CFA faces fourth suit on TV plan

Sports View of Nashville has filed suit in U.S. district court in Oklahoma City, charging the College Football Association, ABC Sports and ESPN with violating the Sherman Antitrust Act because of exclusive arrangements among the three to televise college football games of CFA members.

Sports View charges that those exclusive arrangements exclude it from televising games of CFA members from any time after 12:20 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. Eastern time on Saturdays. The firm contends that the arrangement prohibits it from competing with ABC and ESPN for live telecasts of CFA games and that it is unable to carry out contracts it already has with CFA members.

The suit, filed September 21, is the fourth in a series of legal actions involving the CFA football television plan.

In August, the University of California, Los Angeles, and the University of Southern California challenged the CFA plan, and the Association of Independent Television Stations, Inc. (INTV), filed suit in September in Federal district court in Oklahoma City aimed at opening the way for telecasts of more college football games. INTV also filed a similar suit in Federal district court in Los Angeles.

Pat Thompson, president of Sports View, said the company has contracts to do live telecasts of all University of Florida and Louisiana State University games not carried on ABC, ESPN or the WTBS Southeastern Conference game of the week. The games would have been delivered on a pay-per-view basis to subscribers in the home states of Florida and Louisiana.

The Sports View suit contends that several schools had been unwilling to change their starting times to earlier in the day to comply with the CFA restricted time periods, which include the afternoons and evenings on Saturdays.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco will hear arguments October 3 concerning a preliminary injunction issued September 10 in Federal district court in Los Angeles that barred the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and the University of Notre Dame from refusing because of the CFA agreement with ABC to have games with UCLA and Southern California, respectively, telecast on CBS.

Commission conducts fall meeting

Consideration of legislative issues for the 1985 NCAA Convention and discussion regarding topics that are more long-range in nature will highlight the fall meeting of the NCAA Presidents' Commission October 3-4 at the Westin Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

Commission Chair John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University, Bloomington, has asked the chairs of the Commission's seven subcommittees — four of which were appointed in September and will be meeting for the first time — to assign priorities to the topics on their respective agendas and to consider not more than one or two key issues in the October meeting, with other topics to be considered in detail in 1985 Commission meetings.

The Commission's four categorical subcommittees — on academic affairs, financial issues, institutional control and integrity of the system, and student life — will begin the meeting with evening sessions October 3. The Divisions I, II and III subcommittees will meet early October 4, with the full Commission in session until the 3 p.m. adjournment that day.

Ryan appointed the four categorical subcommittees and their chairs in late September. The chairs are Edward B. Fort, chancellor, North Carolina A&T State University, academic affairs; Del D. Weber, chancellor, University of Nebraska, Omaha, financial issues; Rev. J. Donald Monan, president, Boston College, institutional control/integrity, and George Drake, Grinnell College, student life.

Categorical subcommittees

Commission members appointed to those four subcommittees and the topics on their agendas for the October meeting are as follows:

Academic affairs

James W. Cleary, California State

University, Northridge; Lattie Coor, University of Vermont; Chancellor Fort; Richard C. Gilman, Occidental College; I.M. Heyman, University of California, Berkeley; Virginia Lester, Mary Baldwin College; William T. O'Hara, Bryant College; President Ryan; Patsy Sampson, Stephens College; Otis A. Singletary, University of Kentucky, and Walter B. Waeten, Cleveland State University.

Agenda topics: Research regarding Bylaw 5-1-(j) ["Proposal No. 48"]; proposed NCAA academic reporting procedures; freshman eligibility for intercollegiate athletics.

Financial issues

James T. Amsler, Salem State College; Pope A. Duncan, Stetson University; Charles A. Lyons Jr., Fayetteville State University; J. C. Powell, Eastern Kentucky University; Herbert H. Reynolds, Baylor University; John B. Slaughter, University of Maryland, College Park; Barbara S. Uehling, University of Missouri, Columbia; Walter Washington, Alcorn State University; Chancellor Weber; Kenneth J. Weller, Central College (Iowa), and James J. Whalen, Ithaca College.

Agenda topics: Fiscal impact of current football television situation; ways and means of controlling costs of intercollegiate athletics programs.

Institutional control

Dallas K. Beal, Fredonia State University College; Raymond Burse, Kentucky State University; Rev. L. Edward Glynn, St. Peter's College; Paul Hardin, Drew University; William A. Kinnison, Wittenberg University; Noah N. Langdale Jr., Georgia State University; Peter Likins, Lehigh University; Arend D. Lubbers, Grand Valley State College;

College sports radio program will expand areas of coverage

Features on athletes in less prominent sports, use of natural sound and more advance coverage of NCAA championships are among programming plans for College Sports USA, an NCAA-funded biweekly radio show, in its second full year of operation.

College Sports USA, which is produced by Host Communications, Inc., began in January 1983 after approval by the NCAA Public Relations and Promotion Committee in 1981. Although the original target of the show was the promotion of baseball, women's gymnastics and women's basketball, CS/USA also has featured men's basketball and football.

Two five-minute programs are produced each week in Host's Dallas studios for broadcast on Saturdays and Sundays on CBS Radio Network stations. The programs air in 104 markets on Saturdays and 76 markets on Sundays. Currently, 115 stations broadcast College Sports USA on Saturdays or Sundays or both.

College Sports USA is the only radio program devoted entirely to collegiate competition; the approach is not one of mere facts and figures, but presents profiles of student-athletes and coaches who may not make major headlines.

During the first complete 52-week format, College Sports USA covered stories on fund-raising for collegiate athletics, football helmet manufacturers, women golfers, small-college football programs, role of the collegiate academic counselor, college fencing programs, summer conditioning, sports nutrition, collegiate cheerleaders, perfect scores in gymnastics and many others.

"We hope to make use of natural sound more this year, such as we did on the College World Series feature," said Dick Gabriel, producer of the show. "In the College World Series feature, we picked up sounds of the baseball, the crowd, the vendors and public-address announcer."

Is there a college football observer alive who predicted that Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech and Texas Christian would collectively stand 9-1 at this stage of the season?

It is true the season still is young, but this trio already has surpassed its 1983 victory total of six. Vanderbilt finished 2-9 last year, Georgia Tech 3-8 and Texas Christian 1-8-2. Now Vandy is 4-0, its best start since 1950, after beating Alabama; Tech is 3-0 after beating Clemson, the Atlantic Coast Conference favorite, and TCU, after scoring 104 points in its first two games, is 2-1 after a 26-17 loss to Southern Methodist.

How is this possible? For the most part, you have to credit their coaches, who have proved that it can be done. In some measure, the 30-95 scholarship limits helped them by spreading the talent. But talent evaluation, hard work and a belief that it can be done all are essential. George MacIntyre at Vanderbilt, Bill Curry at Georgia Tech and Jim Wacker at TCU have put all those factors together.

It started 10 years ago

Perhaps it all started in 1974.

In an age when private schools had been written off athletically, Baylor arose from the ashes of a 2-9 season in 1973 and an 0-2 start in 1974 to win the Southwest Conference championship, beat Texas and go to the Cotton Bowl for the first time. Baylor trailed Texas at half time, 24-7, and came back to win, 34-24. Hundreds of former disbelievers tried to get back into the stadium, but their way was blocked by hundreds of distressed Texas fans trying to get out.

"We became the beacon light for all private universities," Baylor coach Grant Teaff told Al Carter of the Houston Chronicle. "We proved that if you really believe, work hard and know how to evaluate talent, you can get by with the facilities and the money that you have. . . . If you sum up the last 10 years, you'd have to say we've done it our way. I believed we could. Through the toughest times, that has sustained me."

Others doing it, too

Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech and TCU are not the only private universities enjoying the 1984 season. Syracuse is 3-1 after that shocking upset of Nebraska; Boston College, Brigham Young and SMU all are undefeated, and Notre Dame is 3-1. Also, Temple is 2-2 with a victory over Pittsburgh, and Northwestern has shaken off a record losing streak and is competitive with much of the Big Ten Conference. Stanford, 2-2, is on the way back.

Each of the surprise teams reflects its coach's personality. Fueled by 300 health-food cookies baked by Curry's mother every week (see notes headed "family affairs"), Tech goes after its opponents with great intensity. Curry predicted before the season "We'll win it (the ACC title)." The experts scoffed and

Colorado's attention turns to injured player

When he was a boy growing up in Michigan, his family didn't own a radio. Except the one in his dad's 1947 DeSoto.

On Saturdays in the fall, Bill McCartney Sr. took his young son out to the 1947 DeSoto and listened to the Notre Dame broadcasts. Like all good Irish Catholics, the McCartneys rooted for the boys in South Bend.

Turn the clock forward a few decades to 1979, Bill Sr. was 80. Bill Jr. was the defensive coordinator for Michigan.

Bill Sr. was in South Bend the day that the Wolverines beat the Irish, his first pilgrimage to the Golden Dome.

"Great day," beamed the elder McCartney.

"You enjoyed seeing us beat Notre Dame?" inquired Bill Jr., his chest swelling proudly.

"No," said Bill Sr. "I enjoyed my first trip to South Bend."

You can't escape those Notre Dame subway alumni, even when it's your own father.

It's always tough to play at South Bend. (Notre Dame defeated Colorado, 55-14, September 22.)

Bill McCartney has been through living hell ever since he got the news that sophomore tight end Ed Reinhardt was in a coma with a blood clot on his brain.

After the game at Oregon, he went right to the hospital. Reinhardt already was unconscious. Somewhere, McCartney had heard that you should talk to coma victims.

Leaning over to whisper in his young player's ear, McCartney told him: "You're a champion. You're going to make it. Everyone wants you to know they're thinking of you and praying for you. You're in Eugene, Oregon. The team has gone home. You took a hit on the head and you're going to be OK. You need to get rid of your headache."

On Monday, McCartney returned to Boulder to address his team. He told them he might have trouble sitting through what he was going to say to them. He did.

"Coach McCartney," said quarterback Steve Vogel, "spoke straight from the heart."

His players saw the hurt.

"If you didn't know anything was wrong" said tight end Jon Embree, "you could look at coach McCartney's face and know something was wrong. Bad wrong."

Each person associated with the Colorado team is dealing with the grief and the fear in his own way. Embree, one of Reinhardt's close friends and roommate on the road, came to grips with it in 24 hours.

Columnary Craft

"If we would have had to suit up and practice Sunday," said Embree, "I couldn't have made it. I was sick."

Mostly, the players think of Reinhardt and his family, and Bill McCartney, not much of Notre Dame.

"We had a business-like attitude in practice," said Vogel, "but some of the enthusiasm for Notre Dame has been displaced by the grief for Ed."

The CU coach has a double load to carry. First and foremost, praying for Reinhardt's recovery. Secondly, trying to hold a football program together that might be dangling by that ever-so-delicate thread.

Bill McCartney is trying to raise the Titanic and save a life all in the same week.

He was sitting in a chair, going over film, when I found him in the back room. We chatted briefly, and then I asked McCartney if such a tragedy has changed his outlook about football.

After all, he has three sons playing football, including Mike, who suffered a cracked vertebra this season at Washburn.

It was then that McCartney said that this tragedy had only reaffirmed his belief that a person must set his or her priorities in order. And he delivered, spontaneously, one of the most eloquent assessments of sports and football that I'd ever heard. He said:

"The rewards and returns of playing football — there is almost nothing our society offers today that can make a man out of a boy and teach wholesome values of hard work and discipline and being a member of a team.

"All the things that youngsters have to learn: Commitment, excellence . . . the very fiber of our society that's coming apart in marriages, etc.

"Football teaches those things. It teaches them better than anything else that we have. I'm convinced of that.

"There isn't anything easy about playing football. It's the most difficult thing we do. It's not fun to practice, it's hard to practice. Practices are demanding. Taxing and exacting. They require all of a guy.

"The end result is that a guy spends himself in a worthy cause. And he learns to get up off the ground, time and again. He lines up, like some of my guys will, against somebody bigger, stronger and faster than they are.

"And you learn to compete. And battle. Eddie Reinhardt is doing that right now. He's drawing on all of his experiences. And he's fighting. He's got a great fighting heart. Football helped develop that in him.

"When a guy finishes playing football, regardless of how much he's played in terms of being in the limelight, he's a better man."

Smaller basketball not right size for women players

By Brenda G. Pitts

I recently have completed a study on the new smaller basketball for women that supports the findings of the previous two studies by William S. Husak and Jackie Dailey and Bette Harris.

Although the ball has been adopted by the colleges, many players and coaches still are unsure about the effects of this ball. The ball is not the scientifically correct size it should be to fit the women's hand size and upper-body strength. In comparing the average hand size of female basketball players with that of male basketball players and the surface area of each basketball that the hand size covers, the female still is at a disadvantage even with the new smaller ball. I think that various basketballs of different sizes and weights should have been researched before adopting a ball that just happened to be in existence already.

Who decided the ball should be one inch smaller in circumference and two ounces lighter? A sporting-goods company developed this ball after a request from a fairly well-known female player in 1978. She thought that women should have a smaller and lighter basketball. However, no research was conducted to determine the proper fitting for the female hand. There was no research on the ball until six years later when two studies were conducted.

From these two studies, the United States Girls' and Women's Basketball Rules Committee decided that this provided them with enough evidence that this ball would be perfect for women. The studies do show a significantly positive effect on skill performance. And why wouldn't they? The ball was a step away from a piece of equipment (the basketball) that was not developed for females and a step toward finding equipment designed for females.

Consider the sport of tennis. I do not believe Martina Navratilova would play a single match with a racket that she had not tested and retested many times until the racket was made the right size and weight for her hand. Our Olympic athletes are now able to compete with more success and confidence because research has provided them with equipment and techniques that have improved performance. The same should be true for any sport. Women's basketball should be no different, especially since women's basketball has had less research than other sports and has never had equipment developed for women.

Women's basketball organizations should encourage and support continued research on all aspects of the game before decisions are made that affect so many people. There should be continued research on this ball, research on balls of various sizes, research to design a ball that properly fits the female hand and upper-body strength, and research on the height of the goal for the female.

One step has been taken, and that cannot be reversed. Research on equipment designed especially for women should continue. Every effort should be made to exercise patience in decision-making until the equipment has been thoroughly researched and properly designed. Women's basketball should be moving forward, not standing still, while other sports move around it.

The intent was to take the pressure off the officials, particularly at the end of the game when teams throw those 'Hail Mary' passes. There is almost always some bumping around in those situations, and an official's judgment could determine the outcome of the game.

"I think the rules makers felt that this kind of pressure affected the enforcement of the rule, so they changed the rule to take away the pressure. In so doing, they have, in effect, given a whole new meaning to the term 'prevent defense.' Now, if the defender feels that he is in trouble, all he has to do is foul the receiver and the ball comes back to the line of scrimmage for the administration of the penalty. The defense risks little in the situation that we have created, while the offense is penalized. College basketball proved last season, when it approved and later

Division III institutions unique in budgeting process

By J. Phillip Roach

Part-time coaches, changing program demands, lack of written procedures and the inability to find a standardized methodology are all factors that may be leading to inefficient budgeting at Division III institutions.

This article suggests that each institution is unique in its budgeting approach and that not enough time is spent in the planning and organization phase of the budgeting process.

The above conclusions and suggestions come from a recent national study that examined athletics program budgets and the athletics budgeting process at NCAA Division III institutions. The current literature was reviewed, and a questionnaire was used to survey the 310 athletics directors at all NCAA Division III colleges and universities.

Since the respondents accounted for 67 percent of the NCAA Division III membership, the replies were regarded as sufficient to characterize the membership.

The study confirmed six processes in the development and management of athletics budgeting. A discussion of those six follows:

- Budget development: The study revealed a conflict between the current practice at the institutional level

J. Phillip Roach

and what the athletics director believed to be appropriate in the budget-development process. A large number believed the budget should be developed jointly by the coach and the athletics director; however, most athletics directors were developing the budget alone. The researcher's opinion is that use of part-time and dual-sport coaches is the leading cause of this problem.

- Budget approval: At those institutions with student enrollments below 999, the colleges' chief financial officers most often were the persons with the responsibility of approving the budget. At those institutions with student enrollments of 1,000 and above, the responses did not show any significant correlation between responsibility of approval and number of undergraduates. The conclusion is that the larger the undergraduate enrollment, the more diversified the response of who approves the budget.

- Budget control: In a previous study of NCAA athletics directors of all divisions done by Mitchell Raiborn, it was reported that "in 82 percent of all cases, head coaches of each sport were held responsible for controlling appropriate expenses." The findings of my study contrast markedly with the Raiborn study quoted above. Only one-fourth of the respondents indicated that the head coach was responsible for expense control, while three-fourths responded that this responsibility was elsewhere. The Raiborn study was a sampling of all NCAA colleges and universities. It can be concluded that not giving the responsibility for expense control to the head coach may be unique to Division III.

- Budget timing: No conclusion was reached as to the best dates for budget submittal and for the return of the approved athletics budget for implementation. A wide range of dates was given for both by the athletics directors.

- Budget review: Periodically reviewing the sports budget expenditures with each coach was concluded to be an important part of the budgeting process. Most (79 percent) athletics directors had a periodic sports budget review with each coach. However, only a small number of athletics directors had a specific number of planned times to review the sports budgets with the head coaches.

- Fund-raising: Athletics fund-raising has been finding its way into the budgeting process and is taking on increasing importance. More than one-half of the Division III athletics directors in 1983-84 were doing some fund-raising. The study supported the conclusion that most NCAA Division III athletics directors believe fund-raising should be a function of their position. These results raise a serious question regarding the "Division III Philosophy," which states under item 3: "The athletics program is controlled, financed and staffed through the same general procedures as other departments of the college." This study did not produce any reason for the athletics directors' position on fund-raising. However, it is the researcher's opinion that the need for more operating money is causing this phenomenon.

Enrollment, number of sports offered, number of participants and location of the institution were statistically shown to affect the cost of the athletics programs covered by this study. The study also has shown that community population has a high correlation with enrollment but was not a factor in predicting direct costs. The kind of institution (public, private or church related) was not found to be a factor in predicting costs, except that most public colleges and universities were found to be high in enrollment and, therefore, had larger budgets.

The study has shown that only two-fifths of the Division III athletics directors have athletics department manuals used for the purpose of administering policies and procedures and that only one-third of the athletics departments have a long-range financial plan.

One may also conclude from the findings that Division III institutions do not operate many auxiliary enterprises such as programs or souvenir sales. The study shows that those colleges and universities that operate concession stands and sell programs do it more as a service than for athletics income or promotion.

This study supported the findings of others who have reported that athletics budgets cannot be accurately compared. Even comparing institutions using the same budgeting philosophy did not allow for unique institutional methods of reporting costs and expenses.

The Division III athletics director has problems and responsibilities that set him/her apart from other NCAA athletics directors. These are caused in part by a larger base of participants, a larger number of part-time coaches, his/her other responsibilities within the college and the educational mission of the institution.

The Division III philosophy of broad-based participation and no athletics grants-in-aid causes problems in financial planning. At schools that use athletics grants-in-aid, the athletics administrator knows exactly how many football players or field hockey players to plan for each year. The squad size at a Division III school, however, may fluctuate in number because of program offerings, costs of tuition, recruiting efforts of the coach and the admissions office, and other factors that affect institutional enrollment in general.

To make the best use of the funds available and to be efficient in implementing athletics budgets, the following suggestions have been developed through this study:

First, develop a five-year financial plan for athletics.

Second, use an athletics department manual that includes procedures for use of athletics funds.

Third, include the head coach in the total budgeting process. Fourth, have a periodic budget review with the head coach and use budget management as a part of the coach's evaluation process.

Finally, establish objectives for fund-raising, and coordinate this activity with the institution's development office.

Roach is director of athletics and head men's basketball coach at Marietta College. He also is a member of the research committee of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Associated Press sports editors support open locker-room policy

The Associated Press Sports Editors association has approved a set of guidelines for access to locker rooms. While two alternatives are presented, the organization feels strongly that there really is no substitute for an open locker room, where all reporters are admitted within a short amount of time after a game ends, and one that remains open until all reporters have completed their interviews.

Such a policy not only goes a long way toward producing the best story possible, in many cases it also leads to increased public awareness for a particular league or organization. The list of teams that have solved the obvious locker-room objection by purchasing robes for their players is a long one, and it seems a simple enough situation.

However, for those who do not have an open locker-room policy, APSE urges strongly that at the very least, an equal-access situation be created, where female reporters are offered the same opportunity for postgame interviews as male reporters. An equal-access situation would require that female reporters be allowed into the same areas during the same time periods as male reporters.

Here are two alternatives that APSE thinks create acceptable situations:

Limited open locker room — This would provide access to all media for a specified amount of time (20 to 30 minutes) after a game ends by having players delay their showers (if they so wish). At the conclusion of that period, all reporters would have to leave the locker room. There are obvious disadvantages to this system. If both teams involved practice this policy, it is difficult to fully cover both locker rooms. For afternoon paper reporters, hoping to come up with a second-day angle after the initial rush of reporters has left, this policy would create a hardship.

Separate interview room — This would provide a room for all reporters, where every player requested for an interview would be produced immediately after the game and would remain for a reasonable length of time. In such a situation, no reporters would be permitted in the locker room. Again, there are disadvantages to this system. It limits the players a reporter has access to and in most cases would eliminate the situation where a player who was not a major factor in the game might say something of significance. For visiting teams, there often are no facilities for such a setup. It also is an easy situation for players to abuse.

Here is a frequently used alternative that APSE feels is not acceptable:

Separate room for women reporters — This system is used at several universities, and APSE feels it does not create an equal-access situation. While male reporters are in the locker room, with access to all players as soon as they are out of the showers, female reporters are forced to limit the number of players they will talk with, and they often do not have access as quickly as male reporters, nor for the same period of time.

In recent conversations with women reporters, the APSE learned that many have accepted a separate room for women reporters because, for a variety of reasons, they have not wanted to "make waves." But there seems to be near-unanimous agreement among female reporters that such a situation inhibits their ability to do the job to which they have been assigned.

The Associated Press Sports Editors association urges each league and organization to take a hard look at the policies of member teams and/or schools, and it asks for any reaction to the guidelines and any policies or suggestions that might grow out of them.

APSE is determined to take a more active role than in the past in terms of determining unacceptable situations, using whatever leverage is available to help correct those situations and urging newspapers to support their female reporters with whatever means, including legal recourse.

Interpretations given for 1984 football rules

The NCAA Football Rules Committee has issued a bulletin to all conference offices and officiating organizations regarding interpretations of two rules in 1984 NCAA Football Rules and Interpretations.

David M. Nelson, secretary-rules editor of the committee, noted interpretations of the following rules:

- Wind-direction streamers at the top of the goal uprights are not interpreted as decorative material in Rule 1-2-5-b on page FR-18. Wind-direction streamers are permitted if they are orange, four inches wide and 42 inches long.

- In Rule 2-3-2-a on page FR-29, blocking below the waist against an opponent applies only if the opponent has one or both feet on the ground.

Looking Back

Five years ago

In its October 16-19, 1979, meeting at St. Louis, the NCAA Council called for the appointment of a Special Committee on NCAA Governance, Organization and Services, charging the committee to examine the governance structure of the Association, including legislative processes, accommodation of women's interests within the NCAA and development of programs and services for women's intercollegiate athletics, and the present and future NCAA district and division structure. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

Ten years ago

A lawsuit against the NCAA and the Big Eight Conference filed by Oklahoma Television Sports, Inc., was dismissed in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Oklahoma. The unsuccessful suit charged that the NCAA violated the Sherman Antitrust Act by not allowing University of Oklahoma football games to be televised due to the institution's infractions penalties. (October 1, 1974, NCAA News)

Twenty years ago

Rod Dedeaux, University of Southern California, was head coach of a U.S. Baseball Federation team that played nine games in Japan in conjunction with the Tokyo Olympic Games in October 1964. The team of 19 current and two former players at NCAA member institutions compiled a 14-4-2 record, including games in Hawaii and South Korea. (November-December 1964 NCAA News)

Thirty years ago

The NCAA Council, meeting October 18-20, 1954, in New Orleans, received a report from District 4 Vice-President Ralph W. Aigler, University of Michigan, on efforts by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to encourage the cooperation of regional accrediting agencies in the formulation, adoption and enforcement of athletics regulations. voted Tech in the middle.

The wisecracking MacIntyre uses a flamboyant passing game. The swashbuckling Wacker likes to play "smash-mouth football," with a daring veer-style running game.

Their followers love it

Vanderbilt followers were yelling "We want Alabama" near the end of the Kansas game the previous Saturday. After the victory over Alabama, they are quick to remind you how foolish the experts were for voting Vandy ninth in the Southeastern Conference.

After 20 years of singing the blues, writes Mike Cochran of the Associated Press, TCU followers are humming a new tune. Would you believe "Happy Days Are Here Again?" The turnouts for the Frog Club luncheons are the biggest in recent history. Whether it is Purple Power or Frog Fever or Wacker's Wackos, it certainly is contagious. The preseason experts acknowledged TCU's improvement but still voted the Frogs near the bottom.

Georgia Tech's start is its best in 14 years, and with two of the victories over Alabama and Clemson, followers are convinced the team is for real. The rivalry with the nearby Georgia Bulldogs is heating up. At the Tech campus bookstore, you can buy a poster of a bulldog named Tuf-as-Hell dressed in an old Tech letter sweater. Both dog and sweater belong to storeowner Bob Nichols, a former Tech tennis player.

Other fast starts

These three are not the only surprise fast starters. Army at 2-0-1 is off to its best start since 1966, Oregon at 4-0 its best since 1964 and Cal State Fullerton at 5-0 its best ever.

The three Division I-A teams that already own more victories than in all of last season are Vanderbilt, TCU and Stanford. Among the eight I-A teams that already own as many victories as in all of last season are Georgia Tech, Oregon, Army, 3-1 Purdue and 3-1 Rutgers (the other three have losing records).

In Division I-AA, 2-2 Montana State is the only team with more victories than in all of last season. Among five with as many victories now as in all of last season are 3-1 East Tennessee State and 3-1-1 Western Illinois.

And, of course, for every fast start there is a slow start. How many observers ever imagined Alabama, Pittsburgh, Auburn and Clemson would have a collective 5-11 record at this stage? Vanderbilt had never beaten Alabama in Bryant-Denny Stadium in eight previous tries and was 1-23 in its last 24 games with the Crimson Tide. Alabama also had won 26 straight homecoming contests until last Saturday.

A record seven field goals

Saturday was another big day for kickers, led by Western Michigan senior Mike Prindle, who made an all-time, all-division high of seven field goals against Marshall and had a record 24 kick-points in his team's 42-7 victory. He was seven for nine, scoring from 32, 44, 42, 23, 48, 41, and 27 yards and missing from 44 and 53. The old record of six was held by seven players, the most recent UCLA's John Lee against San Diego State this fall.

The ranking survivor

Quickie quiz: Who is the only Division I-A head football coach still holding the same job he held in 1962? Give up? It is Houston's Bill Yeoman, in his 23rd season.

"You've got to be kidding me," Yeoman told Ish Haley of the Dallas Times Herald. "I can't get another job. I'll probably have to keep this one."

A former captain of the 1948 West Point team and assistant to Red

North Carolina's Ethan Horton ranks among Division I-A leaders in rushing and all-purpose running

Blaik at Army and to Duffy Daugherty at Michigan State, Yeoman said: "You know, the first year we were married, we moved five times. I guess that's what got me off that moving around stuff. If I had wanted to keep moving around, I would have stayed in the army. I guess it's become unusual to stay in one place, which is too bad."

Grant Teaff, in his 13th season at Baylor, is the dean of Southwest Conference coaches. Houston first competed for the SWC title in 1976 and won or shared it in 1976, 1978, and 1979. "Bill is a genius in our profession," Teaff said. "A lot of coaches have borrowed his offensive philosophies (Yeoman discovered the veer-T during 1964 spring practice)."

Yeoman's record entering this season was 148-86-8. Georgia's Bill Dooley is in his 21st straight season there, Penn State's Joe Paterno is in his 19th and Michigan's Bo Schembechler in his 16th consecutive. In terms of most seasons coached, two also are in their 23rd — Kentucky's Jerry Claiborne and Iowa's Hayden Fry. In Division I-AA, it is no contest. Grambling State's Eddie Robinson has spent all 42 head-coaching seasons there and has won 315 games, second in college football history only to the 323 by Alabama's Bear Bryant.

Family affairs

As a freshman in 1981, Penn State's Chris Sydnor faced brother Willie Sydnor, then a senior wide receiver at Syracuse, with Chris coming away with bragging rights in a 41-16 victory in the Carrier Dome. This Saturday, it is deja vu. But for Chris, a senior defensive back, the game's the thing no matter what the opponent's name — even if it's Chad Sydnor and he's listed on Maryland's defensive chart. Says Chris with a laugh: "During the game, our relationship as brothers will not be on my mind. I just see Maryland as the enemy and Penn State as the good guys." (Kathleen Delano, Penn State graduate SID aide)

Russ Maybury, sophomore linebacker at Cal State Fullerton, finally got a chance to play when John Nevens, an all-conference linebacker, broke his thumb in the second quarter against Idaho. Maybury responded with seven unassisted tackles, four for losses (two of them quarterback sacks) and two recovered fumbles, both setting up touchdowns in a 28-7 victory. The same weekend, younger brother Bob was making his high school varsity debut for Covina High School. The younger Maybury is also a linebacker and also recovered two fumbles. (Mel Franks, Cal State Fullerton SID)

The Thomas brothers, both fullbacks, played against each other in the Middlebury-Williams game.

Michael Ramseur, Wake Forest, is among the top rushers and all-purpose runners in Division I-A

Jeff scored a touchdown and gained 73 yards on 17 carries for Middlebury, while Ted paced Williams with 93 yards on 29 tries. The two seniors hail from Natick, Massachusetts. (Williams won, 17-14.) (Max Petersen, Middlebury SID)

Washington linebacker Reggie Rogers, a 6-7, 235-pound converted basketball forward, is a brother of Dan Rogers, a consensus all-America defensive back at UCLA last year. Reggie had not played football since high school when he came to Washington on a basketball scholarship. "The Michigan game was a good test for Reggie," said Don James, Husky head coach. "Reggie needed to prove he was a man, that he could play with the big boys when they decided to run right at him." Said Rogers: "There is no comparison between my feelings now (after the Michigan victory) and how I felt after we beat UCLA in basketball. I feel so much better now because I contributed more. I'm learning — expect big things from me next year." (Jim Muldoon, Pacific-10 SID)

Georgia Tech beat Alabama, 16-6, after eating 300 cookies baked by Eleanor Curry, mother of Tech head coach Bill Curry. The secret weapons were manufactured in Opelika, Alabama, and transported across the state line to Atlanta the Thursday before the game. "They were pretty good," said tailback Robert Lavette. Said Curry, "All I said to the team was, 'Now, you don't have to eat these. But just make sure if you don't like them or you don't eat them, I don't find out about it.'" A glance at the recipe will show this is strictly a health food. "My mother knew all about brown bread and vitamin C back in 1957," Curry said. "I'd hide my lunch at school . . . I didn't want the kids to think we were too poor to buy regular white bread." His mom promises to produce the cookies as long as Tech wins. "The funny thing," Curry told Tom Stinson of the Atlanta Journal, "is she hates to bake."

Quotes of the week

California coach Joe Kapp, after quarterback Gale Gilbert gained five yards net rushing against Pacific (only his second plus rushing figure in a 25-game career): "This is going to create some additional coaching problems — now I'm going to have to teach him how to straight-arm somebody."

Kapp on bruising fullback Ed Barbero: "He's the type you want to have on your team. He reminds me a lot of one of my Minnesota (Vikings) teammates, Bill 'Boom-Boom' Brown. He doesn't care if he has the ball or not as long as he gets to hit somebody." (Kevin Reneau, California SID)

Mike Sheppard, first-year coach at Long Beach State, is a firm

Worcester Tech's Mike Carbone ranks high among current leaders in Division III in rushing and scoring believer in the passing game. He has worked under Sid Gillman, Bill Walsh and Doug Scovil, among others. Asked about his offense, he replied: "We believe in a balanced attack. Our idea of balance is having a lot of different people catch passes." (Terry Ross, Long Beach State SID)

Wheaton (Illinois) wide receiver Jim Jorden caught two touchdown passes in his team's 35-0 victory over North Central, then proposed to his girlfriend, Kim Martin, at midfield shortly after the final gun (she said yes). Said Jorden: "I saved my biggest catch until after the game." (Ted Carlson, Wheaton SID)

Mike Schikman, James Madison radio play-by-play man, commenting on all the injuries to James Madison quarterbacks during the 1983 and 1984 seasons: "Lloyds of London wouldn't insure JMU's quarterbacks right now." Radio commentator David Taylor, after James Madison and Liberty Baptist scored 95 points and gained 892 yards (JMU won, 52-43): "That game was so exciting they're gonna charge everyone a few extra bucks as they leave the stadium." (Ken Ries, James Madison SID)

Southern California coach Ted Tollner on his team's 6-3 victory at Arizona State: "Our offense was boring, but we thought we could win the old-fashioned way." One person's question to the official statistician after that 6-3 game: "Who got the save?"

California coach Joe Kapp on why he likes to give a lot of players playing time: "The more people at a party having fun, the better."

Washington's defense, wrote Blaine Newnam of the Seattle Times, "has a personality best seen in barroom brawls." Adds Washington safety Jim Rodgers: "This defense has a lot of personality. We've got guys like Tim Meamber, who is straight out of the woods. We're dirty and nasty." Adds Meamber: "Everybody on this defense wants the big hit all the time."

Oregon coach Rich Brooks on his gamble to go for it on fourth-and-five against Colorado (the Ducks made it on a fake punt as up-back Alex Mack plunged for six): "That was one of those gut calls. If you don't have the guts, you don't coach on the sidelines." (Jim Muldoon, Pacific-10 SID)

Nicholls State coach Sonny Jackson after he learned that the three teams Nicholls State had lost to — Northeast Louisiana, Troy State and McNeese State — were ranked fourth, first and second nationally in their respective polls (Troy State in Division II, the others in I-AA): "All I want to know is, where is number three? We don't shy away from anybody." (Martin Harmon, Nicholls State SID)

Wagner coach Walt Hameline and defensive coordinator Mike Walsh were talking when Walsh spotted a box of newly delivered game programs. He flipped one open to the center page and over a list of St. John's (New York) players was a headline: "When Montclair State Has The Ball." Walsh showed the page to Hameline and groaned: "Oh, no, we're not playing them again." (Montclair had defeated Wagner, 24-6.) (Renata Jacywicz, Wagner assistant SID)

Clemson coach Danny Ford, after Georgia's Kevin Butler kicked a game-winning field goal with 11 seconds left to beat his team, 26-23: "He busted the ball. I'll bet the ball is flat right now. He kicked the fool out of it." (Claude Felton, Georgia SID)

A Cal State Fullerton trainer to sophomore defense tackle Ron McLean, who was lying on a training table at the hotel before the game at Colorado State: "What are you doing?" McLean: "I'm resting." Trainer: "Why do you have your uniform on?" McLean: "The uniform needs rest, too." (Mel Franks, Cal State Fullerton SID)

A graveyard game

Early last week, Bobby Bowden's Florida State team gathered at the "graveyard" and placed a piece of Orange Bowl sod there in what is becoming a traditional ceremony after road games in which the Seminoles upset highly-regarded, favored opponents (they had upset Miami's defending national champions the previous Saturday, 38-3). (Wayne Hogan, Florida State SID)

I-A attendance still up; I-AA down

Division I-A football attendance remains strongly up, while I-AA is slightly down, but it is likely schedule differences from 1983 account for much of the change. In I-AA, for instance, percent of capacity remains up, 56.2 percent to 55.2 at this stage a year ago. Division I-A is up 2,394 per game, or 5.73 percent, with percent of capacity also up. Here is the chart:

	Games	Attendance	Average	Capacity
Division I-A season figures to date	223	9,849,026	44,166	82.9
Same 105 teams at this stage in 1983	240	10,025,200	41,772	78.8

TV in the News

Maryland offsets revenue loss

The University of Maryland, College Park, estimates that it will lose about $300,000 this season in football television revenue, but the institution's part of a $46 million television contract for Atlantic Coast Conference basketball games should offset the predicted losses, according to Richard M. Dull, director of athletics.

Maryland will receive $1.3 million a year for its sports programs from the ACC's five-year contract with Raycom Sports-Jefferson Productions of Charlotte, North Carolina. The new contract takes effect in 1985 when the current three-year contract runs out.

"It's not a windfall at all," Dull said. "It gives us a little bit of security, but when you subtract what we lose in football, the two balance each other out."

Dull has estimated the Terps will earn only $350,000 from football television rights this year, down from $650,000 in 1983.

Harmon, Wilkinson to cover SWC

Raycom Sports has named Merle Harmon and Bud Wilkinson as announcers for the television package of Southwest Athletic Conference football games this season. The pair will cover eight conference games.

Harmon is a 29-year veteran of college and professional football play-by-play. He has worked extensively for ABC and NBC sports departments. Wilkinson will serve as analyst for the SWC games. He was head football coach and athletics director at the University of Oklahoma for 17 years. For 12 years, Wilkinson was the pregame analyst and color commentator for ABC's college football game of the week.

ESPN's live telecast of the Texas Longhorns' 35-27 college football victory over the Auburn Tigers registered a 5.6 Nielsen rating, the network's second highest weekend rating ever.

The 5.6 surpassed ESPN's first two college football ratings for Brigham Young vs. Pittsburgh and Miami (Florida) vs. Florida. ESPN's highest weekend rating was the 1982 Aloha Bowl, which registered a 6.4.

Tide telecast plan dropped

Officials of the Birmingham Cable Company have discontinued efforts to sell telecasts of two Alabama Crimson Tide football games after fewer than a dozen subscribers signed up for the $50 package.

"We've found that sports events of this type on pay-for-view are better in the $12 to $14 (per game) range, rather than $25," said Sid Burgess, a spokesman for the company. "The uncertainty of how many games would be shown and the proliferation of football on TV this fall probably were factors," Burgess said.

Two personnel changes announced

ESPN has announced two personnel changes, one in advertising sales and one in corporate communications.

Bill Horowitz, an account executive with the network since 1982, has been promoted to director of advertising sales for the central region. He will work out of ESPN's Chicago office.

Barry J. O'Donnell has been appointed manager of corporate communications. He will be responsible for ESPN's corporate public relations, including general business, advertising, legal, marketing and research matters. O'Donnell has been senior publicist for Showtime/The Movie Channel the past two years.

Scholarship deadline October 24

The deadline for nominating football student-athletes for NCAA postgraduate scholarships is October 24.

Faculty athletics representatives have until that date to use the nomination forms mailed by the NCAA national office to suggest candidates for the 25 awards of $2,000 each. Six scholarships will be awarded to student-athletes from Division I, six from Divisions II and III, and 13 at large.

The following guidelines should be followed in nominating candidates:

- Nominate no more than two candidates.

- Use the forms recently mailed from the national office, providing complete information.

- Include a copy of the student-athlete's transcript with each application. Also include any entrance or placement examination scores and a Graduate Record Examination score, if available.

- Mail the completed forms and other information to the appropriate district selection committee chair by the October 24 deadline.

Final selections will be made by the NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship Committee in December.

Scholarships will be awarded to 90 student-athletes during the 1984-85 academic year. In addition to the 25 football awards, 20 will be presented to basketball players (10 men and 10 women) and 45 in sports other than football or basketball (25 men, 20 women) in which the NCAA conducts championship competition.

SUNY rejects athletics grants-in-aid

Trustees of the country's largest public university decided to hold with tradition and reject a proposal for State University of New York athletics grants-in-aid.

In an 8-2 vote September 26, the SUNY Board of Trustees retained its long-standing policy of prohibiting scholarships for students on the basis of their athletic abilities.

The proposal was part of a package of recommendations from a special task force that would have made it easier for campuses to elevate the status of their intercollegiate athletics teams within the NCAA.

Currently, 24 of the 29 state-supported SUNY campuses have intercollegiate athletics programs. There are Division I programs at three campuses: men's soccer at Oneonta State University College, women's soccer at Cortland State University College and men's baseball at the State University of New York, Buffalo. Schools such as Buffalo and the State University of New York, Albany, have discussed going to Division I basketball. There have been discussions of going to Division I football at Buffalo.

The trustees also voted, 7-3, against establishing a separate athletics fee that would be charged in addition to the student activity fees. Student government leaders protested the separate fee, fearing that overzealous athletics directors would add pressure to drive up costs for students.

The trustees voted to establish intercollegiate athletics boards at campuses with athletics programs. Faculty and administrators would have controlling power over those boards in the allocation of student activity funds for athletics purposes. Students also would serve on the board but would not have a controlling number of votes.

Arnold Gardner, a trustee, suggested that Buffalo could present the board with a set of proposals for athletics grants-in-aid strictly for students attending that campus and a plan for elevating its teams' NCAA status.

Legislative Assistance

1984 Column No. 22

Improper inducements—benefits for high school coaches

Under the provisions of Bylaw 1-1-(b), an institution's staff member or any other representative of an institution's athletics interests shall not, during recruitment of an individual and prior to the individual's enrollment at the institution, be involved, directly or indirectly, in making arrangements for or giving or offering to give any financial aid or other benefits to a prospective student-athlete or the prospect's relatives or friends. This prohibition applies regardless of whether similar financial aid, benefits or arrangements are available to prospective students in general, their relatives or friends. The provision of such a benefit constitutes an improper recruiting inducement and would render the prospect ineligible for intercollegiate athletics competition at that institution.

Under this legislation, a member institution may not make an arrangement that would involve a material benefit for a high school or junior college coach inasmuch as such arrangement would be considered an improper inducement to encourage the eventual enrollment of prospective student-athletes from the high school or junior college with which the coach is associated. For example, a member institution generally may not be involved in arranging employment for a high school or junior college coach. Please note that this legislation would not preclude the part-time coaching employment of a high school or a junior college coach at a Division I institution who remains associated with the high school or junior college in a coaching capacity in a different sport. In addition, as set forth in Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(3) and Case No. 185 (page 296, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), Divisions II and III institutions may employ a high school or junior college coach as a member of the institution's coaching staff.

At its August meeting, and as set forth in the Interpretations column in the September 10, 1984, issue of The NCAA News (Situation No. 621), the NCAA Council approved guidelines for the employment of a high school or junior college coach by a Division II or III institution under the provisions of Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(3). Such high school or junior college coach must perform actual, on-the-field coaching duties; may be involved in recruiting only to the extent of such involvement by the institution's other on-the-field coaches, and must be under contract or other binding agreement for a period of not less than one academic year; however, a member institution is permitted to confine its compensation to such a coach to a shorter period of time, such as a sport season.

Improper inducements—airline tickets

As set forth in Bylaw 1-8-(a), a member institution may finance one visit to its campus for a given prospective student-athlete. If commercial air transportation is used, the fare may not exceed tourist (or comparable) class. This legislation would not allow a member institution to arrange payment of an airline ticket in such a manner as to allow a prospect, or relative or friend of the prospect, to take advantage of ticket bonuses, rebates, refunds or other extra benefits connected with the purchase of the airline ticket.

For example, it would not be permissible for a member institution to allow a prospect on an expense-paid visit to purchase an airline ticket so that the prospect may take advantage of a program by the airline that allows the ticket purchaser to receive a second ticket at a free or reduced rate. Such an arrangement by the institution would be considered an improper recruiting inducement under Bylaw 1-1-(b). The prospect can be provided only the actual cost of his or her transportation to the campus.

Eligibility for practice and competition

Under the provisions of Constitution 3-3-(a)-(3) and 3-3-(b) and Bylaw 5-1-(c), a student shall not be eligible to participate in organized practice sessions or to represent an institution in intercollegiate athletics competition unless the student-athlete is enrolled in at least a minimum full-time program of studies as determined by the regulations of the certifying institution, which, in any event, shall not be less than 12 semester hours or 12 quarter hours, or its equivalent as determined by the NCAA Eligibility Committee. Accordingly, a student-athlete who enrolls as a full-time student at the beginning of a semester or quarter but who drops below a full-time program of studies at any point during that term is no longer eligible to practice or compete after that point until he or she resumes a full-time academic program.

The requirement that a student-athlete be enrolled in a minimum full-time program of studies for practice and intercollegiate competition may be waived for a student-athlete who has athletics eligibility remaining if the student-athlete is enrolled in the final semester or quarter of the baccalaureate program and the institution certifies that the student-athlete is carrying for credit the courses necessary to complete the degree requirements as determined by the faculty of the institution. As noted in Bylaw 5-1-(c)-(2), this waiver provision shall be administered by the conference members of the Association or, in the case of an independent member institution, by the NCAA Eligibility Committee.

Top Five nominations open

Nominations are open for NCAA Today's Top Five awards for outstanding student-athletes in fall sports and for the Association's Award of Valor.

Nomination forms will be mailed to all member institutions and must be returned by November 1 to be considered for the awards, which will be presented at the honors luncheon during the 1985 Convention in Nashville.

Nominees for Today's Top Five must be seniors and must have earned a varsity letter in the sport specified. There is no limit on the number of student-athletes an institution may nominate, whether from one sport or from several sports; neither is there a limit on the number of winners from an institution.

Selection of winners will be based 40 percent on athletic ability and achievement; 40 percent on academic achievement, and 20 percent on character, leadership and involvement in campus activities.

The Award of Valor is presented to a coach or administrator currently associated with intercollegiate athletics, or to a current or former varsity letter winner at an NCAA member institution.

Nominees, when confronted with a situation involving personal danger, must have averted or minimized potential disaster by courageous action or noteworthy bravery.

Completed forms should be returned to David E. Cawood, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Akron gets two-year probation

The University of Akron has been placed on probation for two years by the NCAA Committee on Infractions for violations in the conduct of the institution's men's basketball program from 1980 to 1983.

The penalty includes sanctions that will prohibit the men's basketball team from participating in any postseason competition during the 1984-85 season. In addition, the university will be prohibited from awarding athletically related financial aid to more than three new student-athletes in men's basketball during the 1985-86 academic year, it being understood that no more than 13 team members may receive athletically related financial aid during that academic year.

The university also is required to disassociate two representatives of its athletics interests from any activities related to recruitment of prospective student-athletes. The university remains eligible for television appearances.

"The Committee on Infractions considered the violations by former basketball staff members at the university to be quite serious. The violations involved academic irregularities, ethical conduct, out-of-season basketball practices, extra benefits and improper inducements," said Frank J. Remington, committee chair.

"It should be emphasized," Remington said, "that the university's assistance in developing information in this case was invaluable, and the committee appreciates the university's expressed commitment to comply with NCAA rules. Nevertheless, to ensure that monitoring procedures related to the university's athletics program are strengthened, the committee believed that the probationary period should include periodic status reports and an in-person review of the program by the NCAA prior to the conclusion of the probationary period."

The findings involve violations of recruiting prospective student-athletes, improper benefits to enrolled student-athletes, ethical conduct, academic standards, out-of-season basketball practices and tryouts.

New soccer rule emphasized

Administrators and men's soccer coaches at NCAA member institutions should be aware that a player who is given a red card and ejected from a soccer game is not eligible to participate in the next regularly scheduled game.

This rule, 3-4-b in 1984 NCAA Men's Soccer Rules—was passed by the NCAA Men's Soccer Committee at its meeting last December and is in effect during the 1984 men's collegiate soccer season. A number of teams have reported violations of this new rule.

The new part of Rule 3-4-b regarding ejections is as follows:

"... He (a player receiving a red card) cannot be replaced and shall not be allowed to compete in the next regularly scheduled game including tournament games or, if the offense occurs in the final game of the season, the first scheduled game of the next season. Scrimmages, scheduled or unscheduled, do not qualify as games with reference to ejected players..."

Since enforcement of regular-season playing rules is limited to football and men's basketball (NCAA Bylaw 3-5), the Men's Soccer Committee cannot administer or adjudicate the new rule; however, C. Cliff McCrath, secretary-rules editor of the committee, said the committee is concerned about the problem.

"We are asking, in situations where the rule has been violated, the two schools to attempt to resolve the matter," McCrath said. "If that is not possible, teams affiliated with a

The following is a complete text of the penalty imposed and a summary of the violations.

Penalty to be imposed upon institution

1. The University of Akron shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for two years, effective September 26, 1984, it being understood that should any portion of the penalty in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalty shall be reconsidered by the NCAA.

2. The university's intercollegiate men's basketball team shall end its 1984-85 basketball season with the playing of its last regularly scheduled in-season contest, and the team shall not be eligible to participate in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship or any other postseason competition.

3. During the 1985-86 academic year, no more than three student-athletes in men's basketball shall be recipients of initial, athletically related financial aid (as set forth in O.I. 600) that has been arranged or awarded by the University of Akron; further, during this same academic year, no more than 13 student-athletes in men's basketball shall be recipients of athletically related financial aid.

4. The university shall submit a written report to William B. Hunt at the NCAA office prior to or on September 26, 1985, and September 26, 1986, which shall identify the corrective actions taken by the university during the applicable 12-month period that ensure better administrative controls regarding recruiting, improper benefits to student-athletes and academic standards; further, prior to the expiration of the probationary period in this case, the NCAA shall conduct an in-person review of the university's athletics policies and practices.

5. In accordance with the show-cause provision of the NCAA penalty structure, the university was required to take disciplinary and corrective action in regard to two representatives of the university's athletics interests, which will preclude these individuals from involvement in any activities associated with the recruitment of prospective student-athletes on behalf of the university and may result in other actions that the university determines to be within its authority to curtail the involvement of each individual in the university's athletics program during the probationary period.

Summary of violations of NCAA legislation

1. NCAA Constitution 3-6-(a) [ethical conduct] — (a) On three occasions during the 1981-82 and 1982-83 academic years, then members of the university's basketball coaching staff awarded a student-athlete .5 academic credits for courses at the university with full knowledge that the young man did not attend class on any occasions and did not complete any oral or written assignments or examinations, and (b) in November 1982, the then head basketball coach instructed a then assistant basketball coach to arrange for a student-athlete to receive .5 academic credits for a course at the university with full knowledge that the young man did not attend the course and did not complete any oral or written assignments or examinations.

conference should ask for a ruling from conference officials."

McCrath urged conference administrators to develop guidelines for the prevention and handling of violations.

McCrath said that if violations persist and are known to be intentional, the institutions involved would receive letters of reprimand from the Men's Soccer Committee and the ethics committee of the National Soccer Coaches Association of America.

2. NCAA Bylaw 3-1-(a)-(1) [out-of-season practices] — Prior to the permissible starting dates for team practice sessions in basketball during the 1980-81, 1981-82, 1982-83 and 1983-84 academic years, then members of the university's basketball coaching staff observed basketball workouts involving basketball team members and organized and supervised conditioning drills on the university's campus.

3. NCAA Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) [extra benefits] — (a) On at least six occasions during the 1980-81, 1981-82, and 1982-83 academic years, representatives of the university's athletics interests gave two student-athletes cash for their personal use; (b) during the 1980-81 and 1981-82 academic years, the then head basketball coach gave a student-athlete a university parking permit for the young man's automobile at no cost to the young man; (c) on at least five occasions during the 1981-82 or 1982-83 academic years, a then assistant basketball coach arranged for university parking tickets that were issued to a student-athlete to be dismissed; (d) during the 1981-82 basketball season, a representative of the university's athletics interests gave a commemorative mug to each member of the university's intercollegiate basketball team, and (e) on at least one occasion during the 1981-82 academic year, a member of the university's basketball coaching staff provided a student-athlete round-trip automobile transportation between the university's campus and a restaurant in another city, where the young man was entertained for a meal at no cost to him.

4. NCAA Bylaw 1-1-(b)-(1) [recruiting inducements] — (a) During June 1980, a then assistant basketball coach arranged for a damage deposit for a prospective student-athlete's apartment rental to be waived; further, the coach arranged for the prospect to rent a furnished apartment at a reduced rate; (b) in May or June 1980, a then assistant basketball coach arranged for a representative of the university's athletics interests to provide a prospective student-athlete one-way automobile transportation at no cost from the young man's home to Akron, Ohio (a distance of approximately 575 miles); (c) in April 1983, during the official paid visit to the university's campus of a prospective student-athlete, a then member of the university's basketball coaching staff arranged for the young man to be given athletic workout clothing, and (d) in April 1980 and 1982, during visits to the university's campus by prospective student-athletes, the then head basketball coach and a representative of the university's athletics interests arranged for the young men to receive articles of clothing.

5. NCAA Bylaw 1-6-(a) [tryouts] — During the official paid visits to the university's campus of four prospective student-athletes during the 1979-80 and 1982-83 academic years, then members of the university's basketball coaching staff observed these prospective student-athletes in basketball workouts.

6. NCAA Bylaws 1-8-(g) and 1-8-(j) [improper transportation] — (a) During the summer of 1983, while a prospective student-athlete was traveling to the university's campus to enroll, a then member of the university's basketball coaching staff provided the young man one-way automobile transportation from Cleveland-Hopkins International Airport to the university's campus, and (b) on one occasion during the summer of 1980, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, a then assistant basketball coach provided the young man one-way automobile transportation (a distance of approximately 300 miles) in order for the young man to work in a basketball camp.

7. NCAA Bylaw 5-6-(d)-(4) [erroneous certifications of compliance] — With full knowledge at the time that certain practices of the university's intercollegiate basketball program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, the then head basketball coach and two then assistant basketball coaches attested on statements filed with the chief executive officer of the university in 1980, 1981, 1982 or 1983 that they had reported to the chief executive officer their knowledge of and involvement in any violation of NCAA legislation involving the university.

Briefly in the News

The Yale Society of Sports Law will sponsor a forum October 9 to discuss the application of contract principles to sports relationships, the first of a series of forums planned by the group. Other topics include the regulation of drug use and the expanding role of the attorney in sports broadcasting. Media members interested in attending the forums can call Neil Sacker at 203/436-3977. . . The Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference has voted to incorporate women's soccer as an official conference sport. . . The women's volleyball program at California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo, and the women's softball program at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, have been admitted into the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. The admittance of the two schools as associate members of the conference follows earlier action this year in which the University of Hawaii joined the conference in seven women's sports.

Gary Zimmerman, who won the Morris Trophy last fall as the Pacific-10 Conference's outstanding offensive lineman, has become the first former University of Oregon athlete to contribute a fully endowed scholarship to his alma mater. Zimmerman has donated $50,000, which has been established as an endowment fund. Zimmerman was an all-pro offensive tackle last season with the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League. . . University of Denver students (undergraduate, graduate and law) will be admitted to Pioneer athletic events free during the 1984-85 academic year. Play-off or tournament games will not be included in the policy. Director of Athletics Anthony R. Cillo said, "Our hope is that student attendance and enthusiasm will increase as a result of this."

The Big East Conference has agreed to play its basketball championship tournament in Madison Square Garden for three more years, 1986 through 1988. The agreement extends a contract reached in 1981 that provided for the Garden to host the conference tournament from 1983 through 1985. . . Paul R. Giel, athletics director, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, has announced a special fund-raising project aimed at equipping and furnishing the new football building under construction on the main campus. The $4.5 million structure will contain a practice area and an office complex to house every function connected with the Gophers' football program. The special fund-raising project is designed to equip and furnish the structure completely.

John Inman of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has been named the winner of the Fred Haskins award for 1984 as the outstanding collegiate player in the nation, according to balloting by the Golf Writers Association of America, the Golf Coaches Association of America and collegiate golfers. Inman broke Ben Crenshaw's record to win the NCAA Division I title last June.

Discount fares available for Convention travel

The NCAA travel service has announced special discount fares available from several airlines for delegates traveling to the 1985 NCAA Convention in Nashville, Tennessee.

Special discounts of up to 45 percent off normal fares have been secured with several major airlines, and super-saver discounts are available with a number of other carriers.

Restrictions that normally apply to discount rates will not apply for these special arrangements the travel service has made with each airline.

Reservations for the special rates to the 1985 Convention, to be held January 14-16 at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville, can be made by calling Fugazy International Travel, which handles NCAA travel services. Special fares to the Convention are available only by calling the NCAA travel service's 24-hour, toll-free number—1-800/243-1800. Persons living in Alaska, Connecticut, Hawaii or Puerto Rico should call collect at 0-203/562-6222.

Arrangements may be made with the travel service to have the tickets billed directly to the individual or the member institution.

Thomas P. Calder, a member of the coaching staff at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Steven M. Carr, sports editor of The Courier in Prescott, Arizona, have joined the national office staff.

Calder, who was assistant lacrosse coach and assistant director of games operations for the Tar Heels, joins the legislative services department as a legislative assistant. Carr is a publications editor in the publishing department.

Calder is a graduate of Hofstra,

Robinson second on victory list

Grambling State University head football coach Eddie Robinson became the second-winningest coach in college football history September 29 with his 315th victory, edging ahead of Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Grambling defeated Prairie View A&M, 42-0.

The victory gave Robinson a record of 315-104-15 after 42 years as head coach at Grambling. Stagg's record was 314-199-35. Robinson is eight games behind Paul "Bear" Bryant, whose record was 323-85-17.

Hospital for sports injuries opens

The $18.3 million Hughston Sports Medicine Hospital, devoted to the treatment of athletics injuries, opened October 1 in Columbus, Georgia.

Dr. Jack Hughston, for whom the hospital is named, began his practice in sports medicine in Columbus 35 years ago and achieved national renown for treating top athletes and returning them to the playing field.

Hughston's patients have included professional stars in football, baseball and golf.

The new hospital has 100 beds—oversized for athletes' bodies—and it is expected that the hospital will reach 80 percent occupancy in its first year of operation. The hospital is part of a new complex, which includes the current clinic and the Hughston Sports Medicine Foundation.

cussions, actions and recommendations in their separate meetings, and the full Commission will receive a report on the current status of college football television. The Commission also will review the policy statement on athletics adopted by the Interassociation Presidents' Committee on Collegiate Athletics, which was published in the July 18, 1984, issue of The NCAA News.

The Commission then will consider legislation that it may wish to sponsor at the 1985 NCAA Convention, legislative proposals that it may wish to designate for roll-call voting at that Convention, and any specific proposals that it wishes to have considered in a certain portion of the Convention agenda in order to facilitate participation in the Convention by CEOs.

Thirty-seven of the 44 Commission members have indicated their intention to attend the October 3-4 meeting.
