NCAA football TV meeting scheduled July 10

A Special NCAA Football Television Meeting of Division I has been scheduled for 1 to 6 p.m. Central time Tuesday, July 10, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in downtown Chicago.

The special meeting, which had been authorized by the 1984 Convention, will include a discussion period and voting session dealing with a new football television plan recommended by the NCAA Football Television Committee. The plan will be presented as an alternative to the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan, which was voided by a June 27 antitrust ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court (see page 7).

The meeting is designed to be a legislative session, consistent with the rulings of the Federal judiciary, to determine 1984 football television policies for Divisions I-A and I-AA. The I-A policies are subject to the approval of Division I-A.

The proposed plan, developed by a special subcommittee on NCAA Division I-A football television planning; an explanatory memorandum from the Council, and an appointment-of-delegate form, plus instructions on submitting amendments to the proposed plan, were sent July 3 by rapid delivery to the chief executive officer of each Division I-A and Division I-AA active and allied voting member. Each CEO was asked to route the information to the member's director of athletics, faculty athletics representative or other delegates that the CEO will appoint to attend the meeting.

In summary, the proposed plan would encompass the following:

- It would be available to all Division I-A members for the 1984 season only.

- A 3½-hour reserved sliding time period under NCAA control would be designated by the Football Television Committee, with network involvement, for each Saturday of the 1984 season. The time periods would be from noon to 3:30 p.m. or 3:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. The period for each Saturday would be designated by August 1.

- Member institutions and conferences would be free to televise outside the sliding time period.

- Networks that are capable of reaching at least 30 states and 20 million homes and that can guarantee 10 dates are eligible to bid on games to be telecast/cablecast during the sliding time period. All games will be telecast/cablecast nationally or on a regional basis.

- Any qualified national network, as described above, could bid on any game on any given date. Negotiations for rights fees would be with the individual institutions.

- There would be a 20 percent assessment from the top of all rights fees for games televised in the sliding time period. Four percent would go to the NCAA for football-related services related to Division I-A football, and 16 percent would go into a pool to be evenly distributed to those members involved in the plan that were not selected during the season.

- There would be an appearance limit of four times within the protected time period. If only one national network becomes involved in the bidding, that appearance limitation would be reduced to three.

Nominations open for NCAA positions

The NCAA Nominating Committee for the 1985 Convention is accepting nominations for president, secretary-treasurer and 12 Council positions that expire in January 1985.

John L. Toner, president, University of Connecticut, and John R. Davis, secretary-treasurer, Oregon State University, will conclude their two-year appointments at the 1985 Convention.

Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University, Division I vice-president and a Council member, also is not eligible for reelection.

The deadline for submitting nominations is September 1. Nominations may be sent to Jack V. Doland, McNeese State University, chair of the Nominating Committee, or to any member of the committee. Nominations also may be sent directly to Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, at the NCAA national office.

Seven of the 12 Council members whose terms expire are eligible for reelection. Two of the seven are in Division I, three are in Division II and two are in Division III.

In Division I, those eligible for reelection are Kathleen M. Wear, La Salle College, and Arliss L. Roaden, Tennessee Technological University. Those not eligible for reelection are Francis W. Bonner, Furman University; Norrell; Charles H. Samson, Texas A&M University, and Richard G. Shrider, Miami University (Ohio).

One of the Division I representatives elected or reelected must be a chief executive officer. Two of the Division I members elected or reelected must be women. In addition, one must be a I-AAA member and one must represent the I-AA Central region. New representatives must be elected from three Division I-A conferences—Big Ten, Mid-American Athletic and Southwest Athletic—and the I-AA South region.

Those Division II Council members eligible for reelection to a full term are Joan Board, Grand Valley State College; Howard Elwell, Gannon University, and Milton J. Piepul, American International College.

One Division II member elected or reelected must be a woman, one must be from Region II-1 and one must be from Region II-3. All three of the Division II members whose terms expire are eligible for reelection.

In Division III, Thomas M. Kinder, Bridgewater College (Virginia), and Judith M. Sweet, University of California, San Diego, are eligible for reelection. Edwin D. Muto, State University of New York, Buffalo, is not eligible for reelection.

Division I-A favors autonomy, opposes football play-off plan

Despite a preoccupation with the ramifications of the U.S. Supreme Court's June 27 decision regarding football television controls, delegates to the first Division I-A midyear legislative meeting June 28-29 in Chicago took several decisive actions—including strong opposition to the concept of establishing a Division I-A football play-off and equally strong support for greater legislative autonomy within Division I.

Most discussion at the meeting—and in the several meetings held in conjunction with it—dealt with the uncertainty of college football on television in 1984. The legislative meeting heard presentations by John D. Swofford, chair of the NCAA Football Television Committee, and Frank H. Easterbrook, the Association's counsel of record in the litigation before the Supreme Court, as well as a floor presentation by Clyde Muchmore, an attorney for the University of Oklahoma, one of the plaintiffs in the case.

The football television situation is reported in detail elsewhere in this issue.

After a straw vote indicated clear opposition to the idea of a football play-off in Division I-A—a concept forwarded without recommendation by the NCAA Postseason Football Committee—William H. Baughn, NCAA Council member from the University of Colorado and chair of the discussion session at the meeting, said he would presume “that the Council will no longer pursue the matter at this time.”

Delegates to the meeting took advantage of their first opportunity to agree to sponsor legislation at the next annual NCAA Convention. They considered 11 proposals submitted by Division I-A members prior to the June 21 deadline and voted to sponsor five of them, in the name of the Division I-A meeting, at the January 1985 Convention in Nashville.

Proposals that will be sponsored by the Division I-A meeting:

- Amendments to Constitution 3-1 and 3-4(b)-(1) and to Bylaws 1-6 and 5-1-(1) to permit an incoming student-athlete to receive financial aid during the summer prior to the student's freshman year.

- An amendment to Constitution 3-4(b) to permit an undergraduate student-athlete to receive financial aid beyond the five-year period of

Association to appeal Tarkanian ruling

The NCAA will appeal a ruling by a Nevada state judge who ordered the Association to halt its efforts to suspend Jerry Tarkanian as head men's basketball coach at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

NCAA attorney James McLarney said the June 25 decision would be appealed to the Nevada Supreme Court.

The NCAA placed UNLV on probation for two years in 1977 and ordered the institution to suspend Tarkanian for the same period. Tarkanian obtained a court order blocking his suspension and that injunction was made permanent in Judge Paul Goldman's ruling.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions found UNLV guilty of 38 rules violations in a 1976 case that involved 78 allegations of misconduct in the men's basketball program.

against the Association that his due-process rights had been violated during the investigation because UNLV had not been given sufficient information or time to answer the allegations. He also claimed that certain members of the Association's enforcement staff were trying to exclude him from college coaching.

However, McLarney told the court that UNLV had more extensive hearings, deliberations and sessions than any other school in NCAA history.

Presidents' Commission targets four subjects for study

The NCAA Presidents' Commission has decided to focus its work in four primary areas by establishing a Commission subcommittee to deal with each—academic affairs, financial issues, institutional control and integrity of the system, and student life.

Commission members will be asked to identify their preferences for appointment to the respective subcommittees, and the Commission officers will serve as an agenda committee to assign topics to each subcommittee.

The Commission reached those decisions in its first meeting, held June 30 at the Westin O'Hare Hotel in Chicago. Twenty-seven of the 44

Commission members were in attendance despite the fact that the meeting was scheduled with two weeks' notice.

Among the specific topics the Commission agreed to discuss in future meetings—via assignment to the appropriate subcommittee—were these:

- The academic reporting proposal under consideration by the NCAA Council. That proposal will be revised as a result of discussions in the Division I summer meeting and the Division I-A legislative meeting, and copies of the proposal will be provided to the Commission after it is reviewed by the Council and Division I Steering Committee in August.

- Freshman eligibility. The Commission asked the NCAA staff to provide all available data on the academic performance of freshman student-athletes and agreed to study the matter without recommending legislation for consideration at the 1985 Convention.

- Proposal No. 48. The Commission asked that the final report of the Special NCAA Committee on Academic Research be shared with the Commission when it becomes available, as well as a report on any modification in Bylaw 5-1-(j) that the NCAA Council may consider when it receives the report.

- Institutional control. The Commission will ask its subcommittee on institutional control and integrity of the system to review a document written by Charles Alan Wright, University of Texas, Austin, and Frank J. Remington, University of Wisconsin, Madison, the immediate past chair and current chair, respectively, of the NCAA Committee on Infractions. The statement discusses those individuals' views of ways and means of enhancing institutional control of athletics programs and institutional observance of NCAA legislation.

- Ways and means of controlling the cost of athletics programs.

- Length of playing seasons in intercollegiate athletics.

- Drug abuse by student-athletes.

The Commission adopted the following resolution as a summary of its initial discussions:

“The NCAA Presidents' Commission, in its first meeting, held on June 30, 1984:

- “1. Affirms its belief in the value of intercollegiate athletics to the individuals who participate, to the individual institutions involved and to the public; and

- “2. Affirms that intercollegiate athletics should be conducted in the spirit of and in accordance with generally accepted principles of

Healy's reforms would deemphasize athletics

By Ed Fowler
Houston Chronicle

In the little noted nor long remembered department, the Rev. Timothy J. Healy, president of Georgetown University, gave a speech recently urging major reforms in college athletics.

Healy spoke in Washington before the University Club, which presented him an award for service to the community and commitment to amateur athletics. Then, presumably, the audience thanked him, yawned and went home.

The Washington Post covered the speech and gave it account a two-column headline on page three of the sports section. The Soviet boycott of the Olympics dominated the first page, which also featured stories on a Milwaukee Bucks-New Jersey Nets NBA play-off game; the New York Islanders of the NHL, and the impending sale of the Redskins, the local USFL team.

The Rev. Healy wants to save college sports, but, as he undoubtedly already was aware, salvation is a tough sell.

Regardless of how little interest there is in his ideas, they bear relating. Healy wants to do away with freshman eligibility, cut the basketball season to 20 games, eliminate spring football practice and strip a school of some of its scholarships if it does not graduate the same percentage of athletes as nonathletes.

As chairman of the American Council on Education and a member of its athletic committee, as well as being the president of the school that won the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship this year, Healy labors under no delusions about where opposition to his ideas will come from. The NCAA, which represents all the major football and basketball powers, will willingly enact his measures as likely as it will raze stadiums and field houses across the land.

"The NCAA is a classic example of the fox in the henhouse," he said. "They're not about to reform it out of existence."

Healy wants freshman participation eliminated because it allows the first-year college student no transition period and encourages him to avoid time-consuming courses. He wants spring football practice thrown out so the game can be contained in one academic term. Football and basketball, which spills over from the fall into the spring semester, "wreck" two academic terms, he said.

"The length and intensity of seasons are positively ridiculous."

He would like basketball practice to begin a month later, on November 15. He advocates limiting appearances to two a were forced to admit only athletes with a realistic hope of graduation.

Those reforms would deemphasize college sports to a level approaching sanity and put some meaning back in the term "student-athlete." A ridiculous percentage of the young men starring in college athletics now have no more business in a university, from an academic standpoint, than do cantaloupes, and are about as educable.

Implementation of Healy's ideas would require colleges to go back to admitting students, including some who happen to be skilled in athletics, and scotch the hypocrisy of the current practice. Those who indulge in it say they are providing a service to youngsters who otherwise would not be able to get an education. They do not, and cannot, explain why they furnish this service to those who have no athletic talent.

It's questionable, too, how much education they receive. You can roll a cantaloupe around campus for four years, but it won't turn out much smarter.

NCAA members will resist these enlightened suggestions, which would erode their recognition and revenue-generating capabilities. They cannot, however, forever close their eyes to the inevitable.

If the major football powers gain control over their individual television rights, as appears likely, the day will come even sooner when college athletes unionize and demand to be paid.

It will be even more difficult then for an old grad to look away and pretend these young men are members of the college community in any sense other than as employees. Rah, rah? Bah.

College athletes will not remain in limbo eternally. One day soon, they are going to be true amateurs or true professionals. It's time to mind what the preacher tells us.

Columnary Craft

week except in conference and postseason tournaments and trimming the NCAA tournament from three weeks to two, plus keeping teams in geographical groupings until the Final Four. (The Georgetown team spent three consecutive weeks in the West this year.)

Only 20 percent of NFL and NBA players are college graduates, he said, and of those, 75 percent have physical education degrees. "Once we have tidied up entry requirements," he said, "then we should use graduation rates as a control device." In that regard, he would adopt a plan promulgated by Bobby Knight, the Indiana basketball coach, under which schools whose athletes do not graduate at the same rate as the entire population would lose scholarships.

Healy did not address the issue of cheating in recruiting, perhaps because it would be drastically reduced if colleges

Research proved decisive in smaller basketball debate

By Jill Hutchison
Acting chair, United States Girls' and Women's Basketball Rules Committee

Considerable controversy has surrounded the adoption of a smaller basketball by the United States Girls' and Women's Basketball Rules Committee (USGWBC).

The use of the smaller basketball has been discussed, with varying degrees of interest, by the committee since 1977. In October 1982, the Women's Basketball Coaches Association conducted a survey, which included questions concerning rules changes and the possibility of adopting the smaller basketball. The coaches thought that the smaller basketball potentially could enhance the skills of female basketball players. However, most coaches remained undecided on the issue.

In November 1982, the NCAA met with representatives of various athletics governing bodies and associations to review the WBCA survey and determined that professional research on the effects of the smaller basketball should be directed by the WBCA.

Enthusiastic support for the smaller basketball became apparent in the February 1983 committee meeting following the Women's Basketball Coaches Association's presentation of the information regarding the effects of the smaller basketball on the performance levels of female athletes. Preliminary research indicated that the smaller basketball could help improve the skills of female basketball players. The recommendation to adopt the smaller basketball, which was passed at the WBCA convention in March 1983, precipitated more extensive research to determine the effects of the rule change.

Two major research studies were conducted between the 1983 and 1984 rules meetings. Bette Harris and Jackie Dailey, assistant professors of physical education at Longwood College and Bowling Green State University, respectively, used 800 participants at the 1983 Michigan state girls' basketball camp. Players were divided randomly into two groups, with the experimental group using the smaller basketball and the control group performing identical drills with the regulation basketball. Skills tests with both basketballs also were conducted. The study indicated a significantly higher level of performance in the experimental group. Further testing also revealed a significant increase in performance without practice, using the smaller basketball.

William S. Husak, director of the motor behavior research laboratory at California State University, Long Beach, investigated performance and attitude differences between players using the different balls in camps and competitive leagues. Husak's studies indicated that the quality of play would improve with the smaller basketball.

Action to table the motion for the third consecutive year was rejected by the USGWBC. It was felt that adequate research had been conducted, with the exception of actual use of the ball in competition. Experimentation by collegiate groups was rejected because of the overlap of opponents during regular-season scheduling, which might necessitate game-to-game decisions on which basketball to use. Concerns about cost, the credibility of women's basketball, timing of the decision and international repercussions were debated extensively. The vote for adoption was 12-4.

Organizations participating on the rules committee are obligated to use the rules adopted each year. Each of the three collegiate governing organizations uses an official basketball for championship play: NCAA—Spalding, NAIA—Voit and NJCAA—Rawlings. The Spalding and Rawlings basketballs will be available later in the year; the Voit ball is in circulation. Other companies planning to make or now manufacturing the smaller basketball include Baden, Brine, Mikasa, Tachikara and Wilson.

Perhaps the best option for those opposed to the smaller ball is to use

Comments on court's ruling

Following are reactions of college coaches and administrators to the U.S. Supreme Court's decision that voided the NCAA's 1982-1985 Football Television Plan and ended the Association's college football television controls:

Grambling State University
The Associated Press

"Oh, man. This puts us in a tough position. I go with the constitution and what the Supreme Court thinks,

Only recently, we had play-offs in I-AA, because the NCAA knew we in I-AA weren't going to play in the Rose Bowl or the Orange Bowl or the Sugar Bowl. So, they gave us a play-off.

"It's going to affect our enrollment. It's going to give them (I-A football schools) more advantage in recruiting, more financial advantage. Those of us who do not have the opportunity to appear are going to be at a tremendous disadvantage."

William S. Banowsky, president
University of Oklahoma
USA Today

"... But the important thing is that the University of Oklahoma, with its great football tradition, is free now to use more fully the dynamic medium of television to the benefit of the university and the state.

"What this all proves, in one way, is that a lot of things in our free society need to be questioned from time to time. This is a good lesson for all of us.

"We think that freedom is the best climate, and while the decision presents a great challenge to the University of Oklahoma and other schools throughout the country, a few years from now we will all be better off because of this battle."

Robert Brodhead, athletics director
Louisiana State University
The Associated Press

"I don't think the coalition is going to be greedy about it and refuse to support some of the championships below Division I-A, which it supports now. But I think everyone has to be realistic enough to know that those particular games that might have been shown were causing the ratings to fall dramatically.

"The television public wants to see Oklahoma-Nebraska or LSU-Alabama. Even though they were but I think it's going to have a negative effect on the future of Divisions I-AA, II and III. We aren't going to be able to get a piece of the television pie.

"We knew that the NCAA, through the years, has become very sensitive to the needs of all of its members.

Toner addresses U.S. Senate subcommittee

NCAA President John L. Toner has told a U.S. Senate subcommittee that Congress should not become involved in attempting to pass legislation that would require NCAA member institutions to continue grants-in-aid for athletes until they receive their degrees or stop making progress toward them.

Currently, the NCAA requires that member institutions renew grants-in-aid by July 1 of each academic year.

Toner testified June 26 before the Senate Subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities of the Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) had proposed the hearings to determine whether legislation should be proposed in the area of athletics grants-in-aid.

Toner's statement to the subcommittee follows:

"I am John L. Toner, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, an association of 976 four-year colleges and universities, allied athletics conferences, associated institutions and affiliated organizations. I am also director of athletics at the University of Connecticut.

"I am pleased to appear today, on behalf of the Association, to present testimony on (1) the graduation rates of student-athletes at NCAA member institutions and (2) NCAA policies with reference to the duration of award of financial aid to student-athletes.

"The basic purpose of the NCAA, as stated in its constitution, is to 'initiate, stimulate and improve intercollegiate athletics programs for student-athletes and to promote and develop educational leadership, physical fitness, sports participation as a recreational pursuit and athletic excellence.'

"A basic purpose of the Association is 'to maintain intercollegiate athletics as an integral part of the educational program and the athlete as an integral part of the student body. . . .'

"Consistent with this basic philosophy, NCAA member colleges and universities, over a period of many years, have adopted legislation setting forth minimum standards for eligibility for participation in intercollegiate athletics—both in terms of initial eligibility and in terms of satisfactory academic progress after matriculation—designed to ensure the academic accountability of student-athletes. Legislation also has been in place for many years in Division I establishing minimum academic standards for initial eligibility to receive athletically related financial aid.

"In general, I believe that these standards have been reasonably effective—given the wide diversity in strength of our nation's secondary education systems and in the differing sizes, stated missions and academic standards of NCAA members.

"It is a popular misconception, probably deriving from media focus on a handful of professional athletes, that the college graduation rates for student-athletes are below the norm for all students. In fact, the contrary is true: Student-athletes at NCAA member institutions graduate at a rate substantially higher than the norm.

"To date, the most comprehensive completed study of this matter was issued in April 1981 by the American College Testing program, reporting on graduation rates after five years for males first entering college in fall 1975.

"The ACT study, which covered over 36,000 male students at 46 NCAA member institutions (about 80 percent of whom were from NCAA Division I), found that the overall graduation rate after five years for all male students was 42.4 percent.

The comparable figure for male student-athletes was found to be 52 percent, or almost 10 percent higher. More particularly—and also contrary to popular belief—the ACT-reported graduation rates for football and basketball players were virtually identical to the 42.4 percent rate reported for all students: 42.9 percent for football and 41.9 percent for basketball.

"The NCAA is collecting more recent graduation-rate data from 205 Division I institutions. Preliminary compilations indicate that the current data confirm the accuracy of the ACT report—at least to the extent of confirming that graduation rates for student-athletes are above those for the student body as a whole. We will be happy to share the results of this survey with the subcommittee when it is completed.

"I do not believe, however, that the mere demonstration of comparable graduation rates for student-athletes should be permitted to end the inquiry. Both as an educator and as NCAA president, I am deeply concerned by any report that indicates that only half, or less than half, of our student-athletes graduate after five years. And I take no particular solace in the fact that the graduation-rate record for student-athletes at NCAA member institutions betters the norm for all students.

"I do object, however, to using intercollegiate athletics as a whipping post for whatever deficiencies may be perceived in the nation's systems of secondary and higher education. The undergraduate programs and the courses therein of colleges and universities are not accredited by the NCAA—there are national, regional and state education accrediting agencies that perform this function.

"Too often, I think, there is a tendency on an issue such as graduation rates, both within and without American educational circles, to point an accusatory finger at highly publicized programs of intercollegiate athletics, when in fact the issues are far deeper in terms of the adequacy of this nation's secondary and postsecondary systems. Simply stated, however, a graduation rate after five years for all students of 42.4 percent is just plainly not good enough. Whether it is the fault of the system, the students themselves, or both, is a question that deserves an answer.

"No amount of legislation by the NCAA is going to correct this problem. We at the NCAA deal with eligibility standards for student-athletes, not the entire student body, and I hope that the subcommittee's interest in the graduation-rate issue bespeaks a wider concern about secondary and postsecondary education.

"I happen to believe in any event that the focus on graduation rates—at least in the context of intercollegiate athletics and probably elsewhere—is really misplaced. What we at the NCAA should be focusing on—and I am happy to say that some real progress is occurring in this respect—is in increasing the basic eligibility standards for initial and ongoing participation in intercollegiate athletics. This places a needed emphasis on secondary school preparation as well as continuing college progress; and if we are successful in this effort, then achievement of more acceptable graduation-rate statistics for student-athletes will, I suggest, be the inevitable result.

"A major step in this direction occurred at the 1983 NCAA Convention with Division I's adoption of 'Proposal No. 48,' an amendment to NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j), to become effective in the fall of 1986.

"In essence, this amendment requires that in order to be eligible for intercollegiate athletics and receive athletically related financial aid as a freshman, a student must have achieved a minimum grade-point average of 2.000 (4.000 scale) in a core high school curriculum of at least 11 academic courses (including three years of English, two years of mathematics, two years of social science, two years of natural or physical science and two years of additional academic subjects) and a minimum 700 score on the combined SAT verbal and mathematics sections or a minimum 15 composite score on the ACT.

These new standards for freshman eligibility are significantly more exacting than the present requirement, which refers merely to a 2.000 cumulative high school grade-point average and does not specify the courses in which that average must be achieved.

"At the same time, NCAA members have in the recent past adopted more exacting requirements for satisfactory academic progress as a condition to subsequent eligibility for intercollegiate competition. A significant step was taken at the 1981 Convention where, in essence, satisfactory progress for athletes' eligibility was defined as successful completion of 24 semester or 36 quarter credit hours per academic year acceptable toward a baccalaureate degree.

"In 1983, a further amendment was adopted requiring a student-athlete after the second year of college attendance—in order to maintain eligibility—to declare a specific program of studies toward a baccalaureate degree and thereafter to achieve satisfactory progress consistent with this declaration.

"You also should be aware that NCAA members are at present considering the report of the NCAA's Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education, which, if enacted into NCAA legislation, would impose even greater requirements.

"These include imposing a successively greater cumulative college grade-point average as a condition of eligibility each year, mandatory filing by each institution of graduation-rate reports with the NCAA, consideration of preparing and publicizing of graduation rates under a common national method, and elimination of freshman eligibility in varsity football and basketball. Some, if not all, of the committee's recommendations will be before the NCAA Convention next January.

"To sum up on this point, let me simply say that we do not find acceptable the fact that graduation rates for student-athletes at our member institutions equal or exceed the norm for all students. The present norm itself seems unacceptable.

"Others with broader responsibilities for improvement in our nation's educational systems must address the fundamental deficiencies that bring about this norm.

"We at the NCAA have taken and are taking significant steps to ensure that intercollegiate athletics standards do not contribute to the problem but rather, if anything, improve a pace already above the norm.

"I have also been asked to address myself to the terms of section 3-4-(d) of the NCAA constitution, which provides: 'Where a student-athlete's ability is taken into consideration in any degree in awarding unearned financial aid, such aid shall not be awarded for a period in excess of one academic year. . . .

"Stated more directly, the rule prohibits NCAA members from committing athletically related financial aid for more than one academic year at a time.

"This rule has been a part of NCAA legislation since 1973, and since that time, no proposals have been placed before any NCAA Convention to amend or repeal the rule. Prior to 1973, NCAA rules did not prohibit multiyear grants-in-aid.

"It is important to understand that the basic argument, in 1973, for the one year limit was that athletically related scholarships and grants-in-aid should be awarded for the same terms as other undergraduate financial aid for students generally. One-year awards clearly are the pattern for higher education, and educators contended that athletes should not be accorded a special, superior status in receiving guaranteed long-term awards when other students were not given such privileges.

"Also, let me emphasize that if aid is not renewed, NCAA rules [Constitution 3-4-(g)] guarantee the student-athletes an appeal opportunity and hearing before the institution's regular financial aid committee.

"I do not believe the rule was adopted in order to permit NCAA member institutions to terminate financial aid to a student-athlete after a year in the event he or she was unable to participate further in intercollegiate athletics by reason of injury or insufficient athletic skill.

"Indeed, NCAA rules relating to limitations of institutional financial aid awards specifically exempt from those limits any student who becomes injured or ill to the point that he or she apparently will not be able further to participate in intercollegiate athletics [NCAA Bylaw 6-4-(c)].

"Further, an institution and its coaches would quickly destroy their recruiting credibility if they pursued a 'runoff' policy.

"I am aware of few instances in which NCAA members have terminated athletically related financial aid to a student otherwise eligible for (and wishing to participate in) intercollegiate competition, for reasons other than lack of satisfactory academic performance.

"In a program annually involving some 340,000 student participants in intercollegiate athletics, there are bound to be occasional instances of institutional abuse or insensitivity. I suggest, however, that these cases are the rare exception—if for no other reason than the fact that academically unjustified termination of financial aid carries the real risk of unwanted adverse publicity, both for an institution's athletics department and for its overall administration.

"Personally, I am proud of the fact that NCAA members generate about $280.4 million annually to meet in great part the educational costs of their male and female student-athletes. This represents a great contribution to the educational goals of our society.

"I firmly believe, moreover, that this is not an issue with which the Congress should become involved; any six NCAA member institutions may place a legislative proposal before the NCAA Convention, in any year; and were this in fact a problem of national significance in higher education and intercollegiate athletics, it simply strains the credulity to believe that the presidents of six institutions would not have caused—at some time in the past 12 years—an amendment to the rule to be brought before the Convention.

"Thank you for the opportunity to make this statement a part of the permanent record of this hearing."

The Associated Press

"Somewhere along the line, I think greed has overtaken the best of collegiate athletics. To be honest, in our situation, I'm disappointed."

Frank B. Ryan, athletics director
Yale University

The Associated Press

"I think it's a favorable ruling for intercollegiate sports. I think that it's going to allow for more options for more teams and be a fairly healthy change for the direction of football as we know it."

Editorial

USA Today

"There is no doubt the NCAA contract was anti-competitive, and the court was right to void it.

"The results will be mixed. Because schools will be free to negotiate their own TV contracts, more games are likely to be televised this fall. Big football powers are pleased—they expect to be on TV more often and make more money.

"But smaller colleges and weaker teams are unhappy. Now that their share of the TV pot is no longer guaranteed, they're afraid they'll lose money. Now they will have to make their own TV deals—if they can. If they can't, some may have to drop football."

Edward E. Bozik, director of athletics
University of Pittsburgh

The Associated Press

"It is in the best interest of collegiate football to have some structured situation within the law. We don't want to see a situation where everybody is out trying to cut their own deals. It could end up in a situation where some schools dominate the television market and some schools are just left out in the cold."

Charles M. Neinas, executive director
College Football Association

The Associated Press

"The property-right theory has been upheld. It has been said the NCAA's rules restrain some of the good games from appearing on TV. The quality of football on television will improve. More of the attractive games will be seen."

Donald B. Canham, athletics director
University of Michigan

The Chicago Tribune

"If we can have a voluntary package, I'd guess it's going to turn into a popularity contest. The NCAA package against the CFA package. There are an awful lot of schools in sympathy with the NCAA, and frankly, I'm one of them. The NCAA package is the one that made us what we are today. No one could have done better. I don't know what the heck the problem is."

New rule aimed at preventing marathon softball games

If the NCAA Women's Softball Committee has its way, marathon softball games will be a thing of the past.

The committee has adopted a tie-breaker rule to shorten NCAA championship games. The final game of the 1984 Softball College World Series lasted 13 innings, and an earlier series game went 25 innings. There was a 23-inning game in Division II.

The tie-breaker, a modification of an international rule, will go into effect for the eighth inning. Each team will be given a "free" runner. The last player to complete an at bat in the previous inning will start the next inning at second base. The procedure will continue until there is a winner. The international version starts in the 10th inning.

"A lack of offense has resulted in too many long games," said chair Mary Higgins of Creighton University. "We hope this will allow us to finish games within two hours."

If approved by the Executive Committee, this change would affect only NCAA championship competition, since NCAA teams compete under Amateur Softball Association rules during the regular season.

In other rules-related decisions, the committee, meeting June 25-27 in Kansas City, adopted a requirement that all batters and base runners wear helmets beginning with the 1986 championships and decided to permit use of a three-sided bat in championship play if the bat meets ASA specifications.

A biweekly poll to rank the top 20 teams in each division will be conducted by the committee beginning in 1985.

The committee also took the following championship actions, which will be reviewed by the Executive Committee in August:

- Added the Northeast-Eight Conference in Division II and the State University of New York Athletic Conference in Division III to those receiving automatic qualification for the 1985 championships. Effective in 1986, automatic-qualifying conferences must play double-round-robin, regular-season competition. A conference with at least eight teams may use subdivisions of at least four teams if it plays a double-round-robin schedule and conducts a post-season tournament.
- Recommended that the Division III championship field be increased from 16 to 20 teams.
- Established a requirement for regional play in 1985 and for all championship play in 1986 that a host institution guarantee 75 percent of the estimated receipts included in its proposed budget.
- Determined that if all other factors are comparable, including the site-selection criteria in Executive Regulation 1-13-(b)-(3), regional games will be played on the campus of the higher-seeded team.
- Scheduled the 1985 division finals for Creighton University (Division I, May 22-26); California State University, Northridge (Division II, May 17-19), and Eastern Connecticut State University (Division III, May 16-19).

Eight-place track scoring in effect for 1985

Eight-place scoring will replace the controversial 12-place scoring format for all NCAA outdoor track championships in 1985.

That was one of the decisions reached by the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committees at their June 26-29 meetings in Kansas City.

The committees also voted to adjust the schedule for combined men's and women's championships to permit back-to-back scheduling of running events through the 1,500-meter run, to propose a four-day format for the 1986 outdoor championships, and to recommend the establishment of three division committees for championships administration and a separate rules committee.

Under the eight-placing scoring procedure, qualifying would continue from preliminaries to finals, with advancement based on both place and time. Twelve would advance to finals in all field events and in running events not run in lanes. The number advancing in races run in lanes would be determined by the number of lanes available.

The committee will question the coaches associations before making a recommendation to the NCAA Executive Committee for a four-day championship format. Under the format, the multiple events (decathlon and heptathlon) would be scheduled with other track and field events.

The two groups also recommended to the Executive Committee qualifying standards for Divisions II and III indoor track, qualifying procedures for cross country, and entry into the Division I Men's and Women's Indoor Track Championships based on qualifying standards only.

Currently, there are limitations on the size of the field for events in the Division I indoor championships that can result in athletes meeting a qualifying standard but not having a mark good enough to be included in

Legislative Assistance

Column No. 14

Printed recruiting aids

The NCAA Administrative Committee has reviewed the application of Case No. 182 (page 295, 1984-85 NCAA Manual) and NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1) regarding the distribution to prospective student-athletes of a sports magazine that covers an institution's intercollegiate athletics program. The committee determined that inasmuch as Case No. 182 uses the term "i.e." in specifically identifying press guides, recruiting brochures, game programs and athletics department calendars as printed recruiting aids that can be provided to prospects, the distribution of any other printed material, such as the above-described magazine, to prospects without charge would not be permissible.

In considering this issue, the Administrative Committee reviewed the recommendations made by the NCAA Recruiting Committee and Council when the case was first developed in 1977. The Council will review the interpretation at its August meeting.

Basketball and football quiet periods

Bylaws 1-2-(a)-(6)-(i), (ii) and (iii), adopted by member institutions in certain divisions, provide that there shall be no evaluations of prospective student-athletes nor any on- or off-campus, in-person contacts by any institutional staff member or representative of an institution's athletics interests during the following periods: (1) in men's basketball in Divisions I and II, during the period beginning with the Thursday prior to the National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship game and ending at noon on the Tuesday after the game; (2) in women's basketball in Division I, during the period beginning with the Wednesday prior to the National Collegiate Division I Women's Basketball Championship game and ending at noon on the Monday after the game; (3) in football in Division I, during the period beginning at 12:01 a.m. on the day of registration at the annual convention of the American Football Coaches Association and ending at 12:01 a.m. on the day after the completion of that convention.

Accordingly, member institutions in the appropriate divisions would be prohibited from scheduling expense-paid visits for prospective student-athletes in these sports during the above-mentioned periods, and no institutional staff member or representative of an institution's athletics interests could contact in person a prospective student-athlete who is visiting the institution's campus at his or her own expense.

Football, basketball and soccer contests

Under the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 3-3-(a), a member institution shall limit its schedule in football to 11 contests (games or scrimmages) with outside competition and in basketball to 28 (26 in Division III) contests (games or scrimmages) with outside competition. As set forth in Bylaw 3-3-(d), intercollegiate basketball and football games played in Hawaii or Alaska, either against or under the sponsorship of a member institution in that respective state, would not be counted in computing the maximum number of contests permitted in those sports.

During the traditional fall season (per O.I. 307), a member institution shall limit its total playing schedule in soccer to 22 contests (games or scrimmages) with outside competition.

If a student-athlete is a member of both the varsity and junior varsity or freshman football, basketball or soccer teams of the institution, the total number of games in each of these sports in which the student-athlete may participate is governed by the limitation on the maximum number of regular intercollegiate contests in which the institution may engage as set forth under Bylaws 3-3-(a)-(1), (2) and (3). For example, a student-athlete could play in no more than 11 football games, including any combination of varsity and junior varsity games.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, director of legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

NACDA honors Bill Flynn

The outstanding player of the second annual Collegiate Kickoff Classic August 27 will receive the William J. Flynn Award, the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) has announced.

The game, sponsored by NACDA, will be played at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, New Jersey, between the University of Miami (Florida) and Auburn University for the benefit of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

Flynn, athletics director at Boston College since 1957, received NACDA's Corbett Award in 1981. He was secretary-treasurer of the NCAA in 1969-70 and president in 1979-80, and he served two terms on the NCAA Executive Committee.

1984 football rules clarifications made

The NCAA Football Rules Committee has issued a bulletin to all conference offices and officiating organizations citing some rewording of rules in 1984 NCAA Football Rules and Interpretations.

David M. Nelson, secretary-rules editor of the committee, noted changes in the following rules:

- Rule 1-4-5-b on page FR-23 was rewritten to clarify legal protective substances for an injury. The rewritten rule is as follows: "Hard or unyielding substances are permitted only to protect an injury, and hand protectors (casts or splints) are permitted only to protect a dislocation or fracture."

- The phrase "other than the legs or feet" was added after "the line drawn through the rear-most part" in Rule 2-21-3 on page FR-37 to determine how a player can be in the backfield legally. The phrase also was added to Rule 2-27-4 on page FR-41 to clarify how a lineman legally can be positioned on the scrimmage line when the ball is snapped and how a back must be positioned legally.

- The exception to Rule 9-1-2-d on page FR-81 was rewritten to provide greater player safety in the legal clipping zone. The rewritten exception is as follows: "The legal clipping zone exists until the ball is in player possession outside the legal clipping zone."

- Rules 9-1-2-e-3 and 9-1-2-e-4, both of which deal with blocking-below-the-waist restrictions, also were rewritten. Both rules are on page FR-81.

- Rule 9-1-2-e-3 was rewritten as follows: "During a down in which there is a free kick or a punt from a scrimmage kick formation, all players are prohibited from blocking below the waist except against the runner."

- Rule 9-1-2-e-4 should read as follows: "After any change of pos-

Convention committees selected

The Credentials, Memorial Resolutions and Voting Committees for the 1985 NCAA Convention have been appointed by the Administrative Committee, acting for the Executive Committee.

David W. Coffey, Tennessee Technological University, was selected to chair the Credentials Committee, which has the authority to examine credentials of delegates to the Convention. Coffey has served on the committee the past two years and was elected for a final one-year term.

Also reappointed to the Credentials Committee was Rolla L. Anderson, Kalamazoo College, who also has served two years. Named to replace Judith Hirsch, California State University, Hayward, whose term expired, was Jane Goss, Shippensburg

University of Pennsylvania.

Charles A. Eberle, Lock Haven University of Pennsylvania, was named chair of the Memorial Resolutions Committee, which compiles the names of individuals associated with intercollegiate athletics who die in 1984. Eberle was appointed for a second one-year term.

Also reappointed to the Memorial Resolutions Committee was Darrell J. Peck, Buena Vista College. Nancy Vedral, Northern Illinois University, was named to the committee to replace Mary Ellen Cloninger, University of Wyoming, who served three years.

Col. John J. Clune, U.S. Air Force Academy, was named chair of the Voting Committee, which is responsible for counting votes at the Convention when called upon by the president. Clune was reappointed for a third one-year term.

Others reappointed to the Voting Committee were William P. Holowaty, Eastern Connecticut State University; Richard B. Yoder, West Chester University of Pennsylvania; Betty A. Hoff, Luther College; Chris Voelz, University of Oregon; Donald G. Combs, Eastern Kentucky University, and Stanley V. Wright, Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck.

New appointments to the Voting Committee are Lloyd Johnson, Bethune-Cookman College; Clarence Underwood, Big Ten Conference; Sadie Allison, Stephen F. Austin State University, and Leanne Grotke, California State University, Fullerton.

Individual codes of ethics developed by Long Range Planning Committee Agreement on codes of ethics for student-athletes, coaches and directors of athletics highlighted the June 21-22 meeting of the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee in Kansas City.

If approved by the NCAA Council, the codes would be published in The NCAA News, in pamphlets for distribution to coaches and in a publication for student-athletes. The ethics codes also would be available to any NCAA member on request.

A code for institutions is being suggested as a fourth element, but the committee believes that the Presidents' Commission is better suited to consider that approach.

"The codes are a set of statements that enable persons to reach decisions on important matters," said former NCAA President J. Neils Thompson of the University of Texas, Austin, who drafted the document over the past three years. "They offer a guide for how people should behave."

Each code includes a statement of purpose (preamble), a set of fundamental canons and detailed rules of conduct relating to each of the canons.

The committee also will ask the Council to suggest a change in the National Letter of Intent program conducted by the Collegiate Commissioners Association. The change would permit a student-athlete to withdraw without penalty from a commitment if the head coach in the student-athlete's sport leaves the institution after the national letter is signed but before the student-athlete enrolls.

"We are concerned about long-range legal considerations of such commitments but also about being fair to student-athletes," said committee chair D. Alan Williams of the University of Virginia. "Many athletes make a final decision based on a coach."

In other business, the committee:

- Continued an ongoing discussion about the role of the faculty athletics representative. A 10-year study of institutional personnel revealed that faculty athletics representatives have a higher turnover rate than chief executive officers, directors of athletics, head football coaches and head basketball coaches.

- Concluded that the Council should survey sports committees to obtain a forecast of amateurism developments over the next five to 10 years in each sport. The committee discussed recent liberalizations of amateurism by national and international sports governing bodies and the possible effect of such changes on college athletics.

- Discussed academic requirements, drug education programs, problems with player agents and trends in sports sponsorship with a representative of the National Federation of State High School Associations. Williams said the committee hopes to continue studying such issues in conjunction with high school and junior college representatives.

- Continued a discussion of trends toward decentralization in associations, particularly noting NCAA efforts to adopt a more federated management structure. Decentralization will be discussed further at the committee's February 7-8, 1985, meeting in Palm Springs, California.

This was the final meeting for Williams and Richard H. Perry, University of Southern California.

All committee recommendations will be reviewed by the NCAA Council in August.

Golf coaches select academic team

Seven golfers who qualified for NCAA men's golf championships this spring headline the first 12-man academic all-America golf team selected by the Golf Coaches Association of America.

To be eligible for the team, a golfer must be a junior or senior with at least two years of varsity golf competition at a four-year college. A golfer must have a minimum grade-point average of 3.300 (on a 4.000 scale) and have a stroke average under 78 during the season in which he is nominated.

Five honorees earned berths in the 1984 NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships—Louis Brown, University of Georgia; Mike Caprio, University of Connecticut; Ken Earle, University of the Pacific; John Given, University of Florida, and Tommy Moore, Oklahoma State University.

Two other selections, Brian Goldsworthy of Central College (Iowa) and Frank Svoboda of Nebraska Wesleyan University, participated in the NCAA Division III Men's Golf Championships.

The rest of the squad is composed of Todd Anderson, Duke University; Matthew Ribakoff, University of Miami (Florida); Gary Rusnak, Marshall University; Warren Lee Smith, Centenary College, and Brian Tennyson, Ball State University.

NCAA

The plan was developed by the special subcommittee, approved in a July 2 telephone conference by the Football Television Committee and approved July 3 by the Council.

The future of the plan and the NCAA's involvement in the administration of college football television will be determined further by U.S. District Court Judge Juan C. Burciaga. In September 1982, Bur-ciaga supported the antitrust suit brought by the Universities of Oklahoma and Georgia against the NCAA's football television plan and placed an injunction on the NCAA's involvement in football television.

That injunction went back into effect with the Supreme Court ruling, and the Association has asked Burciaga to readdress the NCAA's involvement in light of the high court's ruling.

SIDs to get help on championships

The NCAA Public Relations and Promotion Committee, meeting June 20-23 in Asheville, North Carolina, endorsed a plan to pay sports information directors a per diem to assist with disseminating results from NCAA Divisions II and III championships and established a production schedule for revising the Public Relations Manual.

The committee recommended that sports information directors be hired for Divisions II and III championships with large numbers of entrants, such as swimming and track. The committee said that host sports information directors with limited staffs sometimes are unable to disseminate results to the media and SIDs of participating schools in a timely fashion. This recommendation must be approved by the NCAA Executive Committee.

In other action, a September 1 deadline was established for sports information directors to revise their assigned chapters of the Public Relations Manual, a handbook of recommended public relations methods in college athletics. The revised manual will be available early next fall.

The committee also will solicit ideas from other NCAA committees regarding high-priority problems facing college athletics that the Public Relations and Promotion Committee could address.

Other committee actions included:

- Approving a proposed budget for 1984-85.

- Soliciting suggestions from the College Sports Information Directors of America for revisions of next year's football statistics forms.

- Reviewing the merits of the NCAA Media Seminar, which was discontinued in 1978, and recommending its revival for May of next year.

Football program series available

The 1984 football program series is available from the NCAA and was mailed to all football-playing institutions in late June.

The 14-page series contains reproduction proofs that are ready for insertions into football game programs.

Eleven of the 14 pages can be used as full pages in an 8½-by-11-inch program. Two pages—an NCAA publications order form and the NCAA Action logo—can be clipped and used as fillers on other pages. The publications order form can be used in one-fourth- or one-half-page layouts.

The NCAA seals and logos pages are being revised and will be mailed at a later date.

This year's NCAA honor roll has been expanded to two 8½-by-11 pages and features the Silver Anniversary award winners, the Award of Valor recipient, Today's Top Five winners and the Theodore Roosevelt Award recipient.

Three new repros will be included in this year's series. Features about the NCAA Volunteers for Youth, the National Youth Sports Program, and the purposes and services provided by the NCAA are included on 8½-by-11 pages.

Other 8½-by-11 pages in the series are the Code of Officials' Signals; a feature on the process used by the College Sports Information Directors of America to select its academic all-America teams, as well as separate features on the 1983 CoSIDA university and college division all-America teams; an NCAA Library of Films listing and order form; a general information page on the NCAA; a feature on the College Football Hall of Fame in Kings Island, Ohio, and a reduced version of the "Get High on Sports Not Drugs" poster.

Anyone interested in additional information or extra copies of the football program series should contact Alfred B. White at the NCAA national office.

Summaries of majority, dissenting opinions in TV case

Following are summaries of the Supreme Court's majority and dissenting opinions in the case of the NCAA vs. Board of Regents of the University of Oklahoma, et al. The majority opinion was written by Justice John Paul Stevens, who was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun, Louis F. Powell Jr. and Sandra Day O'Connor. The dissenting opinion was written by Justice Byron R. White, who was joined by Justice William H. Rehnquist.

Majority opinion

I. Justice Stevens presents an overview of the NCAA, the history of NCAA football television, the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan, the decision of the U.S. District Court and the decision of the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.

II. "There can be no doubt that the challenged practices of the NCAA constitute a 'restraint of trade' in the sense that they limit members' freedom to negotiate and enter into their own television contracts. In that sense, however, every contract is a restraint of trade, and as we have repeatedly recognized, the Sherman Act was intended to prohibit only unreasonable restraints of trade." . . . The NCAA has created a "horizontal restraint—an agreement among competitors on the way in which they will compete with one another." . . . However, it would be inappropriate to apply a per se rule to this case where it involves an industry (e.g., college football) in which horizontal restraints on competition are essential if the product is to be available at all. "Thus, the NCAA plays a vital role in enabling college football to preserve its character, and as a result enables a product to be marketed which might otherwise be unavailable." . . . But an analysis, under the Rule of Reason, of the NCAA's justifications for the restraints does not change the ultimate focus of the inquiry, which is whether or not the challenged restraints enhance competition.

III. "Because it restrains price and output, the NCAA's television plan has a significant potential for anticompetitive effects." The district court's findings establish that the plan has operated to raise price and reduce output, both of which are unresponsive to consumer preference. . . . The NCAA's argument that the plan can have no significant anticompetitive effect since it has no market powers (i.e., no ability to alter the interaction of supply and demand in the market) is rejected for two reasons: first, "the absence of proof of market power does not justify a naked restriction on price or output"; second, "it is evident that petitioner does possess market power." On the second point, the NCAA has ignored the district court's finding that college football telecasts generate an audience uniquely attractive to advertisers, and competitors are unable to offer programming that can attract a similar audience.

IV. The district court's contrary findings undermine the NCAA's proffered justification that the plan constitutes a cooperative "joint venture," which assists in the marketing of broadcast rights and hence is procompetitive. The district court found that if the NCAA plan produced procompetitive effects, "the plan would increase output and reduce the price of televised games." Nor is the plan necessary to penetrate the market through an attractive package sale.

V. The NCAA's assertion that the plan protects in-stadium attendance is not justified. Under terms of the plan, games are televised during all hours that college football games are played. Moreover, the NCAA's argument "is not based on a desire to maintain the integrity of college football as a distinct and attractive product, but rather on a fear that the product will not prove sufficiently attractive to draw live attendance when faced with competition from televised games." . . . "The Rule of Reason does not support a defense based on the assumption that competition itself is unreasonable."

VI. "It is reasonable to assume that most of the regulatory controls of the NCAA are justifiable means of fostering competition among amateur athletic teams and therefore procompetitive because they enhance public interest in intercollegiate athletics. The specific restraints on football television that are challenged in this case do not, however, fit into the same mold as do rules defining the conditions of the contest, the eligibility of participants, or the manner in which members of a joint enterprise shall share the responsibilities and the benefits of the total venture." . . . The NCAA does not regulate the amount of money that a college may spend on its football program or the way football revenues may be used, but it does impose a restriction on football television revenue. There is no evidence that such a restriction produces any greater measure of equality throughout the NCAA than would a restriction on alumni donations, tuition rates or any other nonrevenue producing activity. . . . "Perhaps the most important reason for rejecting the argument that the interest in competitive balance is being served by the television plan is the district court's unambiguous and well-supported finding that many more games would be televised in a free market than under the NCAA plan."

VII. Justice Stevens summarizes, "The NCAA plays a critical role in the maintenance of a revered tradition of amateurism in college sports. There can be no question but that it needs ample latitude to play that role, or that the preservation of the student-athlete in higher education adds richness and diversity to intercollegiate athletics and is entirely consistent with the goals of the Sherman Act. But consistent with the Sherman Act, the role of the NCAA must be to preserve a tradition that might otherwise die; rules that restrict output are hardly consistent with this role. Today we hold only that the record supports the district court's conclusion that by curtailing output and blunting the ability of member institutions to respond to consumer preference, the NCAA has restricted rather than enhanced the place of intercollegiate athletics in the nation's life." . . .

Dissenting opinion

I. While it would be fanciful to suggest that colleges are not concerned with the profitability of their sports programs, the primary goal of the NCAA is to enhance the contribution made by amateur athletic competition to the process of higher education. In pursuit of this goal, the NCAA imposes numerous controls on its members. Notwithstanding the district court and majority opinions, Justice White writes, "I do not believe that the restraint under consideration in this case—the NCAA's television plan—differs fundamentally for antitrust purposes from the other seemingly anticompetitive aspects of the organization's broader program of self-regulation. The television plan, like many of the NCAA's actions, furthers several complementary ends." . . . "As I shall explain, in reaching this result (the majority opinion), the court traps itself in commercial antitrust rhetoric and ideology and ignores the context in which the restraints have been imposed."

"But it is essential at this point to emphasize that neither the court of appeals nor this court purports to hold that the NCAA may not (1) require its members who televise their games to pool and share the compensation received among themselves, with other schools, and with the NCAA; (2) limit the number of times any member may arrange to have its games shown on television; or (3) enforce reasonable blackout rules to avoid head-to-head competition for television audiences. As I shall demonstrate, the court wisely and correctly does not condemn such regulations. What the court does affirm is the court of appeals' judgment that the NCAA may not limit the number of games that are broadcast on television and that it may not contract for an overall price that has the effect of setting the price for individual game broadcast rights."

II. Justice White concludes that he is unconvinced that the NCAA plan has substantial anticompetitive effects. "First, it is not clear to me that the district court employed the proper measure of output." Total viewership, not the number of televised games, is a more appropriate measure. . . . "Second, and even more important, I am unconvinced that respondents have proved that any reduction in the number of televised college football games brought by the NCAA's television plan has resulted in an anticompetitive increase in the price of television rights." By restricting the number of televised games, the NCAA has created a new product—exclusive television rights—that is more valuable to the networks than the products individual members could market independently. . . . "Third, the district court's emphasis on the prices paid for particular games seems misdirected and erroneous as a matter of law." The NCAA's redistribution of football television revenue is a justifiable aspect of maintaining a system of competitive play. "As long as the NCAA cannot artificially fix the price of the entire package and demand supercompetitive prices, this aspect of the plan should be of little concern."

III. It is one thing to say that NCAA football is a unique product, but quite another to say that maintaining the quality of NCAA football television is unnecessary to enable those telecasts to compete effectively against other forms of entertainment. "The NCAA has no monopoly power when competing against other types of entertainment." Should the quality of the NCAA's product deteriorate, fans undoubtedly would turn to other forms of entertainment. . . . "Although the district court did conclude that the plan is 'not necessary for effective marketing of the product,' its finding was directed only at the question whether college football telecasts would continue in the absence of the plan. It made no explicit findings concerning the effect of the plan on viewership and thus did not reject the factual premise of the NCAA's argument that the plan might enhance competition by increasing the market penetration of NCAA football."

IV. Stressing the essentially noneconomic nature of the NCAA's self-regulatory program, Justice White cites the dissenting opinion from the court of appeals that the lower court(s) "erred by subjugating the NCAA's educational goals (and coincidentally, those which Oklahoma and Georgia insist must be maintained in any event) to the purely competitive commercialism of [an] 'every school for itself' approach to television contract bargaining." . . . "Most fundamentally, the plan fosters the goal of amateurism by spreading revenues among various schools and reducing the financial incentives toward professionalism."

Briefly in the News

Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville, winner of the past seven NCAA Division II Men's Tennis Championships, has announced that it will defer that sport for one year, allowing time to rebuild the program. Earlier, head coach Kent DeMars accepted a similar position at the University of South Carolina. . . . Dartmouth College alumnus John W. Berry of Dayton, Ohio, has given $5 million toward the development of a new sports center at the institution. The gift was the largest the college has received for athletics. The John W. Berry sports center will include construction of a multipurpose sports pavilion—with a 2,500-seat basketball arena—and renovation of Alumni Gymnasium and Davis Varsity House, which will be converted to sports administration offices.

Lawrence University has broken ground for a $5 million multilevel recreation center. Central to the 68,000-square-foot facility will be an eight-lane, competition-sized swimming pool with separate diving well. Also included in the plans are an elevated running track, a 12,000-square-foot gymnasium, four racquetball courts, multipurpose rooms, offices and classrooms. Completion is expected by January 1986. . . . Oklahoma City University pitcher Danny Hightower has been named the Midwestern City Conference 1984 medal of honor winner, presented to the conference's outstanding student-athlete. . . . Oklahoma State University wrestler Mike Sheets and University of Nebraska, Lincoln, sprinter Merlene Ottey have been named athletes of the year by the Big Eight Conference.

Separate '87 title sites sought in Division II basketball

NCAA men's and women's committees in Divisions II and III basketball met recently in Kansas City. Following is a summary of each committee's recommendations, which will be forwarded to the Executive Committee in August:

Division II Men

The Division II Men's Basketball Committee recommended that, beginning in 1987, separate men's and women's championships sites be chosen. The two championships have been held at a common site—Springfield, Massachusetts—the past three years. The current contract with the city of Springfield expires after the 1986 championships.

In officiating matters, the committee voted to continue the use of Division I officials at the semifinals and final. Representatives of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, who met with the committee, were asked to survey their Division II members about this policy. Commemorative awards for final-four officials also will be requested.

The NABC representatives reported on a number of membership matters, and the committee recommended continued annual meetings with the coaches' organization.

The same 12 conferences (13 berths) that received automatic qualification for the 1984 championship will be recommended for next season. One additional league—the Lone Star Conference—also was recommended.

If approved by the Executive Committee, conferences desiring to participate in the championship must complete conference play prior to the final regularly scheduled selection call, which will be March 3. The initial selection call will be February 19.

A plan to develop a logo and theme identifying Division II men's basketball also was discussed.

Division II Women

A change in first-round and regional dates was among proposals adopted by the Division II Women's Basketball Committee.

The committee recommended that 1985 first-round games be moved back to the Saturday (March 9) after the final selection call. Regionals then would be played the following Tuesday (March 12). Quarterfinal dates would remain the same (March 16 or 17).

Two deletions and three additions were recommended to last season's list of automatic-qualifying conferences. The Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference and the Lone Star Conference would be dropped from the list. The additions would be the Continental Divide Conference (pending Council approval of its membership application), Empire State Conference and Gulf South Conference. A total of 13 conferences would receive automatic qualification for the 1985 championship.

The committee also will ask each of the automatic-qualifying conferences to recommend four officials for the championships. Other conferences will be asked to recommend three officials, and regional advisory committees also will be surveyed.

In other officiating matters, the committee recommended an increase in fees and the presentation of commemorative awards to officials in the final four.

Division III Men

An increase to 17 automatic-qualifying conferences (18 berths) for the 1985 Division III Men's Basketball Championship was recommended by the Division III Men's Basketball Committee.

If approved by the Executive Committee, last season's 15 conferences plus the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference will receive automatic berths in 1985. The basketball committee, after examining results of past championships, expressed concern about the performance of some automatic-qualifying conferences. These conferences will be notified that their automatic status could be in jeopardy.

The committee reviewed financial reports from the 1984 championship, which indicated a decline in revenue and attendance. However, both figures for the final four, held at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan, were up from the previous year. The committee voted to return to Calvin for the 1985 championship.

A representative of the NABC met with the committee, and an NABC proposal on a change in the Division III championship format was reviewed but was not adopted.

Division III Women

The Division III Women's Basketball Committee will ask the Executive Committee for the flexibility of moving teams out of their assigned regions.

Specifically, if more than four teams are selected from one region and if it is financially feasible, the teams not rated in the region's top four would be transferred to the next closest region where fewer than four teams were selected.

The committee also recommended that the 1985 semifinals and championship be conducted on the campus of one of the final-four participants.

In an effort to encourage more accurate attendance and receipt estimates, the committee recommended that host institutions for regionals, quarterfinals and finals guarantee at least 75 percent of the estimated receipts. An institution could request a waiver from the committee in the event of extenuating circumstances.

The following conferences were recommended for automatic qualification: Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Massachusetts State College Athletic Conference, Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and Ohio Athletic Conference. The following conferences will be recommended for automatic qualification pending receipt of all schedules and results: Chicago Metro Conference, Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and Jersey Athletic Conference.

The committee also agreed to discontinue naming most outstanding players during any round of championship competition.

Women want Division III lacrosse play-off

Discussion of a possible Division III women's lacrosse championship highlighted the June 18-21 meeting of the NCAA Women's Lacrosse Committee in Camden, Maine.

The Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, which includes Johns Hopkins, Washington (Maryland), and Franklin and Marshall, is considering sponsoring legislation at the 1985 NCAA Convention to establish the championship, contingent upon sufficient sponsorship (six member institutions) as of September 30, 1984, in accordance with Executive Regulation 1-1-(a)-(2). There currently is only one

North Carolina to play UCLA

The University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, will open its 1985-86 basketball season in a new, 22,000-seat student activities center against the University of California, Los Angeles.

The center will include an enlarged swimming pool to accommodate Olympic and NCAA events. A special spring floor will be used in the basketball complex. It is designed to minimize leg injuries.

women's lacrosse championship (all institutions sponsoring women's lacrosse compete in a National Collegiate Championship).

The committee discussed the feasibility of two women's lacrosse tournaments and tentatively agreed on the following:

1. If two championships were held in 1985, the committee recommends that an eight-team format be used in both tournaments, with games being played at campus sites through the semifinals.

2. Dates for 1985 would be as follows: Division I—first round May 8, semifinals May 11 and finals May 19; Division III—first round May 4, semifinals May 11, finals May 18.

3. The championship games would be played on consecutive days at a common site. The committee recommended the University of Pennsylvania as host institution for both championships, May 18-19, 1985.

Final recommendations will not be forwarded to the Executive Committee until that group's December meeting, and all matters involving Divisions I and III play-offs would be contingent upon adoption of appropriate legislation by the 1985 Convention.

The committee also will ask the NCAA Council to sponsor legislation for the 1985 Convention that would increase the grants-in-aid limit in women's lacrosse from 11 to 14.

In other business, the committee considered a meeting with the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee in December to discuss the possibility of future common-site championships.

Several regions were realigned. Connecticut was moved from the Northeast to the New England region, and the rest of the Northeast region was combined with the Pennsylvania region to form a new Middle Atlantic region. There were no changes made in the South and West regions.

The committee recommended that officials' fees for play-off games be increased to $75 for first-round, quarterfinal and semifinal games and $100 for the championship game. Those fees have been $60 and $85, respectively.

The committee also agreed to require that officials work at least six regular-season women's lacrosse games to qualify for the championship game.

The committee agreed not to consider any tied games for championship-selection purposes. All ties must be broken if those contests are to be considered for selection purposes.

eligibility.

●An amendment to Constitution 3-4(b)—an alternative to the previous proposal—to permit a maximum of five years of financial aid to an undergraduate student-athlete in a six-year period.

●An amendment to Constitution 3-4(d)-(2)-(iv) to exempt the Pell Grant from the limitation on the amount of financial aid that a student-athlete may receive under NCAA legislation.

●An amendment to Bylaw 7-1(c)-(1) to permit a volunteer coach in football and basketball to receive certain expenses directly related to coaching duties.

The meeting declined to support four other proposals, and two others were withdrawn by the sponsors. Withdrawn were proposals to provide that the Division I-A meeting be held in August instead of June and to permit unlimited in-person recruiting contacts with a prospect at the prospect's educational institution.

Delegates voted not to sponsor these proposals:

●To establish qualitative academic progress requirements (i.e., increasingly higher grade-point averages) for eligibility (43 for, 53 against).

●To eliminate the overall limitation of 70 grants-in-aid in the Division I men's equivalency sports.

●To remove the 20 permitted grants-in-aid in men's ice hockey from the overall limit of 70 equivalency grants (26 for, 38 against).

●To eliminate the part-time coach and add an additional full-time coach in Division I basketball and to permit a Division I institution to designate any three of its four full-time coaches

Books available

Five recently updated publications are available from the NCAA publishing department.

Three are revised editions of men's basketball rules publications: the 1985 Men's Basketball Rules and Interpretations ($5), Men's Illustrated Basketball Rules ($3) and Read-Easy Basketball Rules ($1.50).

Revised editions of the Men's Soccer Rules ($3) and the Radio Network Manual ($4 for members and $8 for nonmembers) are available. The Radio Network Manual is a "how-to" manual for setting up sports radio networks through examination of network requirements.

To place an order or to inquire about bulk rates, contact NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201. Payment, which includes fourth-class postage, should accompany orders. Those who want books mailed first class should include an additional $2 per book.

that they had reviewed the evidence and supported the findings against the institution. They said they would make the same findings and propose the same penalties if they had to do it again.

The three were William L. Matthews, former dean of the University of Kentucky law school; Arthur R. Reynolds, former dean of the graduate school at the University of Northern Colorado, and Harry M. Cross, former dean of the University of Washington law school and NCAA president in 1969 and 1970.

William B. Hunt, NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement, said, "We intend to continue to implement the enforcement procedures as demanded of us by the NCAA membership. And we will continue to do so in a consistent and even-handed manner, without exception."

"In this particular case, we simply did our job; that is, we collected relevant information and we reported that information to the Committee on Infractions."

in that sport to recruit or scout off campus. (33 for, 68 against).

Division I-A support for 1984 Convention Proposal No. 37—which would assure greater legislative autonomy for both Division I-A members and for the remainder of Division I—headed a series of straw votes at the meeting. The strong support for greater autonomy came after one delegate stated that "there is no important issue for Division I-A institutions."

In other straw votes to record Division I-A sentiments, the delegates:

●Favored 1984 Convention Proposal No. 49, which would move the definition of the athletics grant-in-aid limitation from the constitution to the bylaws, where each division could act separately on that matter.

●Favored the concept of required academic reporting procedures, but cited numerous concerns regarding implementation of such a requirement, including diversity of institutional academic requirements, special-admissions programs, tracking transfers from the institution, publication of graduation rates, the effect of students not seeking degrees in urban institutions, possible negative recruiting, increased campus paperwork, and the need to apply such a requirement to any sports other than football and basketball.

●Strongly opposed declaring freshmen ineligible for competition in Division I football and basketball.

●Opposed the concept of declaring a moratorium on the establishment of additional postseason football games.

A total of 298 persons—258 delegates from Division I-A institutions and conferences and 40 news media representatives—registered for the meeting, which NCAA Secretary-Treasurer John R. Davis described as representing "a meaningful step toward solving Division I-A's desire for an improved means of dealing with the issues that are important to the major programs in college athletics."

amateurism; and

"3. Believes it is of fundamental importance that students participating in intercollegiate athletics should be bona fide students meeting the same educational requirements as other students in making progress toward graduation; and

"4. Recognizes that in order to assure that these conditions prevail, it is necessary to have policy regulations applying to all colleges and universities, and affirms its confidence in and support of the NCAA in the development and administration of such policies; and

"5. Declares the determination of college and university presidents to participate actively in the formulation of such policies and in the NCAA process to assure that the spirit and conditions of amateurism and of appropriate educational standards are maintained.

"In order to be able to follow up effectively on the consideration of the above matters, the Commission organized itself into four committees dealing with subjects of fundamental importance to intercollegiate athletics; namely, on academic affairs, financial issues, institutional control and integrity of the system, and student life."

In other actions, the Commission:

●Agreed to schedule its next meeting in early October 1984, another meeting in conjunction with the 1985 NCAA Convention in January and a spring meeting in April 1985.

●Recommended to the NCAA Council that the annual NCAA-sponsored meetings of selected institutional chief executives—held each September from 1980 to 1983—is no longer needed, at least not this year.

●Decided to employ, at least at the outset, a "federated" meeting format that will assure consideration of any topic by both the Commission members representing the division to which the topic applies and by the full Commission.

●Supported the principles of the relationship between the Commission and the NCAA Council that had been suggested by the Council.

●Agreed to ask the Commission members from each division to select a vice-chair for that division subunit; agreed that the Commission chair should designate one of the division chairs to serve as vice-chair of the Commission as needed.

President John W. Ryan of Indiana University, Bloomington, chaired the Commission meeting. Division sessions were chaired by President Otis A. Singletary, University of Kentucky, Division I; Kenneth J. Weller, president of Central College (Iowa), Division III, and Ladell Payne, president of Randolph-Macon College, Division II. Payne was substituting for Division II Chair Barbara J. Seelye, Keene State College, who was unable to attend because of prior commitments abroad.

the basketball next season, evaluate it and prepare arguments for next spring's meeting.

Six organizations are represented by three members each on the USGWBRC: Amateur Athletic Union, National Association for Girls and Women in Sport, National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, NCAA, National Junior College Athletic Association, and the Women's Basketball Coaches Association (WBCA). Four of the six organizations represented surveyed their memberships before the meeting. Two organizations received a positive response to the smaller basketball—the WBCA and the NAGWS Coaches Academy. The Junior Olympics Division of the AAU also conducted a survey, and the majority favored the smaller basketball. The NJCAA received a negative vote from coaches. NCAA representatives indicated endorsement of the smaller ball by division committees and support of the WBCA survey as an indication of coaches' opinions. The NAIA and the Senior Olympics division of the AAU did not conduct surveys.

Coaches alerted to rules error

Coaches and officials should be aware of a mistake in the 1985 NCAA Men's Basketball Rules and Interpretations.

Penalty 2-(d), following Rule 10, Section 11 on page BR-57, should be deleted, according to Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee. References to this penalty in the interpretations sections (pages BI-102-103) also should be deleted.

Penalty 2-(d) deals with free-throw situations on common fouls in the last two minutes of a game. The rule had been overturned by the rules committee during a special session in December.

Steitz also reminded coaches and officials of the availability this month of the 1985 NCAA Illustrated Men's Basketball Rules. Steitz said this publication is an excellent tool for visualizing the rules of the game.
