193 participate in Division I summer meeting

A total of 193 representatives of member institutions and conferences participated in the second annual Division I summer meeting June 7-8 at the Westin Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

A complete summary of the recommendations and other consensus positions taken during the meeting will appear in the June 20 issue of The NCAA News, after transcripts of the sessions have been reviewed. That information also will be featured on the agenda for the first Division I-A midyear legislative meeting June 28-29 in Chicago.

The meeting included opening and closing joint sessions and separate meetings of faculty athletics representatives, directors of athletics, primary women administrators of athletics programs, conference executive officers, football coaches, and men's and women's basketball coaches.

Included among the 193 participants were 25 faculty representatives; 28 athletics directors; 22 primary women administrators; 31 conference executives; 19 football coaches; 19 men's basketball coaches; 19 women's basketball coaches; 20 members of the Division I Steering Committee, and 10 NCAA officers, observers and speakers.

Included in the last of those groups were NCAA President John L. Toner and Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis; speakers Frank H. Easterbrook, University of Chicago law professor; Milo R. Lude, director of athletics at the University of Washington, and Dr. James Puffer, University of California, Los Angeles; Betty Jaynes, Charles McClendon and Joseph R. Vancisin, executive directors of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association, American Football Coaches Association and National Association of Basketball Coaches, respectively, and observers Ade L. Sponberg and Elizabeth A. Kruczek, the Divisions II and III vice-presidents of the NCAA.

Davis, Puffer, Easterbrook and John D. Swofford, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, spoke at the opening general session, which was chaired by President Toner. Lude addressed several of the separate sessions on behalf of the Special NCAA Committee on Officiating Improvement (see related story on page 3 of this issue).

Chairs of the separate sessions were Charles H. Samson, faculty representatives; David L. Maggard, directors of athletics; Mikki Flowers, primary women administrators; Lewis A. Cryer, conference officers; Vincent J. Dooley, football coaches; Richard "Digger" Phelps (substituting for Bob Knight), men's basketball coaches, and Jody Conradt, women's basketball coaches.

Among the key developments during the meetings were these:

• Various groups expressed strong support for the drug-testing effort being developed by the Special Committee on Drug Testing and for the Association's attempts to control the activities of player agents.

• The delegates favored initiatives to strengthen academic standards for student-athletes, although a number of questions were raised regarding various details of a proposed academic reporting procedure. That procedure will be refined for consideration at the Division I-A meeting.

• The football coaches favored a two-team, one-game Division I-A football play-off, but the conference commissioners were opposed to the play-off concept.

• The men's and women's basketball coaches favored a "quiet period" surrounding the signing date for the National Letter of Intent, but the football coaches were opposed to that approach in their sport.

• Easterbrook, the NCAA's counsel of record in the current football television litigation before the U.S. Supreme Court, told the opening session that "there will be substantial uncertainty (regarding college football television controls) for many years to come." Easterbrook said the Supreme Court may make it impossible for institutions to have any type of cooperative agreement for televising college football. "I think it is very likely that if the Supreme Court does say the existing (NCAA) plan is unreasonably broad, the court will provide little guidance on what other plans would be appropriate."

"If the court agrees with the broadest per se argument made by Oklahoma and Georgia, it will be almost impossible for the NCAA, the CFA or even a conference to devise any television plan of any

Football television subcommittee named

A special subcommittee on NCAA Division I-A football television planning has been authorized to meet within 48 hours after the U.S. Supreme Court rules on the legality of the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan.

The NCAA Football Television Committee authorized the appointment of the nine-member subcommittee at a May 25 meeting. The subcommittee's primary charge will be to evaluate the Supreme Court's decision on the antitrust action brought by the Universities of Georgia and Oklahoma. The court's decision is expected before July 4.

Should the NCAA be required to alter its football television plan as adopted by the membership, the special subcommittee is to recommend to the Football Television Committee an alternative plan that would conform to legal requirements.

Each Division I-A allied member is invited to have a representative(s) appear before the subcommittee to offer advice that will assist the subcommittee in developing principles for future football television. Executive officers of Division I-A allied members will receive a Mailgram from the national office detailing the time, date and site of the subcommittee meeting. Each active NCAA Division I-A member also is invited to submit written comments and recommendations to the subcommittee.

Following the hearings, the subcommittee will prepare its recommendations for the Football Television Committee, which, in turn, will forward a revised or new plan to the NCAA Council. The Council will present the plan to the membership in a special meeting, authorized by the 1984 Convention.

The special meeting will be scheduled as soon as it is logistically feasible. In any event, it will be held no later than two weeks after the Council receives the recommendations. The special meeting will provide an open forum for Division I-A to determine its future football television policies.

"I encourage each Division I-A active and allied member to support this subcommittee's effort to administer an effective hearing process that will permit our group to develop principles for future television that best represent the needs of these constituencies," said John D. Swofford, chair of

Baughn, Davis to chair sessions at Division I-A legislative meeting

William H. Baughn, NCAA Council member from the University of Colorado, and NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis of Oregon State University will chair the two major sessions of the first Division I-A midyear legislative meeting June 28-29 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare, Chicago (Rosemont), Illinois.

Baughn, in his second year as the Big Eight Conference representative on the NCAA Council, will lead the discussion session, currently scheduled from 2 to 5 p.m. June 28. That session also may extend to the morning of June 29, based on the amount of legislation submitted by the June 21 deadline.

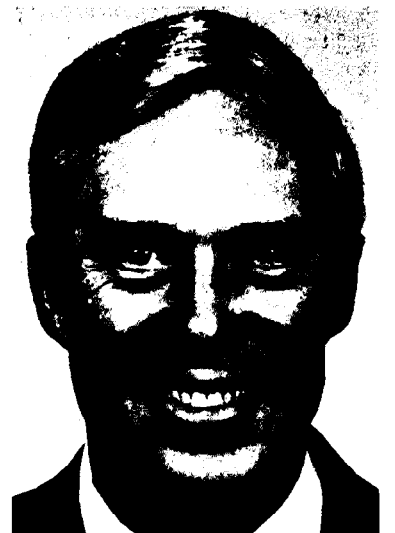

Davis, who is chairing the planning committee for the meeting, will chair the June 29 business session, at which the delegates will vote on all proposals submitted by June 21. Proposals receiving majority support will be sponsored by the Division I-A meeting for consideration at the 1985 NCAA Convention.

Davis is faculty athletics representative and director of the Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station at Oregon State. Baughn is dean of the Graduate School of Business and serves as faculty athletics representative at Colorado.

The management subcommittee of the planning committee for the meeting—which includes Baughn; Davis; Eugene F. Corrigan, director of athletics at the University of Notre Dame; Gwendolyn Norrell, NCAA Division I vice-president and faculty athletics representative at Michigan State University, and Hindman Wall, director of athletics at Tulane University—will conduct a telephone conference June 22 to review the legislation submitted by the June 21 deadline and to finalize the agenda for the discussion session.

William H. Baughn

Already identified as topics in that session are these:

The seven-year 'trial' in Las Vegas

In November 1972, the NCAA initiated an investigation under its official enforcement procedure into the basketball program at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. Three hearings were conducted to ascertain the truth of the charges of violations of NCAA rules. The institution and its head men's basketball coach, Jerry Tarkanian, were represented by legal counsel, who vigorously defended against the charges and attacked the integrity of NCAA enforcement personnel. Nevertheless, the Committee on Infractions found extensive violations of NCAA legislation. Accordingly, it proposed certain penalties, including a "show cause" order that required, as disciplinary action by the institution, the suspension of Tarkanian from coaching for two years. Upon appeal by the institution to the NCAA Council, the findings and penalty relating to Tarkanian were upheld.

That penalty never has been fully implemented due to legal actions taken by Tarkanian. Because the case of Tarkanian vs. NCAA and UNLV was scheduled to begin in Nevada state court this week—nearly seven years after the NCAA's enforcement action—the NCAA News believes it timely to review the issues in the case, especially in light of the extended difficulties encountered by the Association in seeing that properly approved penalties are applied by the institution in the case of its head basketball coach.

The NCAA formally notified the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, February 26, 1976, that it was conducting an official inquiry into alleged improprieties associated with its basketball program. The Committee on Infractions conducted three separate hearings concerning the charges and the evidence produced—November 14, 1976, in Kansas City, Missouri; December 13-14, 1976, in San Diego, California, and March 13, 1977, in Kansas City.

Those hearings resulted in the Committee on Infractions submitting its Confidential Report No. 123 (47) to UNLV April 26, 1977. The institution appealed a substantial number of the findings, as well as the penalty, and UNLV's representatives appeared before the NCAA Council August 22, 1977.

The Council informed UNLV August 25, 1977, that it had accepted the findings of the Committee on Infractions and the recommended penalty. A press release was disseminated by the NCAA announcing the probation. One of the penalties required UNLV to "show cause" why it should not suspend coach Tarkanian from active coaching duties for two years.

The institution conducted its own hearing for coach Tarkanian September 6, 1977, as required by the NCAA enforcement procedure. The institution, September 7, 1977, suspended Tarkanian from his coaching activities for two years—with specifically stated reluctance.

Almost seven years later, the trial is scheduled to begin this week in a Las Vegas state court. It is designed to determine if Tarkanian ever will have to serve the NCAA penalty imposed against him. This trial represents a continuing effort by Tarkanian to frustrate the NCAA decision, including a previous legal suit and a hearing before a U.S. congressional committee initiated by the then Nevada congressman from Las Vegas.

Central to the issue is that, despite several hearings in which he personally participated, Tarkanian did not accede to the

would be established whereby a coach and his institution could engage in a lawsuit in the absence of the NCAA (the representative of other member institutions' interests) in order to frustrate an Association penalty against the coach.

After the Nevada Supreme Court decision, the NCAA was named as party defendant July 12, 1979; and, without notice to the NCAA, the injunction against suspension of Tarkanian was continued by the Las Vegas state court as a temporary restraining order, thus maintaining the status quo.

The NCAA petitioned jointly with UNLV August 6, 1979, to the U.S. District Court for the District of Nevada to remove the case to Federal court. The U.S. District Court remanded the joint petition request to the Las Vegas state court February 19, 1980.

The NCAA encountered continuing difficulty in bringing the matter to trial. The state court on July 27, 1982, scheduled a trial date of January 24, 1983. It subsequently (August 10, 1982) continued the trial until April 1983. The trial was reset January 20, 1983, until September 19, 1983, and again continued due to the illness of a judge scheduled to hear the case. Finally, the NCAA was notified September 20, 1983, that the trial had been scheduled June 11, 1984.

After seven seasons of coaching under a court injunction that prevented his suspension, coach Tarkanian once again will air his objections to the NCAA enforcement procedure. He will charge lack of due process and bias by past and current NCAA staff members—particularly Warren S. Brown, S. David Berst, Hale McMennamin and William B. Hunt. The objections will be the same and the state court system will be the same. This time, the NCAA will be present to actively defend its procedures.

This is a story of the perseverance occasionally needed in implementing a voluntary enforcement procedure. The trial this week, it is hoped, will provide full disclosure of the violations found, the basis for those findings and the justification for the penalty as seen by representatives of institutions of higher education acting within an educational enforcement structure.

If nothing further is achieved, a salutary purpose will have been served in that the NCAA, in behalf of its member institutions, will have insisted that it be heard in local legal proceedings that to date have considered only one side.

Editorial

penalties imposed by his peers within an approved enforcement program of educational institutions.

Instead, he first brought suit against UNLV September 8, 1977, in a Las Vegas state court to enjoin the imposition of the penalty. Tarkanian avowed his innocence, charged that the NCAA proceedings deprived him of due process of law and attacked the integrity of the NCAA staff.

Just 18 days after he filed this suit against his own employing institution, an injunction was obtained without difficulty September 26, 1977, blocking the two-year suspension. UNLV, ostensibly acting to defend against the charges of its coach, did not call a single witness from the NCAA or other member institutions to counter the Tarkanian suit.

Upon the NCAA's urging, UNLV finally appealed the decision of the trial court to the Nevada Supreme Court, and this enabled the NCAA to file a brief as a "friend of the court." The Supreme Court reversed the trial court May 17, 1979, and remanded the case for the joinder of the NCAA as a necessary party. This became a helpful decision for the Association's enforcement procedure; without such action, a precedent

Winning alone can be a lost cause

"Winning is important, but winning alone is not worth sacrificing your class and integrity. It is not worth the shame of going through an NCAA probation. In this day and time, it would be very, very difficult to be on probation and maintain the standards of excellence we want to maintain.

"Each and every coach and athletics staff member knows that he or she will be fired immediately if an SEC or NCAA rule is willfully broken. Each coach and staff member signs a pledge to abide by the rules each year. Violation of that pledge is, of itself, grounds for immediate dismissal. We will not tolerate willful violations. Too much is at stake to allow one individual to place the entire program in jeopardy."

"If there is one political deity on Capitol Hill more revered than all the rest, it is the political deity known as Civil Rights.

"Before that holy name, every head must bow and every knee must bend. . . . These days, we are witnessing a veritable orgy of adulation as both chambers (of Congress) genuflect before the pending Civil Rights Act of 1984.

"The thing is a graven image. The bill is a hoax, a deception, a fraud. Sponsors defend this little land mine as an innocent and harmless piece of legislation—nothing but a mild correction, really that would merely restore the law of civil rights in higher education to the position it held prior to February 28 (the date of the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in Grove City College vs. Bell). Come into my parlor, said the spider to the fly.

"Let us look a little closer. The bill would amend not only Title IX, having to do with education; it also would amend the 1973 act on handicapped persons, the 1975 act on elderly persons and, most critically, the basic Civil Rights Act of 1964. These sweeping provisions would apply not only to the states and to every political subdivision thereof but also to every private agency, instrumentality, institution, organization or other entity.

"I don't think much of it at all (the Division I-A football play-off proposal). I think we'd have a terrible mess on our hands.

"I know there's a lot of pressure to have a play-off. But if you look at the way the academic schedule is set up, I think it would be impossible, because we'd be playing until the 23rd or 24th of January.

"What I personally would like to see happen is to eliminate all of the conference tie-ups with the bowls. The big reason everyone is so pro-play-offs is that so often, the No. 1 and No. 2 teams don't play each other because of the conference bowl tie-ups."

Column No. 12

Satisfactory-progress rule

At its April meeting, the NCAA Council approved the following interpretations recommended by the Academic Testing and Requirements Committee concerning the minimum academic satisfactory-progress standards applicable to Divisions I and II [Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)]:

1. The language in Case No. 319 (pages 334-335, 1984-85 NCAA Manual) should be revised editorially to replace references to "declaring a major" with references to a "designated program of studies leading toward a baccalaureate degree."

2. A student who is required to designate a program of studies leading to a baccalaureate degree under Case No. 319 and who does not or cannot designate such a program shall be ineligible until such time as a designation is made.

3. Prior to designating a specific program of studies, a student-athlete may use credits acceptable toward any of the institution's degree programs in meeting the satisfactory-progress requirements. From the point at which a program is designated (prior to or after the third year of attendance), the credits used to meet the satisfactory-progress requirements must be degree credit toward the student's designated degree program.

4. A student may use "banked" credit hours (credit hours earned in excess of the average of 12 per term) earned prior to the designation of a specific degree program to maintain satisfactory progress in the degree program.

5. Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(ii)-(2) may be utilized only if the student has had a previous season of competition at the certifying institution.

It is anticipated that the NCAA Administrative Committee will develop and publicize as soon as possible criteria for verification and documentation of a student-athlete's designation of a specific program of studies leading toward a baccalaureate degree.

Division III transfer exception

1984 Convention Proposal No. 74 [Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(13), page 96, 1984-85 NCAA Manual] provides an opportunity for a waiver of the normal transfer residence requirement for students transferring to a Division III institution after August 1, 1984, from a Division I or Division II institution, provided the student receives a written release from the director of athletics at the institution from which the student transferred. Because the language of this proposal specifically refers to students transferring from Divisions I or II institutions, a student transferring from a nonmember four-year college or a junior college could not take advantage of this waiver provision.

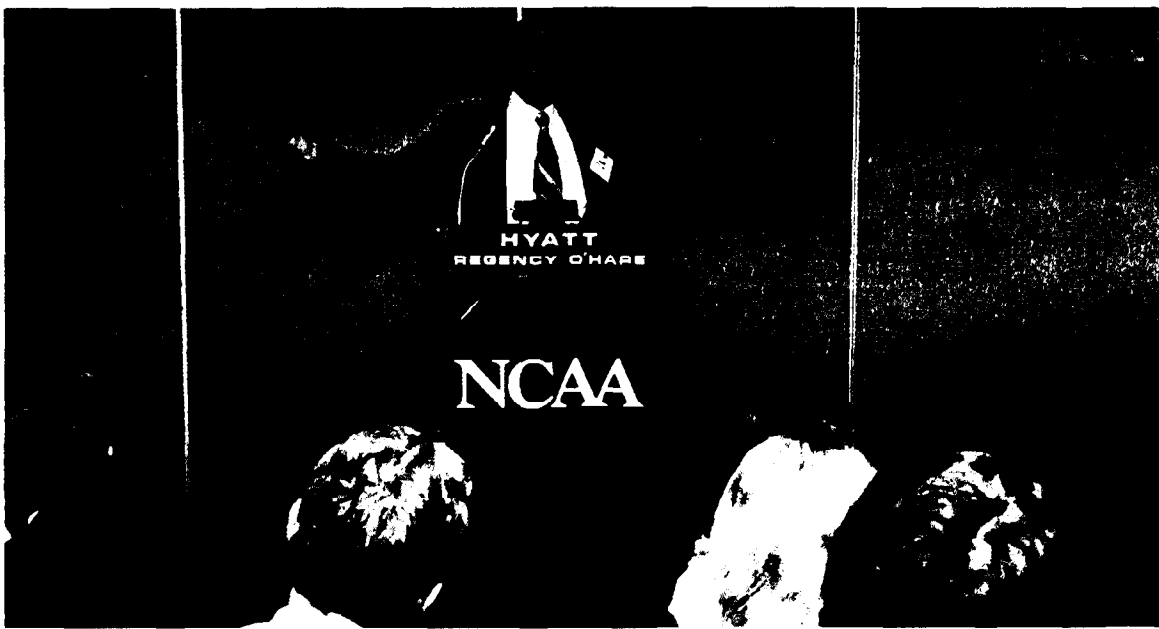

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. TV in the News

Bill would give state TV money

A Michigan state senator has introduced a bill stating that all money earned by public universities from contracts with pay television companies for broadcast of sporting events must go to the state's general fund.

State Sen. John Kelly of Detroit introduced the bill in response to the University of Michigan's sale of pay television contracts for one 1983 football game and men's basketball games during the past season. A Michigan official told the Detroit News that the school did not have any pay television contracts for the coming school year.

Kelly said his constituents do not have access to cable television, that "those events belong to the public..." and that showing such events to "a selective audience" is unfair.

ESPN makes personnel change

Chris LaPlaca has been promoted to manager, programming information, in ESPN's communications department.

LaPlaca joined the ESPN staff in 1980 and has served as a communications representative. In his new post, he will supervise all programming and production-related publicity efforts, program-listings notification, and network response to viewer mail and phone calls.

MAAC signs cable agreement

The Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference has signed a multiyear agreement with the Madison Square Garden Network to cablecast 15 men's basketball games a year beginning with the 1984-85 season.

The Madison Square Garden Network is the nation's oldest regional cable sports network. It reaches 1.6 million homes in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Metro Atlantic members are Fairfield University, Fordham University, Holy Cross College, Iona College, La Salle University, Manhattan College, St. Peter's College and the U.S. Military Academy.

Atlantic 10 fails to get rights fee

The Atlantic 10 Conference has not received a rights fee from its syndicator, TVS, for 22 games televised during the 1983-84 season.

"Three dates for payment have passed, and we have not been paid," said conference commissioner Leland Byrd. "They (TVS) want to renegotiate the payment schedule over a longer period of time, including the money due from last season."

Byrd said the league's package was worth "about $500,000 to $600,000 over two years."

Raycom to produce Clemson games

For the second straight year, Clemson University football games will be shown on a delayed basis on a four-station network in South Carolina.

Raycom Sports will produce all 11 Clemson games for stations in Charleston, Spartanburg, Florence and Columbia.

The Tigers are in the second year of an NCAA probation and are prohibited from appearing on live television.

ABC's Olympic rating protected

Twenty-one is the winning number in blackjack and it may become a pay-off number for Fireman's Fund Insurance Company.

Under terms of its policy with ABC involving the network's coverage of the Los Angeles Olympics, the insurance company will make payments if ABC's ratings drop below 21 for a variety of reasons, including a boycott by any of 10 key nations. Included in that 10-nation group are the Soviet Union and East Germany, both of which have said they will not attend the summer games.

To date, ABC officials have been optimistic that the boycott will lead to an American medal bonanza and a corresponding leap in the ratings.

The network also reports that it has sold 98 percent of its advertising (at a rate of $175,000 for a 30-second spot). That adds up to about $440 million, which is more than enough to cover ABC's expenses of $225 million in rights fees and $125 million in production costs.

What could cost the network would be mediocre ratings in the 21 to 25 range. If the ratings are below 25, ABC may have to give advertisers "make-goods"—free advertising at a later date or reimbursement. Disappointing ratings during the winter Olympics reportedly forced ABC to promise several advertisers make-goods, including free time during the summer Olympics.

Committee moves ahead in plans for women's basketball rules

Provisions for a rules survey of NCAA women's basketball competition and the preparation of a preliminary rules manuscript were developed June 5-6 in Kansas City during the first meeting of the NCAA Special Women's Basketball Rules Committee.

The special committee, established by the NCAA Council in January, is charged with preparing a preliminary rules manuscript in advance of legislation to be submitted at the 1985 Convention that would establish a permanent women's basketball rules committee.

The rules manuscript will be completed by October 1, when it will be submitted to the NCAA publishing department and the Council. All actions taken by the special committee during the Kansas City meeting will be subject to review by the permanent committee, which will meet, if given Convention approval, March 27-29 in Austin, Texas.

NCAA women's basketball will be played under the rules of the United States Girls' and Women's Basketball Rules Committee during the 1984-85 season. A permanent NCAA rules committee would establish and publish rules for the 1985-86 season.

sort," Easterbrook said. "Every school will simply have to negotiate with stations or networks on its own."

In addition to the summary that will appear in the next issue of the News, all participants in the meeting will receive a tabulation of the responses to an evaluation form they completed after the meeting. Nearly all of those returning the forms said the NCAA should continue to conduct such a meeting, and the vast majority rated the session as "extremely worthwhile" or "somewhat worthwhile."

Top golfers named

NCAA Division I individual champion John Inman of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has been named to the all-America team selected by the Golf Coaches Association of America.

Inman fired a 17-under-par 271 with rounds of 66, 67, 71 and 67 at the NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships last month in Houston, Texas, to break the NCAA record of 273 set in 1971 by former University of Texas, Austin, golfer Ben Crenshaw.

Also named to the team were British amateur champion Philip Parkin of Texas A&M University, Steve Elkington of NCAA champion University of Houston and Chris Perry of Ohio State University.

In its preliminary manuscript, the special committee retained a number of USGWBC rules, including the new, smaller basketball; the 30-second shot clock; jump balls, and back-court regulations. Greater commonality with NCAA men's rules was agreed upon in areas such as court specifications, number of officials (two- or three-person crews), timeouts in televised games, substitution, traveling, player-control fouls and technical fouls.

"The committee discovered a significant number of areas where men's and women's rules were in agreement," said committee chair Elaine Hieber, assistant director of athletics at Iowa State University. "In those cases where there are differences, such as the smaller basketball, the committee is eager to conduct a thorough rules survey and to observe the 1984-85 season."

"It is our goal to gather as much information as possible prior to the meeting of the permanent committee next spring. We are hopeful that we will be able to identify those rules that are in the best interest of NCAA women's basketball and, at the same time, work toward greater commonality with the men's rules."

The rules survey would be mailed in February to women's basketball coaches in the NCAA, the National Junior College Athletic Association and the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. Officials, conference supervisors of officials, administrators and members of the media also will receive the questionnaire.

Hieber identified other committee concerns as improving the quality of officiating in women's intercollegiate basketball, involving allied conferences in the supervision and administration of women's officials, and providing more effective and consistent rules interpretation.

Other members of the committee are Lynn Agee, University of North Carolina, Greensboro; Louise Albrecht, Southern Connecticut State University; Rita Castagna, Assumption College; Sharon Chatman, San Jose State University; Sue Gunter, Louisiana State University; Linda Hargrove, Cowley County (Kansas) Community College; Kay Higgins, Gettysburg College; Dianne Jones, University of Wisconsin, Whitewater; Darlene May, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona; Linda Sharp, University of Southern California; Barbara Stevens, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and C. Vivian Stringer, University of Iowa.

Florida State reprimanded

Florida State University has been publicly reprimanded and censured by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions for two violations of NCAA legislation occurring in the sport of football.

The penalty imposed by the NCAA does not include sanctions and will not affect the university's eligibility for postseason football bowl games or television appearances.

The violations in the case were discovered during interviews conducted by the NCAA enforcement staff with the two involved prospective student-athletes. Neither of the young men enrolled at Florida State University.

"The Committee on Infractions did not believe that the violations in this case represented an intentional effort by football coaching staff members to circumvent NCAA recruiting legislation," said Frank J. Remington, chair, NCAA Committee on Infractions. "Nevertheless, the committee believed that a public announcement in this case was appropriate to express the committee's concern that the university's football coaching staff should have monitored more closely the official paid visits of the two prospective student-athletes who were involved in this case."

The following is a statement of the penalty imposed in the case and a summary of the violations that were found.

Penalty to be imposed upon institution

1. Florida State University shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and admonished to avoid a recurrence of similar violations in the future.

Summary of violations of NCAA legislation

1. NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1) [improper expense payment] In October 1982, during the official paid visit to the university's campus of two prospective student-athletes, each young man was given a check for automobile travel expenses by an athletics department staff member, although neither young man actually qualified for such a payment.

2. NCAA Bylaw 1-8-(m) [entertainment]—In October 1982, during the official paid visit to the university's campus of two prospective student-athletes, a representative of the university's athletics interests was aware that the young men's high school football coaches also received lodging for one night at no cost to them. The high school coaches also charged the cost of room-service meals at the motel to the university and ate one meal at the football training table during this period at no cost to them. In this regard, the university or its representatives should have known that these high school coaches received lodging and meals and should have prevented them from receiving such improper benefits.
