Georgetown, Houston get 19.7 rating on television

The 1984 Division I Men's Basketball Championship game between Georgetown and Houston on CBS-TV received a 19.7 rating and a 29 share.

The figures, compared with a 22.7 rating and a 33 share for the 1983 final between North Carolina State and Houston, follow a declining trend in sports ratings on television, as noted in the March 28 issue of The NCAA News.

Ratings are determined by an average percentage of possible television homes viewing the program, and the share is an average percentage of the nation's sets in use viewing the program.

The highest-rated NCAA championship game was aired in 1979 when the final between Indiana State and Michigan State received a 24.1 rating and a 38 share.

CBS-TV averaged a 9.2 rating for the 17 championship games it carried this year. A table on page 8 lists the ratings for those games. The Entertainment and Sports

Programming Network cablecast all 25 games produced by NCAA Productions. In addition to cable coverage, games produced by NCAA Productions were televised on 110 stations. The Maryland-Illinois contest and the Kentucky-Louisville game in the Mideast region received the most coverage. Maryland-Illinois was shown on 14 stations while Kentucky-Louisville was seen on 16 stations. The regional semifinal matching Kentucky and Louisville received a 6.4 rating that tied for fourth on the ESPN list of highest-rated programs. The Memphis State-Houston game received a 5.3 rating and tied for sixth on the all-time See Georgetown, page 8

NCAA committee working on drug-testing program

Work has begun on an NCAA drug-testing program, as specified by Proposal No. 163 adopted at the annual Convention in January.

The Special Committee on Drug Testing met April 2 in Los Angeles and began work on outlines for three testing approaches. The committee will make a preliminary report to the NCAA Council in April and will have a recommendation for the 1985 NCAA Convention. A progress report will be published in The NCAA News prior to July 1, as specified in the resolution.

Deadline approaches for I-A legislation

The deadline for submission of football legislation for consideration at the first Division I-A midyear legislative meeting is Sunday, April

Any proposed amendment involving football at Division I-A institutions must be received in the NCAA national office on or before that date in order to be acted upon at the June 28-29 Division I-A meeting at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Chicago. Proposed amendments, which must be sponsored by at least six Division I-A member institutions, may be submitted by mail. Mailgram or telecommunication device, but no submission received after April 29 can be accepted. Amendments should be sent to Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

The Division I-A midyear meeting was established by action of the 1984 NCAA Convention. The Division I-A membership is permitted to adopt legislation relating exclusively to Division I-A, which means football legislation under the existing NCAA regulations. Any such proposal adopted by the midyear meeting will become effective at the end of the 1985 NCAA Convention, thus assuring that the Association's rescission procedures are applicable to the midyear meeting actions.

Delegates attending the I-A meeting also are permitted to propose other legislation, not limited to Division I-A, for consideration at the 1985 Convention. The deadline for receipt of that type of proposal in the national office is June 21.

All amendments properly submitted in accordance with the April 29 deadline will be included in the Official Notice and Program of the Division I-A meeting, which will be mailed with the delegate-appointment form from the national office May 14.

North Carolina, Chapel Hill, is the committee chair. Other members are Daniel F. Hanley, M.D., Dartmouth College; Robert J. Murphy, M. D., Ohio State University; James C. Puffer, M. D., University of California, Los Angeles; Sandra Sabatini, M.D., University of Illinois School of Medicine, and Gerald P. Sherman, University of Toledo. Don Catlin, M.D., University of California, Los Angeles, the director of the Olympic Analytical Laboratory, is a consultant.

In addition to developing strategies, the committee agreed on a preliminary list of drugs to be banned and for which tests would be conducted; discussed possible sanctions against individuals and institutions for failure to pass the tests, and began developing procedures, including security measures, for collecting samples.

The committee considered tailoring the testing procedures to particular sports, which would result in more testing in some sports than others. Similar tailoring of the drug list also was discussed. Alcohol, for example, might be included in testing at the rifle championships, where it could enhance performance; it would not be included at other championships, where its depressant nature would detract from performance.

Implementation of the program would occur over three years, probably starting with the 1985-86 academic year. In the first year, tests would be conducted at about onethird of the Association's championships. Another third would be added the second year; by the third year, testing would take place at all NCAA events.

A random sample of the participants would be tested, including all of the top finishers at individual championships. The total would average 15 percent but might range from five to 25 percent, depending on the event. Results would be available in about three days.

There are plans to test Division I-A football players, although there is not an NCAA championship in See NCAA, page 8

Convention review on Council's agenda

Convention issues and the establishment of the first NCAA Presidents' Commission are among the items to be considered by the NCAA Council in its April 16-18 meeting at the Westin Crown Center Hotel, Kansas City, Missouri

Beginning the second full year of its 44-member, federated structure, the Council-and, in appropriate cases, the Divisions I, II and III Steering Committees meeting separately-will review the 1984 NCAA Convention and initial planning for the 1985 Convention.

Included in that topic will be a report by the Special Committee on Convention Operations, which will meet the day prior to the Council meeting to consider such matters as electronic voting, voting in the division round tables and the overall Convention schedule. The special committee—including NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis, chair; Alan J. Chapman, Association parliamentarian, and Robert T. Shields, a member of the Division III Steering Committee-also will submit its report to the NCAA Executive Committee when it meets in May.

Other Convention-related matters before the Council will include a Convention.

Elsewhere in its agenda, the Council will review the establishment of the Presidents' Commission, which currently is in the process of selecting its officers, and appropriate relationships between the Commission and the Council.

Committee reports to be received by the Council include the new Special Committee on Drug Testing's recommendations on meeting the provisions of 1984 Convention Proposal No. 163 and the Special Committee on Player Agents' presentation of a proposed agent registration form.

Women's sports seek growth by turning to promotion

Second of two articles

Merrily Dean Baker, women's athletics director at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, underscored the importance of promotions in women's athletics recently when she appointed a new director of promotions and public relations.

"The whole area of promotions and public relations is a vital one at our stage of development," Baker said, announcing that she was upgrading the position from that of a coordinator to an administrator.

Shannon Riley, the new promotions and public relations director, is not untypical of the young women who are moving into those positions in women's intercollegiate athletics. She is an experienced manager, having worked as a special projects coordinator for the mayor of St. Paul and as a project manager for the city's planning and development department. She also has been working on a master's degree in marketing and journalism at Minnesota.

"New creative promotional directions are needed to expand the public's awareness of the top-notch competition found in women's athletics at Minnesota," Riley says.

Minnesota's goals are similar to those of most women's athletics programs at Division I institutions. A year ago, some athletics programs were making money, but most were not (The NCAA News, February 23, 1983). Women's programs are turning to promotions and marketing techniques to make their programs less expensive now and hopefully profitable in the long run.

The marketing attitude is taking hold.

When C. Vivian Stringer was named head women's basketball coach at the University of Iowa last year, she said, "Our goal was to provide a product that everyone would respond to.'

And respond they did, due in large part to a TV campaign promoting the "gold card," which when purchased allows admission to ticketed women's sports events.

Stringer's teams established and reestablished the Big Ten Conference attendance record for women last season, drawing 7,130 fans to a March 2 game with Northwestern University.

Other major women's programs have successful promotions programs under way in hopes of gaining more control over their futures. Here's what some leading women's administrators are doing:

ream comes true for ex-baseball player

Collegiate Baseball

Editor's note: This article was written prior to the April 6 launch of the space shuttle Challenger from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. The five-man crew returns from its six-day mission April 12.

Former college baseball player George "Pinky" Nelson will be blasting off to outer space in the space shuttle Challenger April 6.

Nelson, who played left field at Claremont McKenna-Harvey Mudd - Scripps Colleges under the guidance of coach Bill Arce, will be operating the Man Maneuvering Unit, a back pack that will propel Nelson through space approximately 300 feet from Challenger to a satellite that he will attempt to repair

Nelson will not be tethered to Challenger when he jettisons off to the satellite. So, if a malfunction occurs, the space shuttle could conceivably go after him. Other options also are open

Nelson, who graduated from Willmar High School in Willmar, Minnesota, in 1968, received a bachelor of science degree in physics in 1972.

As a freshman, he was a member of Arce's baseball program. Nelson was recommended to Arce by the late Dick Siebert of the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities. Nelson was known in Minnesota as a fine hitter.

"Pinky played left field for us that year, and he was forced to make a tough decision," Arce said. "He had to wrestle with dropping the baseball program to further his skills in astronomy. His long-range ambition was to be an astronaut. "I really hated to see him leave, because he was such a good hitter; but I never have questioned his motives. They were solid in every respect.

"He still continues to love baseball."

Arce, who was invited to attend blastoff ceremonies April 6 by Nelson, tried to coerce Nelson into taking a baseball and bat on the space shuttle and actually hit the baseball into orbit.

"You hear a lot of baseball players saying they hit the ball so hard that it's still in orbit. He could actually be the first person to ever do it. But I hardly think NASA would approve of such a thing," Arce said.

The media is not allowed to interview any member of the flight crew two months before a mission.

We talked with the next best persons—his mother and father, who reside in Clinton, Iowa.

George Sr., his father, said that baseball has meant a lot to Pinky.

"The idea that baseball helped him compete and do a good job in everything was the most important factor in his baseball playing days," said George Sr.

"Baseball has served him in good stead in that respect." Tess, his mother, elaborated:

"When Pinky earned his doctorate in astronomy from the University of Washington (1978), he wrote his thesis to his dad with the following inscription: 'Dedicated to my dad, who taught me to look beyond third base."

According to George Sr., he worked with his son many hours when Pinky was a youth baseball player.

"I really enjoyed hitting Pinky fly balls and knocking grounders to him. I also made him shag flys. And he did pretty good. Before he went away to college, we used to have a lot of fun like this."

George Sr., who was a pitcher at Hofstra, acknowledged that Pinky was not the polished outer-space mechanic in his teen-age years that he is now.

"I would never let him touch my car when he was a teenager. He was a butcher, as far as I was concerned. But after he graduated, he became pretty good with his hands. He helped me put in a cabinet in the dining room."

George Sr. also talked about another humorous event.

"In Willmar, Pinky once picked up a can he thought had gasoline in it that actually had kerosene. He poured kerosene in the car gas tank and when we got on the road, the car kind of sputtered and sputtered and sputtered until the engine finally died

"I had to get the tank cleaned out and fill it full of high-test gas. After a short time, the car was working all right. It didn't hurt the car that much, but he sure was careful after that."

By now, you're probably wondering how this ex-baseball player and current astronaut got tagged with the nickname of Pinky.

"That's not so unusual," deadpanned George Sr. "When I was in the delivery room when he was being born, he looked like a little red rat. So I nicknamed him on the spot-Pinky. The name stuck."

With parents like George and Tess and a background in baseball, the United States is in good hands with Pinky Nelson.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

I was very encouraged to read in your recent issue (The NCAA News) the article on academic excellence achieved by student-athletes. All too often, reports are published on the negative side of this subject, and it was refreshing to read that many athletes are not dumb jocks.

We as coaches have many responsibilities, the most important one being that our athletes graduate. Though hard to accept, recruiting should not only be based on athletic ability but also on a student's academic ability. In my short coaching career, I have found that a more academically sound studentathlete contributes more to one's program over a four-year period than an academically inept one.

Any coach can keep an athlete eligible for two years but must realize that a player can contribute more over four years than two. We must not be nearsighted but future-oriented in our recruiting philosophy.

My philosophy can be credited to my father and to Del Vines, my collegiate tennis coach. The team that I played on in the mid-1970s graduated: one doctor, two dentists, one lawyer, three successful businessmen, one president of a savings and loan firm, and one successful professional tennis player. This team also was ranked in the top 20 in 1974 and 1975.

This past fall, my present tennis team had the distinction of the entire team making the honor roll. I am very proud of this achievement and feel good to know that athletes can win on the court and in the classroom. The term "dumb jock" is not a label of the past, yet.

Utah women win third title in Division I gymnastics

Utah has done it again. The Utes racked up the highest point total in the three-year history of the Division I Women's Gymnastics Championships (186.05) and won their third consecutive title April 6 at UCLA.

Utah was led by seniors Megan Marsden and Linda Kardos, who also managed strong performances in the individual competition. Host UCLA finished second at 185.55, and Cal State Fullerton was third with 183.9 points. The Titans of Cal State Fullerton now have finished among the top three for the past nine years, including Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) championships competition.

Marsden kept the individual allaround title in Utah with a winning score of 37.9. Marsden won the title a year ago, and teammate Sue Stednitz won the first NCAA all-around championship in 1982.

Marsden's victory in vaulting (9.575) also gave Utah a three-year sweep in that event. Elaine Alfano, who finished third at UCLA, had

Legislative Assistance

Satisfactory-progress rule

In adopting NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6), Division I and Division II member institutions have established minimum satisfactory academic progress requirements that must be met in order for student-athletes to be eligible to represent them. Case Nos. 317-320 (pages 333-336, 1984-85 NCAA Manual) set forth official interpretations concerning this legislation.

Effective August 1, 1984, a student-athlete at a Division I or Division II institution will be required to declare a major by the beginning of the third year of enrollment (fifth semester or seventh quarter) in a collegiate institution in order to remain eligible. From that point, the calculation of credit hours to determine eligibility under Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6) will be based upon hours earned or accepted for degree credit in the student's specific baccalaureate degree program.

For example, any student-athlete who is (in the spring of 1984) completing at least the fourth semester or sixth quarter of collegiate attendance must declare a major at the beginning of the 1984 fall semester to be eligible in the 1984-85 academic year. During 1984-85, the student-athlete must satisfy the requirements of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6) through satisfactory completion of hours acceptable toward that major to be eligible for intercollegiate competition for the 1985-86 academic year.

Any student-athlete who is unable to or does not declare a major by the beginning of the third year of enrollment shall be ineligible for intercollegiate competition until a major is declared.

The satisfactory-progress rule can be satisfied in either of two ways: (a) The student-athlete satisfactorily completes an average of 12 hours per term as set forth in Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(ii)-(1), or (b) the student-athlete satisfactorily completes 24 semester or 36 quarter hours between seasons of competition as set forth in Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(ii)-(2). In order to utilize the latter option, the student-athlete already must have completed a season of competition in that particular sport at the certifying institution. Each year, student-athletes eligibility can be determined through the use of the option that is most beneficial to his or her eligibility.

The following are examples of the application of each option for complying with the satisfactory-progress rule to specific situations. [Note: References to the first or second options are to Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(ii)-(1) and Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(ii)-(2), respectively.]

1. Question: A 2.000 nonqualifier does not participate in intercollegiate practice or competition during the freshman year at a Division I institution but satisfactorily completes 24 semester hours of acceptable degree credit. During the fall semester of the sophomore year, the student is enrolled full time and competes in a fall sport (e.g., football, cross country, women's volleyball) but satisfactorily completes only 10 hours that term. During the spring semester of the sophomore year, the student enrolls as a full-time student and wishes to participate in a different spring intercollegiate sport. Would the student be eligible in the spring sport?

Answer: No. The satisfactory-progress rule must be applied separately for each sport on the first day of classes in the term in which the student begins a season of competition (game or scrimmage with outside competition) in that sport. The student would not be eligible under the first option because the student had not completed an average of 12 hours for each term in academic years in which the student was enrolled as a full-time student. The student's eligibility could not be determined by using the second option of the progress rule because the student had not engaged previously in a season of competition in that sport.

2. Question: A freshman satisfactorily completes 24 semester hours of acceptable degree credit during the first academic year in attendance and participates in intercollegiate competition during the spring of that year. During the fall semester of the student's sophomore year, the student is not enrolled as a full-time student. The student returns to the institution full-time student for the spring semester of that year and wishes to participate in a second season of intercollegiate competition in a spring sport. On what basis may the student-athlete become eligible? Answer: The student-athlete would be eligible under the first option, which requires an average of 12 semester or quarter hours only for those previous terms in academic years in which the student was enrolled full time (e.g., two semesters). Because the student was not enrolled as a full-time student during the fall semester of the sophomore year, initially the institution would not be required to include that term in demonstrating an average of 12 hours completed per term for that student. However, if the institution uses the first option in subsequent certifications for the student, the fall term of the sophomore year shall be considered unless the missedterm exception of Case No. 320 (1984-85 NCAA Manual) would be applicable to the student's situation. The institution could not use the second option for this student-athlete because the student did not complete 24 semseter hours between seasons of competition in the sport in question.

28 basketball leagues approved

The NCAA Administrative Committee, acting for the Council, has approved the first 28 summer basketball leagues for 1984.

Under the provisions of NCAA Constitution 3-9-(b)-(1), a studentathlete (male or female) with intercollegiate basketball eligibility remaining may participate between June 15 and August 31 on a team in a basketball league approved by the NCAA Council.

Each student-athlete must obtain written permission from his or her institution's director of athletics (or the AD's official representative) to participate in an approved league. This written permission must specify the particular league in which the student-athlete is authorized to participate.

A student-athlete who fails to obtain proper written permission or participates in an unapproved league will jeopardize his or her eligibility for intercollegiate basketball competition under Constitution 3-9-(b).

The student-athletes affected by this legislation are those with intercollegiate eligibility remaining in basketball who have been candidates for an NCAA institution's intercollegiate basketball team or who were recruited by a member institution in part for their basketball ability and subsequently enrolled in the institution.

Once this legislation becomes applicable to a student-athlete, it remains applicable until the individual's intercollegiate basketball eligibility is exhausted.

Any questions concerning the application process or the requirements for NCAA approval of summer basketball leagues should be referred to Jamie McCloskey, legislative assistant, at the NCAA national office.

Following is a list of all summer basketball leagues that have been approved to date:

of Women's all-star games must be certified women will be subject to certification Hig hool / Games Committee beginning with the 1984-85 academic year. Legislation currently governing men's all-star games is covered in Constitution 3-9-(a) in the 1984-85 NCAA Manual, Information concerning certification of women's contests is found in Constitution 3-9-(a)-(5). In general, student-athletes may participate in two certified football and/or basketball games between the end of their prep eligibility and graduation from high school. Upon graduation, athletes may participate in any number of all-star contests with the stipulation that any game involving players from more than one state must be certified by the High School All-Star Games Committee.

High school all-star games for by the committee in accordance with comen will be subject to certification Constitution 3-9-(a):

Briefly in the News

Fisk University no longer will field a football team, and other athletics programs at the school may be dropped because of lack of funding, school officials announced. Fisk has had a football team since 1893 . . . The first phase of construction on a large outdoor physical education and athletics complex has begun at Cleveland State University with work on a soccer field. The $1.8 million project will cover 6.7 acres, and it will be the first outdoor athletics facility to be built on the campus. Completion is scheduled for December Loyola College (Maryland) will sponsor an all-sports camp this summer for boys and girls ages six to 14. Activities will include soccer, football, lacrosse, basketball and volleyball. For information, call 301/323-1010, extension 524 ... The athletics department at the University of Oklahoma is looking for a buyer for a 1929 Model-A Ford, which has been donated to the Sooners by an Albuquerque, New Mexico, construction firm owner. He received the car as partial payment on a construction job and offered it to Leon Cross, associate athletics director.

A bill that would prohibit Nebraska colleges and universities from lifting thletics grants-in-aid if a player is injured recently won second-round approval in the state legislature. Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, while admitting that the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, does not pull grants from injured players, said, "Colleges and universities claim their students are students first and athletes second. If that is really the case, athletes should be allowed to stay on as students, even if an injury prevents them from functioning." Both the Mid-American Athletic Conference and Ohio Athletic Conference offices are moving from Columbus, Ohio, to Toledo, Ohio, April 26. The new address for both conferences is Four Seagate, Suite 501, Toledo, Ohio 43604. Telephone numbers-Mid-American Conference: 419/249-7177; Ohio Athletic Conference: 419/249-7179 . . . University of Georgia football coach Vincent J. Dooley, who has a master's degree, is going back to school. Dooley, who also serves as athletics director, has enrolled in an art history and appreciation course this spring. "The main reason I enrolled is because during my travels abroad, I get a chance to visit a lot of museums. And I'd like to have a better understanding of some of the things I see," Dooley said. His master's degree in history is from Auburn University . . . The women of Dartmouth College's golf team were the beneficiaries of some special coaching during their recent spring trip to Hilton Head, South Carolina. Former Big Green head football coach Bob Blackman, now retired in Hilton Head, offered the women some tips the day before he and his partner went out and won the Palmetto Dunes St. Patrick's Day tournament.

Fencing format changes planned

The 1985 NCAA Men's Fencing Championships may have a "final four" if the Men's Fencing Committee's recommendations are approved by the Executive Committee.

The changes include a "seeding round," a formalized system for regional allocations and direct finals competition in each weapon. The committee developed the new concept during its April 4-5 meeting in Kansas City.

Competition would begin with the seeding round involving six pools of five fencers each. Committee chair

Paul C. Hausser of New Jersey Institute of Technology said the results of this round, rather than the committee's pretournament seeding, would determine placement for the championships.

Six pools of five fencers in each weapon then would begin directelimination competition with a repechage (double-elimination play). When all but four fencers are eliminated, competition would be halted until a "final four" was determined in each weapon. The finalists would fence a direct-elimination-with-repechage round to determine the event's champion. The team champion would be decided by the placement of individuals in the three weapons.

Hausser said he expects the formalized regional allocation system be based on sponsorship levels in each region. Twelve fencers per weapon would be allocated to the East, with the Midwest receiving four spots per weapon and the West two spots.

The remaining 36 competitors would be allocated based on the region's strength in each weapon over the past three years. For the 1985 championships, the East would have eight additional spots in sabre and seven each in foil and epee. The Midwest would have two in sabre, three in foil and four in epee. The West would have two each in sabre and foil and one in epee.

The committee decided to continue allowing two fencers from an institution to qualify in each weapon. Hausser said the results of the 1984 resigned to pursue a doctorate.

Paul C. Hausser, New Jersey Institute of Technology, is the new chair of the NCAA Men's Fencing Committee, effective immediately selection process. Fifty-four of the 90 participants (60 percent) would would alleviate concerns about the championships indicate that this policy "improved the quality of the tournament."

Steering Committee will review all of the final recommendations by the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education. When those were received last October, the Council pledged to give consideration in 1984 to all of the committee's proposals that could not be acted upon at the time.

Other committees reporting at the April meeting will be the Academic Testing and Requirements, Football Television, Governmental Affairs, Infractions, Insurance, Long Range Planning and Postseason Football Committees: the Women's Committee on Committees, and the Special Committee on Women's Interests.

Each of the steering committees will select its own division's candidates for vacancies on the Nominating Committee and the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees California, Barbara Hedges, women's athletics director, says, "We are always looking for sponsors for our programs. We have at least one major fund-raising event, sometimes two, every year. And we plan to continue those efforts.

"The more sponsors we find for our programs frees up money for travel and for other things. We also look at financial support as another means of gaining interest in our program, other than just for the money it brings in.'

At the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, women's athletics director June B. Davis says, "We are constantly looking for sponsors for our invitational tournament and unique ways to expose the program and make sure that student-athletes get the recognition they deserve. It's a smart thing to do-have a promotions director; the competition for the entertainment dollar is fast and furious. We all need money to support our programs, and the only way to do that is to market the product."

At the University of Texas, Austin, the establishment of the Longhorn Associates last fall has proved very successful, according to Donna Lopiano, women's athletics director.

"It has been tremendously gratifying to see how many people are willing to annually contribute funds to providing scholarship opportunities to young women athletes," Lopiano says, noting that the Longhorn Associates already has 373 members after just a few months, and the first membership drive still is weeks away.

Louisiana Tech's Mulkey leads CoSIDA basketball all-Americas

Success on the court and in the classroom is common to all basketball academic all-Americas, but five members of the 1983-84 College Sports Information Directors of America women's teams stand out.

Each of those five maintained outstanding grade-point averages while leading their teams to finalfour appearances in NCAA championships play.

Louisiana Tech point guard Kim Mulkey has been instrumental in leading the Lady Techsters to three straight NCAA final-four appearances. She also is the only first-team repeater from last year on the university division team.

Tennessee's Tanya Haave, who led the Lady Vols to second place in this year's NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship, joined Mulkey on the university division first team.

Heading the college division team were Elizabethtown teammates Page Lutz and Sherri Kinsey. They have played on three consecutive final-four teams in Division III. Carla Eades, the leading scorer for Central Missouri State's 1984 Division II championship team, was named to the college division second team.

There were two first-team repeaters from 1982-83 on the college division team—Denise Boll of Central (lowa) and Carol Arnosti of Lawrence.

Here are the 1983-84 CoSIDA women's academic all-America basketball teams:

UNIVERSITY DIVISION First team

term exception for the fall semester of the second year, the student would be required to have accumulated 48 semester hours of acceptable degree credit. If the missed-term exception were applicable, the student could be eligible by the satisfactory completion of 36 semester hours of acceptable degree credit. The second option would not be a viable alternative inasmuch as only one term had elapsed since the beginning of the student's last season of competition in the sport.

4. Question: Part (d) of the answer in Case No. 320 (international competition) permits the first option to be prorated at 12 hours per term of actual attendance during an academic year in which a student is not enrolled for a term or terms as a result of participation in Pan American, Olympic or World University Games. Does this exception also apply to terms that are missed for training or tryouts in connection with such competition?

Answer: No. Only actual competition in the games can be the basis for this exception.

The NCAA Academic Testing and Requirements Committee will be addressing additional satisfactory-progress rule situations during its April 10-11 meeting, and its recommendations will be reviewed by the Council during its April 16-18 meeting. Any additional actions will be reported in future Legislative Assistance columns.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

money by going out on the corner and asking for it. Our type of program has to establish some financial base, because when push comes to shove on where the money will be spent, it will be the faculty who have more to say than the people in athletics," Miles says.

In recent years, the NCAA has been assisting member institutions in the promotion and marketing of their programs (The NCAA News, June 1, 1983)

Additionally, two projects are under way that should be particularly helpful to women's programs planning promotional strategies.

One is the NCAA Professional Development Seminar scheduled June 1-2 in Chicago. It is aimed at helping all athletics administrators further develop promotional and marketing skills.

A second project is a research study on methods of developing nonrevenue sports.

At Ohio State University, Allen R. Bohl, athletics fund-raising director, and his assistant, Bruce E. McCutcheon, are working on a pilot program that could serve different sports at different schools, from Division I to Division III.

Bohl and McCutcheon are working with programs at Ohio State and at Otterbein College, a Division III member about 10 miles away.

Among their projects was an Ohio State women's holiday basketball tournament, which was sponsored by Columbus-based Borden, Inc. to the tune of $20,000. Borden's marketing department pushed the tournament with promotions in grocery stores with coupons for the games and with radio spots. Despite terrible weather, the first game drew 2,600 fans, an OSU record.

At Otterbein, the Big Bear grocery chain sponsored a women's home basketball game. Attendance quadrupled.

Corporate sponsorship is the key to growth for women's programs, Bohl believes. He maintains that in smaller locations, such as Otterbein's, businesses along main street can be helpful.

Bohl also worked with the men's ice hockey program at Ohio State, and the sale of season tickets doubled. A full report on the project will be made to the NCAA in June.

While there is no question about the need for more revenue in developing women's programs, a lot can be accomplished with a little, according to Richard H. Perry, athletics director at Southern California.

In an interview with The NCAA News (August 17, 1983), Perry said he believes that a number of varsity sports can be successful on small budgets.

The key to fielding such teams, according to Perry, depends on finding a dedicated part-time coach. He Tests would include "controlled substances" (e.g., marijuana, cocaine, other street drugs) and "performanceenhancing" drugs, which include stimulants (amphetamines) and anabolic steroids.

Blyth said there is concern about the use of anabolic steroids but that complete and accurate testing for their presence is difficult. He said only a limited number of laboratories have both the equipment and the qualified personnel to conduct the tests for anabolic steroids.

While Kenyon did win both Division III swimming championships last month, that was not the first time the feat had been accomplished. Cal State Northridge captured both Division II swimming championships last year.

Also last year, Wayne State (Michigan) won both fencing championships.

"Our men's volleyball program consistently has been competitive with little financial support from the university," Perry said.

Perry added, "We're very competitive in water polo with a part-time coach."

Bob Yoder, the Trojans' men's volleyball coach, says about $10,000 is raised annually to run his program. "We could spend more, but that's an adequate amount of money to run the program," Yoder said.

John Williams, who has guided the water polo program the past 12 Regional years, said, "A program with less Finals than a $10,000 budget probably wouldn't challenge for the NCAA championship, but it could be com-Semifinals petitive.
