into effect for the 1985 NCAA Convention.

The letter also informed the chief executives of the new provisions regarding submission of legislation. "If you intend to designate anyone at your institution other than yourself for this purpose, please send written notification to that effect, identifying the other individual(s) by name and title," the letter stated.

The new legislation-submission provisions will be in effect for both the first Division I-A legislative meeting in June and the 1985 NCAA Convention.

TV in the News

Basketball TV package revised

Faced with an inadequate number of station clearances, the Atlantic 10 Conference and the TVS Television Network have revised their men's college basketball package.

TVS syndicates Atlantic 10 games on Thursday nights and Saturday afternoons. Originally, the agreement called for two games to be shown regionally on each date. However, only a single game will be shown for the remainder of the season.

"Although our original intent was to televise two games regionally every Thursday and Saturday, the lack of adequate station clearances for the two separate events is the main reason for consolidation," said Leland Byrd, Atlantic 10 commissioner. "The revised schedule . . . will ensure greater television coverage in a majority of the markets represented by our member institutions for a majority of the games."

ACC has tentative contract

Contingent upon the resolution of the current Supreme Court case involving the NCAA's control of live college football television, Raycom Sports, Inc., in association with Capitol Broadcasting, Inc., and ESPN have entered an agreement with the Atlantic Coast Conference for rights to ACC football games.

The agreement includes a combination of live national cable and over-the-air television games. The agreement would take effect for the 1984 season, if the Supreme Court rules against the Association in an antitrust suit brought by the Universities of Oklahoma and Georgia.

Raycom and Capitol had entered a contingency agreement with the ACC last summer, and now ESPN has been included.

NBC to carry Meyer tribute

NBC will broadcast a special half-hour tribute to DePaul head coach Ray Meyer between games of its February 4 college basketball double-header.

NBC Sports' college basketball analyst Al McGuire will host the program at 3:30 p.m. Eastern time.

Meyer is in his 42nd and final year as head coach of the Blue Demons. Earlier this season, he became just the fifth coach in college basketball history to record 700 victories. He has led DePaul to a 16-0 record and a No. 2 national ranking this year.

ABC purchases Olympic rights

ABC has purchased American rights to the 1988 Winter Olympics, to be held in Calgary, Canada, for a record $309 million.

That amount surpasses the $225 million ABC is paying for rights to this summer's Los Angeles Olympic Games and is well above the network's $91.5 million price tag for the 1984 Winter Olympics. The record agreement between ABC and the Calgary organizing committee fueled speculation that the American rights to the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, would approach the $1 billion mark, and that pay television could figure prominently in securing those rights.

ABC reportedly won a bidding war with NBC for the Calgary games. CBS had dropped out of the picture early, but NBC stayed in the bidding until it topped $300 million. ABC's bid does not include costs for production, planning and personnel.

Pay-television series canceled

A flurry of lawsuits and restraining orders has forced the cancellation of a pay-television package available to viewers in the Atlantic Coast Conference area.

The package—produced by Raycom-Jefferson Productions of Charlotte, North Carolina, and cablecast by ESPN—was known as "Season Ticket." It was launched this season, offering 23 ACC men's basketball games not available except on a subscription basis. Those not subscribing to the package had ESPN programming blacked out during the games.

However, some 13 North Carolina cable systems were hit with restraining orders earlier this month, forcing them to lift the blackouts. ESPN viewers outside the five-state ACC region had not been subject to black-out restrictions.

Enforcement changes announced

Two staff changes have been announced in the NCAA enforcement department.

Charles E. Smrt, a member of the NCAA staff since October 1981, has been named assistant director of enforcement, and Ronald E. Watson, football program coordinator and administrative assistant at Iowa State University, joins the staff as an enforcement representative.

Smrt, a former football player at Indiana University, Bloomington, replaces Michael M. Gilleran, who resigned in December to become commissioner of the West Coast Athletic Conference. Smrt will be responsible for assignments of five of the enforcement department's representatives.

Smrt has an undergraduate degree in criminal justice from Indiana. He also received a master's degree from Indiana in conjunction with the university's public affairs program.

Prior to joining the NCAA as an enforcement representative, Smrt worked as an investigator and instructor with the State Department of Administration and Justice and Public Safety in Richmond, Virginia.

In addition to his coaching and administrative responsibilities at Iowa State, Watson also was an instructor in the health and physical education department.

Watson played football at Indiana State University, Terre Haute, where he received both his bachelor's and master's degrees in education. Prior to his stint at Iowa State, Watson coached at Ames (Iowa) High School, where he participated in football, basketball and track as a high school student.
