Court ruling causes concern over agents

Many football coaches and athletics administrators are awaiting the full implications of last week's court ruling that may open the door for underclassmen to play professional football, but most seem to agree that dealing with agents will be the toughest problem.

U.S. District Judge Laughlin Waters ruled that the United States Football League's regulation barring the signing of collegiate underclassmen violates the Sherman Antitrust Act. The decision resulted from a suit filed by Bob Boris, a former punter for the University of Arizona who now is playing for the USFL's Oklahoma Outlaws.

Waters urged the USFL to appeal, however, saying the eligibility rule "involves a controlling question of law as to which there is substantial ground for difference of opinion." The USFL has not replied.

"We're going to survive in college regardless of this ruling," said Fred Akers, football coach at the University of Texas, Austin. "We're not talking about that many people who are capable of going into pro ball before their eligibility expires. The one percent is not who we are concerned with; it's the 99 percent who will be pursued by unscrupulous agents."

"My concern is for these players who will be taken advantage of by agents, who try to convince the 99 percent that they are capable of playing professional football. All agents aren't bad. Some are very interested in the best concerns of the athletes, but this ruling will open more opportunities for athletes to be taken advantage of by agents."

Last year, NCAA President John L. Toner, testifying before the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee, presented the NCAA's position regarding premature signing of student-athletes by professional sports organizations:

"It is the position of the NCAA

I-A legislative meeting set for June 28-29 in Chicago

The first Division I-A midyear legislative meeting, as authorized by 1984 Convention adoption of Proposal No. 38, has been scheduled for Thursday and Friday, June 28-29, at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Chicago.

While details of the meeting format have not yet been approved by the Division I-A members of the NCAA Council, who will serve as the program committee for the meeting, tentative plans call for the meeting to begin at 2 p.m. June 28 and to adjourn by 4 p.m. June 29.

The Division I-A Council members will conduct a telephone conference early this month to complete more detailed planning.

Shortly thereafter, all Division I-A active and voting allied members will receive a mailing regarding the meeting schedule, procedures for submitting legislation for consideration at the meeting and information regarding hotel reservations. The deadline for submission of amendments will be Sunday, April 29, as specified in the legislation.

The Official Notice and Program of the legislative meeting and the form on which chief executive officers will appoint delegates to attend the meeting will be mailed on or before May 14.

Under the provisions of Proposal No. 38, the Division I-A legislative meeting may adopt legislation applicable only to Division I-A. Therefore, the June 28-29 meeting can adopt only football legislation. None of the legislation adopted can become effective until adjournment of the 1985 annual Convention; and since the Division I-A meeting is considered a part of the 1985 Convention, any proposal adopted June 28-29 is subject to rescission at the January Convention.

The meeting also is entitled to propose legislation on nonfootball matters for consideration at the 1985 annual Convention. A deadline also will be established for receipt of such proposals prior to the June 28-29 meeting.

All of the Association's customary Convention procedures apply to the I-A session, including the requirements regarding quorum, limitations on number of delegates, certification and voting procedures, parliamentary authority, amendment procedures, and the special rules of order.

A more detailed meeting format and the names of individuals who will chair various sessions during the June meeting will be announced after they are determined by the Division I-A members of the Council. The I-A Council members are:

Wilford S. Bailey, Auburn University; William H. Baughn, University of Colorado; William D. Bradford, Duke University; Richard W. Burns, University of Texas, El Paso; John R. Davis, Oregon State University; G. Jean Cerra-Decker, University of Missouri, Columbia; Eugene F. Corrigan, University of Notre Dame; Lewis A. Cryer, Pacific Coast Athletic Association; Mary Alice Hill, San Diego State University; David L. Maggard, University of California, Berkeley; Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University; Charles H. Samson, Texas A&M University; Richard G. Shrider, Miami University (Ohio), and Hindman Wall, Tulane University.

Supreme Court again tackles Title IX: a legal analysis

By William D. Kramer

For much of the past decade, Federal government efforts to regulate intercollegiate athletics programs under Title IX were a source of intense controversy. In part, the controversy concerned the reasonableness and legality of particular requirements—such as affirmative-action mandates and the equal per capita expenditure test—advocated by Title IX proponents. But of central importance was a fundamental underlying question—were Title IX regulations governing college sports programs authorized by law?

By its terms, Title IX applies only to "any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance." Nevertheless, the Federal government wrote its regulations so that they applied not to particular programs, but rather to "recipients" of Federal aid. Direct or indirect receipt of aid by any program at an institution or by any student attending an institution was defined to be a sufficient basis for Title IX jurisdiction.

The NCAA and others challenged the regulations on the ground that they were institutional in scope notwithstanding the program-specific limitations of the authorizing statute. They purported to cover particular programs, including college sports programs, without regard to whether those programs received Federal financial assistance.

The Supreme Court now has decided two cases—neither involving athletics—that resolve the basic question of whether Title IX is programmatic or institutional in scope. These cases also provide some guidance with regard to the coverage of athletics programs, but they do not resolve that issue.

In North Haven Board of Education vs. Bell, decided in May 1982, the Supreme Court held that Title IX prohibits discrimination in employment but applies only to specific Federally assisted programs. The court ruled that an agency's authority under Title IX both to promulgate regulations and to terminate funding is program-specific, but it did not discuss what constitutes a "program or activity" or "receipt" of Federal aid under Title IX.

On February 28, 1984, the Supreme Court decided Grove City College vs. Bell, a Title IX case concerning student financial assistance. Grove City College accepts no Federal grants and does not administer any Federal student aid programs. The college refused to execute an assurance of compliance with Title IX on the ground that it did not receive Federal financial assistance for any of its programs. The Federal government originally claimed, and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit ruled, that Title IX applies to all of the programs and activities conducted by Grove City College because students attending the college receive Pell Grants directly from the Federal

Academics give sprinter Nix his biggest kicks

By Jon Hendershott
Track and Field News

Ask Indiana coach Sam Bell what makes Sunder Nix a top 400-meter sprinter and he won't mention things like his speed (44.68—fastest time in the world in 1982), tenacious competitiveness or his ability to come through in the big meets (1983 The Athletics Congress champ; bronze medals in the 1983 NCAA, World University Games and World championships).

Instead, Bell tells this story: "I took Sunder, Dave Volz and Jim Spivey to a Rotary meeting in the fall of 1982. They all had had a lot of success that year, especially Sunder, who won the Sports Festival with the year's fastest time.

"I interviewed each of them, and I asked them what their biggest thrill had been up to then. I meant their biggest thrill in athletics, even though I didn't say that specifically. But Sunder didn't hesitate and replied, 'My biggest thrill is that I have been able to make it academically at Indiana University.' That says a lot about the quality of Sunder Nix.

"Sunder went to a tough, inner-city high school in Chicago, not the kind of school where you would look for kids with academic excellence. He came here on a visit, and I was honest with him.

"I told him he was an academic risk. I told him we knew he was a good runner (Nix ran 46.6 as a senior, the nation's fastest prep time in 1980), but he could come here on one condition.

"That condition was he would come here as a student first. If he wanted to go to college just to run, then he should go somewhere else. I told him that he should know right from the start that studying at this university would be the most difficult thing he would ever do.

"He looked at me and said, 'I like that.' He came here, and he has been exceptional in both his scholastic work and athletics."

If you ask the 22-year-old Nix what his strongest asset as a competitor is, be prepared for an unusual answer: "I feel it all comes back to my schoolwork. If I do well in my studies, then I do well on the track. If I'm not doing well in class, then I might be distracted and not concentrating on the track. How I perform in school has a big effect on how I perform on the track."

But Nix, a forensics major, freely admits to the rewarding feeling that his academic achievements are as important as his running exploits: "Doing well in school has been an inspiration to me in my running. I knew I was coming to a good school and I wanted to prove to myself that I wasn't just some dumb jock who can only run."

Bell says, "Our academic counselors at Indiana are unbelievable in what they will do to help kids and how concerned they are about them. Every time grades are posted, Sunder's counselor asks, 'How did Sunder do?'

"She has told me, 'He is the greatest kid I have ever worked with. All he does is eat, sleep, run, go to class and study. Nobody knows how much of a commitment he has made.'

"Sunder is one of those kids who when you ask him to reach down, he really reaches. It doesn't matter if it's in athletics or schoolwork," Bell said. "Some people have an intestinal fortitude that enables them to reach deeper and get more from themselves than other people can.

"If I had to pick one quality that makes Sunder so good, that would be it. He sees that something has to be done, and he finds a way to do it. He doesn't shrink from any task, and you can't ask for more from anyone."

While Nix's successes in school have inspired him athletically, he points out another, more personal source of desire.

"My family is very close. My brother, two sisters and my mother give me great inspiration," Nix says. "My mother raised us, and I know that was tough for her. Seeing what she had to go through makes me feel that I owe it to her as much as myself to finish college.

"There are a lot of personal things that can really inspire an athlete, and for me, my family is my biggest inspiration."

Says Bell, "Often, people with notable qualities end up achieving great things because someone loves them. That is very obvious in Sunder's case."

On the competitive side, ask Nix why he runs so well in the races that count the most, and he quietly replies, "I guess I just put the most emphasis on the meets that have the top-quality competition. I want to show myself that I can do it.

"Some people felt before Helsinki that the American 400 guys were young and untested in that level of competition. I wanted to run well because I didn't want people to say I couldn't perform up to my abilities in that big of a meet. It was important that I prove to myself that I could perform at the highest level in the world."

Nix left himself a considerable task in the Helsinki final, entering the last straight with a lot of ground to make up. His homestretch charge closed all the way on winner Bert Cameron and silver medal-winning teammate Michael Franks.

"I looked at that race just last week, and it looked like I was almost last coming off the final turn," Nix says. "In the race, I asked myself, 'What am I doing way back here?'

"I'm not saying I definitely would have beaten Bert or Mike, but if I had run smarter, I feel I could have placed much better than third. So I'm still learning how to run my best in top-level races."

Nix's overall season was good enough to rank him No. 2 in the world behind Jamaica's Cameron. Now, as the top American heading into the Olympics, Nix knows his work is cut out for him.

"I always wanted to be the top American," he admits, "and now that I am, I know all the other guys will be keying on me. But I know that as the competition gets stiffer, I will perform like the top American. I just plan to be as ready as I can be this year, and whatever competition I have to face, I will welcome it."

'Bottom-line' thinking poses threat

"Once upon a time, sports were sports. When teams lined up, they aimed for the goal line. Now, more and more often, they're being encouraged to aim for the bottom line.

"The bottom line—the compelling, overriding standard for success in the world of business of television—is threatening America's last bastion of amateurism and purity."

"To be involved in a play-off game and win the national championship is a great thing. I like the playoffs, but I've never been able to figure out how to do it in Division I-A.

"Our players really liked it (the play-off system), but when you're in I-AA, you don't get a chance to get much publicity. For I-AA, it's a great thing. It did affect us academically. A lot of guys had to take incompletes in some courses for the semester. I didn't feel that 14 games were too many."

"Televising bowl games against each other is a bad scene, an unhealthy situation. We're in a trap, but I don't see any answer.

"I was in New Orleans, and for the first two games—the Cotton Bowl on CBS and the Fiesta Bowl on NBC—I sat on the edge of my hotel bed and switched

"If athletes would not use them (steroids), records would stand for 100 years.

"Ultimately, it still boils down to who is psychologically the strongest, the most stable, and who can thus perform best on a given day.

"Often, athletes have been portrayed as social misfits and drug addicts. The misperceptions cover the spectrum—misleading information about the effects of steroids as well as the nature of people who take them. But any substance if abused can harm the health of the abuser."

John Nelson, sports writer
The Associated Press

"Big-time competitive sports create a lot of pressure, reason apologists. So who can blame the athlete if he gets into a little trouble with drugs or alcohol?

"How could they possibly resist buying a little cocaine or overindulging in liquor with all that pressure and with all that money in their pockets?

"Phooey.

"In light of growing research, the excuses just don't wash any longer. Athletes are no more victims of society than anyone else. Their foibles are the same; it's just that sometimes they originate in bigger heads, making them more difficult to find and treat."

Bill Smith, football coach
Houston Aldine High School
Houston Chronicle

"Contrary to popular belief, college football scholarships are not the goal of a high school football program. Scholarships are a bonus, something extra, something perhaps for the student to aspire to, a reason for keeping up his grades and staying eligible.

"But they are not the reason we, as coaches, are hired. The high school football program is valuable to the student because it teaches him to work happily and effectively with others toward a common goal—lessons he will need throughout his life."

Sheldon E. Steinbach, general counsel
American Council on Education

The New York Times

"Over the last 12 years, the spirit of Title IX has been incorporated into the everyday practices and thought processes of administrators, faculty members and students.

"It is highly unlikely that there will be any cutbacks in efforts to achieve equality of opportunity based on sex."

Basketball notes

ACC has nation's best nonconference record

The Atlantic Coast Conference is assured of its 10th first-place ranking in 11 years of nonconference compilations in Division I men's basketball. It has a best-ever 88-11 won-lost record (.889 percentage) against Division I opponents outside the conference, through games of February 18.

In the first five seasons of the 1980s, the ACC has a remarkable record of 410 victories and 99 losses against outside major foes for an .806 winning percentage. The only other conference to finish on top in 11 years of such compilations was the Big Ten Conference, with 84-26 for .764 last season, when the Southeastern Conference was second at .750 and the ACC third with .729.

Interestingly, the ACC's nonconference foes rank no better than sixth nationally this year at .537. The Big Ten's outside schedule ranks No. 1 this year at .569, and the Big Ten dropped to third in winning percentage. A year ago, the Big Ten's opponents were down in 12th place at .513, while the SEC's foes led at .579, with the ACC's opponents second at .570. Obviously, strength of schedule is a factor.

The Big East Conference now ranks second in winning, but its schedule ranks no better than 11th. Only the Big Ten, SEC and Big Eight have top-five winning records against top-five foes:

Southern.....	19 47	.288	2
East Coast.....	21 54	.280	18
Mid-Eastern.....	13 51	.203	24

As the chart shows, a number of conferences rank much higher in opponents' strength of schedule than in won-lost results against outside major foes. A prime example is the Southern Conference, 28th in won-lost percentage but No. 2 in strength of schedule. Obviously, that will move the Southern up many notches in the RPI (rating percentage index). A third factor, not shown on the chart, is the schedule strength of the opponents of your opponents. This recognizes the fact that two opponents with identical won-lost records against majors (both 17-8, for instance) could have faced far different opposition in terms of strength. Usually, the third factor is in the same general range as the second factor, but sometimes the difference proves significant.

All games against opponents below Division I are deleted in these comparisons. This is because major colleges regularly win 90 percent against the nonmajors, with about 600 such games every year. Through February 18, the majors won 524 and lost 55 against nonmajors for a .905 winning percentage.

The NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee will use the RPI rankings only as one source when it meets this weekend to choose the 10 conferences that will send their champions into the preliminary round, then the 24 at-large teams to make up the 53-team field and finally the seedings for the regional brackets.

The RPI is based purely on won-lost, with no point margins involved in any way. Every team and every conference start each season on an even basis and build their records from there. However, many of the nonconference games that separate the teams and conferences in the rankings were played before conference action. The committee studies scores, game sites and conference standings in picking the 24.

Of the 30 conferences in the previous table, 29 will send a champion to an automatic berth in the tournament—all but the Mid-Continent.

25 toughest schedules

The toughest schedule in the country? Well, that honor goes to Virginia, through games of February 18. Its 22 Division I opponents at that stage had a winning percentage of .678 against other Division I teams. North Carolina was next at .671. Others in the top 25 were Villanova .651, Missouri .635, DePaul .628, Purdue .623, Louisville .619, Georgia Tech .617, Maryland .6151, North Carolina State .6150, Northwestern .614, New Mexico State .608, Michigan .6074, Wake Forest .6066, Kentucky .603, Kansas .602, Iowa .5982, Brigham Young .5979, Mississippi State .596, Duke .594, Indiana .591, Wichita State .5904, Auburn .5903, Creighton .5886 and Clemson .5886 (tied for 24th). Most of the 25 have winning records despite their schedules.

A year ago, the final rankings showed Louisville on top at .648, with North Carolina State's national champions second at .646, then Purdue .622, Virginia .614 and Kentucky .606. All five are also on the list of 25 again this year. The Atlantic Coast dominates this year's list, which includes teams from just nine conferences and one independent (DePaul). Southeastern women lead

The Southeastern Conference is assured of first place in the first-ever nonconference compilation for Division I women's basketball, with a 110-25 won-lost record (.815 percentage) against Division I opponents outside the SEC, through February 18.

The Atlantic Coast is a distant second at 59-21 for .738. In third place at 67-34 is the Western Collegiate Athletic Association. Its members are Arizona, Arizona State, UCLA, Cal State Fullerton, Long Beach State, San Diego State, Southern California and Stanford. Southern Cal is the defending national champion.

These three conferences also hold the top three spots in the toughest-schedule ranking, but in a different order. The WCAA leads. Its Division I opponents are .545 against Division I foes other than those in the WCAA. Second is the SEC at .543, then the

Joe Carrabino, Harvard, ranks second in free-throw percentage and is among the leading scorers

ACC at .535.

Rounding out the top 10 in won-lost are the Southwest Athletic, Big Eight, Metro Atlantic, Big East, Atlantic 10, Northern Pacific Athletic Conference (California, Fresno State, Oregon, Oregon State, Pacific, San Francisco, San Jose State, Santa Clara, Washington and Washington State) and the Big Ten. Once again, the conferences with the best records generally play the toughest schedules:

*Champions of these 17 conferences qualify automatically for tournament field.

The NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee will have RPI ratings available for the first time as a help in picking the 15 at-large teams in the 32-team field and for seedings for the regional brackets.

The RPI for women is identical to that for men, but scheduling patterns differ. Games against non-Division I teams are deleted, but there were 1,067 such games played by the 267 women's teams through February 18 and majors won only 64.5 percent. There are 60 independents in the women's game (vs. 21 in the men's). And many Division I women's teams do not play Division I schedules. Four of them had played only one Division I opponent all season through February 18, while 12 others had played nine or fewer. In fact, there is a group of 35 majors (27 are independents) that has played between 41 and 96 percent of the time against nonmajors. As a group, they played 284 games against majors and 470 against nonmajors. Also, four conferences have played between 41 and 56 percent of their outside games against nonmajors.

25 toughest women's schedules

The toughest women's schedule in the country? Tennessee leads the list through games of February 18. Its 25 Division I opponents at that stage had a winning percentage of .716 against other Division I teams. Southern California was next at .692. Others in the top 25 were Old Dominion .690, Kentucky .685,

The top 25 comes from just eight conferences (with 15 from the SEC, ACC and WCAA) and four independents (Louisiana Tech, Cheyney, Stephen F. Austin and Mississippi College).

2,500 career points

Entering this season, only 18 players in Division I men's basketball history had reached 2,500 career points. The club now has 21 members. Centenary's Willie Jackson ended his career with 2,535 points—14th highest. Jackson also finished with 1,113 rebounds, making him the 41st Division I player in history to have at least 2,000 career points and 1,000 career rebounds (North Carolina's Sam Perkins joined the same club earlier this season). Akron's Joe Jakubick finished his career with 2,530 (three-point goals are counted as two points in career compilations; Jakubick had 53 and Jackson almost that many)—good for 15th place. Iona's Steve Burtt now is tied for 19th at 2,503—with NCAA tournament play coming up, since his team won the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference tournament and the automatic berth last weekend.

Seven other men have reached 2,000 career points, bringing that all-time list to 150 players. They are Perkins, Brigham Young's Devin Durrant, North Carolina A&T's Joe Binion, Alabama State's Lewis Jackson, Dayton's Roosevelt Chapman, Yale's Butch Graves and Florida's Ronnie Williams. (Jackson played two seasons in Division II.) Houston's Michael Young can reach 2,000 in tournament play.

Chapman, reports Doug Hauschild, Dayton sports information director, has won four trophies as most valuable player in Dayton's annual holiday tournament but owns none of them. He gave them to his father, Roosevelt Sr.; his mother Ethel; his sister, Rose Chapman McAdoo, and finally to his six-year-old niece, Sharmaine.

Divisions II and III

Framingham State's Mark Van Valkenburg turned a rare trick in Division III by reaching 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds for his career, reports SID Jeff Stone. Van Valkenburg had 2,294 points (a 24.1 average), 1,025 rebounds and shot 62.5 percent from the field. Lowell's John Paganetti, a 3.610 grade-point average student for his career in computer science, scored 2,091 points and led Auburn junior Charles Barkley is second in field-goal accuracy with 63.8 percent his team to its first winning season in its nine-year history, reports B. L. Elfring, SID.

Merrimack's Joe Dickson, with a 3.720 GPA in business, became the second player in school history with 2,000 points. At the first practice in Dickson's freshman year, coach Bert Hammel was not impressed: "I wasn't even sure he'd make the team." (Paul McCarthy, Merrimack SID)

Bauman one of three

Drake senior Lorri Bauman has become just the third player in Division I women's basketball history to reach 3,000 points and 1,000 rebounds over a career. Through March 4, Bauman had 3,035 points and 1,029 rebounds.

The all-time leader is Kansas' Lynette Woodard, with 3,649 points and 1,734 rebounds over four seasons, 1978-1981. UCLA's Denise Curry played the same four seasons and has 3,198 points and 1,310 rebounds. Delta State's Lusia Harris came close in her four seasons ending with 1977—2,981 points and 1,662 rebounds.

Holy Cross SID Gregg Burke reports Sherry Levin has become just the second player in New England women's history to score 2,000 points. Holy Cross men Jack Foley and Ron Perry also reached 2,000, giving Holy Cross three. How many others have three?

Harvard sets all-divisions record

Harvard's men's team has ended the season with a team free-throw percentage of .822, an all-time, all-divisions NCAA men's record, by making 535 in 651 attempts. The former Division I mark was .809 by Ohio State in 1970. The former all-divisions record was .815 by South Alabama (then in Division II) in 1971.

Quotes of the week

California has the shortest team in the Pacific-10. Coach Dick Kuchen on his team's problem in matching up: "Because of the way we match up, we have to do different things every game—dramatically different things. I'm not talking about Band-Aids, I'm talking triple bypass."

Southern California tried to clog the middle in a game at Stanford. Said coach Stan Morrison: "Our defense was so tight that we were fouling each other." (Jim Muldoon, Pacific-10 SID)

Louisiana State's Steffond Johnson had played only 18 minutes in 11 conference games with just three points before going to Mississippi, where he broke loose with career highs for points (20), rebounds (15), minutes (37) and steals (5). Said LSU coach Dale Brown: "I thought Steffond had gone into hibernation with a 'do not disturb' sign." Said Johnson: "A little angel got me the ball a couple of times." (Jimmy Hyams, LSU assistant SID)

Going to bat for the pitchers in women's softball

By David P. Seifert
The NCAA News Staff

Pitching has been described as 80 percent of the game by one women's softball coach. As the 1984 season approaches, a good argument could be made for a higher percentage.

Dominant pitching has been a common trait of NCAA championship teams. It appears to be no different for the preseason favorites this year. Few of those teams have hitters to match.

The performances are becoming legendary. Texas A&M won the Division I championship last year but scored only seven runs in five games. Pitcher Lori Stoll saved the Aggies by allowing just two runs in 47 2/3 innings. The year before, UCLA's Debbie Doom hurled the Bruins to five straight victories and the national championship, allowing one run in 41 2/3 innings.

Doom battled South Carolina's Darlene Lowery last year, winning a 17-inning marathon 2-1 on one unearned run.

This year's list starts with UCLA's Tracy Compton, who won 22 of 23 decisions last year and had a microscopic 0.04 earned-run average. Teammate Doom's ERA was 0.50. But they are not alone. Picking an all-America softball pitcher must be like a kid making a choice at Christmas in a toy store.

Lowery (23-4, 0.10) is one of several pitchers in the South who had earned-run averages lower than 1.00. Louisiana Tech has two of those pitchers—Stacey Johnson and Tami Cyr.

In the Midwest, Kansas has Tracy Bunge (23-8, 0.63) and Oklahoma State has Dale Munn. Terri Whitmarsh of Southwest Missouri State returns after an 0.27 performance last year.

Cal State Fullerton returns ace Susan Lefebvre (26-5, 0.23). If that is not enough, the Titans have added Debbie Mygind, a junior college transfer who was named to the all-world team in 1982 after pitching her native New Zealand team to the world championship.

And the talent does not stop with Division I. As a freshman last year, Kathy Slaten hurled Cal State Northridge to the Division II title. She pitched three shutouts in regional play and three more in the finals series. Stephen F. Austin State has three pitchers returning with sub-1.00 ERAs.

The latest addition to the select group could be Sacred Heart's Debbie Tidy. As a freshman in Sacred Heart's 1983 fall season, her statistics were 11 victories, no losses, 0.08 earned-run average, 148 strikeouts in 88 innings.

However, if these talents seem to guarantee victories, UCLA coach Sharron Backus is unconvinced. Even with Compton and Doom, she sees the Bruins' No. 2 preseason ranking as "hype."

"We are finding out that you must produce runs," said Backus. "The offenses are getting better and learning to time the pitchers. You can no longer get away with just pitching."

That improvement is not enough to change Backus' mind about proposed rules changes to help hitters.

"You never have enough offense," she said. "I want to see home runs. I would move the pitchers back and give the edge to the hitters."

Trenton State coach June Walker, whose team won the 1983 Division III title, is not sure a change in the pitching distance is the answer.

"Professional players tell me that the longer distance allows them to do more with their pitches," she said. "I hope we don't change the rules."

"We have a good balance in Division III, and a team can contend for the national title without super pitching. I would rather see us work on improving our hitters," she added.

Walker may have an effect on that balance, at least this year. Her two best pitchers return—Gina Lamandre was 22-4 and Robin Payne was 17-3 last year. The pair allowed one earned run in 36 innings during the finals series.

Debbie Doom

Tracy Compton

Even if a distance change is the answer, its implementation would not be easy, because college softball is played under the rules of the Amateur Softball Association of the United States.

Top teams, players in Division I

Northeast

Top teams—Rhode Island and Penn State earned regional berths last year, but Massachusetts could be the area's best team this year. Several other teams may be contenders, including Adelphi, Princeton, Brown, Yale, Delaware, Rutgers, Temple, Iona, Rhode Island, La Salle and Towson State.

Top players—Allyson Rioux, ss, Massachusetts (.314); Marge Brown, 1b, Delaware (.309); Tracy Turner, of, Rhode Island (.264); T. J. Bankert, ss, Towson State (.354); Lisa Federici, c, Rider; Lisa Dillon, ss, Rutgers (.311); Debbie Laux, 1b-of, Canisius (.338); Carol Fultz, 2b, Penn State (.375); Carol Pellicano, 3b, Drexel (.419); Doreen Marcus, 2b, Yale (.340).

Top pitchers—Angie Dennis, Princeton (1.61); Denise Marrara, Towson State (9-6, 1.08); Terri Huggins, Adelphi (9-5, 0.53); Lynn Stockley, Massachusetts (15-3, 1.24); Lori Whidden, Rhode Island (14-6, 1.22); Patty Freeman, Delaware (9-5, 1.07).

South

Top teams—Two of the nation's 1983 top five finishers, South Carolina and Louisiana Tech, came from this region. Both could advance that far again on the basis of veteran pitchers. Other contenders should be McNeese State, Nicholls State, Southwestern Louisiana and George Mason.

Top players—Lindi James, of, South Carolina (.351); Lea Ann Jarvis, c, Louisiana Tech (.270); Karen Allen, of, Nicholls State (.241); Kathy Payne, of, George Mason (.492, 12 HR); Tammy Guidry, 1b, McNeese State (.297); Sharen Wynn, 3b, Southwestern Louisiana (.369); Kristie Mellert, 3b, Mississippi State (.364); Julie Robinson, of, Northwestern State (Louisiana) (.372).

Top pitchers—Darlene Lowery, South Carolina (23-4, 0.10); Stacey Johnson, Louisiana Tech (20-7, 0.50); Laura Davis, Nicholls State (19-6, 0.35); Kim Eisnagle, Southwestern Louisiana (14-6, 0.99); Sydney Forrester, Northwestern State (Louisiana) (17-9, 1.35); Tami Cyr, Louisiana Tech (17-4, 0.53).

"We cannot really move until the ASA moves, because so many college players compete in ASA summer leagues," Walker said.

For 1984, the NCAA Women's Softball Committee has adopted a change that could have some effect.

The committee shortened the distance to the outfield fences in championship play, the only portion of the season under the committee's jurisdiction. The fences in left field and right field will be 190 feet from home plate; the center-field distance will be 220 feet.

battle for top honors. Central Michigan and Western Michigan could be national contenders, especially if WMU pitcher Bonnie Kinne is recovered from last season's back injury. Other strong teams include Michigan, Illinois State, Minnesota and Bradley.

Top players—Deanne Moore, 1b, Michigan State (.302 career); Brenda Thaler, 2b, Indiana (.299); Amy Wright, Bowling Green State (.367); Mary Tieg, of-c, Eastern Illinois (.357); Meg Diebel, c, Youngstown State (.292); Linda Bache, ss, Michigan State (.336); Melissa Thomas, of-c, Michigan (.273); Kelly Eldred, inf, Central Michigan (.280); Vickie Schaefer, ss, Illinois State (.308); Terri Sonon, 3b, Western Michigan (.374); Pam Casper, 1b, Bradley (.329).

Top pitchers—Amy Unterbrink, Indiana (20-13, 0.76); Gail DePaoli, Western Illinois (13-10, 0.69); Cathy Tawse, Northwestern (16-7, 0.66); Bonnie Kinne, Western Michigan (17-2, 0.41 in 1982); Nina Calcaterra, Evansville; Nanette Push, Eastern Michigan (10-9, 0.69); Maxine McLaughlin, Illinois State (0.40); Diane Reynolds, Iowa (1.00); Shelly Larned, Miami (Ohio) (9-7, 1.40).

Midwest

Top teams—The Big Eight Conference is expected to have a new champion, Oklahoma State. Last year's powers, Missouri and Kansas, still should be in the race, though. Other area contenders include Southwest Missouri State, Creighton and Oklahoma.

Top players—Denise Eckert, ss, Nebraska (.298 career); Angie Rajtora, Creighton (.355); Donna Sanitate, 3b, Missouri (.297); Malissa East, of, Southwest Missouri State (.290); Laurel Magee, 1b, Northern Iowa (.357); Lisa Rudloff, c, Oklahoma (.181).

Top pitchers—Tracy Bunge, Kansas (23-8, 0.63); Dale Munn, Oklahoma State (12-3); Patti Graham, Oklahoma (1.18 career); Terri Whitmarsh, Southwest Missouri State (11-5, 0.27); Sandy Wolterman, Nebraska (1.40 career); Kris Hutt, Oklahoma City (1.80).

Central

Top teams—Defending national champion Texas A&M must replace

Lori Stoll, who hurled 41 2/3 consecutive scoreless innings last year in championship competition. Her loss may make the Aggies vulnerable, and Utah, New Mexico and Northern Colorado may step forth. Other possible contenders include Texas-Arlington and Utah State.

Top players—Gay McNutt, c, Texas A&M (.209); Cindy Lyon, ss, Utah (.379); Sue Kragseth, 1b-dh, New Mexico (.483); Heidi Schallbach, of, Northern Colorado; Patti Holthaus, 2b, Texas A&M; Shelley Bulin, of, Texas-Arlington (.322); Donna Clark, of, Arkansas State (.421); Cindy Mosteller, 3b, Baylor (.304, 34 RBI); Sue Inman, of, New Mexico (.362).

Top pitchers—Mindy Brown, Texas-Arlington (16-8, 0.78); Sally Swain, Baylor (23-13, 0.95); Allison Masey, New Mexico (4-1, 0.31); Denise Gorman, New Mexico State (10-5, 0.74); Kristie Skoglund, Utah State.

West

Top teams—All reports indicate a race in the West between UCLA and Cal State Fullerton. Some observers believe that they might also be the nation's two best teams. Other area contenders include Cal Poly-Pomona, Arizona and Arizona State.

Top players—Elise King, of, Cal State Fullerton (.293); Sheila Cornell, 1b, UCLA (.226); Sue Lewis, of, Cal State Fullerton (.311, 9 HR); Tami Brown, ss, Arizona State (.257 career); Gayle Kirby, utility, Northern Arizona (.339); Lisa Bernstein, c-dh, Arizona (.272); Katy Murphy, of, San Diego State (.242).

Top pitchers—Tracy Compton, UCLA (22-1, 0.04); Susan Lefebvre, Cal State Fullerton (26-5, 0.23); Debbie Doom, UCLA (18-6, 0.50); Tammy Delp, Cal Poly-Pomona (15-11, 0.70); Tara Kudrna, Nevada-Reno (1.13); Pam Stone, Arizona (7-11, 1.09); Debbie Mygind, Cal State Fullerton (1983 junior college all-America).

Tracy Compton has quite an act to follow—her own.

As the ace of UCLA's pitching staff, Compton allowed one earned run in 168 innings last year to lead the nation with a 0.04 earned-run average, after a freshman year in which she finished fifth nationally with a 0.21 ERA (three earned runs in 101 2/3 innings). She now has a 32-3 career record.

One goal eludes her, though, and that is a complete performance in the Softball College World Series. She shared a no-hitter with teammate Debbie Doom in 1982 before succumbing to arm problems.

Division II statistics

Kathy Slaten took the Division II softball world by storm last year as a freshman, pitching Cal State Northridge to the division championship.

Her accomplishments included finishing second in all three pitching areas. She had an earned-run average of 0.20, allowing eight earned runs in 278 1/3 innings. But she lost the ERA crown to Southern Connecticut State's Gail Holznagel by 0.003—0.198 to 0.201.

Slaten had 21 victories, finishing second to Bloomsburg's Tina Souders. And Slaten averaged 7.8 strikeouts per nine innings, also second to Souders.

Northeast

Top teams—Sacred Heart, last year's fourth-place team, is expected to be a challenger for national honors again. The veteran Pioneers have added an outstanding freshman pitcher. Top challengers from the area include Springfield, Southern Connecticut State and Central Connecticut State. Other hopefuls are Stonehill, C. W. Post, Lowell, New Hampshire College, Assumption and American International.

Top players—Karen Vitko, of, New Hampshire College (.450, 28 RBI); Kathy Mangano, 1b, Springfield (.351); Kathy Brady, inf, St. Anselm (.381); Elizabeth Luckie, ss, Sacred Heart (.327); Deb Webber, of, Keene State (.312); Bev Smith, c, Bentley (.395); Helen Phillips, of-ss, Stonehill (.309); Lisa Nucci, 1b, New York Tech (.400); Sue Dimaso, 2b, Southampton (.393); Tammy Delile, 2b, Long Island (.340).

Top pitchers—Donna Cweklinsky, New Haven (8-8, 1.78); Tammy Owen, Springfield (0.80); Julie McGivern, Stonehill (8-3, 0.97); Lynne Wright, Bryant (0.27); Debbie Fisk, Sacred Heart (7-0); Debbie Tidy, Sacred Heart.

Mid-Atlantic

Top teams—Bloomsburg has one of the nation's best pitching staffs and should repeat its regional appearance. Two Bloomsburg hurlers combined for a 33-2 record a year ago. Akron should be the area's top challenger, with Charleston, Mercyhurst, Slippery Rock and Mount St. Mary's the other contenders.

Top players—Kay Piper, ss, Akron (.452, 44 RBI); Lynn Miller, 1b, Shippensburg (.383); Nancy Twomey, c, Mount St. Mary's (.407); Tina Martin, 1b, Lock Haven (.312); Denise Henderson, c, Bloomsburg (.411); Rita Liberti, c, Edinboro (.281); Tracy Hayden, of, Seton Hall (.282).

Top pitchers—Tina Souders, Bloomsburg (22-2, 0.24); Dani Vance, Akron (10-2, 0.95); Ginny Neis, Lock Haven (10-2, 0.97); Cindy Pomarico, East Stroudsburg (1.67); Denise Dombach, Shippensburg (7-0, 2.24).

South

Top teams—Sam Houston State and Stephen F. Austin State finished second and third, respectively, last year; Sam Houston State won the 1982 national title. Both could be as strong this year. Liberty Baptist also could be a national contender.

Top players—Beth Smith, of, Sam Houston State (.315); Carol Sullivan, 3b, Sam Houston State (.271); Dee Galarneau, c-ss, Liberty Baptist (.381).

Top pitchers—Kathy Phillips, Sam Houston State (23-3, 0.65); Pam Clay, Stephen F. Austin State (14-7, 0.77); Julie Doxtad, Stephen F. Austin State (11-3, 0.78); Stacy Smith, Stephen F. Austin State (11-5, 0.54).

Central

Top teams—Wayne State (Michigan), Northeast Missouri State and Northwest Missouri State could be among the nation's top 10. Other area contenders should be Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, Wisconsin-Parkside, Central Missouri State and Lewis.

Top players—Carol Krause, 2b, Wayne State (Michigan) (.349); Jackie Rittmer, of, Wisconsin-Parkside (.333); Linda Venable, of, Southeast Missouri State (.285); Margaret Brandt, of, Lewis (.426); Tami Reed, 3b, Northeast Missouri State (.274); Colleen Moore, of, Central Missouri State (.273); Kathy Rediger, 1b, Southeast Missouri State (.282); Jan Johnson, ss, Lake Superior State (.448); Sherry Strandt, ss, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (.325).

Top pitchers—Brenda Jefferson, Northeast Missouri State (10-3, 0.48); Roxanne Szczesniak, Wayne State

(Michigan) (17-5, 0.60); Michelle Martino, Wisconsin-Parkside (18-7, 0.80); Marcia Ashworth, Indiana State-Evansville (19-3, 1.12); Sue Bear, Lewis (9-4, 0.24); Shelley Lewis, Northwest Missouri State (9-7, 0.95); Pam Warner, Central Missouri State (18-2, 0.18 in junior college).

Midwest

Top teams—Several teams are expected to compete for top honors in this region, including Augustana (South Dakota), Minnesota-Duluth and Nebraska-Omaha. Other challengers include Mankato State, St. Cloud State, Drake, North Dakota State and Winona State.

Top players—Sue Sajevec, 2b, Minnesota-Duluth (.345); Kris Fering, ss, Augustana (South Dakota); Linda Nelson, of-1b, St. Cloud State (.268); Kathy Magda, of, Metropolitan State (.306); Jessica Cummins, 2b, North Dakota (.254, 16 stolen bases); Kathy Fletcher, c, Mankato State.

Top pitchers—Julie Engmark, St. Cloud State (10-10, 1.28; .513 batting average); Diane Ruhl, Minnesota-Duluth (9-5, 1.20); Liz Aiken, Mankato State; Kristi Putnam, North Dakota (12-8, 3.35).

West

Top teams—The challenge for teams in this area will be beating Cal State Northridge pitcher Kathy Slaten. The Matadors have not allowed an earned run in 64 innings of championship play, and Slaten's three shutouts in 1983 were instrumental. Contenders include Cal State Chico, Cal State Sacramento, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, California-Riverside, Cal State Dominguez Hills, Portland State, Chapman and San Francisco State.

Top players—Kathy Toerner, ss, Cal State Northridge (.257); Jill Hancock, of, Cal Poly-SLO (.359); Terri Beyer, Cal State Sacramento (.311); Kim Williams, of, Sonoma State (.281); Becky Peterson, 3b, Southern Utah State (.319); Barbara Lantz, 3b, Cal State Chico; Janet Lloyd, 1b, Chapman; Jan Fosberg, c, Cal State Hayward (.265).

Top pitchers—Kathy Slaten, Cal State Northridge (21-9, 0.20); Rhonda Haun, Portland State (8-2, 1.02); Tracy Latino, Cal State Sacramento (15-7, 0.73); Barbara Steffen, Cal State Dominguez Hills (0.89).

New England

Top teams—Last year's third-place team, Eastern Connecticut State, is expected to contend for a tournament spot again. The Warriors' top area challengers should be Westfield State and Salem State. Other contenders are Southern Maine, MIT, Plymouth State and Brandeis.

Top players—Nancy Marticio, 1b, Salem State (.459); Elaine Flanagan, 3b, Plymouth State (.403); Cherry Bennett, of, Bates (.406); Cindy Walz, dh, Eastern Connecticut State (.395); Diane Gora, 3b, Mount Holyoke (.409); Patti Boulter-Joyce, of, Southern Maine; Mary Beth Connolly, of, Regis (.428); Lisa Pizzano, of, Salem State (.405); Judy Neri, ss, Brandeis (.359); Linda Baroncelli, of, Colby (.468); Donna Dinola, of, Plymouth State (.446).

Top pitchers—Lisa Kirk, Eastern Connecticut State (13-3, 0.69); Cindy Robinson, MIT (9-6, 2.05); Karen Whincup, Salem State (9-6, 1.23); Kathy Chase, Western New England (6-6).

East

Top teams—Ithaca, with its best pitcher returning from its 1983 fifth-place team, again is considered to be the best team in the area. Several other teams appear to be serious challengers, including Cortland State, Albany (New York), Buffalo State and Oswego State. Queens and Brockport State are other possible contenders.

Top players—Angie Ryan, of, Oswego State (.393); Cathy Hughes, ss, Molloy (.581); Cheri Goetcheus, 2b, Ithaca (.280); Margaret Bernard, of-p, Hunter; Heather Wilson, c, Cortland State (.333); Jill Spage, Stony Brook (.360).

Top pitchers—Jo Burruby, Ithaca (10-5, 0.79); Patti Collins, Buffalo State (9-6); Barb Matteson, Geneseo State (1.08); Nancy Bock, Binghamton (1.26).

Mideast

Top teams—Scranton has earned a tournament bid the past two seasons and could be ready to advance to the finals series this year. Top challengers will include Allegheny (last year's Mideast regional winner), Ohio Northern, Calvin, Widener, Alma, Wilkes, Gettysburg, Mount Union, Ursinus and Albion.

Gina Lamandre

Top players—Terry Carvey, 3b, Alma (.346); Cathy Bachinski, c, Albion (.333); Carol Modica, ss, Ohio Northern (.338); Michelle Zawoiski, ss, Wilkes (.357, 8 HR); Brenda Bates, 3b, Allegheny; Janni TerMolen, c, Calvin (.263); Beth Hilbert, of, Elizabethtown (.381); Nancy Irwin, of-c, Allentown (.563); Ellen Namey, c, Thiel (.391); Patti Pethick, of, Scranton (.376); Diane Reppa, 1b, Muhlenberg (.467).

Division III statistics

The list of outstanding pitchers in women's college softball seems endless. But when it comes to hitters, Rita Schulz stands alone.

Schulz, a catcher for Illinois Benedictine, has hit better than .500 the past two seasons—the only college softball player to do so. She led the nation's Division III hitters in 1982 with a .505 average. Last year, she hit .511, finishing second to North Park's Angela Devaul (.617).

She also was one of the nation's top power hitters last year, finishing second in both home runs and runs batted in for the second consecutive season. She also was sixth in doubles.

Longhorns' hopes rest with Fran Harris

Longhorns, without Smith, hope to retain No. 1 spot

By the time the final four teams are determined, the 1984 Division I Women's Basketball Championship may look very similar to last year's, although coach Jody Conradt's Texas Longhorns may interrupt the reunion celebration.

Texas, the nation's top-ranked team with a 27-2 record and winner of the regular-season Southwest Athletic Conference title, is followed in the latest rankings by last year's final-four participants—Louisiana Tech (26-2), Southern California (23-3), Georgia (25-2) and Old Dominion (20-4).

The four teams that meet at Pauley Pavilion in Los Angeles March 30 and April 1 for the NCAA championship will have survived some tough conference races and intense play-off competition. First-round play begins March 15-18, and the regionals will be played March 22-25.

The 32-team bracket will be composed of champions of 17 automatic-qualifying conferences and 15 teams selected at large (teams will be selected March 11); and with the quality teams of some conferences, most of the at-large selections likely will come from conferences.

Take the Southeastern Conference, for instance, where six teams might be selected. Georgia won the Eastern regular-season title, and Mississippi (23-4) won the Western division. Other teams from the Southeastern Conference (all ranked in the top 20) under consideration are Tennessee (19-8), Alabama (20-7), Louisiana State (21-5) and Auburn (18-9).

Right behind the Southeastern in the number of top-ranked teams are the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Western Collegiate Athletic Association.

Virginia (21-5) won the ACC regular-season title, but North Carolina State (20-7), Maryland (18-8), Clemson (19-8) and North Carolina (20-7) will be fighting for a tournament berth in the conference postseason tournament.

Southern California, which sandwiched 10- and 13-game winning streaks around a three-game mid-season losing streak, must defeat Long Beach State in its final regular-season game to gain the WCAA's automatic bid. Both teams, however, are certain entrants in the 32-team field.

The defending-champion Trojans lost road games in early January to Texas, Louisiana Tech and Old Dominion, but coach Linda Sharp's team has the attack rolling again. Southern Cal has an awesome front-court with Cheryl Miller (22.3 scoring average), and the McGee twins, Pam and Paula.

Long Beach State (20-5) has found that life without LaTaunya Pollard, the nation's leading scorer last year, is not all that bad. The 49ers are ranked sixth in the latest poll.

Louisiana Tech, winner of the first NCAA tournament and runner-up last year, is likely to appear in its third championship. The Lady Techsters, led by Janice Lawrence (20.4), Pam Gant (57.4 field-goal percentage), Debra Rodman and play-making guard Kim Mulkey, have lost only to Old Dominion and Memphis State.

Texas' chances were dimmed somewhat last week when leading scorer Annette Smith suffered a knee injury that will require immediate surgery. She was averaging 24.9 points per game, 12th in the nation. The Longhorns' only losses were to Georgia and Drake.

Old Dominion won the regular-season title in the Sun Belt Conference and should gain a berth in the tournament. The Monarchs have rebounded from the loss of 6-8 Anne Donovan with the help of Medina Dixon (20.3) and Kansas transfer Tracy Claxton.

Here is a look at the top teams in each of the automatic-qualifying conferences and the top independents, with season records as of March 2.

Atlantic Coast—Clemson (19-8), Maryland (18-8), North Carolina (20-7), North Carolina State (20-7) and Virginia (21-5).

Atlantic 10—Penn State (16-11) and Rutgers (19-8).

Big East—Pittsburgh (15-11), St. John's (New York) (21-5) and Villanova (21-6).

Big Eight—Kansas State (21-5) and Missouri (23-3).

Big Ten—Ohio State (19-6).

Gateway Collegiate—Drake (19-6) and Southern Illinois (20-4).

High Country—Brigham Young (16-7), New Mexico (13-11) and Utah (17-8).

Metropolitan Collegiate—Cincinnati (16-11), Memphis State (14-11) and South Carolina (16-10).

Mid-American—Central Michigan (23-2).

Mountain West—Montana (21-3).

Northern Pacific—California (21-5), Oregon (21-5) and Oregon State (19-6).

Ohio Valley—Middle Tennessee State (16-9) and Tennessee Tech (16-9).

Southeastern—Alabama (20-7), Auburn (18-9), Georgia (25-2), Louisiana State (21-5), Mississippi (23-4) and Tennessee (19-8).

Southland—Northeast Louisiana (20-3).

Southwest—Arkansas (19-8), Texas (27-2) and Texas Tech (22-5).

Sun Belt—Old Dominion (20-4).

Western Collegiate—Long Beach State (20-5), San Diego State (21-4), Southern California (23-3) and UCLA (17-10).

Independents—Cheyenne (22-4) and Louisiana Tech (26-2).

Division I men's basketball rated a tossup

Predicting the outcome of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship is about as difficult as forecasting weather. In the past seven years, seven teams have won the coveted honor, including North Carolina State, which pulled off a miraculous finish last year.

If the streak of different champions is to continue, Georgetown appears to be the candidate. The Hoyas, 26-2, made it to the 1982 championship final, losing to North Carolina. Pat Ewing, a freshman in 1982, is the leader of coach John Thompson's squad. Georgetown won the regular-season title in the Big East Conference and is a certain tournament entrant regardless of the outcome of the conference's postseason tournament this week in New York City.

On the other hand, if one of the previous seven champions is to repeat, it likely will be North Carolina, which survived the Atlantic Coast Conference schedule unblemished. The Tar Heels' only loss this season was to Arkansas in Pine Bluff, Arkansas. Coach Dean Smith's team, ranked No. 1 most of the season, is led by junior Michael Jordan and senior Sam Perkins.

There are other possibilities, of course. Houston, last year's runner-up, rebounded from the loss of Clyde Drexler and Larry Micheaux with a 26-4 record. Kentucky, the 1978 champion, won the regular-season title in the rugged Southeastern Conference and has been boosted by the return of Sam Bowie. Louisville has had an up-and-down year, but coach Denny Crum's Cardinals always are tough at tournament time.

Some teams with surprisingly good seasons were Oklahoma (27-3), DePaul (24-2) and UTEP (25-3). Then there are the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Ten and Southeastern Conferences, which always seem to have more than three representatives in the tournament.

The 46th annual tournament actually begins March 11, when the Division I Men's Basketball Committee announces the teams that will compete in the 53-team field.

Included among the 53 teams will be champions of the 29 automatic-qualifying conferences. Ten of those conference champions will compete in the opening round of the tournament March 13. Four of the opening-round winners will be placed in the 48-team field as No. 12 seeds; the fifth opening-round winner will be a No. 11 seed.

First- and second-round games will be played March 15-18, and the regionals will be conducted March 22-25. The Final Four is scheduled

March 31 and April 2 at the Kingdome in Seattle, Washington.

Four of the 53 teams had officially qualified as of March 5. Iona (Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference), Alabama-Birmingham (Sun Belt Conference) and Marshall (Southern Conference) all won postseason tournaments last weekend. Princeton, 17-9, won the Ivy League title.

Remaining conference tournaments will be held this week.

Here is a look at the leading teams from each of the automatic-qualifying conferences and the top independents, with season records through games of March 4:

Atlantic Coast—Duke (22-8), Georgia Tech (18-9), Maryland (20-7), North Carolina (25-1), North Carolina State (19-12), Virginia (17-10) and Wake Forest (20-7).

Atlantic 10—Temple (24-3) and St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) (20-7).

Big East—Boston College (17-10), Georgetown (26-2), St. John's (New York) (17-10) and Syracuse (20-7).

Big Eight—Kansas (18-9) and Oklahoma (27-3).

Big Sky—Montana (21-6) and Weber State (21-6).

Big Ten—Illinois (22-4), Indiana (19-8) and Purdue (20-6).

East Coast—Bucknell (22-4).

ECAC Metro—Long Island (17-10) and Robert Morris (15-12).

ECAC North Atlantic—Northeastern (23-4). ECAC South—George Mason (21-6) and Richmond (18-9).

Ivy—*Princeton (17-9).

Metro Atlantic—*Iona (23-7), St. Peter's (23-5).

Metropolitan Collegiate—Louisville (21-9), Memphis State (21-6), Tulane (17-10) and Virginia Tech (16-11).

Mid-American—Miami (Ohio) (21-5).

Mid-Eastern—North Carolina A&T (22-6).

Midwestern City—Loyola (Illinois) (19-8) and Oral Roberts (18-9).

Missouri Valley—Illinois State (21-6) and Tulsa (24-3).

Ohio Valley—Morehead State (22-5).

Pacific Coast—California-Irvine (18-9), Fresno State (21-7), Nevada-Las Vegas (25-4) and Utah State (18-9).

Pacific-10—Oregon State (20-6), UCLA (16-10) and Washington (20-6).

Southeastern—Alabama (17-10), Auburn (18-9), Kentucky (23-4) and Louisiana State (18-9).

Southern—*Marshall (24-5) and Tennessee-Chattanooga (23-5).

Southland—Lamar (24-3).

Southwest—Arkansas (24-5), Houston (26-4) and Southern Methodist (24-6).

Southwestern—Alcorn State (20-6).

Sun Belt—*Alabama-Birmingham (21-10), South Alabama (20-6) and Virginia Commonwealth (21-5).

Trans America—Houston Baptist (20-6), Samford (20-7).

West Coast—San Diego (17-9).

Western Athletic—Brigham Young (19-9), New Mexico (22-9) and UTEP (25-3).

Independents—Dayton (17-10), DePaul (24-2), Marquette (16-11), Nicholls State (19-7), Southeastern Louisiana (20-8), Stetson (19-9) and Texas-San Antonio (20-8).

Ice hockey crown up for grabs

The 1984 NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship could be one of the more wide-open tournaments in the event's 37-year history. Defending champion Wisconsin will have to fight its way out of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association play-offs just to earn a bid, and any one of several teams could succeed the Badgers.

Here are some of the factors to consider:

- The team with the best record, Rensselaer (27-3), is from the East. That region has produced just five national champions in the past 20 years. Rensselaer has not won the title since 1954.

- The team that has been ranked No. 1 most of the season, Bowling Green State (30-4-2), has never finished higher than third.

- Another top-ranked team at times this season, Minnesota-Duluth (24-9-2), was considered to have only an outside chance at the WCHA title before the season.

- There is no clear favorite for the Hobey Baker Award, college ice hockey's answer to the Heisman. The highest-rated teams, in particular, have not relied on stars.

Eight teams will be selected March 11 for championship play, which begins March 16-17 with two-game, total-goals series on the campuses of participating institutions. Two Eastern institutions and two Western institutions will be selected as hosts for first-round games.

First-round winners will advance to the semifinals and finals March 24-26 at Lake Placid, New York, site of the 1980 Winter Olympic Games.

Winners of postseason tournaments in the WCHA, Eastern College Athletic Conference and Central Collegiate Hockey Association qualify automatically. Three additional at-large teams will be selected from the East, one from the WCHA and one from the CCHA.

Minnesota-Duluth won the WCHA regular-season title but will not breeze through the conference play-offs. North Dakota (25-10-2), Minnesota (27-9-2) and Wisconsin (21-15-2) are the top challengers. Minnesota-Duluth's Bill Watson has been the league's top scorer, while goaltender Jon Casey has played all but one game for North Dakota.

Bowling Green, the regular-season CCHA champ, lost a tournament spot a year ago after an upset in the league play-offs. The Falcons have relied on veterans John Samanski (forward) and Garry Galley (defense) in their title defense. Top CCHA contenders include Ohio State (27-9-1), with the nation's top-scoring forward line, and Michigan State (28-10).

In the East, Boston College (22-6) and Boston University (22-6-1) are close behind Rensselaer. Several other teams are in contention for a bid, including Clarkson (16-10), New Hampshire (18-13-1), Providence (19-10-2) and Harvard (9-11-2).

Kenyon seeks fifth title in row

Kenyon will be seeking its fifth consecutive title March 15-17 at the Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships when coach Jim Steen's Lords challenge the competition at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia.

Only one Division III head coach has won more consecutive NCAA titles—Cal State Stanislaus golf coach Jim Hanny won six straight Division III Men's Golf Championships from 1976 through 1981.

Kenyon's talent should be sufficient to win No. 5, although Wheaton (Illinois), Johns Hopkins, Claremont-Mudd-Scripps and UC San Diego will provide stiff competition.

Jim Born and Paul Barnett are the top Kenyon freestyle swimmers, with best marks of 21.63 and 21.68 respectively, at 50 yards. In the longer freestyle events, Chris Cunningham, Born, Craig Hummer, George Pond and Todd Perrot are the top hopefuls.

Swimming the backstroke events for the Lords are Karel Starek, Rick Callinan and Hummer. Other top Kenyon swimmers are Peter Loomis (breaststroke), Michael Solomon (butterfly) and J. B. Goessman (breaststroke).

Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, runner-up last year, is led by Tom Harrison, who won the 200 butterfly and both individual medley events last year. Nick Bagatelos, in the breaststroke events, and Eric Ryba, butterfly, are other top Claremont swimmers.

Wheaton, ninth a year ago, is certain to finish higher with quality swimmers in a number of events. Mike Mazzone (distance freestyle events), Steve King (butterfly) and Lyndon Perry (individual medley) should help the Crusaders crack the top five this year.

Johns Hopkins, three-time winner of the Division III championships prior to Kenyon's current streak, returns one champion from last year—distance freestyle swimmer Michael Leonhardt, who won the 1,650-yard event. He was third at 200 yards and second at 500 yards.

Another top performer for Johns Hopkins is breaststroke specialist Wink Dyer, who finished 10th last year in the 200-yard event.

If the freestyle events are any indication, UC San Diego should be a serious title contender. The Tritons have six of the nation's top-ranked freestylers—Peter Ackhoff (sprints),

Division I women's swimming

Florida, Stanford share the spotlight

Stanford and Florida traded the Nos. 1 and 2 positions in the first two NCAA Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships, and the third meet March 15-17 in Indianapolis, Indiana, could result in that same combination.

Stanford is strong again. Florida will be led by the sensational Tracy Caulkins. Texas has Joan Pennington and Kirstin Wengler, and the Longhorns will be right up there. The potential for a highly competitive championship is obvious.

Top prospects for Stanford are Diana Zock and Krissie Bush in sprint freestyle events and Marybeth Linzmeier, the 500-yard freestyle champion in 1983.

The Cardinal has three potential scorers in the breaststroke events—Susan Rapp, Kathy Smith and Anne Tweedy. All have title potential. Rapp also is strong in the butterfly events and individual-medley competition. And Patty Gavin is expected to score in the backstroke events.

Florida's ever-present Caulkins, who is at her best in the individual medley events, also is a threat in the butterfly, breaststroke and freestyle, or in any event in which she is entered, it seems.

Other Gator standouts are Kathy Treible in the sprint freestyles and breaststroke events and Treible, Laureen Welting and Mary Wayte in the 500-yard freestyle.

A number of conference championships already have been held, and several names have emerged as contenders for NCAA titles.

Kansas won the Big Eight title, and Ohio State the Big Ten. California took top honors in the Northern Pacific Athletic Conference, and Texas won the Southwest Athletic Conference crown.

Kansas' Tammy Pease has gone 23.39 for 50 yards, and she won the Big Eight 100-yard title in 51.42.

Southern California coach Don Lamont will counter with Sue Habernigg and one of the strongest teams in the field. The Trojans have been ranked among the top five all year in the College Swimming Coaches Association weekly poll.

North Carolina again will be strong, and Tar Heel Sue Walsh will ably defend her 1983 backstroke titles. UCLA, Southern Illinois, Auburn and Alabama should do well; each has top performers in many events.

Top talent returns in the sprint freestyle events. Other familiar names include Habernigg, Walsh (a fine sprinter as well as backstroker), Texas' Pennington and Wengler, and Amy Pless of North Carolina. In the 500-yard freestyle, Agnetta Eriksson and Patty Sabo should swim well for Texas.

Dana Powers of Nebraska will join Pease as Big Eight threats in the sprints. Also watch for Kathy O'Donnell of South Carolina, Annie Lett of Auburn and Sarah Yeatman of Virginia.

The return of Southern California's Cynthia Woodhead makes the Trojans especially strong in the longer freestyle events. Other Trojan standouts here include Habernigg, who won the 1983 title at 200 yards; Carol Peterson; Karen Gould; Lisa Wen; Jenny Johnston, and Michelle Ford. USC could score heavily in these events.

Polly Winde of North Carolina has done well in the longer distances, and Cheryl Gillet of Arizona State easily could make the finals.

North Carolina's Walsh will be favored in the backstroke events, with additional competition coming from Tori Trees of Texas, Diane Graner of UCLA, Sandy McIntyre of Auburn, Megan Bresnahan of Georgia, Kelly Cox of USC and Susan Hagberg of South Carolina.

Other scoring potential in the breaststroke events includes North Carolina's Winde, Angelika Knipping of Alabama, Sara Guido and Dawn Kirchner of Texas, and Amanda Martin of Southern Illinois.

Texas may score heavily in the butterfly events, with four potential finalists on the roster—Kara McGrath, Jodi Eyles, Terianne McGuirk and Agnetta Eriksson. USC's Woodhead may surprise everyone in these events, and Jenny Wagstaff of Kansas could be a threat.

The individual medley competition could be the highlight of the meet. Vera Barker of Southern California will do well, as will Michelle Merchant of Arizona State, Pless of North Carolina and Lisa McClain of Alabama.

The team relays competition includes Stanford, Texas, Florida, Southern California, Alabama and North Carolina. These events may decide the team title.

Mountaineers on target in rifle

West Virginia's qualifying scores for the 1984 NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle Championships are better than the existing meet record, suggesting that the Mountaineers have enough firepower to defend their 1983 title.

Coach Ed Etzel's team turned in a team smallbore score of 4,665 and an air rifle total of 1,556 for an aggregate of 6,221. The existing championships record, set in 1980 by then-champion Tennessee Tech, is 6,201.

In a surprise, Eastern Kentucky edged perennial powers Tennessee Tech and East Tennessee State for second place in each team event. The Colonels fired smallbore and air rifle scores of 4,626 and 1,527, respectively.

Eight teams qualified for each of the team finals, with seven eligible for the overall championship. St. John's (New York) qualified a team for the smallbore competition, while Navy's team qualified only for air rifle.

Other teams shooting for the overall championship, which will be decided March 16-17 at Murray State University, include Tennessee Tech, host Murray State, East Tennessee State, Army and Eastern Washington.

The teams will be seeded in the following order in each event. Qualifying scores are listed:

Smallbore—1. West Virginia, 4,665; 2. Eastern Kentucky 4,626; 3. Tennessee Tech, 4,608; 4. Murray State 4,593; 5. East Tennessee State, 4,578; 6. Army, 4,553; 7. St. John's (New York), 4,547; 8. Eastern Washington, 4,509.

Air Rifle—1. West Virginia, 1,556; 2. Eastern Kentucky, 1,527; 3. Tennessee Tech, 1,522; 4. Murray State, 1,511 (89 10s); 5. East Tennessee State 1,511 (84 10s); 6. Army, 1,509; 7. Eastern Washington, 1,508. 8. Navy, 1,491.

Smallbore champion David Johnson of West Virginia will be back to defend his title after posting the top qualifying score at 1,181. Mountaineer freshman Mike Anti fired the top individual air rifle qualifying score with 394. Both scores are higher than the 1983 winning totals, and Anti's is higher than the existing air rifle record of 391, turned in by former WVU marksman John Rost.

Individual qualifiers are listed

David Ridenour, West Virginia, 1,157; Kerry Spurgin, Murray State, 1,157; Bob Broughton, West Virginia, 1,155; Terry Sievert, Eastern Kentucky, 1,154; Tracy Dunham, Eastern Kentucky, 1,152; Mark Schulz, Eastern Washington, 1,151; John Griffith, Eastern Kentucky, 1,151; Elizabeth McKay, East Tennessee State, 1,151; Kurt Kisch, East Tennessee State, 1,150; Rhonda Barush, Army, 1,148.

Mike Munn, Tennessee Tech, 1,148; Chris Lair, Western Kentucky, 1,148; Erik Kugler, Tennessee-Martin, 1,147; Bill Thomas, East Tennessee State, 1,145; Joe McGuigan, East Tennessee State, 1,143; Alan Sherman, St. John's (New York), 1,142; Craig Blake, St. John's (New York), 1,142; Jonathan Orenstein, St. John's (New York), 1,142; Bart McNealy, West Virginia, 1,141; David Cannella, Army, 1,141.

Jesse Johnston, Tennessee Tech, 1,141; Denise Loring, King's, 1,140; Paul Cornett, Washington State, 1,139; Randy Horton, Murray State, 1,139; David Yeager, East Tennessee State, 1,139; Laura O'Daly, East Tennessee State, 1,138; Dana Wigger, Eastern Kentucky, 1,136; Robert Dell, St. John's (New York), 1,136;

Briefly in the News

The University of North Carolina, Asheville, plans to join the new Big South Conference and apply for Division II status within the NCAA as part of an overall plan to obtain Division I membership within a few years. Currently, there are eight other conference members. . . . The Roadrunner Club, a sports booster club, has been organized at Metropolitan State College to establish grants-in-aid for the athletics teams, including a men's varsity basketball team, which will resume play in 1984-85 after a six-year absence. . . . Big Ten Conference basketball has exceeded the one-million attendance mark for conference games for the seventh consecutive year. The current average attendance for conference games is 12,790, which is well ahead of the Big Ten and NCAA record of 12,458 set by the Big Ten in 1980. . . . The U.S. Volleyball Association national convention will be held May 12-13 in Bellevue, Washington, with the theme "What Price Gold?" The 55th U.S. National Championships will follow May 14-19 in Seattle. For more information, contact Jenny Walsh, USVBA, 1750 E. Boulder Street, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80909.

Henry Ellard, former football player at Fresno State University and now a member of the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League, has donated a full scholarship to his alma mater's athletics program. The donation has been written into his contract with the Rams. Ellard's gift will be earmarked to help offset the educational expenses of fifth-year student-athletes who have completed their eligibility. . . . Duke University also is setting basketball attendance records. The Blue Devils ended their season with 129,740 total attendance, a record. In the past two seasons, more than 250,000 fans have watched Duke play at home.

Wylie Smith, sports information director at Northern Arizona University, has been named chair of the College Sports Information Directors of America postgraduate scholarship committee. Those eligible for the scholarship are male and female assistant SIDs who plan to attend graduate school while pursuing a career in sports information. The deadline is April 15, and applications with letters of recommendation and resumes can be sent to Smith at P.O. Box 15400, Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, Arizona 86011. . . . Lyell Bremser, the voice of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Cornhuskers for radio station KFAB, is retiring after 45 years. He will continue as vice-president and general manager of the station. His replacement will be Kent Pavelka, who has done color commentary on the Cornhuskers on KFAB for several seasons.

Women's athletics programs continue to grow at NCAA member institutions. St. Anselm College will field a soccer team for the first time next fall. Women then will have eight sports at the school. . . . Women's cross country will become a varsity sport at Lewis University next fall. The team will be coached by Mike Reich, who also coaches the men's team. . . . East Stroudsburg University of Pennsylvania has added women's indoor track and field under coach Bob Smith, who also heads the women's outdoor track and field and cross country teams. Indoor track becomes the 11th women's varsity sport at the school. . . . Gettysburg College has elevated women's track to varsity status, the ninth women's sport at that level. Ed Riggs, men's coach, also will coach the women. . . . and St. Francis College (Pennsylvania) has added rifle as a varsity sport. The addition will give the school nine sports for men and four for women. Bruce Rippin will coach the team.

Publications catalogs are mailed

Publications catalogs and order forms for the 1984 series of NCAA publications have been mailed, providing athletics administrators and other customers the opportunity to place their annual orders.

Orders for NCAA publications produced throughout the year may be ordered at one time, and the books will be shipped as they become available.

Included in the catalog is a description of all the publications produced by the Association. Membership publications, playing rules in 12 sports and The NCAA News are included.

Publications that will become available in March include the NCAA Manual; the NCAA Guide for the College-Bound Student-Athlete; the Sports Participation Survey, Report Number Six, and the Foreign Student Handbook.

The Manual ($4 members, $8 nonmembers) contains all current NCAA legislation, interpretations, executive regulations, enforcement procedure and recommended policies.

The NCAA Guide for the College-Bound Student-Athlete is a summary of the eligibility, recruiting, transfer and financial aid rules contained in the Manual. It is available in lots of 50 for $8.50.

The Sports Participation Survey ($2 members, $4 nonmembers) is a 1981-82 study of participation in intercollegiate, club, intramural and physical education programs at member institutions.

The Foreign Student Handbook ($1 members, $2 nonmembers) provides criteria for institutions in reviewing international academic standards to determine eligibility for athletic competition.

To place an order or to inquire about bulk rates, contact NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201. Payment, which includes fourth-class postage, should accompany all orders. Those who want books mailed first class should include an additional $2 per book.

Fast-pitch softball replacing slow-pitch in Southeast

A new day is dawning in the Southeast as the era of women's slow-pitch softball comes to an end. In its place comes fast-pitch softball, already "the game" elsewhere.

The change has caught JoAnne Graf, softball coach at Florida State University and a new member of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee, in the middle of things. Florida State, a former winner of the AIAW slow-pitch championship, will compete in fast pitch for the first time this year.

"I have mixed feelings about it," said Graf. "I would like to have seen both versions continue and have national championships, but I am optimistic about the opportunities that will open up by playing fast pitch."

Creation of an NCAA slow-pitch championship was considered a year ago, but sponsorship of the sport was less than half of the total required by the Association's championship criteria. In 1982-83, 43 members had slow-pitch teams—36 in the South—according to figures reported in the NCAA's Annual Reports. Fast-pitch softball was sponsored by 441 colleges, including 44 in the South.

Graf has recruited pitchers and catchers this year, because "the pitcher is so much more dominant in the fast-pitch game. You must have a dominant pitcher to be a championship team." She also wanted to give her other players a chance to make the change.

Recruiting is difficult for teams in the South that are converting their programs, particularly in Florida. Most area high schools and junior colleges have slow-pitch teams. Most summer leagues also play slow pitch.

(11-0, 0.64); Laura Vroon, Calvin (10-4, 1.09); Julie Dennis, Allegheny; Mary Ann Olivetti (5-2, 0.59); Beth Clary, Albion (6-3, 1.68).

South

Top teams—The question in this area will be whether anyone can defeat Trenton State, last year's national champion. The Lions return an all-America first baseman and two pitchers who combined for a 39-7 record. Challengers should be Glassboro State, Western Maryland, Montclair State, Upsala and Salisbury State.

Top players—Karen Youngman, 1b, Trenton State (.331, 45 RBI); Sue Gardner, c, Fairleigh Dickinson-Madison (.361); Rita Vitale, 2b, Glassboro State (.357); Anne Farro, c, Upsala (.372); Nicky Pesik, of, Western Maryland (.537); Lisa

"Some colleges have dropped their programs rather than convert, but I hope they eventually will add a fast-pitch team," Graf said. "Once a majority of colleges in the area have fast-pitch programs, I think the high schools and junior colleges will change."

Redolphy, of, Bethany (West Virginia) (.410); Cheryl Bergey, of, Eastern Mennonite (.400); Debbie McFarlin, 3b, Washington (Maryland) (.367).

Top pitchers—Gina Lamandre, Trenton State (22-4, 0.35); Robin Payne, Trenton State (17-3, 0.53); Debbie Emery, Montclair State (10-4, 1.54); Missy Mules, Western Maryland (9-3, 1.90); Bernadette Dolan, Upsala (6-4, 1.37).

Central

Top teams—North Central has lost some key players from its fourth-place team of 1983 but still is expected to contend for the regional title. Its toughest competition should come from Wisconsin-Whitewater, Illinois Benedictine, Aurora, Monmouth (Illinois), Elmhurst, Wisconsin-Oshkosh and Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Top players—Rita Schulz, c, Illinois Benedictine (.511, 7 HR);

Denise Pesce, of, North Central (.369); Laura Martinck, ss, Illinois Benedictine (.371); Leslie LaPrise, of, Aurora (.364); Karen Friedrich, c, Monmouth (Illinois); Linda Batzen, of, Wisconsin-Stevens Point (.390); Lisa Santucci, 3b-p, Elmhurst (.406); Donna Lawlor, 3b-p, Lake Forest (.415); Holly Suchan, ss, Aurora (.384); Kelly Fatzinger, ss, Wisconsin-Platteville (.419); Sharon Whitehead, of, Wisconsin-Oshkosh.

Top pitchers—Nila Gruenewald, Wisconsin-Oshkosh (8-5, 1.10); Lynn Steinmetz, Wisconsin-LaCrosse (5-2, 0.57); Mary Haugen, Wisconsin-Whitewater (7-4, 1.43); Mary Day, Monmouth (Illinois); Sue Murphy, Wisconsin-Stevens Point (8-4).

West

Top teams—Buena Vista again appears to be the team to beat in this far-ranging region. Augsburg should be its strongest area challenger, while next year.

She is optimistic about FSU's chances, despite acknowledging the effect of the switch. "We have good, experienced defensive players, and we recruited well. We are working on hitting, and I can see them becoming more confident."

La Verne appears to be the West Coast's best team. Other contenders include Coe, St. Thomas, St. Mary's (Minnesota), San Diego, William Penn and Redlands.

Top players—Debbie Countess, of, Whittier (.344); Laurie Koustik, ss, La Verne; Cathy Becker Kahle, c, Coe (.415); Libby Kestel, c, Buena Vista (.309); Linda Redmond, c, William Penn (.260); Shelly Shrofer, ss-p, St. Mary's (Minnesota) (.343); Karen Brandt, Maryville (Missouri) (.345); Sue Thompson, ss, Augsburg; Teresa Machu, ss, Trinity (Texas) (.450); Lori Schafer, c, Wartburg (.321); Vicki Melhuish, c, Redlands (.271); Pam Hardaway, ss, UC San Diego.

Top pitchers—Chanel Finzen, Buena Vista (16-3, 1.77); Patti Spielbauer, William Penn (13-8, 2.25); Michelle Dykstra, San Diego (11-7, 1.74); Lisa Svac, Augsburg; Deb Schneider, Central (Iowa) (7-3, 1.55).

government.

The Supreme Court held that Pell Grants, whether administered by the college or received directly by its students, constitute Federal financial assistance to the college that gives rise to Title IX jurisdiction. However, the court ruled that Title IX is program-specific and, in the case of Pell Grants, the program receiving Federal aid and thus subject to Title IX is the college's financial aid program.

The court considered and expressly rejected several theories under which it was claimed that student grants result in institution-wide Title IX jurisdiction, including:

1. The "displacement theory" (the argument that receipt of student grant funds in the form of tuition "frees up" other funds for use elsewhere in the institution),

2. The claim that student grants are analogous to general institutional assistance, and

3. The suggestion that Title IX jurisdiction should follow Federally assisted students "from classroom to classroom, building to building, or activity to activity."

The court also rejected the contention that the scope of Title IX jurisdiction should be limited to administration of the Pell Grant program, holding that "students who participate in the college's Federally assisted financial aid program but who do not themselves receive Federal funds [are] protected against discrimination on the basis of sex."

The decision in the Grove City College case clarifies several aspects of the question whether Title IX covers college sports programs but, as noted above, does not resolve that question. It is now clear that an intercollegiate athletics program is not subject to Title IX merely because some other, unrelated program offered by an institution receives Federal aid (for example, a research grant to the physics department). Further, it is clear that receipt of Pell Grants by an institution or its students does not provide a basis for Federal jurisdiction over the entire institution or all the programs (including athletics) in which the Federally aided students participate.

However, the Grove City College ruling should not be understood to hold that college sports programs are in no respect subject to Title IX, for the following reasons. First, the courts are likely to view athletics financial aid as a part of an institution's student financial aid program, rather than as part of its intercollegiate sports program. If that is so, the institution's athletics grants would remain subject to Title IX even if its intercollegiate athletics program did not receive Federal financial assistance and thus was outside the scope of Title IX.

In addition, it is not yet clear what kinds of Federal aid (other than Pell Grants) the courts may view as Federal financial assistance to an intercollegiate athletics program. Title IX plaintiffs and advocacy groups have made claims—some very far-fetched—that many types of aid provide an adequate basis for applying Title IX to college sports programs.

The trial court in Haffer vs. Temple University ruled that Temple's intercollegiate athletics program received direct Federal aid in the following forms: payment of the wages of full and part-time employees of the intercollegiate sports program through the College Work-Study Program, payment of the wages of work-study students employed in other parts of the institution—such as the counseling center and radio station—providing services to the intercollegiate sports program, other Federal aid to the radio station, Pell Grants and other Federal aid to student-athletes, and the use of buildings (including dormitories) financed with Federal funds.

The Grove City decision forecloses the use of some of these forms of Federal aid as a basis for Title IX jurisdiction over an athletics program. However, the case illustrates the point that further analysis and judicial precedent will be needed before many institutions will know with any degree of certainty whether their intercollegiate sports programs are subject to Title IX.

These issues concerning the scope of Title IX may be affected by intensive effort under way at present on Capitol Hill to enact legislation to nullify the Grove City decision. On February 28, the same day the Supreme Court issued its decision, Sen. Robert W. Packwood (R-Oregon) introduced S. 2363, a bill that would amend the Title IX prohibition against sex discrimination to make it institutional in scope. As of March 6, 13 senators had joined as cosponsors of the bill.

On March 1, Rep. Claudine Schneider (R-Rhode Island) introduced H.R. 5011, which similarly would amend the Title IX prohibition against discrimination and would amend the enforcement provisions of the statute to permit termination of Federal aid to any institution (not the particular program) found to be in noncompliance. H.R. 5011 had attracted 49 cosponsors by March 6.

In calling for legislation to overturn the Grove City ruling, representatives of women's and civil rights groups have cited intercollegiate athletics as a critical area to which it must be made clear that Title IX applies. For example, in asserting that Title IX must be applied on an institutional basis, Bernice Sandler, executive director of the Project on the Status and Education of Women, stated last week that "we have gone from horrendous to very bad" in athletics.

Proponents of legislation to amend Title IX are encouraged by indications of broad bipartisan support in Congress for expansive interpretation of Title IX. Last November, the House of Representatives passed a resolution supporting "comprehensive coverage" of Title IX by a vote of 414 to 8. Twenty-five senators sponsored a parallel resolution. In addition, 75 members of Congress filed an amicus brief with the Supreme Court in the Grove City case supporting the Third Circuit decision interpreting Title IX as institutional in scope. While such developments do not necessarily indicate how members of Congress will vote on bills to amend Title IX, they do suggest some measure of support.

Tarkanian repeats as academic all-America

Nevada-Las Vegas guard Danny Tarkanian received the most votes and was the only repeater on the 1983-84 academic all-America basketball team selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Tarkanian has helped the Running Rebels to a 25-4 record and top-10 ranking this year with his playmaking. He is ranked second nationally in assists with a 9.1 per-game average. Tarkanian has compiled a 3.890 grade-point average in finance.

Other players named to the first team in the university division were Terry Gannon, North Carolina State; Tim Dillon, Northern Illinois; Marc Marotta, Marquette, and Devin Durrant, Brigham Young.

Gannon, a member of North Carolina State's national championship team last year, has averaged 11.3 points and 3.6 assists this year. He has a 3.370 grade-point average in education.

Dillon is ranked 31st in scoring with a 21.3 average in the latest Division I statistics. A 3.600 student in business management, Dillon is a two-time academic selection in the Mid-American Athletic Conference.

Marotta, a four-year starter at Marquette, was a second-team choice by CoSIDA last year. He has a 3.600 grade-point average in economics/political science and has averaged 9.5 points and 6.5 rebounds per game.

Durrant is the No. 3 scorer in the nation with a 27.8 average. He also was named to CoSIDA's second team last year and is a three-time academic selection in the Western Athletic Conference. Durrant has maintained a 3.480 grade-point average in American studies.

Three members of the college division first team are repeaters from last year—Herb Taylor of Bates, Michael Banas of Scranton and Joe Dickson of Merrimack. The remaining members of that team are John Paganetti, Lowell, and David Dunkleberger, Northwestern (Iowa).

Following are the CoSIDA academic all-America teams for 1983-84:

that student-athletes should be encouraged to complete their college education. At the same time, however, the NCAA believes that a student-athlete should have the right to sign a professional contract during his undergraduate career if it is in his own long-term, best interest to do so. Accordingly, the NCAA never has had and does not now have rules restricting a student-athlete from pursuing a professional sports career. Similarly, the NCAA neither has nor seeks any agreement with professional sports leagues to preclude or limit the opportunity of a student-athlete to "turn professional."

The Boris case is similar to one in 1971 when Spencer Haywood sued the National Basketball Association because it had not allowed him to play before his college class had graduated. The NBA was found in violation of antitrust law and instituted a hardship rule allowing underclassmen to apply to play professionally on the basis of need. Later, the NBA changed the rule to allow any underclassman to play professionally if he declared those intentions before the draft.

Since 1971, 83 undergraduate college basketball players have been drafted, an average of just over six per year, and 67 have made NBA rosters. Edward Bozik, director of athletics at the University of Pittsburgh thinks that football might be affected even less but is worried that the graduation rate of student-athletes might be affected.

"Because there are many more players in football, I don't think this ruling could have the effect it has had in basketball," Bozik said. "One of my worst fears is the problem with agents who will be trying to work with underclassmen."

"This ruling also could compound an already difficult process of trying to ensure a maximum graduation rate for student-athletes. The temptation caused by this ruling may lure more athletes away from campus before they can obtain their college degrees. There's no question in my mind that it will have a negative impact on the graduation rate."

"We continually are working to get our student-athletes ahead academically. The USFL draft already has caused a problem with some athletes losing their eighth semester in college; this ruling will make our job that much more difficult."

Jay Moyer, counsel to National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle, said the NFL had no intention of changing its rule, which is an eligibility rule similar to the USFL's.

"The primary interest of any sports league is an orderly assimilation of new talent. We have that through the draft. A change in the eligibility rules wouldn't compromise that basic interest, but we fear there would be a spate of agents descending on colleges and, for their own financial reasons, enticing kids to come out before they're ready."

Although the USFL's New Orleans Breakers have signed former Oklahoma running back Marcus Dupree, it is still unknown whether the USFL will openly pursue underclassmen still on college campuses. If the league decides to do that, many coaches will be more concerned with agents deceiving the average player rather than the fact that a team may lose its top player to pro football.

"My biggest concern is the increasing activity by agents," said Michigan football coach Bo Schembechler. "I can envision the possibility of agents getting involved with blue-chip high school athletes, telling them they will follow them in college and tell them when it is financially best for them to turn pro."

"I am worried about the average college football player who will be told by an agent that he is capable of playing professional football," Schembechler said. "We must continue to educate our athletes, informing them of the importance of academics and a college degree."

When the USFL signed Herschel

Walker before his class graduated at the University of Georgia, many coaches barred scouts from their campuses. Although the effect of the recent court ruling is not known, a similar practice may occur down the road.

"I'll make the decision at some point in time," said Emory Bellard, head football coach at Mississippi State University. "Agents would be taking a very strong hand in encouraging players to suspend their college careers for a pro career. The more clients they have, the more money they make."

Schembechler and Oklahoma State University coach Jimmy Johnson both think the new NCAA rule regarding athletics counseling could help combat the agent problem. Passed at the 1984 Convention as Proposal No. 118-1, the new rule allows an institution's chief executive officer to appoint a three-person panel (from among the institution's full-time employees who work outside the athletics department) to provide advice to student-athletes about future professional athletics careers.

"The new NCAA rule could help," Johnson said. "It could eliminate a lot of the lies from agents. The problem is not with the Herschel Walkers; the problems is with those who have eligibility left and don't make it (in the pros)."

Agents seem to be the concern of most coaches, especially if the professional leagues actively start recruiting underclassmen. With the uncertainty of the ruling, however, most coaches are unsure exactly what the effect will be.

"I think there is a lot to be decided yet, whether the pros are going to pursue those kids out of college, like a Marcus Dupree, or whether they are actively going to try to recruit underclassmen," said Don James, football coach at the University of Washington. "We have had a great relationship with the NFL. We cooperate with them in everything, and I would hate to see this relationship affected. I don't feel like the NFL needs our underclassmen."
