Executive Committee approves drug testing

Meeting May 7-8 in Kansas City, the NCAA Executive Committee approved the Special Committee on Drug Testing's proposal to implement a drug-testing program, as directed in 1984 Convention Proposal No. 163, and authorized the NCAA Administrative Committee to act for the Executive Committee when final costs of the program are developed.

Because the plan, reported in the April 25 issue of The NCAA News, has not been developed completely, cost estimates still are tentative.

The NCAA-administered program would include testing for stimulants at championships and random testing of student-athletes in specified sports for anabolic steroids at campus sites during the academic year. The on-campus testing for steroids would necessitate the hiring of four persons to serve as crew chiefs.

The Executive Committee also reviewed NCAA women's policies and programs with regard to the August 1, 1985, deadline for women's programs in the NCAA to be in full compliance with NCAA rules and regulations.

A study of men's and women's championships will be conducted that will review costs, credibility of specific sports, number of teams and competitors selected for championships, seeding in championships, and automatic qualification. The aim is to review the manner in which the NCAA is treating women's programs in relation to all NCAA championships.

Last month, the NCAA Council received a recommendation that all exceptions for women's programs, unless adopted by legislation, end August 1, 1985. The Council, however, also forwarded a recommendation that would allow exceptions in seeding and bracketing of women's championships until 1990. The Executive Committee agreed that more information was necessary before a decision could be reached.

The Executive Committee also will prepare a report for its August meeting that will outline the committee's general operations and its obligations and responsibilities that are dictated by the NCAA constitution.

The report, which also will be distributed to the Council, will review the sports committees' accountability to the Executive Committee and will discuss a federated approach to championships financing and management. A three-person subcommittee will meet with the Council in August.

In reports from other committees, the Executive Committee approved

TV fans faithful to college football

College football further established itself during 1983 as one of the most attractive television sports series, in terms of both regular-season and "championship series" ratings.

For the fourth time in the past five years, college football ranked second only to professional football as a regular-season sports series. Regular-season college football during the 1983 season averaged a 9.8 rating, well above the overall sports television average of 7.9 for 1983, according to figures supplied by A. C. Nielsen Company. That compared to a 15.4 average for professional football and a 7.6 average for the third-rated series, ABC's "Wide World of Sports."

College football bowl games have continued a steady third-place ranking in the "championship series" ratings. Those college football bowl games televised by one of the three major networks (ABC, CBS, NBC) averaged a 13.7 rating this past season, placing them third behind professional football (play-offs and Super Bowl) and Major League Baseball (play-offs and World Series) for the fifth straight year.

This information was included in a mailing sent last week from the NCAA Football Television Committee to the NCAA Council and also distributed to the membership. It supplements information mailed in March and summarized in the March 28 issue of The NCAA News.

Both regular-season and "championship series" college football maintained their relative positions in the face of an overall decline in sports television ratings. During 1983, sports television ratings averaged 7.9, down from a high of 11.3 in 1980 and a four-year average (1979-1982) of 9.8.

"The fragmentation of the television audience by virtue of increased program offerings and the saturation of sports on cable and conventional television, we believe, are the major causes (for the decline)," said John D. Swofford, chair of the Football Television Committee.

Swofford said the information collected from the past five years "merely underscores the urgency and

Committee moves ahead on drug ban

The Special Committee on Drug Testing is continuing its work toward developing an NCAA-administered drug-testing program.

At a meeting April 26-27 in Chicago, the committee further outlined collection procedures and the structure for an adjudication board that would review positive test results. The committee also worked on cost estimates for Executive Committee review.

A complete report will be distributed to the membership in June. It will focus on the alternative endorsed last month by the NCAA Council that would incorporate testing for stimulants at championships and random testing for anabolic steroids at campus sites.

That alternative also would encourage local programs for education and testing for street-drug use. To support such local efforts, the committee began revising guidelines (The NCAA News, February 1) for establishing local programs. The revisions will be included in the June report.

The special committee will meet May 13-14 in Los Angeles.

Commission proceeding with division elections

The NCAA Presidents' Commission is in the process of electing chairs of its Divisions I, II and III subunits, and all of those positions could be filled as early as next week.

Members of the Commission nominated a total of seven candidates from their respective divisions for the three division chair positions—three in Division I and two each in Divisions II and III. They also are voting by division, and ballots were sent Monday (May 7). They are due in the NCAA national office next Monday (May 14).

In keeping with a policy established at the beginning of the Commission nominating and electing procedure, the names of nominated candidates are not released. As each position is determined by Commission vote, it will be announced in The NCAA News.

The three division chairs will join John W. Ryan, Indiana University, Bloomington, as the Commission's elected officers. Ryan was elected to chair the commission in earlier balloting. In its first meeting—which will be scheduled after the election of officers is completed—the Commission also will decide whether to elect a vice-chair from among its members.

In a word, Valvano's the 'talk' of the town

By Bill Millsaps
Richmond Times-Dispatch

Two years ago about this time, Jim Valvano came to Richmond to speak to a rather small gathering of North Carolina State alumni in the side room of a now-defunct barbecue emporium on Midlothian Turnpike.

Last month, Valvano, North Carolina State's basketball coach, came back to town to address a much larger bunch of Wolfpackers in a ballroom at 2001, the huge nightclub on West Broad.

The difference between then and now is, of course, the small matter of the National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship, which North Carolina State won in April 1983. Valvano and his underdog team captivated a large portion of the American sports public.

More than a year later, N.C. State alumni — and Valvano still are basking in the glow of the memory of Albuquerque.

One N.C. State alumnus asked Valvano what it felt like to win a national title. Valvano was only too happy to tell him. Ask Valvano any question and he will give you five entertaining minutes of answer. He might not give you the answer you sought, but you are guaranteed five entertaining minutes.

Not surprisingly, N.C. State's local alumni seemed highly amused by their coach's oratorical performance. It was especially funny because they got him for a very good price — free. These days, Valvano's usual speaking fee is nearly $5,000 per engagement, and he turns down a lot more than he accepts.

Is Valvano still a hot item? An insurance company flew him to Hawaii and back and paid him a handsome price for one 30-minute talk. These insurance folks could get the same talk from Valvano if they happened upon him at a beer-and-pizza joint in Raleigh, but that's beside the point.

People want to shower money and other goodies on Jimmy V., and some outstanding high school players want to come to N.C. State and play for him.

Valvano doesn't just concede that he had one of the best recruiting years in the country this year. He brags about it. He'll take Chris Washburn, John Thompson, Vinnie Del Negro and Quentin Jackson and match them against any four incoming freshmen at any college in the country.

Add those young people to the Wolfpack's holdovers (all return from a team that won 19 games last season and beat the likes of Houston), and you have a contender for the Atlantic Coast Conference and national championships.

On his radio talk show in Raleigh, he told a caller that N.C. State should be ranked in the Top 10 in preseason.

Dean Smith's tongue would snap off before he would say such a thing about one of his teams that would need major contributions from freshmen.

"Ah, that stuff doesn't bother me," Valvano said. "To say you're not good and then if you aren't . . . does that make you feel better? If I think we're good and then we don't turn out good, I still feel horsefeathers."

Valvano's major concern is the rules under which ACC basketball will operate next season. For 1984-85, the NCAA

Men's Basketball Rules Committee has permitted either a 45-second clock to run the entire game or a 45-second clock all the way with a 19-foot, nine-inch three-point circle.

The NCAA tournament is played with neither the clock nor the three-point circle. Valvano said he fears ACC athletics directors will decide to play the 1984-85 season by NCAA tournament, or vanilla, rules.

"I really hate the game without a clock," said Valvano. "Without the clock, the games in our conference are going to be in the 40s, like the NCAA tournament, and I don't want that to happen.

"I look at the game first and foremost as a spectator, and without the clock and the three-point play, we've got a coaches' game, not a players' game. I'm not criticizing anybody, but we're in the entertainment business.

"CBS' ratings for the tournament were down, and I have to believe part of the reason is the fact we had so many low-scoring games. All I want to do is get the game back like it was when you had teams playing games in the 60s and 70s on a regular basis."

Jimmy V. doesn't spend all his time coaching, recruiting and making money.

I have a friend, a sportswriter, whose seriously ill brother is an N.C. State fan. My friend called Valvano a month or so ago and asked him if he could call his brother in the hospital and talk five minutes or so just to cheer him up.

Valvano said he'd be glad to make the call. He telephoned my friend's brother and talked for 45 minutes. "It was unbelievable how that call perked up my brother," said the sportswriter.

Jimmy V. has that effect on most everybody.

NCAA on target with academics

"The NCAA is taking a big step in the right direction (to improve academic requirements), that being to put pressure on the high schools. We have to do a better job in our high schools in preparing young people for college. Of course, we all must share in this. We have to raise standards. We have to make students measure up.

"Personally, I can tolerate anything if a kid is trying, academically or athletically. But often this isn't the case. We have to get rid of the idea some athletes have that 'they'll take care of us.' Remedial courses, which are used for athletes and nonathletes, are good up to a point; but what we really need is stronger requirements from the ground up, meaning from the grammar schools right on through college."

"I'd like to see officials designated for the (NCAA) play-offs in a different way. Every league should be given a certain number of crews for the NCAA tournament, have them entered as crews, and have them advance as a crew. That way, they will advance as a team and not as individuals in competition with each other. If a crew from a certain league is good enough, they are going to be able to advance through the entire tournament and make it to the finals. It would be just like a team being in the tournament."

money is a big part of the problem, but there are a lot of nonfinancial considerations as well.

"I feel that the high school dropout rate is directly tied to lack of substantial sports programs in New York City, and one of my immediate priorities is to change that.

"Athletics generate an interest in higher education, and it would happen here if we had a more comprehensive program in the city. I've found that students who participate are often highly motivated; when people are successful in something, it spills over into the rest of their lives.

"One of the major problems is that there has been no nationwide commitment to support sports programs in urban areas. In all of the criticism about the quality of public education in the country, not once has there been mentioned increased support for the athletics programs."

If a kid came in your office and his teeth were falling out and he had to go to the dentist, legally you couldn't do anything about it. But I'd say very few coaches wouldn't help the kid get his teeth fixed. Now that's wrong.

"I think if you go recruit a kid and say you're going to pay all his dental bills, doctor bills and buy him so many clothes, to me that's cheating. But after a kid is there and you're getting ready to make a trip, it makes you wonder. Remember when coach (John) Wooden talked about the rules and how unfair they were? He said, 'I guess I've broken some rules when I was in coaching because if a kid didn't have a coat to wear. . . .' Maybe that's rationalizing. I think most coaches look at it that

Smaller basketball draws criticism

To the Editor:

I was very shocked and disappointed by the decision to use a smaller ball for women's basketball at the college level. I am appalled by the lack of experimentation and the irrational thinking in this drastic and sudden move.

Women's collegiate basketball has made great strides in recent years. The interest in the game has grown rapidly. This progress has been occurring because of better coaching, stronger athletes, increased funding and better promotion. This progress did not occur overnight. Big-time college basketball programs for women really are in their early stages because of Title IX legislation. We have forgotten how we got where we are today and cannot foresee where we are going. In essence, women's college basketball is going to have to start all over again.

The use of a smaller basketball belongs at the junior high and high school levels. The April 18 issue of The NCAA News stated that the smaller ball will aid in skill development. Skill development occurs long before an athlete gets to college. It doesn't seem too logical to me for women's college basketball to adopt a smaller ball just because the South Dakota High School Federation makes a change. The high schools should be learning from us.

I couldn't believe that the only studies that were conducted were at two summer camps. Is that a rational way to make a change?

The April 18 issue also stated that other reasons for the change were to quicken the pace of the game and for the potential for dunks. First, the smaller ball is only one-inch smaller in circumference. This will do little or nothing to aid women in dunking the ball. If you want consistent dunking, you better lower the baskets as well. The potential to dunk is certainly not a legitimate rationale for making such a drastic change. If you want to quicken the pace of the game, a smaller ball will not help. What will help is getting quicker and stronger athletes. This is happening with the increased use of weight training. We have already accomplished a quicker game with a 30-second clock.

I want to know who determined that there was a need for a smaller ball. Obviously, I voted against the smaller ball, but I wasn't aware of any in-depth discussions that have occurred in making this decision. I am sure there are a lot of women's coaches who would like to have the opportunity to discuss this rule change and try to make a change in the decision.

I am sure the bottom line is gate receipts of women's basketball programs. If it is increased attendance that we want, then we have made the wrong decision. Fans don't want an inferior product. They want a winning program with good coaches and good athletes. Women's college basketball can and will make it on its own merits and not by using a smaller ball in order to dunk and make moves like the men.

I implore women's coaches around the country to reconsider the use of a smaller ball at the collegiate level. The consequences could be permanently damaging to the women's game. The final vote of 221 for and 177 against was hardly decisive.

We have two choices:

1. Play the game with a regulation-size basketball and continue to see that women's basketball is a quality game and a viable entertainment product. 2. Invent a new game and call it miniball, which is played by women but whose purpose is to imitate men's basketball.

If we choose No. 2, be prepared for decreased attendance, a lack of media attention, constant criticism and joking about a game that is becoming a mockery of the great game of basketball.

Year off works wonders for Bemidji State coach

By David P. Seifert
The NCAA News Staff

There is so much ice hockey played in northern Minnesota that it would not seem necessary to go as far as Montreal to see a game; or Regina, Saskatchewan; or Colorado Springs, or even Grand Forks, North Dakota, which is not too far away.

But R. H. "Bob" Peters, ice hockey coach at Bemidji State University, did. He did something many coaches would consider unthinkable, taking a year off after 22 years as a head coach, including 16 seasons at Bemidji State. Not only did he live to tell about it, he credits the sabbatical year with Bemidji's national championship this year.

"The trip renewed my belief in what we are doing at Bemidji and 'recharged my battery,'" he said. "It can become routine after awhile; I learned new drills and new ways to present things."

One of Peters' pupils, Mike Gibbons, took Bemidji State to a second-place finish in the 1983 NCAA Division II Men's Ice Hockey Championship. Peters came back this season and guided the Beavers to a 31-0 season and the Division II title. Bemidji State became only the second team in collegiate ice hockey history to have a perfect season.

Peters plans to take another such leave as soon as he can. Bemidji State permits a sabbatical leave after an employee has taught for seven years and has tenure.

"I think that an employer might be best served by the coach taking a break after several years," he said on a blustery afternoon in Bemidji, a few hours before his team would play Merrimack College for the Division II title. "About my 12th year at Bemidji State, I could feel stress."

Peters came to the small town in Paul Bunyan country in 1968, when the school was just building its ice hockey program and had an outdoor rink. He had been coaching for nine years, including five at the University of North Dakota, a traditional Division I power.

"I thought it would be fun to build a program, and my family liked northern Minnesota," he recalled. "I felt I could always go back to Division I, but I have enjoyed Bemidji."

He built a powerful program, winning seven championships in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics before opting for NCAA competition two years ago. Bemidji was helped for many years by being the only Minnesota college with its own rink. The University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, still is the only other state university with its own facility. But Bemidji's success did not mean it was all easy skating.

"It's not the pressure of success but the constant pressure of dealing with the needs of players," he said quietly. "I had felt my patience wearing thin—I had a short fuse, and it was lit all the time. By the end of the sabbatical, it was amazing. It was so refreshing, and the self-imposed pressure was not as intense."

That quiet assurance was evident that weekend as Peters watched from behind the Bemidji bench in his overcoat, occasionally making notes as his team methodically dismantled

Merrimack, 6-3, and 8-1. That confidence was built on a journey that started in St. Louis, where he spent three weeks in the professional St. Louis Blues' training camp.

He also watched high school ice hockey in Minnesota and watched junior hockey in the United States and in Canada. He also spent some time with the U.S. and Canadian Olympic teams. Although Bemidji State paid half of his salary that year, Peters paid his own travel expenses.

"I looked on it as an education," he said. "I was not going to learn in a classroom—I had to see coaches in action."

And that was important because one of Bemidji State's objectives is training high school ice hockey coaches. The university has a curriculum designed to develop coaches, and it produces more high school ice hockey coaches than any other college in Minnesota.

By watching those coaches, Peters identified common denominators that he says are essential for success at any level: extensive hours, good organization, teaching fundamentals, a desire to learn, an intensity about the job, concern for the players' welfare and strict discipline.

"Coaches who approached their jobs as teachers were the most productive, regardless of the level," he said. "They understood what learning is—and you do not necessarily need a college education to understand learning."

His most memorable experiences were speaking to and watching the Olympic teams and coaches, because those players were near the age of college players. He acknowledged, though, that the challenge of guiding a professional team through an 80-game season would be an interesting study.

His travels strengthened his belief that the collegiate season is too long. He wistfully remembered his playing days at North Dakota, when a limited schedule was played, and said he was "inclined to agree with the Ivy League approach of 26 games."

Peters said that without the trip, he probably would have ended his coaching career earlier than he wanted. "There is only one thing worse than getting out too late, and that is getting out too early," he concluded.

If it is still not too late six years from now, Bob Peters will embark on another adventure in education. This one may not include as many out-of-the-way places as his first journey, but it should be interesting. He plans to visit Europe.

254 women serving as CEOs

About nine percent of the colleges and universities in the country have women chief executive officers, according to the American Council on Education.

Two-thirds of the 254 women presidents and chancellors are at private institutions. There were 148 women CEOs in 1975, which accounted for about five percent of the total.

Of the 254 current total, there are 124 women CEOs at four-year private institutions, 45 at two-year private institutions, 28 at four-year public institutions and 57 at two-year public institutions.

The ACE report shows that the number of top women administrators at colleges and universities has increased more than 70 percent in the past eight years.

There are 46 women CEOs at 786 active NCAA member institutions, a percentage of 5.8.

TV money goes to humanities

John D. Swofford, athletics director at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has announced that $25,000 earned by the football team when it switched the time of its game with Duke University to accommodate television has been given to the College of Arts and Sciences and Friends of the Library.

The college is in the midst of a drive to raise $2.5 million to match a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The Friends of the Library are raising money to buy equipment for the new $22.3 million Davis Library and to renovate an older library.

"We had a good year financially," Swofford said, "and our budget fortunately permitted this opportunity to share proceeds with the university."

Catholic school closings decline

Only 31 Catholic schools have been closed in the past year, the fewest since the 1960s, according to the National Catholic Education Association.

Most dioceses have reorganized and consolidated and are using more sophisticated budgeting, and the movement of people from the cities (where most Catholic schools are situated) has slowed, the association says.

Three-quarters of Catholic school teachers are lay persons. Total enrollment is 2.97 million, down 1.9 percent from 1982-83. The previous year's decline was 2.2 percent, the Association reported.

Schools want findings published

Three leading research institutions have told the Reagan administration they will refuse to conduct scientific research for the Defense Department if military reviewers are given authority to restrict publication of the findings.

Presidents of Stanford University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and California Institute of Technology have protested that a new Defense Department proposal aimed at preventing disclosure of sensitive information would interfere with open scientific communication on the nation's campuses.

University officials said the most troublesome proposal would give military officials the final word on what findings may be published from projects deemed "sensitive" but not classified by the Pentagon. Under the proposal, researchers would have to submit drafts of their papers to military reviewers 90 days before publication, and the Pentagon would make the final decision on whether all or part of the material could be published.

Federal education bills introduced

Identical legislation has been introduced in both houses of Congress to amend Title IX, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, part of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 so that each of these statutes would apply to any education recipient of Federal financial assistance rather than any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance.

The bills contain a proposed statutory definition of the term "recipient" that would extend the application of Title IX beyond its prior scope.

The definition parallels for the most part the broad definition of "recipient" contained in Title IX regulations, which would apply Title IX to all parts of any public or private entity that receives Federal financial assistance directly or indirectly.

In addition, it would expand the coverage of Title IX beyond its scope prior to Grove City College vs. Bell in that receipt of Federal financial assistance no longer would be a prerequisite to jurisdiction (the Supreme court held in that case that Title IX was program specific and not institutional in scope). If an institution received support from the extension of Federal aid to any of its subunits, that would be sufficient basis for Title IX jurisdiction.

The NCAA's legal firm of Squire, Sanders & Dempsey of Washington, D.C., points out that if institutions are viewed as subunits of an organization and the organization is found to be supported by the extension of Federal aid to its members, the organization itself would be subject to Title IX without regard to whether the organization received Federal financial assistance directly or indirectly.

Judge halts draft requirement

A Federal district judge in Boston has ruled that the Department of Education exceeded its authority by requiring students seeking financial aid to sign forms stating they had either registered for the draft or were ineligible for the draft.

The judge, Robert F. Keeton, ordered a temporary halt to the practice. The case was brought by three Boston University theology students. None was eligible for the draft. They contended that by not signing the form, they would lose financial aid and have to leave school.

In 1983, Congress required a cutoff of Federal loans to eligible men who had not registered for the draft. Later, the Education Department established regulations requiring all loan applicants, regardless of sex or age, to state they either had registered or were ineligible.

A challenge to the congressional requirement in Minnesota is due before the U.S. Supreme Court.

UCLA wins its 11th title in NCAA men's volleyball

UCLA won an 11th NCAA Men's Volleyball Championship, its fourth consecutive title, with a 15-11, 15-13, 16-18, 15-12 victory over Pepperdine May 5 before a partisan crowd of 9,809 at Pauley Pavilion in Los Angeles.

The Bruins raised their overall record to 38-0; Pepperdine finished 23-7. In the third-place match, George Mason, which made its first appearance in the championship, defeated Ball State, 15-6, 19-17, 15-9.

UCLA's Ricci Luyties was named the championship's most outstanding player for the second consecutive year. Luyties, a four-year starter, became the first player to be a member of four NCAA championship volleyball teams.

Roger Clark led the assault against Pepperdine with 18 kills, followed by Reed Sunahara with 17 and Luyties with 16. The Bruins held the Waves to a .196 hitting percentage and were successful on 22.6 percent of their spiking attempts. Steve Friedman led Pepperdine with 18 kills and Jeff Stork had 16.

Luyties and Clark were named to the all-tournament team along with teammates Asbjorn Volstad and Doug Partie. Others named were Pepperdine's Stork and Mike Fitzgerald and George Mason's Ric Lucas.

UCLA and Pepperdine advanced to the championship with one-sided semifinal victories. Pepperdine defeated George Mason for the second time this season, in 90 minutes, 15-12, 15-5, 15-13. UCLA then defeated Ball State 15-8, 15-4, 15-6 in only 62

10 kills each. The Bruins hit 50 percent of their spiking attempts and limited Ball State to a .260 hitting percentage.

The Bruins' defeat of Ball State was the 400th career victory for UCLA coach Al Scates.

The championship match will be telecast May 26 by CBS Sports.

Rematch of 1983 final expected in Division I men's lacrosse

The NCAA Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship May 26 at the University of Delaware could very well be a rematch of the 1983 final between Syracuse and Johns Hopkins. Both teams are undefeated this season.

"I believe I'm the only guy around thinking ahead," said Syracuse coach Roy Simmons Jr., referring to his team's chances of defending its championship.

"None of the players are talking about the tournament. They are just going about their business, doing their jobs and enjoying it," Simmons said.

The Orangemen have 11 victories and have held the top spot in the division during the season.

Johns Hopkins, under first-year coach Don Zimmerman, had won nine straight by early May.

At Syracuse, Simmons had to start over on defense.

"We have a different look back there. Our midfield is relatively the same, although our third midfield is a little stronger," he says.

"We had a unique situation a year ago, almost like a David vs. Goliath story. And now, in some respects, we have become the Goliath as the defending champions," Simmons said.

"Brad Kotz was player of the year in 1983, and Tim Nelson was attackman of the year," Simmons continued. "I think some people expected them to pick up where they left off. I can tell you they're just out there having fun."

Zimmerman said, "This has been a good year for us, even though we are fairly young. We have had some freshmen play particularly well."

Zimmerman called his Hopkins squad traditional on defense and a little different on offense. "We play real good team defense, which is a Hopkins trademark. But we are not so much into the power lacrosse offense of past teams here. We move the ball a little more, and I think we are getting more out of everybody."

Eight teams will be selected for the championship field.

The Atlantic Coast Conference is likely to have a pair of participants in Virginia and North Carolina.

Virginia coach Jim Adams said, "As we head into the play-offs, I am hoping we can balance our attack and defensive games as much as possible and make adjustments as necessary against the opponent. We are just getting some people back from nagging injuries. That should Women's softball supremacy this year could be decided in a fight between neighbors.

Rivals UCLA and Cal State Fullerton share the lead in the Western Collegiate Athletic Association. They also are the top teams in the nation as the 1984 Division I Women's Softball Championship approaches.

UCLA won the NCAA championship in 1982 behind freshman Debbie Doom's pitching. The Bruins dropped to third last year after several players were felled by a virus. Pitching ace Tracy Compton was among the victims.

Cal State Fullerton, third in 1982, moved up to second last year. Susan LeFebvre pitched the Titans to three victories in 1983 but lost a 12-inning, 2-0 decision to Texas A&M in the championship game.

Doom, Compton and LeFebvre return to the battle this year. Texas A&M, a contender, lost pitching star Lori Stoll and will find it difficult to repeat.

First-round championship competition begins May 17-18 at eight campus sites. The winners advance to the Women's College Softball World Series May 23-27 in Omaha, Nebraska.

Seven conference champions will qualify automatically, including the WCAA winner. Nine other teams will be selected at large. Other conferences with automatic qualification are the Atlantic 10, Big Eight, Big Ten, High Country, Mid-American and Northern Pacific.

Leading contenders by region include:

- West - UCLA, Cal State Fullerton, Cal Poly Pomona, Arizona State and Arizona.
- Northwest - Pacific - Fresno State, California and Oregon State.
- Central - New Mexico, Utah State, Texas A&M and Utah.
- Midwest - Oklahoma State, Creighton and Oklahoma.
- Midwest - Western Michigan, Northwestern and Indiana.
- South - Louisiana Tech and Nicholls State.
- Northeast - Massachusetts, Connecticut and Adelphi.

At least five teams ready to test Columbus for Division II golf title

Although two-time NCAA champion Columbus has been ranked No. 1 this spring, the Cougars are not a shoo-in to win the 22nd annual NCAA Division II Men's Golf Championships May 15-18 at Lake View Country Club in Erie, Pennsylvania.

Defending champion Southwest Texas State, Troy State, Florida Southern, Sam Houston State and Central Florida could prove the Division II coaches' poll wrong in the 72-hole tournament hosted by Gannon University.

In the Southeastern regional, Troy

State topped Florida Southern, Columbus and Central Florida in one of the division's toughest qualifying tournaments. Troy State shot 874, followed closely by Florida Southern and Columbus at 877. Central Florida finished fourth at 898. Florida Southern and Troy State have won two NCAA titles each since 1976.

The Southeastern regional also featured some of the division's top individuals. Columbus' Mike Walton, who tied for third in last year's championships, won medalist honors with rounds of 73-67-70 for a 210 total. Florida Southern's Lec Janzen, a surprise for coach Charley Matlock, shot a closing round 68 after two rounds of 73 and tied Troy State's Ben Bates for runner-up at 214. Bates tied for fifth in last year's championships.

Columbus also has received strong play from Johnny Hammond, who recently placed seventh in the University of New Orleans Marriott Intercollegiate and helped the Cougars to a third-place finish in a field of mainly Division I schools.

Second-ranked Southwest Texas State has established a reputation of playing good golf in the clutch. In last year's championships, the Bobcats came from behind to build a five-stroke lead in the third round under horrible weather conditions and held on for the title.

In the Sam Houston State-Lou Plummer Invitational this season, the Bobcats came back from a first-round two-stroke deficit to score a second-round 289 and defeat 10th-ranked Stephen F. Austin State by eight strokes and Sam Houston State, which was ranked fifth in the latest poll, by 13 strokes.

Depth was a major concern for Southwest Texas State at the beginning of the season, but coach Bill Woodley has filled his Nos. 4 and 5 spots with Darryl Burttschell and junior college all-America transfer Jim Bob Johnson.

With strong play from Marty Auch, Chris Young and Tom Geiselman, all of whom contributed to last year's title drive, Southwest Texas State could win consecutive titles, as did Florida Southern in 1981 and 1982.

Other top teams are Indiana (Pennsylvania), Central Connecticut State and Rollins.

Division II baseball field led by Moccasins, Panthers

There is a good chance that Division II will have a new baseball champion this year, but the change may not mean that the division's tradition is crumbling.

Fourteen of the 16 Division II baseball champions have been from California or Florida, including 1983 champion Cal Poly-Pomona. And the two top-ranked teams this year are perennial power Florida Southern and Chapman from Orange, California. Cal Poly-Pomona, ranked 22nd in a recent national poll, will have difficulty earning a tournament bid against other strong teams in its area.

Regional play in the 1984 Division II Baseball Championship may begin by May 11, with all six regional winners to be determined by May 20. The winners will play in the Division II finals May 26-30 at the University of California, Riverside, the finals host for a fifth consecutive year.

It was supposed to be a rebuilding year for Florida Southern, which lost seven regulars, two pitchers and its coach from last year's fourth-place team. However, the Moccasins won 35 of their first 44 games and have been ranked No. 1 throughout the year. Chapman, 37-8 through late April, has been a surprise in a region where Cal Poly-Pomona and Cal State Northridge were early favorites.

If this is the year for breaking tradition, the winner could come from the South Atlantic region, which boasts four of the nation's top 10 teams. Longwood and Shippensburg are the best.

Leading contenders by region are:

Northeast—New Haven, American International, Quinnipiac, Le Moyne and Adelphi.

South Atlantic—Longwood, Shippensburg, West Georgia, Columbus and Augusta.

South—Florida Southern, St. Leo, Villanova (Florida), Tampa, Eckerd and Florida Atlantic.

Central—North Alabama, Mississippi College, Troy State, Delta State, Jacksonville

Matadors' Perry Husband

State, Wright State and Indiana State-Evansville.

Midwest—St. Cloud State, Sam Houston State, Missouri-St. Louis, Mankato State, Nebraska-Omaha, Stephen F. Austin State and Lewis.

West—Chapman, Cal State Northridge, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, California-Riverside and Cal Poly-Pomona.

Division III title a 'long shot' for all

Teams that have long hitters off the tee will have an advantage in the 10th annual NCAA Division III Men's Golf Championships May 15-18 at Radisson Greens Golf Course in Baldwinsville, New York.

The course for the 72-hole tournament, hosted by Oswego State, is long and demands accurate tee shots. Ramapo, winner of the 1982 championship and runner-up last year, may have the best shot at taming the fairways.

The Roadrunners have overcome the loss of three players with the play of transfer Tom Ansbro and Jeff Thomas, who returned after a one-year absence.

Scott Nye, Wooster

Ansbro, medalist at the Metropolitan championships, leads Ramapo with a 73.1-stroke average. Thomas, a three-time all-America, is at 73.8.

Tom Zahuta and Carl Campanelli, both among the top 20 in last year's championships, complete Ramapo's top foursome.

Wooster, led by Scott Nye, has come on strong and should be a challenger for the team title. Nye has been playing at a torrid pace, winning medalist honors at the 20-team Beckler-Parlor Invitational and tying for first at the Ohio Wesleyan Invitational and Penn State Invitational. His two-round 143 at the Beckler-Parlor Invitational broke the tournament record by one stroke.

Defending champion Allegheny's past championships record suggests that the Gators will be among the contenders.

In its previous seven appearances, the Gators have finished no worse than fourth under coach Norm Sundstrom. Allegheny, led by Dave Hagstrom, the runner-up in last year's championships, captured the Tri-State tournament title and placed second at the Wooster Invitational.

Cal State Stanislaus, winner of six straight championships beginning in 1976, also is a strong contender, along with Methodist, Ohio Wesleyan and Central (Iowa).

help us in the play-offs."

North Carolina coach Willie Scroggs has his team resting. "We seem to be a good tournament team, and has been helpful in that respect," Scroggs said.

Goalkeeper Tim Mealey's save percentage (.720 after nine games) has been near the top of the list all season.

Jim DellaRocca of Pennsylvania has Quaker coach Tony Seaman excited, and with good reason. The junior goalie helped his teammates win the Ivy League crown outright.

"That was one of our major goals," said Seaman, in only his second year at the helm. "It has been a team effort."

"I think there will be some upsets in the play-offs," said first-year Army coach Jack Emmer, who has a top goalkeeper in all-America selection George Slabowski.

"Our defense has been outstanding, and Slabowski has continued to play in all-America form," Emmer said.

Rutgers coach Tom Hayes has a play-off contender. "We are gratified to have had the kind of season that could lead us to the play-offs," Hayes said.

Navy has a legitimate shot at play-off action, too, as do Delaware and Maryland.

The consensus indicates another Syracuse vs. Johns Hopkins final. Some coaches contend the Orangemen have not faced a defense as tough as the Hopkins unit; others maintain that the Bluejays may be able to slow down the Syracuse attack, something no other opponent has done.

Hopkins has lost the NCAA championship game three straight years, reason enough for the Bluejays to feel a monkey on their backs.

Adding fuel to the fire is a group of contenders with as much talent and firepower as any play-off field in recent history. This tournament may be one to remember.

Disabled student-athlete benefits (Revises Case No. 91)

Situation: As a result of injury or illness, a student-athlete or a prospective student-athlete on an official paid visit to the institution's campus incurs permanent disability that precludes further athletics participation. (5)

Question: Is it permissible for the institution or an outside agency, or both, to raise money through donations, benefits or like activities to assist the individual financially?

Answer: Yes, provided that all funds secured shall be controlled by the institution and the money shall be used exclusively to meet those special expenses incurred by the individual as a result of the disability. [C 3-1-(h) (4) and B 1-1-(6)]

Professional sports contract advice

Situation: In accordance with Constitution 3-1-(c), a student-athlete may secure advice from a lawyer concerning a proposed professional sports contract provided the lawyer does not represent the student-athlete in negotiations for such a contract. (616)

Question: May the lawyer be present during discussions of a contract offer with the professional organization or have any direct contact (i.e., in person, by telephone or by mail) with the professional organization on behalf of the student-athlete without jeopardizing the student's eligibility for the intercollegiate sport?

Answer: No. The lawyer's presence during such discussion of a contract offer or contact with the professional organization on behalf of the student-athlete shall be considered representation of the student-athlete in negotiations for a professional contract and shall render the student-athlete ineligible for intercollegiate athletics in the involved sport. [C 3-1-(c)]

Scheduling criteria—contest cancellation

Situation: In accordance with the criteria for membership in its division, a member institution schedules an appropriate number or percentage of its contests in a sport with members of the required division or divisions. One of the member's opponents cancels its game with the institution, and that cancellation drops the institution's schedule below the appropriate minimum number or percentage. (617)

Question: Has the member institution complied with the applicable division membership criteria?

Answer: No, inasmuch as the bylaws require an institution to schedule and play a minimum number or percentage of its contests in the sport against members of specified divisions, the institution has failed to satisfy a division membership requirement; however, the Council may grant approval (by a two-thirds vote) of an institution's compliance with the criterion in situations in which the member institution can document that it had scheduled for that academic year the appropriate minimum number or percentage of contests with members of the required division or divisions under enforceable game contracts executed in writing; an opponent has cancelled a game it had contracted to play that year and, despite a good-faith effort, the institution has been unable to rearrange its schedule to play the appropriate number or percentage of contests with members of the required division or divisions. Division I-A football attendance figures

Situation: In an attempt to satisfy the paid-attendance requirements for football contests set forth in the Division I-A football criteria, a member institution agrees to an exchange of tickets with an opponent or enters into an agreement with an opponent that requires the purchase of tickets. (618)

Question: How are such tickets to be counted in determining whether the institution has met the paid-attendance requirements of Bylaw 11-1-(f)?

Answer: Inasmuch as the purpose of the paid-attendance criteria is to require the demonstration of a certain minimum level of public support for and interest in an institution's intercollegiate football program in order for the institution to be classified in Division I-A, tickets for a football contest obtained by an institution through an exchange agreement or a purchase agreement with another institution shall not be used in counting paid attendance for compliance with Bylaw 11-1-(f) [and shall not be considered "tickets sold at regularly established prices" (as that term is used in O.I. 1100)] regardless of the amount paid by the institution, unless the tickets are resold at face value or utilized to attend the contest. Committee delays site selection

A decision on the site of the 1985 NCAA Men's and Women's Skiing Championships has been delayed by the Men's and Women's Skiing Committee until more information is obtained from prospective hosts.

Meeting May 3-5 in Kansas City, the committee also made a number of rules changes and determined regional allocations for the 1985 championships. All championships matters must be approved by the NCAA Executive Committee.

"We've asked for additional information regarding the bids for the 1985 meet," said Tom Parac, athletics director at Montana State University and chair of the committee. "There was an impasse on the committee regarding the altitude at which Nordic events would be run."

Traditionally, the championships site has alternated between the East and West each year. The University of Colorado submitted a bid to host the 1985 meet in Aspen.

Because of the increased importance of the Nordic events in determining the NCAA champion, representatives of the Eastern institutions were concerned about their athletes adjusting to the higher Western altitude in the Nordic events.

"The base altitude in the West has been around the 7,000-foot mark the past few years," said Parac. "And this figure has been acceptable to the Eastern institutions. However, the base altitude at the proposed site in Colorado is 7,900 feet."

"The committee has been instructed to discuss the altitude problem in their regions."

The committee also recommended that the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports study the problem of climatization to high altitudes for Nordic skiers.

Among the rules changes made by the committee were the following:

- The number of gates in the giant slalom was changed to 12 percent of vertical drop plus or minus three gates, instead of 15 percent plus or minus five gates.

- The maximum number of gates for the slalom was increased to 75 for men.

- "Skating" in the last 100 meters of a cross country race is now permissible, but "skating" in the first 100 meters of the cross country relay will result in disqualification.

- The time limit for a protest was reduced from 30 minutes to 15 minutes after the posting of results.

The recommended regional allocations for 1985 are:

	East	West	At Large
Men's Slalom	20	20	2
Men's Giant Slalom	20	20	2
Men's Cross Country	18	23	2
Men's Relay	2	4	1
Women's Slalom	16	24	2
Women's Giant Slalom	19	21	2
Women's Cross Country	20	21	2
Women's Relay	2	4	1

Woody Hayes will speak at NCAA seminar in June

Wayne Woodrow "Woody" Hayes, who was head football coach at Ohio State University for 28 years, will be the keynote speaker for the Professional Development Seminar, sponsored by the NCAA June 1-2 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Chicago.

The seminar, which is being co-produced by Host Communications, Inc., Lexington, Kentucky, is designed to assist member institutions' athletics personnel with radio and television packaging, marketing, special events, and ticket sales.

Discussion leaders include experts in college athletics promotions and fund-raising and top officials in television and radio sports broadcasting. Speakers include Bill Rasmussen, Rasmussen and Associates; Jim Cavazzini, president, Triad Communications; Mark Dyer, communications coordinator, University of Tennessee; Knoxville; W. James Host, president, Host Communications, and Joe Dickey, vice-president and general manager, Southwest Athletic Conference radio network.

Donald B. Canham, athletics director, University of Michigan, will lead a panel discussion on "The Promotion Business," and joining Canham will be Sonja S. Hogg, director of women's athletics, Louisiana Tech University.

New methods of increasing ticket sales will be explored by Canham and Billy Packer, CBS-TV sports commentator.

A session on "Fund-Raising" will be led by Lewis A. Cryer, commissioner, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, and Mary M. Zimmerman, women's athletics director, San Jose State University.

Ohio State, with Hayes as head coach, achieved national football prominence with 205 victories against 61 losses and 10 ties, a winning percentage of .760 for the Big Ten Conference power. His conference record was 152-37-7.

While he coached the Buckeyes, Ohio State led the nation in attendance per home game 21 times in 28 seasons and finished second the other seven years.

A winner of "College Coach of the Year" honors twice, Hayes led his teams to three national championships, 13 Big Ten championships and 11 bowl appearances.

Hayes was born in Clifton, Ohio, and graduated from Denison University with a degree in English. He earned a master's degree in education administration at Ohio State.

After a five-year stint in the United States Navy, he became head football coach at Denison in 1946. Three years later, he was named head coach at Miami University (Ohio). In 1951, he went to Ohio State, where he coached through the 1978 season.

Collegiate Tennis Hall of Fame will be dedicated

The Collegiate Tennis Hall of Fame will be dedicated May 16 at the University of Georgia, with former NCAA, Davis Cup and Wimbledon champions participating in the ceremonies.

The hall of fame, sponsored by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association, will accept 15 new members during an induction banquet that evening.

The dedication will take place during the NCAA Division I Men's Tennis Championships May 12 to 20 on the Georgia campus.

Legislative Assistance

Attorneys and professional contracts

On recommendation of the NCAA Eligibility Committee, the NCAA Council has approved an interpretation concerning the role of attorneys in advising student-athletes about professional sports contracts (Situation 616 published in the Interpretations column of this edition of The NCAA News). In this regard, it may be helpful to review the background and original purpose of the specific provision of Constitution 3-1-(c) that permits a student-athlete to secure advice from a lawyer concerning a professional sports contract.

In 1974, NCAA members recognized that student-athletes might need legal advice to enable them to understand and evaluate professional sports contract offers made to them while they had eligibility remaining. Accordingly, member institutions adopted the current clause of Constitution 3-1-(c) that permits a student-athlete to seek advice from a lawyer, provided the lawyer does not represent the student-athlete in negotiations for a professional sports contract.

It was noted on the Convention floor during consideration of the proposal that a student-athlete may seek the advice of a lawyer relative to future negotiations or discussion of the individual's professional aspirations so long as the lawyer does not become actively involved in negotiations with the professional team or organization. This legislation was intended to provide an opportunity for the student-athlete to receive advice so that he or she could understand a contract offer, but it was not intended to involve the lawyer in direct contact with the professional organization.

Since the adoption of this legislation, more and more agent-attorneys have used the language to become involved actively in actual contract discussions with professional sports organizations concerning student-athletes. Some lawyers have asked professional sports organizations to communicate all contract offers to a particular student-athlete through them while, at the same time, insisting that they are not representing the student in contract negotiations.

Concern about such abuses of the original intent of the legislation prompted the Eligibility Committee to make its recommendation to the Council to clarify the application of Constitution 3-1-(c) as it relates to the involvement of a lawyer with a student-athlete.

The interpretation does not deny an individual the opportunity to seek competent legal counsel to review the terms of a proposed professional contract and to assist the individual in understanding those terms, nor does it deny an individual the opportunity to be represented by legal counsel if he or she chooses to negotiate a professional contract and forgo his or her remaining eligibility. It does indicate that once the student decides to have legal counsel contact the professional club concerning the contract offer, the individual has agreed to be represented by an agent in marketing his or her athletic talent and is no longer eligible per Constitution 3-1-(c).

This interpretation should be of immediate interest to student-athletes with eligibility remaining who are drafted in the June phase of the Major League Baseball draft. Member institutions should review this interpretation with their drafted student-athletes immediately so that their future collegiate eligibility may be protected.

Road-racing competition

Under the provisions of Case No. 5 (pages 246-247, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), "road-racing" is considered to be essentially the same as cross country or track competition and cannot be effectively separated from those sports for purposes of the Association's amateurism legislation. Accordingly, an individual who has accepted pay or the promise of pay in any form for participation in such a race would be ineligible for intercollegiate cross country or track competition per Constitution 3-1-(a). In addition, any awards received by student-athletes for participation in road races must conform to NCAA awards legislation as set forth in Constitution 3-1-(i).

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

TV in the News

Big Eight will abandon TV plan

Inability to procure expected rights fees or agree on revenue distribution apparently has forced the Big Eight Conference to scrap plans for a 1984 contingency football television plan.

While the conference still may try to formulate a plan for 1985, the Associated Press reported that "an every-man-for-himself" approach will be taken this year, if the U.S. Supreme Court upholds lower-court rulings that found the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan in violation of antitrust laws.

According to the wire service, the Big Eight had hoped to have a conference package that would command rights fees of $500,000 a game, with the participating teams receiving 41 percent each and the other six conference members getting three percent apiece. However, the AP reported that syndicators had offered rights fees much less than expected and that there also had been disagreement about the conference split.

The conference also faces a potential problem because seven of its eight stadiums do not have lights, meaning the league does not have much flexibility in moving games to later hours.

"So, you're telling fans, 'Hey, we're going to have five night games (with portable lights). But we don't know which ones they're going to be,'" said Carl C. James, conference commissioner. "That's not a lot of lead time to change games. People did it last year for the NCAA's supplemental package with the Turner Broadcasting System. But the contract with Turner expired, and Turner's money was considerably more than any amount I've heard talked about on a regional or conference basis this year. I can tell you there aren't people walking around with big barrels of money to throw around."

CBS to carry Peach, Sun Bowls

CBS has renewed its options to televise both the Peach and Sun Bowls.

The network reportedly raised its rights fee by $35,000 to $350,000 for the Peach Bowl. Terms for the Sun Bowl were not disclosed.

The 1984 telecasts will be CBS' sixth straight of the Peach Bowl and 17th straight for the Sun Bowl. The Peach Bowl will be played December 31 in Atlanta, Georgia, and the Sun Bowl is December 22 in El Paso, Texas.

Nebraska turns down syndicators

Working on contingency plans for live television coverage of its 1984 football games, Nebraska recently rejected bids from two syndicators.

"We believe the interest of UNI (University of Nebraska, Lincoln) and the people of Nebraska will be best served by awaiting subsequent college football developments," said Chancellor Martin Massengale.

Director of Athletics Robert S. Devaney cited a concern for overexposure. "I have some long-term concerns on it," he said. "If it's worthwhile financially, that limits my concerns. There are two ways to look at it—the chance for overexposure vs. lots of money."

The rejected bids were from KMTV, an Omaha television station, and Challenger Productions of Tulsa, Oklahoma, which had proposed a payable television plan. Challenger is headed by former Oklahoma quarterback and current network analyst Steve Davis.

Olympic team will be previewed

Each of the three major networks will get a piece of the pre-Olympic basketball hoopla when the United States team meets a team of National Basketball Association all-stars during a series of exhibition games this summer.

ABC, which will carry the 1984 Los Angeles Games, will televise the July 1 game from Minneapolis. NBC will telecast the July 8 game in Iowa City, Iowa, and the July 21 game in Albuquerque, New Mexico, will be on CBS. ESPN may pick up additional tour games.

ABC/USFL negotiations continue

ABC, apparently encouraged by more consistent ratings during its second year of United States Football League coverage, has proposed extending its contract through the 1985 season for a reported $15 million.

However, USFL officials, hoping to increase that rights fee, have not finalized negotiations, according to Advertising Age. While ratings sagged during the second half of the USFL's first season, ratings this year have maintained the six- and seven-percent level that ABC was predicting. If another second-half decline can be avoided, league officials are hopeful that ABC will raise its rights fee.

ABC and the new league signed a two-year contract in 1983 for approximately $18 million. USFL games also are carried on cable television by ESPN. An ESPN spokesman confirmed that the cable network and the league are involved in negotiations for 1985 and beyond.

ABC acquires sports network

ABC Video Enterprises, a subsidiary of ABC, has exercised its option of first refusal and purchased ESPN from Texaco.

ESPN, the nation's largest cable network (30.3 million homes), was put up for sale when Texaco acquired 70 percent of the stock in its buy-out of the previous owner, Getty Oil. ABC had purchased 15 percent of ESPN's stock in 1983 for $25 million, while another 15 percent owned by the network's founder, Bill Rasmussen, and his family was sold as part of ABC's acquisition.

ABC reportedly paid $188 million for Texaco's interest. The deal was announced April 30.

Officials at ABC told USA Today that they did not anticipate any immediate changes in ESPN's programming or management. The two networks have shared programming in the past for such events as the Kentucky Derby, a relationship ABC officials said would continue.

However, there will not be any shared coverage of the 1984 Summer Olympics, to which ABC owns the rights. Cable television rights were not awarded for the Los Angeles games. ABC's contract to televise the 1988 Winter Olympics does include cable rights, which could lead to shared programming with ESPN.

Had ABC not exercised its option of first refusal, a number of parties were prepared to step in, most notably the Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. Others reportedly interested in talking with Texaco were Paramount Pictures or its parent company, Gulf & Western; Time, Inc., which owns Home Box Office, and Joseph Canazzaro, owner of the New Orleans Breakers of the United States Football League.

Catholic University will construct $7.7 million athletics complex

A ceremony to break ground for Catholic University's new $7.7 million athletics complex was held last week.

A 13-month construction period will begin this month, and the building is expected to be ready for occupation by the fall 1985 semester at the NCAA Division III institution.

The building features a two-story gymnasium with a laminated wood basketball court and pull-out bleachers to seat 2,000. Additional seating will be available in the end zone. The wood area also will be lined by volleyball and two shorter basketball courts for intramurals.

There also will be a playing area with a synthetic surface lined for two intramural basketball courts, two volleyball courts and a tennis court.

Also on the lower level will be five racquetball and handball courts; a six-lane, 120-foot "stretch" swimming pool with a movable bulkhead for a 50-meter swimming area, and a separate diving area with two one-meter diving boards and one three-meter board. There will be shower and locker rooms, a weight room with separate areas for free weights and machines, an equipment issue room, a training room, and an office for the athletics trainer.

On the second floor will be 15 offices for athletics department personnel; a dance room with a wood floor, mirrors and barre, and a multi-purpose room for wrestling, classes, and team meetings.

The grounds will feature six lighted tennis courts, a stadium with a press box and permanent bleachers to seat 1,500 on one side, with the option to expand the seating to the other side. The stadium will include a 400-meter, six-lane synthetic track with a run-off area that surrounds a regulation football field. A pole vault area and a high jump area will be behind the end zones.

Outside the stadium, a softball diamond, baseball diamond, field hockey field, areas for discus and javelin throws, and several practice fields are included in the plans.

The building and grounds will be used by varsity athletics teams, intramural teams, students, faculty, staff and alumni.

The fund-raising drive was led by Raymond A. DuFour of Poolesville, Maryland, an honorary member of the board of trustees, and Joseph M. Della Ratta of Silver Spring, Maryland, a trustee and member of the physical plant committee.

Della Ratta, chairman of the fund-raising committee, lettered 11 times in track, baseball, boxing and basketball and graduated in 1953 with a bachelor of science degree.

DeFour, the fund-raising committee's honorary chairman, attended Catholic University on a football grant-in-aid from 1924 to 1928 and received a bachelor's degree in philosophy. In 1936, he earned a juris doctorate from the institution's Columbus School of Law.

DuFour was a 1982 recipient of the Cardinal Gibbons Medal, the alumni association's highest award.

Courses for coaches set at academy

Three top university coaches provide the leadership as the United States Sports Academy again offers its summer series of graduate-level coaches courses, with three five-day sessions in basketball, track and field, and volleyball.

Van Chancellor, women's basketball coach at the University of Mississippi, opens the session June 18 to 22; he is followed by Gary Wieneke, head track and cross country coach at the University of Illinois, Champaign, June 25 to 29, and former Olympian Marilyn McReavy, women's volleyball coach at the University of Florida, July 30 to August 3.

Four graduate credit hours are available to participants through the academy's department of coaching. The courses also are available for audit.

Information on registration is available from the office of the registrar at the U.S. Sports Academy, Box 8650, Mobile, Alabama 36608.

Chancellor's Lady Rebels competed in the third NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship this past season. Prior to joining the Ole Miss program six years ago, Chancellor coached in the high school ranks for 12 years and was selected as the 1977 women's high school coach of the year by the Mississippi Association of Coaches and the Kellogg Coaching Association.

Wieneke has coached at Illinois since 1967. Last fall, his cross country team finished ninth at the NCAA Division I Men's Cross Country Championships. He also is a member of the academy's national faculty and has traveled abroad as a sport specialist.

McReavy has coached three NCAA championship volleyball teams, two at Sul Ross State University and one at Utah State University.

Briefly in the News

The North Coast Athletic Conference will sponsor 20 championship sports in 1984-85, its first season. The conference has 11 men's sports and nine for women. Charter members of the conference are Allegheny College, Case Western Reserve University, Denison University, Kenyon College, Oberlin College, Ohio Wesleyan University and the College of Wooster. Philip H. Jordan, president of Kenyon, is conference president. . . . While Haverford College and the University of Pennsylvania claim the first intercollegiate contest of any kind on land (a cricket match in 1864), there is evidence that Amherst College and Williams College can claim that honor. Teams from the two schools met in a baseball game, according to published accounts, in July 1859 in Pittsfield, Massachusetts, with Amherst taking a 73-32 victory in 26 innings.

Talk about close calls. Dartmouth College lacrosse players Harold Bourque and Michael Thompson barely made the current season. Both spent the winter term in France studying. One day before a preseason match with Roanoke College, the two were practicing in a hotel parking lot in Paris, waiting for a plane home. The flight arrived late in New York, but too early to make connections. After a couple of hours sleep, they grabbed a 9:30 a.m. flight to Roanoke and made the match. . . . When Hofstra University and State University of New York, Buffalo, played baseball last month, it was a family reunion for the coaches. Hofstra coach Bob Borowicz is the son of Buffalo's Ray Borowicz, who still has a thing or two to show the "youngster." Buffalo broke a ninth-inning tie for an eventual 7-5 victory.

Ohio State University will erect a $2.6 million scoreboard in Ohio Stadium in time for football season. The scoreboard includes two screens—the left will be capable of computerized animation, and the right will provide game information. Revolving panels at the bottom of the scoreboard will carry advertising, with which OSU plans to pay for the project in four or five years. . . . Keeping statistics is a long way from winning a Pulitzer Prize for reporting, unless the statistician is George Ramos, a member of the basketball stats crew at California State University, Los Angeles. Ramos and colleagues at the Los Angeles Times were awarded a Pulitzer for a series on the Latino community in Los Angeles. . . .

The Iona College baseball team took Good Friday off—and deservedly so. The Gaels defeated Siena College April 18 in Loudonville, New York, in a double-header, beginning at 5:30 p.m. Arriving back in New Rochelle, New York, at 4 a.m. the next day, the team slept five hours and headed for Fairfield, Connecticut, where Iona defeated Fairfield University in a double-header. After resting Good Friday, April 20, Iona defeated Niagara University in two games April 21. The six victories improved the Gaels' record to 12-6. . . . The Lenz Tennis Center at Princeton University will be dedicated May 6, featuring an exhibition by Tim and Tom Gullikson. The eight hard courts have lights to enable night play, a 1,200-person seating capacity, an office and a clubhouse area. . . . The National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics will hold its annual convention on Marco Island, Florida, June 10-13.

Professional golfer Arnold Palmer, a graduate of Wake Forest University, will receive the man of the year in golf award at the All-American Collegiate Golf Foundation dinner June 11 in New York. President Ronald Reagan will receive a lifetime achievement award. . . . Five Illinois State University student-athletes earned 4,000 grade-point averages (4,000 scale) and 27 others were at the 3,500 mark or higher during the fall term. . . . University of Cincinnati athletics director Michael B. McGee has announced the creation of nine endowed athletics scholarships, with a total value of $450,000. The grants have been made possible by nine persons who pledged $50,000 each.

Hartford to compete in ECAC

The University of Hartford has been approved for membership in the Eastern College Athletic Conference North Atlantic, contingent upon the institution's petition to the NCAA to be reclassified from Division II to Division I.

Hartford has requested that its athletics programs be reclassified to Division I effective with the 1984-85 academic year. The Classification Committee will consider the request at its June meeting. The Hawks then would begin a full, double round-robin ECAC North Atlantic schedule in 1985-86.

Hartford already has scheduled a number of Division I opponents for 1984-85, including the University of Massachusetts, Amherst; Cornell University; Boston University; Fordham University; University of Pennsylvania; Northeastern University, and the University of Texas, San Antonio.

The Hawks will be the 10th member of the ECAC North Atlantic. Other members are Boston University; Canisius College; Colgate University; University of Maine, Orono; University of New Hampshire; Niagara University; Northeastern University; Siena College, and University of Vermont.

Olympic team schedules games

The United States Olympic men's basketball team will warm up for the 1984 Los Angeles Games with a series of six exhibition games early this summer.

The schedule, which was announced recently by the Amateur Basketball Association of the USA and still is subject to change, will begin June 22 in Bloomington, Indiana, with a game against former Indiana stars. The rest of the slate includes games July 1 in Minneapolis, Minnesota; July 8 in Iowa City, Iowa; July 9 in Indianapolis, Indiana; July 23 in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and July 25 in San Diego, California.

All games except the first will pit the Olympians against current National Basketball Association players. The July 9 game in Indianapolis will be a double-header with the women's Olympic team, which will face an unnamed opponent. The double-header will be the first sporting event in the new $81 million Hoosier Dome, with a sellout crowd of 60,000 expected. The game in Minneapolis also will be played in a domed stadium, the Hubert H. Humphrey Dome.

Hartman wins 700th in baseball

Chuck Hartman, baseball coach at Virginia Tech, recorded his 700th career victory with a recent 6-3 decision over Longwood.

Hartman, who has coached for 25 years, has a 700-303 record. His record in six years at Virginia Tech is 217-78. Prior to taking over the Virginia Tech program, Hartman spent 19 seasons as coach at High Point College in North Carolina.

"I said when I came to Tech that my goal was to win 1,000 games," Hartman said after the victory. "This is just another stepping stone toward that goal. I hope to win 300 more, and then maybe I will think about retiring."

Hartman's teams at High Point won 10 Carolinas Intercollegiate Athletic Conference titles. His best year at Virginia Tech was 1982, when the Hokies finished 50-9 and were ranked nationally throughout the season.

Female soccer player fights case

Attorneys for an Iowa City, Iowa, high school girl have asked a Federal judge to issue a temporary restraining order against the Cedar Rapids school system, which has threatened to cancel future boy's soccer games if the girl remains on the Iowa City boy's team.

Four members of the Cedar Rapids Jefferson High School boy's team walked off the field last week when 16-year-old Amy Chu entered the game for Iowa City West High School. Three days earlier, U.S. District Court Judge William Stuart had ordered the Iowa City school district to allow Chu to play on the boy's junior varsity team.

Cedar Rapids school officials countered that there is a "hormonal difference" between young men and women and that expecting high school girls to compete in the same sport with boys is unfair. Iowa City West does not have a girl's soccer team.

Chu's attorneys asked Judge Stuart to issue the restraining order on the grounds that it is unconstitutional for the Cedar Rapids school system to refuse to compete against Chu's team solely on the basis of sex. Stuart was expected to rule on the restraining order next week.

'Intermediate' basketball on market

Women's basketball coaches and equipment managers should be aware of some sporting-goods manufacturers who are offering a small basketball that does not meet the specifications of the new small ball approved for women's intercollegiate play next year.

Often termed an "intermediate" ball, this ball is smaller than the ball that was specified by the United States Girls' and Women's Basketball Rules Committee. The approved ball is 28½ to 29 inches in circumference, weighs 18 to 20 ounces and has narrow (¼) seams.

Coaches and equipment managers are urged to double-check ball specifications when dealing with manufacturers.
