College football No. 2 among TV sports series

College football appears securely established as the second most attractive regular-season sports series on network television.

That is one of several findings submitted to the NCAA Council and distributed this week to the membership by the NCAA Football Television Committee in a "review of current television policies and possible principles for future planning."

The mailing followed the NCAA's March 20 appeal to the Supreme Court of the litigation brought by the Universities of Georgia and Oklahoma, challenging the Association's control of live regular-season college football television as being in violation of Federal antitrust laws.

"This report should assist the reader in reaching individual conclusions based on the best research available," said NCAA President John L. Toner, director of athletics at the University of Connecticut. "Meanwhile, the NCAA Football Television Committee will be prepared to evaluate that (the Supreme Court's) decision and advance a recommended course of action consistent with legal requirements as they may be determined."

In preparing its study, the Football Television Committee outlined five basic considerations:

- Advertiser-supported cable television does not offer the new lodestone of substantial rights payments for college football that some had forecast. It provides additional exposure and additional income, but it weakens the potential of over-the-air rights payments and fractionalizes audience and advertiser support.

- Pay-per-view television offers substantial revenue possibilities in the future, but probably only for "premier" athletic contests. Few regular-season college football games would fall into the "premier" category.

- Saturday night national college football programming is not a viable alternative. College football's ability to attract a substantial prime-time audience has dwindled as television programming has proliferated and viewing opportunities have multiplied.

- Sports ratings have declined and speculation is that there will be no major reversal of this trend as programming fragments and a multiplicity of sports are available to the viewing public. Despite criticism of college football's ratings decline, it is more significant that college football has remained one of the most successful sports series on network television.

- The basic principles of NCAA football television planning have withstood the tests of recent years and offer the best basis for building a sound future for college football. These concepts combine the goals of greatest possible exposure and protecting in-stadium attendance.

These observations were substantiated in data gathered by the committee.

Despite the overall decline in sports television ratings, college football has held or improved its relative position in recent years. During the four years in question (1979 through 1982), college football was second or tied for second behind professional football every year except 1980, which was an Olympic year (see table, page 12). Final figures are not available

High turnover rate seen among faculty athletics representatives

Fewer than half of the current faculty athletics representatives at NCAA member institutions have held that position for as long as four years, according to data reviewed in February by the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee.

A brief report on that committee's ongoing study of the role and status of faculty representatives appeared in the February 15 issue of The NCAA News.

The committee has expressed concern not only regarding the turnover rate among faculty representatives, but also in regard to the authority and responsibilities of that position, according to D. Alan Williams, committee chair and faculty representative at the University of Virginia.

In its February meeting, the committee reviewed data comparing the identity of faculty athletics representatives at institutions holding membership in the NCAA in 1979-80 with that reported by the same institutions in 1983-84. It asked that similar data be prepared regarding directors of athletics and institutional chief executive officers, using the same institutions and the same four-year time period, for consideration in its June meeting.

The data showed that 50.7 percent of the faculty athletics representatives had changed since 1979-80. The greatest turnover was in the non-football-playing segment of Division I, where 61.9 percent had changed over four years. Next was Division III, with a 54.1 percent turnover, followed by Division I-AA at 51.3 percent and Division II with a 48.1

percent turnover. Division I-A showed the greatest continuity in the position with a 37.9 percent change during the period.

Excluded from the computations were those situations in which the director of athletics also serves as the faculty representative.

"While this was not a scientific analysis by any means, the committee noted that the turnover rates were not appreciably different from those reported by Earl Ramer in his earlier study," Williams said. The NCAA published former NCAA President Earl M. Ramer's study of "Athletic Committees and Faculty Representatives" in 1980.

Other data considered by the committee included the academic disciplines and other campus positions held by individuals serving as faculty athletics representatives at NCAA member institutions this year, again as reported by the institutions on their annual institutional information forms.

That information showed that 154 current faculty representatives hold campus administrative positions, rather than specific or exclusive teaching positions. That number far exceeded the most common academic discipline reported, which was education with 48.

Catastrophic insurance plan may not be ready by '84-85

The proposed NCAA catastrophic insurance program may not be available for the 1984-85 college year. The plan, reported in the February 8 issue of The NCAA News, is designed to offer significant and continuing benefits to student-athletes who suffer catastrophic injuries while participating in intercollegiate athletics.

According to Grant Osborn of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and chair of the NCAA Insurance Committee, the slowness in obtaining contractual commitments from all necessary parties is placing the implementation of the plan for the 1984-85 year in jeopardy.

Osborn said there are two different agreements that need to be executed before this program can be recommended to the membership. In addition, the proposed policy must be accepted for filing in the state of Missouri.

"Until these agreements are properly executed and the policy is approved in Missouri, the mailings to member institutions will have to be delayed," Osborn said.

The Insurance Committee is scheduled to meet April 1-2 and will review the status of the program for the 1984-85 academic year. Questions or requests for additional information should be directed to Osborn or to Richard D. Hunter at the NCAA national office.

Houston's Lewis gains third straight Final Four berth

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Houston's Guy Lewis is making his third consecutive trip to the Final Four. That is quite a feat. Only six other coaches in history did it three years in a row, and just one did it more than three straight years. That one, of course, is UCLA's John Wooden, who reached the Final Four the last nine years of his career, winning eight championships.

North Carolina's Dean Smith reached the Final Four in 1967, 1968 and 1969, finishing fourth-second-fourth; Cincinnati's Ed Jucker did it in 1961, 1962 and 1963, finishing 1-1-2; Ohio State's Fred Taylor, in 1960, 1961 and 1962, finishing 1-2-2;

San Francisco's Phil Woolpert in 1955, 1956 and 1957, finishing 1-1-3, and Ohio State's Harold Olson in 1944, 1945 and 1946, finishing 3-3-3.

This also is Lewis' fifth Final Four trip. That ties him with Louisville's Denny Crum, trailing Wooden (12), Smith (seven) and Kentucky's Adolph Rupp (six). Kentucky's Joe Hall, who coached the 1978 national champions and the second-place team in 1975, is making his third trip. Virginia's Terry Holland and Georgetown's John Thompson are making their second trip each. Thompson's team was second in 1982, and Holland's team was third in 1981.

Holland was not among those who were amazed by Virginia's tournament performance: "I was just crazy enough to think we could do it. We're not a great team by any stretch; but when we play well, we're as good as any team in the country."

Virginia faced the No. 1 schedule in the country according to the computer—that is why the Cavaliers were invited with a 17-11 (now 21-11) record. (Virginia is not the first Final Four team with 11 losses—Baylor entered the Final Four at 14-11 in 1950, Bradley at 18-12 in 1954 and Southern California at 19-12 in 1954. Bradley finished second, the other two fourth.)

"With Ralph Sampson gone, this team had a lot to prove to a lot of people," said Holland.

Edelin is a key

One key to Virginia's tournament success is Kenton Edelin, a 6-8 senior who came as a nonscholarship jayvee player. "Edelin has had just a super tournament," Holland said. Indeed, he is shooting 11-for-12 from the field in the four games, leads the club in rebounds at 36 and has seven steals, second only to Othell Wilson's nine. Against Indiana, he had a game-turning steal with 90 seconds left.

Plans numerous for college football play-off

By Al Carter
Houston Chronicle

It is a rare day these days when the mailman does not drop on DeLoss Dodds' desk the answer to a problem that has baffled the academic community.

A daily swipe of the letter opener uncovers the latest can't-miss solution to a puzzle that, if you listen to the brightest administrative minds at the world's top institutions of learning, makes DNA look like Tinkertoys.

The letters come from Alexandria, Virginia, and Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and Hawthorne, California. And perhaps the most redeeming quality to be found in these suggestions for a college football play-off is that they do not come to me anymore.

I used to get one about every month or so. Some were neatly typed. Some came complete with pairing brackets that could have been produced on a draftsman's table and selection formulas that would have confused a team of attorneys. Some were scrawled out like the 11th-hour appeals for stays of execution.

All were sent with the fervent hope that his (or her) formula would make print and become the subject of an ABC News Nightline segment, or that I would personally call the esteemed executive director of the NCAA and say, "Wally, here's the solution," and Mr. Byers immediately would mark his calendar and set aside the third Saturday in January for the Super Bowl of college football.

Anyway, the letters do not come here anymore. Since the NCAA's decision to establish a special subcommittee to study the feasibility of a national play-off, the letters go to DeLoss Dodds, the University of Texas, Austin, athletics director and a member of the NCAA Postseason Football Committee, whose only reward as subcommittee chair may come if he decides to take up stamp collecting.

Dodds has not kept an exact count. But in less than two months, he has received something like three to four dozen unsolicited suggestions on a play-off format.

They come from Madison, Wisconsin; Washington, D.C., and Houston. One came from an architect in Fort Worth, another from the president of a national trade association. Another came from a circuit-court judge in Albion, Illinois. "You need not respond to this," the judge wrote. "My ruminations are basically wastebasket stuff."

Dodds will not admit to it, but there's a good chance his committee's efforts will wind up "wastebasket stuff." Chances are the committee will report its findings, and the NCAA will throw up its hands and swear to play-off-hungry fans that the problem is bigger than a howdy-do from the Cotton Bowl's Jim Brock.

Administrators at institutions where atoms are disrobed and genes synthesized will be able to show they tried—and failed—to solve the humongous problems involved in deciding a football championship on a football field. Problems like:

How to have a play-off and not affect the East-West Shrine Game.

And: How to have a play-off and make sure that Stu Athlete

Columnary Craft

does not miss class during the semester break when there are no classes anyway.

Now, if you really think about them (or do not think about them), those are tough problems. Furthermore, bowl officials threaten to smother with those cute little bowl-lapel patches anyone floating a solution high enough for an NCAA voter to see.

So why isn't Dodds working on something solvable? Like the Middle East? Or the deficit? Or a bikini for Boy George?

"I'll tell you exactly how I feel," Dodds says. "If I had to say how I feel, I'd say I'm probably pro play-off. But I'm not going to try to be a salesman for it or against it. If my committee voted on it, I'm pretty sure they'd vote not to do it. But we're not going to decide whether we have play-offs. We're just going to research it and let the membership decide."

The depository for these Rube Goldberg play-off schemes has been Jerry Phillips, a graduate student in the UT school of business. His studies require him to submit a professional report on some sort of real-life business dilemma.

Since he happens to be a Nebraska Cornhusker fan from Lincoln, Nebraska—and since Nebraska and Texas were locked in a dispute at the time over the national championship—Phillips decided the play-off debate was real life in a real sense.

He contacted Dodds, who put him in charge of compiling a report that will go to a four-member subcommittee of the NCAA Postseason Football Committee next month.

"I'm basically just doing the legwork," Phillips says. "Somebody has to go through all of this, and that's what I'm doing."

The average letter, says Phillips, is four to five pages long and is written on somebody's company letterhead. Some favor a play-off field as large as 16 teams. Some would like to see a single game pitting the two top-ranked teams.

Some have named their formulas. A fellow named Perry came up with an ingenious title—"The Perry Plan." A Georgia fan sent a copy of his formula to Bulldog coach Vince Dooley and said he would christen his scheme "The Dooley System"—with Dooley's permission, of course.

All the letters have one thing in common. "They're 100 percent unanimous in that they want a play-off," Phillips says. "Some people are very adamant. They demand to know who's keeping them from having a play-off. They demand to know what the problem is."

Phillips plans to churn out about 100 pages worth of problems, nearly all of them political. "There's a lot more to it than I expected," he admits.

Things like: How revenues from a play-off might be equitably disbursed to all schools. How the more Pollyannaish of administrators might be convinced that a play-off is not going to make college athletics any more of a big-business enterprise than it is now. And, finally, how to demote the bowls and avoid cries (from Pasadena, California; Dallas; New Orleans, and Miami) that college officials are thankless, blind to tradition and probably put strawberries on their Wheaties.

"The members vote, not the bowls," says Dodds, strawberries on his breath. "But anybody who casts a vote is going to look at what the bowls have done for football."

The issue probably will be decided by the one group that does not care what the bowls have done for football. Dodds plans to meet soon with TV officials to see what kind of financial benefits might be available through a play-off.

"I would assume the dollar value would be very, very good," said Dodds, who, if he keeps it up, risks being found inside a Rose Parade float, lapel patches from head to toe.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

Millions of people throughout the country are involved in watching the premier collegiate sports spectacular of the year—the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Likewise, the National Invitation Tournament also will command the attention of fans everywhere.

A golden opportunity was presented to answer the critics that equate intercollegiate athletics with money and professionalism. The detractors gleefully point to the headlines that expose situations where transcripts were doctored, courses were not taken, athletes didn't graduate (or if they did, they still couldn't read or write), illegal recruiting methods were used to lure high school athletes to a particular campus, players were suspended for using drugs, and the list goes on.

Those of us who are administrators and coaches, and proud of our profession, are embarrassed by these incidents because we do not feel they accurately reflect the majority of our athletes and institutions.

Countless hours are spent at NCAA meetings discussing ways to emphasize the idea of the student-athlete and the means to encourage quality admissions and competent graduates. We are united in our stand that amateur athletes are an integral and important part of our educational system. We strongly resist those who say otherwise and call us hypocrites and professionals.

Alas, however, an opportunity to recognize student-athletes who meet the criteria of both academic excellence and athletic excellence was overlooked when the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee selected 53 teams to participate in the NCAA championship and the NIT committee selected 32 teams to participate in its tournament.

One team not selected for either tournament had the 15th highest winning percentage in the country among the 276 Division I teams. The starting five led their team to a 24-5 record, with four of its five losses coming by a total of eight points, including two overtime games. The other was to one of the 16 teams seeded in the NCA tournament. At the same time they were achieving this outstanding record on the court, in the classroom they had a grade-point average of 2.900 with majors in economics, chemistry, biology, business administration and management.

None of the students on this team receives the standard athletics grant-in-aid, as all financial aid at their institution is based on need. None of these students came to college to play professional basketball. Unfortunately in the eyes of the selection committees, they chose a small college of only 3,000 students in a town of only 10,000 people, situated more than 150 miles from a major metropolitan and media center, and they did not play in a 10,000-plus arena.

For the seven seniors who will be graduating this spring after the normal four years, this season was a once-in-a-lifetime experience. For intercollegiate athletics, it was a rare opportunity to take a public stand and recognize the true student-athlete. Am I naive to think this is what is important in the world of intercollegiate athletics today?

Coaching profession lacks security

Gary Williams, men's basketball coach
Boston College
Dallas Times Herald

"The reason you get into it (coaching), I think, is because as a player you're not satisfied after playing in college. You think you could have been better or could have played in the pros or something. The basketball thing is still with you. So you get into coaching. Then all of a sudden you're in it 10 years, and you're locked into it.

"The thing with coaching, you never feel that you're secure. At least, I don't. Just lose one and it turns everything around. You start worrying. You don't build up your security like you do in other jobs."

Jim Boyce, men's basketball coach
Eastern Michigan University
Des Moines Register

"My being Black doesn't necessarily work as an advantage in recruiting black players. I've run into so many black parents who seem to think that white coaches do things better. I think the major difference in players' decisions, though, is the top schools have money; the smaller ones don't.

"We (Blacks) may be highly visible in this game, but we certainly don't control it, especially from an administrative point of view. The black players see this; and if they don't go to Michigan State or Michigan, they oftentimes slip out of state."

Watson Brown, football coach
Rice University
Dallas Times Herald

"It perturbs me when people say we can't win here. It's tough when recruits say they like me and love the assistant coaches and love the school, but, you know, it's Rice. That makes me mad. Those are the kids who I'll say, 'See you on the field in September.' I'm proud to be here, and I think the kids here are ready to get the image of Rice athletics back where it belongs.

"I know it's our image that we're fighting. We have a beautiful place here. The one thing we're fighting is winning football. And until we start winning some games, it's going to be hard."

Editorial

USA Today

"Black schools are losing students and faculty to formerly segregated, all-white schools. And they have lost sources of funding, the life's blood of higher education.

"From slavery to the end of segregated education, they have served to provide the only place most Blacks could learn or encounter a leadership experience. . . .

"They still educate far too many students to be allowed to die. The nation still needs them. They deserve financial support, whatever its source. They deserve a truly fair share of private funding and the public grants and entitlements that go to schools with majority white enrollments."

Charles W. Baird, professor of economics
California State University, Hayward
USA Today

"Should black colleges continue to exist? Only if they can attract enough students and voluntary gifts to keep them going. But the fact that some black colleges are in financial trouble implies that they are not serving students and donors well.

"Most black students probably recognize that the path to success is more certain through unsegregated colleges than through those that do not reflect the real world. Sentimentality seldom leads to sensible decisions. The issue is not whether existing black colleges are good or bad; it is whether the collective judgment of Blacks who prefer other institutions should be overridden.

"No legitimate case can be made to bail out any private college, white or black, with taxpayers' money. Students, not the general public, are the primary beneficiaries of higher education; students, not taxpayers, should pick up the tab."

Edelin and his teammates are loose, pressure-free and no longer playing not to lose. "It is easier for us this year because we're not the favorite," Wilson said. "We just go out and play hard and do our best." Rick Carlisle, who has made four game-winning goals (and the winning free throws vs. Indiana), says, "We now have a new team identity."

'This has been a fun, fun job'

Guy Lewis' biggest thrill may be coming in Seattle, but up to now, "The greatest thrill of my career was that UCLA game in the Astrodome (January 20, 1968, before 52,693 spectators; Houston and Elvin Hayes won, 71-69, over Lew Alcindor's squad, ending UCLA's 47-game winning streak). There is no doubt that game helped the popularity of college basketball. Never before had a regular-season game been planned for national television.

The east Texas native is 62, played on Houston's first varsity athletics team (1946-47 basketball—and he was a standout) and became its second basketball coach in 1957. "To me, this has been a fun, fun job; from recruiting to practice to just talking basketball. I enjoy those games, especially after they're over and we have won."

Young is unsung

Quick, now, who has led Houston's Phi Slamma Jamma basketball fraternity in scoring two straight years? No, the answer is not Akeem Olajuwon. The name is just plain Michael Young; unsung, unpretentious Michael Young—the one who did not turn pro last year. All he is doing is averaging 20 points per game. His career total is 2,008. As for the publicity, he says, "I've learned never to get down just because I don't get the pub I deserve. I just keep working harder. You'll never hear me crying about it."

Success has not spoiled Akeem

With Ralph Sampson gone, Pat Ewing shielded from the media and Sam Bowie working his way back into shooting form, everyone in the country wanted "just five minutes" with Olajuwon. The media attention has been fantastic. Heady stuff for a former soccer goalie just turned 21 and who has been in the country only four years.

Success has not spoiled Olajuwon. His smile still illuminates. He drives the same car and lives in the same apartment. But his conversation is a bit different. He speaks of investments, taxes and Lloyds of London. "I am taking courses in business law, finances, how to invest money, taxes," he says. "Now, nobody can come to me and say, 'This is what we will do for you' and then do only things for themselves."

He enjoys his time with the media, and his wit is quick. Once during a chat with CBS announcer Gary Bender, Akeem was asked if there was any sport he could not master. "I can't swim," Akeem replied. "Neither can I," said Bender. "Yeah, but I can wade out a lot farther than you can," Olajuwon said, with another big smile. His parents in Nigeria had planned to send him to college in the United States long before he grew to basketball superstar size. They still expect him to finish his education and return to the family cement business as soon as possible, but . . .

Kentucky No. 1 all time

Talk about tradition. Kentucky is the winningest college basketball team of all time, both in terms of winning percentage (.763) and in total victories (1,358 heading to the Final Four, with only 422 losses in 81 seasons). No other college is even close. Adolph Rupp, of course, won 875 games in his 41 seasons at Kentucky with only 190 losses for an .822 percentage (second only to Clair Bee of Long

Tanya Haave

Guy Lewis

Linda Sharp

Kenton Edelin

Island).

This is Kentucky's 29th appearance in the NCAA tournament—that is No. 1. The Wildcats have won 48 games heading to the Final Four—second only to UCLA's 55—and five championships, second to UCLA's 10.

Hall knows his special place

Coach Joe B. Hall is a marked man, always visible in Kentucky no matter where you go. And he knows his special place. "I guess I'm the Keeper of the Tradition," he says. That he has certainly done. After all, his winning percentage of .764 (279 victories, 86 losses) at Kentucky virtually is identical to Kentucky's all-time .763 mark.

Nothing short of a national championship will mollify many Kentucky fans, but Hall manages to keep things in perspective. "Basketball is no longer the only thing in my life," he says. "I have strong interest in my family. I've got a farm I spend time on. I love to rabbit hunt and participate in other recreational interests."

The 'Twin Towers'

One key to Kentucky's Final Four season has been the return of 7-foot-1 Sam Bowie after missing two full seasons with a hairline fracture of the left shinbone. After countless electrical stimulation treatments, several casts and a bone graft, he came back to team up with 6-11 Melvin Turpin. His shooting touch was not there early this season, but one look at his tournament figures tells the story: He is shooting 12-for-23 from the field, 11-for-13 at the line and leads the team in rebounds at 32 in three games. In his final regular-season game at Rupp Arena, Bowie cried when the pep band struck up "My Old Kentucky Home" during a pregame ceremony, thereby losing a bet with his teammates. "After all the respect and love I've received from the state of Kentucky, it's hard to leave a place like this," Bowie said.

Turpin is much different from Bowie in some respects. He avoids handling the ball on breaks (Bowie loves it), never misses a game and has struggled to keep his weight down. He is also an extraordinary shooter capable of dominating a game. "In some situations, this wouldn't work," Bowie says. "But Melvin and I complement each other offensively; and on the defensive end, we're both intimidating."

Beal is the leader

Another key for Kentucky has been the return to form of playmaker Dicky Beal, a 5-11 senior with great speed, who has 29 assists and 10 steals in three tournament games. Says Hall, "He's our leader. He gives our whole team confidence." Beal has overcome numerous injuries, including three knee injuries.

42 of 44 got degrees

Despite his 260-104 record at Georgetown, big (6-10, 300 pounds)

John Thompson does have his critics. He has been accused of being overly protective of his players by restricting their access to the media and by making them constantly check in with him or academic coordinator Mary Fenlon.

His methods may seem questionable, but his motives are certainly laudable. He cares about his players' academic attainments. The record shows that 42 of Thompson's 44 recruits who are no longer in school have obtained degrees—a record tough to match anywhere. He took over a team that was 3-23 the previous season and was successful before the arrival of Patrick Ewing. "Remember this," he says. "Patrick didn't come here to make us good. He came here because we were good."

'Intimidation is part of life'

Intimidation has almost become Ewing's trademark, but he does not mind. Says the 20-year-old Georgetown junior: "Intimidation is part of life. The strong get stronger, the weak get weaker." As for the altercations in games, Ewing says the natural instinct is to retaliate. "I've had a concussion; I've gotten hit in the eye; I'm all scarred up," he said. "I'm getting banged up, and yet I'm the one who is overly aggressive." (Coach Thompson says, "Patrick has been an extremely pleasant experience . . . a positive influence.") Off the court, Ewing says, "I'm a calm, easy-going person. I like my privacy. I like to be around my friends and have fun. I'm just trying to take life one step at a time. I like who I am and what I'm doing. Basketball is part of me, and I like that."

Ewing expects to graduate on time next year. Pro basketball, he said, will have to wait. And what will he do after his pro career is over? "Just live," he said with a smile. "Just like everyone else."

Women's attendance up 56.1 percent

Attendance made some more big gains last week in the third annual NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship. Heading into the final four, the tournament average per session is 3,201. At this stage last year, it was only 2,051. That is an increase of 1,150 per session, or 56.1 percent. From another angle, the total now is 73,621 spectators for 23 sessions, or just 66 fewer spectators than last year's final total of 73,687 for 30 sessions.

This year's total number of sessions will be 25, because four opening-round games were played last year, none this year, and one first-round session this year was a double-header. Turnouts of 8,866 and 7,387 for the final-four sessions at Norfolk, Virginia, last year brought the tournament per-session average to 2,456, against 2,495 in 1982 (this corrects last week's report that the averages were 2,105 and 2,092; these were per-game figures, failing to note that five double-headers were held each year).

Tech is three-for-three

Louisiana Tech cohead coaches

Sonja Hogg and Leon Barmore are making their third straight trip to the final four—a perfect three-for-three. Technically, this is Barmore's second trip as cohead coach, as he moved up from assistant to cohead coach in 1983. Tech won the first championship in 1982 and finished second in 1983.

Both Tennessee's Pat Head Summitt and Southern California's Linda Sharp are making their second trip to the final four (Tennessee lost in the semifinals in 1982, and USC is the defending champion). Cheyney's Winthrop "Windy" McGriff is in it for the first time.

Four championship veterans

Cheyney has four veterans from its 1982 final-four team, which finished second in the first NCAA tournament. They are Yolanda Laney, who started the title game and scored 10 points; Sharon Taylor, another starter with eight points, and a pair of substitutes that day, Sandra Giddins and Ann Strong. Now all four are starters. Laney, in fact, is the nation's No. 6 scorer with a 25.4 average, which includes three tournament games. The key to the final-four trip, though, is Margaret Diaz, who scored 27 points against Old Dominion in the East regional title game. She was not yet eligible when Old Dominion routed Cheyney early in the season.

Diaz played for Mount St. Mary's third-place team in the first NCAA Division II championship, was the No. 3 scorer at 22.3 and made the all-tournament team.

Coach McGriff is carrying on the tradition built by Vivian Stringer over 11 years.

New experiences for Haave

Tennessee's Tanya Haave, who propelled the Lady Volunteers into the final four with a 21-point performance against heavily favored Georgia in the Mideast regional final, has found life in Tennessee quite different from her native Denver. Haave, a 6-2 senior forward, was born and raised in Denver and has not shown any signs of changing her thoroughly Western personality.

"But I've gotten a chance to see how a different part of the country lives," she said. "I've had to get used to it and adjust to the people—they're friendly people." When Haave visits friends in Colorado, though, she is teased about "sounding Southern."

"Most people don't even know where the school is on the map. They say, 'Where is that, in Nashville or Memphis?' They've never even heard of Knoxville." Haave has a theory as to how Tennessee could gain the public respect the team has earned—by winning a national championship and an Olympic gold medal under coach Pat Head Summitt.

Becoming a classic rivalry

Louisiana Tech vs. Southern California in the semifinals—it is beginning to take on the aura surrounding some of the classic rivalries in college athletics. The Women of Troy dethroned the Lady Techsters in the 1983 title game, and Tech got revenge in January at Ruston. Both looked strong in regional championship play, as Tech ripped top-ranked Texas, 85-60, and USC handled a strong Long Beach State team, 90-74.

Mulkey and Lawrence lead the way

Louisiana Tech's Kim Mulkey, a 5-4 point guard, and Janice Lawrence, a 6-3 center, are the heart of the team. Both are seniors, and both would like nothing better than to end their college careers by regaining the national championship. Lawrence, who has more than 2,000 career points for Tech, is a finalist for the Wade Trophy, awarded annually to the nation's best women's college basketball player.

Mulkey has not received as much acclaim as Lawrence, but is equally appreciated by Lady Techster fans and coaches. She is one of eight finalists for the Champion player of the year. "You can call any coach and ask who is the best point guard in America, and you're going to get one name 99 times out of 100—Kim Mulkey," says Barmore. "I have no personal goals for all-America whatsoever," insists Mulkey. "I look forward to being the national champion. I've been there. I want to go out having been there again."

Lady on the go

Southern California's Cheryl Miller seldom has a minute to herself. There are interviews, television appearances, photograph sessions, even a promotion, such as being grand marshal in the centennial parade in Riverside, California, her home town. USC keeps a separate appointment book just to handle requests for Miller.

With all this, she maintains a 3.500 grade-point average as a broadcast journalism major, and after classes, basketball practice. Social life? "None whatsoever," Miller says. She feels the worst of the pressure, though, was last year, in living up to expectations: "It was hard enough living up to my own expectations, let alone everyone else's." After the NCAA championship game last year, she began to feel comfortable with her game.

Sharp: schedule helped

Southern California, according to the computer rankings, faced the third-toughest schedule in the country (Tennessee's was first, Kentucky's second). "It was beneficial," said coach Linda Sharp. The Lady Trojans lost three road games in early January at Texas, Louisiana Tech and Old Dominion. Sharp always has looked to play the best. Her first USC team was 11-13, but she improved that to 21-10 and 22-12 the next two years. Then came the McGee twins, Paula and Pam, and seasons of 26-8 and 23-4. Last year, Cheryl Miller was a big addition, and her 31-2 team won it all. Now comes the final four in Los Angeles and later, the Olympics. "We hope the people here will really get a taste of what the best in women's basketball is all about," says Sharp.

Bowling Green State wins marathon on ice

It took four overtimes and nearly four hours, but Bowling Green State finally defeated Minnesota-Duluth, 5-4, to win the 1984 NCAA Division

I Men's Ice Hockey Championship. It was the longest game in collegiate ice hockey play-off history. The championship was the first for Bowling Green in any team sport. It also was the first title for the Central Collegiate Hockey Association, which was formed in 1971.

Each of the four games in the finals series, which was played March 22-24 in Lake Placid, New York, was decided by a single goal. Three of the four games went into overtime.

The Falcons had to come from behind to win the title. Minnesota-Duluth led 4-2 with eight minutes to play before goals by Peter Wilson and John Samanski tied the score. Samanski's goal came with 1:47 left in regulation time.

In overtime, the game turned into a duel between a pair of freshman goaltenders—Gary Kruzich of Bowling Green and Rick Kosti of Minnesota-Duluth. Kosti tied a tournament record with 55 saves; Kruzich stopped 33 shots.

The game was decided at 7:11 of the fourth 10-minute overtime period when Bowling Green's Gino Cavallini scored after a pass from Dan Kane seven feet in front of Kosti.

Bowling Green (30-8-2) reached the championship with a 2-1 semifinal victory over CCHA rival Michigan

State. Minnesota-Duluth (29-12-2) took a 2-1 overtime decision over North Dakota to advance to the final.

North Dakota (31-12-2) defeated Michigan State (34-10), 6-5, in overtime to finish third. The Fighting Sioux took a 4-1 lead early in the second period before Michigan State began a comeback. Mike Donnelly tied the score, 5-5, with 29 seconds left in regulation time. After 5:57 of the first overtime, though, North Dakota's Dean Barsness scored his third goal of the game to end the contest.

A sellout crowd of 7,918 watched the championship game, played at the neutral site. Four Western teams competed for the title, the second time that has occurred in the past four years.

Goalies Kruzich and Kosti were both rewarded with all-tournament honors. Kosti was named the all-tournament goalie, but Kruzich was voted the tournament's most outstanding player.

Other members of the all-tournament team were defensemen Garry Galley and Dave Ellet of Bowling Green and forwards Lyle Phair of Michigan State, Bob Lakso of Minnesota-Duluth and Barsness of North Dakota.

Minnesota-Duluth defenseman receives Hobey Baker Award

It was a very good week for Minnesota-Duluth men's ice hockey player Tom Kurvers.

First, he won the Hobey Baker Memorial Award, given annually to college hockey's best player. Later in the week, Kurvers participated in the NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship final, which Duluth lost, 5-4, to Bowling Green State in four overtimes.

Kurvers, a 6-0, 190-pound senior defenseman from Bloomington, Minnesota, played more than defense in his four-year collegiate career, setting a school record for most points by a defenseman (191). Kurvers set 10 school records.

Minnesota-Duluth coach Mike Sertich, who had to keep the announcement a secret for two days, obviously was pleased with the selection.

"I don't think you could have had a better choice," Sertich said. "Being a finalist with the other 10 is an honor in itself. This exemplifies what this young man is all about—college athletics. I couldn't be more proud than I am of him. I hope my kids grow up to be like him."

Kurvers, who was informed of the award after Duluth's 2-1 overtime victory over North Dakota in the Division I championship semifinals, holds Bulldog career records for most assists (148) and most goals (43). He scored 30 goals as a freshman.

Kurvers has been drafted by the Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

Mark Fusco, a defenseman from Harvard, was the 1983 Hobey Baker Award winner.

Tartars take another fencing title

Wayne State (Michigan) continued to dominate collegiate fencing by capturing the 1984 NCAA Men's Fencing Championships title March 20-21 at Princeton University.

The Tartars outdistanced Penn State by 19 points in winning their third straight NCAA title and their fifth in six years.

Ettore Bianchi's victory in the epee paced Wayne State. Tartar coach Gil Pezza got key points from Stefan Kogler, second in the foil; Stephan Chauvel, fourth in the foil; Giovanni Giroto, fourth in the sabre, and Bela Kogler, fifth in the sabre.

Highlighting the sabre competition was Michael Lofton's 19-0 record. The New York University freshman is believed to be just the second fencer to complete an NCAA championships undefeated. Though records are incomplete, North Carolina's John Friedberg was believed to be the first undefeated champion when he won the sabre title last year.

Penn State edged Notre Dame and Columbia for runner-up honors; however, the Irish's Charles Higgs-Coulthard did win the foil competition.

Division II basketball

If at first you succeed . . .

Third-team all-America Ron Nunnelly played more like first-team all-world in leading Central Missouri State to the 1984 NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

The 6-3 junior guard was nearly unstoppable, scoring 33 points in an 89-85 semifinal overtime victory over North Alabama and then leading the Mules to the title with a 38-point outburst against St. Augustine's in an 81-77 victory. For his efforts, Nunnelly was named the outstanding player in the championship, held March 23-24 in Springfield, Massachusetts.

And if Nunnelly was all-world, his back-court teammate Brian Pesko looked like all-hemisphere. Pesko, a 5-10 senior, scored a career-high 30 points in the semifinal and added 25 more against St. Augustine's. He had been averaging only seven points a game going into the weekend.

The Mules' championship victory was a prelude to a rare double in collegiate athletics. Central Missouri State's women's team followed the men's victory with an 80-73 triumph over Virginia Union on the same court to win the NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship, making the school the first to win national intercollegiate men's and women's basketball titles in the same year (see accompanying story).

In the championship game, Nunnelly's 19 first-half points gave the Mules a 35-33 half-time lead. Central Missouri widened the margin to 60-53 with 9:35 left in the game before St. Augustine's rallied behind the play of 6-10 center Kenneth Bannister.

A three-point play by Falcon guard Randy Franks tied the contest at 64-64 with 5:16 remaining. But a jumper from the right corner by Nunnelly and a driving lay-up by Pesko gave the Mules some breathing room, and coach Lynn Nance's charges held on for the title.

Bannister led St. Augustine's with 26 points, but Central Missouri's tight zone defense limited Falcon scoring star Anthony Rogers to eight points.

Central Missouri State completes rare double

Central Missouri State's dual Division II basketball championships sent Warrensburg, Missouri, into a frenzy and put the school firmly in the records book.

Back-to-back victories March 24 in Springfield, Massachusetts, gave Central Missouri both the men's and women's NCAA championships. It marked the first time in history that one school had won men's and women's national intercollegiate basketball championships in the same season.

"It will take a few days for it to sink in," said men's coach Lynn Nance, who led the Mules to an 81-77 triumph over St. Augustine's in the championship game at the Springfield Civic Center. "But it's a great feeling."

"Oh, how sweet it is," said women's coach Jorja Hoehn, who coached the Jennies to an 80-73 championship victory against Virginia Union. "If it's a dream, all I can say is I hope we never wake up."

The double championship set off an impromptu celebration in the streets of Warrensburg, a central Missouri town where the school is located. That celebration lasted well into Sunday morning March 25.

But the celebrating was not over. Monday classes were canceled for two hours while a school assembly, which was attended by a good portion of the 9,000-student enrollment, was called. Missouri Governor Christopher Bond attended the ceremony; and President Reagan even got in on the festivities, sending a congratulatory telegram.

"Until tonight, we didn't have any NCAA championships, and now we have two in three hours," said school President James M. Horner. "The odds are so long against it that we may never see another school do it. All it takes is a few minutes of poor play and you are out of the tournament."

Central Missouri did indeed beat long odds. The NCAA is in its third year of sponsoring women's championships, and no other school has accomplished the double in a team sport. Kenyon won both Division III swimming titles earlier this month to become the first school to win two NCAA titles in the same sport in the same school year.

Seven schools on eight occasions claimed an NCAA championship and an Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women's title in the same year.

UCLA—men's and women's volleyball during the 1974-75 and 1975-76 school years; Southern California—men's and women's volleyball, 1976-77 school year; UTEP—indoor track, 1980; Wisconsin-Oshkosh—gymnastics (NCAA Division II, AIAW Division III), 1980; Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo—Division II track and field, 1981; Texas—Division I swimming, 1981; Colorado—skiing, 1982.

Few schools have come close in NCAA basketball. Georgia had teams in both the men's and women's semifinals last year, but both lost. Virginia Union came close this season—it's men's team lost in the quarterfinals.

Ironically, the teams that Central Missouri defeated in the two championships were members of the same conference—the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association—thus depriving the CIAA of a rare double of its own.

. . . Why not succeed again

The Central Missouri State Jennies got all the incentive they needed about a half hour before they began the 1984 NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Championship.

The Jennies had just watched their male counterparts, the Central Missouri State Mules, win the men's championship at the Springfield, Massachusetts, Civic Center. They knew that a victory over Virginia Union would give the Warrensburg, Missouri, school a first in college basketball history—a men's and women's championship in the same year.

The fact that Virginia Union was the defending champion did not seem to matter to the fired-up Jennies. Central Missouri held the Panthers scoreless for nearly five minutes, raced to a 25-4 lead nine minutes into the game and eventually won, 80-73.

"I felt we had already won the title when we went on the floor," said Central Missouri's Carla Eades. "I just thought 'Wow, we've got to make history tonight.'"

Virginia Union did make a serious second-half run behind 14 straight points from center Veta Williams. That pulled the Panthers within three points, 48-45, with 11:18 left; but Eades responded with two straight jumpers, and Virginia Union never got closer than five points.

Eades, who was named the tournament's most valuable player, scored 22 points in the final and had 20 in a semifinal defeat of Valdosta State. She got help in both games from center Rosie Jones (23 points vs. Valdosta State and 13 in the championship) and guard Jackie Harris (17 and 15, respectively).

Williams was effective in the final with 39 points and 20 rebounds. But Central Missouri shut down the Panthers' star forward Paris McWhirter, last year's tournament most valuable player. She went 1-for-13 from the field, scored just two points and fouled out.

Florida swimmers win second straight title

Despite winning only two of 18 events, Florida used depth to outlast Texas and win the NCAA Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships March 21-24 at Cleveland State University in Cleveland, Ohio.

The Gators' victories were in the 200-yard freestyle (Mike Heath) and the 800-yard freestyle relay, but coach Randy Reese's swimmers had seven second-place finishes, one third, three fourths, three fifths and two sixths.

The 18 championship-final entries helped the Gators settle a family feud of sorts. Second-place Texas is coached by Randy Reese's brother, Eddie.

Several sweeps took place in the meet, including Rick Carey's expected domination of the backstrokes. The Texas junior won the 100- and 200-yard titles and claimed half of Texas' four championships.

John Moffet of Stanford won the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke events, and teammate Pablo Morales took both butterfly titles. Morales' time of 47.02 at 100 yards set American and meet records.

Florida also set an American record with a 6:21.29 time in the 800-yard freestyle relay. Jeff Kostoff broke his own American record in the 1,650-yard freestyle, and George DiCarlo of Arizona lowered Kostoff's 500-yard American freestyle mark. Southern Methodist's Ricardo Prado, a Brazilian who won both individual medleys, set a U.S. open record in the 400-yard individual medley.

Stanford, one of the premeet favorites, finished third. The Cardinal won five individual titles, the most of any team.

In all, 31 schools scored points in the four-day meet, and seven teams exceeded the 100-point level.

Yale, Penn's Mary Jane O'Neill take top women's fencing honors

Pennsylvania's Mary Jane O'Neill and Yale's team staged upsets to win the individual and team honors at the 1984 NCAA Women's Fencing Championships, held March 22-24 at Princeton University.

O'Neill started the surprising weekend by winning the individual competition over Yale's Andrea Metkus. O'Neill swept through her first four matches before her first encounter with Metkus, who lost to Ohio State's Coreen Richter in the second round before coming back through the losers' bracket. Metkus took a 7-8 decision (low score wins) over O'Neill, but O'Neill came back to win, 4-8, in the second bout of the double-elimination competition.

Penn State's Jana Angelakis, the 1983 individual champion, was the No. 1 seed but lost her second match to Caitlan Bilodeaux of Barnard. Angelakis won a pair of bouts in the losers' bracket before being eliminated by Metkus.

O'Neill was rated No. 2 entering the tournament; Metkus was third.

Yale won the team competition with victories over Ohio State, Temple and Penn State. Yale was the No. 4 seed entering the tournament and moved to third following the preliminary-pool competition. Temple, Pennsylvania and Ohio State were the pretournament favorites.

Yale's most difficult match was its semifinal victory over Temple, which the Elis won, 7-8. Yale took a 4-9 decision over Penn State, the defending champion, in the finals.

Division I gymnastics site new but Utah favored for third title

The site has changed to Los Angeles, but Utah remains the favorite for the 1984 NCAA Division I Women's Gymnastics Championships April 6-7 on the UCLA campus.

Utah, which has been the host and winner of the first two NCAA meets, has been at or near the top of the weekly coaches poll this season and appears to be the team to beat.

Utah will have challengers, however. There are teams that could make a charge at the Utes; but as in the past, coach Greg Marsden seems to have the necessary talent and depth to win the championship.

Here is a region-by-region look at the top Division I women's gymnastics teams:

West

Cal State Fullerton finished second to Utah in the first Division I championships two years ago, and the Titans should be strong again. Coach Lynn Rogers' squad compiled a composite qualifying score of 186.625, third to Utah's 189.6.

Host UCLA also will be tough in this region, as will California, Oregon State, Washington and Stanford. All have recorded regional qualifying scores in excess of 180 points.

Midwest

Utah heads the list in this region, but Arizona and Arizona State

Championships Preview

provide tough opposition. Arizona State finished second to the Utes a year ago, and the regular-season confrontations between these two have been exciting. Arizona also should do well in postseason competition, and the Wildcats' qualifying score is good enough to merit attention.

Oklahoma, Minnesota and Utah State also are Midwest contenders.

Central

Indiana State is among the top teams based on scores, and Alabama has been in the rankings throughout the season. Both of these squads may have an impact at UCLA. Southern Illinois is the third Central team with a composite score over 180.

Missouri, Illinois and Illinois State round out the top teams in the Central region.

Northeast

Penn State comes in on top of the heap, followed by Ohio State, Pittsburgh, New Hampshire, Bowling Green State and Kent State.

Penn State and Ohio State appear to be the top teams in the Northeast, as the Nittany Lions and Buckeyes both had composite qualifying scores of more than 180 points.

Southeast

Florida finished fifth last year, and the Gators have been ranked all year. Their composite score of 187.3125 is second only to Utah's 189.6.

Georgia also is in excess of 180 points, so the Bulldogs may be a threat. West Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina State and North Carolina complete the top teams from the Southeast.

In individual competition, several outstanding all-around performers will be trying to upend defending champion Megan McCunniff-Marsden of Utah.

Here are some of the top contenders, based on regional qualifying scores:

West—Susie Kellems, Southern California; Jeannine Creek and Syd Jones, San Diego State; Kathy Bovard and Sara Larson, Washington State, and Janelle Maynard, Boise State.

Midwest—Antoinette Gonzales and Tracy Kwiatkowski, New Mexico; Karen Beer, Denver; Kim Grabowski and Renee Gould, Nebraska, and Mary Lu McClellan, Brigham Young.

Central—Lori Zabel, Illinois-Chicago; Lisa Benn and Paula Stansbury, Louisiana State; Darlene Davis, Northern Illinois; Tracy Blake, Indiana, and Kathy Beckwith, Michigan.

Northeast—Karen Carlotto, Pennsylvania; Carol McDonough, Connecticut; Honor Kammerer, Temple; Mindy Rosenbaum, Yale, and Donna Gerolamo and Sharon Mahler, Northeastern.

Southeast—Maureen Hall, Nancy Amman and Mary Bird, Memphis State; Rona Riggs, Duke; Colleen Lafferty, Kentucky, and Laura Peterson, James Madison.

Final basketball stats due

Sports information directors at NCAA member institutions should be aware of upcoming deadlines for reporting of final men's and women's basketball statistics.

All Divisions II and III institutions should return their final basketball reporting forms by April 6, and Division I SIDs have until April 9 to return their forms. The final reporting forms were mailed March 5 from the NCAA national office.

Additional forms can be obtained by contacting James F. Wright, statistics coordinator, at the national office.

Final Divisions II and III men's and women's basketball statistics will appear in the April 25 issue of The NCAA News, and final Division I

The final regular-season statistics in Divisions II and III were carried in the February 29 issue of the News, and the final regular-season Division I statistics were printed in the March 14 issue. The final statistics will include NCAA tournament games.

Basketball TV ratings corrected

According to CBS spokesman Len DeLuca, college basketball television ratings cited in the March 21 issue of The NCAA News were inaccurate.

Instead of a decline in regular-season ratings, CBS experienced a slight increase this season. The network reported a 5.3 rating for 23 broadcasts (31 games) in 1983-84, compared to a 5.2 rating last year for 20 broadcasts (29 games).

NBC's ratings dropped from 5.6 in 1982-83 (24 broadcasts, including a number of games syndicated by the TVS Network) to 4.2 this season. NBC carried 27 broadcasts and 41 games this season, according to network spokesman Tom Merritt.

Elsewhere in Education

CEOs named at member schools

Three NCAA member institutions will be getting new chief executive officers soon.

The Rev. Joseph A. O'Hare, an educator who has spent the past 12 years with the Jesuit magazine America, has been named the next president of Fordham University, succeeding the Rev. James C. Finlay, who will retire June 30.

Donald E. Walters, an Illinois education official, has been named president of Montclair State College, replacing David W. D. Dixon, who has announced his retirement and will return to the faculty. Walters, executive director of the Illinois Board of Governors of State Colleges, will assume the post in the fall.

The University of California, Irvine, has announced that Jack W. Peltason, president of the American Council on Education, will become its chancellor next fall. Peltason, ACE president since 1977, served as chancellor of the University of Illinois, Champaign, from 1967 to 1977.

Grants awarded to increase pay

The Education Department has awarded grants totaling $51 million to performance-based pay plans for teachers that will go to selected state education agencies, local school districts and other institutions that develop, define and carry out teacher incentive plans but do not pay for them.

Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell has said that increased teacher pay is vital to educational reform in the nation's schools.

Teachers unions have opposed merit pay for teachers, claiming it would benefit a few and would be unfair. They favor across-the-board pay increases for all teachers.

Knowledge of geography lacking

Considering the United States' military and economic involvement around the world, an instructor in geography at California State University, Fullerton, says that college students' ignorance of his subject is alarming.

A majority of college students in a geography class could not find El Salvador, Iran and Afghanistan, said instructor Bill Puzo. He said, however, that he was not surprised at the results, because they matched those of other classes during the past 14 years.

Of 100 students, 16 could not locate the Soviet Union, and another 70 percent could not find Afghanistan. On obvious locations, Puzo's students failed to do much better. Forty percent could not identify the South Pacific, 38 percent were unable to find the North Atlantic and France eluded 34 percent of the students.

"Most students shrug and say, 'Why do I need to know?' It's not knowledge of absolute location that matters; the ramifications of geography are what matters," Puzo said.

Foreign language linked to degree

Foreign language study soon will be a part of all graduation requirements at Ohio State University.

As part of OSU's conditional/unconditional admissions policy, effective next fall, entering freshmen will be required to have at least two years of high school foreign language classes. Students who have not completed the requirement will be admitted conditionally and will be required to take 10 hours of a foreign language.

The new admissions policy also requires incoming students to have completed four units of English, three of math, two of social sciences, two of physical sciences, one of visual and performing arts, and one extra unit from any of the above categories.

Richard D. Frasher, assistant dean of engineering, said, "Americans at all levels and in all occupations need foreign language skills if they are to compete successfully in the global market."

Exchange programs termed vital

University of Wisconsin, Madison, Chancellor Irving Shain believes this nation's educational exchange program with the Peoples Republic of China is a key to world peace.

"I'm convinced that the road to world stability and peace involves knowing as much as you can on a person-to-person basis about people from other countries and other cultures," said Shain, who administers the nation's largest educational exchange program with the PRC.

"I think it's important for the Chinese to know as much about the United States as possible and for us to know as much about China as possible. One way to do that is to bring Chinese to Madison and let them see what we're all about," he said.

"We hope the leaders of China 20 years from now will have had their training in Madison," the chancellor told United Press International.

LSU to upgrade requirements

Robert Brodhead, athletics director at Louisiana State University, says new admissions requirements to be in effect at the institution in 1988 will be welcomed by the athletics department.

The decision to upgrade those requirements had brought criticism from many educators and those involved in high school athletics in the state.

LSU and several other state schools are under a court-ordered consent decree requiring open admissions through 1987. The decree ended a Justice Department suit calling for desegregation of higher education.

"We welcome it," Brodhead said of the change. "The coaches and I have reviewed it and welcome it, because it prepares us for Rule 48 (NCAA Proposal No. 48), which is going to be a radical change." He said the new requirements will force prospective student-athletes to take the kinds of courses in high school that will help them meet the requirements of Proposal No. 48, which becomes effective in 1986.

LSU will require (in 1988) high school students to have passed four units of English, three of math, three of natural sciences, three of social sciences, two of foreign languages and one-half unit of computer science.

May chosen to officiate in Summer Olympics

Darlene May, the winningest coach in NCAA Division II women's basketball at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, will put the shoe on the other foot for the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

May has been chosen to officiate women's Olympic basketball games. She is the first woman ever chosen as an Olympic basketball official. Her selection was announced by Edward S. Steitz, chairman of the U.S. Olympic Basketball Committee.

May has a 72 percent winning record in the past 10 years at Cal Poly-Pomona and has been an official in a number of international tournaments, including the world championships in 1979 and 1983 and the 1977 World University Games. May also is a member of the Special NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee.

"We're delighted and proud, not only because she is the first woman official to work the Olympic Games, but because we regard her as the leading official in the world of women's basketball," said Steitz, who is athletics director at Springfield College and secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee.

Division III football dates established

Future dates for the NCAA Division III Football Championship, which has been expanded from an eight- to a 16-team field, have been set through the 1991 season.

The championships will begin on the third Saturday in November each year from 1984 through 1991, followed by quarterfinal, semifinal and championship games on consecutive Saturdays.

Rocco J. Carzo, chair of the Division III Football Committee, said the new format would accommodate the schedules of most Division III football-playing institutions.

"Inasmuch as the traditional Division III regular-season football schedules terminate on the second Saturday of November, and in order to permit Division III institutions to plan future football schedules, the committee suggested that the championship commence on the third Saturday in November," Carzo said. "Also, the committee determined that this date is most compatible with the majority of Division III member institutions' academic calendars."

Before expanding to an eight-team field in 1975, the Division III championship had a four-team field for the 1973 and 1974 championships. The first 16-team championship will be conducted this year and provides for a 1:12 ratio, whereas the previous ratio was one championship participant for every 24 football teams in Division III.

Championship dates (first round, quarterfinal, semifinal, championship), listed by year, are as follows: 1984—November 17, November 24, December 1, December 8; 1985—November 16, November 23, November 30, December 7; 1986—November 15, November 22, November 29, December 6; 1987—November 21, November 28, December 5, December 12; 1988—November 19, November 26, December 3, December 10; 1989—November 18, November 25, December 2, December 9; 1990—November 17, November 24, December 1, December 8; 1991—November 16, November 23, November 30, December 7.

News available first class

A first-class mail option now is available for subscribers to The NCAA News, and institutional subscribers may take advantage of the option immediately.

For $23, in addition to the regular subscription price, subscribers will receive 46 issues of the News first class rather than the second-class method of mailing.

Institutional subscribers—those who receive their subscriptions by virtue of their institutions' dues payments—may return the mailing label at the top of page one of the News along with $23 and receive the next 46 issues first class.

The first-class mail option is available to all other current subscribers when they renew their subscriptions and to first-time subscribers when they order a subscription. The annual subscription cost plus the first-class mail is $38.

Checks for new subscriptions, renewals or the first-class mail option for institutional subscribers should be made payable to NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

Legislative Assistance

Coaches' speaking engagements

Football and men's basketball coaches in Divisions I and II may speak at high school or junior college awards banquets (or other groups primarily involving prospective student-athletes) only during the appropriate contact periods for those sports as set forth in Bylaw 1-2-(a)-(4), (5) and (6). Furthermore, any face-to-face encounter by a coach with a prospective student-athlete while speaking at an awards banquet would be a countable contact.

As indicated in Case No. 191 (page 298, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), football and men's basketball coaches in Divisions I and II also may speak at other types of banquets or meetings (e.g., Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club) during contact and noncontact periods when: (1) The meeting or banquet is open to the general public; (2) the attendees are not limited only to high school or junior college athletes; (3) there is no direct contact between the staff member and any prospect attending the meeting or banquet, and (4) the staff member does not make a recruiting presentation. Any face-to-face encounter by a coach while speaking at such banquets or meetings outside of a permissible contact period would be a violation of recruiting legislation.

Athletics equipment donations

As discussed in Case No. 62 (page 261, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), a student-athlete is not permitted to accept sports equipment (e.g., footwear, tennis racquets, golf clubs, hockey sticks, shirts) from a manufacturer or commercial enterprise. Receipt of such items by a student-athlete would be an extra benefit not available to the student body in general. Such items may be provided to the student-athlete's institution to be used by the institution's team in accordance with the accepted practice for the issuance and retrieval of athletics equipment generally.

In addition, neither the institution nor the student-athlete may permit the use of the athlete's name or picture in conjunction with the use of such equipment.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

Basketball coaches select all-America teams

Patrick Ewing, Michael Jordan and Wayman Tisdale completed a clean sweep of first-team all-America honors when each was named last week to the National Association of Basketball Coaches squad.

The trio of underclassmen—Ewing, a junior center from Georgetown; Jordan, a junior guard from North Carolina, and Tisdale, a sophomore center at Oklahoma—were named to the first unit of all four major all-America teams. Each was tabbed earlier by the Associated Press, United Press International and the United States Basketball Writers Association.

Joining that trio on the NABC first team were Akeem Olajuwon, junior, center, Houston, and Chris Mullin, junior, guard, St. John's (New York). Olajuwon was a first-team selection by AP and the USBWA, while Mullin was chosen to UPI's first unit. Only one other player made any of the four Division I first teams—North Carolina senior forward Sam Perkins, who was on the three first teams announced earlier but was a second-team NABC selection.

Following is a look at the NABC men's all-America teams in all three divisions:

Division I

First team—Akeem Olajuwon, Houston; Wayman Tisdale, Oklahoma; Pat Ewing, Georgetown; Michael Jordan, North Carolina; Chris Mullin, St. John's (New York).

Second team—Sam Perkins, North Carolina; Keith Lee, Memphis State;

Melvin Turpin, Kentucky; Leon Wood, Cal State Fullerton; Devin Durrant, Brigham Young.

Third team—Michael Young, Houston; Charles Barkley, Auburn; Charlie Sitton, Oregon State; Terence Stansbury, Temple; Vern Fleming, Georgia.

Division II

First team—Earl Jones, District of Columbia; Dwight Higgs, Kentucky Wesleyan; David Pope, Norfolk State; Jerome Kersey, Longwood; Rod Drake, Kentucky Wesleyan.

Second team—Fred Moore, Wright State; Dean Thompson, Nebraska-Omaha; Rich Leonard, Central Connecticut State; Mario Elie, American International; Jesse Hellyer, Randolph-Macon.

Third team—Charles Oakley, Virginia Union; Ron Nunnally, Central Missouri State; Troy Mild, Slippery Rock; Jeff Martin, Alaska-Anchorage; Ricky Bowers, David Lipscomb.

Division III

First team—Leroy Witherspoon, Potsdam State; Bill Bessoir, Scranton; Mark Van Valkenburg, Framingham State; Chip Henry, Hope; Reggie Thomas, Roanoke.

Second team—Blaise Bugajski, Illinois Wesleyan; Tim Casey, Wittenberg; Dan Trant, Clark (Massachusetts); Andre McKoy, Wisconsin-Whitewater; Tim Woodson, Roanoke.

Third team—Jerry O'Grady, Hartwick; Paul Whitney, Ohio Northern; David Hathaway, DePauw; Larry Kollath, Hamilton; Leon Jones, Widener.

Boston College's Cobb innocent in 1978-79 point-shaving case

Former Boston College basketball star Ernie Cobb, 27, was found innocent last week of participating in a point-shaving scheme during the 1978-79 season.

A Brooklyn, New York, Federal court jury delivered the verdict after hearing eight days of testimony, during which a former teammate of Cobb's, Rick Kuhn, appeared as a prosecution witness and Cobb took the stand in his own defense. Kuhn and three known gamblers had been found guilty of organizing the plot in an earlier trial.

Kuhn testified in hopes of reducing his 10-year sentence received in 1981. Kuhn told the jury that Cobb had been brought into the plot after he had a good early-season performance against Providence and unknowingly boosted the Eagles' victory margin above the point spread, forcing the gamblers to lose money.

Cobb testified that he had received $1,000 from Rocco Perla, one of the convicted gamblers, shortly after a game 10 days later against Harvard. He said he thought the money was an innocent reward for his having played well in an earlier game that season.

Cobb and codefendant Peter Vario, who also was found innocent, faced a potential sentence of five years each. Vario was accused of being a bookmaker in the scheme.

A Stamford, Connecticut, native, Cobb said he felt "no bitterness" and said he hoped to get another chance at playing in the National Basketball Association. Cobb, who finished his career as the third leading scorer in Boston College history, had tryouts with the Utah Jazz and the New Jersey Nets after college and later played professionally in Israel.

Wooden, five 1959 graduates honored by basketball coaches

Five former college basketball players who helped make 1959 an outstanding and surprising year, with unranked California winning the NCAA championship, have been named to the 10th annual silver anniversary all-America team selected by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

The team, chosen from the 1959 senior class, is composed of Maj. Gen. Robert D. Beckel, Air Force; Al Buch, California; Harold M. Danzig, Bucknell; Tom Hawkins, Notre Dame, and Bailey Howell, Mississippi State.

John Wooden, whose UCLA teams won 10 national championships, was selected by the NABC for a special golden anniversary award, commemorating 50 years of service to college basketball.

The five former players and Wooden will be honored at the NABC awards dinner April 1 in Seattle, Washington. The NABC convention is held in conjunction with the Final Four.

Following are sketches of the 1984 NABC award winners:

Maj. Gen. Robert D. Beckel—Beckel was the leading scorer for Air Force for three consecutive years and still holds the single-season record for scoring average at 22.8 points per game. He never scored below double figures in 67 varsity and 20 freshman games. He recently was honored by the NCAA as one of its five Silver Anniversary award winners. Beckel currently is director of operations at U.S. Air Force headquarters in Washington, D.C. He has logged 3,500 hours of flying time as a command pilot and also served as a member of the Thunderbirds, the U.S. aerial demonstration squadron.

Al Buch—Buch was captain of the 1959 California team that won the NCAA championship and led the nation in defense. Buch, a guard, helped the Golden Bears defeat Cincinnati, led by Oscar Robertson, in the semifinals, and West Virginia, led by Jerry West, in the final. Buch is president of EMPISO Industries in Glendale, California, and Capitol Group Tire Sales, the largest independent distributor of tires in the United States.

Harold M. Danzig—Danzig was the captain and leading rebounder for Bucknell in 1958-59, its first in the university division of the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference. He was eighth in the nation in rebounding as a senior and holds the school career rebounding record at 15.9 rebounds per game. His career scoring average was 16.4. Danzig is president of Elgin and Waltham watch companies and lives in Miami, Florida.

Tom Hawkins—A 6-5 center, Hawkins was among the nation's leading scorers as a junior with a 25.2 average and was a consensus all-America as a senior. He is the only Notre Dame player to average more than 20 points and 16 rebounds during a career. He played professional basketball for 10 years with the Los Angeles Lakers and Cincinnati Royals. He worked several NCAA basketball tournaments for

John Wooden

NBC-TV and now is sports director at KABC Radio in Los Angeles.

Bailey Howell—Howell was Mississippi State's first all-America and helped the Bulldogs to their first Southeastern Conference championship. His career averages were 27.1 points and 17 rebounds per game. He played 12 years in the National Basketball Association, compiling an 18.7 scoring average. Howell is district sales manager for Converse Shoe Company, based in Starkville, Mississippi.

John Wooden—Wooden played at Purdue from 1930 to 1932 and was player of the year in 1932. After 11 years as a high school coach, Wooden was head coach at Indiana State for two years before going to UCLA in 1948. His 29-year collegiate coaching career record was 667-161 for an .806 winning percentage, fourth on the all-time list. Wooden trails only Adolph Rupp, Phog Allen, Henry Iba, Ed Diddle and Ray Meyer in all-time victories. His glory years were from 1964 to 1975, when UCLA won 10 championships in a 12-year span.

U.S. Wrestling Association (formerly U.S. Wrestling Federation) DANIEL B. Di-EDUARDO appointed to replace Dennis L. Poppe as the NCAA staff representative.

Briefly in the News

When the women's gymnastics team at the University of Florida competes in its last home meet this season, the results will be fed into a computer as part of a project to improve coaching techniques and to eliminate paperwork in scoring. Industrial engineering students who came up with the idea are using modern business and industrial-management techniques. "We can use the same tools to analyze data associated with an athletic event with a goal of improving the participant's productivity—their score," said Barney Capehart, a professor in the department of industrial and systems engineering. Coach Ernestine Weaver is interested in the project in terms of speeding up the processing of information and improving accuracy. . . . Coaches selected for the annual Aloha Classic Basketball Tournament April 12-14 in Honolulu are Eddie Sutton, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville (South); Jud Heathcote, Michigan State University (Midwest); Lou Campanelli, James Madison University (East), and Boyd Grant, Fresno State University (West).

The Ole Miss Loyalty Foundation at the University of Mississippi has launched a campaign to raise funds to assist the athletics department in replacing the Astroturf in Vaught-Hemingway Stadium with natural grass. . . . President Edward J. Bloustein of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, says the university may change the nickname of its athletics teams from the Scarlet Knights to one that more closely identifies the teams with New Jersey. Rutgers teams have been called the Scarlet Knights for the past 30 years. They were known as the Queensmen before that.

One hour of academic credit is available for the sixth annual Bengal Football Coaches Clinic at Idaho State University April 6-7. Registration is necessary to qualify for the graduate or undergraduate credit. For information, contact the sports information office at 208/236-3651. . . . The fencing program has been dropped as an intercollegiate sport at California State University, Northridge, leaving the school with 10 men's sports and eight women's. . . . Experts in sports medicine will participate in the fifth annual Sports Medicine Symposium at the University of Bridgeport April 4. For information, contact Richard Fiorentino at 203/865-0587 or Robert Stanton at 203/377-5108.

The National Strength and Conditioning Association's seventh annual convention and exhibition is scheduled June 26-28 at the Pittsburgh Hilton. More than 600 strength coaches, athletics trainers, sports researchers and athletes are expected. For information, contact Darla J. Gaston, convention coordinator, National Strength and Conditioning Association, P.O. Box 81410, Lincoln, Nebraska 68501. . . . Boise State University will begin the Albertson's Christmas Tournament in December 1985, consisting of four teams from NCAA Division I. Albertson Inc. is donating $31,000 for the first tournament.

The U.S. Olympic soccer team will resume its pre-Olympic schedule April 13 in an exhibition game with Indiana University, Bloomington, the 1982 and 1983 NCAA champions. The match will be held in Bill Armstrong Stadium in Bloomington. . . . The Atlanta Tip Off Club will host the 16th annual Naismith Banquet April 5 in the Omni Hotel. Awards will be presented to the men's and women's players of the year in intercollegiate basketball. Special recognition will be given Ray Meyer, head coach at DePaul University, who is retiring at the end of the season. Naismith all-America men's and women's teams also will be announced.

NCAA Manual available

Member institutions wishing to purchase additional copies of the new 1984-85 NCAA Manual, which was mailed to the membership in the past week, may do so for $4 per copy.

Each year, many institutions purchase copies of the Manual to distribute to their coaches, members of campus athletics committees and other representatives of their athletics interests. The books may be ordered from the NCAA, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

The cost per book for non-NCAA members placing orders is $8.

The 1984-85 Manual includes all legislation adopted or amended at the 1984 NCAA Convention in Dallas. Copies are sent automatically to the chief executive officer, faculty athletics representative, director of athletics and primary woman administrator of athletics programs at each active member institution. Allied, affiliated and associate members also receive copies automatically.

The new edition of the Manual includes 366 pages, of which 153 are devoted to the Association's constitution and bylaws. Another 122 pages are used for the constitution and bylaws case book. The remainder of the book presents the Association's executive regulations, special rules of order, recommended policies, enforcement procedure, consortium criteria, instructions to NCAA committees and the administrative organization listing.

Officers for Commission will be elected by mail

Members of the new NCAA Presidents' Commission participated in two telephone conferences Tuesday (March 27) and adopted a procedure for nominating and selecting the Commission officers by mail.

Proposed by the NCAA Administrative Committee, the procedure is designed to assure that all 44 members of the Commission will have an opportunity to participate in the officer-selection process. "It simply is not possible to get all 44 Commission members on a single telephone conference, and we believe it is important for the Commission to select its officers now so they can plan for the first Commission meeting," NCAA President John L. Toner said.

Letters will be sent by Toner this week to all members of the Commission, inviting them to nominate a Commission member to serve as chair. In the same mailing, they will be asked to indicate dates from June through August that they would be unable to attend a Commission meeting.

Once the nominations are received in the national office, a ballot will be prepared and returned to the Commission members. If any nominee receives a majority on that ballot, he or she shall be elected as chair; if no nominee receives a majority, the top three vote-getters will remain on a second mail ballot. On that ballot, the highest vote-getter will be elected as chair.

When the chair has been determined, the same nominating and electing procedure will be employed to select the chairs of the Divisions I, II and III subcommittees of the Commission. In those cases, the Commission members from each division will nominate and elect their own chair.

Of the 44 Commission members, 30 participated in the telephone conferences.

Procedure for roll call approved

The membership has approved a resolution adopted by the 1984 NCAA Convention to permit the new NCAA Presidents' Commission to designate roll-call votes on specified proposals at NCAA Conventions, beginning with the 1985 Convention.

Of the 786 members in the Association, 466 (59.3 percent) participated in the mail vote. The final vote was 449 in favor and 17 against, representing approval by 96.4 percent. Constitution 6-4-(b) specifies that a mail vote on a Convention resolution must be approved by at least two-for 1983; however, all indications are that college football again will hold down the No. 2 spot, and the Football Television Committee plans to submit a supplementary report once the figures are available.

The committee also reported that bowl-game ratings maintained a steady third-place standing in relationship to other "championship event" ratings during the four years. However, like regular-season sports television ratings, all championship series experienced a ratings decline.

Other data gathered by the committee indicated that college football experienced a significant ratings drop during prime-time telecasts. Two games shown last fall during prime time achieved 10.2 and 10.0 ratings, the poorest prime-time performances of the last four years in college football.

Another factor cited was the fractionalization of college football television. During the four-year period, Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., which carried the NCAA supplementary series in 1982 and 1983, more than tripled its number of subscribers, thus cutting into network audiences. Another substantial contributor to this process has been the number of 400-mile and sell-out exception telecasts granted to individual institutions, which the committee believes are more damaging to the national series ratings than the supplementary series.

The committee also examined market-index levels, as measured by

Finally, the committee offered a list of preliminary conclusions and possible future directions, pending the Supreme Court decision.

"The Football Television Committee is reluctant to speculate as to the Supreme Court's possible conclusions," said Hugh D. Hindman, committee chair. "We would merely say that the 1984 NCAA Convention this past January adopted a resolution (No. 164) that creates a fair and balanced procedure for the Association's Divisions I-A and I-AA members to reach a conclusion as to how college football television control should be formed and administered in the future once the legal guidelines are clear."

Of the 701 institutions reporting faculty athletics representatives (again excluding institutions where that position is held by the director of athletics), a total of 56 either did not identify the rank or campus position held by the faculty rep or simply listed it as "professor" or a similar title.

Included among the 154 administrators were administrative deans, vice-presidents, vice-chancellors, provosts and directors of various campus entities, including student affairs, academic affairs, administration, university relations, student aid, graduate studies, undergraduate studies, admissions, research, placement and others.

Trailing education department faculty (48) in the study were mathematics, 43; chemistry, 34; biology, 33; health, physical education and recreation, 32; business (including management, accounting, marketing), 29; history, 28; English, 25; law, 21; engineering (all types), 19; psychology, 19; political science, 15; philosophy, 13; physics, 13; speech and theater, 13, and foreign languages, 11.

No other discipline had as many as 10 faculty representatives, with another 42 different teaching areas reported, involving 99 faculty reps.

By division, the most common campus positions were as follows: Division I—administration, 60; law, 20; education, 19; chemistry, 16; business, 15. Division II—administration, 35; mathematics, 15; education, 13; chemistry, 12; history and English, eight. Division III—administration, 59; mathematics, 19; education and biology, 16; HPER, 15.

"In view of the somewhat surprising number of administrators serving as faculty representatives, some institutions have suggested that the position be called 'institutional athletics representative,'" Williams commented.

The committee also noted that 45 of the 1983-84 faculty athletics representatives reported by the institutions are women, including 10 at Division I institutions, 12 in Division II and 23 in Division III.
