Commission sets first meeting date

The first meeting of the new NCAA Presidents' Commission will be held Saturday, June 30, at the Westin O'Hare Hotel, Chicago, Illinois.

Commission Chair John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University, Bloomington, said June 30 was the most appropriate meeting date "in terms of the availability of an appreciable number of Commission members," based on calendars submitted by the 44 chief executives serving on the Commission.

The Commission will meet from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., beginning the meeting with a discussion of the organization and functioning of the Commission. It also will review the NCAA organizational structure, including proposed relationships between the Commission and the NCAA Council.

Also on the agenda is discussion of topics that may be considered by the Commission on future agendas, including six specific referrals from the NCAA Council:

- Recommendations of the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education.
- Additional academic policies and requirements.
- Ways and means of enhancing institutional control of athletics programs and institutional observance of NCAA legislation.
- The NCAA membership structure, including past efforts to enhance a federated approach to legislation.
- Ways and means of controlling heightened costs of major intercollegiate athletics programs.
- The concept of a Division I-A football play-off.

The Commission also will receive reports of the major policy considerations discussed in the Division I summer meeting June 7-8 and the Division I-A legislative meeting June 28-29.

Members of the Commission will discuss goals for the 1985 NCAA Convention, including the procedure they will use in designating roll-call votes. Such designation must be made in time to be included in the Official Notice of the Convention, which is mailed in November.

Dates and sites of future Commission meetings will be determined at the Chicago session.

Ryan will chair the commission meeting. If the members decide to hold caucuses by division, those separate sessions will be chaired by Otis A. Singletary, University of Kentucky, Division I; Barbara J. Seelye, Keene State College, Division II, and Kenneth J. Weller, Central College (Iowa), Division III.

Legislative ideas submitted for Division I-A meeting

Eleven proposed amendments to NCAA legislation had been submitted as of June 19 for consideration at the Division I-A midyear legislative meeting June 28-29 in Chicago.

The deadline for submitting legislative proposals extending beyond football for consideration by the Division I-A delegates is June 21. All properly filed submissions will be duplicated and distributed at registration for the meeting at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare.

The Division I-A meeting is authorized to propose legislation on non-football issues for consideration by the next annual NCAA Convention. A majority vote in favor of any of the proposals at the meeting will place the amendment on the agenda at the January 1985 Convention, under the sponsorship of the Division I-A meeting.

Six of the 11 proposals received by June 19 were submitted by the members of the Big Ten Conference. Members of the College Football Association submitted four, one of which is the same as a Big Ten submission. The Pacific-10 Conference and the Southeastern Conference each filed one amendment.

Of the 11, six are repeat proposals that were defeated or not considered at the 1984 NCAA Convention. The others are new.

The Big Ten has resubmitted the following from the 1984 Convention:

- Proposal No. 24, to establish qualitative academic progress requirements for eligibility in Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6).

• Proposal No. 51, to permit an incoming student-athlete to receive financial aid during the summer prior to the student's freshman year.

• Proposal No. 53, to permit a maximum of five years of financial aid to an undergraduate student-athlete in a six-year period.

• Proposal No. 60, to eliminate the overall limitation of 70 awards in the Division I men's equivalency sports.

• Proposal No. 64, to remove the 20 permissible grants-in-aid in Division I men's ice hockey from the overall limit of 70 in equivalency sports.

The other Big Ten proposal also has been submitted by members of the CFA. It would permit a student-athlete to receive the full amount of a Pell Grant for which he or she qualifies, in addition to a full athletics grant-in-aid.

Another repeat submission from the 1984 Convention is being offered by the Pacific-10 Conference, which has filed Proposal No. 152. That would permit a volunteer coach in football or basketball to receive expenses directly related to coaching duties (training-table meals, transportation to and room and board at away games, and a maximum of four complimentary tickets).

The Southeastern Conference proposal would eliminate the part-time coach in Division I basketball, instead permitting three full-time assistants and allowing the institution to designate any three of its four basketball coaches to recruit and scout prospective student-athletes off campus. The proposal has been favored by

Satisfactory-progress guidelines approved

Guidelines for the designation by a student-athlete of a program of studies leading toward a specific baccalaureate degree have been approved by the NCAA Administrative Committee, acting for the Association's Council.

At the 1983 NCAA Convention, Divisions I and II members adopted an amendment to Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6) [satisfactory-progress rule] to require that a student-athlete satisfactorily complete the required number of degree credits in a specific baccalaureate degree program in order to remain eligible. At the time of its adoption, the Council indicated that after August 1, 1984, effective date of the legislation, a student would be required to declare a major by the beginning of the third year of enrollment (fifth semester or seventh quarter). That interpretation is published as Case No. 319 in the 1984-85 NCAA Manual.

Earlier this year, the NCAA Academic Testing and Requirements Committee determined that the use of the phrase "declare a major" in the interpretation was not consistent with the language of Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6)-(iii) and recommended to the Council that the phrase "designate a program of studies leading toward a specific baccalaureate degree" be used instead. On the recommendation of the Divisions I and II Steering Committees, the Council approved the change in Case No. 319 at its April meeting.

The Administrative Committee has determined that in order to remain eligible in the third or subsequent year of enrollment, a student must designate in writing the specific baccalaureate degree program he or she will pursue. Each student must have the specific academic program, which will lead to the specific baccalaureate degree he or she has selected, verified and approved in writing by an appropriate academic official (e.g., the academic dean or the dean's designee, the department chair, a

Drug-testing report approved by officers

The NCAA Administrative Committee, acting for and on the direction of the Executive Committee and Council, has approved a report to the membership regarding the drug-testing program mandated by 1984 NCAA Convention adoption of Proposal No. 163.

To comply with the July 1 deadline specified in that resolution, the Administrative Committee agreed that the plan should be reported to the membership in this issue of The NCAA News.

"We will continue to study many aspects and ramifications of a drug-testing program before we put into legislative form the details of a program for action by the 1985 Convention," President John L. Toner said. "This announcement in the June 20 issue of the News meets the intent of the Convention resolution."

Toner cited costs, penalties, details of an on-campus testing procedure and legal concerns as facets of the plan requiring additional study.

"The Executive Committee will propose to the 1985 Convention a mandatory drug-testing program at NCAA championships and certified postseason football games, as well as some type of on-campus testing procedure for anabolic steroids in cooperation with member institutions," Toner stated.

The Administrative Committee noted that the Special Committee on Drug Testing, which has developed the plan currently endorsed by the Executive Committee and Council, will meet June 22-24, and an additional report will appear in the July 4 issue of The NCAA News. The Administrative Committee praised the work of the special committee, which is chaired by Carl S. Blyth, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. Blyth also serves as chair of the NCAA Drug Education Committee and secretary of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

The report approved by the Administrative Committee follows:

The plan

The 1984 Convention resolution, sponsored by the Pacific-10 Conference, directed the development of a plan to test student-athletes for "controlled substances" (e.g., marijuana, LSD, heroin and alcohol) and alleged "performance-enhancing" drugs, which refers to central nervous system stimulants such as the amphetamine group, cocaine, and the various anabolic steroids and related compounds. It also directed preparation of a listing of the NCAA "banned" drugs.

The list of specific drugs that would be banned, as developed by the special committee, accompanies this article.

Carl S. Blyth

As developed by the committee, the current three-part plan involves testing of urine specimens to cover all drug categories of concern:

1. The NCAA would be responsible for testing at NCAA championships for purportedly performance-enhancing drugs, primarily stimulants such as amphetamines, cocaine, and other psychomotor and central nervous system stimulants. At selected events, anabolic steroids would be included. This same approach would be used at postseason football games.
2. Because testing at specific events would not necessarily be an effective deterrent to the use of anabolic steroids (the student-athlete may cease using the steroids one or two months prior to the championship and escape

Testimony continues in Las Vegas suit

Testimony continued this week in Nevada district court in the civil suit filed by University of Nevada, Las Vegas, men's basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian against the NCAA and the university.

The suit is designed to prevent Tarkanian's two-year suspension from coaching as directed by NCAA sanctions against the institution's basketball program in 1977. The case did not come to trial until last week in Las Vegas.

The NCAA defended its charges against the university and Tarkanian last week as Tarkanian's attorney, Sam Lionel, questioned the sufficiency of evidence against UNLV in the infractions action.

During the first five days of testimony, Tarkanian was called to the witness stand twice and did not deny any of the NCAA findings in its investigation of him or the institution. His defense was based essentially on the testimony of a former Nevada deputy attorney general, whose office assisted in UNLV's investigation of the NCAA allegations and who now serves in several administrative capacities at the institution, and of a private lawyer who represented UNLV at the hearings before the NCAA Committee on Infractions and the NCAA Council.

Tarkanian obtained a court injunction preventing his suspension after the NCAA ruling that placed the university's basketball program on a two-year probation for 38 rules violations, which stemmed from 78 original allegations.

In testimony last week, Harry M. Cross, a professor of law at the University of Washington and president of the NCAA in 1969 and 1970, told the court that he did not believe some of the affidavits produced by the university in answering the NCAA's findings. He said they con-

Bay's integrity tops his list of qualifications

By Bud Withers
Eugene Register-Guard

So Rick Bay is leaving, a Michigander gone to rule an empire at Ohio State. Good Lord. The next thing you know, Dee Andros will be signing up for Daisy Ducks.

Rick Bay, the man who three years ago had never done a minute in athletics administration, the man who was regarded as something of a gamble when he was hired as Oregon athletics director.

You figure Ohio State is going to get its next athletics director from North Carolina or Texas or Penn State, not Oregon. One day, Bay is pleading with the state legislature for a buck, the next he is overseeing an athletics program that offers synchronized swimming for women.

Once you get over the shock of Ohio State going on a national search for an athletics director and settling on a guy whose school plays bingo at half time of basketball games for fun and profit, the inclination is to realize just how much of an underdog is Oregon in the world of college athletics.

This is what Rick Bay has fallen into:

Ohio State has a projected 1984-85 athletics budget of about $14 million, compared to $6.4 at Oregon. There are 31 sports, combined men's and women's. You want lacrosse? You got it at Ohio State. Men's soccer? Ditto. No college should be without a varsity fencing team, and the Buckeyes aren't. Pistol? Rifle? Something for everybody.

Perhaps the most staggering number is that, because Ohio State puts 88,000 people in its big horseshoe stadium on Saturday afternoons in the fall, the Buckeye football program nets—nets—$4.5 million a year.

"We have always finished in the black," said Doug Clay, the Ohio State business manager, sounding slightly surprised by the question. "Last year was the closest we've ever come not to doing it. We made about $20,000."

But it turns out that Bay is Columbus-bound not because he knows anything about synchronized swimming or firing a pistol but because of his integrity.

The process by which Bay landed the job is somewhat unclear. But it is known that his appointment shocked people at Oregon and in Columbus and that he may not have been the school's No. 1 choice.

A Columbus newspaper named five of seven finalists, none of them Bay. The two leading candidates were thought to be athletics directors Richard M. Dull of Maryland and Robert L. Hitch of Southern Methodist.

But the Ohio State president of three years, Edward H. Jennings, is a man greatly concerned about the image of athletics at his school. When he called around to check up on Bay, he heard about high-mindedness and principles.

Dovetail that with a sequence of events that began 15 months ago at Ohio State:

Eight athletes testify before a county grand jury in a rape case, with no indictment handed down; the stunning gambling revelations surface regarding Art Schlichter; Mike Tomczak, the Buckeye quarterback, poses in a department-store advertisement, an NCAA violation; Earle Bruce, the football coach, is advised by the NCAA to quit picking winners on his weekly TV show, and two basketball players turn up academically ineligible.

Columnary Craft

Presto. Jennings hires Bay.

Maybe all that is fitting because, whatever you may think of Rick Bay's performance at Oregon, he was clean.

He came to the Ducks at a time when the school was still reeling from football violations, from a total collapse of the athletics administration and, possibly worst, from a lack of credibility.

Bay helped return integrity to Oregon. He was almost pedantic in his fanaticism about following the rules.

He ruled three track athletes ineligible when it appeared their relationship with a shoe company could be illegal. He blew the whistle on Fred Cofield's use of a telephone credit card and suspended an assistant basketball coach. He called into question the propriety of some partial scholarships, grants that were well-intentioned but—in the sticky parlance of the NCAA rule book—illegal. The spirit of the rule didn't matter, the letter did.

Bay hired Bill Byrne as a fund-raiser, and the Ducks increased donations markedly. In the eyes of a lot of people, he hired Don Monson a year too late, but he chose to hang doggedly with the character of Jim Haney.

He even went to the mat with the legendary Bill Bowerman over the ill-fated track facility proposed for Hayward Field. Bay might have handled it better, but you begin to understand his fortitude when you strip that confrontation down to its barest essence: the interloper from the Midwest against the consummate Oregonian.

Ultimately, Bay's biggest failure was like his largest asset, right there in his own constitution. He wasn't much for the glad hand. He was a paradox, a guy who could crack you up behind a podium but one who wasn't comfortable rubbing elbows with alums at cocktail parties. The antithesis, for instance, of Oregon State's Andros.

"I never totally felt comfortable in Eugene," he said Wednesday from the airport in Columbus. "I had some awfully rough issues to deal with that people felt strongly about. I don't think I could overcome it."

"It's human nature to want to be liked."

I suppose this is as good a time as any for Oregon to go A.D. hunting. True, it coincides with season-ticket sales in football, but the bulk of the annual fund-raising drive is complete. The new director will inherit a football team of some promise and a basketball program on the come.

Depending on your viewpoint, Bay's departure either helps or hurts the desperate drive to beg some dollars out of the state legislature. Maybe his move proves a point.

The Ducks need to find a forthright person with business and leadership skills, somebody who can raise a buck and be comfortable with all levels of the university, the community and the state. That's all.

In other words, they probably need to get lucky.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

I recently have searched the NCAA Manual to see if I could find the guidelines under which the NCAA holds its championships. It occurs to me that the NCAA has the duty and responsibility to see that all teams that qualify have an equal opportunity to win. This doctrine should take precedence over economic considerations, but this hardly seems to be the case.

In both the basketball and baseball championships, the fairness doctrine or equal opportunity seems to be disregarded. The selection committees have control over where they place teams. The only thing they cannot control is who qualifies for the Final Four (in basketball) and who gets to Omaha (in baseball).

So, would someone tell me what is fair about playing Memphis State in Memphis in the subregional or Kentucky in Lexington in the regional? But we sold 23,000 tickets at Rupp Arena, you say. Well, let me assure you those fans would have gone to Atlanta, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Anchorage or Moscow. Additionally, it puzzles me as to why the regional baseball play-offs seem to be held at the same places year after year, and why some regionals have four teams and others have six.

It is incumbent upon the NCAA that its selection committees bend over backwards to be impartial and fair in their team and site selections. The championships will do very well on their own, thank you.

Q. In what sports are statistics compiled by the NCAA, and do postseason games count in individual and team statistics?

A. Statistics are compiled by the NCAA in football, men's and women's basketball, baseball, and women's softball. In football, postseason bowl or national championship play-off games are not considered part of an institution's regular-season schedule. Consequently, statistics of these games are not included in any team's or player's season or career records, and these statistics do not affect single-game records. The results of postseason football games, however, are included in a coach's career record, the team's all-time won-lost record and team winning streaks. In basketball, however, all tournament games—holiday, postseason and conference play—are included in the official statistics. One of the reasons that postseason basketball statistics are compiled is the fact that tournament action immediately follows the regular season, whereas, in football, postseason bowl games occur four to five weeks after completion of the regular season.

Summary of Division I summer meeting

Following is a summary of the discussions in the second annual Division I summer meeting, held June 7-8 at the Westin Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City. Summaries of the separate meetings of faculty athletics representatives, directors of athletics, primary women administrators of athletics programs, conference executive officers, football coaches, and men's and women's basketball coaches are limited to recommendations and other formal positions taken in those sessions.

Joint meeting

Academic reporting

NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis, Oregon State University, presented a proposed academic reporting procedure that had been approved in principle in April by the Division I Steering Committee. He noted that both the Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education and the American Council on Education's Committee on Division I Intercollegiate Athletics had urged that some form of auditing procedure be instituted in college athletics.

The proposed procedure would amend Bylaw 5-6 to require a member institution to report academic information reflecting institutional practices in matters of admission, student-athletes' compliance with institutional and NCAA requirements for satisfactory progress toward a degree, and graduation rates of student-athletes.

Davis described the procedure as providing "verification and certification, then reporting, and then publication and dissemination" of the specified data.

"There is good justification for assuring institutional integrity and encouraging institutional self-evaluation," he stated.

Drug testing

James Puffer, M.D., of the University of California, Los Angeles, a member of the NCAA Special Committee on Drug Testing, outlined that committee's work in developing a drug-testing program that would comply with the provisions of a resolution (Proposal No. 163) adopted by the 1984 NCAA Convention.

The committee proposed testing at championships and postseason football games for drugs purported to be performance-enhancing or potentially harmful to the health and safety of student-athletes. Because the use of anabolic steroids cannot be detected if the participant ceases to use them prior to an event, the committee proposed testing of student-athletes in specified sports for anabolic steroids throughout the academic year by sending collection teams to randomly selected institutions. Citing legal concerns and the desire for institutional control, the committee proposed that testing for "street drugs" should be left to the responsibility of the institution.

A report on the drug-testing plan appears elsewhere in this issue of The NCAA News.

Football television

John D. Swofford, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, chair of the NCAA Football Television Committee, reported on that committee's recent activities, as reported in earlier issues of the News. He emphasized that the committee would be prepared to present proposed modifications to the Association's football television program promptly after the U.S. Supreme Court announces its ruling in the current litigation.

Frank H. Easterbrook, University of Chicago law professor and the NCAA's counsel of record in the litigation before the Supreme Court, said the court may make it impossible for colleges and universities to have any type of cooperative agreement in televising college football. He also cited "the prospect of many additional years of uncertainty and some additional years of litigation" regarding the issue, as reported in the June 13 issue of the News.

"Oklahoma and Georgia [which brought the legal action against the NCAA plan] paint the colleges and universities as business competitors," Easterbrook said. "They paint the NCAA agreements as combinations of conspiracies among business competitors, just as it would be unlawful for U.S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel to get together and fix the price of steel."

But colleges and universities are not ordinary businesses, he said. "In the ordinary business world, most firms would like to destroy their rivals and take all the business they can get. But I don't think it's very likely that the University of Oklahoma wants to destroy the University of Nebraska and take all of its business."

"The NCAA members are fundamentally cooperators in the production of a football season. You can't have a one-firm football world, and so many of the standard business analogies do not apply, we believe," Easterbrook said.

He said the court may "say these plans are unreasonably broad without saying what kind of plans might pass muster." He said the court might suggest modifications that would satisfy its concerns, or it might "simply refuse to address those topics. It might do a sort of disappearing act . . . The Supreme Court often does that."

Faculty representatives

Charles H. Samson, Texas A&M University, reported these actions by the faculty representatives in their separate meeting:

- Citing some concerns regarding the proposed academic reporting procedure, the group adopted this statement: "The faculty representatives support in principle legislative initiatives directed toward improving academic standards for student-athletes in member institutions and look forward to receiving improved proposals concerning academic reporting procedures dealing with admissions, satisfactory progress and graduation rates."

- If 1984 Convention Proposal No. 37 [which would have provided greater voting autonomy in Division I] is before the 1985 Convention, it should be better explained and articulated by its proponents.

- In a series of straw votes regarding select committee recommendations, the faculty representatives:

- Favored a successively greater minimum grade-point average for eligibility. (16 for, three against, six abstentions.)

- Almost unanimously favored implementation by institutions of internal auditing procedures regarding graduation rates. (23-0-2.)

- Did not favor requiring member institutions to publicize their graduation rates. (10-14-1.)

- Narrowly disagreed with the select committee's proposed "comprehensive audit and certification" program. (9-10-6.)

- Strongly opposed making freshmen ineligible in Division I football and basketball. (0-24-1.)

- Did not favor development of subdivisions (e.g., Divisions I-B and I-BB) in Division I basketball. (0-20-5.)

- Strongly supported a quiet period around the National Letter of Intent signing date. (21-3-1.)

- Reached no conclusion on whether recruiting contacts should be restricted more than they are now. (10-10-5.)

- Did not favor moving the financial aid limitation (1984 Convention Proposal No. 49) from the constitution to the bylaws. (10-15-1.)

- Favored permitting a student-athlete to receive a full Pell Grant in addition to a full athletics grant-in-aid. (14-5-5.)

—Noted interest in expanding the summer meeting to 1½ days, although no straw vote was taken.

Athletics directors

David L. Maggard, University of California, Berkeley, reported the following results of the separate meeting of directors of athletics:

- Supported legislation that might improve student-athletes' academic success, including graduation rates, but expressed concern regarding implementation of the academic reporting procedure as presented, citing increased paperwork and book-keeping and questions regarding the segment of the institution that would establish such a monitoring system.

- Fully endorsed the NCAA drug-testing plan as presented by the Special Committee on Drug Testing and urged the committee to develop guidelines for testing and education at the conference and institutional levels, as well as nationally. "The drug issue is one of the most acute and difficult problems we face today," Maggard said. "Because of the potential severity of the problems, we have a very strong feeling that implementation of the program should take place as soon as possible."

- Narrowly opposed moving the financial aid limitation from the constitution to the bylaws. (15 for, 18 against.) Maggard noted that some of the votes against that proposal reflect concern that the matter is "a complex restructuring issue rather than just a financial aid issue."

- Endorsed the NCAA's efforts to register and identify reputable player agents as "a very positive step in the right direction." Citing the "very negative impact unscrupulous and self-serving agents may have on individual athletes and all of intercollegiate athletics," the athletics directors encouraged the Association to develop legislation to place sanctions on agents who violate NCAA rules and regulations.

- Unanimously supported in concept the comprehensive plan for improvement of basketball officiating developed by the Special Committee on Officiating Improvement. [Note: The plan was reported in the June 13 issue of The NCAA News.]

- Agreed that the matter of a later beginning date for the college basketball season should continue to be studied and suggested the possibility of moving the starting date back two weeks rather than a month, depending upon continued study of the financial ramifications regarding television and gate income.

Women administrators

Mikki Flowers, Old Dominion University, presented the following actions and positions taken by the primary women athletics administrators:

- Recommended that failure to meet the eight-sport criterion for Division I classification in either the men's or the women's program at an institution should affect the eligibility of both programs for NCAA championships or any other NCAA membership privilege.

- Recommended that NCAA membership be available to an institution that chooses to place only its women's program in the Association, without obligating its men's program to abide by NCAA rules and regulations.

- Agreed that the Bylaw 6 scholarship limitations for women's sports should not be reduced as a means of accommodating additional women's sports, instead favoring study of other means of reducing costs, such as changes in recruiting regulations.

- Supported maintaining the eight-sport requirement in Division I for both men's and women's programs.

- Expressed concern regarding a requirement that an institution publicize its graduation rates for student-athletes, citing possible negative use of that data.

- Supported the concept of a drug-testing program but expressed concern that institutional autonomy should be maintained.

- Expressed concern regarding the continuation of a championship opportunity for Division I institutions in women's lacrosse, noting interest in Divisions II and III in establishing their own championships.

- Recommended that women's volleyball be considered for inclusion in future NCAA special promotional programs.

- Favored continuation of special consideration for women's championships policies (i.e., possible differences between policies for men's and women's championships), citing the "need for continued growth in women's athletics programs."

- Opposed changing the beginning of the basketball season for either men's or women's programs. (None for, 11 opposed, four abstentions.)

- Recommended that Division I consider eliminating the five-calendar-year eligibility rule in favor of the 10-semester or 15-quarter residency approach used in Divisions II and III, with the understanding that any outside competition would count toward the student-athlete's period of eligibility.

Conference executives

Lewis A. Cryer, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, reported these actions by the meeting of conference executive officers:

- Overwhelmingly opposed the concept of freshman ineligibility in Division I football and basketball, citing the lack of specific information "to document that student-athletes actually would benefit academically by not participating as freshmen in intercollegiate competition." (Two for, 22 against.)

- Supported the goals of the Special Committee on Officiating Improvement but suggested that it may be more feasible to implement a national program of identifying and training officials than to assign and evaluate officials on a national basis.

- Took a series of votes regarding the National Letter of Intent program:

- Unanimously supported the current early signing date in basketball.

- Supported development of an early signing date for all other men's and women's sports, excluding football. (18 for, three against.)

- Opposed introduction of an early signing date in football but agreed that consideration should be given to moving the football date to February 1.

- Favored continuation of the midyear signing date for junior college football prospects.

- Supported development of a midyear signing date for junior college prospects in other sports.

- Suggested that the National Letter of Intent program not be applicable when a prospect has not been offered any athletically related aid by the institution.

- Did not agree on the proposed quiet period around the signing date in football. (Seven for, seven against.)

- Took a series of straw votes regarding financial aid legislation:

- Supported the concept of providing financial aid to a student-athlete beyond five years if necessary to assist the individual in meeting graduation requirements.

- Favored legislation permitting an individual who left the institution to participate in professional athletics to receive aid upon returning to the institution to complete graduation requirements. (14 for, nine against.)

- Favored permitting a student-athlete to receive a full Pell Grant in addition to the institutional grant-in-aid.

- Opposed permitting a student-athlete to (1) receive employment income during the academic term, (2) sell complimentary tickets at face value, (3) receive an additional monthly allowance or (4) receive a limited number of opportunities for paid transportation to the student-athlete's home.

- Agreed to distribute to all Division I conference offices a proposal developed by James E. Delany, Ohio Valley Conference, regarding legislative autonomy in Division I; also agreed to review the matter further during the summer meeting of the Collegiate Commissioners Association. "We believe that strides have been made to open lines of communication regarding this issue, and we encourage all involved to discuss it openly," Cryer said.

Football coaches

Vincent J. Dooley, University of Georgia, reported for the football coaches, who reached these decisions:

- Unanimously supported an NCAA drug-testing program, assuming that all legal ramifications are considered and that consideration will be given to assuring minimal interference, if any, with normal game preparation.

- Did not favor freshman ineligibility in football, stating that such legislation would dictate an increase of at least 10 in the number of grants-in-aid in that sport.

- While there was some support for a one-day early signing date in football, the coaches as a group did not support an early signing date or period and did not support the concept of a quiet period around the National Letter of Intent signing date in their sport. Coaches believe such a provision "would be unrealistic and not workable," Dooley said.

- Recommended that Constitution 3-1-(i)-(2) be amended to increase the amount permissible for individual awards presented by the institution in recognition of conference and national championships to an amount more in line with current market prices for such awards (e.g., rings).

- Supported the NCAA's player-agent registration program and recommended that consideration be given to placing sanctions on agents who violate the registration agreement.

- Favored the concept of permitting a student-athlete to negotiate a loan to purchase disability insurance against the student-athlete's future earnings.

- Supported the proposal requiring member institutions to report certain academic information to the Association, with the understanding that such reports would remain confidential and be in compilation form only. The majority favored having the reports submitted to the institution's conference, if any, with the conference to provide the data to the NCAA in the form of "conference statistics."

- Expressed their belief in the theory of satisfactory-progress requirements but offered several concerns regarding "interference with institutional autonomy" and the possibility of placing more demands on the student-athlete than on other students.

- Supported the legislative-autonomy legislation in 1984 Proposal No. 37.

- Took these positions regarding financial aid:

- Supported 1984 Proposal No. 49, to move the aid definition from the constitution to the bylaws.

- Suggested that student-athletes be permitted to (1) retain the full amount of a Pell Grant, in addition to the institutional grant-in-aid; (2) receive employment income in addition to institutional aid while attending summer school, and (3) sell complimentary game tickets at face value.

- Supported legislation to provide aid to a student-athlete until he or she completes graduation requirements, as long as the individual is not under contract to a professional

NACDA selects 1984-85 officers; Air Force's Clune named president

Col. John J. Clune, director of athletics at the U.S. Air Force Academy, was named president of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics at NACDA's annual convention June 10-13 at Marco Island, Florida.

Rice, Georgia Institute of Technology, second vice-president; Dave Hart, University of Missouri, Columbia, third vice-president, and Vin Cullen, Community College of Rhode Island, secretary.

Four members of the NCAA Presidents' Commission, led by chair John W. Ryan, Indiana University, Bloomington, addressed the convention and discussed upcoming agenda items such as freshman eligibility, Division I reorganization and governance, satisfactory progress, and length of playing seasons.

Other members of the Presidents' Commission in attendance were Walter Washington, Alcorn State University; Glen R. Driscoll, University of Toledo, and Eugene M. Hughes, Northern Arizona University.

John L. Toner, president of the NCAA and director of athletics at the University of Connecticut, discussed academic standards and the upcoming implementation of Proposal No. 48 from the 1983 Convention. Speaking on Division I legislative issues were William J. Flynn, director of athletics, Boston College; Cecil Coleman, commissioner, Midwestern City Conference, and August Erfurth, director of athletics, Rice University.

Two awards were presented during the four-day meetings—Ray Meyer, retiring men's basketball coach at DePaul University and athletics director at the school from 1951 to 1971, received the NIT/NACDA athletics director award, and James R. "Bud" Jack, University of Utah, was honored as the 1984 James J. Corbett Award winner.

In other action at NACDA's 19th annual convention, the following were named to the 1984-85 executive committee: Denis E. Lambert, University of Vermont; Fred A. Schaus, West

Bennett named to NCAA staff

Cathy K. Bennett, a 1980 graduate of Northern Arizona University, has been named productions coordinator in the NCAA's communications department.

This past year, Bennett has been assistant director at the Kansas City regional office of CARE, formerly known as Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere. She wrote scripts and produced public service announcements.

She also has served as director of community relations for the Kansas City chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society (1981-1983) and news editor of the Blue Valley Gazette in Johnson County, Kansas (1980-1981).

At the NCAA, Bennett will be responsible for coordinating NCAA television and radio promotional messages, administering the NCAA Library of Films, and assisting with nonnetwork television rights and promotion of women's athletics.

Bennett replaces Jennifer A. Boyer, who resigned to pursue free-lance production opportunities.

Summary

sports organization.

•Supported the implementation of a two-team, one-game Division I-A football play-off, which would be held one week prior to the National Football League championship game. "The coaches believed this format would minimize most of the arguments against a play-off," Dooley said. He reported that 12 of the coaches were in favor of the two-team approach, one favored a four-team format and four were opposed to a play-off.

Men's basketball coaches

Richard "Digger" Phelps, University of Notre Dame, substituting for Bob Knight, Indiana University, Bloomington, as chair of the men's basketball coaches' meeting, reported these positions, noting that they were based on a May meeting of 122 Division I coaches and a follow-up questionnaire submitted by 100 others:

•Recommended support for 1984 Convention Proposal No. 150, which would permit an institution to designate any three of its basketball coaches (including, if desired, the part-time coach) to recruit and scout off campus. Phelps said the coaches are unanimous in supporting this proposal.

•Overwhelmingly supported the current starting date for the basketball season.

•Strongly supported the establishment of a national officiating body and encouraged the NCAA to pursue this concept.

•By about a two-to-one margin, supported freshman eligibility in Division I basketball.

•Favored the current recruiting periods and contact limitations and favored the concept of a quiet period surrounding the National Letter of Intent signing date for their sport.

•Believed strongly that financial aid to student-athletes should be increased and supported any relief in that area, including:

—Permitting the student-athlete to work during summer school while being aided by the institution.

—Providing aid to the student-athlete attending summer school prior to the freshman year.

—Providing a monthly stipend, possibly $100 per month.

—Permitting one round trip to the student-athlete's home per year, at institutional expense.

•Favored purchasing year-round health and catastrophic accident insurance for student-athletes, citing problems with student-athletes being injured in out-of-season pick-up games or in summer competition.

•Recommended increasing from one to two the number of student-athletes from a given institution who are permitted to play on the same team in approved summer basketball leagues; also, permitting a student-athlete to participate in two different sanctioned leagues in the same summer.

•Favored legislation to permit an institution's basketball team to participate in two preseason scrimmages with outside teams without counting those contests against the limitation on the number of games, with the understanding that no student-athlete would be permitted to miss a class and no overnight travel would be permitted for such scrimmages.

•Believed that coaches should be permitted to observe out-of-season workouts and that controlled, one-on-one skill training involving a coach and a player should be permitted out of season. The coaches also favored permitting recreational basketball activities involving prospective student-athletes.

•Approximately two-thirds supported a limitation on the number of home basketball games a Division I member may play. A survey of the Division I membership will be undertaken to determine if the limit should be 15 or 16.

•Strongly supported legislation permitting a visiting team to provide complimentary game tickets to prospective student-athletes.

•Recommended that the NCAA assume jurisdiction in sanctioning summer basketball camps and that coaches be permitted to work at sanctioned camps only.

•Supported the NCAA's efforts regarding drug testing and drug education.

Women's basketball

Jody Conradt, University of Texas, Austin, reported the following actions and positions taken by the meeting of women's basketball coaches:

•Adopted a resolution including the following recommendations:

—That Division I women's basketball be allowed to implement special championships policies, including seeding the top eight teams without regard to geographical location, placing regions in the bracket according to strength rather than using a predetermined rotation, specifying that the site of a first-round game shall be the home of the top seed, and rotating regional championship sites so the same institution does not serve as host for two consecutive years.

—That the new eight-sport requirement for Division I women's programs be retained. (Unanimous.)

—That the Division I Women's Basketball Committee be elected by mail ballot of all Division I institutions, with at least two candidates for each committee position.

—That each conference and coalition of independent institutions be permitted to appoint its own representative to the regional advisory committees in Division I women's basketball.

—That the NCAA solicit the advice of all Division I women's basketball coaches prior to the adoption of any major change "affecting the development of women's basketball."

—That no restriction be placed on starting dates for practice or playing seasons in women's basketball.

—That no restriction be placed on women's basketball players working in basketball camps at their own institution or elsewhere.

•Took these positions regarding recruiting legislation:

—Supported retention of the current recruiting calendar for at least one more season; also supported consideration for limiting contact and evaluation periods, with the understanding the men's and women's recruiting regulations should be as consistent as possible.

—By a small majority, favored tryouts on the institution's campus for prospective student-athletes.

—Favored prohibiting use of the National Letter of Intent after May 15 in women's basketball and supported a quiet period around the signing date.

•Favored seeding as the first priority in improving the Division I Women's Basketball Championship, rather than expanding the bracket. Also supported the application of Executive Regulation 1-3-(i) to women's championships as of August 1, 1985.

•Favored legislation to permit two preseason scrimmages that would not count against the basketball season limitation. Also opposed moving the start of the basketball season back one month.

•In regard to academic requirements:

—Did not support a minimum grade-point-average requirement for continuing eligibility.

—Supported specific minimum transferable degree credit hours for junior college transfers.

—Favored documentation and publication of certain academic reporting procedures, including graduation rates, with the understanding that consideration should be given to the ramifications of possible "negative recruiting" by some institutions.

•Supported freshman eligibility in basketball.

•Took these positions regarding financial aid for student-athletes:

—Supported permitting the student-athlete to receive a full Pell Grant in addition to the institutional grant-in-aid.

—Opposed allowing the student-athlete to receive employment income (in addition to the full athletics grant) in the academic term but favored such an approach during the summer term.

—Did not favor allowing student-athletes to sell their complimentary tickets.

—Did not favor permitting the institution to pay for a student-athlete's transportation to his or her home.

—Supported moving the financial aid definition from the constitution to the bylaws.

—Favored allowing an institution to continue granting aid to a student-athlete after the fifth year.

•Did not favor allowing colleges to host high school tournaments.

•Supported the proposed NCAA drug-testing program.

Baseball academic all-Americans named

Designated hitter Benny Burke of Southwestern Louisiana received the most votes for the 1984 College Sports Information Directors of America academic all-America baseball team.

Burke, a junior mechanical engineering student, has a 3.200 grade-point average; he batted .343 for the Ragin' Cajuns. He was one of the 10 players selected, none of whom earned first-team honors in 1983.

In CoSIDA's college division, third baseman Paul Schulz of Claremont-Mudd-Scripps led the voting. Schulz, an economics major, had a 3.830 GPA and a .321 batting average.

Elsewhere in Education

Enrollment drop may be temporary

Public school enrollment declined in 1983-84 by nearly half a million from 1982-83, according to the National Education Association.

A total of 39.2 million were enrolled in elementary and secondary schools. The largest gain over 1982-83 was in California, where 22,500 more students were enrolled. The state showing the biggest decline was Michigan, which lost 57,592 students.

The decreasing enrollments may be temporary, however, according to the Census Bureau.

Communities that closed schools and cut teaching staffs as enrollments declined in recent years will be bracing soon for a wave of the offspring of the postwar, baby-boom generation, a Census Bureau report states.

The bureau reported that the number of Americans under age five reached 17.8 million last July 1, the largest number in that age group since 1968, when 17.9 million were recorded.

In the near future, the five-to-13 group, which has been declining in recent years, will stabilize and then begin to grow as those under five today enter school.

'Real world' class is planned

To get acquainted with the real world, high school students are learning how to balance checkbooks and plan meals in a class being tested at Florida State University.

The work being done at FSU is expected to be used as a model for all 67 Florida school districts when the course becomes mandatory in 1986.

The state legislature required schools to teach the course, called Life Management Skills, when it passed legislation in 1983 to improve public school standards. The law requires instruction in nutrition, drug education, consumer education, cardiopulmonary resuscitation and the hazards of smoking.

"Home life is under attack in America," said Sen. Bill Grant, one of the bill's sponsors. "It is my hope that this course will teach students the necessary skills to get along with society and themselves."

Linebacker gets engineering honor

Auburn linebacker Gregg Carr, the leading tackler on the team the past two seasons, has been named the outstanding junior in the school of engineering, where he has maintained better than a 3.700 grade-point average the past two years.

Carr, a senior from Birmingham, is majoring in civil engineering. He was a unanimous all-Southeastern Conference selection in 1983 and a second team Associated Press all-America. He has been a member of the conference academic team the past three years.

Basics better than computer skills

High school graduates going directly into the job market would be better served by basic skills such as reading, writing and arithmetic than computer know-how, a National Academy of Science study concluded.

The report said "providing job skills cannot substitute for education in the core competencies." The study was written from the employers' point of view and focused on the 75 percent of students who will not get college degrees.

"Those who enter the work force after earning a high school diploma need virtually the same competencies as those going on to college," the study said. "It is precisely in the basic intellectual skills that young employees show the greatest deficiencies."

The report also said students do not need "drastically higher skills in computer science and programming" to get a job in the 1980s.

CEOs named at several members

Several NCAA member institutions have named new chief executive officers recently, and J. C. Powell, president of Eastern Kentucky University, has announced his retirement, effective December 30.

New presidents are Robert N. Aebersold, Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania (from vice president of academic affairs); William S. Gaither, Drexel University (from dean of marine studies at the University of Delaware); Jerry C. Lee, Gallaudet College (from acting president); John R. Brazil, Southeastern Massachusetts University (from interim academic vice-president at San Jose State University); Herbert F. Reinhard, Morehead State University (former president of Slippery Rock), and John Welty Indiana University of Pennsylvania (from acting president).

Powell and Reinhard are members of the NCAA Presidents' Commission.

In other academic appointments, William R. Monat, president of Northern Illinois University, has been named chancellor of the Illinois Board of Regents.

Summer basketball leagues approved

An additional 28 summer basketball leagues have been approved by the NCAA Administrative Committee, acting for the Council.

Any male or female student-athlete with intercollegiate basketball eligibility remaining may participate between June 15 and August 31 in a basketball league approved by the Council, in accordance with NCAA Constitution 3-9-(b)-(1).

The additional 28 leagues brings to 246 the number of leagues approved this year. Previous lists of approved games appeared in the April 11, April 25, May 9, May 23 and June 13 issues of The NCAA News.

Following are the latest summer basketball leagues approved by the

Administrative Committee:

Men's leagues

Connecticut—Madison Beach and Recreation Department Men's Summer Basketball League, Madison; Florida—Dade Street Community Center Summer Basketball League, Tallahassee; Indiana—Lewis Memorial Tournament, Muncie; Maryland—Annapolis Summer Basketball League, Annapolis; Massachusetts—Nathan Bill Basketball League, Springfield; Michigan—Great Southwest Michigan 3-Player Shootout, Kalamazoo; Nevada—The Doolittle Community Center Summer Basketball, North Las Vegas; New Jersey—Uptown Summer Basketball League, Atlantic City; Ohio—Parma Heights Summer Outdoor Basketball League, Parma Heights; The Catholic Club/College Men's Summer Basketball League, Toledo; Worthington "Red" Summer Basketball League, Worthington; Oregon—Eugene Parks & Recreation Department Summer Basketball; Pennsylvania—Millcreek Summer League, Erie; Northeast Philadelphia Open Men's Basketball

Rainbow Stadium

The University of Hawaii recently completed construction of its new, $7.6-million baseball stadium in Honolulu. The facility has individual theater-style seats for 4,312 people. The air-conditioned, two-level press box has two radio booths, plus a camera deck. Other features are two concession stands, four restrooms, ticket office and administrative offices.

Compliance forms must be returned by September 15

The 1984-85 certification of compliance forms have been mailed to chief executive officers at all NCAA member institutions.

Included in the mailing were the 1984-85 Institutional Certification of Compliance Form and the 1984-85 Staff Members Certification of Compliance Form.

Both forms must be completed and returned to the NCAA national office not later than September 15 in order for an institution to enter team or individual competitors in 1984-85 NCAA championship meets or tournaments. Any form received after September 15 must have been post-marked by September 8.

The institutional form must be signed by the chief executive officer and state whether NCAA legislation will be applied to the women's program only (if the institution has no men's program), the men's program only, or both men's and women's programs. A women's program for which an institution certifies compliance for the first time with NCAA legislation during the 1984-85 academic year will be bound by those rules beginning August 1, 1984, provided the form is completed and received in the national office by August 1.

The staff members form must be signed by all appropriate athletics department staff members stating that their sports are in accordance with NCAA rules and regulations.

Baseball, softball statistics due

Sports information directors at NCAA member institutions should be reminded that final baseball and women's softball statistics are due soon.

All SIDs should have received final reporting forms for baseball and women's softball statistics. Anyone who has not received these forms should contact James F. Wright or Gary K. Johnson at the NCAA national office.

The final Division I baseball and women's softball statistics will appear in the July 4 issue of The NCAA News. Division I forms should be returned by June 29 to be included in the final rankings.

Divisions II and III statistics will be published in the July 18 issue, and SIDs should return those forms by July 9.

If time does not permit mailing the reporting form, SIDs are urged to contact Wright or Johnson by telephone.

Zorn swims to record, two victories

Trischa Zorn, a sophomore at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, shattered a world record for the handicapped en route to winning two swimming gold medals in the third International Games for the Disabled in New York this week.

Zorn, the first handicapped student-athlete to earn an athletics grant-in-aid at Nebraska, won the Class B2 (less than one-third normal vision) 100-meter freestyle in 1:10.14, bettering the old record of 1:12.31. She also won the 100-meter backstroke in 1:13.87. Zorn is a sophomore from Mission Viejo, California.

Merrimack joins Northeast-Eight

Merrimack College has joined the Northeast-Eight Conference, a Division II conference with competition in six men's sports and five women's sports.

Merrimack, located in North Andover, Massachusetts, replaced the University of Hartford, which has moved to the Eastern College Athletic Conference North Atlantic.

Other schools in the Northeast-Eight, which will begin its fifth year this fall, are American International College, Assumption College, Bentley College, Bryant College, St. Anselm College, Springfield College and Stonehill College.

Merrimack will be eligible for conference championships in 1984-85.

UCLA, Cal State Northridge tie for most NCAA titles

UCLA and Cal State Northridge were the top winners in 1983-84 NCAA championships competition, as the Bruins and Matadors each claimed four national titles.

UCLA, which is second to Southern California on the all-time list with 50 NCAA championships, won Division I titles in men's gymnastics, women's softball, men's volleyball and men's tennis.

Cal State Northridge passed Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo for the all-time lead in Division II championships with its four victories in women's volleyball, men's swimming and diving, baseball, and women's softball. Cal State Northridge now has 23 championships, one ahead of Cal Poly-SLO, which won two championships in 1983-84.

Eight institutions won two championships each in 1983-84. In Division

I, Oregon (women's cross country, men's outdoor track) and Utah (women's gymnastics, men's and women's skiing) were the double winners.

Besides Cal Poly-SLO (women's cross country, women's outdoor track) in Division II, other two-time champions were Central Missouri State (men's basketball, women's basketball) and Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (wrestling, men's tennis).

In Division III, Trenton State (field hockey, wrestling), Wisconsin-La Crosse (women's cross country, women's outdoor track) and Kenyon (men's swimming and diving, women's swimming and diving) were the top winners.

Cal State Stanislaus, with its victory in the Division III Men's Golf Championships, maintained its lead in that division with nine all-time championships. Seven of those nine have been won in men's golf.

Led by UCLA's three championships in men's sports, the Pacific-10 Conference won five NCAA titles in 1983-84, most among Division I conferences. Oregon's victory in the Division I Men's Outdoor Track Championships and California's victory in the Men's Water Polo Championships were the other Pac-10 titles.

The Western Collegiate Athletic Association and the Southwest Athletic Conference each won three championships to tie for second among Division I conferences.

The WCAA's Division I titles were won by Southern California (women's basketball), UCLA (women's softball) and Stanford (women's tennis). Five of the eight 1983-84 WCAA members have men's programs that are aligned with the Pacific-10 Conference. The same five schools recently announced that they are leaving the WCAA in 1985-86 to form their own conference.

SWC winners in 1983-84 were Texas (women's swimming and diving), Arkansas (men's indoor track) and Houston (men's golf). The Southwest Conference led all Division I conferences in 1982-83 with five NCAA titles.

Three conferences had two team champions in 1983-84—Western Athletic, Big Ten and Atlantic 10. Division I conferences with one NCAA title each were Northern Pacific, Sun Belt, Missouri Valley, Atlantic Coast, Big East, Ivy, High

Column No. 13

Field hockey, men's ice hockey and men's lacrosse championships

Because the NCAA no longer will be sponsoring Division II national championships in the sports of field hockey and men's ice hockey (and men's lacrosse), member institutions classified in Division II in those sports were required under the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 10-6-(c) to declare their intentions to compete in either the Division I or Division III championship in each sport by June 1, 1984, in order to be eligible for those national championships for the 1984-85 academic year. An institution's declaration of intent in accordance with this legislation shall be effective for a minimum of three years.

To be eligible for the Division I championship in field hockey, men's ice hockey or men's lacrosse, a Division II institution is required to meet all Division I institutional and individual eligibility requirements that govern the sport in question. As interpreted by the NCAA Administrative Committee (and approved by the NCAA Council at its August 1983 meeting), a Division II member institution electing to be eligible for a Division I championship under Bylaw 10-6-(c) may use the Division I Bylaw 6-5 financial aid limitation in that sport.

Likewise, to be eligible for the Division III championship in field hockey, men's ice hockey or men's lacrosse, the Division II institution is required to meet all Division III institutional and individual eligibility requirements that govern the sport in question and shall schedule and play more than 50 percent of its contests in that sport against Division III members.

Member institutions that have not declared either Division I or Division III in the above-mentioned sports still may operate under Division II rules but will not be eligible for any NCAA championships in those sports.

Division II institutions that declare their intentions to compete in either Division I or Division III championships under Bylaw 10-6-(c) in field hockey, men's ice hockey or men's lacrosse may continue to count the sport in order to meet the minimum sports sponsorship criteria set forth in Bylaw 11-2.

Recruiting—advertisements

Under the provisions of Case No. 184 (page 296, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), member institutions or conferences may not buy or arrange to have space in game programs or other printed materials (e.g., periodicals designed to analyze recruiting activities) for any purpose whatsoever. This regulation was prompted in part by the concern of member institutions that the advertisements were not an appropriate means of recruiting and that they were being forced by competitive recruiting considerations to purchase advertisements in a number of sports publications.

Accordingly, it was intended that the provisions of Case No. 184 apply to any printed materials that are published at least in part to provide information concerning the athletics participation or evaluation of prospective student-athletes.

Satisfactory-progress rule

Eligibility test faces IOC

A showdown on Olympic eligibility that could have wide-ranging effects may be brewing between the International Olympic Committee and the world governing body of soccer.

When qualifying for the 16-nation tournament began two years ago, the IOC permitted the Federation Internationale de Football Association to set its own eligibility requirements. FIFA opened play to professionals, excluding European and South American players who had competed in the World Cup.

With the Los Angeles games now less than two months away, several qualifiers have said they intend to continue using professionals. Canada qualified with a squad made up almost entirely of players from the North American Soccer League; West Germany, which was a late replacement in the field when the three Eastern European qualifiers boycotted, had announced a 17-man, all-professional team.

France also has used professionals, while Brazil is one of the few qualifiers that has announced it will use an all-amateur team. The United States, which qualified automatically as the host nation, recently announced an 18-man squad that contained two pros and then added two additional professionals last week.

To date, the IOC has not given a definitive answer on the use of professionals in Los Angeles. Soccer traditionally has been one of the Olympics' biggest revenue-producing sports. Even in the United States, where the sport is not as popular as the rest of the world, this year's Olympic final in the Rose Bowl has been sold out.

Testimony

flicted with statements gathered earlier by NCAA investigators and that some statements from the same persons were "flatly contradictory."

Cross was a member of the Committee on Infractions that investigated UNLV's basketball program.

"The affidavits were not as reliable as that information presented at a previous time," Cross said. "I felt the institution was not making an effort to find out everything," he also told the court.

Tarkanian contends that the NCAA violated due process of law in conducting its investigation.

A lawyer for the university, K. Michael Leavitt, told the court that the NCAA did not give the university any sources for the charges against its basketball program until the infractions committee hearings. He acknowledged, however, that the institution contacted individuals identified in the NCAA's official inquiry who were the sources of the information described in the allegations.

NCAA attorney James McLarney of Kansas City, Missouri, told the court that "UNLV had more extensive hearings, deliberations and sessions than any other school in NCAA history."

Tarkanian's attorneys rested their case late June 15.

The NCAA began presenting its case June 18 and plans to call half a dozen or more witnesses in its defense, including William L. Matthews, professor of law at the University of Kentucky; Arthur R. Reynolds, retired dean of the graduate school at the University of Northern Colorado, and J. Neils Thompson, University of Texas, Austin. Reynolds was chair and Matthews was a member of the Committee on Infractions when it issued the penalty against UNLV. Thompson was NCAA president in 1977 when the NCAA Council accepted the penalties proposed by the infractions committee and heard an appeal by the institution.

TV in the News

ESPN football begins September 1

ESPN, the new carrier of the NCAA football television supplementary series, will kick off its 1984 coverage with a September 1 contest between Brigham Young and Pittsburgh. The Cougars and Panthers will meet at 8 p.m. Eastern time in Pittsburgh.

The national cable network also has announced its second game—Mississippi at Arkansas at 8 p.m. Eastern time September 15. Under terms of its recently signed agreement with the NCAA, which is contingent on the outcome of the current antitrust suit against the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan, ESPN will cablecast 14 games each of the next two seasons.

ESPN is the country's largest cable network, available in 31.8 million homes.

MCAC signs basketball contract

The Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference and Katz Sports of New York have signed a two-year agreement to televise men's basketball.

Katz will televise conference games only, including the league's postseason tournament through the semifinals. The Metro Conference tournament championship is shown on network television.

NBA boosts revenue with Turner

Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., has acquired cable television rights to National Basketball Association games. In the process, the NBA nearly will double its revenue from its old two-network cable package.

Turner will cablecast 55 regular-season and 20 play-off games during each of the next two seasons. That represents almost a 50 percent reduction in the number of games on cable.

The league's previous two-year package, with ESPN and the USA Network, paid a total of $11 million. Turner will pay the NBA $20 million under the terms of the new agreement.

The games will be carried on cable systems across the nation by Turner's Atlanta-based superstation, WTBS.

ABC's Olympic schedule unchanged

Despite the Eastern bloc boycott of the Los Angeles Olympics, ABC officials do not plan to cut back coverage of the games.

"We are going full steam ahead with our 186 hours of television coverage, almost all of it live and a great proportion of it live in prime time," ABC President James E. Duffy told the American Advertising Federation annual meeting June 5 in Denver.

Duffy said ABC was confident that the boycott would not have a devastating effect on ratings and that ratings would be higher than disappointing figures for the Winter Olympics.

He also told the advertising group that network television would continue to play a major role in telecommunications. He predicted the networks' ability to provide immediate information and original programming would more than offset increases in production costs and viewer losses to independent stations, satellite and cable television, and video recorders.

USFL signs three-year cable pact

The United States Football League has announced a three-year agreement with ESPN for cable television rights to the league's games.

The agreement is the largest cable contract in sports, according to Chet Simmons, USFL commissioner.

"This is a tremendously important day for the USFL," said Simmons. "The fact that ESPN has stepped forward is a signal that the league has proven its appeal in a significant segment of the sports audience."

ESPN paid a reported $70 million for the new, three-year package. ESPN televised 34 games in 1973 and 36 games this year, with a rights fee of $11 million.

1979 NCAA final still rates first

Game No. 7 of the recent National Basketball Association championship series between Boston and Los Angeles drew the highest rating ever for a professional basketball telecast, but it ranks only 12th on the sport's all-time list.

Eleven games from past NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championships have drawn bigger audiences than the 19.3 rating/33 share for the Lakers-Celtics showdown, won by the Celtics last week in Boston.

No. 1 on the all-time list was the 1979 NCAA final between Michigan State and Indiana State, which averaged a 24.1/38. Ironically, that game matched two superstars—Larry Bird and Earvin "Magic" Johnson—who starred in this year's NBA series.

Division I basketball coaches for the past two years.

The other three proposals from CFA members, in addition to the Pell Grant amendment:

•To amend Constitution 5-7-(b) to hold the Division I-A legislative meeting in August rather than in June.

•To amend Bylaw 1-2-(a)-(1)-(i) to eliminate the limitation on the number of recruiting contacts with a prospective student-athlete at the prospect's educational institution.

•To permit an institution to continue to award financial aid to an undergraduate student-athlete beyond the five-year period of eligibility.

The Division I-A meeting officially begins with a discussion session at 2 p.m. June 28. Registration opens at 7 a.m. that day, and most Division I-A conferences have scheduled meetings for that morning. A reception for all in attendance will be held at 6 that evening.

Discussion will continue from 8:30 to 10 a.m. June 29, with the business session (voting) to begin at 10. The meeting is scheduled to end by 4 p.m. June 29.

As of June 19, 90 of the 116 Division I-A institutions and allied conferences had appointed a total of 236 delegates to attend the meeting. Appointments by the other 26 I-A members and representatives of the news media are expected to push the attendance total to 300 or more.

Drug-testing

detection), the committee is suggesting that the NCAA institute a random, on-campus testing program throughout the academic year. Within a specified number of years, all member institutions would be visited at least once by specimen-collection teams, and student-athletes in specified sports would be selected randomly to be tested for anabolic steroids. Other performance-enhancing drugs also could be included in the on-campus testing. It is contemplated that this part of the program would be a cooperative, integrated effort involving the institutions, its conference (if so affiliated) and the NCAA.

3. Testing for other controlled substances (e.g., marijuana, LSD, heroin), which are not considered in the performance-enhancing category, would be the responsibility of each institution. The special committee proposes to provide guidelines to assist those institutions choosing to develop a locally arranged drug-testing program to cover this category.

The committee believes that a drug-testing program in which the NCAA tested for drugs that generally are not believed to affect athletic performance or to impair the health of the student-athlete would be difficult to justify legally because it could be argued that such testing does not fall within the purview of an athletics governing body.

The committee encouraged all member institutions to develop local drug-education programs for student-athletes and staff, as recommended in 1982 by the NCAA Drug Education Committee. In addition, it proposed an educational program, if a drug-testing plan is adopted at the 1985 Convention, to inform student-athletes and staff of the purposes and methods of the plan and the responsibilities of all parties in implementing the program.

Sanctions

The Administrative Committee is continuing to study the sanctions to be applied if a prohibited drug is used by a student-athlete. Among the possibilities are these:

•Forfeiture of an institution's contests if a student-athlete tests positive in the NCAA testing program (not the institutional program).

•Permanent loss of eligibility (subject to existing appeal opportunities) by the student-athlete testing positive in the NCAA program (not the institution's own program).

•Application of the "show cause" provision of the enforcement procedure if an athletics department staff member is found to have been involved, directly or indirectly, in arrangements to provide prohibited drugs to student-athletes.

Costs

The special committee continues to investigate cost factors. While no specific cost figure is available at this time, the committee currently estimates that the proposed program would cost $700,000 to $1 million for the first year.

Proposed NCAA list of banned drugs

The following list has been developed by the Special Committee on Drug Testing after consideration of a similar list developed for Olympics purposes. The list includes drugs generally purported to be performance-enhancing drugs and/or potentially harmful to the health and safety of the student-athlete.

The special committee believes that a student-athlete who may be subject to drug testing should take no drug or medication without checking specifically on its status. A substance on the NCAA's banned list, even though it may be prescribed by a physician or dentist, would remain a banned substance in sports. In most instances, there are appropriate alternatives that can be prescribed that do not contain banned substances.

1. Psychomotor stimulant drugs. The amphetamines and cocaine represent this category within the list. Ritalin and preludein are among the drugs in relatively common clinical use that are on the banned list.

2. Sympathomimetic drugs. The ephedrine is in this category, and they are found in many medicines for upper-respiratory illnesses, congestion and asthma.

A. Psychomotor stimulants:

amphetamine	fencamfamin	phendimetrazine
