Women's programs list legislative priorities

Further restrictions on recruiting and limitations on playing and practice seasons in all women's sports were two of many legislative proposals suggested by administrators of NCAA women's athletics programs, meeting in Chicago May 30-31.

More than 300 administrators attended the meeting, which was mandated by adoption of Proposal No. 42 by the 1984 NCAA Convention.

Legislative topics, discussed in separate division sessions, were arranged on the agenda from results of surveys returned to the NCAA by primary women's athletics administrators at member institutions.

The Special Committee on Women's Interests, which served as the program committee, will review each division's legislative proposals and submit recommendations it deems appropriate to the NCAA Council for possible sponsorship of legislation. Any proposal could be submitted to the 1985 NCAA Convention by six or more member institutions.

There was support in each division for continuation of the women's meeting, but not necessarily on an annual basis. As adopted by the 1984 Convention, Proposal No. 42 specified only this year's meeting.

John L. Toner, serving as chair of the general session, spoke on the progress and expansion of women's athletics programs within the NCAA, particularly since the adoption of the NCAA governance plan for women's athletics by the 1981 Convention.

Here are some excerpts from Toner's remarks:

"The NCAA is fully and irrevocably committed to insuring equality of athletics opportunity for male and female student-athletes. The opportunities available to women in intercollegiate athletics have grown dramatically.

"The average number of women's varsity intercollegiate sports has risen from 5.61 in 1977 to 6.9 in 1984, and the aggregate expenditures for women's intercollegiate athletics were $24.7 million in 1977. In 1981, the figure was $116 million.

"These increases have occurred even though the growth of revenues generated by women's programs has not kept pace in any approximate fashion with the expansion of the programs. This is an important consideration. What I am saying here is that the degree to which women's programs covered their own costs has decreased.

"In 1978, 34.3 percent of total costs of women's programs was covered by revenues generated by those programs. In 1981, the percentage was 28.2.

"It seems to many who are responsible for generating the dollars to pay intercollegiate athletics costs that there must be some correlation between added program costs and increased revenues to support those

Summer meeting agenda features academics, drug testing, television

Reports on a proposed academic reporting procedure, a recommended drug-testing plan and the current status of college football television controls will be the first items of business facing approximately 190 participants in the second annual Division I summer meeting June 7-8 at the Westin Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

Those three topics will be presented in a joint session when the meeting begins at 1:30 p.m. June 7.

NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis, Oregon State University, will explain the academic reporting procedure that was approved in principle by the Division I Steering Committee in April. Member institutions would be required to report appropriate academic information annually to the NCAA, including institutional practices in matters of admission, student-athletes' compliance with institutional and NCAA requirements for satisfactory progress toward a degree, and graduation rates of student-athletes.

James Puffer, M.D., University of California, Los Angeles, a member of the NCAA Special Committee on Drug Testing, will report on that committee's recommendations to date regarding a plan that will comply with the provisions of the drug-testing resolution adopted by the 1984 NCAA Convention.

Reporting on the status of college football television will be John D. Swofford, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, chair of the NCAA Football Television Committee, and Frank H. Easterbrook, a University of Chicago law professor who is the NCAA's counsel of record in the football television litigation before the U.S. Supreme Court.

After the opening joint session, the seven constituent groups attending the meeting—faculty athletics representatives, directors of athletics, primary women administrators of athletics programs, conference executive officers, football coaches, and men's and women's basketball coaches—will meet separately that afternoon and the following morning.

Those sessions will be chaired by Charles H. Samson, Texas A&M University; David L. Maggard, University of California, Berkeley; Mikki Flowers, Old Dominion University; Lewis A. Cryer, Pacific Coast Athletic Association; Vincent J. Dooley, University of Georgia; Bob Knight, Indiana University, Bloomington, and Jody Conradt, University of Texas, Austin, respectively.

While each of the seven groups has its own agenda to assure consideration of matters of special interest, several issues will be discussed by all or nearly all of them:

- Academic requirements, including the academic reporting procedure, recommendations of the NCAA Academic Testing and Requirements Committee, and the status of research regarding Bylaw 5-1(j).

- Recommendations of the Select

Deadline approaches for I-A proposals

The deadline for submitting legislation for consideration by the first Division I-A midyear legislative meeting is Thursday, June 21.

NCAA Constitution 5-7(b), adopted by the 1984 Convention, authorizes the Division I-A meeting to adopt football legislation applicable only to Division I-A and to propose legislation on other matters for consideration by the next annual Convention. No football-only legislation was submitted by the April 29 deadline, as reported in the May 2 issue of The NCAA News. The June 21 deadline is for legislation extending beyond football issues.

All such legislation must be received in the NCAA national office on or before June 21. The properly submitted proposals will be duplicated for distribution at the meeting itself, June 28-29 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Chicago.

Any such proposal receiving a majority vote of the voting delegates at the Division I-A meeting will be properly before the 1985 NCAA Convention under the sponsorship of the I-A meeting itself.

Division I-A members with questions regarding the legislative procedures for the meeting should contact Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services, at the national office.

As of June 4, 70 of the 116 Division I-A institutions and allied conferences had appointed a total of 174 delegates to attend the meeting. The total attendance, including the Division

NCAA files statement regarding civil-rights legislation

A statement commenting on H.R. 5490, the Civil Rights Act of 1984, and affirming the NCAA's commitment to enhancing women's opportunities has been filed with the chair of the U.S. House of Representatives Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education.

The statement was submitted by the NCAA Administrative Committee, acting for the NCAA Council, to Rep. Paul Simon (D-Illinois), chair of the Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education. In a letter accompanying the statement, NCAA President John L. Toner asked that the statement be included in the record of the recently concluded hearings of the Committee on Education and Labor and the Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights.

"The NCAA is committed to providing equality of athletics opportunity without regard to sex and supports that objective of H.R. 5490," Toner wrote. "At the same time, within that context, the NCAA believes that serious questions should be raised about certain aspects of the proposed bill."

H.R. 5490—and a similar bill, S. 2568, that will be considered soon in Senate committees—was filed in response to the recent Supreme Court ruling in the Grove City College case, which concluded that the current civil-rights law applies to the program or activity that directly receives Federal funding.

The NCAA statement follows:

This statement is submitted by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), an association of 976 colleges and universities, allied athletics conferences, associated institutions, and affiliated organizations. The NCAA governs men's and women's intercollegiate athletics programs sponsored by its member institutions, conducts national intercollegiate championships for male and female student-athletes, and provides various other programs and services for both men and women.

This statement concerns one of the four statutes that would be amended by H.R. 5490—Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. For many years, ensuring equality of athletics opportunity for male and female student-athletes has been viewed as a primary objective of Title IX. The NCAA and its member institutions are fully and irrevocably committed to the achievement of that objective and have undertaken special efforts to enhance women's athletics.

Gains by women at the institutional level

The opportunities available to women in intercollegiate athletics have grown dramatically. Women's college sports often is cited as the area in which the greatest progress has been made since the enactment of Title IX. At NCAA member institutions, the number of female participants in intercollegiate athletics increased from 32,000 in 1971-72 to 64,000 in 1976-77, and rose by 1982-83 to 80,000. Thus, in a period of 12 years, women's participation in intercollegiate athletics increased by 150 percent. The percentage of partici-

Running back made biggest gains in classroom

By John Brockmann

Sarasota (Florida) Herald-Tribune

The future was supposed to be touchdowns, headlines and, eventually, a comfortable chair behind a big desk in a plush office. Instead, it turned out to be surgery, disappointments, goodbyes, construction jobs and layoffs.

Tony Waters was an all-state running back his senior season at Sarasota High School. That was 1975. He had gained more than 1,000 yards, and colleges were lined up with scholarship offers.

He settled on the University of Florida, but this Friday night hero would never become a Saturday hero. He never scored a touchdown in a varsity game for the Gators.

As a sophomore, he spent most of the time with the junior varsity. As a junior, he gained 73 yards, more than half of them in the final game of the season, a 22-21 loss to Miami (Florida) on Florida Field.

"I had hurt my right knee on the previous carry. I remember (fullback) Terry Williams telling me I'd better go out. I told him, 'You're crazy, man, they're finally giving me a chance.' The very next play was one of my favorites, and it was working. I got the ball and saw the biggest hole I had seen all day. I mean, I could see all the way to the end zone.

"I made a cut and at that moment Don Smith (Miami's 6-5, 250-pound all-America defensive tackle) grabbed my left leg. He already had been blocked on the play and was lying on the ground. But all of a sudden he sat up, reached out and took hold. I started to go down but managed to stop myself and twist back the other way. Smith never let go."

Waters' left knee was injured severely. He also fumbled the ball, and Miami saved its victory.

The 5-8, 175-pound Waters was carried off the field. Five times in the next 1½ years surgeons would have to cut on that knee. "Two major operations but five cuts altogether," recalls Waters.

Waters would be on crutches a year later. One doctor even told him he was afraid Waters may be left with a permanent limp. "Thank goodness he was wrong," said Waters. But Waters was told he could never play football again.

"He was pretty discouraged," says his mother, Evelyn Starling, a branch manager for National Bank. "His dream was always to play football, eventually pro football."

Even though he couldn't play football, Waters still had a scholarship. But he later forfeited that when he quit school. Discouragement had turned into disgust. His dream was over. The future didn't look so wonderful.

Waters had been to close to an A student throughout high school. In college, studying was fun. He was close to graduating with a degree in economics.

Instead, he left it all and headed into the real world.

He went back two years later, coming ever so close to the degree. But, he quit again.

He got married, had a son and, in the real world, found himself working jobs like heavy construction or maintenance work on golf courses.

"I owed it to my family to get the rest of my college education and get that degree," said Waters. "Art Ginsburg (a Sarasota attorney who is a strong force in Gator Boosters) was continually checking on me and saying, 'You've got to go back, Tony. You've got to get that degree.' I would try for nicer jobs, but it seemed I was either overqualified with three years of college or underqualified because of not having my degree. I knew I could do better."

Last summer, Waters contacted Florida coach Charley Pell, who had replaced Dickey after the 1978 season. He wanted to know if it was too late to use his remaining scholarship time. Pell went to bat for him immediately. He took the problem to athletics director William Carr.

Pell also went to Bo Bayer, director of "The Office of Student Life" at Florida. That office was created by Pell to help student-athletes in a variety of situations—the transition from high school to college life, academic advisement, counseling, career development and even job placement after graduation.

"Basically, Tony wrote coach Pell asking, 'How can I get back in school?'" said Bayer. "I didn't know the kid at all. I did some checking and found he only lacked eight hours on his degree. I did more checking, to make sure he was sincere about coming back for that purpose."

The more he got to know Waters, the more Bayer was impressed.

"That's what we are here for in The Office of Student Life," continued Bayer. "Whether it's a Wilber Marshall, Wayne Peace or a Tony Waters, we want to make sure everybody gets a good opportunity to graduate. And everyone will, until he shows me he doesn't want to graduate."

Waters was a class example.

"We made the arrangements so that he could enroll in January. We would have a scholarship available to him . . . but I told him he'd have to study as hard as he's ever studied in his life. The fact is, the University of Florida did not owe Tony Waters anything. He had walked away from his scholarship."

"Coach Pell insisted the kid was worth it. When he came back, he was on a full ride for one semester. What's that worth in dollars? Probably about $1,800-$1,900 altogether, but that's a small drop in the bucket as to what it would be worth for the kid. Financially, he couldn't do it himself. He had to have some help."

"Tony Waters, I am proud to say," continued Bayer, "worked his butt off and now has his degree."

Waters graduated last month from the University of Florida.

"I feel good, real good," beamed Waters. "It was rough. My wife (Anne) had to stay back here with my son (Derrick Anthony), but she knew I was doing it for them. Now, maybe I can live my life and give my son the things my own mother worked so hard throughout her life to give me."

"I can't say enough about Art Ginsburg. If you talk to him,

"I think the Supreme Court is going to throw the whole case (the University of Georgia Athletic Association and the University of Oklahoma vs. NCAA) back to the Federal judge or the court of appeals and let the NCAA package slide through another year. I think (Justice) Byron White (a former college football star) will have a big say, and he's pretty well informed and smart enough to know it's so late now that (a ruling adverse to the NCAA) would mean chaos."

"It's just a hunch, but I think if they were going to say the NCAA was in violation of antitrust laws, they

"I believe that an elimination of the eligibility principle and the nullification of the amateur status of undergraduates involved in football would be counterproductive. Only a limited number of college football players eventually succeed in the pros. For every Dan Marino or Eric Dickerson, there are hundreds of college football players who aspire to play professional football but do not succeed and must find another occupation. I believe that encouraging the signing of undergraduates will inevitably result in many players overestimating their abilities, prematurely leaving college to pursue a professional career and falling short of their goal."

"What we don't want to see is another Rick Demont story. He was a U.S. swimmer who won the gold medal in 1972 but was disqualified because his physician had prescribed a medicine for his asthma that contained ephedrine."

"The athlete could awaken the morning of the event with the normal anticipation-type tension and take a headache medication that contains caffeine, maybe drink a couple of cola drinks that have caffeine and then drink several cups of coffee or tea prior to the event, and they might come pretty close to being disqualified for having too much caffeine in the bloodstream."

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

I read with mixed emotions coach Gary Schwartz's criticism of the decision to use a smaller ball for women's basketball at the college level (May 9, 1984, issue of The NCAA News). I am a proponent of the smaller basketball for women. I agree with Gary that ample research was not conducted for such a move. But the need was so obvious that more research was not required. In my three years of coaching girls' basketball at the high school level (I coached boys for 13 years), I have seen enough turnovers to last a lifetime. I believe turnovers will be reduced by the use of a smaller ball. A somewhat exaggerated comparison of women using the standard ball would be men playing with a medicine ball. The men's game would slow down considerably in that instance, as the women's game now is with the present ball.

I agree that women's collegiate basketball has made great strides in recent years, but I also noticed that the women's finals in Los Angeles did not play to a full house as did the men's finals in Seattle. At the high school level in Kansas, my team has been in the state championship two of the past three years. When we came out to warm up 20 minutes before the state championship game, the stands in Henry Levitt Arena in Wichita were empty. There has to be a reason for that. Obvious adjustments should be made to improve the quality of the performance, which, in turn, will improve the quantity of the audience.

Gary's tongue-in-cheek statement about lowering the baskets to nine feet for women may not be a bad idea, but the logistical problems created when men and women share gym facilities would make that impossible. A dunk shot in women's basketball now and then would be nice, but on that point, I agree with Gary—I do not think it would add that much to the overall program.

The new basketball for women is only one inch smaller in circumference than the men's basketball. I would bet the average spectator (in our league, mostly players' parents) would not know the size difference if that fact had not been publicized. However, they should notice improvement in the play.

I am not convinced that a reduction of one inch is enough. Perhaps further experimentation at the high school level is in order.

We have good women athletes at Shawnee Mission East. Over the years, our girls have won more league and state championships than any other school in our area. But these girls have small hands. They cannot pass and catch or even shoot the ball with the efficiency needed to make girls' basketball a better spectator sport. To emphasize this point, most successful women's basketball teams play pressure defense because the women players are already at a disadvantage in handling the ball on offense.

The game is supposed to be for the players. Give them the proper equipment to play the game competitively to the best of their abilities, and more people will come to watch. In our county last year, only three girls' basketball teams shot better than 30 percent from the field. That does not make for a fun sport for a player's pleasure, a spectator's excitement or a coach's satisfaction.

My hat is off to South Dakota and Wyoming (as well as the NCAA). Those are the only states that have adopted the small ball for high school girls' play next year. I hope all adopt it soon.

pants who were female also grew from 16 percent in 1971-72, to 27 percent in 1976-77, to 31 percent in 1982-83.

During the period from 1971 through 1982, the number of NCAA member institutions sponsoring intercollegiate sports for women increased dramatically; for example:

	1971 (663 schools)	1982 (753 schools)
Basketball	307	705
Cross country	10	417
Softball	147	416
Swimming	140	348
Tennis	243	610
Track and field	78	427
Volleyball	208	603

The average number of women's intercollegiate sports programs sponsored by NCAA member institutions grew from 5.61 in 1977, to 6.48 in 1980, to 6.9 in 1984.

Important gains also have been made in providing athletically related financial aid to female athletes. According to the National Advisory Council on Women's Educational Programs, in 1974, 60 colleges offered athletically related scholarships or grants to women; in 1981, 500 provided such aid.

Notwithstanding rising costs and limited revenues, institutional budgetary allocations for women's intercollegiate athletics programs have increased significantly in all three divisions of the NCAA membership. In 1973, NCAA member institutions' aggregate expenditures for women's intercollegiate athletics were $4.2 million; in 1977, $24.7 million; in 1981, $116 million. In 1973, excluding football, on average, women comprised 20 percent of intercollegiate athletes and were allocated 3.4 percent of institutional intercollegiate athletics budgets. In 1981, excluding football, women comprised 37 percent of the athletes and received 20 percent of the budgets. The average institutional budget for women's intercollegiate athletics in all divisions increased from $6,000 in 1971-72, to $34,000 in 1976-77 (an increase of 467 percent), to $155,000 in 1980-81 (an additional 356 percent). The most dramatic gains were in Division I, which had a 914 percent increase in the first period (from $7,000 to $71,000) and a further 376 percent increase in the second (from $71,000 to $338,000).

These increases have occurred even though the growth in revenues generated by women's programs has not kept pace in any approximate fashion with the expansion of those programs. The degree to which women's programs covered their own costs decreased from 34.3 percent of total costs in 1978 to 28.2 percent of total costs in 1981. Yet, member institutions remained committed to providing the resources needed to expand athletics opportunities for women, and the average financial contribution to women's programs by men's programs has increased.

Gains by women at the conference level

In recent years, women's intercollegiate athletics opportunities also have increased markedly at the conference level. This year, 28 Division I conferences, 15 Division II conferences and 17 Division III conferences are sponsoring women's competition. At all division levels, the number of conferences sponsoring women's competition in specific sports is growing. For example, at the Division I level from 1982-83 to 1983-84, the number of conferences sponsoring women's competition in basketball increased from 25 to 28; cross country, 15 to 21; field hockey, seven to nine; golf, six to eight; swimming, 15 to 17; tennis, 20 to 22; outdoor track, 16 to 18; indoor track, seven to 10, and volleyball, 19 to 25.

Gains by women within the NCAA

In 1981, the NCAA membership adopted a governance plan under which women were guaranteed representation on all committees responsible for the conduct of NCAA affairs, and the various programs and services offered by the Association were extended to women's intercollegiate athletics.

Currently, 187 women occupy 230 positions on NCAA committees. These women represent 143 NCAA member institutions. Thirty-one percent of all committee positions are held by women. Women serve on nearly all NCAA committees and, in fact, the number of women on administrative, general, Convention and special committees exceeds established minimums designed to ensure representation based upon the ratio of female to male participants in intercollegiate sports. The ratio of participants will be reviewed periodically to determine whether established minimums for women are appropriate based on developments in the administration of and participation in women's athletics. During the 1982-83 academic year, the intercollegiate athletics participation ratio at NCAA member institutions showed 69.2 percent males and 30.8 percent females. The effect of the membership legislation (as described herein) adopted in 1982 and 1984 at NCAA Conventions, insuring a minimum number of sports to be offered for women without regard to participation ratios, should increase participation numbers for women and, as a part of that, additional opportunities for women for service on NCAA committees will be provided.

The number of women delegates attending NCAA Conventions has increased from 159 in 1981 to 318 in 1984. As a part of the governance plan, institutions were encouraged to send women delegates to the Convention and a fourth individual was added to the Convention delegate listing (identified as the primary woman athletics administrator) to insure this opportunity for women.

In 1981-82, the NCAA, at the direction of its membership, began offering intercollegiate championships for women. That year, the NCAA sponsored 29 women's championships in 13 sports. By 1984-85, the NCAA will sponsor 33 women's championships in 15 sports. Under policies adopted by the NCAA membership, these championships are financed on the same basis as men's championships except that in an effort to encourage the growth of women's sports, several exceptions to the championships policies for men have been allowed in the women's championships for the present.

The NCAA guarantees payment of the game and transportation expenses of its championships for both men and women regardless of the revenue-generating potential of those championships. To date, gymnastics is the only women's championship that has generated sufficient revenues to pay its own costs. Consequently, the NCAA subsidized 28 women's championships offered in 1981-82 (at a cost of $1.7 million) and 30 women's championships in 1982-83 (at a cost of $2.2 million). In 1982-83, NCAA expenditures for the 30 women's championships that were nonrevenue-producing exceeded its expenditures for the 29 men's championships that were nonrevenue-producing by 8.4 percent.

In addition, for the past three years, the NCAA has substantially increased the share of its promotional budget devoted to women's athletics. This share increased from 20 percent in 1981-82 to 34 percent for women in 1982-83; and this year, women's athletics is receiving 49 percent of the total $709,200 promotional budget. A substantial portion of these funds has been earmarked for a special-effort program aimed at increasing the visibility of women's basketball and women's gymnastics. This special-effort program includes allocations for feature stories on female athletes in print media, an annual press conference luncheon focusing on women's basketball, television coverage of women's sports and professional development seminars.

At the 1982 NCAA Convention, the NCAA membership adopted legislation (effective August 1, 1985) requiring all NCAA member institutions that affiliate their women's athletics program with the NCAA to sponsor at least four varsity intercollegiate sports involving all-female teams (in addition to four sports involving all-male teams or mixed teams of males and females). This rule is believed to be the first adopted by any athletics governance organization requiring institutions to sponsor a minimum number of sports for women.

At the 1984 NCAA Convention, the NCAA membership took another major step to ensure equality of athletics opportunity for women. Currently, to qualify for membership in Division I of the NCAA, institutions must offer at least eight varsity intercollegiate sports involving all-male teams or mixed teams of males and females. NCAA legislation adopted this year requires such institutions affiliating their women's programs with the NCAA to sponsor a minimum of six varsity intercollegiate sports involving all-female teams as of September 1, 1986; seven such teams as of September 1, 1987, and eight as of September 1, 1988.

Similarly, under current NCAA rules, to qualify for membership in Division II, institutions must offer at least six varsity intercollegiate sports for all-male or mixed teams. Under new legislation adopted this year, Division II institutions affiliating their women's programs with the NCAA must sponsor a minimum of five varsity intercollegiate sports involving all-female teams as of September 1, 1987, and six as of September 1, 1988. The NCAA believes that these new sports sponsorship requirements are considerably more demanding than the comparable requirements of Title IX, and they will make an important contribution to the continued development of increased athletics opportunities for women.

Comments on H.R. 5490

As stated above, the NCAA is committed to providing equality of athletics opportunity to male and female student-athletes and will remain so committed without regard to the action taken by Congress on H.R. 5490. Within that context, we express the following views with respect to the proposed bill.

As originally enacted, Title IX applied only to specific programs and activities receiving Federal financial assistance. The rationale for a statute so structured was that the Federal government should not finance programs or activities in which discrimination exists.

H.R. 5490 would amend Title IX to broaden its coverage from the particular program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance to an entire entity and related subunits receiving, directly or indirectly, any such aid, without regard to the nature or extent of the assistance or its proximity to or remoteness from the primary program or activity to be regulated or investigated.

A serious question should be raised as to whether it is reasonable to maintain the premise that receipt of Federal aid provides a basis for jurisdiction when, under the terms of the proposed bill, jurisdiction would arise regardless of how limited, indirect or remote from the program or activity being subjected to Federal control such receipt of Federal aid may be.

First, we believe that the potential implications of Grove City for college athletics are not as far-reaching as some seem to think they are. The award of financial aid to students including student-athletes remains subject to Title IX if any Federal funds are involved in the institution's scholarship or grant-in-aid program. Further, various forms of Federal assistance (for example, work-study aid to students employed in athletics programs, assistance in financing the construction of facilities and grants to other parts of the intercollegiate sports program) may provide the necessary basis for Title IX jurisdiction over the intercollegiate athletics programs of many (or most) institutions. Moreover, in addition to Title IX, the equal-protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and many existing constitutional and statutory provisions require equality of treatment without regard to sex. Finally, we believe that the higher education community has made a good-faith commitment to provide equality of athletics opportunity regardless of the precise limits of Federal Title IX jurisdiction.

Second, the legislation—as we understand it—would bring under the Federal rule-making and enforcement authority not only separate departments, but even separate campuses and institutions that neither receive Federal aid nor receive significant support from Federal assistance extended to other campuses and institutions. The bill provides, we believe, that if one BEOG-aided nursing student attends Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas, the K-State crew—a club sport not related to the varsity athletics program—would be under Title IX; the Big Eight Conference, Kansas City, Missouri, of which Kansas State is a member, would be under Federal inspection and enforcement, and a business extension course, if conducted by Kansas State University at Colby, Kansas, would be under Federal authority.

It is this type of pervasive protraction of Federal rule-making authority, paper work, investigation and enforcement that has led to many citizens' desire for decontrol, not more control. Illogical extension of Federal policy, we believe, weakens respect for that policy.

Thirdly, this type of contemplated expansion of Federal controls will bring added demands for inspection and enforcement—much of it directed at essentially inconsequential matters—thus weakening, in our view, the primary enforcement of vital aspects of civil rights. We all should keep our eyes on the fundamental objective—equal opportunity in the principal activities of our society for women as well as men. We believe that intercollegiate athletics and the NCAA, in one limited arena, have been in the forefront of our society in achieving that objective.

Looking Back

Cal State Fullerton lost its opening game to Mississippi State in the College World Series (June 1-8, 1979) but came back for victories over Connecticut, Arizona, Pepperdine and Arkansas (twice) to win its first NCAA Division I team championship. Tim Wallach drove in the winning run in the 2-1 championship-game victory over Arkansas. (June 30, 1979, NCAA News and National Collegiate Championships records book)

Johns Hopkins won its first NCAA lacrosse championship, defeating Maryland, 17-12, in a June 1, 1974, contest that ended the 20-year coaching career of Hopkins' Bob Scott. A record crowd of 11,500 saw the contest at Rutgers. (August 1, 1974, NCAA News)

Four track and field athletes won their events at the NCAA College Division Track and Field Championships June 12-13, 1964, and then repeated as individual champions a week later in the National Collegiate Track and Field Championships. Bob Hayes, Florida A&M, won the 220 in the College Division meet and the 200-meter dash in the National Collegiate Championships, while Charles Craig of Fresno State, triple jump; John Rambo of Long Beach State, high jump, and Alex Schulten, Bowdoin, hammer throw, also won in both meets. he'll try to give all the credit to coach Pell. Well, I owe coach a lot, too, and Bo Bayer, and the University of Florida. But it was Ginsburg who was the driving force. He kept hounding me constantly about going back. Finally, I guess it all sank into my head."

Waters doesn't know it, but he already is a proven example to others. Even before it was worked out for Waters to get back into school, Bayer received a handwritten letter from the youngster.

"I not only saved that letter," said Bayer, "but I had copies made and distributed to every single football player here. I took off his name because I didn't want to embarrass him."

Bayer had attached the following notation atop the copies he passed out: "Fellows—please look at this and think of your future when you feel that studying is not that important. I care about you and don't want to see any of you in this position." Signed, Bo.

"Dear Mr. Bayer:

"Thank you for your help in finding out how many hours I need to graduate. I'm very excited about getting back into school. I guess you can't see the importance of getting a degree until you have been out working at minimal jobs like I have. . . . For the past month I have been unemployed, since the company I was working for laid off everybody.

"Thank you for your help once more. . . . Sincerely, Tony Waters."

Waters' career statistics at the University of Florida show 28 carries, 72 net yards, 0 touchdowns.

Those stats don't make Heisman Trophy winners.

Now, at 26 years of age, he can add one more statistic: a college degree.

That will help make him a winner.

Championships Highlights

Ducks 'Cruz' to Division I men's track title

Joaquim Cruz won both the 800 and 1,500 to help Oregon to its first NCAA Division I Men's Outdoor Track Championships title in 22 years.

The Ducks scored 113 points before a partisan crowd at Hayward Field on the University of Oregon campus May 28-June 2 to defeat second-place Washington State.

Oregon shared the team title in 1970 and 1965, but 1962 was the last outright championship for the Ducks. The 1984 victory put Oregon into a four-way tie for second for the total number of championships.

Cruz defended his title in the 800 with a time of 1:45.10 and then captured the 1,500 the next day in 3:36.48. The 800-1,500 double victory was last accomplished by Villanova's Don Paige in 1979.

Oregon scored 79 points in the middle-distance and distance events, with a third in the 1,500; a fifth and sixth in the 3,000; a third, sixth and ninth in the 5,000, and a 10th in the 10,000—in addition to Cruz' finishes.

Oregon's Kory Torpenning was second in the pole vault, and the Ducks were 11th in the 400-meter hurdles, seventh in the hammer, and fourth and eighth in the javelin.

Washington State, the premeet favorite, scored 94½ points in 10 events, including one first place and four seconds.

The Cougars finished first and second in the 5,000 and were second in the 100, 3,000-meter steeplechase and triple jump.

Arkansas, the NCAA indoor champion in March, finished third with 85 points. The Razorbacks' Mike Conley scored the only other double victory in the meet, taking first in the long jump and triple jump.

Cal State Northridge does it the hard way

Coming back from the losers' bracket is not the easiest way to win a national title, but it worked for Cal State Northridge in the 1984 NCAA Division II Baseball Championship, played May 26-30 in Riverside, California.

The Matadors defeated Florida Southern, 10-0 and 10-5, in the final two games to win their first title since 1970. Five-time winner Florida Southern defeated Northridge, 7-6, in the second round.

Cal State Northridge pitcher Jim Walker stopped the Moccasins of Florida Southern on four hits in the finale for his second victory. Northridge second baseman Perry Husband, the tournament's outstanding player, scored four runs.

After Bobby Green's two-run home run gave Florida Southern an early lead, first baseman Dick Jaquez hit a three-run shot to put Northridge on top. The Matadors widened the gap to 6-2 before Florida Southern closed to 6-5 in the eighth inning. In the bottom of the eighth, Northridge scored four unearned runs to break the game open.

Cal State Northridge, which finished 45-21-1, set up the rematch by defeating New Haven and Troy State after the early loss. Florida Southern, expecting a rebuilding year, finished 47-15. The Moccasins had scored 36 runs in three games before being shut out by Steve Cota and held in check by Walker.

Joining Walker and Husband on the all-tournament team were teammates Mike Ellison (catcher), Mike Solomon (outfield), Mark Bon (designated hitter) and Cota (pitcher). Other all-tournament players were infielders Dave Banks (Troy State), Johnnie Pleicones (Florida Southern) and Don Samra (Florida Southern); outfielders Mike Workman (Florida Southern) and Chris Barrett (Columbus), and pitcher Mike Raczka (New Haven).

Seminoles sprint to Division I women's title

Florida State cashed in on its sprint strength, won five individual events and captured its first team title in the NCAA Division I Women's Outdoor Track Championships May 28-June 2 at the University of Oregon.

Led by Randy Givens' victories in the 100 and 200, the Seminoles scored 126 points in those five events, using only five individuals.

Those points would have been enough to beat second-place Tennessee, which scored 124 points. The Seminoles also scored in five more events.

Florida State's Brenda Cliette was second in the 100 and 200. Marita Payne won the 400, and Florida State captured the 400-meter and mile relays.

The 200 was the most productive event for coach Gary Wenckler's Seminoles. In addition to the scoring by Givens and Cliette, Payne was third, Janet Davis was sixth and Michelle Finn was ninth.

Tennessee's Joetta Clark was a repeat champion in the 800 for the Lady Vols' lone individual championship. The Volunteers were second in both relays and the heptathlon and scored in 13 events.

Stanford was third with 71 points, helped by Patti Sue Plumer's victory in the 5,000. Oregon was fourth with 64 points. The Ducks' Claudette Groenendaal won the 1,500, and Kathy Hayes captured the 10,000. Both set meet records.

Other records were set by Wisconsin's Cathy Branta in the 3,000, Iowa State's Nawal El Moutawakil in the 400-meter hurdles and San Diego State's Ramona Pagel in the shot put.

Texas' Terri Turner set a record in the triple jump, the first time ever for the event, in the preliminaries. Her 44-4/4 effort in the finals was wind-aided and not allowed as a record. She jumped a nonwind-aided 42-3/2 in the qualifying rounds to set a standard.

Softball crown is second in three years for UCLA

Facing elimination, UCLA used the pitching of Debbie Doom and the hitting of Tricia Mang to defeat Texas A&M in a pair of clutch victories to win the 1984 NCAA Division I Women's Softball Championship.

It was the Bruins' second title in three years. They swept five games in the 1982 Softball College World Series. This time, an early loss to defending champion Texas A&M forced UCLA to play catchup on the final day of the series, played May 23-29 in Omaha, Nebraska.

UCLA's 1982 hero, Debbie Doom, rose to the occasion again. Doom won all five of UCLA's games in the 1982 series and pitched both 1-0 decisions this year. She was 4-1 in this year's tournament, allowing two runs in 38 2/3 innings.

Designated hitter Tricia Mang provided the necessary offense. In the first game, Mang singled home Mary Ricks in the sixth inning; in the finale, Mang's home run in the bottom of the 13th inning was the difference.

Shawn Andaya lost both games after entering the final day with 33 scoreless innings—a 25-inning shutout over Cal Poly-Pomona and a 2-0, eight-inning decision over Doom.

Lost in the final-day heroics was the pitching of Northwestern freshman Lisa Ishikawa. Ishikawa struck out 55 in 35 2/3 innings, including 18 strikeouts in a 1-0, 13-inning loss to Texas A&M. Ishikawa held the Aggies hitless until the 11th inning.

Adelphi's Julie Bolduc pitched the tournament's only no-hitter, while UCLA's Tracy Compton backed up Doom with a nine-inning shutout victory.

UCLA finished the season 45-6; Texas A&M was 51-18.

Ramapo pitching holds up for title in Division III

A pair of all-America pitchers were the difference as Ramapo defeated defending champion Marietta, 5-4, and captured the 1984 NCAA Division III Baseball Championship.

Jim Buntzen was given an early 4-0 lead but ran into trouble in the eighth inning. After the first two Marietta batters singled, Ramapo pitcher John Spazante ended the threat after allowing a run on a wild pitch. Spazante, who already had two relief victories, saved the decision for Buntzen.

Ramapo won its first three games in the tournament, played May 31-June 3 in Marietta, Ohio. The Roadrunners were forced to play an extra contest when Marietta took a 10-6 victory just prior to the title game. Scott McVicar's three runs batted in and Terry Mulholland's pitching led Marietta's victory.

The Roadrunners were never behind in the finale. Jerry Mayo keyed a pair of two-run innings with two early run-scoring singles to knock out starter Ron Fama. After the Pioneers cut the gap to 4-2, Ramapo scored the winning run in the fourth inning when Vin Jiles was safe on an error and scored on Derek Bastinck's double. Bastinck was the tournament's most outstanding player.

Marietta had to come back from a 1-0 first-round loss to Montclair State. If it were possible to "save" runs, Marietta coach Don Schaly must have looked for some in the finale. Last year, the Pioneers took a record-setting 36-8 victory over Otterbein to capture the title.

Ramapo's tournament success gave the Roadrunners a 35-11 season record and its first national baseball title. Marietta fell to 53-6-1 in earning its third runner-up award. The Pioneers won championships in 1981 and 1983.

Bastinck, a designated hitter, was one of three Ramapo players selected to the all-tournament team. Others were Spazante and first baseman Kevin Ennis.

Other all-tournament selections were catcher Jeff Chaney, second baseman Scott McVicar and pitcher Terry Mulholland of Marietta; shortstop Kevin Reichardt and outfielder Tom Jaremko of Wisconsin-Oshkosh; outfielder Mike Nicosia and pitcher

Coaches name all-America baseball teams

Five players whose teams qualified for the College World Series were named to the 1984 Division I all-America team selected by the American Baseball Coaches Association.

Outfielder Oddibe McDowell of top-ranked Arizona State and second baseman Bill Bates of defending champion Texas were among the selections. Others included shortstop Barry Larkin of Michigan, pitcher Todd Simmons of Cal State Fullerton and designated hitter Pete Incaviglia of Oklahoma State.

In Division II, second baseman Mark Altobella of Lewis was a repeater. Altobella, a senior, batted .412 with 13 home runs and 57 runs batted in. Among the other first-team selections was outfielder Mike Solomon of national champion Cal State Northridge.

In Division III, three of the six finalists in the 1984 Division III Baseball Championship each placed two players on the division's all-America team, announced prior to the division's finals series by the ABCA.

Defending champion Marietta was represented by pitchers Terry Mulholland and Jim Kennedy; Ramapo placed pitchers John Spazante and Jim Buntzen, and Glassboro State was represented by first baseman James Paulsen and third baseman Rich Datz.

Softball academic team selected

Bonnie Kinne, a pitcher from Western Michigan with a 3.930 grade-point average in biomedical sciences, received the most votes in balloting for the 1984 academic all-America women's softball team announced by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Kinne, who compiled a 19-6 record and 0.43 earned-run average, was one of two pitchers named to the first team in the university division. Stacey Boyette, a 4.000 student in chemistry at East Carolina, was the other pitcher named to the 10-woman first team.

The repeaters on the university division first team were Donna Hurley, third baseman at Villanova, and Becky Suttman, outfielder from Pacific.

Academic and athletic qualities both were present among those named to the first teams in the university and college divisions. The group had a combined grade-point average of 3.770 (4.000 scale). On the playing field, the four pitchers had a combined 0.74 ERA; and all 16 position players had batting averages better than

Legislative Assistance

Column No. 11

1984 preseason football practice

NCAA Bylaw 3-1-(a)-(2) sets forth the three methods of determining when an institution may commence preseason football practice. An institution shall not begin practice before the following dates:

1. The 19th day before its first scheduled intercollegiate game, or
2. The 22nd day before the next to last Saturday in September, or
3. That date that will permit a maximum of 29 "practice opportunities" prior to its first scheduled intercollegiate game. "Practice opportunities" are defined by the provisions of Bylaw 3-1-(b).

The information below illustrates by example the application of Bylaws 3-1-(d) and 3-1-(e) in determining permissible days to issue equipment, have medical examinations and take squad pictures and to establish, in Divisions I-A and I-AA, orientation periods for new students. The example uses a Monday as the first permissible day of practice per Bylaw 3-1-(a)-(2).

Division I-A: Monday—freshmen may report for evening meal (no meetings); Tuesday—medicals and issuance of equipment for freshmen, orientation No. 1; Wednesday—orientation No. 2; Thursday—orientation No. 3; Friday—orientation No. 4, varsity may report for evening meal (no meetings); Saturday—freshmen and varsity pictures, medicals, and issuance of equipment for varsity; Sunday—no activities; Monday—first day of practice.

Division I-AA: Monday—no activities; Tuesday—no activities; Wednesday—freshmen may report for evening meal (no meetings); Thursday—medicals and issuance of equipment for freshmen, orientation No. 1; Friday—orientation No. 2, varsity may report for evening meal (no meetings); Saturday—freshman and varsity pictures, medicals and issuance of equipment for varsity; Sunday—no activities; Monday—first day of practice.

Divisions II and III: Monday—no activities; Tuesday—no activities; Wednesday—no activities; Thursday—no activities; Friday—team may report for evening meal (no meetings); Saturday—freshmen and varsity pictures, medicals, and issuance of equipment for freshmen and varsity; Sunday—no activities; Monday—first day of practice.

Please note that, in the example, on the day that practice is not permitted (i.e., the evening on which the student-athletes may report; the Saturday used for medical exams, issuance of equipment and taking of pictures, and the Sunday before practice may begin), no practice may occur. "Practice" is any meeting, activity or instruction held at the direction of, or supervised by, any member or members of an institution's coaching staff. Engaging in any or all of the following activities on any day constitutes practice: field or floor practice, "chalk talk," lecture or the discussion or showing of motion pictures.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

Anchorage placed on probation

The University of Alaska, Anchorage, has been placed on probation for a two-year period by the NCAA Committee on Infractions as a result of violations occurring in the conduct of the university's intercollegiate men's basketball program.

The penalty imposed by the NCAA prohibits the university from awarding the value of more than two new financial aid awards in men's basketball for the 1984-85 academic year.

The university's future eligibility for television appearances and post-season tournaments was not affected.

"In considering the information developed in this case," said Frank J. Remington, NCAA Committee on Infractions chair, "the committee was concerned that the violations in the case indicated a lack of attention to NCAA regulations on the part of members of the men's basketball coaching staff. To demonstrate the committee's concern," Remington continued, "the penalty will include in-person reviews of the athletics policies and procedures of the university by the NCAA staff."

"In addition," Remington said, "the committee determined that a reduction in the total value of grants-in-aid available to the university in the sport of men's basketball will serve as a meaningful penalty that will appropriately affect the progress of the basketball program."

The committee found violations related to extra benefits, inducements, transportation, recruiting contacts and tryouts.

The following is a complete text of the penalty imposed and a summary of violations found in the case.

Penalty to be imposed upon institution

1. The University of Alaska, Anchorage, shall be publicly reprimanded and censured and placed on probation for a period of two years, effective May 25, 1984, it being understood that should any portion of the penalty in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalty shall be reconsidered by the NCAA; further, during this period of probation, the NCAA shall review the athletics policies and procedures of the university.

2. During the 1984-85 academic year, the university's total value of countable financial aid awards in the sport of men's basketball may not exceed the total value of the countable aid that was in effect for members of the 1983-84 men's team during that academic year who return to the university for the 1984-85 academic year, plus the value of two new financial aid awards.

Summary of violations of NCAA legislation

1. NCAA Bylaws 1-1-(b)-(1) and 1-8-(g) [inducements and transportation]—(a) During May 1982, an assistant basketball coach arranged improper financial benefits for a prospective student-athlete and his father to travel by commercial airline from their home to Anchorage, and (b) during August 1982, the head basketball coach arranged for a prospective student-athlete to obtain a one-way commercial airline ticket on credit from a local travel agency in order for the young man to travel from his home to Anchorage to enroll and begin classes at the university.

2. NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) [extra benefits]: (a) During the 1982-83 academic year, the head basketball coach provided a loan of cash to a student-athlete, and (b) during the 1982-83 academic year, the head basketball coach rented his personal automobile to a student-athlete for a period of three months at a reduced rental cost.

3. NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) and Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1) [extra benefits and inducements]—During a period beginning in the summer of 1980 and continuing through at least the summer of 1982, members of the university's basketball coaching staff and representatives of the university's athletics interests provided numerous prospective and enrolled student-athletes, members of their families and friends lodging or entertainment for short periods in

Player-agent committee approves registration form in May meeting

More than 700 individuals have requested copies of the player-agent registration form, which was approved by the NCAA Special Committee on Player Agents during a May 30-31 meeting in Dallas. The forms should be available for distribution by the end of the summer.

In another step dealing with registration of those agents who desire to represent student-athletes, the special committee recommended that the NCAA Council formulate a sanctioning procedure for those agents who take part in the registration program and fail to comply with any or all of the basic agreement.

"For example, an agent could register under the program but fail to contact the athletics director at an institution before initiating contact with a student-athlete on campus," said John H. Leavens, assistant director of legislative services. "The committee believes it is necessary to implement some type of sanctioning procedure in the event of a breach of the agreement."

The plan calls for a review body that would hear both sides of an incident involving a possible breach of the agent-registration agreement. The review board could remove an agent's name from the list of registered individuals if an infraction were discovered.

The committee recommended that, upon adoption of the proposal, it be designated as the official review board for the first year of the program.

In other business, the committee recommended that the Association urge the National Basketball Association to develop an information network that could solve the problem of tampering by franchises, similar to a recent incident involving the Portland Trailblazers.

Under the proposed plan, an institution formally could request a report on the professional potential of a student-athlete.

The team or teams involved then would prepare such a report and provide it to the NCAA national office, which would forward it to the requesting institution.

The committee also recommended that the NCAA Council sponsor legislation at the 1985 Convention similar to that offered in 1984 Convention Proposal No. 119, which was withdrawn.

"The committee felt it was important that student-athletes be given an opportunity to purchase liability insurance against a disabling injury that would prohibit him or her from pursuing a chosen professional and business career," Leavens said.

The committee recommended that the Council revise and resubmit the 1984 Convention Proposal No. 119. The legislation would allow a student-athlete to secure a loan from an accredited financial institution against the individual's future earnings potential for the purpose of purchasing liability insurance.

The new legislation would permit the student-athlete to deal directly only with the financial institution from which a loan was to be secured. No third party would be permitted to take part in the action.

Finally, the committee recommended the development of a video presentation detailing the experience of former student-athletes with player agents, along with a rundown of the resource information available to individuals wishing to explore their potential as professional athletes.

The tape or film would be shown at high school and college all-star games and would be a criterion for their certification. The presentation also would be made available to summer camps, high schools and colleges, and other amateur athletics organizations.

Men's Tennis Committee proposes dates changes

A proposed change in championships dates and sites and a recommendation to establish an NCAA tennis rules committee were among actions taken last week by the NCAA Men's Tennis Committee at a meeting in Kansas City.

Committee recommendations will be forwarded in August to the NCAA Executive Committee for its approval.

The change in dates would delay each of the three division championships one week in 1985 and 1986. The dates would be as follows: Division I—May 18-26 in 1985, May 17-25 in 1986; Divisions II and III—May 13-19 in 1985, May 12-18 in 1986. The committee also chose California State University, Northridge, as host institution for the 1985 and 1986 Division II championships, contingent upon further budget review.

The committee will recommend the establishment of an NCAA men's tennis rules committee, which would write and publish NCAA rules for the 1985-86 season. NCAA play currently is conducted under the rules of the United States Tennis Association; however, it was the committee's feeling that USTA rules do not adequately cover team competition.

In response to an Executive Committee request to study squad size, the committee recommended that the official squad size for NCAA championships be eight players. The current limit is seven players, with an eighth player permissible if included at the institution's expense.

If the increased squad size is accepted by the Executive Committee, the tennis committee will ask that the maximum number of players in the Divisions II and III championships be increased from 90 to 98. The committee also recommended that the host institution's players not be counted in the maximums for Divisions II and III.

The committee also recommended to:

- Play Nos. 1, 3 and 5 singles first, followed by Nos. 2, 4 and 6 singles and then doubles, when three courts are in use during play in team championships.

- Increase the stipend for the head referee in Divisions II and III championships from $200 to $300.

- Fine institutions $200 for failure to report regular-season results to regional advisory committees. The position individuals played in each match also must be reported.

- Allow logos, not to exceed a 1½-inch square, on all items of wearing apparel, not just restricted to the uniform as is now stipulated.

- Consider fining those individuals who fail to comply with the interview policy at NCAA championships, to be determined on a case-by-case basis.

- Continue the Division I championships' association with Sportscast Productions, Inc., a reporting service for home-town newspapers and radio stations.

- Not seed all 16 teams in the Division I team championships.

- Continue to support the inclusion of women in the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association.

- Continue to pursue possibilities in the NCAA's official ball program.

AIAW decides not to appeal court's ruling

The Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women will not appeal a May 18 ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit favoring the NCAA. The court ruled that the NCAA did not violate antitrust laws in offering governance and championships opportunities for women.

According to the Chronicle of Higher Education, Margot Polivy, the AIAW's legal counsel, said the AIAW leaders had decided not to appeal the court ruling and would "devote their energies to improving women's athletics within other structures."

The circuit court's ruling was reported in the May 23 issue of The NCAA News.

News completes second 46-issue year

With this issue of The NCAA News, the 46-issue format, initiated in June of 1982, now has completed its second full cycle of publication.

The News, as the primary information vehicle of the Association, has continued to expand in its second year of operation, publishing at times as many as 20 pages in one issue.

Circulation, which was 14,000 in May 1982 and 20,000 at this time last year, has continued to increase, with the latest figures showing 21,600 subscribers.

Several new features appeared during the second year of operation, including new standing columns such as Briefly in the News, Legislative Assistance, Council Summary and Executive Committee Summary.

Classified advertising has continued to grow steadily, with three full pages sold for the April 11, 1984, issue.

A survey of member institutions is currently under way to determine what features readers enjoy. The survey will be used to help The NCAA News staff better meet the needs of personnel at NCAA member institutions. Results of the survey should be completed later this month.

After the June 13 and June 20 issues, the News will revert to an every-other-week format for the summer. Summer issues will be published July 4, July 18, August 1, August 15 and August 29. The News then shifts to Monday publication beginning September 10 and will be published weekly on Mondays through the first week in December.

Briefly in the News

DePauw University's baseball team, duplicating the efforts of the football and basketball teams, finished its home schedule undefeated this year after winning only one game. Rain took care of every one of the other 23 contests. The football team was 5-0 at home; the basketball team, which placed third in the NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship, had a 15-0 home season to extend its unbeaten skein to 23 home games. Franklin and Marshall University completed its sixth consecutive men's dual track meet schedule without a loss. With its 10 victories this season, the men's team, coached by Bill Iannicelli, has a streak of 67 meets dating from 1978.

The University of California, Los Angeles, has formally dedicated the Los Angeles Tennis Center, site of the NCAA Division I Women's Tennis Championships. The $7.25-million complex, located west of Pauley Pavilion, has eight lighted concrete courts, a main stadium with permanent seating for 5,800, a two-level clubhouse inside the stadium with lockers, offices, a dining area and restrooms. Mount St. Mary's College has received a $5 million commitment for the construction of a multipurpose athletics/recreation/convocation complex from Baltimore philanthropist Henry J. Knott. The complex will feature an arena-convocation center with seating for more than 3,300. An adjoining component will house five multipurpose courts suitable for basketball, volleyball and tennis, along with handball and racquetball courts and a 200-meter track.

Pennsylvania State University will install a lighting system for Beaver Stadium at a cost not to exceed $575,000. Twelve years after he won a freshman letter, Seth Rosen received his first varsity letter with the men's swimming team at Tufts University. Rosen is 31. He left school after his freshman season, attended two other institutions and then enlisted in the Marine Corps, where he served six years. Coach Don Megerle, who joined the Tufts staff when Rosen was a freshman, persuaded Rosen to enroll at Tufts again. "He made a total contribution to the program. It was like having another assistant coach in the program," Megerle said of Rosen. Rosen said, "There's nothing like having to go against someone else to get a true measure of yourself."

Jeff Kubiak, punter for the U.S. Air Force Academy football team, has been named the winner of the fourth annual Stan Bates Award as the top scholar-athlete in the Western Athletic Conference. Kubiak set the Air Force punting record in his junior year with a 43.4 average. He graduated in the top 20 percent of his class with a 3.790 grade-point average in international affairs. The award is named for the former WAC commissioner. Alma College's Bahlke Stadium, in use since 1954, will be demolished because recommendations for repairs were so extensive that it became no longer cost-effective to maintain the structure. "We have long-range plans for developing outdoor athletics facilities, but there's not a timetable attached to those plans at this point," said Jon Groteluschen, Alma vice-president for finance.

All-America softball teams named

UCLA pitcher Debbie Doom, who led the Bruins to their second NCAA championship in three years, was among the women's softball players selected to the 1984 Division I all-America team by the National Softball Coaches Association. Northwestern's Lisa Ishikawa, who set an NCAA regular-season strikeout record, also was selected, along with Tricia Mang of UCLA, whose home run gave the Bruins the national title.

In Division II, championship hero Kathy Slaten of Cal State Northridge led the all-America selections. Slaten pitched three shutouts for the second consecutive year in leading Northridge to another championship.

Five Trenton State players earned first-team Division III honors, easing their disappointment after the Lions were upset by Buena Vista in the Division III championship. First baseman Karen Youngman was selected for the second consecutive year.

SWC sues TV firm, alleges default

The Southwest Athletic Conference has filed suit against TVS, Inc., alleging default on three payments of $2.7 million. TVS and the Southwest Conference last year signed a three-year, $8.7-million contract to televise regular-season men's basketball games and the league's postseason tournament.

Edwin P. Horner, faculty athletics representative at Baylor University, told the Waco, Texas, Tribune-Herald that the conference has not received any of the first three scheduled payments, due July 15, 1983, and March 4 and April 1 of this year. The money was to be divided equally among the conference's nine members.

"TVS has totally defaulted on their payments," Horner told the Waco paper. "We have no intentions of dragging our feet and putting this matter off any longer. The lawsuit took up a lot of our time at the conference meeting."

"There were a lot of items we could not dispose of because of this. We decided there was no need to fool around further."

The suit was filed May 25 in a state district court in Dallas.

CFA adopts two television plans

Members of the College Football Association, meeting June 3 at an annual convention in Dallas, adopted two contingency television plans that would go into effect this fall if the U.S. Supreme Court strikes down the NCAA Football Television Plan on antitrust grounds.

One of the plans would include the Pacific-10 and Big Ten Conferences, non-CFA members, while the other would include only CFA members. The CFA packages would permit three telecasts each Saturday in most markets and would allow a school to have as many as four of its 1984 games televised nationally.

Both plans would allow ABC and CBS to retain rights they were awarded under terms of the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan for the coming season. The packages will be presented to the networks should the Supreme Court ruling void the NCAA's Football Television Plan.

costs."

Toner said he doubted whether the revenues generated by men's sports can be expected to continue to pay the increased costs of women's programs.

Toner said, "It seems to me that it is time for women leaders to concentrate on how they can stimulate and enlarge the income from women's programs.

"Significantly, in 1982-83, NCAA expenditures for 30 women's championships that were nonrevenue-producing exceeded the NCAA's expenditures for the 29 men's championships that were nonrevenue-producing by 8.4 percent.

"I merely cite this information to underscore what I believe has been the NCAA's fulfillment of its commitment to aid in the development and advancement of women's intercollegiate sports. This is an ongoing commitment," Toner said. "It is, however, a commitment of equal treatment and equal opportunity for women's and men's athletics."

"As we look forward beyond 1985 (women's programs within the NCAA governance structure are to comply with NCAA rules and regulations by August 1, 1985), it seems to me that all of us devoted to the best features of intercollegiate athletics should make certain that the dollars generated almost exclusively by men's intercollegiate athletics are spent equitably in the nonrevenue-producing-championships areas so that both women and men have equal opportunities for intercollegiate athletics competition," Toner concluded.

There was unanimous approval in each division for legislation to require at least two candidates for each elective office in the NCAA governance structure. It also was requested that a show of support be indicated in the minutes of the meeting for H.R. 5490, a civil-rights proposal in the United States Congress.

A summary of discussion of legislative proposals, by division, follows:

Division I

Recruiting

Favored the concept of a tryout rule or audition rule that would include the sport of basketball.

Favored the concept that a high school senior should be permitted to attend and participate in a summer camp without restrictions.

Favored that the tryout rule be clarified to define permissible "open" competition as indicated; were of the opinion that the measure the Council has agreed to support defines "open" too broadly.

Favored a "quiet period" surrounding the initial letter of intent and that it should apply to all sports.

Favored legislation to prohibit any athletics department staff member from a member institution or representative of an institution's athletics interests to be present during the signing of a National Letter of Intent.

Supported the suggestion that prohibition against the use of an institutional or conference letter of intent or financial aid agreement involving a signing date prior to the initial signing date in the National Letter of Intent program be expanded to apply to all sports.

Supported the concept that maximum number of in-person, off-campus recruiting contacts per prospect be reduced below the current limitation of six for Division I; recommended consideration of five contacts.

Supported legislation to limit the number of times a prospective student-athlete could be observed off campus for talent evaluation.

Favored by a small majority that the maximum number of expense-paid visits that can be taken by each prospective student-athlete be reduced below the current limitation of five.

Playing and practice seasons

Favored the concept that there be limitations on playing and practice seasons. Supported numerical restrictions based on competitive dates in all sports. Agreed that the team and individual sports should be treated in like manner and be based on the numerical restriction.

Recommended that the golf limits be increased from 30 to 33 (as recommended in 1984 Convention Proposal No. 123) and that volleyball outside the traditional season be limited to seven instead of 14.

Supported that volleyball (outside the traditional season) contests not be allowed until 24 hours after the signing date of the National Letter of Intent.

Eligibility

Supported the concept that the five-year rule in Division I be changed to a 10-semester or 15-quarter rule (similar to Divisions II and III) with the added requirement that any year of outside competition would count against the total number of years of competition.

Opposed the recommendation that transfer students from Divisions I or II institutions to Division III institutions be immediately eligible for intercollegiate athletic competition without meeting the normal transfer rule or the current exception provisions.

Academic requirements

Noted that the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education recommendation on academic issues would be referred to the NCAA Presidents' Commission.

Opposed the recommendation that a student-athlete who is on "scholastic probation" should not be eligible to participate in intercollegiate athletic competition.

Governance

Recommended that the primary women's athletics administrators meeting be continued and that it be held in conjunction with the Division I-A legislative meeting.

Recommended that 1984 Convention Proposal No. 40, which would provide for representation on the Council of a Division I conference sponsoring only women's sports, be submitted again for consideration at the 1985 Convention.

Recommended that midyear Council interpretations that have a significant financial impact on member institutions be reviewed with care and that significant changes begin at the start of the new academic year rather than midyear.

Recommended that there be at least two candidates for each elective office in the NCAA governance structure and that elections be conducted by mail ballot or secret ballot at the annual Convention.

Financial aid

Supported a proposal that consideration be given to allowing a student-athlete to receive need-based financial aid over and above a full grant-in-aid but not to exceed institutional maximum financial aid limitations on the value of aid from all sources.

Membership and classification

Supported proposal for legislation to specify that the sports sponsorship criteria definitions of Bylaw 11-4 are applicable to Division I women's programs in establishing required minimum numbers of contests and participants. It was recommended that in the sport of field hockey, the minimum number of contests be established at 11 for Division I; and in softball, that the minimum number be set at 27 for Division I. It was recommended that the required minimum number of participants in women's gymnastics should be five.

Championships

Supported proposal to amend executive regulations requiring that in women's team sports championships, at least four teams be seeded and placed in the bracket without regard to geographical location.

Supported concept that until such time as participation numbers of female student-athletes compared to male student-athletes approach the national average percentage of female students to male students on college campuses, a lower minimum sports sponsorship percentage should be required to establish or continue a women's championship than is required for men's championships.

Favored by a small margin that legislation be presented to reduce the minimum sports sponsorship percentage necessary for a division to establish a division championship in a particular sport.

Miscellaneous

Requested that the minutes of the meeting indicate support of H.R. 5490 and that the participants did not support the questions raised by the Administrative Committee.

Recommended that legislation be proposed to indicate that membership rules requiring a certain number of sports for men and women be reviewed as they relate to classification of men's and women's programs.

Division II

Eligibility

There was general agreement that six sports is an appropriate number as a minimum requirement for a women's program in Division II.

There was general support for the amendment of Bylaws 11-4-(a) and (b) to establish required minimum numbers of contests and participants for meeting women's sports sponsorship criteria. Some concern was expressed that a minimum of 24 softball games was too many for Division II.

There was general support for the concept of a one-year extension of eligibility under Bylaw 4-1-(b) for a student-athlete who becomes pregnant during her normal period of eligibility.

There was general support for an exception to the transfer rule similar to current Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(13) to permit student-athletes to move from Division I to Division II institutions without fulfilling a residence requirement.

Recruiting

There was general support for the establishment of a quiet period surrounding the initial National Letter of Intent signing date.

The meeting was fairly evenly divided concerning the question of imposing a prohibition against an institutional staff member or representative of a member institution's athletics interests being present during the signing of the National Letter of Intent and a restriction that the letter be mailed between the member institution and the prospective student-athlete.

There was substantial support for providing for tryouts for men's and women's sports.

There was substantial support for permitting high school seniors to participate in summer camps.

Some interest was expressed in providing an exception to the basketball-contact rule for a prospective student-athlete whose high school basketball season occurs at a time outside the traditional basketball season.

Academic requirements

There was no general support for a change in the existing Division II academic requirements.

Playing and practice seasons

There was general support for placing restrictions on the number of contests in each sport. The consensus was that if such limits are established, they should be the same for Division II as they are for Division I.

There was general support for permitting women basketball student-athletes to work in their institution's summer basketball camps.

There was a general consensus that preseason, alumni or media scrimmages should be included as contests that count toward the limits in a sport just as they do now in the sport of basketball.

Financial aid

There was no support expressed for a change in the existing Division II financial aid limitations.

Governance

There was general support for the concept of requiring that there be at least two candidates for each office in NCAA elections.

There was general discussion of regional representation on sports committees but no general support for a change of the current circumstances.

There was general support for retaining three-year terms for those serving on sports committees.

Additional topics

There was general support for the concept of seeding the top four teams in an NCAA women's championship without regard to region.

There was general support for the concept of prohibiting a Division I member institution from having a women's sport classified in Division II.

There was no general support for taking the authority to issue interpretations away from the Council. It was noted that the Council must be careful in reviewing the impact of an interpretation that is effective immediately.

There was general support for continuing the women's meeting as an annual event.

Division III

Eligibility

Supported the concept that the 10-semester or 15-quarter rule in Division III be amended to include a specific automatic extension of one year for a student-athlete who becomes pregnant during her normal period of eligibility.

Opposed by a small majority the suggestion that the hardship rule be amended to delete the requirement that the incapacitating injury must have occurred in the first half of the season.

Supported the concept of allowing transfers from Division I or Division II to Division III institutions to be immediately eligible without meeting the normal transfer rule or current exception provisions.

Supported treating transfers from NAIA institutions in accordance with Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(13) rather than (14).

Opposed the suggestion that financial aid officers be required to sign the eligibility compliance forms to certify that athletes did not receive any aid based on athletic ability; believed signature of faculty athletic representative was sufficient.

Playing and practice seasons

Supported the concept of limiting the playing and practice seasons in Division III but suggested that legislation be submitted to deal with each sport separately so as not to jeopardize the passage of an entire proposal because of disagreement with one or two limitations. Also suggested consideration be given to establishing a maximum number of games that would exclude a limited number of scrimmages, and to not counting games conducted for officials' ratings in the maximum number.

Championships

No clear consensus was expressed on the suggestion that sports committees be required to seed a specified number of teams nationally in women's sports; generally felt that each sport should be dealt with individually because of the various formats, requirements, etc.

Supported concept of lowering the minimum sponsorship requirements for establishing or continuing a women's championship.

Supported the submission of legislation at the 1985 Convention to establish championships in Division II women's soccer and Division III women's lacrosse.

Governance

Supported the concept that legislation should be submitted to require that regional representation on both national sports committees and regional advisory committees be based upon the number of institutions sponsoring the sport in that region.

Supported the resubmission of Proposal No. 40 from the 1984 Convention that would provide for representation on the Council of a Division I conference sponsoring only women's sports.

Supported the resubmission of Proposal No. 43 from the 1984 Convention that would delete the opportunity for conference members to vote on NCAA legislation.

Supported the authority of the Council to issue interpretations effective at midyear.

Supported the suggestion that there be at least two candidates for each elective office in the NCAA governance structure, including sports committees; some support, although lesser, for candidates to be elected by mail ballot.

Supported the suggestion that there be an annual meeting of primary women administrators of athletics programs from all three divisions to discuss legislative issues.

Recruiting

Opposed the suggestion that tryouts be permitted in men's or women's sports.

No consensus was expressed on whether high school seniors should be permitted to attend and participate in summer camps for which an NCAA member institution has responsibility in accordance with Case No. 412.

Miscellaneous

Supported suggestion that the NCAA express its total support of H.R. 5490 without questions or reservations.

Questioned whether there was any interest in resubmission of Proposal No. 162 from 1984 Convention (regarding Fugazy travel service); no clear consensus.

Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education.

•The NCAA membership structure, including the Division I autonomy issue (Proposal No. 37 at the 1984 Convention).

•Financial aid considerations, including defeated 1984 Convention Proposal No. 49 and reports by the Special Committee on Financial Assistance for Student-Athletes and the Special Council Subcommittee on Equivalency Awards.

•Implementation of legislation regarding player agents.

•Review of NCAA women's programs.

•Proposed revisions of the Association's tryout rule and the camp and clinic legislation.

Each group will report on its discussions and recommendations in a closing joint session at 10 a.m. June 8. The meeting will adjourn at noon that day.

The Division I Steering Committee will meet in the morning June 7 and again briefly after the summer meeting adjourns June 8. Division I Vice-President Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University, will chair the steering committee meeting.

In attendance will be more than 160 representatives of Division I voting allied conferences and independent institutions, in addition to the members of the Division I Steering Committee. Ade L. Sponberg, North Dakota State University, and Elizabeth A. Kruczek, Fitchburg State College, will attend as observers in their capacities as Divisions II and III vice-presidents, respectively.

Several changes had occurred as of June 4 in the listing of participants in the meeting as it appeared in the May 30 issue of The NCAA News. Gene Bartow, University of Alabama in Birmingham, was added to the list of basketball coaches selected by the National Association of Basketball Coaches, while the NABC also named Gary Williams, Boston College, to replace Jim Boeheim, Syracuse University. Another basketball coach, Davey Whitney of Alcorn State University, will be unable to attend.

Charley Scott, Mississippi State University, will replace Warner Alford, University of Mississippi, in the athletics directors session. Others originally listed who will be unable to participate: Robert J. Myslik, athletics director, Princeton University, and Pam Strathairn, primary woman administrator, Stanford University.

I-A members of the NCAA Council and representatives of the news media, is expected to exceed 300.

The 14 Division I-A Council members, who are serving as the planning committee for the meeting with NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis as chair, have appointed Col. John J. Clune, U.S. Air Force Academy, and Roy Kramer, Vanderbilt University, to chair two special committees for the June 28-29 session.

Clune will chair the Voting Committee, which includes David H. Adams, San Jose State University; Edward M. Bennett, Washington

State University; Ralph N. Floyd, Indiana University, Bloomington; Edwin P. Horner, Baylor University; Sam Jankovich, University of Miami (Florida), and George Swafford, Ball State University.

Kramer was named to chair the Credentials Committee, which includes John W. Sawyer, Wake Forest University, and Dick Towers, Kansas State University.

The Official Notice of the Division I-A meeting was mailed to all Division I-A members May 14, and the chief executive officer of each received the form for appointment of delegates with that mailing.
