Tax law change in effect

Members of NCAA committees may need to spend more time documenting the expenses they incur while on Association business, according to NCAA Controller Louis J. Spry.

More stringent reporting rules have been implemented by the Internal Revenue Service, requiring the NCAA to report income paid to nonemployees and independent contractors. Those rules directly affect committee members, Spry said.

"The per diem paid to committee members, along with the $100 'flat rate' benefit, must be reported on form 1099," Spry said. "We did this for independent contractors in 1983 but did not have the necessary computer software to include committee members."

"Now, we have the technology; and, according to our understanding of the requirements, the burden of proof lies with the individual who receives the income," he added. Committee members must include the amount shown on form 1099 (which will be sent in January 1985) in their gross income for 1984 and take appropriate deductions for expenses incurred in connection with their NCAA trips.

Independent contractors are persons who are paid a fee by the Association for their services, such as cameramen who film games for NCAA Productions.

The increased need to document expenses arose with the enactment of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act (TEFRA) in 1982. H. Wayne Pieper of Francis A. Wright and Company, the firm responsible for the Association's accounting, said that "the rules have always been there, but now there is legislation to put bite in the rules."

Pieper said expenses that are directly reimbursed, such as air travel for committee members, are not affected by the regulations. The distinction, he said, involves money that is paid without being attributed to specific expenses.

"The essence is to keep good records," he said.

Professional development seminar set

The first NCAA Professional Development Seminar, designed to provide assistance to athletics administrators in the areas of promotion and marketing, will be held June 1-2 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Chicago.

The seminar, which is being co-produced by Host Communications, Inc., Lexington, Kentucky, is being planned as an annual service, according to Cheryl L. Levick, NCAA assistant director of communications. Brochures and registration forms will be mailed to NCAA member

Presidents' Commission slate listed

The slate of candidates nominated to serve on the first NCAA Presidents' Commission has been announced by the presidential nominating committee, and ballots for the election of the Commission have been mailed to chief executive officers at all NCAA member institutions.

Each chief executive has been sent the complete listing of candidates for all 44 positions on the Commission—31 nominated by the nominating committee of 13 CEOs, in addition to those already named by the nine Division I-A conferences and elected by the four Division I-AA football regions.

The actual ballots differ by division because each chief executive is entitled to vote only for the positions in his or her own division. Thus, CEOs will elect nine Commission members in Division I and II each in Divisions II and III.

While the presidential nominating committee decided to nominate a single candidate for each of the 31 positions within its jurisdiction, chief executives may disagree with a nomination by not voting for the suggested candidate or by writing in the name of another CEO who meets the same representational requirements. Each ballot includes a write-in space for each of the positions considered by the nominating committee.

"I am very pleased with the work of the presidential nominating committee and with the response by chief executives at member institutions," Robert Q. Marston, president of the University of Florida and chair of the committee, said in releasing the slate.

"We have had outstanding cooperation from people across the country," he stated, "and the nominating committee has been exceedingly diligent in completing its task, despite short deadlines and the many representational requirements that had to be considered."

"Our task was not simply a matter of selecting 31 chief executive officers to serve on the Commission. To achieve the appropriate representation, the committee had to consider regional requirements within each division, as well as desirable overall

Meyer to cap his 42-year career with bid for NCAA championship

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

College basketball will bid farewell to its patron saint, Ray Meyer of DePaul, in this 46th National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship. He is the classiest in a classy field of Division I head coaches—a field that is outstanding by any measurement. This is the 42nd and final season for Meyer, a 723-game winner in the record book but a kindly, gap-toothed grandfather to his many admirers.

After his final regular-season game last Saturday, Ray was boosted by his players and handed a pair of scissors to cut down the nets. "That was the first time in my career as a player or coach that I have ever cut down the nets," said Meyer. "I will remember this day as long as I live."

The 70-year-old Meyer seemed embarrassed by the pregame speeches and presentations. Among the gift-bearers was John Wooden, retired UCLA coach who was coaching in South Bend, Indiana, when Meyer was a player for Notre Dame. Meyer's wife, Marge; their six children, including Joey (who takes over as coach next season), and 16 grandchildren were on the court. Meyer told the crowd of 17,559, "Let's get on with the game."

Next year, it will be Marv Harshman's turn. The 66-year-old Washington coach, whose team tied for the Pacific-10 Conference championship, is in the tournament with 616 career victories—second to Meyer among active Division I coaches. They rank fifth and seventh on the all-time list. Harshman will coach one more season before retiring. Meyer and Harshman, of course, rank 1-2 among active coaches in victories. Also in the field are Nos. 3, 4 and 6—Oregon State's Ralph Miller (564), Houston's Guy Lewis (558) and North Carolina's Dean Smith (523 tied with Florida's Norm Sloan).

Then there are 400-game winners like Maryland's Lefty Driesell (479),

Ray Meyer

UTEP's Don Haskins (419), Illinois' Lou Henson (408) and Alabama-Birmingham's Gene Bartow (405), plus 11 who have won at least 300 games and 10 more with at least 200 victories.

Summer meeting plans approved for Division I

Plans for the second annual Division I summer meeting—to be held Thursday and Friday, June 7-8, at the Westin Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri—have been approved by the NCAA Administrative Committee.

The format for the meeting, which is designed to encourage more extensive participation by the various constituencies within Division I in the consideration of legislative and policy issues of importance to that division's membership, will be essentially the same as last summer's meeting.

One change will be the inclusion of women's basketball coaches. The Women's Basketball Coaches Association will be invited to select 20 head coaches of women's basketball in Division I to attend the meeting, joining 20 coaches selected by the American Football Coaches Association and 20 men named by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

The summer meeting will begin with a joint session at 1:30 p.m. June 7, followed by separate group meetings of conference commissioners, faculty athletics representatives, directors of athletics, primary women administrators of athletics programs, football coaches, men's basketball coaches and women's basketball coaches. A reception for all participants will be held that evening.

The June 8 schedule calls for separate group meetings from 8 to 10 a.m. and a joint session from 10 to noon, when the meeting will adjourn.

The Division I Steering Committee will meet before and after the meeting.

In addition to the coaches selected by their own associations—each of which will be encouraged to consult with conferences regarding those selections—the other participants will be selected as follows:

Forum for women is May 30-31

A meeting of primary women administrators of athletics programs at NCAA member institutions will be held May 30-31 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Chicago to develop legislation for presentation to the 1985 NCAA Convention.

The meeting is the first of its kind for women administrators within the NCAA structure. It was authorized by passage of Proposal No. 42 at the 1984 NCAA Convention in Dallas. The meeting's purpose is to give primary women administrators from all divisions an opportunity to participate in a national forum to discuss the needs and interests of women's athletics within the NCAA.

An agenda will be developed by the Special Committee on Women's Interests during the April 16-18 NCAA Council meeting in Kansas City, Missouri. The women's interests committee will serve as organizer and host for the May meeting.

In a race to be best, Texas turns to scholarly pursuits

By Richard S. Dunham
Dallas Times Herald

The University of Texas, Austin, announced in January it had enrolled more freshman merit scholars than any other college in Texas—and was second in the nation only to Harvard University.

Not to be outdone, Texas A&M University responded one day later that its campus has more merit scholars than any other Texas school—including UT.

Meanwhile, the self-assured scholars at Rice University calmly pointed out that their student body has a higher percentage of merit scholars than any other school in Texas or, for that matter, in the United States.

Texas universities, long known for athletic accomplishments rather than academic excellence, are applying their competitive spirit to recruiting top scholars and, in the process, are improving their academic reputations.

"There is a bidding game, almost," said Arthur Blair, the top aide to Texas A&M University President Frank E. Vandiver. "It is not quite flesh peddling."

Statistics from the National Merit Scholarship Corporation of Princeton, New Jersey, reveal that the three Texas universities rank among the top six nationally in enrollment of merit scholars, the accepted litmus test for academic all-Americans.

The University of Texas at Austin, with 223 new merit scholars enrolled in the fall semester of 1983, led all public universities in the nation and trailed only Harvard's total of 297.

Texas A&M finished fourth with 172 merit scholars, while Rice logged in sixth with 155. Two other Texas schools finished in the top 25: Trinity University of San Antonio (24th) and Baylor University of Waco (25th).

Surprisingly, perhaps, Texas boasted the best results of any state in the nation, topping the totals of the prestigious colleges of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania and California.

But Texas schools are not only competing with the Princetons and Northwesterns. They are fighting fiercely among themselves to recruit the 880 merit semifinalists from Texas.

The result has been lucrative scholarship deals, free trips for prospective recruits and lots of personal attention from top administrators.

"Texas A&M looks at a national merit scholar the way a coach looks at a blue-chip athlete," said Blair. "They're the blue-chippers of the academic world."

Each Texas school has a secret formula for beating the competition.

At Texas A&M, it's scholarship money. The University has 500 "super scholarships," ranging from $1,000 offers to four-year packages covering all university costs.

At the University of Texas, the key is an annual event known as "the Honors Colloquium," an expenses-paid, summer visitation program for academically talented high school juniors, during which potential recruits are wined, dined and cajoled to attend the Austin school.

At Rice, a smaller, private school that disdains the expensive recruiting efforts, the tradition of academic excellence and a close-knit campus society are stressed.

A&M inadvertently started the recruiting war several years ago when it created four scholarship programs based solely on academic credentials, including about 315 President's Endowed Scholarships, worth $2,500 per year for four years.

Columnary Craft

"This will enable us on a scholarship basis to compete with anyone else in the country," said Blair. "This enables us to go after the big hitters."

Often, the financial incentives have the desired effect:

Mary Gay Clark, 21, a junior from Dallas, said A&M's $10,000 scholarship offer influenced her decision to go there.

"It's a lot of money," said the merit scholar from Lake Highlands High School. "That is a big consideration for me."

Michael Mossinghoff, 19, a junior from Jesuit College Preparatory School in Dallas, said he picked A&M over Massachusetts Institute of Technology and other schools when A&M officials called and said "they wanted an answer very quickly."

The attention and the McFadden Scholarship "influenced my choice," he said.

In 1982, the University of Texas responded with its "honors colloquium." At a cost of about $150,000, the school invited 1,200 national merit semifinalists from Texas high schools for a July weekend in Austin; paid for their transportation, room and board, and offered a $1,000 scholarship to each of them. About 700 accepted the invitation to participate in the weekend events, and more than 300 of the merit semifinalists enrolled in the university last September.

The number of merit scholars enrolling at Texas skyrocketed in one year from 130 to 223.

"It worked pretty well," said Larry Kress, director of A&M's honors program. "I'm envious."

Several of the newly enrolled UT recruits credited the colloquium for their decision. John Stankus, a premed student at UT, said other schools "threw money" at him, but he chose UT after making the free trip to Austin.

Rice spokesman Breedin said his private school doesn't have the resources to compete with its oil-rich Texas rivals and relies instead on its image as a school rich in academics.

"The kids we're after are the ones who will be applying to Princeton, Stanford, Yale, Harvard and places like that," he said.

The stiff competition from UT and A&M in recent years has cost Rice some good students, Breedin admits.

"Some people who probably ought to go to Rice go to UT or Texas A&M because it is a better deal financially," he said.

The UT-A&M competition for merit scholars has fostered some hard feelings between the two longtime gridiron rivals. Ronald Brown, Texas vice-president for student affairs, complained about "other schools that are throwing around money, stacking up the ante."

Brown said students prefer UT's "soft sell" approach to the more aggressive recruiting pitch of the Aggies.

"We've avoided every way we can the hard sell. There are no pledge cards. We try to maintain a dignified and low-key approach," Brown said.

The Aggies, however, respond that UT's colloquium is the lavish expenditure.

A&M's Blair takes the battle in stride.

"We compete like crazy on the athletic field," he said. "To add one dimension to the competition—competing for national merit scholars—creates a situation where everybody wins."

While downplaying the significance of the merit scholar enrollment, Brown conceded that it was "the lens through which the university's reputation gets focused."

"With the (university's) centennial and the very fine publicity the university has received nationwide, the public perception of that quality has gone up," he said.

Added A&M's Blair: "We're so much better than our reputation is, it's incredible. We're better than an Aggie joke."

'An awful incentive to cheat, isn't it?'

Robert H. Frailey, director of athletics
American University

The Washington Post

"There's no question a lot of people feel it's too much money across the board (institutional payments from the Division I Men's Basketball Championship)—the number of dollars in relationship to what the program costs at a lot of schools.

"There is a feeling the increased money is a greater incentive to cheat. That's the concern of a lot of people, not only the (NCAA) Executive Committee. You're going to see a lot of restructuring during the next 24 months of this tremendous amount of money. It's an awful incentive to cheat, isn't it?"

Mike McGee, director of athletics
University of Cincinnati

NACDA Athletic Administration

"The job of athletics directors is becoming more rather than less complex due to the place they find themselves within the institutional framework. The evidence indicates that there is a need to take a closer look at the athletics director's preparation and institutionalize that preparation in business schools or interdisciplinary programs involving business education. The development of management skills under the auspices of a school of business would increase the directors' knowledge and skills and enable them to truly manage rather than being managed. The training of professional business managers represents a challenge to the growing number of sports administration programs in higher education. . . .

"The need for improved business-oriented management skills is recognized by athletics and university administrators. The level of current professional skills associated with the increasing complexities of athletics management raises questions concerning the educational process now utilized. It is clear that there is a need to upgrade the general level of financial management in athletics programs through improved professional development for athletics administrators."

J. Russell Nelson, president
Arizona State University

The New York Times

"Quite apart from any legal or ethical implications, it would not be acceptable posture for any public institution to back away from equity in this area (women's athletics)."

Nancy Hunterton, basketball academic adviser
University of Nevada, Las Vegas

UNLV sports information department

"I've always said that dealing with me is like taking your mother to college.

"My intention was not to take the job originally. I finally decided to take it because it was a challenge and would call on past experience. Besides, I love basketball.

"I saw exciting things as an undergrad. As an example, I worked with a football player who thought he was dumb. With work, he realized that he possessed good writing skills and found out that he was a creative and logical thinker.

"A goal we have is for the players to be comfortable as regular students. We're not dealing with the hero basketball player; we're dealing with the regular student part. We want them to be comfortable behaving like regular people."

Al McGuire, sports commentator
NBC-TV

Dallas Times Herald

"Eventually, what you're going to see is adoption by the colleges of international rules. The rules are in place, and they are good. We just haven't seen much of them since the 1976 Olympics. A 30-second clock is used, and you can play any type of defense you want. When the ball hits the rim, there's no such thing as a cylinder. You can go up there and bang it around. The first nine or 10 fouls, you don't go to the free-throw line. It's a little more physical, violent game than ours; but it's a better game, and that's what you're going to see."

Charlie Parker, men's basketball coach
Wayne State University (Michigan)

Des Moines Register

"I do think being Black is a recruiting edge. You can go in and maybe feel a little closer to the family and kid. Basically, being from the same background and understanding the many problems black families face in just trying to survive gives you an edge. But so many other factors—the school, size, area and schedule—can determine how far you get."

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

The NCAA selection process that gives preference to conference member teams has done a disservice to a group of young men. Hartwick College, an independent, was not invited to compete for the Division III Men's Basketball Championship despite an 18-5 record; 18-2 against Division III opponents.

Hartwick is in the Eastern region. Two of the four positions in that area are automatically awarded to conferences. One of the conference champions had an impressive 22-4 record, while the other champion had an inauspicious 14-10 season. The remaining two positions were awarded to clubs with outstanding records. The selection process continued with a second team (20-6) from the better conference being moved into another region.

The process is clear. If a team with a poor record wins its conference, it receives an automatic bid to the play-offs. If a team with a good record loses its conference to another club with a better record, the losing team is still a winner in the NCAA system. It is moved to one of the nonguaranteed spots. The real loser, invariably, is the independent ballclub. For the NCAA's Executive Committee members to endorse and perpetuate this disparity of treatment between its member institutions is inappropriate. The selection process needs review and change.

It is disappointing to know that a national champion is crowned when a deserving team, victimized by an inequitable system, is deprived of a chance to compete.

Raymond T. Ruff Jr.
Fairport, New York

Editor's Note: Of the 32 berths in the NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship, 16 are allocated to automatic qualifiers. In the East region, champions of the Independent College Athletic Conference and the State University of New York Athletic Conference are automatic qualifiers. Hartwick was rated as the fourth best at-large team in the region, behind Staten Island, Nazareth and Potsdam State, which was moved to the West regional. Potsdam State defeated Hartwick by 11 points this season.

13 of 17 all-time leaders

Of the first 17 active coaches on the all-time list, using a minimum of at least 10 seasons as a Division I head coach, 13 are in the tournament, with Nevada-Las Vegas' Jerry Tarkanian at .809 (third highest ever), Louisville's Denny Crum at .783, Smith at .771, Arkansas' Eddie Sutton .742, Indiana's Bobby Knight .736 and St. John's Lou Carnesecca at .730 leading the way.

From another angle, of the 15 active coaches with at least five seasons in Division I and with at least a .700 winning percentage, 12 are in the field. This brings in Fresno State's Boyd Grant at .761, Syracuse's Jim Boheim .748, Georgetown's John Thompson at .712, Kentucky's Joe Hall .711, Driesell .709 and West Virginia's Gale Catlett .707.

If you consider tournament victories, the chart shows that 10 1984 tournament coaches are in the select circle of 10 tournament victories, with Smith's 27 on top. Smith's seven trips to the Final Four are topped only by Wooden's 12, while Crum ranks fourth with five Final Four trips and Lewis is tied for fifth with four times in the Final Four.

At the other extreme, 12 are head coaches in the NCAA tournament for the first time. One is Louisiana Tech's Andy Russo, whose team got there by ending Lamar's 80-game (.748). And there are 24 teams returning a second straight year, including all four 1983 Final Four teams.

Most improved women's teams

Four tournament coaches—San Diego State's Earnest Riggins, Central Michigan's Laura Golden, Virginia's Debbie Ryan and Oregon's Elwin Heiny—are on the list of the nation's most-improved teams for 1984. San Diego State, Oklahoma State and Austin Peay State are tied 144-21 record over five seasons, including the national junior college championship in 1982.

Here are the 19 teams up at least seven games and their coaches:

	1983	1984	Games
San Diego State	10-18	23-5	13
Oklahoma State	4-23	18-11	13
Austin Peay State	2-24	15-11	13
Wagner	11-16	24-5	12
Western Michigan	3-23	13-12	10½
Iowa	7-20	17-10	10
U.S. Int'l	6-21	16-12	9½
Eastern Washington	11-16	21-7	9½
Delaware	12-12	22-4	9
Marshall	10-19	18-10	8½
Oregon	15-14	23-6	8
N.C. Wilmington	13-12	22-6	7½
Delta State	13-16	20-8	7½
Clemson	12-17	19-9	7½
Florida	11-16	19-9	7½
Detroit	7-20	14-12	7½
Central Michigan	20-9	27-2	7
Virginia	15-13	22-6	7
Villanova	15-14	22-7	7

Riggins and Halterman are the only coaches in their first year at a four-year college. However, three with previous head-coaching experience are in their first year on their current job. They are Florida's Debbie Yow, who came from Oral Roberts (119-52, with a 26-1 mark in 1983); Iowa's Vivian Stringer, who came from Cheyney (251-51, including second in the nation to Louisiana Tech in 1982); and Detroit's DeWayne Jones, who came from Oakland (70-18). Two others are in their second season as a head coach at the four-year level, both seasons on their current job. They are Western Michigan's Jim Hess and U.S. International's Vince Manson. As the chart shows, the others are veteran coaches. Four have taken their team to the NCAA tournament at least once in the past two seasons. They are Stringer, as mentioned; Clemson's Annie Tribble, now 161-88 over eight seasons, including an NCAA trip in 1982; Central Michigan's Golden, now in the NCAA a second straight year; and Oregon's Heiny, with NCAA teams in 1982 and again this season.

for first, each up 13 games over 1983. Riggins and Oklahoma State's Dick Halterman are in their first year as head coaches on the four-year level, while Austin Peay's Pam Davidson is in her eighth season.

Riggins, a 1958 graduate of Mississippi Valley State, compiled a dazzling 201-13 won-lost record in seven years at Lincoln High School in East St. Louis. His prize pupil, Tina Hutchinson, followed him to San Diego when he took the job. It is an often-told story how she met Riggins at a basketball camp at age 15, asked him to help with her defense and moved from Birmingham to East St. Louis to play at Lincoln. "Coach Riggins has taught me a lot," she says. "He's been a mother, father, teacher and coach. It's time for me to help pay him back. That's why I'd like to win an NCAA championship." San Diego State has gone from 10-18 to 23-5.

Davidson, a 1973 Austin Peay graduate, went from 2-24 in 1983 to 15-11 this season. Halterman's first team at Oklahoma State finished 18-11 compared to 4-23 in 1983 (14 more victories, 12 fewer losses is 26, then divide by two). He came from Moberly, Missouri, Junior College, where his team had an incredible

International angles

There is an international angle on both Heiny and his counterpart at Oregon State, Aki Hill. Heiny, a native of Modesto, California, spent 11 years in West Germany and graduated from the German Sports University in Cologne in 1969. Heiny, 41, taught for five years in Germany, where he also played and coached basketball. Hill, 43, was born in Japan and trained under the legendary John Wooden as well as Pete Newell, former California coach. She completed a special program under Wooden at UCLA in 1972. Prior to that she was Japan's first and only woman coach in a 75-team AAU organization in 1970, guiding the Tokyo Marine Insurance team. She also played 10 seasons in Japan. She began coaching in the United States in 1976 as an assistant coach at Foothill Community College and at Santa Clara.

Most improved teams in tournament

Ten NCAA tournament men's teams are on the list of the nation's most-improved Division I teams, published in the February 29 issue of The NCAA News. They include Northeastern, up 12 games over 1983, from 13-15, to 26-4 (13 more victories, 11 fewer losses is 24, divide by two); Temple, up 11 games from 14-15 to 25-4; Duke, up 10½ games from 11-17 to 24-9; and Miami (Ohio), up 10½ games from 13-15 to 24-5.

All four of these teams have a chance at the 1984 most-improved title. Loyola (Maryland) is tied with Northeastern for the lead at 12 games (from 4-24 to 16-12), and Grambling State also improved 10½ games (from 6-22 to 17-12), but both have finished the season.

The NCAA most-improved list includes Tulsa, up 8½ games from 19-12 to 27-3 now, four teams each up 7½ games—Kansas (13-16 to 21-9), Richmond (12-16 to 20-9), UTEP (19-10 to 27-3) and Washington (16-15 to 22-6), plus one up 6½ games San Diego (11-15 to 18-9). Three National Invitation Tournament teams are on the most-improved list—Creighton (8-19 to 17-13) with 7½, New Mexico (14-15 to 24-10) with 7½ and Oregon (9-18 to 16-12) with 6½ games improvement.

A dozen other Division I teams have finished the year with at least six games improvement, topped by 20-8 Texas-San Antonio, up 9½ games, and 22-8 Samford, up eight games. Up seven games are 19-11 Canisius, 17-12 Texas Tech, 12-16 St. Louis and 11-17 Arizona. Up 6½ games are 24-5 Bucknell, 18-10 Northern Iowa and 13-14 Pan American. Up six games are 15-13 Southern Illinois, 13-16 Appalachian State and 8-19 Virginia Military.

Other big years

Some teams that did not make the most-improved list nevertheless had some of their biggest seasons in history. Navy sports information director Tom Bates, for instance, See Meyer, page 8 home-court winning streak. "I have dreamed about the NCAA since I was a little boy," he said.

Basketball Notes

Louisiana Tech is one of seven teams in the NCAA tournament for the first time. The others are Auburn, Richmond, Rider, Houston Baptist, Nevada-Reno and San Diego. Nine others last reached the NCAA prior to the 1980s. They are Southern Methodist (1967), Marshall (1972), Dayton (1974), Oral Roberts (1974), UTEP (1975), Washington (1976), Miami (Ohio) in 1978 and two in 1979—Temple and Iona.

Among the 12 first-time coaches, only one has played in an NCAA tournament game. He is San Diego's Jim Brovelli, who played in three games for San Francisco in the 1963 and 1964 tournaments, scoring 26 points. He had 11 in San Francisco's 76-72 loss in 1964 to UCLA in the regional championship game that sent John Wooden to Kansas City, where he started his fantastic string of championships. The first-time coach with the longest wait at the same college is Rider's John Carpenter, head coach there since 1967. Marshall's Rick Huckabay is the only coach in the group who is in his first season as a head coach at a four-year college. He is a 1967 Louisiana Tech graduate.

A coaching who's who

The lineup for the third annual National Collegiate Division I Women's Basketball Championship is virtually a who's who of Division I head coaches. Exactly 26 of the 34 coaches in the tournament (including cohead coaches) have won at least 70 percent of their games over their career. Twelve are in the tournament a third straight year and 13 more are in it for the second time. Only two coaches from the first two Final Four fields are missing. In the top-20 preseason list published in the December 14 issue of The NCAA News, 14 are in the tournament, led by Old Dominion's Marianne Stanley at .875 (using a minimum of five seasons in Division I). Three more tourney coaches are now in the top 20, having reached the five-year minimum this season. They are Kansas State's Lynn Hickey (.767), Long Beach State's Joan Bonvicini (.803) and Georgia's Andy Landers

Iowa claims seventh straight wrestling title

After a 24-6 loss to Oklahoma State February 10, Iowa coach Dan Gable realized his role as U.S. Olympic wrestling coach was interfering with the Hawkeyes' wrestling program. So, he put aside his Olympic coaching duties and concentrated on preparing Iowa for an unprecedented seventh consecutive national title.

Gable's decision paid off. The Hawkeyes sent five wrestlers into the finals to outdistance runner-up and pretournament favorite Oklahoma State, 123½-98, at the 54th annual NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships March 8-10 at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, New Jersey. It was Iowa's ninth NCAA wrestling title in the past 10 years.

"This team winning the national title has to be rated among the greatest feats in (NCAA wrestling) history when you consider what took place a month ago," Gable said. "We suffered the worst loss since I've been at Iowa and came back to win the NCAA in such a short period of time."

"I had a two-hour meeting with the team after the loss to Oklahoma State. By the end of it, my shirt was unbuttoned and I was sweating. I had to make them realize I wasn't giving up on them for a year, that I wanted to give my input. Some felt deep down that I didn't really care."

Gable wasted little time. At 6:30 the morning after the Oklahoma State loss, he put his team through a workout on the grass outside its hotel in Stillwater, Oklahoma. For added inspiration, Gable had his team watch movie scenes from "Patton" and "Rocky" before the championships began.

Iowa's Jim Zalesky won his third national title at 158 pounds and was named the tournament's outstanding wrestler. Zalesky, the only Iowa wrestler to win a title, defeated Wisconsin's Mark Schmitz, 9-5, for a 90th straight victory—second on the all-time NCAA consecutive-victory list behind Gable, who recorded 100 victories during his career at Iowa State.

Oklahoma State's Mike Sheets defended his title at 167 pounds and Kenny Monday won at 150 for the Cowboys, runner-up for the second consecutive year. Sheets and Monday defeated Iowa's Kistler brothers. Sheets defeated Lindley Kistler, 9-0, and Monday beat Marty Kistler, 7-2.

Nebraska twins Jim and Bill Scherr won national titles at 177 and 190 pounds, respectively. Jim defeated Iowa's Duane Goldman, 3-2, while Bill defeated Oregon State's Jim Baumgardner, 13-4. Nebraska finished fourth with 61 points, and Oklahoma was fifth with 51½ points.

Penn State had two champions—Carl DeStefanis at 118 pounds and Scott Lynch at 134 pounds. The Nittany Lions finished third with 70½ points. Lynch, who underwent arthroscopic knee surgery January 13, wrestled with a heavily bandaged right leg and defeated Iowa freshman Greg Randall, 13-7.

Iowa State's Kevin Darkus, the 126-pound champion, ended his collegiate career with a 117-12-6 record, defeating Michigan's Joe McFarland, 9-6, for the title.

Cal State Bakersfield's Jessie Reyes, a two-time Division II national champion, defeated Princeton's John Orr, 19-11, for the 142-pound title.

North Carolina State's Tab Thacker, the biggest wrestler in the championships at 447½ pounds, beat Gary Albright, Nebraska's third finalist.

Four champions—Zalesky, Sheets, Darkus and Thacker—finished the season undefeated.

Conley lifts Arkansas to indoor track title

Victories by Michael Conley in the long jump and triple jump helped Arkansas to its first team title in the NCAA Men's Indoor Track Championships March 9-10 at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, New York.

Conley, the first athlete to win both jumps in 15 years, scored 20 of Arkansas' 38 points as the Razorbacks edged Iowa State by two points. Washington State was third with 28.

Iowa State could have won the meet in the final event, the 1,600-meter relay. With Arkansas not entered, the Cyclones would have won with a second. Iowa State finished sixth, but disqualifications moved the Cyclones to fourth—two points behind Arkansas.

"I was on the edge of my seat throughout the race," said Arkansas coach John McDonnell. "Then the red flags went up, and I really began to worry."

The other scorers for Arkansas were Tom Moloney, second in the 1,500; Martin Kobza, fourth in the shot put, and the distance medley relay team, which was third.

Team results

Utah skiers win another championship

Utah won four events at the 1984 NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Championships to defeat Vermont for the team title for the second consecutive year.

The meet was held March 7-10 at Attitash Mountain and Jackson Ski Touring Center in Jackson, New Hampshire, with the University of New Hampshire serving as host.

Utah's margin was 750½ to 684, but the Utes led throughout the four-day meet.

Utah's Bente Dahlum was the only double winner. She won the women's slalom and giant slalom. Utah's John Aalberg won the men's cross country race. The men's cross country relay team was the other Utah champion.

Vermont, runner-up the past four years, won the women's cross country relay events, and the Catamounts' Andrew Shaw was the individual champion in the men's giant slalom.

Women's indoor track

Nebraska sprints to victory

Nebraska proved that a team can live by the sprints as the Cornhuskers finished first, second and third in the 55-meter dash and went on to win the 1984 NCAA Women's Indoor Track Championships March 9-10 at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, New York.

Merlene Ottey, Angela Thacker and Janet Burke captured the top three spots in the dash to help the Cornhuskers defeat runner-up Tennessee, which had four individual champions.

The other individual champion for the Cornhuskers was Thacker in the long jump.

"The one-two-three pop in the sprint really made a difference," coach Gary Pepin said. "We thought we would do better in the 3,200 relay and the 400-meter dash, but everything went well for us."

Despite Cathy Rattray's victory in the 500, Joetta Clark's first place in the 1,000 and championships in both relays. Tennessee could not catch the Cornhuskers and finished 11 points behind.

The biggest disappointment for the Volunteers was in the 400, where Sharrieffa Barksdale and Ilrey Oliver were running first and second until the last 50 meters and then finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

Depth pays off for Northridge swimmers

Cal State Northridge, claiming victories in only two of 18 events used depth to overpower Oakland and win the 1984 Division II Men's Swimming and Diving Championships March 7-10 at Hofstra University.

Coach Peter Accardy's Northridge team had a decisive 93-point victory, quite a difference from 1983 when the Matadors edged Oakland by five points.

The winning events for Cal State Northridge were the 400-yard medley relay and the 400-yard freestyle relay. The latter event was won in meet-record time (3:03.32).

California-Davis' Vernon Rogers swept the freestyle sprint events, and teammate John Edgmond took both distance freestyle titles. Brian Wilkerson of Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo swept the backstrokes, and Puget Sound's Robert Powers won both breaststroke events.

Other dual winners were Tracy Huth of Oakland, winner of both individual medley events, and Clarion diver Kevin O'Neil, the 1984 Division II champion at one meter and three meters.

Clarion women swimmers win second consecutive title

Led by the performances of Jeanne O'Connor, Teri Peot and Joyce Skoog, Clarion won the Division II Women's Swimming and Diving Championships March 7-10 at Hofstra University.

Fifteen meet records fell during the competition. Most notable among the freshman performances was Boston College's Tara McKenna, who swept the breaststroke events for meet records.

McKenna won the 100-yard title in 1:05.85, shaving almost a second off the previous record, and her 200-yard time of 2:21.99 shattered the mark set by Oakland's Karen Enneking a year ago (2:25.26).

Sarah Rudolph of Puget Sound recorded a triple, winning the 200-, 500- and 1,650-yard freestyle events. Furman's Paula Boehme, another freshman, swept the butterfly titles and established meet records in the events during her first visit to the championships.

Clarion, winning its second straight NCAA title, established meet records in three relay events. O'Connor and Tina Bair swam on all three winning relay squads.

Division III women's swimming

Kenyon stops Williams, wins first title

Kenyon and Williams traded their 1983 finishes at the 1984 Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships as Kenyon took the team title away from Williams for the first time in the three-year history of the championships.

Hamline and Pomona-Pitzer finished second and third, respectively, for the second consecutive year, followed by Williams in fourth place. In all, 12 meet records were broken during the championships, held March 8-10 at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia.

Patricia Abt of Kenyon won the three sprint freestyle races in record times, and teammate Lori Thompson added another first in the 500-yard freestyle.

Williams' Joan Horgan swept the backstroke events, and teammate Katherine Ekrich took both breast-stroke events. Pomona-Pitzer's Lyn Cunliffe won both individual medley titles, and Nazareth's Kama Grattet claimed the one- and three-meter diving championships.

Williams had not lost a relay event in the Division III championships until this year.

The Ephs won both medley relay titles, but Kenyon captured the 200- and 400-yard freestyle events, and Pomona-Pitzer won the 800-yard freestyle relay championship. All winning times were meet records.

Stanford favored for men's swimming crown

Led by freestyler Jeff Kostoff and Pablo Morales in the butterfly, Stanford has been rated the top Division I men's swimming team this season, and the Cardinal must be considered the favorite for the Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships March 21-24 at Cleveland State University.

The competition promises to be as exciting as the 1983 finals, in which Florida edged Southern Methodist and Texas.

All three teams will be strong again. Other teams that could finish in the top five are Auburn, California, Alabama, Arizona, Arizona State and UCLA.

Southern Methodist returns defending champion Peng Siong-Ang (50-yard freestyle) and Ricardo Prado (400-yard individual medley).

Siong-Ang appears to be the best sprint freestyler; but he will be challenged by UCLA's Tom Jager, the 1983 NCAA titlist at 100 yards.

In the 50-yard event, Arkansas is a threat with Norman Wyatt and Chris Cantwell, and Auburn's John Black should do well in both sprint races. Other top sprinters include Chris Silva of UCLA, John Van Meter of Tennessee, Albert Mestre of Miami (Florida) and Chris Berry of South Carolina.

Stanford's Kostoff has done well in the longer freestyle events; and he must be considered the favorite in the 500-yard event, where he holds the American record. George DiCarlo of Arizona, who won the 500-yard championship in 1983, also returns.

Bruce Hayes of UCLA, Matt Cetlinski of Florida, Scott Brackett of Arizona State and Southern Illinois' Anders Grillhammar will be strong, too.

At 1,650 yards, Kostoff and DiCarlo will be joined by Stanford's Dave Sims, Jay Benner of Washington, Alex Milawsky of Arizona, Jeff Erwin of California and Grillhammar.

Texas' Rick Carey leads the backstroke field; he should win both titles. His top challengers are Mark Rhodenbaugh of Southern Methodist, who finished second in 1983 at 100 yards, and Stanford's Dave Bottom, runner-up at 200 yards.

Other backstroke hopefuls are UCLA's Jager, Rob Bedford of South Carolina, Coy Cobb of Clemson, Eric Ericson of North Carolina and Charlie Siroky of Arizona.

Breaststroke swimmer Steve Lundquist, winner of seven NCAA individual titles, has graduated; but Stanford's John Moffet, who finished second in two events last year, returns.

Southern Methodist coach George McMillion will try to replace Lundquist with Chris Weissman, who reached the consolation final at 100 yards in 1983 and has improved this season.

Other top breaststroke competitors include Jay Herbert of Clemson, Peter Berggren of Arizona State, Tim Brinner and Kevin Drake of Nebraska, John Ulibarri of Arkansas, and Peter Evans of Arizona.

In the butterfly events, Morales will be challenged by Chris O'Neil of Texas A&M, Soren Ostberg of South Carolina, Scott Halliburton of Missouri, Jager, Cobb and Chris Rives of Texas.

Kostoff and Prado head the field

Rick Carey, Texas

in the individual medley events. Other contenders are Ken Flaherty of Texas, Mike Orn of Arizona State, Jesse Vassallo of Miami (Florida), Benner, Pat Kennedy of Florida and Dave DeGruchy of Florida State.

In diving, Ohio State's Mark Bradshaw and Texas junior Matt Scoggin are likely to battle for the one- and three-meter titles. Dan Watson of Harvard should do well, as should Arkansas senior Ron Meyer. Texas could add points if Scoggin is joined by teammate Mike Wantuck in one or both finals.

Texas and Stanford should battle for the 400-yard medley relay title, an event won by Southern Methodist last year. The Mustangs cannot be counted out, however.

In the 400-yard freestyle relay, 1983 champion Florida will be tested by UCLA, Texas, Tennessee, Miami (Florida) and North Carolina State.

In the 800-yard freestyle medley relay, Arizona, UCLA, Southern Illinois or Stanford could win.

Women's fencing

Angelakis returns to defend crown

Jana Angelakis, who won the individual title and helped Penn State to the team championship, will return to defend her title at the 1984 NCAA Women's Fencing Championships. Penn State will try to defend its team crown, but the Lady Lions may have a tougher time than Angelakis.

Penn State is seeded sixth entering the competition, which will be held March 22-24 at Princeton University. Temple and Pennsylvania are considered the favorites.

Angelakis is seeded first, with Pennsylvania's Mary Jane O'Neill considered her primary threat. O'Neill finished fourth last year. Also returning is 1983 fifth-place finisher Andrea Metkus of Yale.

Teams that will compete in the championships are (in order of seeding): Temple, Pennsylvania, Ohio State, Yale, Barnard, Penn State, Stanford, St. John's (New York), San Jose State, Wisconsin, Wayne State (Michigan) and Stevens Tech.

Individuals, in order of seeding, are: Angelakis, Penn State; O'Neill, Pennsylvania; Metkus, Yale; Caitlin Bilodeaux, Barnard; Pia Albertson, Notre Dame; Corcen Richter, Ohio State; Lisa Piazza, Barnard; Jennifer Yu, Stanford; Csaga Hovanyi, Ohio State; Rachael Hayes, Temple; Susan Wasserman, Ohio State.

Also, India Hayes, Temple; Katie Combs, San Jose State; Jessica Yu, Yale; Christine Hamori, Cornell; Randi Samet, St. John's (New York); Mindy Wichick, Temple; Shelly Hammon, Pennsylvania; Cathy Kay, San Jose State; Pam Henck, Stanford; Joyce Latique, Wayne State (Michigan); Terra Malmstrom, Northwestern, and Susan Kimball Cook, Yale.

Cathy Correa of Stanford and Toyken Yee of Stevens Tech are alternates.

Championship date in book is wrong

Administrators and lacrosse coaches at NCAA Division III institutions should make note of an error that appears on the cover of the 1984 National Collegiate Championships Handbook for men's and women's lacrosse.

The date of the Division III men's championship game is listed as May 22. The Division III final will be played Saturday, May 19, on the campus of one of the finalists.

Tartars seek third straight title

The 1984 NCAA Men's Fencing Championships will have a new format, but it is not certain whether it will make any difference in determining the winner.

Wayne State (Michigan) has won the past two titles and four of the past five. The Tartars are favored this year, and the new format might even help.

The March 20-21 competition at Princeton will be a two-day, direct-elimination format designed so that the top six fencers in each weapon reach the finals. Also, two fencers from each institution can qualify in each weapon. Previously, teams were limited to one per weapon.

The new rules mean that teams with exceptional depth, like Wayne State, could have six championship competitors. And teams in the East region, with 19 qualifiers allocated in each weapon, and the Midwest, with eight per weapon, might monopolize the team competition at the expense of teams from the West region, where just three fencers per weapon are allocated.

Wayne State's strength starts in epee, where Ettore Bianchi, last year's runner-up, is the favorite. Either Giovanni Giroto or Bela Kogler could win the sabre crown, while foilist Stephan Kogler, fourth nationally a year ago, recently won the competitive Great Lakes tournament.

The Tartars' toughest competition could come from Notre Dame, second in 1983. Top teams from the East include Columbia, Penn State, Pennsylvania and North Carolina. In the West, Air Force, Stanford and San Jose State appear to be the strongest.

New York University's Demetrios Valsamis in foil is the only defending champion returning. Other top individuals in each weapon include:

Epee Andy Quaroni, Notre Dame; Stu LeBlanc, Air Force; Nik Blevins, Stanford; Bill Thomas, Wisconsin-Parkside; Greg Mulhinch, Wayne State; Tim Gillham, Wisconsin; Christian Scherpe, Cal State Northridge; Scott Hollenbeck, Penn State; Kevin Smith, Ohio State, and James Pitt, Columbia.

Foil—Mike Lofton, New York U.; Andy Leask, UC San Diego; Mike Vandervelden, Notre Dame; Amiel Rossabi, North Carolina; Russell Holtz, MIT; Elliott Cheu, Stanford; Dean Hinton, San Jose State; Al Clarke, Penn State; Bronson Hamada, Cal State Fullerton; Carl Blatz, Air Force; Erv Scheets, Air Force; Stefan Chauvel, Wayne State; Sunil Sabarwal, Ohio State, and Viktor Altshul, Columbia.

Elsewhere in Education

Title IX's effects still uncertain

College athletics programs could be subject to Title IX jurisdiction if they use Federal funds to pay students to sweep gymnasiums or clean up locker rooms, according to Terrel H. Bell, secretary of education.

In an interview with the Associated Press March 7, Bell also said the recent Supreme Court decision involving the Education Department and Grove City College would spur the government to monitor college programs closely. The Supreme Court held that Title IX covers only those programs within a college that receive direct Federal funds.

"It's surely going to change enforcement, because we have to identify whether there's Federal financial assistance to a particular program or activity," Bell said.

"It's going to take more paperwork. We haven't been tracing funds down to the program or activity," he said.

Bell said in his "layman's view," college athletics may still fall under the scope of the law because many colleges use Federal work-study funds to pay student-athletes for part-time jobs.

"There are many institutions that use college work-study in their athletics programs, and it wouldn't surprise me to find that many of the college work-study students are 6-foot-10 or better," Bell said.

Bell said that 95 percent of the country's colleges and universities participate in the $550 million work-study program.

High school graduates declining

A decline of 20 to 30 percent in the number of high school graduates in the Midwest and Northeast is expected by the year 2000.

From a peak of 2,992,802 graduates in 1979, it is estimated that 2,288,063 will graduate from high schools in 1992, a 24 percent decline.

The largest decrease is expected in the Northeast, where it is estimated that there will be 30 percent fewer graduates in 2000 than in 1981.

In Iowa, a 34-percent decrease is expected from the 1982 percentage to 1992. And Michigan can expect 30 percent fewer graduates in 2000 than in 1981. In 12 states in the Midwest, it is projected that there will be 22 percent fewer graduates by 2000 than in 1981.

An increase in the number of adults returning to campus is expected to offset the smaller freshman classes in some areas.

The projections were based on population and migration estimates by the Census Bureau and compiled by the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education.

Educator says schools improving

Former U.S. Commissioner of Education Ernest Boyer says he would rate the nation's high schools with a B-minus at best. He also said that the quality of public schools is not deteriorating as swiftly as many recent reports claim.

Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, told Texas educators recently that the past four or five years has seen "a rising tide of school improvement."

"The National Commission (on Excellence in Education) may have misjudged the tides a little bit. There have been clear signals this nation has once again become serious about quality and standards in public schools," Boyer said.

Still, Boyer cited a recent report by the Carnegie Foundation that recommended some changes in the makeup of the nation's high schools.

Among the recommendations were increasing the number of required courses, with a heavy emphasis on writing, language and language arts. And a core curriculum allowing students to select electives but focusing on the important subjects and concepts all students should be expected to know should be implemented.

Two-thirds of the subjects, he said, should be required and would include five language units that include writing, speech, literature, foreign language and arts; U.S. history; Western civilizations and civics; physical science and biology; two units of mathematics, and a half-unit each of health and technology.

Missouri sets graduation standard

The Missouri Board of Education has decided that in 1986, Missouri public school students will have to pass the Basic Essential Skills Test to receive a high school diploma.

The regulation makes Missouri one of about 20 states that require students to pass minimum competency tests before graduation.

All public school eighth graders have been required to take the test since 1979, but passing the exam was not required for graduation from high school.

P. J. Newell Jr., assistant commissioner for state instruction, said he expected students and teachers to take the test more seriously once the penalties take effect.

Athletes' academic scores revealed

A student newspaper at Central Michigan University reports that one-fifth of the student-athletes in the Mid-American Athletic Conference would have been forced to set out their freshman season of athletics competition because of low college entrance examination scores if the NCAA's Proposal No. 48 had been in effect in the last academic year.

The rule, effective in 1986, would require student-athletes on Division I teams to have graduated from high school with a 2.000 grade-point average in certain academic areas and to have scored a minimum of 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 15 on the American College Test.

The survey was conducted by the conference, and results were obtained by the newspaper under the Freedom of Information Act.

The survey showed that 21 percent of incoming freshmen in the conference in 1982 scored below 15 on the entrance exam, and three percent graduated from high school with less than a 2.000 GPA in core academic subjects.

Four million use athletics facilities at NCAA schools for recreation

More than four million persons used facilities at NCAA member institutions for informal recreational or play activities during the 1981-82 academic year. And the number of institutions with required physical education programs is growing.

Those facts, and a myriad of others, are part of Report No. 6 of The Sports and Recreational Programs of the Nation's Universities and Colleges, just published by the NCAA. The Association first collected such data in 1956-57; the current edition reports on 1981-82 participation and sponsorship.

The report confirms that "the colleges and universities holding membership in the NCAA constitute the most significant single coordinated force in providing national sports leadership, competent athletics instruction and training, and competitive sports opportunities."

Data show that 157,404 male student-athletes participated in intercollegiate competition during 1981-82 in 25 sports; 69,096 women participated in 23 sports.

In addition to intercollegiate competition, the report includes information on intramural, club, physical education and recreational activities.

A trend toward elimination of required physical education programs, first noted 15 years ago, appears to have been reversed.

During the 1976-77 college year, 53.7 percent of NCAA members maintained required physical education programs for men; by 1981-82, this had increased to 66.4 percent. Institutions with required physical education programs for women also increased, from 52.4 percent in 1976-77 to 64.9 percent in 1981-82. Participation by men and women in club sports, intramurals and informal recreation also increased.

The data in the sports participation survey also reflect certain problem areas for NCAA members and their constituencies. These concerns include:

- Decreasing squad sizes in some sports and accompanying cost-saving measures dictated by increases in expenses.

- The impressive rapid growth of women's intercollegiate athletics, which is resulting in the need for additional funding. It is hoped that this growth will lead to an increase in public interest, which would help women's sports to make significant contributions to athletics budgets.

Of the 753 institutions that were members in 1981-82, 436 (57.9 percent) participated. The results from those completed questionnaires were statistically projected to depict the programs of the entire membership.

Copies of the report will be mailed to chief executive officers, directors of athletics, faculty athletics representatives and primary women administrators of athletics programs at all member institutions. Additional copies can be purchased from the NCAA publishing department ($2 for members, $4 for nonmembers).

Certifications

Athletics directors and basketball coaches are reminded to make every effort to discourage student-athletes from participating in any all-star contest that is not certified by the NCAA Extra Events Committee in accordance with Bylaw 2-3. NCAA Constitution 3-6-(d) precludes athletics department personnel from participating, directly or indirectly, in any aspect of a noncertified game. Student-athletes should be restricted from participation in more than one certified game in the sport per year.

Questions or requests for further information should be directed to the NCAA national office.

The collegiate all-star basketball games that have received NCAA certification for this year include the Aloha Classic, Elks/Basketball Hall of Fame Classic, LABC All-Star Game, NABC East-West All-Star Game, New England Coaches Hall of Fame Classic, New Jersey Coaches All-Star Basketball Game, Portsmouth Invitational and the Super Shootout.

TV in the News

ESPN announces baseball slate

ESPN has announced a schedule of seven college baseball games of the week. The games, on seven consecutive Sunday nights, will be a prelude to the cable network's fifth straight year of coverage of the College World Series.

Five of the games will be live, while the other two will be shown on a one-day tape-delayed basis. Capping the series May 27 will be an NCAA regional play-off game.

Here is the ESPN schedule (all times Eastern): April 15 (8:30 p.m.)—Baylor at Texas (tape delayed); April 22 (8 p.m.)—Louisiana State at Miami (Florida); April 29 (8 p.m.)—Southern California at Stanford (tape delayed); May 6 (8 p.m.)—Mississippi State at Alabama; May 13 (8 p.m.)—Arizona State at Arizona; May 20 (8 p.m.)—Miami (Florida) at Wichita State; May 27 (8 p.m.)—NCAA regional play-off game.

Conferences face revenue loss

A recent article in The New York Times reported that colleges across the nation may be facing significant revenue losses because of overexposure and a resultant drop in television ratings for college basketball. While ratings have declined, rights fees have more than doubled in the past two years.

"I think renegotiation will be the case in almost every conference in the country after this season," said Russ Potts, president of Sports Productions, which is the packager for the Southeastern and Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conferences. "I think some outrageous rights fees were paid. And we're all guilty of it. The SEC has already given me the charge to draw up a new set of guidelines."

The Times' story quoted several athletics administrators, television representatives and advertisers, all of whom expressed concern about the current situation. One unnamed conference commissioner told the Times his packager had not met any of his scheduled payments so far this season.

Officials at CBS and NBC said neither network expected to lose money on college basketball but ratings and revenues have declined. Ratings for Saturday network games have dropped from a 5.8 average last year to 4.5.

Olympic ratings are disappointing

More than once in the past, ABC has ridden the Winter Olympics to a decisive first-place finish during the crucial February ratings "sweeps." Not this year, however.

ABC and CBS finished in a near head heat, according to the two major ratings services. A. C. Nielsen Co. declared CBS the February winner (18.66 rating to an 18.61 for ABC, both with a 28.4 share), while Arbitron Ratings Co. had ABC slightly ahead (18.65 to 18.64, both with a 28.4 share).

Third-place NBC (15.7/24, according to Nielsen) even had an impact, beating both CBS and ABC during the first week of the Olympics.

ABC's overall prime-time rating for its Olympic coverage (February 7-19) was 18.2/28. That was below ABC's projection of 21/32 and below the network's 23.7/37 figures for coverage of the 1980 winter games.

Advertisers displeased with ratings

Poor ratings can lead to dissatisfied advertisers, a problem ABC now faces after disappointing ratings last month for the Winter Olympics.

ABC's two-week-long coverage of the Sarajevo games drew an 18.2 rating, nearly three points below the network's projection. That may force ABC to compensate disgruntled advertisers.

John T. Lazarus, ABC vice-president for sports marketing and sales, told the Associated Press that he had heard from "a great number" of advertisers and that the network was reviewing audience data. He said the network had not made any guarantees to sponsors but was "taking it all under advisement."

USFL plays to mixed reviews

Opening-day television ratings for the United States Football League on ABC were down from last year but above expectations.

ABC carried a split-national feed Sunday, February 26—the eastern half of the nation watched New Jersey vs. Birmingham, while the western half received Oakland and Arizona. The national average was 8.0, six points below last year's average for opening day but a point above the USFL's projected figure for this season.

The best overnight ratings were in New York (12.5 and 29 share), while the lowest were in Los Angeles (5.8). ABC officials said that 10 of its affiliates in the top 70 markets did not carry either game.

ACC extends basketball contract

Raycom Sports and Jefferson-Pilot Teleproductions have extended their agreement to televise Atlantic Coast Conference men's basketball through the 1989-90 season.

The new contract will begin with the 1985-86 season. Terms of the pact were not announced.

Raycom officials said the package would remain virtually unchanged from the previous two seasons. Raycom and Jefferson-Pilot have exclusive regional rights to ACC games. A 38-game schedule is tentatively planned for next season.

Last-minute switch irks ESPN

ABC talked the United States Football League into moving a March 2 game between New Jersey and Jacksonville to March 4, permitting ABC to televise the game and presumably reap higher ratings. That did not sit very well with the new league's other television partner, ESPN.

The national cable network had been scheduled to carry the game on March 2 but had to substitute the Tampa Bay-Arizona game. New Jersey and Jacksonville both became more attractive after winning their openers, creating ABC's interest.

William Grimes, ESPN president, told Advertising Age that ABC never again would get the USFL to agree to such a switch. However, neither ABC or the league offered guarantees. And, according to an ABC spokeswoman, there is nothing that contractually prohibits such a move.

Basketball writers, wire service select men's all-America teams

The season's first two major men's all-America basketball teams have been announced, and neither is short of talent or size.

The United States Basketball Writers Association first team features four big men, headed by North Carolina's Sam Perkins, who was a first-team selection for the third straight year. Perkins' teammate, Michael Jordan, was the only guard named to the USBWA elite, but he was named college player of the year.

Other first-team repeaters on the USBWA squad besides Perkins and Jordan were Oklahoma sophomore Wayman Tisdale and Georgetown junior Patrick Ewing. Rounding out the squad was Houston junior Akeem Olajuwon.

Perkins and Jordan also were selected to United Press International's first unit, both for the second straight season. Ewing, a second-team UPI selection last year, also was named to the first team. Completing the UPI first team were Chris Mullin of St. John's (New York), a third-team pick a year ago, and Tisdale, a second-team selection last year.

Still to be announced were the Associated Press and National Association of Basketball Coaches all-America teams. Both will be carried in a future issue of The NCAA News. The four teams are used by the NCAA statistics service to determine the season's consensus all-Americans.

Here is a look at the USBWA and UPI teams:

USBWA

First team—Wayman Tisdale, 6-9, sophomore, Oklahoma; Michael Jordan, 6-6, junior, North Carolina; Sam Perkins, 6-9, senior, North Carolina; Patrick Ewing, 7-0, junior, Georgetown; Akeem Olajuwon, 7-0, junior, Houston.

Second team—Leon Wood, 6-2, senior, Cal State Fullerton; Chris Mullin, 6-6, junior, St. John's (New York); Melvin Turpin, 6-11, senior, Kentucky; Devin Durrant, 6-7, senior, Brigham Young; Keith Lee, 6-10, junior, Memphis State.

UPI

First team—Michael Jordan, 6-6, junior, North Carolina; Chris Mullin, 6-6, junior, St. John's (New York); Patrick Ewing, 7-0, junior, Georgetown; Sam Perkins, 6-9, senior, North Carolina; Wayman Tisdale, 6-9, sophomore, Oklahoma.

Second team—Leon Wood, 6-2, senior, Cal State Fullerton; Alvin Robertson, 6-4, senior, Arkansas; Akeem Olajuwon, 7-0, junior, Houston; Keith Lee, 6-10, junior, Memphis State; Michael Cage, 6-9, senior, San Diego State.

Third team—Bruce Douglas, 6-3, sophomore, Illinois; Mark Price, 6-2, sophomore, Georgia Tech; Melvin Turpin, 6-11, senior, Kentucky; Devin Durrant, 6-7, senior, Brigham Young; Michael Young, 6-7, senior, Houston.

USFL petitions to appeal case

The United States Football League has filed an application for permission to appeal a Federal court ruling that the league's eligibility rule barring underclassmen constituted a "group boycott" in violation of antitrust law.

Doug Kelly, information manager for the USFL, said the application was filed March 12 in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles.

In its press release, the league said it filed the appeal application "on the advice of outside counsel."

In a February 29 ruling, Judge Laughlin Waters said the USFL's refusal to let former University of Arizona punter Bob Boris play last year because his college class had not graduated was an unreasonable restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

But he also said: "There is substantial ground for difference of opinion" and urged the USFL to appeal.

The USFL rule prohibits a team from signing a player unless his college eligibility has expired, at least five years have passed since he first entered college or he has received a diploma.

Diamond baseball officially approved

The Diamond baseball has been approved as the official baseball for NCAA championship play in 1984, 1985 and 1986.

Richard E. Bergquist of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, chair of the NCAA Baseball Committee, said that the NCAA "continues to enjoy its association with the Diamond group."

The Diamond Baseball Company, Los Alamitos, California, has manufactured the official championship ball for the past four years. The ball is used in all three division championships.

geographical balance; the playing-conference restriction; and proper representation for public and private institutions, for women and for minorities."

The playing-conference restriction, a part of the legislation adopted by the 1984 NCAA Convention, states that no more than one individual from a playing conference may serve on the Commission, except that a man and a woman from the same conference may serve.

"I believe the nominating committee is offering an outstanding slate of candidates for this important assignment," Marston said.

CEOs have been asked to return their ballots so they are received in the NCAA national office not later than March 20. They may be submitted by mail, rapid-delivery service, Mailgram, telegram or telecopier to meet that deadline. More detailed information on the 44 members of the Commission will appear in the March 21 issue of The NCAA News.

•Each Division I conference that sponsors both men's and women's programs (20 conferences) will be invited to send one faculty athletics representative, one director of athletics, one primary woman administrator and the conference commissioner or executive director.

•Each Division I conference that sponsors only men's programs (eight conferences) will be eligible to send one faculty representative, one director of athletics and the conference commissioner or executive director.

•Each Division I conference sponsoring women's programs only (eight conferences) may send one primary woman administrator and the conference commissioner or executive director.

The conference commissioners or executive directors must be salaried, full-time conference officials.

In addition, the Administrative Committee is designating six individuals who will be invited to represent institutions that do not belong to any Division I voting allied conference. Two will be faculty representatives, two athletics directors and two primary women administrators.

If all positions were filled, and including the Division I Steering Committee and the Divisions II and III vice-presidents (the latter attending as observers), a total of 211 persons would attend the June 7-8 meeting.

All Division I voting allied members; the AFCA, NABC and WBCA, and the six independent representatives will be notified by Mid-March of the meeting procedures. All individuals selected to attend also will be invited to suggest agenda items for the meeting.

Forum

A survey was mailed to primary women administrators in February to determine what topics they seek to have included in the meeting agenda. A deadline of March 26 has been set for return of those questionnaires, and a complete agenda will be mailed to participants before the May meeting.

The NCAA Administrative Committee authorized that the primary woman administrator at each member institution be eligible for the meeting. If an institution has no such designated officer, then one representative from the women's athletics program at the institution will be invited.

A tentative time schedule has been arranged to have the sessions begin at 2 p.m. May 30 and conclude by 1 p.m. May 31, according to Ruth M. Berkey, NCAA assistant executive director and national-office liaison to the Special Committee on Women's Interests. A reception will be held from 6:30 to 8 p.m. May 30.

The program probably will consist of a general session for all representatives and separate meetings for each division.

Other national-office representatives assigned to the meeting are Patricia E. Bork, director of women's championships, and Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services.

The Special Committee on Women's Interests is composed of Eve Atkinson, director of women's athletics, Hofstra University; Joan Boand, coordinator of women's athletics, Grand Valley State Colleges; Judith M. Brame, director of women's athletics, California State University, Northridge; Jean Cerra-Decker, associate director of athletics, University of Missouri, Columbia; Connie Clausen, coordinator, women's athletics, University of Nebraska, Omaha; Mikki Flowers, assistant director of athletics, Old Dominion University; Mary Alice Hill, director of athletics, San Diego State University; Barbara B. Hollmann, associate director of athletics, University of Montana; Elizabeth A. Kruczek, director of athletics, Fitchburg State College; Mary Jean Mulvaney, chair, department of physical education and athletics, University of Chicago; Gwendolyn Norrell, professor, counseling service, Michigan State University (committee chair); Sondra Norrell-Thomas, associate director of athletics, Howard University; Nancy J. Olson, director of athletics, Florida International University; Judith M. Sweet, director of athletics, University of California, San Diego, and Patricia A. Thompson, assistant director of athletics, Elmira College.

institutions and allied conference offices. A registration form also will be printed in the March 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Topics for the two-day seminar include promotion, marketing, television and radio packages, scheduling of special events, and increasing ticket sales.

Discussion leaders will include experts in college athletics promotions and fund-raising and top officials in television and radio sports broadcasting.

A session on "Cable and Collegiate Athletics" will examine cable operations and programming, detailing how large and small athletics programs can become a part of the local cable television schedule. Speakers are Bill Rasmussen, Rasmussen Associates; Jim Cavazzini, president, Triad Communications, and Mark Dyer, communications coordinator, University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

"Radio Networking" will be an in-depth discussion concerning the various alternatives available in developing a radio package and the marketing or retention of radio broadcast rights for men's and women's sports programs. W. James Host, president, Host Communications, and Joe Dickey, vice-president and general manager, Southwest Athletic Conference radio network, will lead the discussion.

Donald B. Canham, director of athletics, University of Michigan, will lead a panel discussion on "The Promotion Business," with special emphasis to be given women's nonrevenue-producing sports. Joining Canham will be Sonja S. Hogg, director of women's athletics, Louisiana Tech University.

New methods of increasing ticket sales will be explored by a "Scheduling and Promoting Special Events" panel, with Canham and Billy Packer, CBS-TV sports commentator, as speakers.

The session on "Fund-Raising" will be led by Lewis A. Cryer, commissioner, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, and Mary M. Zimmerman, women's athletics director, San Jose State University. The speakers will discuss the development of a marketing program, use of direct mail, special campaigns, publicity and public relations.

Registration for the seminar is $145, which includes an opening luncheon and evening reception. For additional information, contact Leveck at the national office or David Littleton, Host Communications, 606/253-3230.

'84 Convention broke all attendance records

All attendance records kept by the Association were broken at the 1984 Convention as 1,737 persons attended the January 9-11 meetings in Dallas, Texas.

It marked the fourth consecutive year that the total attendance record was broken. Since the 1980 Convention in New Orleans, attendance has increased 61.6 percent.

The increase of 216 persons over the 1983 Convention in San Diego is the second largest one-year increase since Convention attendance records were started in 1970. The 1981 Convention in Miami Beach had an increase of 239 persons over the 1980 Convention in New Orleans.

Included among the 1,737 persons were 1,546 delegates from active member institutions, 13 delegates from affiliated members, 69 visitors and 109 members of the media.

The other records set were 816 organizations represented, 695 registered voters (.809 percent), 641 active members, 314 Division I members (.949), 170 Division II members (.780) and 215 Division III members (.638).

Attendance in Divisions II and III was up dramatically over recent years. The 78 percent of Division II members in attendance was up from 68.9 percent in 1983 and was the best division representation since the 1978 Convention in Atlanta when 74.6 percent attended. The Division III mark of 63.8 was up from 56.8 in 1983.

Of the Association's 886 active and allied members, 699 (78.9 percent) were represented at the 1984 Convention. Of the 859 eligible voters, 695, or 80.9 percent, were represented.

Besides the 216-person increase in delegates, the most significant increase was the number of organizations represented. The 816 organizations represented was an increase of 60 over 1983. The numbers of registered voters and active members were up 46 and 45, respectively.

The only record not broken was the number of legislative proposals, although the 200 proposed amendments were the most since the 205 in the 1977 Convention in Miami Beach.

Seven Olympic umpires selected

Baseball competition in the 1984 Summer Olympic Games will feature an international cast of umpires.

Seven of the 12-member crew have been named, highlighted by the selection of Alfredo Paz of Cuba, winner of the 1983 umpire-of-the-year award by the Asociacion Internacional de Beisbol Amateur (AINBA).

Others are Riccardo Fraccari, Italy; David McManus, Canada; Jun-Kee Min, Korea; Anibal Rosario, Puerto Rico; Jorge Ortiz Urbina, Nicaragua, and Kao-Chen-Yon, Chinese Taipei.

Tickets for the semifinals and first-round double-headers are available by writing to Olympic Baseball, Dodger Stadium, Los Angeles, California 90012.

Texas' Cliff Gustafson has top coaching record

Cliff Gustafson, coach of the defending national champion Texas Longhorns, is the winningest active collegiate baseball coach.

Gustafson's teams have won 755 games and lost 159 for a percentage of .826 to top the list, compiled annually by Elmore "Scoop" Hudgins, public relations director for the Hall of Fame Bowl. Runner-up is Jim Brock of Arizona State with a .765 percentage for 628 victories and 193 losses.

Hudgins' formula includes the 20 head coaches active at Division I institutions who have won the most games, listed by percentage. All records must be established at four-year colleges and against other four-year schools. At least five years of coaching in Division I is required.

The top 20 entering the 1984 season are: Gustafson, Texas, 755 victories-159 defeats, .826 percentage; Brock, Arizona State, 628-193, .765; Ron Fraser, Miami (Florida), 820-281, .745; Rod Dedeaux, Southern California, 1,133-446, .718; Chuck "Bobo" Brayton, Washington State, 723-287, .716; Al Ogletree, Pan American, 804-345, .700; Chuck Hartman, Virginia Tech, 673-289, .699; Bud Midgah, Michigan, 527-230, .696; Enos Semore, Oklahoma, 579-260, .690; Johnny Reagan, Murray State, 605-281, .683.

Jim Wilson, Temple, 527-247, .6817; Augie Garrido, Cal State Fullerton, 595-278, .6816; Tom Chandler, Texas A&M, 619-308, .668; Bill Wilhelm, Clemson, 689-353, .662; Jack Stallings, Georgia Southern, 705-388, .645; Bob Bennett, Fresno State, 552-320, .633; John Winkin, Maine, 539-338, .615; Paul Nix, Auburn, 571-390, .594; Ron Oestrike, Eastern Michigan, 558-388, .590; Dave Gorrie, Pepperdine, 546-505, .520.
