'82-'83 a year of growth in men's, women's sports

The 1982-83 academic year was one of growth for both men's and women's sports at NCAA member institutions, according to participation and sponsorship data reviewed by the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee in its February meeting.

Comparing the 1982-83 participation totals—as reported by member institutions on their annual institutional information forms—with those of 1981-82, the total number of participants in NCAA-recognized sports increased 8.9 percent for women and 5.85 percent for men.

The 1982-83 men's total was 176,822 participants, compared to 167,055 a year earlier. There were 78,027 women participating in NCAA sports in 1982-83, compared to 71,650 in those same sports the year before.

Of the 19 men's sports, only four declined in total participation from 1981-82 to 1982-83—fencing, rifle, outdoor track and volleyball. The other 15 increased, led by a jump of 4,530 participants in football.

Only three of 15 women's sports declined in total numbers—fencing, field hockey and gymnastics. Indoor track increased by 1,727 participants to lead the 12 sports that showed gains.

The committee also studied average squad sizes, noting that some of the growth in aggregate participation totals is a result of more institutions joining the Association. But the growth also was documented in terms of average squad size, with 14 of the 19 men's sports showing increases and nine of the 15 in the women's listing.

Among the men's sports, the biggest gainers in average squad size were football (up 6.97 participants per sponsoring institution), gymnastics (4.8), ice hockey (4.32), skiing (2.8), baseball (2.73) and water polo (2.71).

The five sports with smaller squad sizes were rifle (down 3.09), fencing (1.43), swimming (1.01), outdoor track and volleyball. The latter two declined by less than one person per squad.

In the women's category, the nine showing increases were led by skiing (up 4.23 per squad), soccer (3.44), indoor track (3.08) and golf (1.0). None of those with smaller average squad sizes—fencing, field hockey, gymnastics, tennis, outdoor track and volleyball—lost as much as one per squad.

Ruling favors Grove City

The Supreme Court has ruled 6-3 that the Federal government does not have Title IX jurisdiction over all of the programs offered by Grove City College because several of its students receive Federally funded Pell Grants.

The court reached its decision February 28 after a six-year battle in the lower courts between the college and the U.S. Department of Education

The lower courts had ruled that the entire college was subject to Title IX because of the Federal aid, but the Supreme Court held Title IX applies only to the specific program receiving the aid; in this case, Grove Citv's financial aid program.

The court rejected claims that Pell Grants constitute aid to the institution as a whole because Federal funds received by one program free funds for use elsewhere or are equivalent to nonearmarked direct grants, saying that it had found "no persuasive evidence suggesting that Congress intended that the department's regulatory authority follow Federally aided students from classroom to classroom, building to building, or activity to activity."

Grove City accepts no direct aid from the Federal government. However, the court ruled that the Pell Grants received by its students to help defray their educational costs constitute Federal assistance to the college that triggers application of Title IX.

Washington, D.C., counsel for the NCAA said that under the terms of the decision, Federal aid to students does not provide a basis for Title IX jurisdiction over other programs offered by a college, such as the athletics program, but that athletics grants are likely to be viewed as a part of the financial aid program and thus be considered subject to Title IX when that program is Federally See Ruling, page 20

I-AA regional positions on Commission set

The final Division 1-AA regional positions on the NCAA Presidents' Commission were filled this week as Edward B. Fort, chancellor of North Carolina A&T State University, and Peter Likins, president of Lehigh University, were elected to serve.

Chief executive officers in the Division I-AA South region chose Fort over Maj. Gen James A. Grimsley Jr., president of The Citadel, while Division I-AA East CEOs elected Likins in a contest with John A. DiBiaggio, president of the University of Connecticut.

Meanwhile, the presidential nominating committee met Tuesday (February 28) in Chicago and developed a slate of 31 candidates to complete the first Presidents' Commission.

"All candidates selected by the nominating committee must be contacted to determine if they will serve," Robert Q. Marston, president of the University of Florida and chair of the nominating committee, explained. "Therefore, there will be no announcement of the committee's slate until all have been contacted and replacements have been selected for anyone choosing not to serve."

Once those contacts have been made, a mail ballot will be sent to chief executives of all NCAA member institutions. Members of each division will vote only for representatives of that division.

Fort and Likins join Eugene M. Hughes, president of Northern Arizona University, and J. C. Powell, president, Eastern Kentucky University, as the Division I-AA regional representatives on the Commission.

Named earlier to represent the nine Division I-A conferences were Duane Acker, Kansas State University, Big Eight Conference; Glen R. Driscoll, University of Toledo, Mid-American Athletic; I. M. Heyman, University of California, Berkeley, Pacific-10; Stanley E. McCaffrey, University of the Pacific, Pacific Coast Athletic Association; Herbert H. Reynolds, Baylor University, Southwest Athletic; John W. Ryan, Indiana University, Bloomington, Big Ten; Otis A. Singletary, University of Kentucky, Southeastern; John B. Slaughter, University of Maryland, College Park, Atlantic Coast, and Donald Veal, University of Wyoming, Western Athletic.

Academics are No. 1 priority at St. Louis

By Dave Senay

St. Louis University Page One

The kingpin in athletics is called "Doctor," as is his boss. The swim coach is also called "Doctor," and the soccer coach could be called "Your Honor."

The common thread through these titles is that they were earned through academic achievement. And that is the point. Since Lawrence Preo, Richard Beeson and barrister Joe Clarke have joined St. Louis University athletics, they have put their athletes on notice that academics are a No. 1 priority. In short, they are keeping the "student" in the term "studentathlete.

Helping matters are Rick Bender, faculty representative to the NCAA, who appropriately has a Ph.D. in education, and Bruce Toulmin, educational coordinator for basketball, who has a master's in psychiatric social work. The two make a potent pair when it comes to discovering early the root of academic problems.

"Once I took the appointment," says Bender, "a faculty member commented that 'now you'll have to learn to turn your back.' I said, 'No way,' and I'm not.

'No one is playing any sport here who we don't think can get a degree from here. Last year, we cut six players from four different teams because, as students, they weren't performing, and we felt that athletics was an impediment to their progress academically."

Tom McGinnis, dean of academic advising, who often is cast in the role of the villain in academic/athletic matters, is happy with the new emphasis on academics. "The new leadership has brought with it a new philosophy for athletics. They definitely emphasize that although the athletics department is important, we are first and foremost a university." he said.

"Clearly, they have made it an objective that athletes are students first. I am delighted.'

This past October 31, Preo, director of athletics, circulated a letter built largely upon figures derived from statistics by Bender. The letter mentioned that the cumulative grade-point average for student-athletes in the eight fall sports was 2.930 out of 4.000. What that letter did not go on to say was that of the 79 athletes involved, 36 had a 3.000 or above. Of these, 17 were above 3.500; and four had perfect 4.000 GPAs.

In spite of the encouraging figures, Bender worries that not enough commitment has been made by all the faculty to academic advising.

"Except for basketball, our coaches are part-time; and some are not otherwise part of the St. Louis University community.

Columnary Craft

So, much of the burden of watching athletes' academics falls on faculty advisers.

"I think in the past, some faculty members have fallen short, by and large for a couple of reasons: past paternalism, that is, not accepting responsibility, and low office hours.

Toulmin sees another problem compounding the strain put on student-athletes. "They arrive here not knowing they will be subjected to contradictory messages. While we ask them to represent us athletically, and they give much of themselves to that cause, we then turn around and tell them that they can be treated no differently than any other student. They are often caught between athletic obligations and academic requirements."

This sensitivity of Toulmin's is a product of his effort to find out what the total educational experience of the athlete is.

"Another large part of giving students a positive learning experience comes from taking preventive measures. We now are devising tests to measure recruits' study skills, personality traits and career goals to discover if students can really cut it here. I think we can avoid a lot of problems that way," says

Toulmin also says that the student-athlete often is a victim of a lack of awareness of the requirements of college life. "In the past, student-athletes seemed unaware because everything was done for them. Part of the problem is making them accountable for their schedules and performances.'

To help heighten his players' awareness of the requirements of academia, basketball coach Rich Grawer contracted with Metropolitan College on a special needs basis to have the college supply a course on "Orientation to the Academic Process." The course includes guidelines on study habits and familiarizes students with the support resources offered by the

But no matter how informed the student-athletes are, they can sometimes get in over their heads. Bender hopes that advisers will take into account the students' scheduling demands. "In working with the athlete, such as in scheduling classes, the adviser should take into account that the athlete misses classes when representing the university while on the road. However, no athlete is to miss class because of practice. If possible, classes should not be taken at that time. If they must be so scheduled, the class comes first, the practice second. If a course requires attendance at every class and the athlete would be unable to meet this requirement, the student must decide between the two-athletics or the course."

This "no practice during class" approach is echoed by the

"We have a system of checks and balances such as study halls and rules that state that a missed class will cause a kid to be held out of practice," says basketball coach Grawer.

Joey Clarke encourages the guys to study. "I never schedule practice when a kid has a class. If a kid has a big exam coming up or just needs to put some extra time on his studies, I'll give him practice off.

"It's important for the players to do well, not just to stay eligible, but for themselves," Clarke adds.

In the case of the basketball team, Toulmin has made it his business to keep an eye on each player's academic performance and load. Last fall, he sent a letter of introduction to the faculty and, at the same time, received the permission of the players to meet with respective faculty advisers to discuss problems or scheduling. About 85 percent of the faculty responded positively.

"I think the faculty appreciates this approach," he said. "No more crisis intervention."

Questions/Answers

Readers are invited to submit questions to this column. All questions pertaining to the NCAA and intercollegiate athletics will be answered in future issues of The NCAA News as space permits.

Q. How does an NCAA member institution change its division membership?

 ${\sf A}$. A member may request a change in division membership by petitioning the NCAA Classification Committee. A member of Division I or Division III may petition to change its membership to Division II, and a member of Division II may petition to change its membership to either Division I or Division III. The institution should notify the NCAA national office on the prescribed form by June 1. If the Classification Committee determines that the institution has met all applicable membership criteria, as set forth in Bylaw 11, of the division to which it intends to transfer and has conformed with other bylaw requirements of the division for two years preceding June 1, the member will be transferred to the new division effective September 1 or a subsequent September 1 that the institution desires.

Colorado adopts new standards

The University of Colorado Board of Regents, in hopes of raising the quality of students entering the university and improving the quality of secondary-school education, has adopted new admissions standards that will go into effect in 1988.

Incoming students will be required to have had four years of English, three years of college-preparatory mathematics, three years of natural science, two years of social science and two years of a foreign language.

Students can be admitted under special circumstances if they agree to make up the courses they have not completed. Colleges within the university also can require additional subjects for admission.

Engineering enrollment cut back

To ease the strain on faculty and facilities, the college of engineering at Texas A&M University will limit enrollment next fall.

Provost Gordon Eaton said the new plan is expected to cut engineering enrollment 20 percent by 1987 by means of a draft in which engineering departments will select qualified students who express an interest in particular fields.

Freshmen enrolling in 1984 will take general math and science courses their first year. Students having passed the required courses with a gradepoint average of at least 2,000 will be able to list their three choices for engineering study. Each department then will select the students it can

Faculty protests special courses

Almost two-thirds of the faculty members at Rice University arc protesting by petition against the introduction of "sheltered" courses allegedly designed to help student-athletes.

The petition was signed by more than 200 faculty members and states that the professors believe that playing college football is "at most, an ancillary activity of the university. Accordingly, we do not believe that special curricula or courses should be introduced nor special admissions standards be maintained for the sake of the athletic program."

The school's board of governors has announced plans to introduce about six special classes that would be open to all students but would be especially beneficial to athletes. One objective of the courses is to help improve the performance of Rice's athletic teams.

Faculty members also have rejected a move by Francis Loewenheim, professor of history, to set up an admissions standard that would apply to all students, beginning with the class of 1992.

Grade inflation may be ending

Grade inflation in high schools, which began in the 1970s, may be a thing of the past, according to a survey conducted by the University of California, Los Angeles, and the American Council on Education.

The survey showed that grades in high school are declining, although a majority of students in the West believe high school grading is too easy. The percentage of students reporting A or A-minus averages in high school dropped for a third straight year, and C averages increased.

Grades of college freshmen in 1983 still were higher than those of 1969 freshmen, when C students outnumbered A students by a margin of more than 2 to 1. The survey was based on a statistically adjusted sample of more than 254,000 freshmen entering two- and four-year colleges and universities

One-third of the students from the West reported having an A or A-minus grade average in high school compared to only 20 percent nationwide. Students in the West were less likely to have taken rigorous courses of study recommended by last year's National Commission on Excellence in Education report, the survey showed.

Proposal No. 35 funded by grants

The American Council on Education has announced that the funding of its effort to reorganize the operating structure and management of the NCAA through Proposal No. 35 at the 1984 NCAA Convention came from grants by the Exxon Education Foundation and the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation.

This was reported in the ACE's January 27 newsletter, Higher Education and National Affairs, and was explained further in a 3½-page February 7 letter by ACE President J. W. Peltason to the ACE membership. The letter, a detailed explanation of the ACE's extended involvement in intercollegiate athletics issues, expressed appreciation for the Exxon and Hewlett financial contributions and said: "I... wanted to assure those members who may not have agreed with all of our activities in this area that the costs we have incurred have been funded by foundation grants and not from membership dues. We acknowledge with gratitude the generosity of . . . (the foundations) and, at the same time, exonerate them from any responsibility for what was

Quality of students not declining

The quality of students in science, engineering and the humanities has not declined in recent years, according to two surveys of senior academic officials at almost 500 institutions. Several hundred deans say the quality of students is better than it was five years ago.

The surveys, funded by two Federal agencies, were conducted by the Higher Education Panel of the American Council on Education

Most deans said that although there was no significant change in the quality of humanities students from 1976-77 to 1981-82, the most able students are shifting away from the humanities.

About 40 percent of the science and engineering educators reported a shift by students into their fields because of better job prospects.

The report said 62 percent of the deans reported no significant change in the quality of humanities students, 22 percent reported a significant decline and 16 percent believe there has been significant improvement.

About 60 percent of the deans said there had been no change in the quality of science and engineering undergraduates, about 25 percent reported significant improvement and nine percent saw significant decline.

Pacific-10 Conference needs postseason basketball tournament

By Blaine Newnham

After watching their football teams blitzed by everyone from Florida to Fresno State, the Pacific-10 Conference presidents decided recently to give them a fighting chance from

A pretty dynamic decision for the Pac-10. It only took the presidents 10 years and a series of prestigesapping defeats to realize you can't keep winning when you have five fewer scholarships than everyone

But it was too much to expect the presidents to also vote for a Pac-10 basketball tournament. In this case. the league is probably only five or six years behind the times, not 10.

Look for the Pac-10 to vote for a season-ending basketball tournament about the time the Atlantic Coast Conference, or the like, has found a new and better way to do business.

It has been 15 years since there has been any public sale of tickets to an ACC postseason basketball tournament. Each school in the ACC gets 2,000 tickets ($70 per season ticket) and those go quickly to the fattest of the cats. Folks who donate $500 a year at some schools don't even get a chance to put their hands on a ticket

The conference schools, obviously, use the lure of tournament tickets to drive up donations. In addition, NBC pays big bucks to televise the final game of the tournament, and all four sessions are tied up in another lucrative TV contract.

Only the Final Four draws more attention during the college basketball

In the past five or six years, every major conference except the Pac-10, the Big Ten and the Western Athletic has gone to the season-ending tournament as a method of picking the league's official representative to the NCAA tournament and of making

The WAC is ready to go to a tournament, but the Big Ten and the Pac-10 remain intransigent.

The Big Ten has a reason. It is a league of large universities playing in mostly nonmetropolitan areas, areas where college basketball is king. Last year, the Big Ten lcd the NCAA in average attendance.

The Pac-10 has no excuse, other than its tradition of being dominated by UCLA and forever behind evervone else.

In recent years, various conferences have experimented with the 30-second clock. Not the Pac-10.

The Pac-10's coaches, athletics directors and faculty athletic representatives have continually voted 9-1 for a league tournament.

The league presidents last December voted 3-4-3 against such a proposal. You wonder, you really

For the second year in a row, the Pac-10 was down in attendance, also falling below the one-million mark for the second year in a row.

Big Ten teams last year averaged 11,499 per game; the Pac-10 averaged 6,179, for ninth place among the nation's conferences.

Pac-10 basketball is in deep trouble. Only UCLA and Oregon State consistently draw capacity crowds. Washington State has had large student audiences, and Oregon and Arizona were good draws before landing on hard times in the 1980s.

But this is a league that does business in Los Angeles, Phoenix, San Francisco and Seattle, not Iowa City, Madison and East Lansing.

The pros are winning all these skirmishes, and as attendance dwindles in the Pac-10, so does prestige and influence.

The ACC, Big Ten and Big East each had five teams invited to the NCAA tournament last year: the Pac-10 had two-UCLA and Washington State.

Many college basketball people around the country will tell you right now that the Pac-10 isn't even the best league in the West. The title probably belongs to the little Pacific Coast Athletic Association, with the likes of Fresno State, Cal State Fullerton, California-Irvine, Nevada-Las Vegas and Utah State.

The Pac-10 still lives in the shadow of John Wooden and the late J. D. Morgan, the two most responsible for the improbable UCLA dynasty that saw the Bruins win 10 NCAA championships in 13 years.

Near the end of Wooden's reign, the Pac-10 grew strong as a league. Southern Cal had outstanding teams with John Lambert and Gus Williams. Washington was similarly loaded with James Edwards, Lars Hansen, Larry Pounds and Clarence Ramsay. Oregon had Ronnie Lee and Greg Ballard. Lonnie Shelton led Oregon State, and Rich Kelley was the big man for Stanford.

But the league could only send one team to the NCAA tournament, and it was UCLA. When the rules were finally relaxed and the NCAA began accepting more teams, the Pac-10 should have moved for a league tournament.

UCLA said no. It still does. Every Bruin will tell you that it would be bad for his school to lose the automatic-qualifying berth now given the league champion.

Rubbish. Can you imagine North Carolina not getting invited to play in the NCAA tournament if it were to lose in the ACC tournament, as it did a year ago? Given they have good seasons, the North Carolinas, Kentuckys and the UCLAs always will be invited to the NCAA tourna-

The league tournament makes it possible for an upstart to join them. Last year, North Carolina State, which finished fourth in the league race, won the ACC tournament and then the NCAA tournament.

UCLA voted against the tournament again this year and so did California, Stanford and Arizona State, the latter three for academic reasons. The presidents didn't want basketball players missing any more days of classes than they already were.

Rubbish again. The proposed Pac-10 tournament would be played the final week of the regular season when most schools are already playing two league games. If the tournament followed seed, four teams would play one game that week, four others would play two, and two would play three games, or an average of fewer than two games per team that week.

Oregon, Washington State and Southern Cal voted for the tournament, while Washington, Arizona and Oregon State abstained in the voting. It will take eight positive votes for the Pac-10 to join the real world and have a season-ending tournament, a vehicle for promoting interest in almost every city and for giving college basketball a chance to challenge the pros.

Until then, Pac-10 gyms will rattle with an air of apathy. And only cable TV will save us.

Two teams vie for most-improved title

The race for the most-improved team in 1984 in Division I men's basketball will go down to the wire. It involves freshman-dominated Loyola (Maryland) and sophomoredominated Duke.

Loyola, under second-year coach Mark Amatucci, a 1974 Juniata graduate, heads into the Eastern College Athletic Conference Metro Conference tournament with a final regular-season record of 16-11, 10-6 in league play. That is a gain of 12½ games over last season's 4-24 finish (12 more victories and 13 fewer losses totals 25, then divide by two).

Duke, under fourth-year coach Mike Krzyzewski, 37, a 1969 Army graduate (where he played under Bobby Knight, current Indiana coach), stands 22-6 with two regularseason games remaining before the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. That is an improvement of 11 games over last year's final 11-17.

Last season was Amatucci's first as a head coach at a four-year college. He came directly to Loyola from Calvert Hall High School in Towson, Maryland. His 34-0 team in 1982 was named No. I nationally by Basketball Weekly, according to Loyola sports information director Terry Bowser. After his first-year 4-24 finish ("a humbling experience"), the fiery Amatucci decided to go all-out for a full-court, ball-stealing, man-for-man defense, going to a four-corner offense when he got the lead.

That did not suit 6-6 Kevin House, conference freshman of the year in 1983, who quit the team and transferred to Wagner.

Amatucci may now have the shortest Division I team in the country. He starts four freshmen. They are 6-5 Tommy Lee of Philadelphia; 6-3 David Gately of Baltimore; 6-1 Tom Gormley of Colwyn, a Philadelphia suburb, and 6-3 Aubrey Reveley of Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. The other starter is 6-4 senior Dave Urban of Pottstown, Pennsylvania. And get this—the top scorer at 16.4 is only 5-9 and comes off the bench. He is junior Maurice Hicks of New York City (Brother Rice High School).

The team is averaging more than 10 steals a game. Its nickname, appropriately, is Greyhounds. The Siena game February 25 (an 82-62 victory) was the last athletic event in 58-year-old Evergreen Gym. The team moves to a new facility next season.

Krzyzewski started his coaching career in the U.S. Army, where his first three teams won 58, lost 8. After a year as a graduate assistant under Knight at Indiana in 1974, he took over at Army, which had a 3-22 season in 1974. In his second season, he had a 20-game winner and in his third, Army's first bid to the National Invitation Tournament since 1970. Sophomores tour Europe

This season, Duke's top four scorers are sophomores -6-2 Johnny Dawkins, 6-8 Mark Alarie, 6-5 David Henderson and 6-8 Jay Bilas. Next are 6-7 junior Danny Meagher and 6-0 freshman Tommy Amaker, who leads the team in assists. Dawkins is second. Meagher is from St. Catherines, Ontario, Canada.

The four sophomores and four other Duke players toured Europe last August, playing seven foreign teams and visiting eight cities, including Paris, Monaco, Le Mans and Caen. "The trip gave our players a great experience, not only basketball-wise but for its educational value," Krzyzewski said. "They learned quickly to play together and depend on each other."

After a 1-4 conference start, Duke has won six of its past seven ACC games to move up to second place. After Duke come Texas-San Antonio, up 10 games; and three are up 9½ games—Temple, Northestern and

Texas-San Antonio is in its third season of varsity basketball, all in Division I and all under Don Eddy, a 200-game winner at Eastern Illinois before starting the program, now led by Derrick Gervin, brother of professional superstar George Gervin. Eddy is now on the verge of a 20-victory season.

Temple's John Chaney, a 200-game winner at Cheyney, is in his second season on the job and enjoying a 21-3 season with a healthy team. Granger Hall, a high scorer who played only five games before being injured a year ago, is back in high gear; and Terence Stansbury is having a high year.

The list includes many veteran big-winning coaches like Washington's Marv Harshman, 616 lifetime victories; Grambling's Fred Hobdy, 546 victories in 28 seasons (all at Grambling); UTEP's Don Haskins, a Henry Iba disciple, 416 (all at UTEP); New Mexico's Gary Colson (401); Texas Tech's Gerald Myers (265); Chancy (260); Eddy (245), and Miami's (Ohio) Darrell Hedric (212). Others with at least seven headcoaching seasons in the college ranks are Arizona's Lute Olson (199). Northeastern's Jim Calhoun (194), Northern Iowa's Jim Berry (180), Georgia Tech's Bobby Cremins (141, a protege of Frank McGuire), Krzyzewski (133), Bucknell's Charles Woollum (132) and Canisius' Nick Macarchuk (89).

The coach with the best current won-lost percentage in this group of 29 is Nolan Richardson, a Haskins protege, now at 92-27 for .773 over four years, all at Tulsa.

Not one coach in the group is in his first year as a head coach at a four-year college. However, of 21 new coaches in Division I, 14 now have a higher winning percentage

Three in the group with previous head-coaching experience at four-year colleges are in their first season on their current job. They are Olson, Oregon's Don Monson, who had a 100-41 record in five years at Idaho, and Kansas' Larry Brown, a big winner in the pro ranks who is in his third year in college coaching. The first two were at UCLA in 1980 and 1981. His college coach was North Carolina's Dean Smith (a Kansas graduate).

Those in their second year on their current jobs are Amatucci, Chaney, Pan American's Lon Kruger (a disciple of Kansas State's Jack Hartman), St. Louis' Rich Grawer and Virginia Military's Marty Fletcher, who played for Lefty Driesell at Maryland. Kruger, Grawer and Fletcher are also in their second year as a college head coach.

In their third year on the job are Eddy, Cremins, Richmond's Dick Tarrant, Southern Illinois' Allen Van Winkle, Creighton's Willis Reed (who played for Hobdy at Grambling), Jacksonville's Bob Wenzel, Appalachian State's Kevin Cantwell and Samford's Mike Hanks. All but Eddy and Cremins are also in their third season as a college head coach.

In their fourth year on the job are Krzyzewski, Colson, Richardson and George Mason's Joe Harrington, who was head coach one year at Hofstra before coming to George Mason.

Believe it or not . . .

A family face-off occurred recently when Alfred sophomore Allison Matthews was assigned to guard her sister, St. Lawrence senior Sue Matthews. Sue returned the favor when Allison's team had the ball. Perhaps because of familiarity with each other's style of play, the defensive strategy was very effective. Allison held her older sister to six points; Sue limited Allison to three. (Johnny Nelson, Alfred SID)

Sophomore center Glenda Teams (now there's a good basketball name) of Greensboro recently broke the school record for season rebounds with 238. She has also scored 20 consecutive free throws during the season. Teams has managed to maintain a steady standard of play; although she is at somewhat of a disadvantage—the 6-1 center has been playing with only one contact lens the past two weeks while awaiting the arrival of a specially ordered lens for the other eye. (Rundy Doss, Greensboro SID)

While on the subject of consecutive scoring marks, Virginia Wesleyan junior center Sabrina Moody, the national Division III leader in field-goal percentage, ran off a string of 20 consecutive baskets in two recent games. She connected on 17 of 18 attempts against St. Andrew's, making the last 15 in a row, and sank five consecutive baskets the next night against Methodist. (Mike Dunavant, Virginia Wesleyan women's basketball coach)

Millsaps' Bill Waits is the Division III leader in field-goal percentage at 73.6

South Carolina and Cincinnati seemed intent on wearing out the nets when they played in Carolina's Coliseum. The Lady Gamecocks and Lady Bearcats racked up 214 points, breaking the arena two-team singlegame scoring record for men and women. Other records were the combined 65 total fouls and 68 freethrow attempts, South Carolina won with 112 points, hitting 42 of 54 freethrow attempts. Cincinnati scored a school-record 68 points in the second half but ended up on the short end of the score with 102 points. (Brent Rutkowski, Cincinnati assistant SID)

Warm-ups can be dangerous

While basketball has been questioned as a "noncontact" sport, no one thinks of pregame warm-ups as dangerous—but do not tell that to Mississippi guard Andre Laird, one of four freshmen in the starting lineup. Running through drills at Alabama, Laird took a foot to the head from a 'Bama cheerleader performing a stunt at courtside. Laird suffered a mild concussion and entered the game only briefly in the second half. He still appeared groggy. Alabama won, and the cheerleader was credited with a TKO. (Rick VanBrimmer, Mississippi associate sports information director

Willie's little superstitions

Illinois-Chicago coach Willie Little is one of 21 Division I coaches in a first head-coaching season at the four-year level and probably leads the group in superstitions. They seem to be working, though, because the Flames are leading the Mid-Continent Conference, have won nine in a row and 13 of their past 15, with an 18-6 season record. Little, a 1971 graduate of Iowa Wesleyan: (1) keeps the same trainer with the team, home and away, until the Flames lose; (2) makes the players sit in the same seating arrangement during the pregame meal; (3) will not change his Flame tie pin; (4) uses the same knot in his suit tie; (5) will not step on any lines on the court, and (6) will not tape his pregame radio show at the hotel—he must wait until he reaches the gym. (Jim Schmidt, Illinois-Chicago SID)

Jeff's pregame warm-up

Not even Mother Nature can hold back Alaska-Anchorage's Jeff Martin, high-scoring 6-5 swingman from Oklahoma City. In the 12 hours before the Eastern Montana game, Anchorage received 18 inches of snow on top of 12 already on the ground. Martin jumped in his car at 5:45 p.m. for the normal 15-minute drive to the Sports Center for the 7:30 game. Three minutes later, he was stuck. Besides helping many

Bonnie Henrickson of St. Cloud State is among the Division II leaders in free-throw percentage other "stuckees" along the way, Martin got stuck six more times. He finally arrived shortly before the game, scored 25 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in a 79-66 victory (Tim McDiffett, Alaska-Anchorage SID) Richie's choice

Senior guard and captain Richie Micallef is Brooklyn's leading career scorer with more than 1,500 points. His two recorded songs are currently being played on New York radio stations and 20th Century-Fox may include both in the soundtrack of a movie now in production. It appears that Micallef may have to choose between music (he plays guitar) or continuing his basketball career overseas following graduation. (Howard Caufield, Brooklyn SID) Ouotes of the week

Bowling Green State coach John Weinert comparing a victory over second-place Ohio with an earlier loss to sixth-place Kent State: "We took the same shots against Ohio as we did against Kent State. Except against Kent State, they hit two old ladies in the first row." (Steve Shutt, Bowling Green SID)

C. W. Post senior center Mike Henderson celebrated his 23rd birthday by returning to the Pioneer lineup after a seven-game absence due to a sprained ankle. The sixth leading scorer in school history and a 60 percent field-goal shooter, Henderson missed a dunk in the victory over Dowling. Later, he said: "Missing a dunk on your birthday is like blowing out the candles on the cake and having the icing splatter over your girlfriend." (Bill Huffman, C. W. Post SID)

When Dayton center Ed Young banked in an eight-foot jumper with one second left to upset DePaul, 72-71, it was deja vu. "I had a dream about two weeks before this game,' he recalled. "Coach (Ray) Meyer was standing at midcourt waving to everybody, and then someone hit a shot at the end of the game to make us win by one point. Before the game when coach Meyer got a standing ovation from the crowd, I told Damon (teammate Damon Goodwin) 'Hey, Day, I've seen this before—we're going to win this game.' I don't think he paid any attention to me." (Doug Hauschild, Dayton SID)

After a 22-point first half by Eastern Kentucky freshman Antonio Parris, Morehead State coach Wayne Martin assigned forward Eddie Childress to guard Parris. The result—just two more points, due to a technical on the bench. Afterward, Childress, a fifth-year senior, told Martin he dedicated himself to work hard for Martin's father, recovering from sixhour surgery in which 31 gallstones were removed. Said Martin after the 65-60 victory: "That really meant a lot to me, to know that the players care that much." (Craig Bohnert, Morehead State SID)

Lacrosse Preview

Johns Hopkins ready to challenge Syracuse

By Timothy J. Lilley The NCAA News Staff

NCAA Division I men's lacrosse was dominated by offense last year, and the fans loved it. At Rutgers Stadium last May, 20,000 fans watched one of the game's traditional defensive powers, Johns Hopkins, square off against a Syracuse squad that seemingly could score at will.

It could be argued that two separate games were played that afternoon. Divided by halves, the different looks may have previewed the 1984 season.

For 30 minutes, Hopkins controlled play. A hard-pressing defense and an offense as good as any in the college game gave the Blue Jays an 8-4 half-time lead.

About eight minutes into the third period, Hopkins was up 12-5 and looked to be in control. Suddenly, as it had in the semifinals against Maryland, the Syracuse offense went into overdrive.

Ten minutes later, the score was tied at 13. Syracuse eventually won, 17-16, and claimed its first NCAA lacrosse championship. Much has happened since that battle, but the game seemed to reflect several tendencies that could characterize the 1984 season:

 Syracuse's offensive capabilities are second to none, and that should continue.

 Johns Hopkins consistently has one of the nation's top programs. Although surprised by the departure of head coach Henry Ciccarone, many college lacrosse followers believe that Hopkins'talent and depth, along with the stability provided by the selection of assistant coach Don Zimmerman as Ciccarone's replacement, will keep the Blue Jays on top.

•The game itself is thriving. The Syracuse offense provides evidence that the best long-stick defenses can be beaten. Many have called the 1983 Division I championship game the best ever. Many more contests like it probably will be decided before a new champion is crowned, in view of the talent and coaching available.

If Roy Simmons Jr. and his Syracuse team have their way, there will be no new champion; the title will stay in upstate New York. The Orangemen lost only once in 15 contests a year ago, and their offensive production in the NCAA championship certainly explains that success.

Most of the offense is back, including sparkplug Tim Nelson. With the departure of all the defensive starters, Simmons will need a strong attack in the early weeks.

The Orangemen have little time to prepare for a tough confrontation, as they travel to Loyola (Maryland) to play North Carolina in the season opener. Syracuse also will play Division III champion and local rival Hobart. The Statesmen have proven their ability to handle Division I competition.

Brad Kotz, most valuable player in last year's NCAA championship, will spearhead the scoring attack, with assistance from Nelson. Both juniors, Kotz scored 41 times last season, while Nelson had 56 assists and 27 goals.

Seniors Dave Desko and Randy Lundblad also will be important members of the offense.

If the defense can withstand the losses of Darren Lawlor and Travis Solomon, the Orangemen should have another outstanding season.

Ciccarone was cooperative with the media after the close loss to Syracuse. He left the media room at Rutgers Stadium and passed several Blue Jay boosters on his way to the locker room. "Don't worry, 'Chic,' you'll be back next year," they said. He will, but only as a fan.

Ciccarone decided to pursue a business venture a few months ago, handing over the most successful college program to Zimmerman.

Zimmerman will have four of the six double-figure goal scorers from 1983, and the defense should be as strong as ever. "We are a fairly young team, though, and we have a

"I believe we have to solidify our defense early. We'll have a new goalkeeper in Larry Quinn and a lot of young kids over there. I think we are strong throughout the lineup, but I know we need to get better in every area to be a good team as the year

Among the top Hopkins returners are Del Dressel, Peter Scott, John Krumenacker, 1984 captain Willy Odenthal and Brent Ciccarone. Several blue-chip freshmen have been added to the roster, too. Look for Craig Bubier, Tom Engelke, Bruce Chanenchuk, Brian Wood and Chris Wickwire to become important squad members. The defensive development likely will be built around John DeTomasso, a player Zimmerman called important in 1984.

In the Atlantic Coast Conference, North Carolina and Maryland lost a lot of experience to graduation. Virginia should be strong and may be the class of the league by the end

North Carolina's three-time all-America goalie Tom Sears, top attackmen Michael Burnett and David Wingate, and midfielders Peter Voelkel and Jeff Homire are gone.

Defenseman Randy Cox and midfielder Joey Seivold will anchor coach Willie Scroggs' team, and senior Gary Waters will take over in the Maryland lost eight of 10 starters and has a new coach—Dick Edell. The top seniors are on defense, so Doug Trettin, a sophomore, and Tony Olmert, a junior, will have to lead the offense.

Goalkeeper Kevin O'Leary should take some of the pressure off the defensive newcomers.

The Terps have a four-game, midseason stretch that includes a road trip to North Carolina, home games with Virginia and Navy, and a game at Johns Hopkins.

'83 champion Delaware has talent for a title season

The 1984 NCAA women's lacrosse season should be a blockbuster.

Last year's contenders still appear strong. Many of the stars of a year ago were underclassmen, and that year's experience likely will produce more excitement this season.

Many of the country's perennial powers have scheduled each other with conference-like regularity. In recent years, the most successful teams have managed to win at crucial times on their way to postseason

The most important question as 1984 unfolds might be, who will get ust at the right time?

Delaware, Temple, Northwestern and Penn State will be trying to find the ingredients for a championship

Last May, many forecasters expected Temple, the 1982 Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) national champion, or 1982 NCAA titlist Massachusetts to win the title in the finals at the University of Pennsylvania.

When the dust settled, Delaware had a national championship. The Fightin' Blue Hens remain in the spotlight this year.

Head coach Janet Smith has Karen Emas, the tournament's leading scorer and most outstanding player. She is one of nine letter winners returning from the team that upset Massachusetts and Temple en route to the

Kathleen Kochmansky, Northwestern

"I believe the strength of this team will be its passing game on offense and its player-to-player defense,' said Smith. "If anything, I would like to see us make those two areas even stronger. If we can increase our passing some and tighten up our defense, we should have another good year."

Delaware's regular-season schedule, like so many of the nation's top programs, resembles a postseason play-off bracket. Penn State, Temple and Maryland are the top opponents.

Temple, coached by Tina Sloan-Green, begins its season with Northwestern. The Lady Owls also will face Maryland, Rutgers, Penn State, Old Dominion, Massachusetts and Delaware—a rematch of the 1983 championship final.

"I have to believe we have one of the toughest schedules in the country." Sloan-Green observed. "And every team we face will be stronger than a year ago, just like we should be a better team. You just can't take any single game for granted."

Temple's team leaders are Marie Barret and Carol Schultz. All but Schultz scored in last year's NCAA tournament.

"We will be relatively inexperienced on defense," Green explained, "and I believe we need the most improvement defensively. I would like to see them become more consistent with their passing, too."

Graduation losses weakened Maryland's defense, but head coach Sue Tyler has three-year starter Mary Lynne Morgan, a senior goalkeeper, to stabilize the defense.

Junior Karen Trudel led the team in scoring in 1983, so Maryland's offense should not be weakened much. Midfielder Jackie Williams will be an asset, as will senior Celine Flynn on defense. Attacker Ansyla Fedec and defender Amy Patton are the best newcomers.

Northwestern seems to get better and better. The Wildcats will participate in only their third season of varsity action after a top-10 finish and trip to the NCAA play-offs in Junior all-America Kathleen Kochmansky scored 54 goals last season. Sophomore Lisa Griswold burned opposing goalies for 49 goals last season, and she collaborates with Kochmansky to give Northwestern one of the nation's most effective scoring punches.

Nine players return for coach Cindy Fimchal, including her top four point producers of a year ago. The schedule has been upgraded; with two varsity campaigns behind them, the third time may be a charm for the Wildcats.

Scoring should not worry Penn State. Seniors Betsy Williams (40) and Laurie Gray (48), along with junior Marsha Florio (68) and sophomore Beth Thompson (40), accounted for an impressive 196 goals last season; and those four totaled 95 assists.

"We have one of the most stable returning teams in the country," said head coach Gillian Rattray. "We have depth, and I won't need to stay with just 12 players."

Defensively, Penn State returns four starters. The Lady Lions' recruits include standouts Chris Vitale, Mary

Hobart sets sights on fifth straight Division III crown

Hobart is the class of Division III men's lacrosse, and Statesmen head coach Dave Urick will be preparing his team for a run at its fifth consecutive NCAA championship during the regular season.

Oh, there will be challengers. Roanoke, last year's runner-up; Washington (Maryland); Ohio Wesleyan; Rochester Institute of Technology, and Salisbury State will be strong.

But Hobart is in the midst of its own Division III dynasty. No other team has won the NCAA Division III Men's Lacrosse Championship. The Statesmen have lost only 10 games in that period; they beat 1982 Division I champion North Carolina to kick off the 1983 season, and they have a chance to make it two in a row when they meet 1983 Division I titlist Syracuse March 18 on Long Island.

Other Division I teams on the schedule are Massachusetts, Penn State, Cornell and C. W. Post, Six of the Statesmen's 12 games are against Division I schools.

The only question for Hobart seems to be whether Urick can replace Guy Van Arsdale, one of the best goal-keepers in the nation last season.

The major losses are on defense, most notably John Ednie, John Sipher and Scott Geise. The season opener at Syracuse certainly will test Hobart's rebuilding work, because Syracuse can score against the best.

Offensively, the Statesmen are loaded with veterans. Four returnees who accounted for 107 goals and 61 assists last year are Tom Grimaldi, Jim Holihan, Cal Harris and Marc Van Arsdale, Guy's brother.

The potential replacements for Guy Van Arsdale in goal are sophomores. Chuck Warren had an 8.9 goals-against average last season, while his challenger, Jim Hannon, gave up 11.8 goals per game.

The heir apparent to Van Arsdale's reputation as the best net minder in the division may be Bill Pilat of Roanoke, who recorded 199 saves last year. The Maroons reached the finals last season, but their offense has been weakened with the loss of record-setting scorers Paul Goldsmith and Sean Smith. Goldsmith had 12 goals in the play-offs, including six in an upset semifinal victory over Washington (Maryland), to set a Division III tournament record.

Seniors Willie Bennassi and Rocco

Hobart's Marc Van Arsdale takes a shot against Roanoke's Bill Pilat

Guglielmo will have to provide leadership if Roanoke is to continue to win and advance to the play-offs. The defense should be strong, which could take some pressure off the offense. Seniors Doug Mackenzie and Mat Sutphen will join goalie Pilat on defense.

Division I opponents Virginia and North Carolina definitely will be good tests for Roanoke. An April 14 road date at Washington (Maryland) also should be an interesting preview of Division III play-off action.

Washington beat Roanoke in 1983, and the Sho'men will field one of the division's finest defensive squads. Washington followers think they have the best goalie with senior Greg Baker, and the contest with Roanoke will be a showcase for the Pilat vs. Baker showdown in goal.

Washington head coach Terry Corcoran will be trying to rebuild an offense that was affected by graduation. Early matches include Navy, Johns Hopkins and St. Lawrence at home and road trips to Maryland-Baltimore County and Hobart.

If Washington can survive that stretch, it may be one of the surprises of the year by tournament time. The team's success rests with seniors Kevin Giblin, Tom Eucker, Bob Tutela and Baker.

Ithaca midfielder Craig Chiesa starts at tight end on the Bombers football team, so head coach Ray Rostan definitely has some muscle in his attack. Chiesa and midfield teammate Brian Comer each scored 16 goals a year ago, in addition to a team-leading 36 goals from sophomore Derek Kennan, 1984 tricaptain.

Ithaca should get help from Chris Asterino, a transfer from North Carolina State and a good face-off man.

Defensive captains Mark Shattuck and Don Michlin will anchor a young defensive unit, and sophomore Pete Reardon will be in goal.

"We are very young in terms of numbers," said Rostan. "We have 20 freshmen out for the team. Our priorities are to strengthen the midfield, and I may move some attack people there to help and to tighten up our defense."

While Rostan is working on the Ithaca defense, Ohio Wesleyan coach Jay Martin will be trying to replace scoring machine Mitch Borcina. The Bishops made the 1983 Division III final four, but without Borcina's "Midas" scoring touch, they may have trouble repeating their 18-2 record.

The leading returning scorers are juniors Rich Eyring and Blair Morrison, and Martin has recruited some freshmen with scoring potential. Goalkeeper Bob McDonald and the Ohio Wesleyan defense are solid.

Coach Don Leet's St. Lawrence team will play seven of last year's top 10 Division III teams.

"I believe our strength will be on defense," Leet said. "In Charles Santry, we have a four-year starter with exceptional stick-handling abilities. I have used him on attack in some man-up situations because of that."

Tim French is the only senior attacker for St. Lawrence, but Leet thinks freshman Sam Hovey will contribute. Midfielder John Drezner also will be a factor if the team is successful.

Rochester Institute of Technology finished strong a year ago and advanced to the Division III playoffs, and head coach Bill Tierney has all but four players back from that 11-3 squad.

Junior Bruce Remus had 20 goals and 30 assists in 1983 and is the leading scorer. The Tigers won the Independent College Athletic Conference title with a 5-0 mark last season, and it looks like they could repeat.

Hank Janczyk was the new coach at Salisbury State last season, and he promptly helped the Sea Gulls advance to the Division III quarterfinals. "I think we come with more depth and experience than last year's team," Janczyk said. "Those two things usually equal a better season."

Leading scorer Steve Hurley is back, as are seniors Richard Abel, Jim Huelscamp and Rob Clarke. The schedule includes some of the best teams in the division: Denison, Ithaca, Ohio Wesleyan, St. Lawrence and Washington.

Notes: Division III has a lot of first-year coaches, including Keith Bugbee, Springfield; Jerry Casciani, Cortland State; Tom Gill, See Hobart, page 9

McCarthy and Amanda Veal. While Vitale and McCarthy were defensive stalwarts on prep state championship teams in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, respectively, Veal totaled 158 goals in two years in high school.

Familiar names dot the Massachusetts roster, and coach Pam Hixon seems to have the talent to make a third consecutive trip to the final four.

Offensively, Pam Moryl, Linda Haytayan and Tish Stevens lead the way; defender Carol Progulske anchors a defense with a reputation for tough play.

A 12-3-1 record last year boosted Hixon's career mark to 141-28-7. A problem may develop in goal with the loss of Rita Hubner.

1983 Ivy League champion Pennsylvania finished 9-5 overall, and the Quakers reached the second round of the NCAA play-offs. Returning are seniors Cathy D'Ignazio, Colleen Granahan, Judy Sandler and B. J. Zellers.

Others with experience include juniors Alicia McConnell, Leigh McDonald and Ellen Brophy, along with sophomores Nancy Meisinger, Barb Mullin and Beth Wagner.

Harvard, 12-4-1 last year, lost 233 points with the graduation of Maureen Finn, Francesca Den Hartog and Jennifer White. The team's leading returning scorer is Maggie Hart, with 31 goals and seven assists last year.

Talk about tough opening acts. Harvard's first three contests, all on the road, are against Maryland, Penn and Temple.

Dartmouth returns 11 letter winners, with senior attacker Roseanne Byron leading the way. Byron scored 32 times and had 13 assists last season, including six goals in a game against Brown.

Allison Barlow, Nina McDowell and Adelaide Pearson all had double-figure totals a year ago and will be expected to lend scoring help. The biggest position to fill at Dartmouth will be that of Sandy Bryan, the all-time scoring leader.

Goalkeeper Diane Geppi, who had 278 saves in 13 games last year, will anchor the defense for Loyola (Maryland). Offensively, the key returnees are Missy Lightner, Rita Ciletti, and Erin Keavney. Freshmen Anne Allen, Kathy Barden and Chris Russell will join transfers Maura Powers and Lisa CeCicco in adding to the squad's depth.

Senior defender Margie Colandreo, along with Geppi, will spearhead the defense for Loyola, which was 7-4-2 last year.

Trenton State head coach Melissa Magee will try to get her squad back into the national title picture with four experienced seniors.

A preseason scrimmage at Delaware should give Magee an idea of her team's strength. Defense may be a strong point early as Trenton fills some holes on offense left by graduation.

William and Mary, the 1983 Eastern AIAW champion, has three seniors. In all, 13 players return for head coach Ethel Barnhill, with seniors Julie Duff and Chris Paradis serving as cocaptains.

Defense is the key for Princeton, according to head coach Betty Logan, who lost six players, including the top three scorers. The offense will be revamped, but Logan said the defensive unit is solid.

All-America Martha Russo (knee injury) and Sue McCarter (academics) will miss the season for Princeton. Starting goalkeeper Trina Sorenson is nursing a knee injury incurred during the soccer season.

Notes: Coaching changes have made news in men's and women's lacrosse during the off season. New women's mentors include Julie McHugh at Williams; Jane Miller, Virginia; Nita Lamborghini, Tufts; Michele Arbour, New England; Pat Dierking, Muhlenberg; Lynn Centonze, Montelair State; Patty Foster, Middlebury; Beth Reichel, Mary Washington; Sandy Moore, Kenyon; Peel Hawthorne, Connecticut College, and Leigh Donato, Bryn Mawr

Several Division I lacrosse teams have undergone coaching changes

By Doyle Smith

Men's lacrosse heads into its 14th season of NCAA play-offs (Division I: Division III is in its fifth season), and the teams that won last year's championships—Syracuse in Division I and Hobart in Division III—should be favored to win. What should make the Division I race more interesting is the significant number of major coaching changes at the top Division I schools. By contrast, there was only one similar change in Division III.

A survey of the Division I coaching ranks shows that of 24 teams that were nationally ranked by the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association in 1983, five have new coaches this year and five more changed leaders within the previous two seasons. The new men for 1984 are Don Zimmerman (promoted from assistant coach to head coach at Johns Hopkins), Jack Emmer at Army (moved from Washington and Lee), Dick Edell at Maryland (moved from Army), Dennis Daly at Washington and Lee (moved from Amherst), and Scott Allison at Dartmouth (moved from assistant coach at Navy). Such an upheaval at the top of Division I is unprecedented. but it may lack the cosmic significance that at first blush it would appear to Whether it has such importance is certainly open to question, but one thing is certain—rookie coaches rarely win national championships. Only three times has it happened in the past 40 years—Glenn Thiel (Virginia, 1970), now at Penn State; Jim Adams (Army, 1958), now at Virginia, and Howdy Myers (Johns Hopkins, 1947). For each of those men, however, it was a first college head-coaching job. For three of the five named above, the current job is not the first as head coach. Zimmerman appears to have the best chance of winning a national title in his first year.

A preseason USILA poll forecasts results very similar to last season. Syracuse was given the preseason spot, ahead of Johns Hopkins. Virginia (third), North Carolina (fourth), Army (fifth), Cornell (sixth), Maryland (seventh) and Pennsylvania complete the top eight, the same number of available play-off spots in 1984. Falling into the "hopefuls" category, according to the coaches, are Brown, Navy, Rutgers, Hofstra, Towson State, Maryland-Baltimore County and Princeton, in that order.

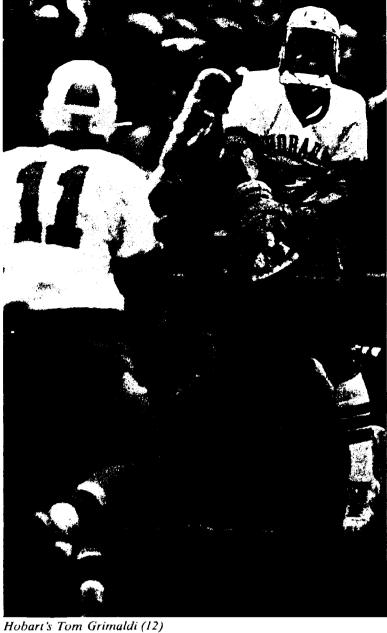

While there was one surprise semifinalist last year (Syracuse) and one new and unexpected entry (Pennsylvania), a similar occurrence does not appear to be likely this year, unless a team like Brown, Rutgers, or Hofstra gets on a hot streak and cannot be stopped. It is not likely, but it is possible.

The Division III race, by contrast, is less difficult to predict. Only one coaching change occurred among the top teams—Chuck Winters of Cortland State took an administrative job at Army, and he was replaced by assistant Jerry Casciani. Hobart will still rule the roost, as it has since the inception of Division III play-offs, and Dave Urick has another powerhouse in the works in upstate New York. Roanoke and Washington (Maryland) may be challengers, and Ohio Wesleyan could be a long shot. It will, however, take a miracle to dislodge Hobart.

Delaware will be host to the 1984 Division I championship game, and the Division I play-offs move from a Wednesday-Saturday-Saturday format to Wednesday-Sunday-Saturday.

Division III play-offs remain the same as last year, except that the finals will be on a Saturday instead of a Sunday. The higher-seeded team will host the game as usual.

Red should win No. 11.

Two-year starter Andy Phillips joins Cook on the attack, and midfielder Ken Entemann was one of the team's top five scorers in 1983. On defense, Mike Higgins, Steve Palletta and goalkeeper Peter Ruchkin are the veterans.

Cornell will host both 1983 NCAA champions in a week-Hobart on April 18 and Syracuse April 25.

Cornell's major challenge in the Ivy League will be Pennsylvania. The Quakers finished 10-3 under first-year coach Tony Seaman and advanced to the play-offs. Junior goalie Jim Della Rocca, an honorable mention all-America in 1983, is one of the best in the division. Seniors Josh Hall, Zack Colburn, Mike Braver and Bob Pappenpus are the top Penn offensive players.

The country's top goalkeeper may be senior George Slabowski of Army. He had 154 saves and helped the Cadets to an 11-3 record and third straight play-off appearance.

New head coach Jack Emmer will have depth on defense, but he will have to replace all-America attackers Frank Giordano and Paul Cino.

Rutgers, 9-5 last year, has three top offensive performers -- Bill Naslonski, Chris Hefferman and Brian Krost. Junior John Naslonski is in goal after 155 saves in 1983.

Rutgers should have scoring punch, and Naslonski's improvement in goal and a more solid defense may move the Scarlet Knights up in the rankings.

Maryland-Baltimore County head coach Dick Watts has the 1983 NCAA finalists as the bookends for his schedule. The Retrievers open at Johns Hopkins March 10 and are hosts to Syracuse in the season finale May 11. In between, they play Virginia, Navy, Cornell, North Carolina, Penn, Maryland, Penn State, and Washington and Lee. It unquestionably is one of the toughest nonconference schedules.

Seniors Chris Coughlin, Mark Gold and Fred Yesko and junior Hank Starkey will be the key men for the Retrievers.

Notes: A year ago, Brown reversed its 1982 record, going from 5-9 to 9-5. With nine of the top 10 scorers back, Brown expects improvement . . . Duke is touting senior defenseman Mark Alternus as the best in the nation Bucknell set a school record with 25 goals against Virginia Military last season, and coach Sid Jamieson coached the Iroquois national team in the Lacrosse International . . . Michigan State coach Richard Kimball has only three seniors, but he says the Spartans will improve "We're not going to settle for anything but first or second in the MLA (Midwest Lacrosse Association) this year. Last year, we finished third, and we are not planning on moving down."... Saturday, April 21, William and Mary will be host to Loyola (Maryland) in the final regular-season varsity contest for William and Mary. Lacrosse competition has been discontinued after this campaign . . . Other first-year Division I head coaches are Dennis Daly at Washington and Lee, John Stevenson at Virginia Military, Mike Malet at Marist, Scott Allison at Dartmouth and Richard Long

Championships Previews

Oklahoma State-Iowa battle set in wrestling

Top-ranked Oklahoma State defeated defending NCAA champion Iowa, 24-6, in a dual match a few weeks ago, and the Cowboys have qualified wrestlers in every weight class for the NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships, which will be held March 8-10 at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford,

But do not expect Oklahoma State coach Tommy Chesbro to make any rash predictions about his team's chances of halting Iowa's six-year winning streak.

The Cowboys entered last year's championships in nearly the same situation. After knocking off Iowa in a dual match before the championships, the Cowboys were ranked No. I and appeared to have enough momentum to win the NCAA title. But the Hawkeyes, winners of eight of the past nine tournaments, set a Division I championships record with 155 points, outdistancing the runnerup Cowboys by 53 points.

This year's championships do not figure to be as one-sided. Oklahoma State's Clar Anderson (134) and Mike Sheets (167) are favored to defend their titles. And despite being upset by Missouri's John Sonderegger in overtime in the Big Eight Conference championships, top-ranked and previously unbeaten Kenny Monday is considered the favorite in the 150pound class. Anderson and Sheets, who was named the outstanding wrestler in last year's championships and enters the tournament with 69 consecutive victories, won Big Eight titles. Sheets' consecutive victory streak is the fifth longest in NCAA history and a school record.

Big Eight champions Mark Perry

Women's indoor track

Dykeman (158) are among the nation's top-ranked wrestlers and should contend for titles.

John Smith (126), Alan Lauchner (177), Karl Lynes (190) and Perry Kaufman (heavyweight) also qualified for the championships for the Cowboys and could provide enough depth to lead Oklahoma State to its first title since 1971.

Although 158-pounder Jim Zalesky is the only returning champion for lowa, the Hawkeyes have proven wrestlers in eight other weight classes who should contribute.

Zalesky and fellow seniors Jeff Kerber (142) and Pete Bush (190) won their third individual Big Ten Conference titles last week as Iowa easily won its 11th consecutive league championship. The Hawkeyes had four other individual champions and two second-place finishers in the conference championships.

Bush, the 1982 190-pound champion, should challenge Nebraska's Bill Scherr, Oklahoma State's Lynes and Jim Baumgardner of Oregon State for this year's title. Duane Goldman, runner-up at 177 pounds last year, is the favorite in what perhaps is the toughest weight class. Nebraska's Jim Scherr and Dan Chaid of Oklahoma should be formidable foes for Goldman.

Iowa also will rely on Big Ten champions Greg Randall (134) and brothers Marty (150) and Lindy Kistler (167).

Oklahoma and Iowa State, which along with Iowa and Oklahoma State are known as the "Big Four" in Division I wrestling, also have some outstanding wrestlers in the cham-See Oklahoma State-Iowa, page 13

Southern Methodist, Arkansas to battle in men's indoor track

It will be a dogfight for the team title when the NCAA Men's Indoor Track Championships are held March 9-10 at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, New York.

Held in conjunction with the women's indoor championships, this is the first NCAA indoor meet that will not be hosted by the University of Michigan. It also is the first time the meet will be contested at metric distances.

Southern Methodist, the defending champion, is a top contender again. The Mustangs return shot put champion Michael Carter, who will be trying for his fourth national championship, and 35-pound weight thrower Robert Weir, who has won the event twice.

However, SMU coach Ted Mc-Laughlin believes the team to beat is Arkansas, third a year ago. The Razorbacks have defending triple jump champion Michael Conley, who also is a strong contender in the long Arkansas has three long jumpers who have qualified, a 7-51/2 high jumper, a 17-6½ pole vaulter, and the fastest qualifiers in the 1,500 meters and distance-medley relay.

UTEP expects to challenge the two Southwest Athletic Conference schools. The Miners have the fastest time in the 3,000 with defending outdoor 5,000 and 10,000 champ Zak Barie, outdoor high jump champion Milt Ottey and 1982 35pound weight throw champion Tore

Other teams that will make a run for the championship include Alabama, with sprinter Lamar Smith (6.16 in the 55-meter dash); Tennessee, with sprinter Sam Grady (6.11); Iowa State, with Sunday Uti, second in the 440 last year, and Villanova, middle distance runner Marcus O'Sullivan.

Other returning national champions include Indiana's Sunder Nix in the 600, San Jose State's Felix Bohni in the pole vault and Jackson State's Reginald Kelly in the long

Vols' numbers tough to beat

If the number of entries in the NCAA Women's Indoor Track Championships foretells the results, Tennessee should win.

However, defending champion Nebraska may be able to score more points with fewer qualifiers, if the qualifying marks hold up.

The meet, to be held for the first time outside Michigan, will be run in conjunction with the men's indoor championships March 9-10 at the Carrier Dome, with Syracuse University serving as host.

As of February 28, the Volunteers had 14 entries more than any other team. Included on the list are defending 880-yard champion (the 1984 meet will be run in meters) Joetta Clark and three scorers who helped Tennessee to third place last

The Cornhuskers have nine entries, including defending 60-yard champion Janet Burke. Expected to win the 55-meter event this year, however, is outdoor 100 and 200 champion Merlene Ottey, who will make her final collegiate appearance

Florida State is expected to be a challenger for the championship trophy. The Lady Seminoles' 1,600meter relay team has produced the season's best of 3:39.11 for the mile.

Houston finished fourth a year ago, and the Cougar coaching staff expects improvement in 1984. Defending long jump champion Carol Lewis, holder of the world-best 22-14, is one reason. The Cougars also expect to score with sprinters Michele Glover, Jackie Washington and Tara Mastin and 6-0 high jumper Kym

Georgia has a potential national champion in Linda Detlefson, who is qualified in the 800, 1,000 and 1,500. She was fourth in the mile a vear ago. Stanford has qualified defending two-mile champion Patti-Sue Plumer and Carol Cady, second in the shot put in 1983.

Missouri basketball teams top Division II contenders

The "Show Me" state just may show 'em this year.

Five Missouri teams were ranked in the February 22 NCAA Division II basketball polls. In the men's poll, it was Central Missouri State (third) and Northwest Missouri State (fourth); the women's poll listed Northwest (fourth), Central (tied for 10th) and Southeast Missouri State (17th).

It may not be that unusual-Virginia also could boast of five ranked teams - but what makes the Missouri situation unique is that all five are from the same conference. the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

The MIAA has been around since 1912, and it has featured good basketball. Every team in the sevenmember league has been selected to the NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Championship field at least once. And, in its two-year history, the NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship has had three MIAA representatives.

"Traditionally, we've been a pretty strong conference," said Commissioner Ken Jones. "In more recent years with national rankings by division. I think the spotlight has been drawn to us even more. I think in the last three years, our top two or three, and this year maybe four, teams have competed favorably with Division I schools.'

But an MIAA team never has won an NCAA basketball title. Southeast fininished second in 1961, and former league member Southwest Missouri State was runner-up four times in men's play. Central was a semifinal loser in last year's NCAA women's

That could change this year. Central and Northwest already have been selected to the 32-team men's field. Central has clinched the regular-season conference championship, losing only to Northwest. The two could face each other again in the conference postseason tournament, and both have been placed in the NCAA South Central regional. A key for Northwest will be stopping the Mules' junior guard, Ron Nunnelly, who is fourth in the division with a 22.5 scoring average.

Also selected last week for the championship field were North Alabama, second-ranked Kentucky Wesleyan and two automatic qualifiers from the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association—top-rated Norfolk State and St. Augustine's. Norfolk State may have the division's best player in senior forward David Pole. He is fifth nationally in scoring (24.4) and seventh in rebounding

Other teams to watch include Virginia Union, California-Riverside, West Georgia, Nebraska-Omaha, Mansfield and Randolph-Macon, all ranked in the top 10. Defending champion Wright State has had a rocky year (15-6 record as of February 21) but, if selected, still could be a threat to repeat.

Men's and women's skiing

Army, Dayton, Mount St. Mary's, St. Cloud State and Valdosta State were selected last week as at-large entries in the women's championship. A sixth team. Utica, received an automatic berth as champion of the Upstate New York Women's Basketball Conference.

The MIAA's representation in the women's field was still undecided heading into the last weekend of league play. Central had a half-game lead over Southeast and Northwest. The winner of the league's postseason tourney will receive an automatic bid, and the other two could receive at-large berths.

The league's top players are Central's Carla Eades, who leads the division in free-throw percentage; Northwest's Diane Kloewer, third nationally in scoring (22.1), and Southeast's Pat Colon, 19 points per game and 62.8 field-goal percentage.

Top-ranked Dayton has been paced by senior center-forward Donna Burks. She is second in the division in scoring (22,2) and fifth in fieldgoal percentage (58.8). If there is a better player in Division II, it could be Valdosta State's Janice Washington, senior center. She leads the nation in scoring (23.8), is tied for the lead in field-goal percentage (62.8) and is 11th in rebounding (12.2).

Other top teams in NCAA Division II women's basketball include Quinnipiac, Cal Poly-Pomona, Chapman and Bentley, which is led by senior forward Alison Fay. Defending champion Virginia Union lost to Virginia State in its conference postseason tournament, which could jeopardize the Panthers' selection to the 24-team field.

Men's Division II regional play will be March 8-10, with the quarterfinals scheduled March 16 or 17. Women's first-round games will be played March 6, followed by regionals March 10 and quarterfinals March 16 or 17. For the third straight year, the national men's and women's semifinals and championships will be played in Springfield, Massachusetts March 22-24.

Here is a look at the teams under consideration for selection to the Division II championships, with season records as of February 20 (men) and 18 (women) in parentheses:

Utah must conquer snow to defend title

The primary obstacle between Utah and its successful defense of the NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Championships may be the "hard" snow of New Hampshire.

Attitash Ski Mountain and Jackson Touring Center around Bartlett, New Hampshire, will be the site of the event March 7-10. The University of New Hampshire will serve as host.

"I think we definitely are contenders," said Utah coach Pat Miller. "It all depends on how we adjust to the snow conditions in the East. We have been competing on soft snow all winter, but the snow in the East has been very different."

Assuming the adjustment is made,

Utah could be the first team in five years to repeat as champion. However, the Utes have won two of the past three championships.

Based on NCAA rankings, the Utes certainly are the class of the West. They have the top three individuals in men's cross country, the top three in men's slalom, the top two in men's giant slalom, the top two in women's giant slalom and the top-ranked men's cross country relay

Under the championships format, men compete only against men and women compete only against women in each of four events. The scores for both the men's and women's events are combined to determine the team

Only two individual-event champions return from last year—Utah's Kathy Kreiner in the women's giant slalom and Wyoming's Rune Helland in men's cross country—but neither is ranked No. I going into the NCAA

Utah's top-ranked personnel include Knut Engebretsen, John Aslberg and Bernt Lund in men's cross country; Harold Gefle and Dave Roth in men's giant slalom; Gefle, Jeff Curtschi and Knut Aronsen in men's slalom, and Bente Dahlum and Jill Robins in women's giant slalom.

The other top-ranked entries from the West include New Mexico's Mia Wahlquist in the women's slalom and Wyoming's Hege Peikli in the women's cross country.

Vermont, runner-up three consecutive years and the 1980 champion, has continued to dominate the East in 1984. The Catamounts have won every carnival except one for men and one for women.

Led by No. 1-ranked men's cross country skier Frederick Thaulou, winner in his last four races, Vermont also has No. 1-ranked skiers Amy Bergstrom and Julie Woodworth in women's giant slalom and Wood-

Moses honored as top amateur

World champion hurdler Edwin Moses has been named the winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Award as the outstanding amateur athlete for 1983.

Moses, 28, formerly a member of the Morehouse College track team, was selected from a field of 10 finalists, including University of Texas, Austin, swimmer Rick Carey and University of California, Berkeley, swimmer Mary T. Meagher.

Moses has a streak of more than 80 victories in the 400-meter hurdles. He won the U.S. national championship last year and later captured the gold medal at the first World Games, in Helsinki, Finland.

Oakland, Northridge battle for swim title

In what would be a replay of the 1983 Division II Men's Swimming and Diving Championships, Oakland and Cal State Northridge should battle it out for the top spot this season. A year ago, Northridge prevailed, and coach Pete Accardy accepted a third consecutive championship trophy.

The only team to beat Cal State Northridge since 1977 is Oakland, which won in 1980, and it could be Oakland's turn again in the championship spotlight.

Other strong entries in the Division II championships, which will be held with the women's championships March 7-10 at Hofstra University in Hempstead, New York, include Missouri-Rolla; Tampa; Cal State Chico, the only other program to win a Division II team championship in the past decade; California-Davis; Shippensburg, and Southern Connecticut State.

Many of the individual leaders should be familiar in Division II.

Tom Harvill of Cal State Chico, Vern Rogers of California-Davis and Bruce Parker of Cal State Northridge are the likely contenders in the sprint freestyle events.

Oakland's Steve Larson will be fast, as will teammate Darin Abbasse. Other top freestyle sprinters include Reed Gershwind of Northridge, Arthur Hovater and Martin Rodseth of Missouri-Rolla, Doug Myers of Shippensburg, and Larry Jordan of Springfield.

Oakland's Tracy Huth again should finish strong in the distance freestyle events, as should teammates Mike Schmidt, Matt Groghan and Craig Chappell. Others who bear watching are Steve Schmidt of Puget Sound and Skip Edgemond of Cal-Davis.

In the backstroke, Chris Aria and Paul Pericich will make strong bids for Missouri-Rolla, Oakland's top contenders include Jeff Colton, the defending national champion at 200 yards, and Mike McCluskey.

Other backstroke specialists are Tampa's Jay Nash and Tom Janton, Ted Bibbs of Puget Sound, Andy Steinbrick of Southern Connecticut State, and Tod Pickett of Cal State

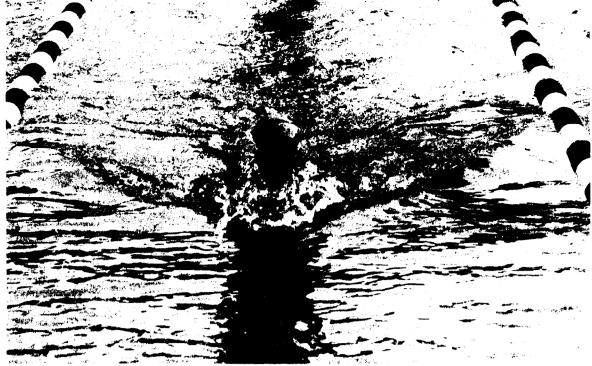

The breaststroke contenders include returning 200-yard champion Brian Spangler of Cal State Chico, along with teammate Jeff Reichenberg. Rich Dobranski of Clarion should be a contender, and Puget Sound's Robb Powers ought to make the championship finals. Other top performers in these events include Oakland's Huth, Stan Fisher of Tampa, Derek Coon and Craig Cozen of Missouri-Rolla, and Tod Morse of Cal State Northridge.

Northridge could dominate the butterfly events, with Troy Betz, Ed Althoff, Dave Varney and Tim Hedrick at or near top form. Oakland, too, will be strong, with Alan Faust, Mike Schmidt and Craig Chappell.

Missouri-Rolla could score in the individual medley events with Scott Carney, Pericich and Coon.

Oakland's Huth again could be in contention, making him one of the more versatile performers in this meet. His performances could be the key for Oakland.

The relays should belong to Oakland or Northridge; but with the caliber of swimmers on most of the top teams' rosters, anything could happen. The final relay event again could decide the team championship.

Returnees keep Clarion on top

Defending champion Clarion is favored for the team title in the NCAA Division II Women's Swimming and Diving Championships March 7-10 at Hofstra University because coach Becky Rutt has most

The cast of stars includes senior Jeanne O'Connor, winner of all-America honors seven times. The versatility of Teri Peot has been an asset for Clarion, and she is sure to provide points.

Seniors Joyce Skoog, Karen Hawkins and Tina Kiser join with junior Nan Jackson to complete the Standing in Clarion's way will be coach Pete Accardy's Cal State Northridge team. The Matadors won the first NCAA Division II title two yeras ago.

Freestyler Michelle Hampton again is expected to be a contender in the distance freestyle events, and Lisa Hill is a multievent performer.

Accardy has more depth, and if Cal State Northridge can qualify more swimmers for point-scoring races, the championship could return to the West Coast.

Air Force will be led by seniors Karen Burton, the team's captain, and Tina Lanschultz and Dana Strong, all-America divers in 1983. Sophomore Beth Haney took the 100 individual medley title last year, and classmate Barb Smith won the 100 and 200 butterfly titles.

New head coach Kelly Kemp has kept the Falcons among the division's elite this season, and they could be a challenger for the top spot if someone Southern Conference entry Furman had eight all-Americas in the 1983 championships, and seven still are on coach Howard Wheeler's roster.

Beth Schiemann, Rita Broadniak and Sandra Shenke will lead the Lady Paladins' charge

Mary Ellen Wydan is the new coach at Oakland; and with veterans like senior Karen Enneking, Wydan's first trip to the Division II championships should go well.

Kathy VanValkenburg, Linda Scott, Patty Doherty and Kim Pogue all return from top-12 finishes in their events. Depth will be a problem for Oakland in the championships. The Pioneers started the season with only 11 swimmers.

South Florida coach Bill Mann expects his squad to continue to move up in the team standings from eighth in 1982 and sixth a year ago. Junior college all-America diver Jill Kravitz should add points, and a total of 10 veterans return from the 1983 team.

Senior Kathy Batho will lead Rice toward another top-10 finish. Senior Barb Demorotski and sophomores Anita Heil, Kathy Jenkins and Kathy Benzick also will be important to coach Kris Wingenroth as the Owls try to better last year's eighth-place

Vanderbilt's Lady Commodores have been in four straight postseason championship meets, including Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women competition, and coaches John Smith and Evelyn Newton return all scorers from 1983.

Bloomsburg coach Mary Gardner may know more about Clarion's chances than any of the other challengers, since both teams compete in the tough Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference.

The Huskies return all nine all-America performers from last year. The top returners, senior Sue Boyer and junior Gwen Cressman, and a good freshman class could help the Huskies move into the top five.

Paula McDonald leads Hamline's chances in Division III

Williams swimmers aim for third victory

Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia, will be host to the third NCAA Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships, also known as the "Williams Show," March 8-10. Williams coach Carl Samuelson and his perennial New England champions again will challenge all comers.

Thus far, the Ephs'two-year championship reign includes:

Margins of victory averaging 72

•Individual champions (including relays) totaling 28 of the 48 titlists crowned.

• Records in 13 of the 24 events for championships meets.

There is little to suggest a break in this tradition. Before the season, Samuelson matter-of-factly said his team "should be as strong as 1982-83."

Led by junior Kim Ekrich and sophomore Kathy Kirmayer -- the former in the medley and breaststroke and the latter in the backstroke and sprint freestyles-Williams has remained atop the Division III rankings

Among the challengers to Williams will be Pomona-Pitzer. Head coach Penny Lee Dean lost stellar performer Mary Gentry to graduation in 1983, but the return of Erin Riley, Martha Andrews, Amy Dantzler and Ellen Roe, all finalists in their respective events a year ago, has kept the Sage

Newcomers Lyn Cunliffe, Daniela Stepman, Karah Coe, Debra Whitehouse and Kristin McQueen had Dean bubbling with optimism at the start of the season, and her squad's performance ranks among the best

Kenyon coach Jim Steen always fields a strong team, and the squad at the 1984 championships will be no exception since 10 performers already have earned all-America honors in previous NCAA championships.

Recruiting strengthened the team. so Kenyon, fourth last year at the NCAA championships, may pull a surprise or two before the waves have settled at Emory.

Kenyon's leadership will come from seniors Kris Kennard, Amy Rentschler, Rose Brintlinger and Ann Batchelder. The other six top returning performers, all with all-America honors, are underclassmen. The traditional battle between Williams and Kenyon apparently will continue.

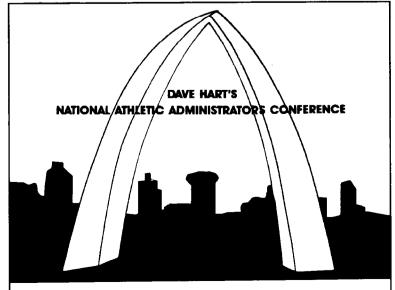

Hamline also is a threat. The Pipers finished second a year ago and had four individual champions. The squad has been ranked among the division's top five programs throughout the regular season, suggesting it could make a strong bid for the 1984 title.

UC San Diego also will be a contender. Lee Morrow, the division record holder in the 200-yard butterfly, is the favorite.

Nine all-America performers from the 1983 squad are back, so head coach Bill Morgan may have several Lake Forest should finish among the top 10, and senior Sue Leonard may challenge the Williams sprinters in the freestyle events.

Other teams that could finish among the leaders include Allegheny, Tufts, Ithaca and Amherst, although it is doubtful that any will be able to challenge Williams.

RIT picked to win new hockey meet

An opportunity to win championships in two divisions does not occur often, but Rochester Institute of Technology has that opportunity in men's ice hockey.

RIT won the 1983 Division II Men's Ice Hockey Championship and will be competing in the first Division III championship this year. The Tigers have a 23-5 record (through February 21) and are one of the pretournament favorites.

Goaltender Dave Burkholder, the outstanding player in last year's Division II championship, again has been RIT's leader. All-tournament forward Chris Johnstone also returns Eight teams will compete in the inaugural Division III event, five from the East region and three from the West region. Four first-round series (two-game, total-goals format) will be played the weekend of March 9-11 at campus sites. The winners will advance to semifinal games March 15 and 16 on the campus of one of the participating institutions. The third-place and championship games will be played March 17 at the same site.

The Division III subcommittee of the Men's Ice Hockey Committee will begin selecting teams March 4. Completion of the tournament field may be delayed until March 8 because of Eastern College Athletic Conference postseason play.

Babson, which finished fourth last year and is 20-3-1 so far this season, is another 1983 Division II final four participant that is ranked among the Eastern contenders in Division III.

Other teams under consideration from the East include Oswego State (17-6), New England College (16-6-1), North Adams State (18-8-2), Norwich (16-8), Union (New York) (15-8-1), Elmira (17-7-1), Salem State (13-14-2) and Plattsburgh State (13-15).

In the West, 1983 NAIA champion Wisconsin-River Falls (17-8-1) is considered the top team. This would be the first appearance for the Falcons in NCAA postseason play.

Other top contenders among Western teams include St. Thomas (16-9), Gustavus Adolphus (16-10-1), Augsburg (16-10), Lake Forest (11-6-1), Hamline (10-12-2), Bethel (11-13) and St. Olaf (10-16).

Division II men's ice hockey

Unbeaten Bemidji State tops contenders

The Division II Men's Icc Hockey Championship may have a beginning and an end all in one season.

It is the beginning of a four-team format because of the new Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship. It also may be the end of the Division II championship because sponsorship levels and net receipts are below the Association's criteria for continuation of division championships.

A new champion is certain since 1983 winner Rochester Institute of Technology is a Division III member and will compete in the new event. The favorite as the regular season ends is 1983 runner-up Bemidji State.

Long-time coach Bob Peters (378 victories entering this season) returned from a sabbatical and guided Bemidji State to a 27-0 record. All-Americas Joel Otto (center) and Mark Liska (goaltender) have been Bemidji's leaders.

Two teams from the West region and two from the East region will be selected March 4. The teams will play two-game, total-goals series in each region the weekend of March 9-12 on the campuses of participating institutions. Dates in each region have not been set because of uncertain availability of facilities and a conflict with Eastern College Athletic Conference postseason play.

Winners of the first-round series will advance to a two-game, total-goals finals series March 16-17 or March 17-18. The finals also will be played on the campus of one of the participating teams.

The top contender for a berth from the West along with Bemidji State is Alaska-Fairbanks (19-5). The Nanooks have won 14 of their past 16 games, including two victories carlier this month over Alaska-Anchorage, Alaska-Anchorage (22-6-1) has had an outstanding season but is ineligible because the institution is an unclassified member for the 1983-84 academic year, Mankato State (15-14) also is under consideration.

In the East, New Hampshire College (16-6-1) has the best record.

St. Anselm (10-14) and Merrimack (9-16) also are being considered and have played stronger schedules. The other top contenders include St. Michael's (12-7) and Bentley (11-9).

Many of the Division II teams in the East play in a "Division III" classification in the ECAC. The ECAC subgroups play significantly different schedules while belonging to the same NCAA membership division

Championships Highlights

Trenton State wrestlers win in Division III

Trenton State used team balance to offset individual titles by Augsburg's Steve Gliva and Shea Kennedy in winning the 11th annual NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships February 24-25 at Binghamton, New York.

Bob Glaberman (158) was the only Trenton State winner; however, the Lions advanced enough wrestlers through the various weight categories to defeat runner-up Augsburg, 963/4 to 681/2.

Trenton State has won the title three of the past six years. The Lions were runners-up in 1980, 1982 and Orlando Caceres (126) and Ron Bussey (150) finished second in their events. Caceres was winning the 126pound championship but defaulted in the third period for an illegal body slam that injured Dave Averill of Albany (New York). Bussey was defeated by Kennedy, 5-4.

The Lions also received points from third-place finishers Larry DeSimone (142) and Bob Henig (190).

Gliva (118) started Augsburg on the right foot in the championship round by defeating Ithaca's Bob Panariello, 11-4. The Auggies' middle-weight strength came through with a sixth-place finish from Tom Hall (142), Kennedy's title in the 150-pound class and a second-place finish by Bruce Arvold in the 158pound class, but it could not overcome Trenton State's balanced attack.

Binghamton, paced by 177-pound champion Thomas Pillari, placed third with 62½ points. In addition to Augsburg, Augustana (Illinois) crowned two individual champions. Pat McMahon, who was runner-up last year, won the 134-pound title; and Chris Casey, last year's 158pound champion, won the 167-pound

Other individual champions were Don Pantaleo (142), Olivet: Doug Morse (190), Oswego State, and Mike Connors (heavyweight), St.

SIU wrestlers win four events, halt Bakersfield streak at five

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville won four individual titles and advanced wrestlers to the finals in two other weight classes in winning the 1984 Division II Wrestling Championships February 24-25 in Baltimore, Marvland.

The Cougars ended a five-year domination of the Division II championships by Cal State Bakersfield, which finished 481/2 points behind SIU. Bakersfield had won five consecutive titles and seven of the past eight.

Southern Illinois was strong at both the light and heavy weights. Tim Wright and Don Stevens won titles at 118 and 126 pounds, respectively, and Booker Benford and Ernie Badger were the 177- and 190pound champions, respectively. Also advancing to the finals for the Cougars were Maurice Brown (142) and Mark Kristoff (150).

Winners for Cal State Bakersfield were Steve Markey at 134 pounds and Jessie Reyes, who won his second consecutive 142-pound title. Besides Reyes and SIU's Stevens, other repeat winners were Morgan State's John Davis (158) and North Dakota State's Mike Langlais (150), who won the 142-pound title in 1982.

The previous best finish for Southern Illinois was second in 1975. Two other 1983 champions were defeated this year-North Dakota State's Steve Carr at 134 pounds and Nebraska-Omaha's Mark Manning

The top men's Alpine skier for the Catamounts is Bart Tuttle, No. 3 in giant slalom and No. 4 in slalom.

Vermont men's and women's cross country relay teams both are ranked No. 1 in the region.

"If Vermont can be consistent, the Cats have a real chance at recapturing the team title," said Terry Aldrich, Middlebury skiing coach and NCAA East advisory committee chair.

The familiar snow conditions also may give Vermont an edge.

Dartmouth could be a challenger for a spot in the top four or five. The Big Green has the top two men's giant slalom skiers, the top men's slalom skier and the top women's cross country skier.

Dartmouth is led by George Macomber, ranked No. 1 in slalom and No. 2 in giant slalom. He was second in the giant slalom and fifth in the slalom. The top-ranked giant slalom skier in the East is Dartmouth's Miles DeChamps.

Antitrust suit filed in Maryland

A $4.5 million antitrust suit has been filed against Metro Communications, Inc., a firm that establishes networks and syndicates sports programming for the electronic media

The suit was filed earlier this month in a Baltimore, Maryland, district court by Sports Marketing Consultants, Inc. Sports Marketing is a competitor for radio contracts currently held by Metro Communications, which trades under the name of Metrosports.

Charging Metrosports with an illegal monopoly, the plaintiff claimed $500,000 in losses, $1 million in future losses and asked for treble damages. Metrosports owns radio network rights in the Baltimore-Washington, D.C., area for the Baltimore Orioles, Baltimore Colts, Washington Redskins and University of Maryland, College Park, football and men's basketball.

Basketball tournament on ESPN

In association with NCAA Productions, ESPN will cablecast 25 games of the 1984 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

The schedule begins March 13 with the five opening-round games (three live, two taped). A total of 14 first-round games March 15 and 16 (two live, five taped each night) and six regional semifinals March 22 and 23 (two live and one taped each night) also will be carried.

ESPN's coverage of the 1983 regional semifinals achieved the cable network's highest Nielsen rating.

Also during March, ESPN will carry both the Division III Men's and Women's Basketball Championships (delayed March 17) and the Division II championships (the men's live March 24, the women's delayed March 28). Season-ending coverage of the regular season will include several key Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conference games; a delayed (March 9) women's game between California State University, Fullerton, and the University of California, Los Angeles; the Sun Belt Conference men's postseason tournament semifinals and championship (March 3 and 4), and the entire Atlantic Coast Conference men's postseason tourney (March 9-11).

ESPN plans NCAA coverage

ESPN has announced the following schedule of NCAA championships, other than basketball, during March (all times Eastern):

March 3 (8:30 a.m.)—Division II wrestling; March II (4 p.m.)—Division I men's indoor track; March 17 (12:30 p.m.)—Division II men's swimming and diving; March 18 (1:30 p.m.)—women's indoor track; March 24 (1 p.m.)—Division II women's swimming and diving; March 25 (3:30 p.m.)— Division I men's ice hockey.

MCC signs basketball contract

The Midwestern City Conference and Sports Time, a regional cable network, have signed an agreement to cablecast an MCC game of the week beginning with the 1984-85 men's basketball season.

Sports Time, which is scheduled to start April 3, will cover a 15-state area, primarily in the Midwest. The network is a joint venture of Anheuser-Busch, Multimedia and Telecommunications.

Big Eight, Ohio Valley and Mid-American Athletic Conference games also will be carried on Sports Time, along with professional baseball.

Lewis rejoins NBC Sports

Greg Lewis, who worked for NBC Sports from 1980 to 1982, has been signed as a sportscaster for the network.

His primary duties will involve coverage of winter sports for NBC's "SportsWorld." However, Lewis also has covered tennis and gymnastics.

A former competitive skier, Lewis was a three-year letterman in lacrosse at Middlebury College from 1967 to 1969.

Some college baseball coaches upset at new double-play ruling

Modifying a traditional practice of breaking up double plays has become one of the NCAA Baseball Committee's toughest challenges in trying to make the college sport

The committee added an approved ruling to Rule 8-4-d in 1983, requiring a runner "to approach the base directly." The ruling, which was amended this year to urge coaches to "teach their players to slide as if they are trying to reach the base when bunting for a sacrifice or when evading a tag," has been opposed by some college coaches

Opposition peaked in January at the American Baseball Coaches Association's annual convention. There, a majority of Division I and junior college coaches indicated that they wanted the rule rewritten to its 1982 form. A slight majority of Division II coaches favored the current restrictions, and Division III coaches were unanimous in their support. Opponents cited the play's longstanding existence and the need to prepare players for professional Donald K. Edwards, secretaryrules editor of the Baseball Committee from the University of California. Riverside, said safety was the primary reason for the change.

Otahkians set record score in gymnastics meet

Southeast Missouri State's women's gymnastics team scored 180.65 points in its February 17 home victory over Wheaton (Illinois), the highest score ever recorded in NCAA Division II

The Otahkians, ranked second nationally in the latest Divisions II-III poll compiled by the National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches, finished third in last year's NCAA Division II championships.

In the victory over Wheaton, junior Margaret Heidbrier established school records in the balance beam and floor exercise, with 9.55 and 9.45 marks, respectively.

Edwards said this (breaking up a double play at second base) was the "only place in the game where intentional and encouraged physical contact is allowed." He said that modifying the rule would not be considered until the committee's July meeting.

"A player cannot bump another one fielding a ground or fly ball, a catcher cannot tip the batter's bat and a batter cannot step in front of a catcher who is trying to throw out a runner," Edwards said. "But an infielder trying to throw out a runner going to first base can be leveled. Does that make sense?"

Edwards said the committee would consider the ABCA straw vote, but he noted that only 173 NCAA member institutions were represented. He also said the Baseball Committee, which includes six Division I members and three each from Divisions II and III, had voted unanimously to adopt the

"It was something that had been brought to the committee's attention by several coaches who were concerned over the years with the safety of their players," he said. "Many players have been injured to various degrees by the 'take out' slide."

In a January 20 letter to college baseball coaches and umpires, Edwards again urged that coaches teach players to slide according to the rule. He also requested umpires to "make a concerted effort to call this rule correctly."

"If contact is made directly in the baseline and the runner is on the ground, then it is the fielder's fault and there should be no penalty," he

The Baseball Committee will meet July 9-12. Edwards said the group will consider any suggestions received from coaches about rules changes.

Arena progressing at Fresno

Fresno State University's department of athletics has announced that the expansion of Selland Arena is progressing, with 2,536 of 3,637 available new seats having been "optioned."

The new seats will increase the arena's capacity to 10,167. Only 550 pairs (1,101 seats) remain before the arena is sold out again. The $8.5 million expansion is being financed through the sale of bonds, backed by an increase in the city hotel/motel room tax. Fresno State is assisting the City of Fresno by raising about $1.3 million through the seat-option plan, which allows a donor to the project to purchase a season ticket for the next 10 years.

The expansion is expected to be completed by the 1984-85 basketball

Nebraska to act against violators

The board of regents of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, has adopted a resolution directing the university's attorney to take legal action against anyone outside the school who causes a violation of NCAA rules

The resolution, adopted 6-0, also directs university Chancellor Martin Massengale to discipline anyone under control of the university who violates rules governing athletics.

Regent Robert Simmons of Scottsbluff said financial losses to the university would be substantial if fans' actions resulted in NCAA penalties for the Cornhusker football team, especially a ban on postseason play or television appearances. "So, people who are exuberant ought to be warned and realize that the damage to the university could be tremendous,"

Wrestling meets could affect amateur status

Wrestlers could jeopardize their amateur status by participating in tournaments conducted by the Wrestling Enthusiasts of America, the NCAA Wrestling Committee says. The new organization is trying to promote amateur wrestling as a major

According to Robert J. Kopnisky, chair of the committee, the WEA eligibility-certification fee.

has scheduled seven tournaments, beginning in August, in which the top four finishers will be paid. At the conclusion of the tournament series, a grand national tournament will be conducted, with approximately $10,000 in prize money

Intercollegiate eligibility in wrestling would be jeopardized if individuals accept cash for performances at these tournaments. Further, an award that an individual cannot receive under NCAA legislation may not be forwarded in the individual's name to a different individual or agency. Intercollegiate wrestling eligibility also would be jeopardized if a wrestler contracts orally or in writing to be represented by an agent in the marketing of his athletic ability or reputation in wrestling.

In addition, any acceptance of benefits or services (e.g., loans with deferred pay-back basis) because of athletic reputation or skill would constitute compensation based on athletic ability and could render the individual ineligible under the Association's amateur rulings.

"The committee is concerned about the ramifications these tournaments could create," Kopnisky said. "We want wrestlers to be aware of the rules surrounding cash reimbursements or talking to agents while they are still competing as collegians or thinking about trying out for the Olympic team.

"This is a new situation confronting coaches and wrestlers, and the committee feels it is important that they be aware of NCAA regulations regarding amateur status.'

Coaches or wrestlers with questions regarding NCAA amateur regulations should contact the NCAA's legislative services staff.

Peach Bowl director supported

The board of directors of the Peach Bowl have given a vote of confidence to George Crumbley, executive director, denying a bid by an Atlanta business man to take over the job.

The board voted to hire a full-time marketing director whose job will be to boost local support and advance ticket sales for the postseason charity football game in Atlanta.

In addition, the 28-member volunteer board, composed largely of business leaders, will be expanded by as many as 10 members this year, Don Elliot, president of the Peach Bowl, said.

CFA considers football play-off

The College Football Association is drawing plans for a national football championship play-off, the Associated Press reports.

Sources told the AP that a tentative plan put forth to the CFA would make use of three of four major bowls—the Sugar, Cotton and Orange—staging the championship game a week before the Super Bowl. The Big Ten Conference and the Pacific-10 Conference, major football conferences that do not belong to the CFA, would be excluded, as would the Rose Bowl.

DeLoss Dodds, athletics director at the University of Texas, Austin, confirmed to the AP that the plan was discussed during a meeting in Dallas the week of February 13. Dodds also is chair of a special NCAA committee appointed to study the feasibility of an NCAA football play-off in Division

Iowa to host clinic on stress

The University of Iowa will be host to a national conference entitled "Stress Coaching's Common Ground" June 1-3 in Iowa City.

The conference is designed to explore the emotional, ethical, environmental and situational issues that produce or contribute to stress in coaching of intercollegiate athletics.

Speakers for the three-day conference include Robert E. Rakel, M.D., University of Iowa College of Medicine; George Raveling, head basketball coach at Iowa; Gordon Decker, M.D., University of Oklahoma; Al McGuire, former Marquette men's basketball coach and currently a broadcaster for NBC, and Mark McKinney, professor at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, medical center.

Briefly in the News

The Southeastern Conference basketball tournament at Vanderbilt University will have its first sellout in history, according to Roy Kramer, Vanderbilt athletics director. There were 15,626 tickets available, but demand was so great that about 3,000 mail-order tickets will be returned. The SEC tournament was the first championship event for the conference, and the first tournament was conducted in Atlanta in 1933. The tournament was discontinued for 26 years but was renewed in 1979 . . . As part of a master plan to include women's athletics, the Presidents' Athletic Conference will add women's basketball to its schedule in 1984-85. Several other women's sports are expected to be adopted by 1985-86. The first tournament is scheduled March 1-2 at Thiel College. The PAC athletics directors will meet in March to discuss plans for further additions of women's sports.

Requests for bids have been extended on construction of the University of Georgia Butts-Mehre Heritage building, with construction expected to begin by April 1. The four-story building will house the entire football complex, meeting rooms, coaches' offices, all athletics department administrative offices, Bulldog Club headquarters and a Heritage Hall to document the history of Georgia athletics.

The University of Miami (Florida) is getting a lot of mileage from its recent national football championship. The U.S. Post Office in Miami is cancelling all regular mail for the next several months (an average of one million pieces a day) with a four-line promotion that reads: "University of Miami, Home of the Hurricanes, 1983 National champions.'

The Bradley University men's cross country team compiled a grade-point average of 3.330 on a 4.000 scale last fall semester. The women's team was not far behind with a 3.140 average. Leading the men was David McLean, a chemistry major, with a 4.000. Next were Richard Kruiswyk, 3.800 in mechanical engineering, and Glenn Ross, 3.770 in mathematics. Carolyn Lammersfeld was tops among the women with a 3.620 . . . It was 30 years ago the week of February 13 that Frank Selvy of Furman University scored 100 points against Newberry College. It stands as the only 100-point performance by a major-college player. Selvy hit 41 of 66 shots from the field (62.1 percent) and 18 of 22 (81.8 percent) from the foul line. He also led the Paladins in rebounding with 13. The final score was 149-95.

Iowa State University's signing of a five-year, $1.04 million radio contract with Iowa Net Sports makes the Cyclones one of a few institutions that deliver football and basketball broadcasts via satellite. The contract covers the seasons of 1984-85 through 1988-89. Iowa Net Sports has packaged a promotional campaign, including production of a daily sports show to be transmitted to all Cyclone network affiliates, and it will provide Iowa State with 4,500 promotional announcements throughout the state annually . . . The 1983 Southern Oregon State College football team not only provided the institution with a record nine victories last season, the players performed well in the classroom, compiling a 2.860 total team grade-point average on a scale of 4,000. About 40 percent of the team's members had a 3,000 average

The men's gymnastics team at the University of California, Los Angeles upset the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, defending national champion, to win the UCLA-McDonald's Invitational February 10 before a crowd of 7,321, a record for gymnastics in Pauley Pavilion. That record could be in jeopardy, however, when both the NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Gymnastics Championships are held there in March . . . Western Athletic Conference basketball games already have drawn more than a million fans, the 10th consecutive season that figure has been reached. As of February 21, the nine conference schools had attracted 1,155,296 fans to 128 games, an average of 9,026 per game, according to Nordy Jensen, conference information director.

Eric D. Zemper, research coordinator at the NCAA and a former women's cross country and track coach at Michigan State University, has been named assistant head umpire for running events during the track and field competition at the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles. Steitz among five selected to basketball hall of fame

Edward S. Steitz, athletics director at Springfield College and secretaryrules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, is one of five men named to the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame.

Joining Steitz in the April 30 induction ceremonies will be Boston Celtics superstars Sam Jones and John Havlicek; former Kansas State University coach Jack Gardner, and Cliff Fagan, who served as executive director of the National Federation of State High School Associations

Steitz, who also is head of the U.S. Olympic Basketball Committee, has served on the NCAA rules committee for the past 18 years.

Jones and Havlicek played together on six championship teams in the National Basketball Association. As undergraduates, Jones played at North Carolina Central University and Havlicek was a member of an NCAA championship team at Ohio State University during his career.

Gardner won 70 percent of his games during a coaching career that spanned 38 years. He coached at Kansas State University before going to Utah State University.

Steitz said upon his selection, "Never, never in my wildest imagination did I ever think when we went down to Boston to obtain the charter for the hall of fame that I would be there someday with Naismith, Bunn, Wooden and all those fantastic

Besides helping start the hall of fame 16 years ago, he got the NCAA involved in Olympic basketball and women's basketball and has served as president of the Amateur Basketball Association of the USA, which has governed international play since

While Steitz was instrumental in writing the rules for the colleges, Fagan, one of the few men elected to the hall of fame for work with the high school game, worked to standardize the rules among state high school organizations.

He also was president of the ABA/USA, a director of the U.S. Olympic Committee and president of the hall of fame for six years.

"I never thought I'd ever be in the hall of fame," said Havlicek, one of a select group of players to be elected in his first year of eligibility and on a unanimous vote. "I just played the game the way I thought it should be played.

"But Sam. That's terrific. Out of all the people I played with and against in the NBA, I've never seen a better player," said Havlicek, who held the record for most games played in the National Basketball association when he retired in 1978.

A native of Martinsville, Ohio, Havlicek won all-state honors in basketball, football and baseball at Bridgeport High School and with teammate Jerry Lucas led Ohio State to the 1960 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship and runnerup honors in 1961 and 1962.

Football League, but he decided to play for the Celtics, where the supersub, who became a superstar, scored 26,395 points over the next 16 years, compiling a 20.8 point-pergame average and playing in 13 NBA all-star games.

Havlicek's athletic interests didn't end with his retirement from the pro game at age 38. He just took up another sport skiing. "I never had on a pair of boots until five years ago," he said. "But now I spend as much time as I can skiing."

Jones, 51, who had been the greatest scorer in Celtic history when he retired in 1968 after 12 years—during which he averaged 17.8 points per game and the Celtics won the NBA crown 10 times—was elected to the NBA's silver anniversary all-star team

With the installation of Havlicek and Jones, the Celtics will be represented by 13 individuals in the hall of Charles McClendon, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, also addressed the writers. After the panel discussions, the coaches were available for individual interviews with the writers.

A reception and Western-style barbecue concluded the day's events. The preview ended Tuesday morning with a panel composed of three veteran football officials-Vance Carlson of the Big Eight Conference, Bert Ackermann of the Southeastern Conference and Buddy Coleman of the Southwest Athletic Conference.

The officials discussed various topics, including the background and preparation necessary to become a major-college football official, the integrity and dedication officiating requires, and the pressures officials are subjected to at the major-college

"There is an enormous amount of judgment involved in officiating,' said Ackermann, an SEC head linesman for 20 years. "We are trying to establish order out of mayhem and control people who are at a fever

Sponsorship

Overall sponsorship of sports at member institutions also increased slightly from 1981-82 to 1982-83. The committee's study of sponsorship data was based on the statistical summary appearing in the 1982-83 NCAA Annual Reports.

The slight increase was attributable to women's sports, where the average number of intercollegiate sports offered at all member institutions climbed from 6.4 to 6.5. The men's average stayed even with 1981-82 at 9.1 sports. Thus, the average number of men's and women's sports at all institutions increased from 15.5 to Divisions II and III institutions actually created the increase. The averages in Division III increased from 8.8 to 8.9 sports for men and from 6.1 to 6.4 sports for women, for an overall jump from 14.9 to 15.3 per institution; Division II declined from 7.9 to 7.7 for men but increased from 5.5 to 5.8 for women, for an increase in total from 13.4 to 13.5.

Division I members, meanwhile,

The case began in 1977 after the government threatened to cut off students' grants if the college did not sign a form assuring that it would comply with Title IX.

Grove City petitioned the Supreme Court for a hearing after lower-court decisions in 1980 and 1982.

"We can't let television timeouts encroach upon the continuity of the game, and we undergo psychological warfare with coaches. While all this is happening, we must maintain a sense of professionalism in pressurepacked situations. Officiating can be broken down into two primary areasintegrity and administration.

Several members of the media expressed concern about the inaccessibility of officials to discuss controversial calls. Conference regulations vary regarding officials' contacts with the media; however, the conferences represented by the officials provide an observer in the press box for interpretations or clarifications of

The officials as well as the coaches were against using instant replays to review close calls during games.

"Television replays have provided a tremendous service in terms of reviewing games and improving officiating," said Coleman, who has officiated in the SWC for 21 years. "But I don't think they belong on the sidelines. The angle of the camera is very seldom at the same angle of an official's perspective, and the replay can be deceptive.

"Even after reviewing replays, I think you would find officials made the right call 995 times out of 1,000."

declined from 10.3 to 10.2 sports for men, from 7.3 to 7.1 for women and from 17.6 to 17.3 for their overall programs.

In terms of the percentage of all member institutions offering each given sport, the greatest sponsorship increases in men's sports were in cross country (up 1.7 percent), indoor track (1.3) and rifle (1.2).

Percentage sponsorship leaders among women's sports were cross country (6.8 percent), soccer (3.1), tennis (2.9), outdoor track (2.7), basketball (2.5), softball (2.4) and volleyball (2.0).

One of the trends the Long Range Planning Committee looks for in its annual review of the sponsorship data is those sports that actually decline in sponsorship, even as the NCAA membership grows. The definite trends noted by the committee this year were the decline in sponsorship of wrestling, volleyball, gymnastics, fencing and skiing among the men's sports and gymnastics, field hockey and golf among women's

In terms of the percentage of member institutions sponsoring each sport, wrestling and men's gymnastics have declined for six consecutive years, volleyball for five of those six years, and swimming for the past four years. A similar comparison is not yet available in women's sports, but most of those with the possible recent exceptions of gymnastics and field hockey—appear to be holding their own or increasing.

Tabulations of the key data reviewed by the committee accompany this article

Football TV committee reviews networks' reactions to proposals

The NCAA Football Television Committee reviewed network reaction to proposed modifications in the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan and also approved an extensive report on college football television, past, current and future, during a meeting in Kansas City last week.

The administrative subcommittee reported to the full body that attempts to modify the plan to permit live Saturday night regional syndication of college football games are not acceptable to CBS and ABC, unless the committee is willing to renegotiate the current contracts.

Network officials felt the proposed modifications would dilute the exclusivity and advertising base of their Saturday afternoon telecasts, diminish the number of affiliates carrying prime-time network programming, and lead to greater competition for

"The committee was disappointed that the networks did not accept the modifications of the plan, because those modifications had been received favorably by the membership," said Hugh D. Hindman, committee chair and director of athletics at Ohio State University. "We are hopeful that the networks will agree to changes in the supplementary series. We feel that the supplementary series could be an attractive package that can accomplish some of the same programming goals that were targeted in the rejected modifications."

Hindman said the committee would refocus its attention on negotiating a supplementary series for the 1984 and 1985 seasons. Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., had rights to the series a package of live national cablecasts, primarily on Thursday and Saturday nights -during 1982

The committee will open discussions with Turner and the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network, both of which have had rights agreements with the Association. Hindman said talks may be expanded to include other cable networks payper-view syndicates.

The committee also will approach the networks, seeking an adjustment of the plan to change appearance limitations in the supplementary series to make it more attractive. According to Hindman, network officials indicated a willingness to discuss several specific points relating to the limitations.

The comprehensive report on football television, past, present and future, will be mailed to the membership. Of particular interest is information on rating trends. Even though college football television ratings have dropped the past two years, the report cites an across-the-board drop in all sports ratings. However, during the past five years, professional and college football have remained the first- and second-rated sports series on television.

Delaware's Nelson to receive distinguished American award

David M. Nelson, director of athletics and dean of the college of physical education and recreation at the University of Delaware, has been named to receive the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame's Distinguished American Award for

Nelson, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Football Rules Committee since 1951 will receive the award at the 27th annual hall of fame awards dinner December 4 in New York

In announcing Nelson's selection, Vincent DePaul Draddy, chairman of the foundation board, said, ". . our executive committee appreciates what he has done for college football, and he was the unanimous choice of the board for this high honor."

Nelson played college football for Fritz Crisler at the University of Michigan and was the Wolverines' leading rusher his senior season. He also was a member of two Big Ten Conference champion baseball teams. Nelson earned the conference award for proficiency in academics and athletics.

David M. Nelson

He served as athletics director and head football coach at Hillsdale College (Michigan), backfield coach at Harvard University and head coach at the University of Maine, Orono, before going to Delaware, where he compiled an 84-22-2 record as head coach. His overall coaching record is 105-48-6. He resigned as football coach in 1966 to devote more time to being athletics director.

Nelson has strengthened the overall athletics program at Delaware to include 22 varsity sports, and he helped develop an outstanding intramural and recreation program for the university.

Twice president of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, Nelson served as trustee of the American Football Coaches Association and chair of the NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee. He has written six books and narrated four NCAA films about football.

Past award winners include Archibald MacLeish, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and dramatist; Vincent T. Lombardi, a successful high school and college coach before becoming head coach of the Green Bay Packers in the National Football League; Jerome "Brud" Holland, former ambassador to Sweden; the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame, and Gen. James Van Fleet.
