I-A conferences name Commission members

Eight of the nine Division I-A conferences have completed their appointments to the new NCAA Presidents' Commission, and the presidential nominating committee that will prepare the slate for the first Commission has selected its chair.

Robert Q. Marston, president of the University of Florida, was selected by the nominating committee during a telephone conference February 8 to serve as its chair. The committee agreed to attempt to meet in late February or early March to determine the slate of candidates that will be voted upon by the chief executive officers at all NCAA member institutions.

Meanwhile, all but one of the Division I-A conference positions on the 44-member commission have been filled. Each of the nine conferences was permitted, under terms of the legislation adopted by the 1984 NCAA Convention, to select one of its own CEOs to serve on the Commission.

Those selected:

Big Eight Conference: Duane Acker, president, Kansas State University.

Big Ten Conference: John W. Ryan, president, Indiana University, Bloomington.

Mid-American Athletic Conference: Glen R. Driscoll, president, University of Toledo.

Pacific Coast Athletic Association: Stanley E. McCaffrey, president, University of the Pacific.

Pacific-10 Conference: I. M. Heyman, chancellor, University of California, Berkeley. Southeastern Conference: Otis A. Singletary, president, University of Kentucky.

Southwest Athletic Conference: Herbert H. Reynolds, president, Baylor University.

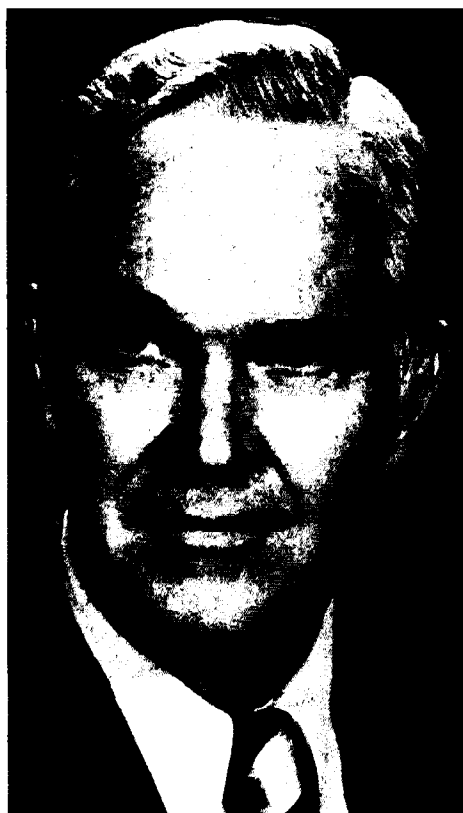

Western Athletic Conference: Donald Veal, president, University of Wyoming.

The Atlantic Coast Conference was in the process of selecting its representative at press time.

Today (February 15) is the deadline for chief executives at Division I-AA institutions to nominate candidates for the four Division I-AA Football Championship region positions on the Commission. Each candidate must be endorsed by at least five Division I-AA CEOs in that region; if more than one in a region is so endorsed, the CEOs in that region will vote on which will serve in that regional position.

The other 31 positions will be voted upon by the membership, based on the slate to be prepared by the presidential nominating committee. Those positions will include two representing Division I-A independents, a Division I-A at-large position, a Division I-AA at-large position, five positions for those members of Division I that do not sponsor football (or not in that division), 11 positions for Division II and 11 for Division III.

Among the 22 Division I positions, at least four must represent each of the four Division I representation regions set forth in the NCAA constitution. Among the Divisions II and III positions, at least two must be from each of the representation regions in those two divisions.

In addition, the Commission must include at least three of the 45 women chief executives in the NCAA membership, preferably at least one from each division.

The nominating committee also must apply the "playing-conference" rule, as is the case with all NCAA appointive and elective bodies. That means that a playing conference cannot be represented by more than one individual on the Commission, except that a man and a woman from the same conference may serve. The chair of the Commission also is excluded from the playing-conference rule.

In a special letter late last week, Marston personally invited all chief executive officers to nominate candidates for the nominating committee's consideration and extended the deadline for receipt of those nominations to February 20.

It is hoped that the Commission can be elected and in place by March.

Other members of the nominating committee, in addition to Marston, are Edward J. Bloustein, Rutgers University, New Brunswick; James W. Cleary, California State University, Northridge; William H. Danforth, Washington University (Missouri); Anthony Diekema, Calvin College; Jack V. Doland, McNeese State University; Asa N. Green, Livingston University; Charles A. Lyons Jr., Fayetteville State University; Very Rev. J. Donald Monan, Boston College; Joseph J. Orze, Northwestern State University (Louisiana); Philip Phibbs, University of Puget Sound; Prezell R. Robinson, St. Augustine's College; and Charles E. Young, University of California, Los Angeles.

Planning group considers role of faculty representative

The role and status of the faculty athletic representative—including turnover in that position, campus positions held by faculty representatives, and variations in their assignments and authority—were primary topics at the February 6-7 meeting of

'84 football to be topic of preview

About 70 sportswriters have been invited to meet with 10 top football coaches from across the nation at the eighth annual NCAA-sponsored College Football Preview series February 26-28 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

The sportswriters will have an opportunity to get each coach's view on his team and conference for next fall as well as to discuss recently adopted football rules and other topics pertinent to college football.

The coaches selected for the College Football '84 preview are Howard Schnellenberger, University of Miami (Florida); Rey Dempsey, Memphis State University; LaVell Edwards, Brigham Young University; Don James, University of Washington; Charley Pell, University of Florida; the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee in Orlando, Florida.

Continuing a discussion that began in the committee's 1983 meetings, the group reviewed data indicating that less than 50 percent of the faculty representatives at NCAA member institutions have been in that position for as long as four years. The committee asked that a similar study of the comparable tenure of directors of athletics and chief executive officers be completed for its June 1984 meeting.

The committee also reviewed a study showing that more than 20 percent of the current faculty athletic representatives hold administrative positions at their institutions, with far more in that category than in any single teaching field. Education department faculty ranked second, with mathematics faculty third.

"Turnover in the faculty representative position is a concern, of course," said D. Alan Williams, committee chair and faculty athletic representative at the University of Virginia. "But the more important concern is what does the faculty rep do—what authority and responsibilities does he or she have? The committee believes this is an area of great importance in maintaining institutional control of athletic programs."

A more complete review of the studies regarding faculty athletic representatives will be featured in a future issue of The NCAA News.

In another statistical review, the Long Range Planning Committee studied a comparison of sports sponsorship and participation data at NCAA member institutions in 1981-82 and 1982-83. The figures indicated a 5.85 percent increase in male participants and an 8.9 percent jump in women's participation and statistical increases in the average squad size in 14 of 19 men's sports and nine of 15 women's sports.

The sponsorship and participation data—reviewed annually by the committee—also will be reported in more detail in a later issue of the News.

In other topics discussed, the committee:

Football recruiting: a new sports season

By Ed Fowler
Houston Chronicle

Most of us have a favorite time of year, I suppose; and it happens that this is mine. One reason is that I played softball Sunday and then sat on the patio in shorts while people in Chicago burrowed deeper under their blankets. It's always great to know someone else is suffering when you're not. But that's not the main reason.

No, the thing I like best about now is the sports season. People who follow sports usually favor one or two over the others. Some prefer baseball, others lacrosse. My choice is recruiting, specifically college football recruiting.

I think the reason recruiting has a magical appeal for me is that even though it happens each and every year, I can never believe it's happening. I suppose no matter how many times it takes place, I'll never quite accept that schools with the reputations of Rice and Stanford have representatives seeking high school students of undistinguished scholastic standing and begging them to enroll.

Texas A&M and Texas, yes, but not Rice and Stanford.

Once I get over that shock each year, however, recruiting becomes fun. It's a game that's difficult to watch—and too much scrutiny might ruin it, anyway—and it doesn't get covered much on television. The true devotee of recruiting learns to follow it in the papers.

In Texas, the Dallas Times Herald for years has set the standard by which the recruiting lists of others are measured. Editorial masterminds at the Times Herald were first in the state to realize that football recruiting is an event in itself, as is basketball, which struggles pitifully against it for public attention.

In Austin several years ago, we liked to say the athletic year had four seasons: fall football, winter football recruiting, spring football practice and summer football workouts (and "jobs"). Since then, football has become more prominent in Austin, due mainly to the de-emphasis of the basketball program.

Following the Times Herald's lead, other papers began compiling recruiting lists; and by now we have a virtual journalistic jihad each winter. This makes for some highly entertaining stuff for the recruiting fan.

The name of David Richards, a 6-foot-5, 306-pound tackle at Dallas Highland Park, has turned up lately as often as those of Ralph Sampson, the basketball star, and Ronald Reagan, the former sportscaster. Actually, Richards could have outstripped the President easily had he kept his suitors in a state of wretched anxiety. Instead, he opted early for Southern Methodist, foolishly decreasing his exposure dramatically.

One thing I find fascinating in these lists, such as the Chronicle's Top 100, is the size of these children. The linemen routinely weigh 235 pounds, and tight ends seem to start at 6-4. It's no longer a surprise to find a 6-3 quarterback or a 6-2 safety. A cynic might wonder if they've discovered steroids in places such as Van Vleck, Gilmer and Copperas Cove.

Columnary Craft

Even more interesting, however, is the ability of many of these youngsters to keep their options open. They appear blessed with a tolerance for regional and even religious differences far beyond their years.

For example, we find that Reggie Ballard, a 6-1, 205-pound linebacker at Galveston Ball, is considering Texas Christian, SMU and Tennessee. David Futrell, 6-3, 240, a defensive tackle at El Paso Eastwood, has his choices narrowed to Texas, Brigham Young, Stanford, Texas Tech and Texas A&M.

Ron Lewis, 6-3, 225, a defensive end at Copperas Cove, and Trent Edwards, 6-6, 250, a defensive tackle at Worthing, are both giving every consideration to TCU, Baylor and SMU. These guys are more ecumenically disposed than an Army combat chaplain.

Ben Hummell, 6-4, 225, a linebacker at Rockwall, and Tim Brown, 6-1, 175, a wide receiver at Dallas Wilson, still give SMU and Notre Dame a chance, as well as some secular possibilities. But there are limits. I can find no one trying to decide among SMU, TCU, Baylor, Notre Dame, BYU and Texas Lutheran.

It behooves us to point out that recruiting lists are sometimes deceptive. Some college coaches like to advertise their commitments in everything except Women's Wear Daily, while others try to bury theirs so deeply the CIA couldn't ferret them out. These practices can give a distorted picture, no doubt creating false euphoria among some fans and deep despair among others.

No suicide of which I've heard has been directly attributable to recruiting news, but it must be the cause of some terrible blue funks. Imagine the old grad scanning that list of 100 and finding his alma mater has a shot at capturing the hearts and minds of only a handful of these young scholars, while other distinguished institutions are pulling them in by the busload.

Budget deficits and trade deficits are unpleasant, but recruiting deficits are serious.

The dedicated recruiting fan doesn't stop at the lists, of course. He proceeds to the feature stories and the notes to find out what's going on behind the scenes. Here we learn that Texas A&M dispatched a helicopter to Alief to pluck a prospect from a vacant lot across the street from his home and deliver him to College Station. Also, Texas has the son of one pro wrestler in the bag and is hot on the trail of the son of another.

I never said just anyone could become a recruiting fan. A certain perversity of nature is required.

And, sometimes, a strong stomach as well.

It isn't lost on me that certain naysayers will bemoan the practice of educational institutions pursuing 18-year-old jocks like producers after starlets, and the extensive newspaper coverage of same. All I can say to them is that they're perfectly correct to wonder at the paucity of lists of hot prospects among chemists and pianists, assuming, of course, that the colleges are pursuing them as vigorously.

Besides, who wants to read their heights and weights, anyway?

"Private institutions like Grove City College should not be penalized or discouraged for maintaining their independence. Students attending these institutions should not be used as tools for government intervention.

"The ever-encroaching arms of government regulations threaten the very freedoms from which America has drawn its strength and momentum for more than 200 years. Yet, without question, discrimination in America must be eliminated. Our challenge is to be sure the principle of independence is not compromised in the process."

Bobby Collins, football coach

"The teams that earned the right to play for a championship by playing well during the season would have the opportunity to compete for the No. 1 ranking regardless of television or fan appeal. As the bowl system is presently constituted, fan appeal is more important than quality.

"There is no real disadvantage. It has been brought up that players would miss an inordinate amount of classes, but since the tournament would be played during the break between semesters, it would not impair the players' schoolwork."

Larry A. Rostron, coach and guidance counselor
Rich, Illinois, Central High School
National Federation News

"Perhaps it is time for us as professional educators and coaches to reexamine our goals for high school athletics. If our goals are to win state championships by encouraging our athletes to specialize and allowing them to believe that by doing so they will earn a college scholarship, then apparently we have lost sight of the real purpose and value of high school athletics. Can we justify this? Do we have the right to interfere with the athletic opportunities of many when we know that only a few will ever participate in a championship game, and fewer yet will ever play at college, let alone receive a scholarship?

"Who is responsible for this push to specialize? Obviously, highly motivated coaches have perpetuated this philosophy, which in turn has forced other coaches to do the same."

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

On the list of your many problems, this probably ranks very, very low. But after years of seeing college athletes on television and in person, I am moved to write this letter.

I can live with the fact that the colleges provide a minor-league training ground for certain professional sports, specifically football and basketball. I can live with the fact that certain disadvantaged people would otherwise be unable to train and unable to obtain any higher education at all. I can live with the scholarships, the no-show jobs and the money under the table from grateful alumni. I cannot live with the way these people speak. I cannot believe that people leave a college (higher education) training center and are unable to communicate in a cogent and coherent manner.

I would think among the courses provided could be one in voice and diction. I am certain that if any of these young people heard their own voices tape-recorded back at them, they would quickly opt for a course in voice and diction.

Certainly, utilization later in life in terms of sports broadcasting, sports writing and appearances in commercials would all be helped by somebody who is able to communicate clearly. Even without these financial rewards, the instant respect afforded those who speak properly cannot be denied.

This was certainly recognized by Shaw in his Pygmalion, written many years ago and further emphasized by its musical adaptation, "My Fair Lady."

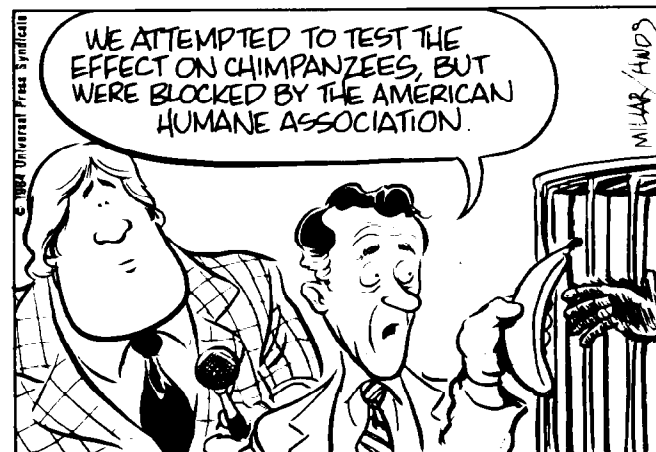

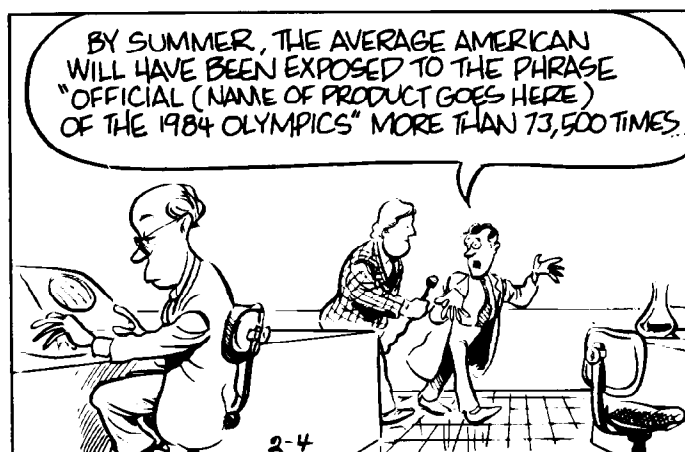

This has been a part of my life for some time; while I was not an outstanding college athlete (I swam), I was aware of the differences in the way people spoke. I grew up in the South Bronx. My street language consisted of an epithet for every other word. I was aware that one did not use this language in the school system. In spite of this, it was my understanding that my college almost did not accept me because I used "dese, dem and dose." I tried over those years of college to get even those words out of my language, because I noted that those I respected most communicated clearly.

Villanova, others resurrect football programs

By D. I. Strunk
USA Today

There was a roar. And cheers. Grown men hugged each other and danced with jubilation. Others ran to spread the news. And some even cried.

All because Villanova University in Philadelphia's wealthy western suburbs announced last month it was bringing back its football program, which it had dropped for financial reasons three years earlier.

"We didn't appreciate what we had until it was taken away," said Don Creamer, president of the Wildcat Club, the university's main athletic fund-raising organization, which has withheld contributions to the school's athletic programs since 87 years of football tradition was ended.

Now, the club has promised to contribute $100,000 a year and to guarantee the sale of 3,000 tickets for each game.

In ending The Great Football War that raged the last 32 months in the boardroom as well as the student and alumni newspapers, Villanova becomes only the latest in a growing number of colleges to return to punting, passing and kicking Saturday afternoons away.

This last year alone, both the State University of New York at Stony Brook and Kentucky Wesleyan in Owensboro, Kentucky, started up Division III NCAA football programs. And since 1968, some 55 colleges and universities have installed football programs—some for the first time and others after laying dormant for nearly 50 years.

"We needed football to add a little zest to the quality of life on campus," said Paul Dudzick, Stony Brook athletics director.

Villanova suddenly dropped football in 1981 after losing $1.3 million in its last two seasons; rising costs did not keep up with declining student and alumni support.

This time, Villanova decided to save money and step down from Division I-A to Division I-AA, eliminating most athletic grants-in-aid as well as reducing travel and recruiting expenses.

But most schools have returned to playing football at the less costly Division III level, where there is no pay for play—the college is not allowed to provide athletic grants-in-aid.

And although Division III doesn't have the earning capacity of lucrative television contracts and bowl games, it's still football, but at tremendously reduced costs.

According to the NCAA, the average annual football budget for the 194 schools in Division III is $42,000. But at Division I schools where the football programs are allowed to provide up to 95 scholarships, football runs an average of $1.3 million yearly.

Though most schools cited financial reasons for dropping football, Villanova's administration also had insisted "the dropping of I-A football has made us a better, more respected academic institution."

Still, the main motivation for colleges such as Villanova to restore football is money in the form of alumni donations.

Played in the fall when colleges have always held a special allure, football has forever been a convenient focal point for a university's enthusiasm.

Said Dick Bedesem, Villanova University's last football coach: "Without football, you have nothing to rally around. It's the way the alumni like to maintain rapport with each other and the school."

And though the Rev. John M. Driscoll, Villanova president, said there was no noticeable dip in annual contributions, he did note there have been "additional finances promised by those alumni who supported a return to football."

Even Dudzick at Stony Brook noted that just the first year of varsity football has excited some of the alumni enough to start a booster club.

"They already raised money to build a press box and additional bleachers," said Dudzick. "And a scoreboard also has been donated."

But elsewhere, especially where financially strapped small private schools are struggling to keep their classrooms filled, football has provided a surprising source of income.

At Mercyhurst College in Erie, Pennsylvania, for instance, the students recruited for the school's three-year-old football program are in addition to the normal 1,500 student population.

"It means," said football coach Tony DeMeo, "that the school has reaped an additional $1 million in tuitions the last three years. Football hasn't cost the school anything. In fact, the school has made about a half-million dollars."

Furthermore, DeMeo said football has helped increase the visibility, spirit and male enrollment at the former all-female school.

"Let's face facts," said DeMeo. "You can have the greatest accounting department in the country and the students aren't going to say 'let's go up and balance the books on Saturday afternoon.' Football is part of a school's social structure."

Schools finding it impossible to have football programs are restoring other athletic events that once brought them recognition.

After a 12-year hiatus, New York University restored its basketball program this school year. Athletics director Dan Quilty said, "It will make the university more visible on the local and national levels. We will also be able to attract more students geographically."

Still, there is nothing to compare with the impact of football in the fall. And some folks will go to any lengths to keep the color, pageantry and the sounds of butting helmets alive.

In 1979, seven years after financial difficulties forced Sonoma State University in northern California to drop its football program, wealthy San Francisco insurance man Milton Cerf dropped in on the campus outside of Santa Rosa. Cerf said he would underwrite the entire funding for a football program, including coaches' salaries, as long as he could be the head coach. Although Cerf eventually stepped down from his coaching job, the school continues to play NCAA Division II football.

Now, it's Villanova's turn to begin again. Villanova athletics director Ted Aceto said as soon as he receives the official go-ahead schedule from the administration, he will seek a coach.

And the coach will no doubt seek out the remaining eight players still on campus from the last Villanova team. Recruiting will begin. Equipment will be dusted off. And a schedule of games eventually will be filled out against other Division I-AA colleges—not teams loaded with the 75 scholarship players that Division I-AA allows, but schools with a similar academic posture and somewhat de-emphasized programs such as Bucknell, Colgate, Lehigh and some Ivy League schools.

"We may be able to play a few games as early as next season," said Aceto. "But we'll be careful. We don't want to throw a new team into the lion's den."

Academic excellence goal for all

By Vaurice Bayless

Athletics from elementary school to the university level are being challenged and scrutinized as to their value to participants and to educational institutions. Many educators now doubt the claim that athletics contribute to educational objectives. Many critics say the decline in the quality of public education is the result of overemphasis on athletics. This writer contends that this decline in the quality of education should have merited such attention decades ago.

This problem is similar to the drug abuse problem; that is, drug abuse was a problem in this country 30 or 40 years ago, but the victims then were considered

Those institutions that use athletics for developing status, their image and prestige are fulfilling neither their missions nor the stated purpose of using amateur athletics for their educational value.

To use athletics to bolster egos of institutional officials and alumni is not in the best interest of amateur athletics or educational institutions. State officials, with their egocentric attitudes toward athletics, share the blame for allowing athletics to be overemphasized at the expense of providing quality education at all levels.

The larger and most prestigious educational institutions have separated athletics from physical education to allow physical education to maintain its educational objectives and give coaches a free hand in building powerful athletic teams. School officials in these institutions turn their heads when unethical means are used to provide winning teams. In smaller institutions in which a larger percentage of the student body is composed of athletes, it is difficult for officials to separate the two programs because most athletes major in physical education.

One example of unethical means used to produce winning athletic teams is the many instances in which institutions allow athletes to matriculate who do not meet the institution's admissions standards; these institutions allow athletes to remain in school and pass from one level to the next without, in many instances, satisfying course requirements.

If college athletes are to retain their educational identity, athletics and institution officials must take the right road, the road that leads to academic excellence.

The NCAA took the first step in this direction when it inaugurated Proposal No. 48. But this organization must do even more; that is, it must demand that institutions abide by this proposal, plus formulate new proposals to assure that athletics do not have a negative effect on the quality of education.

This organization should also join the public that is now calling for the improvement of education on all levels. Leaders in educational institutions also must stress and demand academic excellence among all areas and programs and put athletics in their proper perspective.

The writer is area coordinator of physical education at Bethune-Cookman College.

superfluous in the eyes of society. Consequently, very little attention was paid to this problem. But the modern-day drug problem is not confined to minorities and less affluent groups. It is posing a serious threat to the majority and more affluent groups. It is recognized as being a national crisis.

The crisis in education also existed 40 years ago, but it was minorities and less affluent youth who scored low on standardized tests. Today, the trend has spread throughout every strata of society, and it is now considered a national crisis.

Critics say that athletics are justified only for their educational value. They contend that institutions of higher education should have as their missions the providing of quality education for every student with whom they are entrusted. Those institutions that use taxpayers' money to conduct athletic contests for entertainment are not acting in the best interest of people who have entrusted them with the responsibility of educating young people.

At a time when this nation desperately needs highly educated people and at a time when the quality of education is on the decline, it does not seem logical for institutions to spend large sums and direct much of their efforts toward providing entertainment for a small group of sports-minded individuals. Therefore, the entertainment objective of athletics is not a logical one.

Basketball notes

Meyer turns victory No. 715, other cheek

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The Grand Old Man of college basketball, DePaul's Ray Meyer, is in his 42nd and final season as head coach at age 70, and everyone wishes him well. As promised, Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps gave Meyer a kiss after his final game at his alma mater last Saturday (DePaul won, 62-54, for his 715th victory).

But, quick, who is next in career victories in Division I? Who will be the next Grand Old Man in college basketball? If you said Ralph Miller, Guy Lewis or Dean Smith, stand in the corner.

The name is Marv Harshman of Washington, with 613 victories and enjoying one of his best seasons. Washington is 17-4 and leading the Pacific-10 Conference heading into two showdowns on the road Thursday at Oregon State and Saturday at Oregon.

This is Harshman's 39th season as head coach. He is 66. Does he hope to reach 700, or pass Meyer? "I don't think I can live that long," Harshman told Mal Florence, Los Angeles Times. "I do hope to coach one more year after this season. . . . They know that, and they have to evaluate and make that decision next spring. . . . Under state law here, you're not allowed to be employed more than one year at a time after 65. I haven't got a termination point in mind. . . . I enjoy it as much as I did the first year I coached, and I think I'm doing just as good a job. But I'm prejudiced about that."

Harshman has never been to the NCAA Final Four, which is in Seattle this year. "I got to the final four twice on the small-college level (the NAIA with Pacific Lutheran), but I never won it," he said. "I lost once on a shot at the buzzer. I'd like a chance to live through that at a higher level. With the Final Four being at the Kingdome, it makes things intriguing. For us to get there would be an extremely long shot, but it was for North Carolina State, too, last year."

He also coached football and baseball at Pacific Lutheran before moving to Washington State in 1959 and Washington in 1972. "I love to coach any sport," he said, "but I enjoy basketball more. It's still a player's game. Football is controlled by the coaches, not the players."

Harshman said his veteran 23-5 team of 1976 and his 20-6 team of 1972 were his best. "We used to have a league rule that the second-place team couldn't go to the National Invitation Tournament," he said. "That really hurt our 1972 team and Southern Cal's great 24-2 team of 1971 (only the conference champion could play in the NCAA tournament in those days)."

Back-to-back 350-game winners

Dayton recently reached two milestones—the school got its 1,000th victory and coach Don Donoher became Dayton's winningest coach at 353, passing Tom Blackburn's 352. Together, they have more than 70 percent of Dayton's victories. No other major college has had two coaches win 350 games, and it happened with back-to-back coaching tenures. Blackburn died of cancer in 1964 at age 58.

Donoher played for Blackburn in 1951-54 and joined him as an assistant coach in 1963, after one season as a prep assistant. Late in the summer of 1963, Blackburn was given six months to live. He told only his wife. "It was amazing what he forced himself to do that last year," Donoher said. Blackburn died March 6, 1964, and Donoher coached the team the last three games of the season. Six vs. five

When Drake senior center Lorri Bauman broke the Division I single-

Augusta's Jay Jahn is the second leading scorer in Division II with a 27.5 average

Ramona Rugloski of St. Cloud State ranks third in field-goal percentage in Division III at 60.5

Brigham Young's Devin Durrant is second in scoring with a 29.2 points-per-game average

Sandra Hodge of New Orleans is in fourth place in scoring with 29.5 points per game game scoring record (The NCAA News, January 11), it was noted that before entering college, she had never played in a full-court, five-on-five game. As a high school student in Iowa, she played the half-court six-girl version of basketball popular in Iowa and Oklahoma (three forwards play only offense, three guards only defense). Drake coach Carole Baumgarten acknowledges that coaching players from Iowa and Oklahoma high school teams is a challenge. "We thought we could develop the Iowa player into a good five-man player," she told USA Today's Verenda Smith. "My school sits in the middle of Iowa, and I know the Iowa coaches and players. It's not realistic that I can continually go to Kansas and take the number one player."

Baumgarten, who played and coached in the Iowa high school system and was a newcomer to the full-court game when hired at Drake 10 years ago, recruits only forwards and only the outstanding athletes among them. Her teams never practice three-on-three drills. "There is a tendency in their minds to subconsciously go back to 'three dribbles and a look,'" she explained.

The players also wear blinders to prevent watching themselves dribble, which encourages concentration on finding an open player. There also are some advantages to recruiting those accustomed to the half-court game. "Iowa pays their coaches in high school very well, and they are skilled. We get kids who are fundamentally sound," Baumgarten said.

Texas head coach Jody Conradt agrees. "I was coaching when Texas high schools played six-man basketball. Give me a player who has great offensive skills, and I can teach her to play defense."

Speaking of Jody Conradt, the Texas mentor has had serious knee problems this season. The knees in question are not hers, but her team's. Four of the 13 Longhorns have undergone knee surgery. Senior forward Sherryl Hauglum, freshman guard-forward Yulonda Wimbish and freshman guard Paulette Moegle are out for the year. Senior guard Esoleta Whaley is expected to be active on the court again by the end of February. "After the first two injuries, I thought that would be it. I was shellshocked. I was reluctant to practice. I wanted to just show up for games," lamented Conradt. "The only positive thing about this is we won't have to recruit much next year, because everyone is redshirted." She has exhorted senior center Annette Smith to wear a knee brace even though she's not injured, except for a recent bout with the flu that kept her in bed for a week. "It's for protection and my peace of mind," explains Conradt. Smith's struggle with the flu, along with a tenacious Texas Tech defense, combined to end her 55-game double-figures scoring streak. She scored only nine points in the top-ranked Longhorns' recent 71-65 defeat of Tech, ending a string of consecutive games in which she has accumulated 10 or more points. The streak began March 23, 1982. (Chris Plonsky, Texas women's SID)

Minding their p's and q's (also their a's and b's)

Sharon Selzer, a freshman guard at Texas A&I, not only has found her way into the starting lineup but also has found the classroom to her liking. Selzer posted a 4.000 grade-point average her first semester, carrying a 16-hour course load. The accounting major was named to the dean's list. (Fred Nuesch, Texas A&I SID)

The Southwest Missouri State squad boasts a collective 3.020 grade average, with senior forward Lynne Miller leading the way with a perfect 4.000 entering her final semester. The lowest grade-point average among the 12 players is 2.250. (Mark Eddleman, Southwest Missouri State assistant SID)

Elizabethtown cocaptains Page Lutz and Sherri Kinsey, both seniors, achieved perfect 4.000 averages last semester. This was the fourth perfect semester for Lutz and the fifth for Kinsey. (Yvonne Kauffman, Elizabethtown coach)

Four members of the Colby-Sawyer team were named to the dean's list for achieving at least a 3.300 grade average. They are freshman forward Karen Mack, a sports science major; freshman center Susan Gianlorenzo, premedicine; sophomore point guard Toby Hake, sports science, and senior guard Lisa Rodgers, biology. Rodgers' name has been a fixture on the list throughout her career at Colby-Sawyer. Two others—senior forward Becca Hooker, an American studies major, and Kate Foley, a sophomore nursing major—barely missed the list. (Art Springsteen, Colby-Sawyer SID)

Quotes of the week

Asked how he felt about his Illinois State team being unranked as the Missouri Valley Conference leader with an outstanding record, coach Bob Donewald told Fred Mitchell of the Chicago Tribune: "They (the rankings) are like a dimple on your chin. If it's there, it's there. If it's not, it's not. That's how I feel about polls." (Tom Lamonica, Illinois State SID)

With his Harvard team leading Division I in free-throw accuracy at 81.4 percent (the all-time record is 80.9 by Ohio State in 1970), coach Frank McLaughlin was asked for an explanation. "All our kids have to work their way through school, and it costs a lot to go to Harvard," he said. "They'll take advantage of anything that's free." (Ed Markey, Harvard assistant SID)

Coach George Blaney had just picked up his 200th career victory in 11 seasons at Holy Cross and was looking back. Someone remembered a Holy Cross victory over La Salle earlier this season at the Palestra in Philadelphia and asked Blaney how he liked playing in that venerable structure. Replied Blaney: "If I could choose the place I will die, I'd pick the Palestra, old Madison Square Garden or the fifth tee at Newport Country Club." (Gregg Burke, Holy Cross SID)

After a 63-48 loss to Fresno State, San Jose State coach Bill Berry said wistfully, "I'd like a team like a Holiday Inn—no surprises." (Lawrence Fan, San Jose State SID)

When a Rhode Island alumnus received a call during a fund-raising drive, he asked whether he could earmark the donation for a specific program. He was told he could and pledged $200 for the men's basketball team. With Rhode Island in town to play George Washington, the alumnus, GW coach Gerry Gimelstob, told the Washington Post he planned to hand Rhode Island coach Claude English his contribution check. "Maybe I won't give it to him until after the game. If we lose, maybe I won't give it to him at all." (After his team won, 72-64, Gimelstob handed the check to English.) (Doug Gould, George Washington SID)

Arizona State coach Bob Weinbauer, when asked about Ralph Miller's Oregon State team, told Cathy Henkel of the Eugene Register-Guard: "Oregon State is a team unto itself. They're unorthodox. It's like running into a single wing in football. I'm not saying it's outdated—it's obviously successful (Oregon State has won three of the past four Pacific-10 championships)."

Stanford freshman John Paye on the difference between starting at quarterback on the Cardinal football team and his current role as starting point guard in basketball: "There is nothing like the pressure of being the starting quarterback. So much depends on what he does. The expectations are so great. When I joined the basketball team, my initial goal was simply to get the ball up the floor without something disastrous happening." (Jim Muldoon, Pacific-10 SID)

San Diego State freshman forward Tina Hutchinson, one of the nation's top Division I scorers, has found a new life through basketball with the help of her coach and legal guardian, Earnest Riggins. Riggins coached Hutchinson at Lincoln High School in East St. Louis, Illinois, when she moved there from Birmingham, Alabama; he is now the first-year head coach at San Diego State. He not only taught her the finer points of basketball, but with his wife's assistance, he gave guidance to help her through life off the court. Hutchinson is grateful for all Riggins has done. "I see him as my real father," she told the Los Angeles Times' Chris Cobbs. "I can't picture him as anything else. I have to be careful not to call him Daddy when we're at practice."

After his team defeated Grinnell on the road, 71-60, Lawrence coach Mike Gallus was greeted by his wife, who excitedly explained the cash register total from that day's grocery shopping was $71.60—same figures as the game. "If I had known that was going to happen," Mike told his wife Jeanette, "I would have gone to the delay game a little earlier." (Rick Peterson, Lawrence SID)

Missouri coach Norm Stewart on his young team: "When you've got young players, it's like an inner tube. About the time you get one knot fixed, it's ballooned to the other side. That's why we're staying very basic." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID)

Fastest start ever

Talk about fast starts. Heidelberg is enjoying its best season since the sport was organized for intercollegiate play back in 1903, with an 18-3 record, 8-1 in the Ohio Athletic Conference. One student, Jim Collins, has written a song entitled, "Berg Ball Rip." It is No. 1 on Heidelberg's hit list. (Al Kath, Heidelberg SID)

27 straight

Framingham State tied the national Division III record of 27 consecutive victories by winning its first 17 games before losing at Southeastern Massachusetts. The record was set by St. John's (Minnesota) in 1978-1979. Framingham won its last 10 games last season. (Jeff Stone, Framingham State SID)

Baby doing fine

Tampa's new varsity basketball program is doing fine in its first year, thank you. The team is 16-6 (five losses to Division I teams) and leading the Sunshine State Conference. A new 4,000-seat arena is expected to be ready February 20. (Jim Sheehan, Tampa SID)

A split decision

Clark's 50-game New England Division III winning streak was not the only casualty as Colby won 82-76. Chris Murphy, Colby assistant coach, split his pants. Murphy wore a pair of player's warm-up pants on the long trip home. Then his car would not start in 20-below weather, and he spent the night in the basketball office in his warm-up pants. (Dick Whitmore, Colby head coach)

Championships Previews

Roadrunners look strong in bid for sixth straight title

There will be 17 wrestlers from the Western regional in the NCAA Division II Wrestling Championships February 24-25 at Morgan State. That is not good news for teams aspiring to end Cal State Bakersfield's tournament domination.

Last year, 12 qualifiers—the 10 first-place finishers and two wild-card qualifiers—advanced to the championships from the Western regional. The five additional wild-card spots allocated to the regional by the NCAA Wrestling Committee means Cal State Bakersfield might qualify more wrestlers to help defend its title. The Roadrunners have won the past five titles and seven of the past eight championships.

Coach Joe Seay almost needed help, however, in last year's championships. After winning four titles by an average of more than 50 points, the Roadrunners edged North Dakota State by 3½ points.

This season, Seay's team could be the best in his 12-year career at Cal State Bakersfield. Potential champions are 126-pounder John Loomis, 142-pounder Jessie Reyes and heavy-weight Mike Blaske.

Reyes, the defending champion, was the top 142-pounder (all divisions) in the latest rankings by the Amateur Wrestling News. He was leading the Roadrunners' lineup with a 33-2 record (16-0 in dual meets) in mid-February. Loomis placed third, while Blaske, who competed at 190 pounds, finished second in last year's championships.

Despite the additional Western wild cards, North Dakota State is a definite title contender. The Bison have six wrestlers who should make the championships again.

Defending 134-pound champion Steve Carr compiled a 25-11-0 record (8-3-0 in dual meets) through matches of February 6. Mike Langlais, who won the 142-pound title in 1982 and finished runner-up last year, proved he could move up a weight class and win. Langlais, who had nine pins and a 33-4-0 record (11-0 in dual meets), recently upended defending 150-pound champion Mark Manning of Nebraska-Omaha. Langlais has won all five of his 150-pound-class matches.

Potential Bison scorers in the upper weights are John Morgan (167), Steve Hammers (177), Dave Haas (190) and Brian Fanfuk (heavyweight).

With 30 qualifying and 10 wild-card positions allocated to the North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, North Dakota State should see several familiar faces at the championships. Last year, six of the top 12 teams in the championships were NCIAC members. Nebraska-Omaha, St. Cloud State and Augustana (South Dakota) should qualify several wrestlers.

After a slow start, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville has gained momentum. The Cougars last year won nine individual gold medals in their regional and placed fourth in the championships. They enter the February 17 Midwest regional having won 11 consecutive dual matches.

Defending 126-pound champion

Don Stevens, who finished the regular season at 31-6-2 in the 134-pound weight class, headlines the Cougars' squad, along with Booker Benford, runner-up at 177 last year. Heavy-weight Al Sears, who last year advanced to the championships quarterfinals, also is in contention again. Sears had 19 pins and a 23-6-0 regular-season record.

Trenton State in favorite's role for Division III championships

Trenton State is back.

It is not as though the Lions had dropped from sight in recent NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships. Coach David Icenhower's squads did claim second in the past two national tournaments.

But this year's team is a solid favorite to win it all again, as Icenhower's squads did in 1979 and 1981.

The Lions proved their strength during the regular season, compiling a 14-0 record and winning the Metropolitan Tournament, which features most of the top teams regardless of division classification from the New York-New Jersey metropolitan area.

Trenton State has nine wrestlers capable of qualifying for the championships. Leading the charge is 158-pounder Bob Glaberman, ranked fourth by the Amateur Wrestling News. In 26 matches, Glaberman lost only twice—to defending Division I 158-pound champion Jim Zalesky of Iowa. Glaberman picked up titles at the Lehigh Invitational and the Delaware State Invitational Championships and placed third in the prestigious Midlands Wrestling Championships.

Trenton State also has contenders in Orlando Caceres (126), Larry DeSimone (142), Ron Bussey (150), Pat Murphy (167) and Bob Henig (190), each of whom, except DeSimone, has more than 20 victories.

Freshmen Pete Ramos (118), Ralph Venuto (134) and Dwayne Stanridge (177) also could reach the championships February 24-25 at Binghamton.

With defending champion Brockport State having a subpar season, Augsburg likely will push Trenton State for the title. The Auggies match up well with Trenton State's powerful middle weights. Tom Hall (142), Shea Kennedy (150) and Bruce Arvold (167) have won at least 25 matches each this season. Kennedy and Arvold were runners-up in last year's championships.

John Carroll also should be in the thick of things. The Blue Streaks won all five of its Presidents' Athletic Conference duals, running its conference unbeaten streak to 99. Coach Tony DeCarlo can rely on defending 190-pound champion Nick D'Angelo, who had a 23-1 record as of February 10. He also has heavyweight Mark

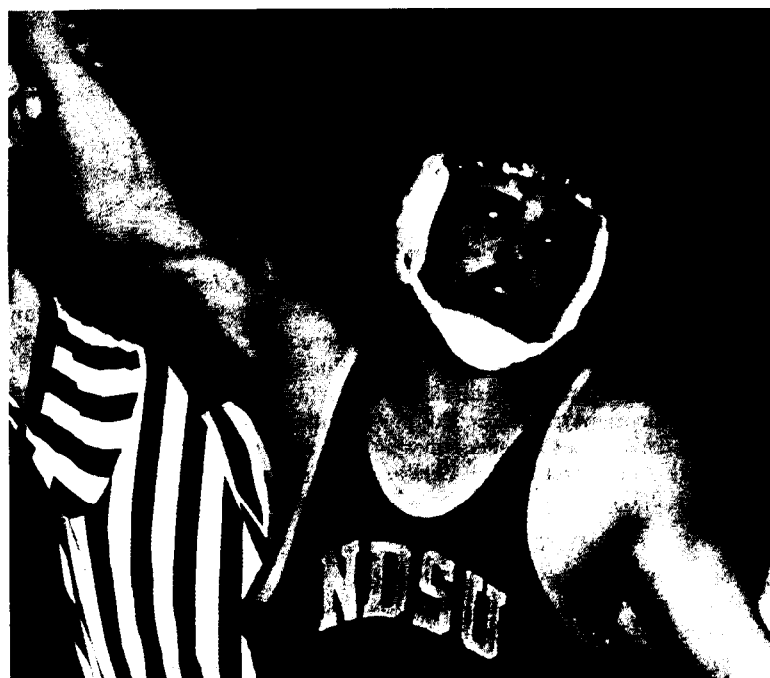

Sullivan from Ohio State, where he was the starting middle guard on the football squad and compiled a 15-13-2 record during the 1978-79 wrestling season. Sullivan had a 17-4 record as of February 10, with 10 of his victories coming by falls.

St. Lawrence was second in the latest rankings by the Amateur Wrestling News, but the Saints' hopes for a good showing at the championships took a severe blow due to injuries to 167-pound defending champion Todd Northrup and 177-pound runner-up Leland Rogers. However, with heavyweight Mike Connors, who had a 24-1 overall record, and Mike Reho (150) and Keith Crowningshield (126) healthy, the Saints are aiming for a strong finish.

Other top teams include Central (Iowa), Augustana (Illinois), Ithaca and Wisconsin-Whitewater.

Championships Corner

1. Gannon University will serve as host institution for the 1984 Division II Men's Golf Championships, May 15-18.
2. The University of California, Los Angeles, will serve as host institution for the 1984 Division I Women's Volleyball Championship, December 14-16.
3. The following allocations of qualifying positions have been approved for use in determining the field for the 1984 Division II Men's Golf Championships: District 1, six participants; District 2, 11; District 3, 23; District 4, 12; District 5, seven; Districts 6 and 7, six; District 8, 12, and at large, 11, for a total of 88.
4. For the 1984 Division III Men's Tennis Championships, a minimum of four singles players and two doubles teams will be selected from each region.

Parity, popularity make better Division I season

By David P. Seifert
The NCAA News Staff

Once upon a time, very few teams had a realistic chance of winning the NCAA Division I Baseball Championship. And few people outside of Omaha, Nebraska, knew much about that championship—the College World Series.

Neither is true today.

A name from the past, Arizona State, is ranked No. 1 entering the 1984 season, but that is no longer such a clear indication of the No. 1 team at season's end. From 1967 to 1974, Arizona State and Southern California won every championship. In the 15 years between 1964 and 1978, only Minnesota, Ohio State, Arizona and Texas broke the spell of the Sun Devils and Trojans.

But since 1978, there have been five different champions. Arizona State won only in 1981.

There also has been a dramatic change in the popularity of the College World Series in that five-year period. The attendance in 1978 was 79,654, and net receipts totaled $25,688. By last year, attendance had climbed to 115,700, and the series net receipts were $256,803.

Two reasons stand out for the increase in popularity: a shift to night baseball in 1981 and television coverage by the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network (ESPN).

"This (College World Series) has to have been one of the best-kept secrets in sports," said Dave Ogrean, ESPN senior program acquisition specialist. "Everybody knew about the NCAA basketball tournament, but the College World Series is tremendous."

Ogrean said that last year's telecasts earned better ratings than expected, showing "greater interest than we anticipated." That performance led ESPN to put together a regular-season package that will begin April 15.

The regular-season games will include both live and delayed telecasts of some of the nation's best-known college teams. The games will be shown on Sunday evenings, ending May 27, with, it is hoped, a Division I regional championship game.

ESPN also will televise all College World Series games, three on a delayed basis. None of the final weekend's telecasts will be delayed.

The series field should reflect the new level of balance. Some observers date that revolution to Maine's back-to-back victories over West Coast powers Cal State Fullerton and Stanford in the 1982 series.

This year, Arizona State's veteran team will have to contend with several first-rate opponents (see accompanying story), including Oklahoma State, Mississippi State, San Diego State and North Carolina. Maine also is looking for another trip to Omaha, while Michigan returns most of the regulars from its third-place team of a year ago.

There could be some surprises, though, due to a ruling by the NCAA Executive Committee that prohibits sports committees from limiting tournament selections to two teams from a conference. Instead, committees have been instructed to select the best teams available after considering automatic-qualifying conference teams and regional restrictions.

Jerry A. Miles, NCAA director of men's championships, estimated that the ruling would have affected "only a handful of decisions in the past few years." He mentioned Virginia Tech (Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference) and Nebraska (Big Eight Conference) as teams that had been passed over in recent years because of the committee's former two-team limit.

Arizona State coach Jim Brock said that his team "should be strong in all major categories. But whether it all comes together for us remains to be seen."

His emphasis on a pair of series in late February with defending champion Texas and challenger Oklahoma State may reflect just how much things have changed in college baseball.

"In a one-week period, we have two of the toughest teams in the country coming in," Brock said. "That should give us a pretty good indication of where we are."

Traditional powers only a part of top Division I teams, players

East

Top teams—James Madison made its first trip to the College World Series last year and will be strong again. The region's best teams, though, could be Delaware and Temple. Other contenders are Penn State, Rider, St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) and I.a Salle.

Top players—John Marzano, c, Temple (.398 batting average); Mike Stanek, 3b, Delaware (.370); Andy Donatelli, of, Delaware (.369); Mike Matto, 2b, Lehigh (.488); Jeff Onorato, of, Lehigh (.410); Winfred Johnson, of, East Carolina (.321); Pat Sipe, 1b, Liberty Baptist (.332); Tom Croftcheck, 2b, West Virginia (.368); Tony Marant, of, James Madison (.288).

Pitchers Stan Stanford, Rider (6 victories-1 loss, 2.65 earned-run average); Justin Gannon, James Madison (6-2, 4.18); Jamie Moyer, St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania); Bill Mendek, Temple (8-2, 3.27).

Northeast

Top teams—The best team from this area again is expected to be Maine, even though the Black Bears will be without all-America pitcher Bill Swift for the first third of the season. Swift is ineligible because of a meeting with a representative of a professional team. The biggest obstacles to Maine's fourth straight CWS appearance are Seton Hall, Harvard, New York Tech, St. John's (New York) and Connecticut. Other top teams include Massachusetts, Navy, Providence, St. Francis (New York) and Yale.

Top players—Pat Pacillo, of, Seton Hall (.385); Jeff Paul, 2b, Maine (.372); Joe Murphy, 1b-p, Wagner (.387); Gene Larkin, 3b, Columbia (.379); Tony Paterno, c, Yale (.391); Alfredo Cardwood, 1b, Long Island (.434); Ed Sheehan, ss, Vermont (.438); Dave Ford, 1b, Connecticut (.382); Tom Diceglio, ss, St. John's

(New York) (.329); Bill Peach, 3b, New Hampshire (.385).

Pitchers Bill Swift, Maine (9-3, 2.81); Charles Marchese, Harvard (7-1, 3.21); George Archer, New York Tech (6-0, 0.69); Craig Michael, Navy (7-2, 2.81); Al Labozetta, New York Tech (4-1, 2.32).

Atlantic

Top teams—North Carolina was upset in regional play last year but is strong enough to avoid an upset this season. The Tar Heels will face stiff competition in the Atlantic Coast Conference from Clemson, and traditional powers Miami (Florida) and South Carolina also will have strong teams. Other area contenders are The Citadel, Georgia Tech, Western Carolina and Stetson.

Top players—B. J. Surhoff, c, North Carolina (.386); Bob Paulling, 1b, Clemson (.407); Phil Lane, of, Miami (Florida) (.258, 20 home runs); Chris Boyle, c, South Carolina (.307); Chris Morgan, 3b, Georgia Tech (.361); Jeff Hubbard, 3b, North Carolina (.380); Charlie Fonville, 1b, Western Carolina (.318); Michael Poole, of, Florida A&M (.304); Tracy Woodson, inf, N.C. State (.299); Jon Pequiot, of, Stetson (.321).

Pitchers David Mills, Citadel (7-2, 1.13); Scott Bankhead, North Carolina (9-0, 2.38); Scott Parrish, Clemson (6-1, 3.02); Rob Souza, Miami (Florida) (14-4, 3.91); Bryan Augsberger, Virginia Military (6-2, 1.87).

South

Top teams—Alabama surprised most experts last year with its second-place finish. This year, the Crimson Tide will be one of several Southeastern Conference teams rated as challengers to favored Mississippi State. Other standout teams include Florida, Florida State, South Alabama, Old Dominion and Memphis State. Tulane, Murray State and Morehead State also look strong.

Top players—Rafael Palmiero, dh, Mississippi State (.406, 78 runs batted in); Jody Reed, ss, Florida State (.308); Scott Raziano, 3b, New Orleans (.406); Barry Shifflett, 3b, North Carolina-Charlotte (.397); Brandt Ely, inf, Kentucky (.422); Frank Velleggia, c, Alabama (.324); Mike Tullier, of, Nicholls State (.360); Mark Cooper, c, Louisiana State (.377); Brad Dantzler, 1b, Florida State (.348); Tommy Mathews, 1b, Tulane (.345); Tim Duheller, of, Virginia Tech (.351); Shane Young, 1b, Memphis State (.370).

Pitchers Richard Rodriguez, Tennessee (7-3, 2.37); Tommy West, Old Dominion (11-2, 4.14); Clay Daniel, Florida (5-3, 2.26); Tim Meacham, Alabama (7-0, 2.39); Laddie Renfro, Mississippi (8-4, 3.50); Drew Hall, Morehead State (6-1, 4.32).

Division I statistics

Oklahoma State is counting on Dennis Livingston's arm to earn a championship berth for the Cowboys, who have been ranked second nationally in two preseason polls.

Livingston was second in the nation with 15 victories last year and is the winningest returning collegiate pitcher. He also finished fourth in strikeouts per nine innings, averaging 12 per game with 180 in 135 innings.

It was the second straight year that Livingston had finished fourth in the strikeout rankings, but he did it in a new role. The previous year, as a freshman, he was OSU's top relief pitcher, with an 8-2 record. He had 10 saves that year, second best nationally.

Other top returning Division I baseball players include those listed below in the statistical categories specified.

Division II statistics

A three-time national champion is a rarity in college baseball, but junior T. J. McDonald of Pace has a chance to join the select club.

McDonald hit 14 home runs in 27 games last year to lead Division II power hitters with an average of 0.52 home runs per game. As a freshman in 1982, he did even better, averaging 0.60 per game. He already holds the school record with 29 homers in two seasons. And he was a second-team academic all-America selection last year.

McDonald also finished second nationally in runs batted in with 1.48 per game (40 RBI in 27 games), and his .414 batting average was among the nation's top 30. His return should help Pace improve its 1983 record of 16-11 and be a challenger for a postseason tournament spot in

Warm-weather teams have tight hold on Division II championship trophy

Baseball fans in Florida and California have been almost certain of one thing for the past 16 years: a chance to see the Division II national champion.

Illinois State in 1969 and Valdosta State in 1979 are the only champions from other states during that period. California and Florida teams also have had four runner-up finishes.

Five teams from California have shared nine of those titles, while Florida Southern has won the other five championships. Cal Poly-Pomona won its third national crown last year, defeating Jacksonville State—that is in Alabama—9-7, in the final game.

Good weather always has been a factor in college baseball, but its effect seems greater in this division than in others. Even looking past the champions, the other traditionally strong Division II teams generally have been from the South. Valdosta State (Georgia) has finished in the top four on three occasions in addition to its title; Jacksonville State finished second once; Delta State (Mississippi) was second twice and third twice.

Most of the division's best teams last year were from the South and West, and most played more than 50 games. Cal Poly-Pomona played 63. The top contenders for 1984 from other regions rarely played that many games a year ago. Mankato State played 41 games in 1983, while New Haven played just 27. Northeast regional winner Quinnipiac was 25-10.

This year could be more of the same (see accompanying story), with Cal Poly-Pomona and Cal State Northridge among the country's best Division II teams. The two West Coast powers have two of the division's best pitchers: all-America Jim Walker of Cal State Northridge and Kirk Washington of Cal Poly-Pomona, who tossed a six-hit shutout against Valdosta State in last year's finals series.

The primary challengers to the California teams are from the South, with Valdosta State looking especially strong. If anyone else breaks into the elite, it could be New Haven or Mankato State.

Florida Southern, a perennial contender, may be rebuilding. The Moccasins lost seven starters and their top two pitchers from last year's fourth-place team. They also have a new coach now that Joe Arnold has moved to Florida State.

Jacksonville State, which could repeat its 1983 appearance in the finals series, has one of the best continuing stories in Division II. Coach Rudy Abbott is paid by the university to serve as sports information director. He also coaches the Gamecocks' baseball team, without additional compensation, because of his interest in the sport.

This year's finals series again will be played at California-Riverside, the site of the Division II finals since 1980. After regional play at campus sites in mid-May, six winners will play a double-elimination series May 26-30 at Riverside.

Interference changes top revisions in 1984 rules

The news in rules changes for the 1984 baseball season is not so much what has been changed but what is not in the rules book.

Editor Donald K. Edwards of the University of California, Riverside, said that part of a change in Rule 8-3-e, about when a base runner is entitled to a base if interfered with by a fielder, was omitted when the book was printed. Edwards said the section should read as follows:

"e. If interfered with by a fielder:
"1. If the interference occurs on the batter/runner before he reaches first base or is on a runner on which a play is being made, the ball is dead and the interfered runner is awarded at least one base beyond the base he last legally touched before the interference. The advancement is in accordance with the umpire's judgment as to how far the runner would have advanced had there not been interference. Any preceding runners may be awarded additional bases if forced to advance because of the penalty.

"Whenever a play is being made on a runner being interfered with, the umpire shall signal interference the same way that he calls 'time'; and the ball shall be declared dead immediately. If, however, the ball is in flight prior to the interference being called by the umpire, and a wild throw results, the runners shall be awarded such bases as the umpires believe they would have reached had interference not occurred. If a runner is trapped between bases and the throw goes into a dugout, all runners are awarded two bases beyond the base they last touched legally before the interference occurred.

"2. If a play is not being made on an interfered runner, 'time' shall not be called until all action has ceased. The umpire then shall impose any penalties or awards as he deems necessary to nullify the interference. Since the ball is not declared 'dead' in this situation, if the interfered runner should advance beyond the base the umpire believes he would have had there not been interference, the runner does so at his own risk.

"NOTE—No fielder has the right to block the baseline without the ball. The baseline belongs to the runner, and the defensive player may be there only when fielding a ball or when he has the ball in his possession (See 6-2-g.)."

Edwards added that the Approved Ruling added to Rule 8-3-a allowing a run to score when a runner is forced to vacate third base when there are two outs applies when that runner is "awarded" home.

Other changes for 1984 include:
—All bats must have an identification mark 18 inches from the handle, limiting the extent of foreign substances being applied. This is intended to eliminate any "pine-tar controversies."

—All catchers must wear throat guards.

—If a fielder intentionally drops a declared infield fly (fair ball), the ball remains in play.

—If a base coach assists a runner or distracts any opposing fielders or pitchers, the ball is dead.

—The visiting team's starting pitcher must be permitted to warm up on the home team's mound if comparable practice mounds are not available.

—When a fielder catches a ball and steps into dead-ball territory, the ball remains in play, even if both feet were not in live-ball territory when the catch was made.

—If a pitcher intentionally throws at a batter after receiving a warning from the umpire, both the pitcher and his coach will be ejected from the game.

—All pitchers, whether starting an inning or entering during an inning, will be limited to eight warm-up pitches. Those pitches must be completed within one minute.

Top teams—New Haven is expected to make its eighth straight appearance in postseason play. The Chargers have participated in the Division II tournament 11 of the past 12 years. Quinnipiac, the regional winner in 1983, has another strong team. Other contenders include Le Moyne, C. W. Post, Assumption, Pace, Lowell, Adelphi, Springfield and American International.

Top players—T. J. McDonald, of, Pace (.414 batting average); Tom Westerberg, c, Assumption (.333); Chris O'Connor, of, American International (.411); Robby Dromerhauser, c, Mercy (.382); Walter Riley, of, Assumption (.419); Gus Scacco, c, Adelphi (.427); Tony Buglione, c, New Haven (.333); John Howell, 1b, Le Moyne (.406); Leon Fairley, 1b, Bryant (.343); Tom Berard, c, St. Anselm (.385).

Pitchers Pat Saitta, Concordia (New York) (5 victories-1 loss, 1.41 earned-run average); Frank Trasacco, Quinnipiac (7-1, 2.72); John Leahy, American International (5-1, 2.83); John Longo, Assumption (4-0, 3.41); Mike Raczka, New Haven (9-3, 2.91); Matt Harrison, Le Moyne (6-2, 1.87); Mike Malone, Springfield (5-1, 2.07).

South Atlantic

Top teams The best team could be Valdosta State, third nationally last year. The Blazers' top challengers are expected to be Shippensburg and West Chester. Other top teams are California (Pennsylvania), Longwood, Mansfield, West Georgia, Mount St. Mary's and Indiana (Pennsylvania).

Top players—Chuck DeVane, of, Valdosta State (.433); Johnny Dial, inf, Pembroke State (.320); Tom Reichenbach, of, Lock Haven (.330);

June Munford, 1b, Valdosta State (.368); Scot Conway, 1b, Bloomsburg (.451); Barry Kerr, ss, Shippensburg (.350); Jeff Potter, c, Columbus (.376, 47 RBI); John Sullivan, ss, Longwood (.347); Tim Goff, of, Albany State (Georgia) (.471); Joe Lacey, of, Slippery Rock (.369); Jim Lamey, of, Indiana (Pennsylvania) (.365).

Top pitchers—Ricky Tucker, Valdosta State (12-2); Mike Margle, Mount St. Mary's (6-3, 2.56); Al Floyd, Pfeiffer (5-0, 3.24); Larry McKinney, Augusta (6-1, 1.89); Tim Friesen, Shippensburg (1-0, 2.34, 7 saves).

South

Top teams—Five-time national champion Florida Southern normally is the favorite from this area. The Moccasins are rebuilding but still are considered a challenger. Other hopefuls include Rollins, Eckerd, St. Leo, Biscayne, Tampa and Florida Atlantic.

Top players—Bob Gibree, c, St. Leo (.335, 46 RBI); Keith Foley, c, Florida Atlantic (.396); Dave McCoy, 3b, Rollins (.302); Dave Minotti, 1b, Florida Southern (.286); Ralph Mattone, of, Florida Atlantic (.379, 53 RBI); Roy Silver, of, Eckerd (.324); Ricky Bernaldo, ss, Tampa (.375); John Anderson, of, St. Leo (.362).

Pitchers Dick Dvorak, Rollins (9-4, 3.67); Jim Bridges, Florida Southern (8-4, 3.17); Bruce Fichter, Biscayne (6-2, 1.67).

Central

Top teams—Jacksonville State finished second last year and should be a national contender again. The best of the others in the area are Troy State, Indiana Central, Delta State, Wayne State (Michigan), Mississippi College and Grand Valley State.

Mark Altobella of Lewis

Top players—Richey Hines, 1b, Mississippi College (.400); Tom Baldwin, of, Ferris State (.379); Mark Boyd, c-1b, Jacksonville State (.343); Randy Kelley, of, North Alabama (.341); Mike Cupples, c, Grand Valley State (.364); Dave Banks, 1b, Troy State (.321); Mark Swanner, c, Wright State (.378); Mike Moore, dh, Delta

State (.295); Brooks Warren, dh, Mississippi College (.378); John Healey, c, Indiana Central (.347).

Pitchers Chris Parker, Jacksonville State (4-2); Brian Stier, Ashland (4-3); Mike Seger, Kentucky Wesleyan (4-2, 3.03); Kent Willis, North Alabama.

Division III standouts plentiful

Northeast

Top teams—Ithaca and Eastern Connecticut State have split the last four Northeast regional crowns and could battle for area supremacy again this year. Several other teams could contend, including Oswego State, Amherst, Wesleyan, Cortland State, Southern Maine, Worcester State, Salem State, Colby and Massachusetts Maritime.

Top players—Kevin Beaudoin, of, Eastern Connecticut State (.392); Mark Levine, c, Oswego State (.479); Karl Allaire, ss, Rhode Island College; David Murray, 2b, Ithaca (.394); Kevin Orkney, 1b, Thomas (.413); Brad Wise, of, Southern Maine (.350); Ben Lowry, 3b, Colby (.435); Jeff Raner, 3b, Oneonta State (.524); Tim Quinn, ss, Massachusetts Maritime (.330); Tom Welch, 2b, Bowdoin (.415); John Hersperger, inf, Middlebury (.476); Jim Quinn, of, Worcester State (.420).

Pitchers Dave Eisenberg, Western New England (3 victories-0 losses, 1.04 earned-run average); Dave Levasseur, Southern Maine (8-1, 2.05); Brian Cross, Cortland State (4-0, 2.48); Steve Keohane, Tufts (4-1, 3.85); Bob Bolster, Salem State (5-2, 1.96).

Mid-Atlantic

Top teams—It could be a wide-open race in this region, with Montclair State, William Paterson and Widener appearing to be light favorites. Montclair State won the region in 1983 but may not be quite as strong this year. Other top teams include Swarthmore, Moravian, Upsala, Ramapo and Muhlenberg.

Top players—Mike Nicosia, of, Montclair State (.352); Nick Stefano, c, William Paterson (.410); Mike

Plunkett, 1b, Manhattanville (.500); Vic Tritto, 3b, Muhlenberg (.353); Ed Greene, dh, Swarthmore (.425); Mike Leyden, of, Stevens Tech; Jim Gentile, of, Moravian (.426); Mark Geimke, 1b, William Paterson (.435); John Richter, 3b, Scranton (.340).

Pitchers Phil DiAngelo, Widener (8-2, 2.68); Steve Weidner, Muhlenberg, (4-3, 4.11); Joe Lynch, William Paterson (10-1); Bill Pilgermayer, Moravian (4-1, 2.65); Steve Williams, Upsala (9-2, 3.35).

South

Top teams—Perennial power Lynchburg is expected to earn its ninth consecutive tournament spot. Strong challenges could come from Methodist, North Carolina Wesleyan, Salisbury State, Johns Hopkins, Stillman and Glassboro State.

Top players—Mike Currie, dh, Methodist (.404); Bill Feehan, dh, Kean (.465); Rich Johnson, c, Western Maryland (.338); Terry Coates, of, North Carolina Wesleyan (.340); Cedric Walker, 3b, Stillman (.439); Dyke Ansted, ss, St. Andrews (.460); Andy Lachance, 2b, Johns Hopkins (.330); Lee Butler, ss, Lynchburg (.372); John Palmieri, 1b, Rutgers-Camden (.388); Mike McKeever, of, Glassboro State (.362).

Pitchers Carl Payne, North Carolina Wesleyan (11-3, 2.35); Tracy Roark, Lynchburg (8-1, 1.34); James McCall, Stillman (1.09); Mark Campbell, Johns Hopkins (4-2, 1.57); Frank Sessoms, Methodist (6-2, 4 saves).

Mideast

Top teams—There is a long list of contenders in this region, led by 1983 champion Marietta and runner-up Otterbein. The best of the rest appear to be Ohio Northern, North Park and Monmouth (Illinois); still other contenders include Juniata, John Carroll, Elizabethtown, Elmhurst, Hope, Wooster, North Central, Rose-Hulman and Illinois Benedictine.

Top players—Randy Ross, ss, North Park (.509, 74 RBI); Sean Burns, of, Alma (.396); Dave Selsor, of, Ohio Northern (.397); John Wood, of, Rockford; Jim Nicholson, ss, Muskingum (.457); Ed Kolar, 1b, Illinois Benedictine (.382); Steve King, of, Illinois Wesleyan (.410); Bill Seiler, 3b, Monmouth (Illinois) (.415); Dave Murphy, of, Juniata (.372); Pat Hayes, 2b, Case Reserve (.516); Monte Duncan, inf, Marietta (.342); Mike Goodwin, c, Otterbein, (.341); Billy Thompson, 1b, John Carroll (.341); Terry Fredericksen, 1b, Aurora (.396).

Pitchers Terry Mulholland, Marietta (14-2, 2.12); Kirk McDonald, Otterbein (13-3, 3.22); John Magyari, John Carroll (6-2, 3.48); Greg Heeres, Hope (6-3, 3.10); Brad Fields, Monmouth (Illinois) (7-2); Tom O'Connor, Aurora (4-3, 1.90).

Midwest

Top teams—This could be another well-balanced region, with several possible national contenders. The best teams probably are Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Luther, St. Thomas and Central (Iowa). Other possibilities are Wartburg, Concordia-Moorhead, Wisconsin-Whitewater, Coe and Washington (Missouri).

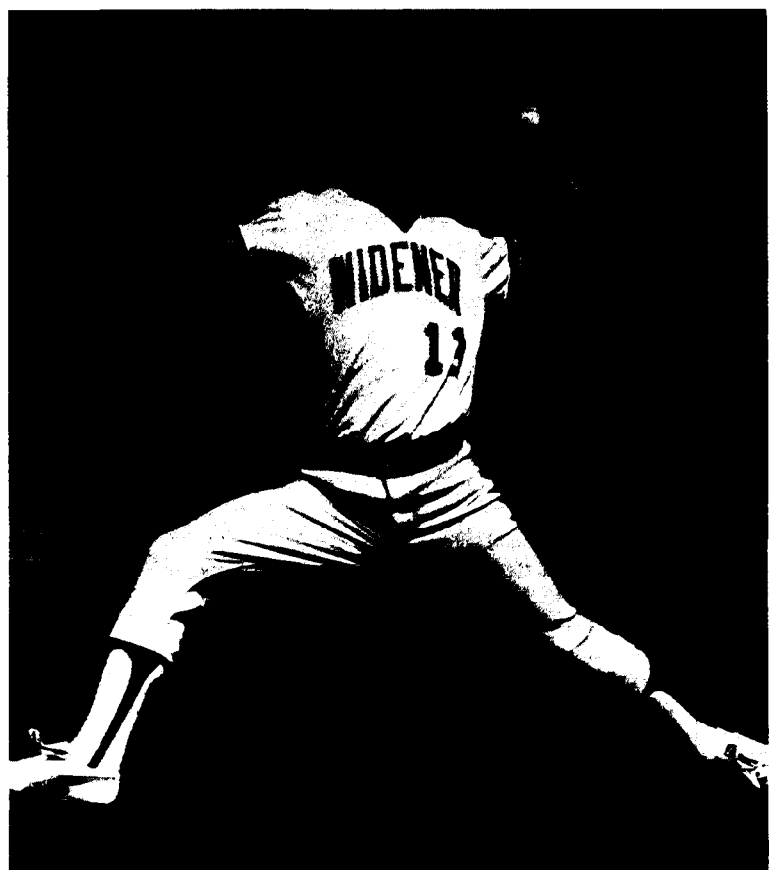

Top players—Barry Larson, of, Buena Vista (.369); Tom Jaremk, dh-of, Wisconsin-Oshkosh (.444); Mike Schermer, 3b, Central (Iowa) (.389); Larry Hawkins, of, Maryville (Missouri) (.362, 45 stolen bases); Mark Meyer, c, St. Thomas (3.58); Randy Brown, c, Simpson (.405); Mark Nelson, 1b, Concordia-Moorhead (.429); Dave Boudreau, ss, Carleton (.405); Jordan Riedl, 1b, Trinity (Texas) (.386).

Pitchers Marc Gluckman, Washington (Missouri) (11-2, 1.44); Jay Kamin, Luther (7-2, 2.19); Bob Landis, Hamline (8-0, 2.13); Troy Cota, Wisconsin-Oshkosh (2.26); Keith Peterson, St. Olaf (5-2); Monte Niederklein, Nebraska Wesleyan (4-0, 4.22); Pat O'Pate, St. Mary's (Minnesota) (5-2, 1.09); Terry Wallace, St. Norbert (1.47).

West

Top teams—Cal State Stanislaus won the first two Division III titles and has been to the finals series six times, including last season. It could happen again this year, although the Warriors have several serious challengers. The best teams are La Verne, Whittier, Occidental and Redlands.

Top players—Rich Brown, of, La Verne (.378); Kevin Olson, c, Occidental (.378); See Division III, page 11

Ohio rivals hope for repeat of title battle

Ohio is not a place that comes to mind immediately when thinking about college baseball, but it is the location of some powerful Division III teams.

Marietta won its second Division III title last year in a record-setting 36-8 victory in the final game. Adding to the game's rarity was that Marietta's victim was Ohio Athletic Conference rival Otterbein. Otterbein was the OAC regular-season champion and defeated Marietta three times—twice in regular-season play and once earlier in the finals series.

OAC teams have finished first or second in the Division III championship four of the past six years. Marietta has finished in the top four six times.

"Our entire conference plays good baseball, but I'm not sure why," said Marietta coach Don Schaly, a member of the NCAA Baseball Committee. "It's a dog fight every year, and it seems like it has become more competitive the last several years."

This year will be no different. Marietta and Otterbein again are among the nation's best Division III teams. They are considered contenders for the OAC's South Division title, along with Capital. Challengers in the North Division include Ohio Northern, Baldwin-Wallace and Wooster.

Last year may have been the first time that the Division III title was won by a team that failed to win its conference championship. But Schaly pointed out that in 1982, Marietta finished third in the finals series after failing to win the league.

"Schools in this league work hard at having a good baseball program," Schaly said. "There are times that games could be canceled because of bad weather, but we battle the weather all the time to get those games in."

And those strong baseball programs are not built at the expense of other sports. Wittenberg finished second in the 1983 Division III men's basketball championship and has two first-place and two second-place finishes in football competition. Kenyon has won four straight Division III men's swimming and diving championships. Mount Union (cross country) and Wooster (golf) also have national championships to their credit.

This year, Marietta and Otterbein have veteran pitching staffs to lead their attempts to return to the finals. That series again will be held at Marietta, May 31-June 3. This will be the ninth consecutive year that Marietta has been the host.

Several other teams will be national contenders (see accompanying story), including previous national champions Ithaca and Eastern Connecticut State. It would not be a surprise for Division III to have a champion other than Marietta, but it would be a surprise if the OAC did not have a national contender.

Division III statistics

Batting .500 is quite a feat for a college baseball player. Doing it twice is even more impressive, and that is what North Park shortstop Randy Ross has done.

Ross led Division III in batting two years ago with a .515 average. Last year, he "slumped" to a .509 and lost his crown to Lynchburg's Wayne Harrison (.525). Now, Ross is back for his senior season and is trying to make it three consecutive .500 seasons.

A top batting average is not Ross' only accomplishment. As a sophomore, he ranked fifth nationally in doubles. Last year, he was second in runs batted in. And he hit 12 home runs in 43 games, just missing a national ranking in that category.

Other top returning Division III baseball players include those

Midwest

Top teams—Mankato State, a 12-time tournament participant, has one of its best teams. Last year's regional winner, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, also should contend. Other top teams include Northwest Missouri State, St. Cloud State, Southeast Missouri State, Morningside, Lewis, Nebraska-Omaha, Missouri-St. Louis, Sam Houston State and Central Missouri State.

Top players—Mark Altobella, 2b, Lewis (.379, 60 RBI); Steve Williams, c-1b, Southeast Missouri State (.349); Keith McKinney, c, Morningside; Rod Schafer, of, St. Cloud State (.358); Richard Johnson, 1b, Sam Houston State (.409); Rick Resh, of, Northeast Missouri State (.396); Steve Riley, dh, Northeast Missouri State (.375); Gary Mensen, of, Mankato State (.330); Pete Barrett, 1b, Northwest Missouri State (.336); Dan Allaire, 3b, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (.320).

Pitchers Lance Hemmer, Southeast Missouri State (8-2, 2.61); William Shanks, Missouri-St. Louis (4-2, 3.73); Jim Scheibal, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (7-3, 3.17); Tim Riedl, Winona State (5-1, 2.88); Urban Seay, Texas Lutheran (7-3, 3.44); Glen Skillingstad, Mankato State (5-4, 3.30).

Top teams—Defending national champion Cal Poly-Pomona again will be one of this region's best, along with Cal State Northridge. This region has produced eight of the 16 Division II champions. Other contenders this year include California-Riverside, San Francisco

State, Southern Utah State and Southern Colorado.

Top players—Tom Scaletta, ss, Cal Poly-Pomona (.240); Brad Pounders, 3b, California-Riverside (.340); Perry Husband, Cal State Northridge (.323); Ron Johns, 1b, Cal Poly-Pomona (.309); Jerry James, of, Southern Utah State (.431); Randy Rhinehart, of, Cal State Hayward (.313); Tom Wetzel, c, San Francisco State (.340); Doug Diamond, of, Chapman (.329); Greg Isenhardt, 1b, Metropolitan State (.426); Rick Arzola, of, Cal State Los Angeles (.278, 18 HR).

Pitchers Jim Walker, Cal State Northridge (12-3, 2.25); Kirk Washington, Cal Poly-Pomona (6-3, 2.79); Lou Harrison, San Francisco State (6-2); Randy Vrooman, Cal State Chico; Fred Bishop, Southern Colorado (9-3).

'Best U.S. team ever' hunts gold in Olympic baseball tournament

As a freshman, shortstop Barry Larkin helped the University of Michigan to third place in the 1983 College World Series. This year, he hopes to help Michigan return to Omaha and then help the United States win a six-nation tournament that will be part of the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

Larkin, who batted .352 in his first college season, is one of the most versatile players in college baseball. He played shortstop for the Wolverines last year; he has been named 1984 preseason all-America at second base, and his coach, Bud Middaugh, says his best position may be center field.

And he is part of a group of 44 collegiate players who are vying for 25 spots on what is expected to be the strongest-ever U.S. international baseball team.

The team will compete July 31-August 7 at the Olympics against teams from Cuba, Nicaragua, Italy, South Korea and Taiwan. The tournament will be played at Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles.

The finals double-header August 7 already is sold out, but tickets for early round games are available.

Southern California coach Rod Dedeaux, whose Trojans have won 10 NCAA championships, will coach the team. The high caliber of talent available is being credited to an agreement between major-league baseball and the United States Baseball Federation.

Players on the U.S. roster who are selected in the June major-league draft will be able to compete in the Olympics. The professional teams have agreed not to sign any of those players until after the Olympics, and the International Amateur Baseball Association (AINBA) has amended its rules to allow players who have been drafted and signed by major-league teams to compete in international play if they do not play any pro games or receive any remuneration.

The baseball commissioner's office has even taken out an insurance policy to protect teams in case an already-signed player is injured in Olympic or pre-Olympic competition.

The 44-player roster will be reduced to 25 by June 1. That roster will be published in The NCAA News.

team in years. Two Western Athletic Conference teams, San Diego State and Brigham Young, are among the nation's 10 best. Other contenders in the area include Hawaii, Arkansas, Lamar, Georgia Southern and Northeast Louisiana.

Top players—Cory Snyder, inf, Brigham Young (.416, 91 RBI); Ben Abner, of, Georgia Southern (.400, 23 HR); Terry Jones, 1b, San Diego State (.387); Bill Bates, 2b, Texas (.296); Julius McDougal, ss, Jackson State (.289); Trey Hillman, inf, Texas-Arlington (.335); Scott Johnson, of, Rice (.340); Eric Pharris, of-p, Air Force (.430); Mike Loggins, of, Arkansas (.295); John Fontes, 1b, UTEP (.390); Greg Daniels, of, Alcorn State (.546).

Pitchers Mark De la Torre, Brigham Young (11-0, 3.89); Tim Englund, Rice (9-2, 2.67); John Senes, Lamar (10-6, 3.83); Matt Dornier, Northeast Louisiana (6-2, 3.32); Kevin Piper, San Diego State (8-0, 3.19); Bill Blount, San Diego State (13-3, 2.99).

Mideast

Top teams—Michigan was third last year and could be better in 1984. Its strongest challengers in the Big Ten Conference should be Minnesota and Iowa. Miami (Ohio) looks like the best in the Mid-American Athletic Conference. Other strong teams in the area are Eastern Michigan, Ohio State, Detroit and Eastern Illinois.

Top players—Barry Larkin, inf, Michigan (.352); Jack Schlichting, c, Minnesota (.391); Dan Froehle, of, Xavier (.456); Rich Bair, c, Michigan (.393); Mark Manering, 1b, Miami (Ohio) (.371); Andy Krause, of, Michigan State (.344); Ray Graff, of, Detroit (.379); Scott Schuveiller, 3b, Minnesota (.368); Ty Chiesa, of, Evansville (.368); Mike Huff, of, Northwestern (.361).

Pitchers Scott Kamieniecki, Michigan (5-1, 2.84); Kevin Davis, Miami (Ohio) (10-3, 2.64); Ken Spratke, Eastern Michigan (6-2, 3.22); Gary Wayne, Michigan (7-2, 1.81); Dale Erickson, Detroit (7-2, 2.54); Brian Criswell, Western Michigan (5-2, 3.38); Kent Murray, Western Illinois (6-2, 2.92).

Midwest

Top teams—Oklahoma State is ranked second nationally as the season begins, and Oral Roberts could be among the nation's top 10. Other area contenders include Oklahoma, Nebraska, Wichita State, Indiana State, Missouri, Illinois State, Oklahoma City and Southern Illinois.

Top players—Tom Gilles, inf, Indiana State (.315); Pete Incaviglia, dh, Oklahoma State (.371, 23 HR); Turner Gill, ss, Nebraska (.284); Kevin Penner, of, Wichita State (.433); Scott Wade, of, Oklahoma State (.368); Keith Miller, of, Oral Roberts (.317); Jay Searcy, 3b, Oklahoma (.343); Loren Hibbs, of, Wichita State (.348); Scott Mann, of, Indiana State (.371); Danny Iseminger, 1b, Southwest Missouri State (.412).

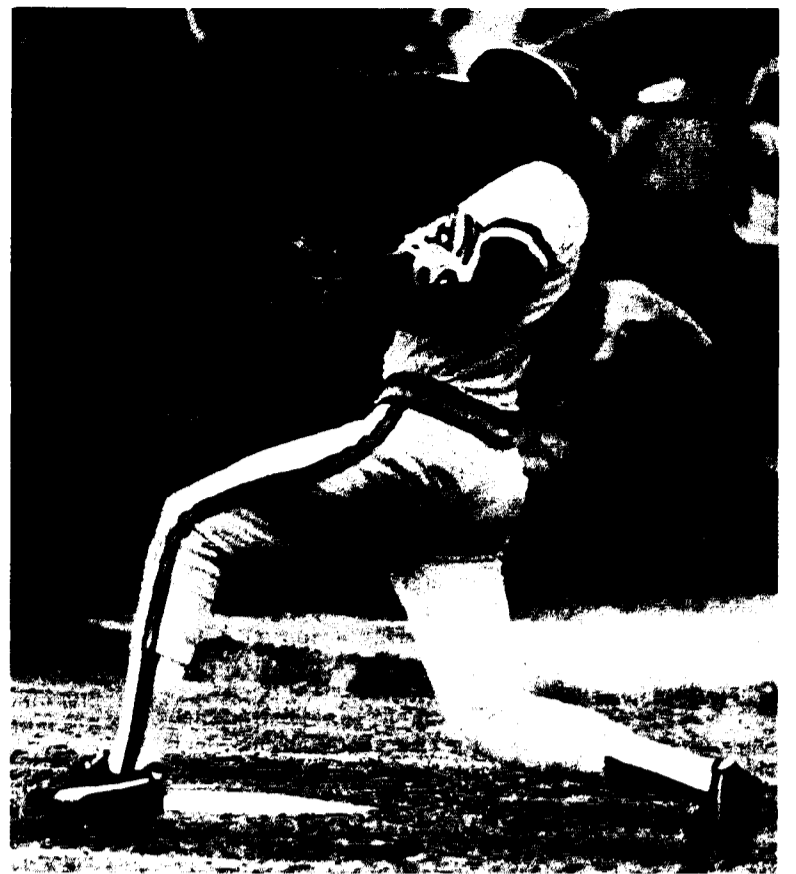

Pitchers Dennis Livingston, Oklahoma State (15-3, 3.00); Todd Burns, Oral Roberts (6-3, 1.74, 11 saves); Gary Kanwisher, Oklahoma State (10-3, 3.68); Dave Otto, Missouri (8-2, 2.71); Frank Schulte, Wichita State (10-3, 3.18).

West

Top teams—Arizona State is the preseason favorite to be the nation's best team. Several other national contenders will come from this region, including Stanford, Cal State Fullerton, California-Santa Barbara, Fresno State, Arizona and UCLA. Still other top teams include Santa Clara, Washington State, Oregon State and Southern California.

Top players—Shane Mack, of, UCLA (.419); Oddibe McDowell, of, Arizona State (.352); Mark McGwire, 1b, Southern California (.319, 59 RBI); Dain Syverson, 3b, Oregon State (.289); Eric Fox, of, Fresno State (.363); Barry Bonds, of, Arizona State (.306); John Fishel, of, Cal State Fullerton (.332); Dan Clark, ss, California-Santa Barbara (.349); Don Lovell, dh, Portland State (.337); Lance Blankenship, of, California (.286, 39 stolen bases).

Baseball stars multitaled

The days of Frank Merriwell may be in the past, but the era of the multisport athlete has not ended. The best known collegiate baseball players who excel in other sports are Nebraska shortstop-quarterback Turner Gill and Auburn outfielder-running back Bo Jackson. But they are not alone.

For sheer versatility, it is hard to beat Rob Long of Monmouth (Illinois). Long, who batted .293 as Monmouth's center fielder last year, captained the Fighting Scots' football, basketball and baseball teams this academic year. He has earned all-conference recognition in football and in baseball. And he has been nominated for a Rhodes scholarship.

Mark Militello of Duke has been named a Rhodes Scholar. The Atlantic Coast Conference's all-time leading base stealer, Militello batted .380 last year. He also led the ACC in pass receiving for two seasons.

Although most of these student-athletes combine football with baseball, that is not an exclusive combination. Plymouth State's Rich Parker was the 1982 Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference golf champion and hit .333 as a first baseman last spring. Tony Reimer, an all-conference outfielder for Nebraska Wesleyan, was the captain of the Plainsmen's basketball team. And pitcher Tracy Roark of Lynchburg was second last year in earned-run average in Division III and earned all-conference and all-region honors last fall in soccer.

Other two-sport competitors include:

—Bob Paulling, all-ACC first baseman for Clemson. Paulling set a school record by kicking 70 consecutive extra points and finished his career with 107 PATs in 109 attempts.

—Andy Ponsiego, Navy outfielder. Ponsiego has a pair of .300 seasons to go with two years as a third-team all-America in football.

—Doug Middleton, Central Missouri State first baseman. Middleton was a four-year starter at defensive end for the Mules. During the summer, he is a fast-pitch softball pitcher in Springfield, Missouri.

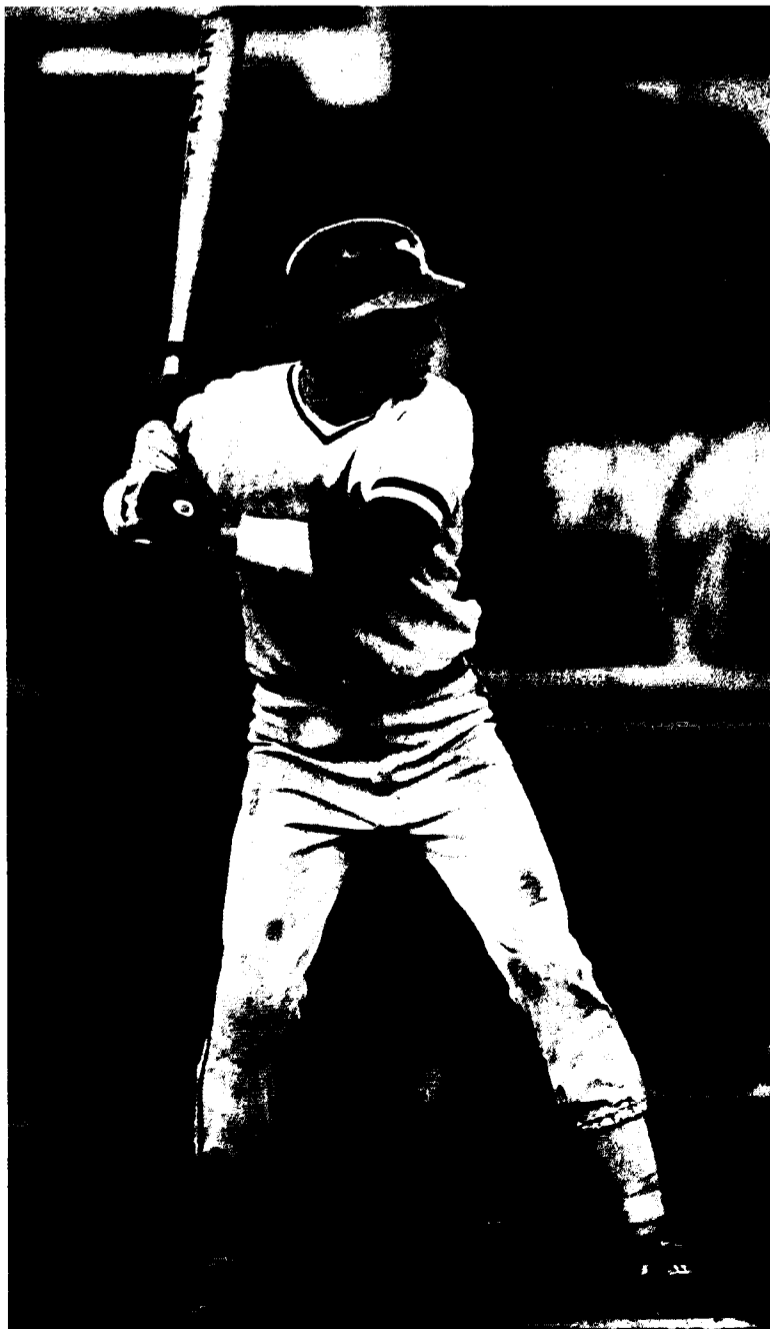

—Mike Prior, Illinois State outfielder who batted .391 last year. Prior was an all-America defensive back in 1982 when he led the nation with eight pass interceptions.

FACULTY REPRESENTATIVE

JOHN W. STOEPLER promoted from acting dean to dean of the college of law at Toledo.

COACHES

Baseball JIM SIMS returns to Edinboro as head baseball and assistant men's basketball coach. Sims held the same jobs at Edinboro from 1964 to 1966. Since that time, he has coached high school baseball in Pittsburgh and was head baseball coach at Penn State-Bernd College in Erie and assistant baseball coach at Duquesne.

Baseball assistants TONY EGLESIA named at John Jay. Former Cy Young Award winner MIKE MARSHALL selected pitching coach at Tampa. Marshall registered 178 saves in a 15-year career, winning the Cy Young Award in 1974 while pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Men's basketball Creighton coach WILLIS REED has received a three-year contract extension. WAYNE YATES will be retained at Northwestern State (Louisiana) through the 1984-85 season. JOHN KUESTER, in his first year as head coach at Boston U., has received a multiyear contract extension. Details were not released.

Men's basketball assistant JIM SIMS chosen at Edinboro (see baseball).

Women's basketball assistant JOYCE DE-VANEY hired at Ursinus.

Football DAN SHONKA, a talent scout for the Philadelphia Stars of the United States Football League, chosen at New Mexico Highlands. Shonka coached at Independence (Kansas) Junior College in 1981 and 1982 and has been an assistant coach at Iowa State, Rice, Purdue and Kansas. St. Francis (Pennsylvania) has named former assistant coach HUGH CONRAD JR. to head the Red Flash football program. Conrad was offensive coordinator for St. Francis from 1974 to 1979 and has been an assistant high school coach in Pennsylvania the past three years. RAY TELLIER, offensive coordinator at Brown the past five years, selected at Rochester. Tellier was quarterback at Connecticut in 1971 and 1972. Southern Colorado has named GARY RICHARDSON, head coach at Chadron State College in Nebraska. Richardson coached in a number of Colorado high schools and spent three years as defensive coordinator at Southern Colorado in the mid-1970s.

Football assistants JOHN GOUGH, offensive coordinator at Oregon State, chosen at California. Gough will direct the offensive line at California. VIRGIL KNIGHT, a member of the Auburn coaching staff the past three years and a 13-year coaching veteran, named strength and conditioning coach for the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League. TOM MILLER, defensive line coach at Dartmouth, hired at Air Force in the same capacity. Miller also has coached at The Citadel, Davidson and Bridgeport. ART MEADOW-CROFT (offensive coordinator) and MIKE WHITE (defensive line) complete the staff for new Long Beach State coach Mike Sheppard. Meadowcroft joins the staff from Golden Valley (Minnesota) Lutheran Junior College, and White coached the past two years at Boise State. ED YOUNGS, defensive coordinator at Michigan State and Long Beach State, selected at Cincinnati. Youngs also coached at Dayton (1965-1970) and Colorado State (1971).

Dartmouth linebacker coach JOE MOGLIA has resigned to pursue a private business career. TOMMY LEE chosen offensive coordinator at Portland State. Lee was head coach at Willamette University (Oregon) from 1974 to 1982. DARRELL MOODY, offensive backfield coach at Louisiana State the past four years, named assistant head coach and running back coach at Appalachian State. Prior to the LSU job, Moody coached at North Carolina State and Southern Mississippi. Former Vanderbilt assistant coach JOE SANDERS has joined the Iowa State staff as defensive line coach. Sanders' previous stints were at Troy State (1975), Austin Peay State (1976-1978) and Middle Tennessee State (1979-1982).

STEVE NELSON appointed full-time assistant at John Carroll. Nelson was a graduate assistant coach in 1981 and 1982 and spent 1983 as a coach at Titusville High School in Pennsylvania. Nelson will be defensive coordinator at John Carroll.

Men's and women's golf MARY BETH MCGIRR resigned at Southern Illinois, effective May 15. McGirr will become a full-time teaching professional in Greensboro, North Carolina. Women's lacrosse MARGARET RONNING chosen at Wittenberg. Ronning, an assistant at Wittenberg in 1978 and 1979, was a member of the executive board of the U.S. Women's Lacrosse Association in 1978, 1979 and 1981.

Men's soccer JOE LUXBACHER, a player and later assistant coach at Pittsburgh, named at his alma mater, replacing LEO BEMIS, who reached the institution's mandatory retirement age of 65. Bemis, who started Pittsburgh's soccer program 30 years ago, will serve as head coach at Robert Morris.

Women's softball WILLMA "WILLIE" RUCKER named at Montclair State, replacing DONNA OLSON, who served on an interim basis last season. Rucker was an assistant coach at Trenton State from 1981 to 1983.

Women's softball assistant DORA HADDEN appointed at Morningside.

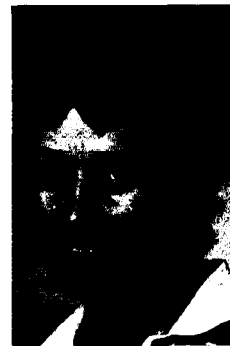

Women's swimming VICKI HAYS, coach at Harvard the past three seasons, resigned effective at the end of the current season.

past 10 years at Portland State, named at California, replacing CHRIS STANLEY, who resigned after nine years and a 155-19 record to enter private business. Piper's Portland State teams were third in the 1982 NCAA Division II championship and runner-up last year.

Women's volleyball assistant TINOREYES JR. resigned at Southern Illinois.

Wrestling LONNY MOORE appointed at Ursinus.

STAFF

Physician DR. PHILLIP J. WOODWORTH, team physician at Ohio University the past 26 years, has resigned, effective at the end of spring football. Woodworth will continue his private practice in Athens.

Promotions assistant MELISSA NERONE, a 1983 California graduate, appointed to the new position of promotions assistant in the California women's athletics department.

NOTABLES

MIKE MILIDONIS, assistant women's gymnastics coach at Michigan, named assistant technical director for the U.S. men's gymnastics team that will compete in the 1984 Summer Olympics. Eight Division I men's soccer coaches have been selected regional coaches of the year by the National Soccer Coaches Association: New England—BILL DOYLE, Providence; New York—DIETER FICKEN, Columbia; Pennsylvania/New Jersey/Delaware—BOB REASSO, Rutgers; Mid-Atlantic—BRUCE ARENA, Virginia; South—JOHN RENNIE, Duke; Midwest—GARY PALMI-SANO, Bowling Green State; Midwest—JOE CLARK, St. Louis; Far West—BILL COUPE, California. Women regional coaches of the year are: New England—DAVID LOMBARDO, Keene State; Northeast—LEN TSAN-TIRIS, Connecticut; South/Midwest—JOHN CHARLES, William and Mary; West—DANG PIBULVECH, Colorado College.

DEATHS

ALBERT WACHENHEIM JR., 81, founder of the Sugar Bowl, died February 1 in New Orleans. CHARLES "CHUCK" COOPER, 57, the first Black to play in the National Basketball Association, died February 5 in Pittsburgh. Cooper played at Duquesne and earned his master's degree from Minnesota after retiring from the NBA.

CORRECTIONS

Additional rights fees of $2,050,000 were made available for the 1984 Division I Men's Basketball Championship due to the new three-year contract with CBS-TV, not $2,000,500 as reported in the Executive Committee summary in the January 18 issue of The NCAA News. As reported in the January 18 issue, 60 percent will be distributed to the participating institutions and 40 percent to the Association for emergency needs. In addition, the amounts listed in the unit formula for distribution of net receipts to participating institutions for the 1984 Division I Men's Basketball Championship were incorrect. The unit formula for 1984 will be the same as in 1983; however, amounts will not be determined until completion of the 1984 tournament.

The NCAA Record section in the January 25 issue of The NCAA News listed Tom Groom as a new football assistant at Rutgers. Groom has been appointed a football assistant at Brown.

Briefly in the News

A former football player at Arkansas State University, Terry Gwin of Dallas, has established an academic-advancement program for ASU student-athletes by pledging $10,000 a year for the next 10 years. The Terry Gwin Athlete Fund will be administered through the university college for assessment, tutoring, counseling and advisement of students involved in athletics. Gwin lettered two years as a quarterback and running back, leading the team in rushing in 1965 and 1966 and in scoring and total offense in 1965. "I wanted to get involved in this program," Gwin said. "It is my desire to help see that every athlete who attends ASU has the chance to get his degree and then go out into the world with the opportunity to have success like I've had. My time at Arkansas State has been the highlight of my life, and I have nothing but the best memories from my football days there."

It will be the veteran Ray Meyer of DePaul University against Eddie Sutton of the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, as rival coaches in the May 5 Elks/Basketball Hall of Fame Collegiate All-Star Game in Indianapolis. Twenty outstanding college players will be selected to play in the classic as a benefit for the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame. The game will be the final coaching assignment for Meyer, who retires at the end of the current season. Sutton has the highest winning percentage (.794) in Southwest Athletic Conference history. A movie by two Indiana natives who now reside in California will feature the Indiana University, Bloomington, swim team. The $3 million project will be filmed in Indiana this fall and will be entitled "Diving In."

Texas A&M University golfer David Jones, a junior from Missouri City, Texas, made two holes-in-one on the same round January 30 during a qualifying round for the Aggies' team. On the back nine, he ached the 180-yard par 3 No. 12 with a two-iron shot; on the front nine, he sank a 165-yard shot using a four-iron. He finished with a one-over par 73. The United States Olympic Committee has received the United States Swimming Award, the sport's highest honor for outstanding contribution to swimming. The Argyros Foundation has contributed an in-state baseball scholarship of $5,000 per year for the next four years to the University of Washington. The scholarship will be awarded to student-athletes who exhibit outstanding character and citizenship, are highly motivated academically and athletically, possess outstanding leadership and teamwork traits, and are eligible according to NCAA, Pacific-10 Conference and institution regulations, according to Milo R. Lude, athletics director.

Daugherty, Tatum and 15 players named to hall of fame

Two of the nation's best known coaches and 15 former college and professional stars recently were elected to the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame.

The coaches—Hugh “Duffy” Daugherty of Michigan State and the late Jim Tatum of Oklahoma, Maryland and North Carolina—will be honored at the annual hall of fame dinner December 4 at the Waldorf Astoria in New York, along with former all-America players Jackie Jensen, California; Monsignor George V. Kerr, Boston College; Emil “Six Yard” Sitko, Notre Dame; and Johnny Bright, Drake.

Former collegiate standouts Bob Griese, Purdue quarterback, 1963-66; Joe Greene, North Texas State tackle, 1965-68; Lance Alworth, Arkansas halfback, 1959-61; Warren Amling, Ohio State guard/tackle, 1944-46; Sam Chapman, California halfback, 1935-37; Holly Donan, Princeton tackle, 1949-50; Bill Hartman, Georgia back, 1934-37; Doug Kenna, Mississippi back in 1941 and Army back from 1942 to 1944; Bobby Reynolds, Nebraska halfback, 1949-52; Joe Romig, Colorado guard, 1958-61, and Chuck Taylor, Stanford guard, 1940-42, also will be honored at the dinner.

Daugherty coached Michigan State for 19 years after serving as an assistant to Biggie Munn at Syracuse and Michigan State. He compiled a record of 109-69-5, and his 1965 and 1966 teams were unbeaten during the regular season and won the Big Ten Conference championship both years. Daugherty was named coach of the year in 1955 after an 8-1 season and a victory in the Rose Bowl.

Daugherty has retired to Santa Barbara, California, where he and former Oklahoma coach Bud Wilkinson are co-directors of the Champion Coach of the Year Clinics, held under the auspices of the American Football Coaches Association.

Hugh “Duffy” Daugherty

Tatum died in 1958 at the age of 45, after compiling a record of 100-35-7. Tatum was a tackle for coach Carl Snavely at North Carolina and later served as his assistant at Cornell in 1936.

Tatum became head coach at North Carolina in 1942. After a 5-2-2 season, Tatum enlisted in the Navy and was assigned to the Iowa preflight school, where he was line coach under hall of famer Don Faurot. The team finished second in the nation in the 1943 Associated Press poll.

Tatum also coached the Jacksonville Naval Air Station team before his discharge. He became head coach at Oklahoma in 1946, compiling an 8-3 record, and then coached at Maryland from 1947 to 1955, where his teams went 73-15-4.

He returned to North Carolina in 1956 and compiled a 14-15-1 record over the next three seasons before contracting the fever that took his life. North Carolina's 6-4 record in 1957 was the school's first winning season in eight years.

Jensen, a fullback who was dubbed California's “Golden Boy,” is the only person to play in the World Series, the College World Series, the Rose Bowl and the East-West Shrine game. He played major league baseball for 11 years with the New York Yankees, Washington Senators and Boston Red Sox and was the American League's most valuable player in 1958. He died of a heart attack in 1982 at the age of 52.

Kerr, a priest in Weymouth, Massachusetts, died last year at the age of 63 after a lengthy illness. He previously served as an assistant to Richard Cardinal Cushing in Boston and was chaplain of the Massachusetts House of Representatives for nearly a quarter of a century.

Kerr excelled as a Boston College guard for three years, and his outstanding performance in a 19-13 Sugar Bowl victory over Tennessee in 1941 earned him a place on the all-time Sugar Bowl team. Kerr also lettered in basketball and baseball.

Sitko was only 5-8 but was a powerful fullback at Notre Dame and later played with the Chicago Cardinals and San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League. He averaged six yards per carry in helping Notre Dame compile a record of 36-0-2 during his four-year career. He died in 1973 of a heart attack at age 50.

Bright led the nation in total offense in 1949 and 1950 and gained 5,903 yards in three varsity seasons at Drake. He was drafted in the first round by the Philadelphia Eagles but signed with Calgary of the Canadian Football League, where he went on to become one of the league's all-time greats. Bright, who died last December at the age of 53, served as principal of D. S. MacKensie junior high school in Edmonton, Alberta, at the time of his death.

Griese, who was runner-up for the 1966 Heisman Trophy, played 14 seasons with the Miami Dolphins of the NFL. He is in the investment business and also serves as a football analyst for NBC Sports.

Greene, who became one of the NFL's best-known players, won all-pro honors six times with the Pittsburgh Steelers. He now is in the restaurant business in Dallas and serves on North Texas State's Board of Regents.

Alworth, the first player from the old American Football Conference to be inducted into the pro football hall of fame, helped Arkansas post a 25-8 record and win one outright and two shared conference titles in his three varsity seasons. He is president of his own company in San Diego, California.

Amling, a veterinarian for ranch and farm operations in Ohio, also lettered in basketball at Ohio State.

Chapman starred in football and baseball at California and played 11 seasons in the major leagues with the Philadelphia Phillies and Cleveland Indians. He currently is an air-pollution inspector for the Bay Area Quality Management District in San Francisco.

Donan, an insurance account executive in New York, was a big reason for Princeton's domination of the Ivy League in 1949 and 1950.

Hartman was captain of the 1937 Georgia team and was an assistant at his alma mater after playing one year of professional football. He has been Georgia's “volunteer” kicking coach since 1972 while working in the insurance business.

Kenna, one of Mississippi's all-time prep sports greats, was president of his class, cadet captain and regimental commander at West Point, where he played on the 1944 national-championship team. He is a partner with G. L. Ohrstrom and Co. in New York.

Pacific maintains high admissions standards while competing in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association men's and women's sports programs. Eight competitive sports are offered to men while six sports are offered to women. The University is a member of the NCAA and competes in Division I-A in football and Division I in all other sports.

The position involves major responsibility for related staff, faculty, academic programs, and athletic facilities. To ensure effective communication to various constituent groups, it is essential that broad contact be maintained with students, faculty, staff, alumni, program supporters and the community.

Candidates must have strong administrative proficiency and a commitment to the highest standards and values of amateur athletics in developing a comprehensive intercollegiate, intramural and instructional program for men and women. The Department of Physical Education and Recreation offers courses leading to the Bachelor of Arts, and the Master of Arts degree in Physical Education or Recreation. Candidates with an earned doctorate or equivalent experience are preferred.

Salary is commensurate with qualifications and experience. Benefits include one month vacation, group health and dental, retirement and disability insurance. Applications must be received no later than March 15, 1984. Send letter of application and resume to:

LAOOC formalizes agreement

The Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee has signed a $3 million agreement with a 16-nation bloc of communist countries for television rights to the 1984 Summer Olympics.

The contract formalizes an agreement reached last August. The Soviet Union has postponed signing the agreement since that time. Other countries involved in the contract include East Germany, Cuba, Yugoslavia and North Korea.

The $3 million price tag pales in comparison to the $225 million paid by ABC for American television rights.

Sports Time approaching debut

Sports Time, an all-sports pay cable television network, will debut April 3 in a 15-state area covering more than six million cable subscribers.

The network is a joint venture between Anheuser-Busch, Multimedia and Telecommunications. Programming already announced includes college basketball from the Big Eight, Ohio Valley, Mid-American Athletic and Midwestern City Conferences. Major league baseball games of the St. Louis Cardinals, Kansas City Royals and Cincinnati Reds also will be carried.

The network's operations headquarters will be in St. Louis, while production studios will be in Cincinnati. The 15-state area covers most of the Midwest.

ESPN viewership base growing

According to figures compiled by the A. C. Nielsen Company in December, ESPN now can be seen in 29.3 million American homes, maintaining ESPN's ranking as the nation's largest cable network. It also means the network can be viewed in 35 percent of the country's homes.

Beginning March 1, ESPN also will be available in Canada. First Choice, a Canadian pay television service, will provide up to 14 hours a week of ESPN programming, selected from those events to which ESPN owns Canadian distribution rights.

Systems join regional network

Home Sports Entertainment, a Southwest sports cable network, has announced agreements with eight cable systems.

The acquisitions represent an increase of 150,000 homes, bringing the network's available basic subscriber base to 450,000. All eight systems are in Texas, including two in the Houston area and a Galveston system.

Launched in January 1983, HSE provides a five-state region with a package of professional and collegiate sports programming, including Southwest Athletic Conference football, basketball and baseball. Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference, Western Athletic Conference and Southeast Conference basketball also is carried, along with collegiate tennis and gymnastics.

Mike White, University of Illinois, Champaign; Ed Emory, East Carolina University; Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M University; Jimmy Johnson, Oklahoma State University, and Bobby Ross, University of Maryland, College Park.

Charles McClendon, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, also will address the media during the event.

The first of three coaches' panels will consist of Dempsey, Ross and Schnellenberger. It will meet Monday morning. The second panel will consist of Emory, Pell and Sherrill and will follow the first panel.

After lunch, a panel of Edwards, James, Johnson and White will convene. Late Monday afternoon, all of the coaches will be available for interviews.

Hindman retires at Ohio State

Hugh D. Hindman, athletics director at Ohio State University since 1977 and chair of the NCAA Football Television and Football Rules Committees, has announced his retirement effective June 30, ending a 21-year career at Ohio State.

He was an associate director of athletics at Ohio State for seven years before becoming athletics director, and he previously had been an assistant football coach for Woody Hayes for seven years.

Hindman, a native of Columbus, Ohio, and a graduate of Miami (Ohio) University, coached successfully at the high-school level before becoming a line coach at Ohio University in 1958. He served in that position for five seasons before moving to Ohio State.

A reception and Western-style barbecue are scheduled for the coaches and media February 27.

Tuesday morning, the media and coaches will meet with football officials Vance Carlson of the Big Eight Conference, Bert Ackermann of the Southeastern Conference and Buddy Coleman of the Southwest Athletic Conference to discuss 1984 rules changes and other officiating topics.

The preview will end at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday.

NCAA to produce games for TV from basketball championships

Selected games of the 1984 NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships not televised by CBS Sports will be produced by NCAA Productions.

David R. Gavitt, NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee chair, and Nora Lynn Finch, NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee chair, made the announcement.

"NCAA Productions will televise several key men's games for the eighth consecutive year, highlighted by six regional semifinal games not carried by CBS Sports," Gavitt said. "Twenty-five games will be available for sale to over-the-air stations in areas that have interest in the participating teams."

Selected games covered by NCAA Productions also will be distributed to the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network for exclusive national cable television coverage.

CBS Sports, which owns exclusive live, domestic rights to televise the men's championship through 1987, plans to continue its coverage of this NCAA event, concluding with the telecast of the national semifinals March 31 and final April 2 at the Kingdome in Seattle, Washington.

Coverage by CBS Sports also will include all four regional finals—two Saturday, March 24 (East and Midwest), and two Sunday, March 25 (Midwest and West)—selected first-round telecasts Saturday, 15, and Friday, March 16; all second-round telecasts Saturday, March 17, and Sunday, March 18, and selected regional semifinal telecasts Thursday, March 22, and Friday, March 23.

Six regional semifinal games Thursday March 22 (three), and Friday, March 23 (three); five opening-round games Tuesday, March 13, and 14 first-round games Thursday, March 15, and Friday, March 16, also will be available through NCAA Productions.

CBS Sports will televise the women's championship game for the third consecutive year Sunday, April 1, from UCLA's Pauley Pavilion. CBS has exclusive rights to the women's final through 1987.

NCAA Productions will televise the West regional final Saturday, March 24; the Midwest or Midwest regional final Sunday, March 25, and the national semifinals Friday, March 30, on the Satellite Program Network. A final determination on the March 25 telecast will be made March 18 or 19. These games also will be available for sale to over-the-air stations in the areas that have interest in the participating teams.

"The additional national exposure on SPN is another exciting step forward in the growth of the women's championship," Finch said. "The telecasts by NCAA Productions will enhance the coverage by CBS Sports in showing the exciting caliber of competition in women's basketball."

NCAA Productions televised 24 games of the 1983 men's championship, and the national semifinals of the 1983 women's championship.

James W. Shaffer, NCAA director of media services, is executive producer for NCAA Productions telecasts and will administer station negotiations and clearances from the national office. Jennifer A. Boyer, NCAA productions coordinator, and Cheryl L. Levick, assistant director of communications, will help administer NCAA Productions telecasts.

in the late 1970s, be reestablished.

• Asked the Special Committee on Financial Assistance to Student-Athletes to consider permitting an institution to provide financial aid beyond the five-year period currently specified in NCAA legislation to assist a former student-athlete in completing a degree.

• Favored some form of drug-testing program. The committee identified drug abuse—whether real or perceived—as having long-term implications for the integrity of intercollegiate athletics.

• Agreed to continue monitoring criticisms of NCAA sports committees, noting that the issue of sports-committee accountability represents a potential source of future conflict within the membership. The committee also suggested that consideration be given to a shorter term of service on sports committees, that there be greater communication between sports committees and the coaches associations in the sport, and that institutions be urged to fund involvement of their women coaches in women's coaches associations.

• Emphasized that high school students and coaches should be alerted to the new provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(j) that become effective August 1, 1986.

• Agreed to consider in its June meeting a possible recommended policy encouraging both institutions and coaches to fulfill their contractual obligations to each other.

• Favored an earlier recommendation of the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education that essential portions of the NCAA Manual be excerpted in a small booklet or booklets for distribution specifically to coaches.

All of the committee's recommendations are subject to review by the NCAA Council in its April meeting. The committee's summer meeting is June 21-22 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Football report complete

For the second consecutive year and third time in the past four years, there were no direct fatalities attributable to football at the college level, according to an annual survey of football injury research sponsored in part by the NCAA.

The survey, just completed, indicated that four amateur players all at the high school level—died during the 1983 season from injuries directly related to football. Another nine players, including three at the college level, died indirectly from football. Seven of those nine died of heart failure.

A complete report on the survey, conducted by Frederick O. Mueller and Carl S. Blyth of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, will appear in the February 22 issue of The NCAA News. In addition to the fatality study, a report on catastrophic injuries in 1983 also will be included in the next issue.

Curtis Cup team selected

The United States Golf Association has named eight women amateur golfers—five of whom are competing on the collegiate level—to represent the United States in the 23rd Curtis Cup Match at the Honourable Company of Edinburgh Golfers in Muirfield, Scotland, June 8-9. They will compete against a team from Great Britain and Ireland.

The U.S. team includes two players with previous Curtis Cup experience and six newcomers to international competition. Team captain is Phyllis "Tish" Preuss of Colorado Springs, Colorado. Preuss was a member of five Curtis Cup teams between 1962 and 1970 and was runner-up in the 1961 U.S. Women's Amateur Championship.

Collegiate members of the team are Heather Farr, Arizona State University; Penny Hammel, University of Miami (Florida); Jody Rosenthal, University of Tulsa; Mary Anne Widman, Duke University, and Dana Howe, University of New Mexico.

Rounding out the team is Joanne Pacillo, a recent graduate of Stanford University who will make her first Curtis Cup appearance; Anne Sander, who will be making an American record seventh appearance, and Lancy Smith, a five-time selection.

Hammel won the 1983 NCAA Women's Golf Championships, while Rosenthal finished third.

The Curtis Cup Match has been conducted biennially since 1932, with the site alternating between the United States and Great Britain. The United States won 14½-3½ at the Denver Country Club in 1982. The victory was the 18th for the United States and the 12th in a row. Two matches have ended in ties. Muirfield also was the host club of the 1952 match.
