Season previews

Tennis player John Letts of Stanford University and golfer Rick Fehr of Brigham Young University are among the featured athletes in season previews of those sports on pages 6-9.

Giving something back: the VFY program

NCAA members that want to involve their student-athletes in the community should consider the Association's Volunteers for Youth program, according to Cecil N. Coleman, chair of the Volunteers for Youth Committee and commissioner of the Midwestern City Conference.

The VFY program operates at 58 NCAA member institutions in 39 states and is considering adding other colleges for the 1984-85 academic year. Student-athletes who participate develop an individual relationship with a young person from a junior high school near the campus.

"It (the VFY) provides a good public image and lets the faculty, staff and community know that the student-athletes are vitally concerned about the young people in the city and that they are there to help," said Coleman.

Participating institutions have found that the program develops the student-athletes' time-management and leadership skills. Many of the athletes say they have more enthusiasm for college responsibilities after spending time with the young people.

Institutions must provide an athletics department staff member to serve as an advisor to a group of student-athletes. All day-to-day administrative operations are the responsibility of a six-member student director group.

Other institutional commitments might include use of athletics department facilities by a student-athlete and youth or free admission to selected athletic events on campus.

Local programs are self-supporting, although the athletics department is asked to pay a $200 insurance fee during the first year. Thereafter, fund-raising is the responsibility of the student directors. The average VFY annual budget is $400, although some programs spend as much as $2,500. Many VFY programs receive donations from community service clubs and student government funds.

Coleman said the VFY Committee is particularly interested in Divisions II and III institutions but would welcome applications from any member. The committee will consider each applicant and the surrounding community to determine the likelihood of success.

He said that interest among the athletes, coaching staff and administration and the existence of two junior high or middle schools near the campus are common elements of successful programs. National VFY staff members make an annual visit to each program and coordinate recruiting and training of student directors.

'85 Final Four ticket applications available for order February 15

David R. Gavitt, chair of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee, and Cliff Hagan, director of athletics at the University of Kentucky, have announced that ticket application forms for the semifinal and final sessions of the 1985 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship, March 30 and April 1 at Rupp Arena, Lexington, Kentucky, will be available February 15, 1984.

Ticket order forms may be obtained by contacting the NCAA national office, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201, or the University of Kentucky ticket office, Memorial Coliseum, Lexington, Kentucky 40506. Rupp Arena will provide 23,000 seats for the four-team semifinals and finals.

Individual orders are limited to four tickets. Prices for the two-night, three-game series will be $43. Tickets for individual sessions are not available.

The application form must not be postmarked prior to April 3, 1984. Envelopes bearing the April 3, 1984, postmark will be the first chosen in a common draw. If there are seats remaining, a similar process will be conducted for envelopes bearing an April 4, 1984, postmark and so forth. Each order must include a cashier's check or money order for the correct amount, payable to the 1985 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Athlete insurance to be ready soon

An insurance plan that offers significant and continuing benefits to student-athletes who suffer catastrophic injuries soon will be available to NCAA member institutions.

The NCAA Insurance Committee has begun working with Doug Ruedlinger, Incorporated, to implement the much-discussed plan. Once the agreement is signed, enrollment forms for the 1984-85 academic year will be mailed to NCAA members—probably around April 1. Meanwhile, the committee is undertaking a comprehensive communications campaign to assure that institutions fully understand the benefits and costs of the program.

As explained in the October 3 issue of The NCAA News, the insurance will offer full "umbrella" coverage as well as other benefits to student-athletes who suffer disabling injuries. Annual premiums will range from $2,000 for an institution without a football program that selects a deductible amount of $100,000, to $7,500 for an institution with both spring and fall football that chooses a $10,000 deductible.

"The Insurance Committee has spent long hours studying this proposal," said Chair Grant Osborn of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. "This has included a complete year of review to make sure that it is the best program available, that it is financially feasible and that it is good for the membership."

The program is modeled after one that Ruedlinger put together two years ago for state high school associations. That program recently came under scrutiny by the Iowa Department of Insurance, but the Insurance Committee believes the NCAA plan avoids the problems raised in the Iowa inquiry, which has been resolved.

The NCAA plan will be offered through a trust set up in a Missouri banking institution. In addition, Ruedlinger will file the policy in all 50 states. A participating institution will be issued a certificate of insurance through the trust or a separate policy, depending on state regulations.

The primary underwriter will be the City Insurance Company, which has received a contingent A (excellent) rating by Best's Insurance Report. This group rating is assigned to members of the Home Insurance Group, operating under a group business pooling arrangement. Although a portion of the risk is reinsured by the Fund Insurance Company, an offshore company that figured in the Iowa controversy, NCAA legal counsel John Black says this does not present a problem.

"We will have a solid domestic reinsurer," Black said. "More importantly, we will have a solid domestic primary insurer. City Insurance Company is the key to the program's financial stability."

The plan approved by the Insurance Committee includes these major elements:

- An "umbrella" liability policy and an alternative umbrella benefits plan that offers a settlement option for lifetime payments for medical and rehabilitation expenses and income loss. The liability portion provides $5 million coverage for the institution and its personnel in excess of the institution's present comprehensive liability insurance for claims arising under the plan.

- Medical and rehabilitation settlement benefits that are offered to the catastrophically injured student once the deductible level is reached in medical expenses and work loss. The work-loss benefit begins when the expenses reach $10,000, regardless of the deductible amount selected by the institution. The policy then pays

Coaching box produces order in basketball

By Steve Richardson
Kansas City Times

It may be time to put all college basketball coaches in a box.

The Southeastern Conference has done it now for two seasons on an experimental basis. Kentucky's Joe B. Hall has lost neither his sanity nor his ability to coach. Louisiana State's Dale Brown walks on his tippy-toes to the end of the restraining area in SEC games . . . and still tells his players, and sometimes the officials, what to do.

Those coaches don't walk onto the court—except during registered timeouts. They do not loiter at the scorer's table during breaks in the action. They do not rush onto the floor to intimidate the referee when a foul is called. And they don't coach from the half-court line, almost an everyday occurrence in college basketball.

They are in a coach's box.

It runs lengthwise from the end of the bench to the 28-foot line and has a width from the bench to the edge of the court. Head coaches and their assistants can only come out of the box during timeouts or, when time is in, to go to the scorer's bench to register a correctable error. If the coach is wrong about the error, he is assessed a timeout.

The biggest luxury the SEC has these days is order on the court.

Johnny Overby, supervisor of basketball officials for two conferences that don't have coaching boxes, the Big Eight and Missouri Valley, longs for the day when all college coaches wind up in a box. The reason: it would take the pressure off the officials, who now have to direct a circus act on the sidelines.

"It gives the officials a guideline," Overby said. "As it is now, coaches who do not have the coaching box think they can get out of the confines of their bench area while the clock is running and come up to the 10-second line, the midcourt line, when their team is on offense or defense. They think they can come up to there and coach. They cannot, according to the rule. But we don't have officials enforcing that."

"It's got to be uniform all over the country, and the coaching box would be an answer to all conferences."

Item: It is a typical afternoon in a Big Eight basketball game. Coaches are at half court directing their players. They buzz around the scorer's table during breaks in the action.

They often challenge the official who has called a foul on their player by staring him in the face at the scorer's table. And the two opposing coaches have gotten into oral battles in front of the scorer's table. No fists thrown . . . yet.

One of the earliest confrontations was between Missouri's Norm Stewart and Kansas' Larry Brown. Stewart told Brown an official's call on a KU player was a good one early in Kansas' 73-56 victory January 18. Brown yelled back at Stewart to the contrary. Brown later picked up two technicals arguing with officials.

Three days later, Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs and Kansas State coach Jack Hartman exchanged technicals in the first half of Oklahoma's 83-80 victory. Hartman was quoted after the game, saying he was just trying to protect his team. The Hartman-Tubbs skirmish came after Overby sent a bench-conduct reminder to Big Eight coaches.

Under NCAA rules, coaches are allowed to stand, kneel or walk in a designated area in front of the bench. Outside the area, the coaches are first warned. Then a technical can be given at the official's discretion.

Overby contends the rule has been so loosely enforced in college basketball that the trend of lack of enforcement is irreversible.

So, a coach's box to bundle up the problems.

Overby said the Big Eight could have had the coach's box this season on an experimental basis. Instead, the Big Eight coaches gave thumbs down to the possibility at their meetings last May.

"The Big Eight coaches didn't want to experiment with any rule, and the coaching box is a rule," Overby said. "Not the shot clock, the three-point play or the coaching box. Those are the three areas of concern in basketball."

Yet others are doing quite nicely with the rule. Division I conferences experimenting with the coach's box this season are the Metro Atlantic, SEC, Southland, Southwest, Southwestern and Sun Belt. John Guthrie, supervisor of SEC basketball officials, said the box has worked well in his league and in others.

"We have been pleased," Guthrie said. "It (the box) defines the situation a little bit stronger in the rules. . . . And I don't think it restricts a coach from doing his job."

Guthrie said there were only two technicals called on SEC coaches for leaving the box last season. He says it calms situations on the sidelines.

"It puts both coaches on equal footing on the sidelines," Guthrie said. "If one coach is up raving and in effect 'working' or intimidating the officials, it forces the other guy into it. And he may be mild-mannered."

"Officials can only do so many things to control a game. They can't control the fans and throwing ice on the floor. But they can control how the coaches act and the players play. They (the officials) need backing and help."

Two coaches polled in the Big Eight had somewhat different views on the coach's box.

"To some degree, it would help," KU's Brown said. "It is really funny certain coaches can get away with a lot more than others. I just think certain coaches are allowed a lot more liberties. And that's really true in the NCAA (tournament). I think we should do all we can to make it easier for officials. But I know in coaching it is hard sometimes to distinguish where the coaching box is in the middle of the game."

Colorado coach Tom Apke, a member of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, rejects the idea of a coach's box.

"We spent a lot of time discussing it last year with the rules committee people," Apke said. "There is maybe not a lot, (but) a little, pressure to put something like that into the college game. To sum up the feeling . . . the current bench-conduct rule, I believe and the committee believes, is adequate to take care of the situation. The problem is we haven't always been getting the enforcement of it."

"I don't like the coaching box idea. . . . Our blood pressure is up high enough without being able to move (only) ever so slightly. There are times when you need to leave that area and go talk to your players and give them instructions."

But these days, coaches leave the area to do more than give instructions. Put the coaches in a box.

Emphasis on winning is necessary

"So what's the big deal about overemphasis on winning? Isn't our free enterprise system based on winning? Shouldn't we teach winning?"

"I think so. I think what separates us from the rest of the world is the opportunity for personal victory—to achieve whatever degree of success we choose to achieve. . . .

"We must continue to teach our kids to win. If there is to always be freedom of opportunity in America, it will not be preserved by 'losers.' So, I maintain that teaching kids to win is a very important function of education in a free society. Some will decide to pursue their dreams and set their goals high. Some will not. But, it is their choice. . . .

"Yes, we can overemphasize winning. But, we cannot overemphasize winning with honor, personal integrity, stewardship, plus respect and compassion for others."

Jim Valvano, men's basketball coach
North Carolina State University
The New York Times

"I base everything on what I would have liked as a player. Why, when we become coaches, do many of us impose a higher standard than we had as player? We expect kids to eat, sleep and dream about the sport. In college, I also was trying to get a degree. I was trying to have some fun in school."

Judge Raymond Maxwell
Glover v. Sims, West Virginia, 1939
National Sporting Goods Association memo

" . . . No one can successfully assert that a proper athletic program is not appropriate to a great educational institution. The physical welfare of young men and women cannot, with propriety, be ignored. Education is the proper function of state government and includes appropriate physical development as well as mental and moral. Granting that mistakes have been made throughout the land in overemphasis of intercollegiate athletic activities, such fact can in no degree overshadow the wholesome importance of properly regulated and directed intercollegiate and intramural athletic programs. The thousands of West Virginia boys and girls who through the years become students at West Virginia University have a better opportunity for a well-rounded education by reason of the stadium being on the campus. . . ."

Cecil Mackey, president
Michigan State University
Michigan State University News-Bulletin

"I have been asked what would happen if the NCAA continues with a business-as-usual approach, in the wake of Proposition 35. First, I remind those people that membership in the NCAA is voluntary. Instead of MSU or another institution pulling out of an organized structure, it is more likely that institutions would align themselves nationally with those of like objectives and standards. This has been done in a sense by those who joined the College Football Association. There will be no change in the recognition that college athletics play an important role within our institutions."

"I don't think that any president is saying that athletics have gotten too big. What they are saying is that the nature of the situation has changed dramatically, and in a relatively short time. Big dollars are involved; careers of many people are to be considered. We must make sure that the pressures involved with something this important do not become so great that they interfere in any way with best interests of institutions or of student-athletes. The presidents do not seek day-to-day involvement with the NCAA, but they do seek the power to protect the academic and financial integrity of their institutions."

"The future of intercollegiate athletics will be intriguing, I think. I look for more control from presidents and boards of control, more money involved, more aspects of professionalism, and a greater variety in media coverage. To be sure, there will continue to be great public interest and consistent efforts to reach the highest levels of competition."

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. All questions pertaining to the NCAA and intercollegiate athletics will be answered in future issues of The NCAA News as space permits.

Q. Why does Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(7) apply only to four-year transfers and not to junior college athletes? If a junior college student-athlete has been off campus for 18 months, it seems only appropriate for the individual to be able to transfer to a four-year school and be eligible immediately.

A. Transfers from junior colleges are provided an all-encompassing waiver based on the accumulation of a minimum number of credit hours of transferable degree credit with a requisite grade-point average of 2.000. Because of this general waiver opportunity, NCAA member institutions have not thought it necessary to establish individual waiver categories treating specific situations similar to those relating to transfers from four-year institutions.

Basketball notes

For the record, being perfect isn't easy

With North Carolina now 20-0 heading into Thursday's game at Virginia, the subject at hand has to be the history of unbeaten teams in Division I men's basketball.

In 46 seasons since the elimination of the center jump in 1938—in other words, the modern game—only 24 major-college teams have finished the regular season undefeated. Eight of those remained perfect through tournament play; four did not play in a tournament, making just 12 perfect records in 46 years. Four of those were UCLA teams—in 1964, 1967, 1972 and 1973. No other college did it more than once. The last to do it was Indiana in 1976.

No Division I team has finished the regular season unbeaten so far in the 1980s. In 1979, Indiana State and Alcorn State were perfect in the regular season. Alcorn State swept through the Southwestern Athletic Conference tournament, then defeated Mississippi State in the National Invitation Tournament before losing to Indiana to finish 28-1 (Indiana went on to win the NIT). Indiana State with Larry Bird reached the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship final before losing to Michigan State and Earvin "Magic" Johnson, thus ending up 33-1.

DePaul came close

DePaul came close in 1980, when Ray Meyer's team was 24-0 before losing its next-to-last regular-season game, 74-76, in double overtime at Notre Dame (DePaul's next opponent Saturday at South Bend). DePaul also was 27-1 for the 1981 regular season, losing a midseason one-point game to Old Dominion, and 26-1 for the 1982 regular season, losing an early season 12-pointer to UCLA. Both those DePaul teams were upset in their opening NCAA game—the 1981 team by St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) and the 1982 team by Boston College (the 1980 team also lost its first NCAA game to UCLA).

The no-go teams

If it seems strange for a team to finish the regular season undefeated and not play in a postseason tournament, remember there were special circumstances in each case. The 1940 Seton Hall team simply was not invited to either the NIT or the NCAA, but there were only eight teams in each tournament in those days. The 1944 Army team was in a wartime situation.

Kentucky's varsity program was suspended in 1953 by the NCAA as an aftermath of the betting scandals. Kentucky went 25-0 in 1954 and finished 14-0 in the Southeastern Conference. Louisiana State also was 14-0 in the SEC—they did not meet because of a schedule dispute. Kentucky's top three players—Cliff Hagan, Frank Ramsey and Lou Tsioropoulos—were ineligible for the NCAA tournament because of an NCAA rule prohibiting postgraduates to participate. The SEC permitted such play. Kentucky voted not to take part in the tournament without those three.

The 1973 North Carolina State team, which finished 27-0, was on NCAA probation and ineligible for postseason play. This same N.C. State team finished 30-1 in 1974, losing only its third game to UCLA, and won the national championship, with David Thompson leading the way (ending UCLA's 38-game NCAA streak in the semifinals at Greensboro, then defeating Marquette in the final).

Here is the all-time list of 24 perfect-record regular-season teams and what happened to them in tournament play, if any:

Team (wins, final W-L)	Tourney
1939 Long Island (24-0)	won NIT
1939 Loyola (Ill.) (20; 21-1)	lost, NIT
1940 Seton Hall (19-0)	dnp
1941 Seton Hall (19; 20-2)	lost, NIT

Chris Starr of Nevada-Reno is among the top 10 in scoring and field-goal percentage

Marilyn Stephens of Temple is among the leaders in scoring and rebounding

Wichita State's Xavier McDaniel ranks second in rebounding, averaging 13.7 per game

Harvard's Bob Ferry is tops in free-throw accuracy with a percentage of 94.1

1944 Army (15-0)	dnp
1951 Columbia (22; 22-1)	lost, NCAA
1954 Kentucky (25-0)	dnp
1956 San Francisco (29-0)	won, NCAA
1957 North Carolina (32-0)	won, NCAA
1961 Ohio State (24; 27-1)	lost, NCAA
1964 UCLA (30-0)	won, NCAA
1967 UCLA (30-0)	won, NCAA
1968 Houston (28; 31-2)	lost, NCAA
1968 St. Bonaventure (22; 23-2)	lost, NCAA
1971 Marquette (26; 28-1)	lost, NCAA
1971 Pennsylvania (26; 28-1)	lost, NCAA
1972 UCLA (30-0)	won, NCAA
1973 UCLA (30-0)	won, NCAA
1973 N.C. State (27-0)	dnp
1975 Indiana (29; 31-1)	lost, NCAA
1976 Indiana (32-0)	won, NCAA
1976 Rutgers (28; 31-2)	lost, NCAA
1979 Alcorn State (25; 28-1)	lost, NIT
1979 Indiana State (27; 33-1)	lost, NCAA

Only seven teams in history finished the regular season unbeaten and then swept through the NCAA tournament. San Francisco with Bill Russell was the first in 1956. A year later, Frank McGuire's North Carolina team did it, defeating Kansas and Wilt Chamberlain in that triple-overtime classic in Kansas City. Then came John Wooden's four perfect teams at UCLA, already mentioned, and finally, Indiana in 1976.

The winningest 53

DePaul ranks first, Arkansas second and North Carolina third on the list of the winningest Division I teams over the past six seasons. Why six seasons instead of five? One player over four seasons can put a team among the leaders. Going back six seasons means at least two and, more likely, three outstanding recruiting classes. In any event, DePaul would still rank No. 1 on a five-year list at 126-24. Its big winning stretch, though, started in 1978 with a 27-3 team led by Dave Corzine, which lost to Notre Dame in the Midwest Regional championship game (a year later, DePaul beat UCLA and reached the Final Four). For the six years, DePaul lost only 27 games—12 last season.

A total of 53 teams will compete in the NCAA tournament this year. Here are the 53 winningest teams of the last six seasons, or since 1978. It will be interesting to see how many of these 53 make this year's field of 53:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
1. DePaul	153	27	.850
2. Arkansas	151	35	.812
3. North Carolina	156	40	.796

51. Howard	105	60	.636
52. Brigham Young	113	65	.635
53. Northeastern	106	61	.635

The above list includes only teams in Division I at least five of the last six seasons. Alabama-Birmingham of the Sun Belt Conference moved into Division I in 1980 after its first varsity season in 1979. In its five-year history, all under Gene Bartow, it is 100-52 for a .658 percentage (85-41 in four Division I seasons).

Only 29 teams on the above list averaged 20 victories per season over the last six seasons. Every year, about twice that many reach 20, but averaging 20 is hard. The top five have averaged 25 victories a season.

Over the six seasons, 20 teams have reached the Final Four at least once, and only three did it more than once—Louisville three times, North Carolina twice and Houston twice. Only four are not on the winningest 53 list—Georgia (1983), Michigan State (1979), Indiana State (1979) and Duke (1978). The 13 that are on the winningest list are DePaul (1979), Arkansas (1978), Virginia (1981), UCLA (1980, but since voided), Kentucky (1978), Georgetown (1982), Indiana (1981), Louisiana State (1981), Notre Dame (1978), Pennsylvania (1979), Iowa (1980), Purdue (1980) and North Carolina State (1983).

Six colleges have won the national championship in the six years—Kentucky in 1978, Michigan State in 1979, Louisville in 1980, Indiana in 1981, North Carolina in 1982 and North Carolina State in 1983.

The winningest 53 list includes four independents (using 1984 line-ups)—DePaul, Marquette, Notre Dame and Southwestern Louisiana—plus at least one team from 23 different conferences. The Big East Conference leads with five current members on the list.

Letting the air out

When Hartford played at Springfield recently, spectators thought they were watching a Harlem Globetrotters trick play. Early in the second half, Hartford's Steve Mack launched a jump shot. The ball hit the rim with a thud, falling straight down to teammate Mark Mitchell, who looked around in disbelief. The ball came down with no air in it. Bewildered officials stopped the game and replaced the ball. Robert Price, veteran Springfield statistician, had never seen the deflated ball trick and decided to call it a "dead-ball" rebound. Said Springfield coach Ed Bilik: "I've heard a lot of coaches say they were going to take the air out of the ball, but this is the first time in 24 years of coaching I've ever seen it." (Bob Marx, Springfield SID)

The box-and-one defense

Chapman coach Walt Hazzard could not believe it: "I had just given my pregame speech, we had our team prayer and I said, 'Let's go.' The players went for the door and the knob wouldn't turn from either side of our locker room door." While the visitors from Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo and Chapman fans waited and the players pounded, three maintenance men urged on by athletics director Walt Bowman needed 33 minutes to open the door. The game started 45 minutes late, and Chapman "locked up" its 17th straight victory, 69-64. (Greg Wright, Chapman SID)

Great Scott

The Wisconsin women's team is off to a fast start in Big Ten competition, winning its first seven conference games. Contributing a great deal to the Badgers' success is 6-2 senior center Megan Scott. She recently scored a career-high 21 points and added seven rebounds, five steals and one blocked shot to help her team defeat Minnesota for only the second time in 10 attempts.

Scott, whose father Harlo played on Wisconsin's 1941 NCAA national championship team, is a multitasking athlete. She was selected first team all-Big Ten as a volleyball player this year, and when basketball season is completed, will join the Badger track team to throw the discus and the javelin. The Platteville, Wisconsin, native played basketball for two years at Kansas before transferring to Wisconsin and bidding for a walk-on spot with the Badgers. Her demonstration of "good hands" does not end on the basketball court or the track infield. Scott also is a talented artist majoring in interior design. (Moss Penner, Wisconsin assistant SID)

Pole position helps a torrid pace

Pace, which is off to a 14-1 start, attributes its excellent record in part to the play of guards Amy Wesolowski and Kim Grochowski, and, of course, the encouragement of head coach John Olenowski. Junior forward Eileen Whelan has suggested a change in the team nickname from the Lady Setters to the Lady Setter-owskis. Not a bad idea, as Pace's Poles have vaulted the team to its first-ever national ranking in the weekly NCAA Division II polls (get it?). (John Balkam, Pace women's SID)

Quotes of the week

A phrase currently popular in sports vernacular, "playing above the rim," is used to describe many successful teams and players. However, the Hunter women's team has gained a measure of success playing below the ground. Hunter began competing January 9 in a new subterranean sports complex located in midtown Manhattan, christening the 1,500-seat arena with a 56-52 defeat of Concordia (New York). The Lady Hawks since have posted three more victories and no losses on their new home court. Construction on the complex began in 1975 but was halted several times due to lack of funds during New York City's numerous fiscal crises. "If I had known that we'd go undefeated in our new building, I'd have donated some of my own money years ago so that we could have gotten in there a few years earlier," Hunter head coach Deborah Mortley says. (Jeff Bernstein, Hunter SID)

With an 8-1 won-lost record away from his home court, Delta State first-year head women's basketball coach Lloyd Clark does not worry about taking his team on road trips. "Playing on the road? That's not so bad," Clark claims. "Our kids travel well—10 miles out of town, they're all asleep." (Jody Corroero, Delta State SID)

A small plane carrying Tom Simons, Nebraska assistant SID, and Dennie Peulz, part-time coach for the Huskers, developed problems en route home from the Iowa State game and had to make an emergency landing in Des Moines. "I knew we were in trouble when I looked behind me and saw Simons cross himself. Tom isn't even Catholic."

Oklahoma State coach Paul Hansen after last Saturday's victory over Missouri: "Anytime you get a win over Norm Stewart, you take your wife out to dinner." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID)

No one overlooking Stanford this season

By James A. Sheldon
The NCAA News Staff

Apparently, the "experts" learned their lesson well last year. You do not want to sell Stanford short, ever.

The Cardinal was ranked a rather distant eighth in last year's preseason Division I tennis poll and, at one time during the regular season, dropped to 13th. So, where did Stanford finish? Ranked first, of course, with its seventh NCAA Division I team title.

This year, despite the loss of No. 1 singles player Scott Davis, Stanford will enter the spring campaign as the nation's top-ranked team, although there is no shortage of capable challengers.

Cardinal head coach Dick Gould, who has led Stanford to all seven NCAA titles, will rely on five returning starters, a promising group of newcomers and, he hopes, the motivational factor of defending a championship.

"This year will be more difficult for us than last year," said Gould. "Last year, no one thought we could win the whole thing; we had everything to win and nothing to lose. Being ranked No. 1 (this year) is an entirely different feeling—we have a reputation to uphold."

Stanford was not the only surprise at last year's Division I championships. Minnesota's Swedish freshman Fredrik Pahlett pulled a series of upsets before finally falling in straight sets to top-seeded Greg Holmes of Utah in the singles final. Pahlett, who used to be the doubles partner of countryman Mats Wilander, was unseeded and ranked 21st entering last year's tournament.

This year, Pahlett opens the season ranked second behind Tennessee's Paul Annacone. Jon Levine of Texas ranks third, followed by Ted Farnsworth, Princeton, and Roberto Saad, Wichita State.

In doubles, Georgia's Allen Miller and Michael Pernfors earned the top ranking, based on a strong fall season. Rick Leach and Tim Pawsat, Southern California, and Charles Honey and David Egdes, Trinity (Texas), are ranked second and third, respectively.

Here is a brief rundown on the nation's top 10 teams as ranked in the preseason by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association:

Stanford—Defending NCAA and Pacific-10 Conference champion, the Cardinal lost only No. 1 singles player Scott Davis. Sophomores John Letts, Dan Goldie and Eric Rosenfeld are the heart of the team. Derrick Rostagno could be the top newcomer.

Southern California—The Trojans' top five return, led by juniors Matt Anger and Todd Witsken, ranked sixth and eighth, respectively, in the preseason singles ratings. They helped lead Southern Cal to a third-place NCAA finish last spring. Other key veterans include Tim Pawsat and Jorge Lozano. Coach Dick Leach's son, Rick, appears to be the top freshman.

Pepperdine—The key for the Waves will be replacing No. 1 singles player Glenn Michibata, who led Pepperdine to a fourth-place NCAA finish in 1983. Sophomore Kelly Jones has stepped into Michibata's No. 1 slot. Seniors Jerome Jones and Rill Baxter lend stability. Peruvian freshman Carlos di Laura already has moved into the national rankings (No. 44).

Trinity (Texas)—Seniors Tomm Warneke and Charles Honey were ranked ninth and 10th, respectively, in the preseason ratings. Another senior, David Egdes, was ranked No. 27. Warneke advanced to the third round of last year's NCAA singles championship, losing to eventual champion Greg Holmes of Utah.

UCLA—Bruin coach Glenn Bassett enters his 18th season (336-71 in dual matches, six NCAA championships and nine conference titles) with a veteran squad. No. 1 singles man Danny Saltz graduated, but all-America Jeff Klaparda is a capable replacement. Also on hand are Michael Kures, Mark Basham and doubles specialist Craig Venter.

Arkansas—After a runner-up finish in the Southwest Athletic Conference last year, the Razorbacks enter 1984 as the conference favorite. The main reasons for the optimism are seniors Kelly Evernden and Pat Serret. Serret, who now will team with Evernden, was the 1982 NCAA doubles champion and a 1983 doubles semifinalist with the since-graduated Peter Doohan. Sophomores Bobby Banck and Tim Siegel provide depth.

Clemson—The Tigers lost a pair of all-conference performers, but No. 1 singles player Rick Rudeen is back along with Andy Krantz, Miguel Nido and Richard Matuszewski. Newcomer Lawson Duncan already has made his presence felt. Clemson is the defending Atlantic Coast Conference champion.

Miami (Florida)—The Hurricanes' prospects dimmed when Henri de Wet and Mike Robertson, nationally ranked South Africans, did not return for the second semester. Coupled with the graduation of last year's top player, Christo Steyn, that puts a big load on senior Craig Campbell and

Southern Methodist—NCAA runner-up last year, the Mustangs return just two starters: John Ross (No. 4 last year) and Mark Styling (No. 6). Freshmen Ed Ross, Den Bishop and John Zahurak must come through if the Mustangs hope to capture their third straight SWC championship.

Georgia—NCAA doubles champion Allen Miller returns, but his partner Ola Malmqvist does not. Miller, who is ranked seventh in singles, will team with former junior college champion Michael Pernfors. Junior Dean Frey and redshirt George Bezecky will be prominent performers for the Bulldogs.

Following is a region-by-region look at some of the other top teams and individuals in the nation:

Region 1—Harvard again appears to be the class of the Eastern Intercollegiate Tennis Association, though Yale and Princeton could push the Crimson. West Virginia and Penn State should vie for the Atlantic 10 Conference crown. Boston College is the defending Big East Conference titlist.

Region 2—Duke and North Carolina appear to be the main challengers to Clemson in the ACC, while Maryland and Virginia hope to improve with veteran rosters. Newcomer South Carolina could have an immediate impact in the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Top players—Chaim Arlosoroff, Duke; John Dokken, Virginia; Ron Erskine, North Carolina; Zoran Petkovic, South Carolina; Steve Price, Furman; Norm Schellinger, Virginia Commonwealth; Gil Schuerholz, Towson State; Mike Smith, Duke.

Region 3—Defending champion Auburn, along with Alabama, Tennessee and Louisiana State, figure to make things difficult for preseason Southeastern Conference favorite Georgia. Florida State (Metro), McNeese State (Southland), Tennessee-Chattanooga (Southern), South Alabama (Sun Belt) and Murray State (Ohio Valley) all hope to defend conference titles. Southwestern Louisiana is the region's leading independent behind Miami (Florida).

Top players—Marco Abilhoa, Florida State; Paul Annacone, Tennessee; Roger Blackburn, Tennessee; Dan Cassidy, Auburn; Tarek El Sakka, Southwestern Louisiana; Chris Green, Tennessee; Howard Herr, Auburn; Peter Jetzel, Northeast Louisiana; John Kennedy, Florida; Kevin Moir, Auburn; Hermann Pappas, Mississippi State; Fernando Perez, Louisiana State; Fred Perrin, South Florida; Andy Solis, Alabama; Paul Varga, Kentucky; Teddy Viator, Louisiana State; Mark Wilder, Alabama; Scott Zaccaria, Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Region 4—Minnesota's Swedish connection of Fredrik Pahlett and Stefan Eriksson could ensure the Gophers a Big Ten Conference title, while defending champion Michigan rebuilds. Northwestern could be pesky, however. With perennial power Miami (Ohio) returning just one starter, the Mid-American Conference race appears to be up for grabs.

Top players—Adam Abele, Purdue; Stefan Eriksson, Minnesota; Jon Kamisar, Northwestern; Steve Lovett, Wisconsin; Mike Massie, Ohio State; Fredrick Pahlett, Minnesota.

Region 5—The status quo appears to be intact in this region: Oklahoma State and Oklahoma should fight it out for the Big Eight Conference title, and Wichita State will be a solid favorite in the Missouri Valley Conference. Oklahoma City is looking for its fourth straight Midwestern City Conference championship.

Top players—Joe Braver, Oklahoma; Sam Fotopoulos, Oklahoma; Dale Houston, Wichita State; Kirk Loomis, Oklahoma State; Peter Mallett, Oklahoma State; Roberto Saad, Wichita State; Mike Wolf, Kansas.

Region 6—Texas, led by Jon Levine, and Texas Christian will challenge Arkansas and Southern Methodist in the SWC. New Mexico is beginning to emerge in the Western Athletic Conference, and Arkansas-Little Rock is the defending Trans America Athletic Conference titlist.

Top players—Craig Boynton, Texas Christian; Dacio Campos, Houston; Tom Fontana, Texas; Greg Hill, Texas A&M; Jon Levine, Texas; Richard Persson, Arkansas-Little Rock.

Region 7—Utah will miss NCAA singles champion Greg Holmes, who turned pro, but the Utes still rate the favorite's role in the WAC. Arizona

Cougars' title streak could be threatened

The pro circuit may do what no one in Division II men's tennis has been able to do—break up Southern Illinois-Edwardsville.

The Cougars have won the past six NCAA Division II team titles, and SIU-Edwardsville players have won seven straight singles championships. But coach Kent DeMars faces the 1984 season without three-time NCAA singles titlist Ken Flach and his doubles partner (they also won the NCAA title), Robert Seguso. Both have turned pro, Flach with one season of eligibility left and Seguso with two.

However, the cupboard is not entirely bare—senior Doug Burke was a singles quarterfinalist last spring and teamed with Flach to take the 1982 doubles crown, and Johan Sjogren lost a three-set match to Flach in last year's singles semifinals. But the Cougars' competition looks formidable, headed by last year's runner-up, Southwest Texas State, which will move to Division I effective September 1, 1984. Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, Cal State Hayward, Chapman, Hampton Institute and Rollins can entertain championship thoughts as well.

The leading contender to claim Flach's singles title would appear to be last year's surprise runner-up, Scott Appledorn of Ferris State. Bill Jenkins of Southwest Texas State, Roger Alex and Troy Turnbull of Chapman, Sjogren, and Burke also are leading candidates. Rolf Wiedenmeyer and Brian Mehmedbasich of Cal State Hayward might rate a preseason edge in doubles.

Division III also has something of a wide-open look. Defending champion Redlands lost its top two players, including singles champion Erik Michelsen. Scott Moore and Ken Turknette, who were doubles semifinalists in 1983, will help pick up the slack.

A veteran Claremont-Mudd-Scripps team—led by 1981 singles titlist Donovan Jones and Mark Nys—could be the heir apparent, after a second-place finish last season. Gustavus Adolphus, 1982 team champion; Kalamazoo, and Swarthmore are three more likely contenders.

Jones is the division's preseason No. 1 in singles. He is followed in the rankings by Eugene Jones, UC San Diego; Bob Savitt, Wooster; Tim Corwin, Kalamazoo, and teammate Nys. Nys and partner Alex Cloth are top-ranked in doubles, just ahead of Moore and Turknette.

Following is a look at some of the top teams and individuals in Divisions II and III men's tennis:

Division II

Top teams—California-Davis (Willem Vanderwerf, Marty Rothfels, Dave Hultman); Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo (Brian Bass, Randy Havens, Thor Holt, David Reynoldson); Cal State Hayward (Brian Mehmedbasich, Rolf Wiedenmeyer, Rich Wilkinson); Central Florida (Dave Chafe, Mike DeFranco, Lenny Engle, Tony Snoeyenbos); Chapman (Roger Alex, John Hancock, John Soldat, Troy Turnbull); Hampton Institute (Godwin Emeh, Mauro Menezes, Alex Pepen); Rollins (Rob Bates, David Feher, Mark Gabriel, Brian Morrissey, Brian Talgo); Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (Doug Burke, Young Min Kwon, Johan Sjogren, Joe Vassen); Southwest Texas State (Carlos Correia, Bill Jenkins, Robert Stapper, Jack Williams).

Other top players—George Adeyemi, Northeast Missouri State; Scott Appledorn, Ferris State; Salogun Balogun, Mercyhurst; Jens Caap, Mercyhurst; Scott Gerrity, Eckerd; Miles Gray, Millersville; Rick Hagenbuch, Cal State Bakersfield; Jerome Lawrence, Florida International; Pauw Lee, Cal Poly-Pomona; Carlos Norton, Northeast Missouri State; Khalid Outaleb, Florida International; Corey Robson, Valdosta State; Mike Schnably, West Chester.

Division III

Doubles play might be decisive for Trinity

After a second-place NCAA finish last year and a third place two years ago, it might be thought that Trinity (Texas) women's tennis coach Emilie Foster would be chomping at the bit.

But, if she is asked about the importance of winning an NCAA Division I team title, the answer likely would be this:

"That's something that just happens," Foster said. "Our goals here are just to provide our kids an opportunity to improve their tennis and get an education. Whatever happens, happens."

It is not that Foster and her squad are unconcerned about an NCAA title. With a No. 2 preseason rating, the Tigers certainly should be a factor. But top-ranked Stanford is an imposing hurdle.

"They are strong all the way through," Foster said of the Cardinal. "Their (Nos.) 5 and 6 could play 1 and 2 for a lot of schools. They're good in doubles . . . they're great in doubles."

"I think they are head and shoulders above everyone else. There's Stanford, and then there's everybody else."

Indeed, the Cardinal's doubles strength could be decisive. According to Foster, "The majority of matches between teams in the top 10 will be decided by doubles play."

That is one area that has given Trinity trouble. Although Louise Allen and Gretchen Rush are defending NCAA champions, Foster has been experimenting with other combinations. Foster hopes "a nice blend of attitudes" and the input of new assistant coach Anne Smith, who has won doubles titles at the U.S., French and Australian Opens and Wimbledon, will strengthen the Tigers' doubles play.

Allen and Rush will enter the spring season as the nation's top-ranked doubles team, followed by Stanford's Elise Burgin and Linda Gates. Allen, Burgin and Rush rank first through third in singles as well.

Last year's singles finalists—champion Beth Herr of Southern California and Gigi Fernandez of Clemson—have turned professional. Intending to claim the vacated title, along with Allen, Rush and Burgin, are Kathleen Cummings, Texas; Cynthia MacGregor, San Diego State; Kate Gompert, Stanford; Kelly Henry, Southern California; Lisa Spain, Georgia, and Maeve Quinlan, Northwestern.

Here is a rundown on the nation's preseason top 10 teams as ranked by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association:

Stanford—After a fourth-place finish in 1983, the Cardinal hopes to reclaim the NCAA team title it landed two years ago. Heading the lineup will be Elise Burgin (ranked second nationally in singles), Kate Gompert (ranked seventh) and Linda Gates (23rd). Burgin and Gates were runners-up in last year's NCAA doubles championship. Newcomers Leigh Anne Eldredge, Patty Fendick and Stephanie Savides should contribute immediately for coach Frank Brennan.

Divisions II, III races wide open

Tennessee-Chattanooga will have two things going for it as it defends its NCAA Division II Women's Tennis Championship. First, the Lady Moccasins return all six starters from last year's lineup. Secondly, Chattanooga will host the 1984 Division II championships.

Coach Tommy Bartlett's squad won last year's team title, 5-4, over California-Davis. The Lady Mocs did it the hard way, trailing, 4-2, after singles and then winning all three doubles matches. The top two players, Pam Yates and Christine Picher, are the heart of the team and were semifinalists in last spring's NCAA doubles competition.

California-Davis again can be expected to challenge for the team title along with Notre Dame, Northern Colorado, Stetson and Southern Illinois-Edwardsville.

Defending singles titlist Suzanne Kuhlman of Georgetown has graduated, but 1983 runner-up Sandra Elliott of Northern Colorado returns. Cal-Davis' Helen Nazar was a semifinalist last season. Mary Holycross, Cal Poly-Pomona, and Jackie Pichardo, Denver, are returning quarterfinalists. Yates and Picher may rate an edge as the top returning doubles team.

In Division III, defending champion Principia faces a stiffer challenge. Three of last year's top six are back, headed by Wendy Clark and Susy Verheul. But runner-up North Carolina-Greensboro returns four starters, and West Coast powers UC

San Diego, Pomona-Pitzer and Occidental have veteran teams. Mary Washington also looks strong.

Occidental's Jean Marie Sanders returns to defend her singles title. She also won at No. 1 singles in the division's flighted team championship. Last year's singles runner-up, Laurie Laughlin of Southwestern (Tennessee), also is back as is Nancy Sharkey, William Paterson, a semifinalist last year.

Principia's Clark won last year's doubles title with Kristi Martin, who has graduated. The top returning doubles teams are Elissa Simmons and Mara Feder, California-Santa Cruz, and Nadine Akimoto and Cathy Sturdivant, UC San Diego. Both tandems were semifinal losers a year ago.

Following is a look at some of the leading teams and individuals in NCAA Divisions II and III women's tennis:

Division II

Top teams—California-Davis (Sally Garbeff, Helen Nazar, Maria Newton); Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo (Laurie Moss); Florida Southern (Allison Avey, Betsy Broadwater); Morehead State (Sally-Anne Birch, Helen Curtis); Northern Colorado (Sandra Elliott, Kellie O'Rourke); Notre Dame (Mary Colligan, Pam Fischette); Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (Monica Briddle, Elizabeth Calendar, Lisa Schuito); Stetson (Donna Donath, Sharon Swanbery); Tennessee-Chattanooga (Sue Mc-Culloch, Christine Picher, Pam Yates).

Other top players—Robin Cloverdale, Montana State; Dawn Cocozza, Central Connecticut State; Kim Daus, Denver; Kathy Hill, North Dakota; Mary Holycross, Cal Poly-Pomona; Ana Mendoza, Florida International; Diane Miloslavich, San Francisco State; Jackie Pichardo, Denver; Marla Reid, Cal State Northridge; Carol Stoller, Florida Atlantic; Mary Zorich, North Dakota State.

Division III

Top teams—California-Santa Cruz (Gwyn Adams, Mara Feder, Elissa Simmons); Gettysburg (Pam Gray); Kalamazoo (Linda Topolsky); Mary Washington (Lisa Cole, Deanne Wardman); North Carolina-Greensboro (Shelly Albright, Lisa Zimmerman); Occidental (Kristin Carter, Tina Martin, Jean Marie Sanders); Pomona-Pitzer (D'Arcy Kyle, Kim Ragen, Wendy Schwartz); Principia (Wendy Cook, Suzy Verheul); UC San Diego (Nadine Akimoto, Lisa Gilbert, Cathy Sturdivant, Jessica Vernon); William Paterson (Anne Galpern, Nancy Sharkey).

Other top players—Caroline Barclay, Davidson; Cecelia Collins, Millsaps; Eby Day, Wittenberg; Pam Fera, Trenton State; Wendy Kaufman, Trenton State; Geraldine Klauber, Johns Hopkins; Laurie Laughlin, Southwestern (Tennessee); Jennifer Pettinga, Hollins; Aileen Smith, Wheaton (Massachusetts); Jenny Wall, Allegheny.

Trinity (Texas)—The Tigers return five top singles players and all three doubles teams. The nation's first- and third-ranked players—senior Louise Allen and junior Gretchen Rush—will be the key performers. Allen was a singles semifinalist last spring and teamed with Rush to win the doubles title. Lisa Sassano and Lee Elliott are two more veterans, and Canadian freshman Jana Klepac stepped into the No. 4 position this fall. Trinity finished second in last year's NCAA team championship.

UCLA—Three freshmen hold the key to the Bruins' title hopes. Elizabeth Minter (11th) and Patricia Hy (13th) already have moved into the national rankings, and Jane Thomas will be expected to add depth. The importance of those three increased markedly when Barbara Gerken, who played No. 2 for last season's NCAA third-place team, decided to turn pro. Karen Dewis and Lynn Lewis are the top returning veterans.

Southern California—Beth Herr, who won last year's NCAA singles crown and helped lead the Trojans to the team title, has gone pro; but four of last season's top six return. Kelly Henry, ranked eighth nationally and Cecilia Fernandez, ranked 17th and winner of the 1983 World University Games singles title, played at Nos. 2 and 3, respectively, last year. Sophomores Janet Lagasse, Heliane Steden and Cheryl Jones also are nationally ranked.

Texas—Two transfers from Colorado—Kathleen Cummings and Becky Callan—should give the Longhorns a big boost in defense of their Southwest Athletic Conference championship. So, too, should freshman Beverly Bowes. Cummings is ranked fifth and Bowes 12th in the preseason ratings. Veterans Vickie Ellis and Gen Greiwe also figure prominently.

Southern Methodist—The Mustangs' chances of overtaking conference rival Texas may hinge on the play of four top freshmen, particularly Ann Hulbert (ranked 15th) and Molly Van Nostrand (tied for 19th). Senior Stephanie Fess is the top veteran. She will move from No. 1 to No. 3 to make way for the freshmen.

San Diego State—No. 1 singles player Micki Schillig, the 1982 NCAA singles runner-up and a quarterfinalist last year, has graduated. Her doubles partner, Cynthia MacGregor (they were semifinalists in 1983), returns and is ranked sixth nationally in singles. Linda Howell also is nationally ranked.

Miami (Florida)—The Hurricanes have three key performers in Ros Riach, Mary Dailey and Marlin Noriega to provide stability, while freshmen Lise Gregory, Susanna Rojas and Vanessa Binns should prove helpful.

Northwestern—The veteran Wildcat team is led by seniors Randi Rosen and Courtney Lord and sophomore Maeve Quinlan. Quinlan is ranked 10th in the preseason ratings. Freshman Eva Lucido is an important addition.

California—The middle of the Bears' lineup has graduated, but No. 1 player Heather Ettus returns. Freshmen Linda Oechsle and Mary Margaret Torres likely will step into the Nos. 2 and 3 slots. Junior Julie Grummel is a top doubles player.

Here is a region-by-region summary of some of the country's other top teams and individuals:

East—Harvard, Princeton and Yale finished in a tie for last year's Ivy League title and should be just as competitive this year. George Washington and West Virginia will challenge Penn State in the Atlantic 10 Conference. Syracuse could pressure Boston College in the Big East Conference.

Top players—Joy Cummings, Princeton; Elizabeth Evans, Harvard; Marion Gengler, William and Mary; Kate Gressens, Yale; Lisa Grimer, West Virginia; Linda Learmonth, Penn

State; Katie Molumphy, Boston College; Leslie Sheehan, Boston U.; Jan Shelburne, Princeton; Connie Yowell, Yale; Kris Yuracko, Lehigh.

Southeast—Defending champions Clemson, Atlantic Coast Conference, and Georgia, Southeastern Conference, face stiff challenges. Duke and North Carolina will pressure Clemson, while Florida appears to be Georgia's main threat. South Carolina and Florida State are the best of the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference, and Rollins again is a leading independent. The Sun Belt and Southern Conferences will sponsor women's championships for the first time.

Top players—Nancy Boggs, North Carolina; Johnna Chafin, South Carolina; Kim Clingan, Florida; Mary Dinneen, Rollins; Jane Forman, Clemson; Jenni Goodling, Rollins; Jill Hetherington, Florida; Joni Holzschuh, Rollins; Maxine Kaufman, Georgia; Christina Rozwadowski, South Florida; Melissa Seigler, Clemson; Lisa Spain, Georgia; Sue Taylor, Duke.

Midwest—Indiana, the defending champion, will battle Northwestern for Big Ten honors. Michigan State, third a year ago, is rebuilding. Defending champions Miami (Ohio) in the Mid-American Conference and Southern Illinois in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference return enough experience to repeat.

Top players—Wendy Allen, Indiana; Claudia Brisk, Minnesota; Tracy Hoffman, Indiana; Cathy Lowe, Miami (Ohio); Mary Mactaggart, Michigan; Maureen McNamara, Illinois; Alessandra Molinari, Southern Illinois; Anna Van Wallaghem, Miami (Ohio); Julie Wake, Indiana State.

Central—As usual, Oklahoma State faces a fight from Oklahoma for Big Eight Conference supremacy. Utah is the defending High Country Athletic Conference titlist, and Wichita State could prove difficult for Southern Illinois in the Gateway.

Top players—Kerrie Bond, New Mexico State; Mary Boudreaux, Oklahoma State; Mari Forbes, New Mexico; Allyson Ingram, Oklahoma; Robyn Lamb, Oklahoma State; Wendy Mikkelsen, Oklahoma; Jennifer Parnell, Oklahoma City; Marla Ryder, Utah; Sandy Sadler, Wichita State; Nancy Talley, Oklahoma State.

Southwest—Rice finished second in last year's SWC race and appears strong enough to again challenge Arkansas, Texas and Southern Methodist. Northeast Louisiana will try to topple Lamar in the Southland.

Top players—Vanne Akagi, Texas A&M; Pam Booras, Texas Tech; Kellie Chase, Arkansas; Katy Livijn, Arkansas-Little Rock; Colleen O'Connell, Northeast Louisiana; Marianne Odman, Nicholls State; Christine Power, Lamar; Margaret Redfeard, Houston; Beth Wagner, Arkansas; Wendy Wood, Rice.

West—Arizona and Arizona State have enough talent to make things uneasy for the southern California powers in the Western Collegiate Athletic Association. Pepperdine and California-Irvine are leading independents. Oregon and Washington State may be the strongest teams in the Pacific Northwest.

Top players—Elisa Fernandez, Pepperdine; Pam Jung, Pepperdine; Joanie Lebedeff, Arizona; Akemi Nishiya, Pepperdine; Sherri Norris, Arizona State; Jena Strozier, California-Santa Barbara; Sheryl Tebbutt, Arizona; Rosie Vera Cruz, Hawaii.

No one will be a darkhorse in the Pacific-10. Weber State is defending its Big Sky Conference championship.

Top players—Paul Chamberlain, Arizona; Greg Hayward, Brigham Young; Christian Schultes, Utah; Eric Styrmoe, Weber State; John Tsumas, Utah.

Region 8—Traditionally the nation's strongest region, Region 8 has four teams in this year's preseason top 10. Two others are in the top 20: California and California-Irvine. Long Beach State will push Cal-Irvine in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Nevada-Reno and San Diego State will be factors in the Big Sky and Western Athletic Conferences, respectively.

Top players—Steve DeVries, California; Arnie DiGeorge, Nevada-Reno; Graham Espley-Jones, San Diego State; Harold Hecht, California; Bruce Man Son Hing, Cal-Irvine; Kevin McClintic, Long Beach State; Chris Schoop, California.

Oklahoma a solid contender for men's title

By Michael V. Earle
The NCAA News Staff

If the fall golf season is any indication of how Division I men's teams will perform this spring, Oklahoma is an early favorite to win its first NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships title.

This past fall, the Sooners finished in the top 10 in each of their five tournaments, including a first-place showing in the 17-team Andy Bean Intercollegiate, which featured some of the nation's top teams.

Although there is plenty of golf to be played before the Division I championships get under way May 23-26 at Bear Creek Golf World in Houston, Texas, the Sooners served notice this fall that they are ready to challenge the perennial leaders.

Oklahoma's charge is led by Andrew Magee, who won individual titles at the Big Eight Conference tournament and the Houston Intercollegiate last year and then finished ninth at the NCAA championships. Magee, the Sooners' most valuable player the past two seasons, had a 72-stroke average this fall.

Greg Turner emerged as one of the nation's top freshmen last season for Oklahoma, finishing in the top 10 of seven tournaments. A member of the New Zealand national junior team and World Cup team in 1982, Turner finished last season with a 73.5-stroke average.

The Sooners also received a boost with the addition of transfer Cliff Pierce, who advanced to the semifinals of the U.S. Amateur last year.

"I feel you need at least three exceptional players to be a contender for the NCAA title," said Oklahoma coach David Yates. "I think in Magee, Turner and Pierce we have them. If we can get a few others playing well, we'll be in good shape."

"If we could win at least once or twice this spring, we'll be in good shape for the NCAA championships."

Oklahoma State, the defending Big Eight and NCAA champions, also should be in the title race. The Cowboys, who have won four NCAA team titles under coach Mike Holder, return three top performers.

The Cowboys are led by Scott Verplank, who tied for first in last year's NCAA championships but who lost the title in a four-man, sudden-death play-off. Verplank had a 72.2-stroke average as a freshman and placed in the top 10 in all nine tournaments in which he competed. The Cowboys' other mainstays are seniors Tommy Moore and Andy Dillard, both of whom finished the fall season with 73.6-stroke averages.

Despite the promising outlooks of Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, Houston was selected as the No. 1 team by a slim margin in the final fall poll conducted by the Golf Coaches Association of America.

Houston has John Slaughter, Billy Ray Brown and David Tentis from its 1982 NCAA championship team. And the Cougars will play this year's NCAA championships at home.

The Cougars could have some extra incentive if coach Dave Williams, who has led Houston to 14 NCAA titles in 33 years, decides to retire after the 1984 season.

Should Williams make that announcement, this year's Houston lineup could make his last hurrah a pleasant one. In addition to Slaughter, Brown and Tentis, Williams has experience in Chip Craig and Steve Elkington, who finished in a three-way tie for 11th in last year's NCAA championships.

Other teams to watch this spring include:

Southern California's Sam Randolph

Brigham Young—The defending Western Athletic Conference champion appears to be stronger than last year's team that won six tournaments and placed 10th in the NCAA championships. Coach Karl Tucker has one of the nation's top golfers in senior Rick Fehr, who compiled a 72.8-stroke average in fall competition.

Ohio State—The Buckeyes are favored to win their eighth Big Ten Conference championship in the past nine years. Ohio State, which finished fourth in the NCAA championships, is led by senior Chris Perry, the defending Big Ten champion and a top-20 finisher in the NCAA championships. If coach Jim Brown can fill the Nos. 4 and 5 spots in his lineup, look for Ohio State to make a charge at the front-runners next May in Houston.

UCLA—Despite the graduation of Jay Delsing, who led the Bruins to a seventh-place finish in the NCAA championships, coach Eddie Merrins has a talented squad. The defending Pacific-10 Conference champions had a good fall season, with senior Brad Bell leading the way with a 73.7-stroke average.

Clemson—The Tigers came on strong late last year with a fifth-place finish in the NCAA championships. An experienced lineup with plenty of depth should enable Clemson to be strong all season. The Tigers are led by seniors Dillard Pruitt and Norman Chapman, both of whom finished the fall season with stroke averages of 72 or better. Charles Raulerson, who finished in a five-way tie for 20th in the NCAA championships as a freshman, has outstanding potential. The battle for the Nos. 4 and 5 spots in coach Larry Penley's lineup will be close, with at least four players vying for a spot in the starting lineup.

Missouri—This could be the year Missouri steals some headlines from Big Eight rivals Oklahoma and Oklahoma State. The Tigers return everyone from last year's team that tied for second in the conference tournament and tied for 13th at the NCAA championships. Missouri's lineup is led by Stan Utley, who was runner-up in the conference tournament and finished in a tie for 15th in the NCAA championships.

Florida—A good mix of veterans and newcomers give the Gators a very bright outlook. David Jackson, Southeastern Conference freshman of the year, is one of the brightest young players in several years at Florida's tradition-rich program. The Gators are coming off an outstanding fall season and should make the NCAA championships field again.

Texas—Brandel Chamblee and Paul Thomas give the Longhorns one of the best one-two combinations in the nation. Chamblee won the 1983 Pan American and was Southwest Athletic Conference champion. Thomas was runner-up in the NCAA championships, losing in a four-man, sudden-death play-off. If Chamblee and Thomas get support, Texas should finish among the nation's top 10 teams.

Florida State—A senior-laden lineup with a couple of promising freshmen has Florida State coach Verlyn Giles optimistic about the 1984 season. Seniors Keith Kulzer, Greg Fleischer and Jon Morrow will provide leadership for Florida State. Fleischer, along with freshmen Tom Krystyn and Nolan Henke, made the 1983 Florida all-state team after finishing in the top six of the highly competitive Florida Intercollegiate Championships.

South Carolina—With the addition of promising newcomers Greg Sweatt and Bob Hughes, coach Bobby Foster has one of his most solid lineups. The newcomers join Fred Wadsworth, who led South Carolina in fall action with a 72.5-stroke average, and Webb Heintzelman, who placed in the top five in two fall tournaments.

Southern California—Randy Lein's first year as coach of Southern California should be helped by Sam Randolph. The sophomore made an immediate impact last year, earning second team all-America status and placing eighth in the NCAA championships. If senior John Flannery and junior Rob Geiberger provide leadership for a talented group of newcomers, the Trojans are capable of beating UCLA in the Pacific-10 Conference.

Wake Forest—After a disappointing 1983 season, coach Jesse Hadlock, in his 21st year at Wake Forest, sees better times. Juniors Jerry Haas and Mark Thaxton had outstanding fall seasons, winning medalist honors in the Guilford Invitational and Wolfpack Invitational, respectively.

Georgia—Although coach Dick Copas has Wright Waddell, Louis Brown and Peter Persons to build on, the Bulldogs will be hard pressed to defend their Southeastern Conference title. Copas has untested players for the Nos. 4 and 5 spots. And this year's squad does not have as much depth as Copas' last two squads, which won league titles. Persons, who finished in a three-way tie for fifth at the NCAA championships last year, should keep the Bulldogs in contention in any tournament.

Lamar—The Cardinals will be seeking their fourth consecutive Southland Conference title and a repeat trip to the Division I championships. With juniors Mike Dirks, Trevor Dodds, Philip Jonas and John Riegger, the Cardinals should hit their targets. Dodds fired the lowest round of last year's NCAA championships with a five-under-par 67. Jonas won the prestigious Harvey Pennick Intercollegiate with a 10-under-par 206 last fall, and Dirks and Riegger averaged fewer than 74 strokes a round.

Weber State—The Wildcats are favored to win their 14th consecutive Big Sky Conference title with the return of former conference medalists Mats Jonmarker and Scott Geroux. Weber State should have momentum after winning three fall tournaments. Coach Mac Madsen has a deep lineup that should carry Weber State to its 11th NCAA tournament appearance.

Texas A&M—If Texas A&M is to be a challenger for the SWC title and make a ninth consecutive NCAA appearance, coach Bob Ellis will need to find depth for veterans David Jones and Sandy Pierce. If sophomore Paul Mayo and Mexican national amateur titlist Jorge Coghlan come through, the Aggies will be competitive.

Arizona State—Last year marked the first time Arizona State did not qualify for the NCAA championships. However, Jim Carter qualified as an individual and became the school's first champion, winning the title in a four-man, sudden-death play-off. Carter's victory has given ninth-year coach George Boutwell's squad a boost of confidence. The Sun Devils edged Brigham Young at the Southwestern Intercollegiate Tournament this fall with a lineup loaded with seniors. If seniors Barry Conser, Roger Thorn, Hank Gardner and Mark Armistead gain consistency, Carter should not have to represent Arizona State by himself in this year's NCAA championships.

TCU faces struggle to retain crown

Texas Christian and Tulsa, dominant in women's golf the past two years, return some excellent individual players in 1984; however, two teams from Florida may steal the headlines.

1983 champion Texas Christian lost its head coach and three players who finished in the top 30 at last year's NCAA Women's Golf Championships. New coach Carolyn Dixon is not about to give up the ship, however.

Leading the way for the Horned Frogs is Rita Moore, who was fourth at the 1983 NCAA championships. Moore had a 76.2 average last fall and a top round of 65. She placed second at the Stanford Intercollegiate. The only other championship-experienced returnee is senior Rae Rothfelder, who was the top TCU golfer last fall. Rothfelder, 23rd at last year's NCAA championships, compiled a 74.9-stroke average and won the Susie Maxwell-Berning Invitational.

Other key TCU performers are freshman Kris Tschetter of Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and senior Kris Hanson. Tschetter was a first-team junior all-America selection last year.

Tulsa, under coach Dale McNamara, won the first NCAA championships by 36 strokes and finished three strokes behind TCU last year for second place. The Golden Hurricane's position is similar to the Horned Frogs' in having lost key performers. Tulsa lost Kathy Baker (1982 NCAA champion) and Barb Thomas (third in 1982 and 15th last year).

Tulsa's hopes rest with Jody Rosenthal, one of the more consistent women's performers. Rosenthal placed second in the 1982 NCAA championships and third last year. Last fall, she averaged 74.3 strokes and was second in the U.S. Women's Amateur event.

Other Golden Hurricane veterans are Tammy Welborn and Diane

Dickman, both of whom participated in NCAA play last year. Possibly the key to Tulsa's success rests with freshman Kim Gardner, who has lived in Paris, France, the past nine years. Gardner was just behind Rosenthal this fall with a 74.8-stroke average.

If Texas Christian and Tulsa cannot replace their departed stars effectively, look for Florida and Miami (Florida) to contend for national honors.

Florida, fourth in 1982 and fifth last year at the NCAA championships, returns its entire quintet and has added a freshman who was a highly ranked junior golfer.

Lisa Stanley and Lynn Connelly are the top Florida golfers, finishing 12th and 14th, respectively, at last year's NCAA championships. The Gators, who finished no lower than third in any fall tournament, also return Deb Richard, Laurie Burns and Tammy Towles. Richard was bothered by a back injury last fall but should be ready for spring competition. Freshman Page Dunlop, third in junior rankings last year, will add depth this year.

Miami returns four of its top five performers from last year and has one of the game's top individual stars in Penny Hammel, the 1983 NCAA champion. In the fall, Hammel averaged 73.1 and won the individual title at the Pat Bradley Invitational. Hammel tore some ligaments in her leg in December after returning from the NCAA-Japan golf competition. She should be ready for the 1984 season.

"Penny is not only our team leader and an outstanding player, but she is just a delightful person," said Miami coach Lela Cannon. "She means a lot to our team; hopefully, she will be back playing by mid-February."

Other key performers for the Hurricanes are Michele Berteotti, who tied for 15th at last year's NCAA championships; Donna Cusano, and Gina Hull, Texas, after a disappointing 15th at last year's NCAA championships, should be greatly improved after an outstanding fall campaign. The Longhorns are led by Nancy Ledbetter, Kim Shipman and Sherri Steinhauer. Freshmen Lisa DePaulo and Donna Linder add depth to coach Pat Weis' squad. DePaulo was the top junior golfer in southern California the past two years, and Linder made the 1980 PGA junior team.

Although Georgia lost three of its top five players, the Bulldogs of coach Liz Murphey probably will find some way to be in the thick of the national picture. Georgia finished third in last year's NCAA championships.

Caroline Gowan, who tied for eighth at the 1983 NCAA championships, and Cindy Schreyer are the Georgia veterans. Others who will aid in the Bulldogs' rebuilding project are senior Denise King and freshman Melanie Wilson.

Two other Florida squads cracked the top 10 last year—Florida International and South Florida—and they cannot be counted out of the picture this year despite losses of key players.

South Florida, probably the deeper of the two, is headed by tournament-tested senior Diane Nowakowski and juniors Debbie Thomas and Jill Himmelman. Nowakowski won the Memphis State Invitational and placed second in the Lady Tar Heel tournament last fall.

Florida International will have to replace Mary Beth Zimmerman, 10th last year, and Mary Ann Hayward, who tied for third at the 1982 championships. Ready to take leadership roles are Terry Jo Myers, Anette

Peitersen and Liz Ornelas.

Another top-10 team rebuilding in 1984 is Southern Methodist. The Mustangs lost Amy Benz and Cathy Hanlon, both of whom finished in the top 15 at last year's NCAA championships. Leading the charge for SMU this spring will be Jamie DeWeese, Amy Dover and Martha Foyer.

Furman, which finished ninth nationally last year, returns four of its top five, including Cindy Davis, one of the top performers in the country. Davis was second at last year's championships; last fall, she won the Falls Creek Falls Invitational and placed third in the women's Southern Intercollegiate.

Other returnees from last year's ninth-place team are Sarah Anne Timms, Denise Baldwin and Kathy Hart. Furman won two tournaments last year—the Duke Invitational and the Memphis State Invitational.

New Mexico, which placed in the top 15 in both of the first two NCAA championships, returns Theresa Schreck, 17th last year, and Kristi Arrington. The Lobos must replace Sue Sanders and Dana Howe to remain competitive.

Stanford, sixth in the 1982 NCAA championships, has Kathy McCarthy, one of the nation's top freshmen. McCarthy, from Fresno, averaged 74.7 in the fall with two tournament victories and was the second low amateur in the 1983 U.S. Women's Open. McCarthy, along with Kathy Kostas, Kathy Nino, Julie Carmichael and Diane Nixon, could push the Cardinal back into national contention.

Duke, 16th last year, returns all five starters, including the team's top individual—Mary Anne Widman. Other teams that could be challengers are Arizona, Arizona State, Alabama, Houston Baptist, Texas A&M, Lamar and Brigham Young.

In addition to those mentioned on top teams, Mississippi State's Kathe Kingston returns. Kingston finished fifth last year. Brigham Young's Kelli Antolock, winner of the USGA Women's Amateur Public Links championship last year, is another top competitor.

Allegheny still the team to beat in Division III

After losing its Division III medalist and a first-team all-America to graduation, Allegheny's chances of defending its NCAA Division III men's championship would appear to be slim. But the Gators proved last fall that they still are the team to beat.

Allegheny won the Tri-State Invitational over Division II powers Indiana (Pennsylvania) and Gannon and then was victorious in its own fall golf classic with a 370—the third best score in school history.

"I'm just super pleased with the way our squad members played this fall," Allegheny coach Norm Sundstrom said. "We performed better than I anticipated, even though I thought we'd be competitive.

"We lost a lot of leadership and ability, but the returning veterans have filled the void."

The eight-time defending Presidents' Athletic Conference champions were led by senior Bob Bradley last fall. Bradley, the conference medalist, averaged 73.8 strokes during the fall and played well in the fall golf classic, carding an even-par 72. Bradley keyed Allegheny's drive to the NCAA championships title, shooting a 76 in the fourth round to help overcome Ramapo.

Senior Dave Hagstrom, who was runner-up to graduated teammate Matt Clarke for medalist honors in the NCAA championships, also had a respectable fall season. In the fall classic, he had bogeys on the first four holes, then played the next 14 holes in two-under for a 74.

Hagstrom also played a big role in Allegheny's NCAA championships victory. In the final round, he scored a hole-in-one on the 14th. Moments later, Clarke had an eagle on the par-five 13th hole. Teammate Greg Bergholtz, an all-conference selection, also had a three on 13, putting that threesome at six under par at that point. The Gators won the championship by two strokes.

Bergholtz, a junior who averaged 77.3 last fall, proved he can scramble for par in the fall classic. He hit just 12 greens in regulation but got up and down on five holes and chipped in for a birdie. He led the Gators with a two-under-par 70 in the tournament.

A big reason for Allegheny's successful fall was the play of juniors Craig Borst and Bob Imboden, sophomore Fred Eames, and freshman Scott Sundstrom (the coach's son). All averaged below 80 in fall tournaments.

Graduation took its toll on NCAA runner-up Ramapo. The Roadrunners lost three players from last year's team; however, the return of all-America Jeff Thomas after a one-year absence puts Ramapo back in the championships picture.

Thomas, the current New Jersey state amateur champion and runner-up for Metropolitan golfer-of-the-year honors, and veterans Tom Zahuta and Carl Campanelli have coach Vince Nardiello optimistic about the spring season.

Zahuta, the low amateur in the New Jersey State Open, tied for 13th in the NCAA championships. Campanelli lived up to his high school

Florida Southern ready to challenge Bobcats

Southwest Texas State ignored adverse weather in last year's NCAA Division II Men's Golf Championships for a come-from-behind victory and the school's first national title.

This season, the Bobcats may have to overcome themselves in defending their title with a lineup lacking in depth. Also, J. L. Lewis, who placed second in the championships, is gone.

However, coach Bill Woodley's Bobcats still should be one of the top teams in Division II, with enough talent to win a third consecutive Lone Star Conference title.

Marty Auch, Chris Young and Tom Gieselmann are back for the Bobcats.

Young played a pivotal role in Southwest Texas State's drive to the NCAA title last year. Battling high winds and rain in the third round, Young carded a 74 to lead the Bobcats' come-from-behind effort. Auch, the team's captain, and Gieselmann also played well in the championships, finishing among the top 30.

But beyond those three, Woodley has untested golfers to fill the fourth and fifth spots. Junior college all-America transfers Jim Bob Jackson and Jeff Boies will need to develop quickly if the Bobcats are to be national contenders.

The last team to win back-to-back titles was Florida Southern in 1981 and 1982. The Moccasins were favored last year but slipped to a two-way tie for fourth.

Judging from their fall tournament showings, coach Charley Matlock's Moccasins should contend again for the title.

Florida Southern won the Orange

Lake Intercollegiate last fall by seven shots over Miami (Florida), and Marco Dawson took the individual crown with a three-under-par 213 for 54 holes. Rocco Mediate, who tied for 11th in last year's NCAA championships, also had an outstanding tournament, tying Miami's Nathaniel Crosby for third place.

At the Andy Bean Intercollegiate, the Moccasins fared well against some of the nation's best Division I teams (five of the top six finishers from the 1983 NCAA championships were on hand), finishing eighth among 17 teams. Mediate had another fine showing, sharing fourth place with a one-over-par 217 for 54 holes.

In addition to Mediate and Dawson, Matlock received steady play from Craig Kendrat; and he has several golfers to choose from for his fourth and fifth spots.

The Sunshine state also has another powerful team that should contend for national honors. Rollins proved it can play with the best by winning the 37th Florida Intercollegiate Championships last November. The Tars topped Division I power Florida State in a sudden-death play-off for the overall title and also won the Division II title. It was the first tournament title for a Division II team.

The Florida Intercollegiate title capped a highly successful fall season for coach Sherry Allison's team, which finished in the top four in all five fall tournaments. Allison's lineup is pretty much set, with senior Larry O'Toole and Ed Bugnizet providing the nucleus.

There are a number of other teams on a par with Southwest Texas State, Florida Southern and Rollins. Following is a team-by-team sketch of some of the top teams:

Troy State—The defending Gulf South Conference champion has finished no worse than fourth in the past nine championships. The Trojans return two members from last year's NCAA runner-up squad. Coach Mike Griffin will rely on all-conference selections Ben Bates and Terry Mobley. Other top golfers are senior Chip Holcombe, who had a good fall season, and sophomore David Stover, who tied Holcombe with a low round of 69 last fall.

Columbus—Four members of last year's NCAA third-place team return for the Cougars. Columbus had a fine fall season, winning team titles at the Dixie Intercollegiate Invitational and the Shorter Fall Classic. Johnny Hammond took individual honors in the Dixie Intercollegiate, which featured 12 Division I teams in the 24-team field. Mike Walton, who finished five strokes off the pace in last year's NCAA championships, finished the fall campaign with a 72.6-stroke average and placed first in the Shorter Fall Classic. Bill Roberts, who tied for 11th at the 1983 NCAA championships, and Jon Leonard round out the Cougars' experienced lineup.

Central Connecticut State—The Blue Devils were the surprise of last year's NCAA championships. The defending New England Collegiate Conference champions, paced by Shawn Baker, placed sixth and served notice that they could contend for national honors. Baker finished second in two fall tournaments and fired the squad's lowest round at 65.

Coach Lowell Lukas also has experienced players in Bob Kay and Greg Cate, third-place finishers in the Yale Invitational and New England championships, respectively.

Gannon—Coach Howard "Bud" Elwell has assembled an experienced and talented lineup that should keep the Knights' dual-match victory streak of 36 growing. Nine lettermen return from last year's team that collected eight tournament titles and finished seventh in the NCAA championships. Top returnees include Rick Amendola, Dave Schmitt, Carmen Costa and Rick Butler. Schmitt and Costa won all-America honors last year. Gannon, winner of four of the past five Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference regional championships, will have the home-course advantage for the NCAA championships.

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville—Despite the graduation of the team's top two players, coach Harry Gallatin has a young squad that could make its 11th championships appearance in the past 12 years. Gallatin will need consistency from senior Mark Marcuzzo while looking for the right combination to make the Cougars competitive. Freshmen Keith Hamann and Trent Hightower are possible starters.

Bryant—The Indians should challenge Central Connecticut State for supremacy in New England. Four players return from last year's squad for coach Arthur Boulet. Seniors Bill Walthouse and Bob DiMattie are key players for Bryant. Sophomores Mike McKenna and Mario Solari also have national-championships experience.

Reminder on logos issued

Member institutions are reminded of an official interpretation issued by the NCAA Council last fall relating to the appearance of commercial logos or trademarks on athletic equipment or apparel.

Situation No. 610, as printed in the November 7 issue of The NCAA News, clarified that utilizing equipment or wearing apparel that bears the trademark or logo of an athletic equipment or apparel manufacturer in athletic competition is permissible "provided that, in the case of athletic equipment (e.g., shoes, helmets, baseball bats and gloves, hockey and lacrosse sticks, and skis), the item bears only the manufacturer's normal label or trademark as it is used on all such items for sale to the general public and, in the case of the student-athlete's institution's official uniform (including warm-ups), the clothing (if purchased or acquired subsequent to November 7, 1983) bears only a single manufacturer's normal label or trademark not to exceed a 1½-inch square in size. All other items of apparel (e.g., socks, head bands, T-shirts, wrist bands, visors or hats, swim caps and towels) may not include any visible commercial identification."

Volleyball program to be upgraded

The University of Notre Dame plans to develop a women's volleyball program of championship caliber and has hired former Stanford University coach Art Lambert to revamp its program.

"We're trying to tell people we want to go big time in volleyball," John Heisler, associate sports information director, told the Associated Press.

Athletics director Eugene F. Corrigan said, "We've talked to volleyball people all around the country, and we're now prepared to do the kind of things that will enable us to compete with the top teams in the country."

Lambert, 48, started as a water polo coach and led the U.S. Olympic water polo team to fifth place in 1968 and a bronze medal in 1972. He began coaching the Stanford men's volleyball team in 1974 and added the women's team in 1976. He left Stanford in 1976 to enter private business.

Athletics facilities to be expanded

The University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, plans to build a $4.5 million enclosed practice field and an office complex for coaches of all its sports programs. C. Peter Magrath, university president, said the money will come from private sources, university funds and possibly the state legislature.

The enclosed practice field is to be completed by August 15, and the office complex should be finished by January 1, 1985.

Paul Giel, athletics director, said the school needs the new facilities to allow it to keep up with other schools in the Big Ten Conference. In recruiting 17-year-old athletes, he said, "facilities are extremely important."

Football coach Lou Holtz said, "This is not a building that I feel I need personally, but it will allow us to remain competitive."

School plans to upgrade athletics

Central Connecticut State University said it will spend millions of dollars to improve athletics facilities over the next five years as part of a long-range drive to move to Division I in the NCAA.

The university competes in more than 20 sports in Division II and plans to join Division I in 18 sports in the 1986-87 academic year. Only football would remain in Division II.

Among the projects planned are a baseball diamond, a soccer field and track with artificial surfaces, and a $12 million field house.

Richard McDuffie, the university's director of intercollegiate athletics, said the improvements to the athletics facilities will take place regardless of Central Connecticut's divisional status.

Houston to sponsor drug seminar

The University of Houston will sponsor a drug and alcohol seminar, "Project Triumph—Houston Cougars Against Drug and Alcohol Abuse," February 18 in Jeppesen Fieldhouse.

The seminar, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., will be conducted by former Minnesota Viking Carl Eller, who is a consultant for the National Football League on alcohol and drug abuse.

The program was developed in conjunction with the drug abuse policy office at the White House and its program "Team Up Against Drugs."

Further information can be obtained by contacting the sports information office, 713/749-4382.

Disciplinary committee organized

The Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference has organized a disciplinary committee of athletics directors empowered to suspend players and coaches involved in altercations at conference basketball games.

The conference recently has experienced fighting that has disrupted games.

"Any incident of flagrant, unsportsmanlike conduct will now be subject to punishment," said Jim McDermott, commissioner. "We feel this kind of stuff has to stop, and we will do everything we can to control this type of thing. The committee will recommend action, if necessary, and suspend a player for a minimum of one conference game."

Other members of the committee, in addition to McDermott, are athletics directors John J. Powers, Manhattan College; William A. Stein, St. Peter's College, and Ronald S. Perry, Holy Cross College.

Radio network to cover basketball play-off again

The CBS-NCAA Radio Network, a joint venture between the CBS Radio Network and Host Communications, Inc., will tip off its third season of NCAA championship basketball coverage at noon Eastern time March 24, with the broadcast of the East regional final game from the Omni in Atlanta, Georgia.

The network's coverage of NCAA postseason play will include the four regional finals, the national semifinals and the championship game.

Following is a listing of the CBS-NCAA Radio Network championship broadcasts (all times are Eastern):

March 24—Regional final (East), noon, the Omni, Atlanta, Georgia.

March 24—Regional final (Mid-east), 2:15 p.m., Rupp Arena, Lexington, Kentucky.

March 25—Regional final (Mid-west), 1:30 p.m., the Arena, St. Louis, Missouri.

March 25—Regional final (West), 3:45 p.m., Pauley Pavilion, Los Angeles, California.

March 31—National semifinals, 3:25 p.m., Kingdome, Seattle, Washington. (Second game will start 30 minutes after the completion of the first game. Continuous coverage between games.)

April 2—National championship, 8:55 p.m., Kingdome, Seattle, Washington.

The 1983 championship was broadcast on 309 stations from coast to coast, and more than 19 million listeners tuned in.

medical expenses that exceed or are not covered by other accident and health insurance carried by the family or institution.

The medical benefits are payable for life and include rehabilitation, transportation costs, family counseling, home remodeling for those permanently disabled, special car or van equipment and up to $300 per week in lost-wage benefits.

The benefits are provided only if the student-athlete agrees, in writing, not to bring litigation against the institution and any others covered by the liability portion of the policy. The plan also pays up to $1,000 in fees for the family to consult and be represented by an attorney of its choice while making the decision.

Since football injuries are the primary cause of catastrophic medical and rehabilitation expenses, football is the base for premiums. Injuries suffered in any intercollegiate sport, however, are covered. The protection is in effect during practices and while traveling to and from intercollegiate competition, as well as during the competition. Cheerleaders, band members, student trainers and student managers also are covered.

Deductible amounts of $10,000 or $100,000 are available. If the $10,000 amount is selected, the annual premium is $7,500 for institutions with spring and fall football, $5,500 for institutions with fall football only and $2,500 for institutions that do not have a football program.

If the $100,000 deductible is selected, the annual premium is $5,500 if the institution has spring and fall

Track standards are corrected

The NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committees have made six corrections in the men's and women's qualifying standards for 1984 outdoor track and field championships.

The new standards are corrections of those published in the 1984 Men's and Women's Cross Country and Track and Field Rules and in the December 21, 1983, issue of The NCAA News.

The corrected standards are:
Men's Division III 1,500 meters (fully automatic time)—3:53.70.

Women's Division I 200 meters (manual time)—23.5.

Women's Division I 10,000 meters (manual time)—34:40.0.

Women's Division I 400-meter hurdles (manual time)—59.2.

Women's Division II 1,600-meter relay (manual time)—3:53.3.

Women's Division II mile relay (manual time)—3:54.5.

Utah women set gymnastics mark

In a triangular meet February 6 with Utah State and Minnesota, the University of Utah women's gymnastics team totaled 190.9 points, the highest score ever recorded in NCAA competition in that sport. Utah State finished with 180.25, and Minnesota turned in a team score of 178.05.

"This wasn't a high-pressure meet for us, so the girls came in confident and comfortable," said Utah head coach Greg Marsden. "We had very few misses in a meet that most people would not expect to produce a record score."

A total of 20 routines in four events (five each in vaulting, uneven parallel bars, balance beam and floor exercise) were counted for the total. To produce the record, Utah gymnasts averaged a score of 9.545.

"The meet was our third in a week, and I was very pleased with the way our team performed," said Marsden, whose squad is ranked No. 1 in Division I through competition of February 6 and is the defending national champion.

football, $4,000 with fall football only and $2,000 with no football.

Ruedlinger and the committee are developing a series of questions and answers that will be included in a March 1 mailing to member institutions. That mailing also will include an informational brochure with a response card. The card can be returned to the national office if further information or a visit by Ruedlinger is desired.

Enrollment forms will be sent in early April, along with a comprehensive brochure that can be used as a reference tool once the policy is in effect. Additional information also will be published in the News.

reputation, tying for 20th in his first NCAA championships and earning honorable mention all-America honors.

The toughest job for Nardiello, whose Roadrunners have won seven consecutive New Jersey State Athletic Conference titles, will be to fill the Nos. 4 and 5 spots. Tom Ansbro, Cary Greensberg and Jamie Fordyce all finished the fall season with averages of 77.5 or better.

Nardiello is not the only coach who will have "difficulty" selecting his starting lineup. Methodist coach Gene Clayton has four all-America golfers on his team and several top performers vying for the fifth spot.

Seniors Mickey Sokalski, Mike Hartman, Mike Baker and Eddie Dalton have led Methodist to three consecutive Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference titles. Baker and Sokalski, both of whom finished among the top seven individuals, led Methodist to a third place in last year's NCAA championships.

Other top teams in Division III include:

Cal State Stanislaus—Coach Jim Hanny's Warriors have won six titles in the nine-year history of the Division III championships. Dean Kain, Doug Dunakey and Steve Hahn are capable of medalist honors in any tournament. If newcomers Jim Delaly, Kevin Earl or Nick Bacchino provide support from the fourth and fifth spots, the Warriors should win another Northern California Athletic Conference title and be a top contender for national honors.

Central (Iowa) Four of the top six golfers are back for coach Norman Ryerson as the Flying Dutchmen defend their Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title. Phil Wis-trom and Brian Goldsworthy won individual titles in fall tournaments, and Ryerson has a promising group of freshmen.

"It is the hope of the committee that every institution will consider the benefits of purchasing this insurance to protect itself and its student-athletes," Osborn said. "Our communications plan should provide complete information, but Mr. Ruedlinger and members of the committee and national office staff also are available if additional questions arise."

Enrollment efforts will continue until July 1, when Ruedlinger will assume responsibility for administration of the program. Questions can be directed to Richard D. Hunter, director of finance, at the NCAA national office.

Nebraska Wesleyan—The Plainsmen, winners of six of the past seven Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference titles, feature depth. Their top 10 golfers are averaging 80 strokes per round or less. Coach Neil Baker also will have Pat Higgins and Chip Romjue eligible for the spring season.

Worcester State—Two of the division's top golfers—Scott Fairbanks and Jim Bombard—will ensure the Lancers' competitiveness. Fairbanks was medalist in the New England championships, and Bombard finished first in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference championships. Both finished the fall season with 73.3-stroke averages. Chip Mannix and Matt Stephens finished the fall season with averages of 80 or under.

Wooster—The Fighting Scots, led by all-America Scott Nye, who tied for third in the NCAA championships last year, have another strong team. Only one player is missing from last year's ninth-place team, and coach Bob Nye (Scott's father) has plenty of experience throughout his lineup.

Greensboro Seven lettermen who helped Greensboro finish in the top five at six tournaments last year return. The Hornets are led by seniors Jeff Nichols and Andy McMurray, both of whom have earned all-America honors. Transfer Marcus Martin gives coach Jim Locke added depth.

Other top teams include Wittenberg, Salem State, Wisconsin-Whitewater, Capital, UC San Diego, Rochester Tech, Oswego State and York (Pennsylvania).
