Presidents' Commission calls special Convention in June

A special NCAA Convention to act on legislation that will be proposed by the NCAA Presidents' Commission has been scheduled for Thursday and Friday, June 20-21, 1985, at the Hyatt Regency New Orleans.

Scheduling of the special Convention is being announced this week by Commission Chair John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University, Bloomington, in conjunction with the mailing of a questionnaire to the chief executive officers of all NCAA member institutions to obtain their opinions regarding integrity and economic issues in intercollegiate athletics.

The special Convention will be limited to legislation dealing with those two areas and will emphasize proposals developed by the Commission after it reviews the results of the study being initiated this week.

The special meeting was called under the Commission's authority set forth in NCAA Constitution 5-4(d)-(6).

In a cover letter accompanying the questionnaire being mailed this week by the American Institutes for Research, Ryan urged the participation of chief executives in the special Convention. "We hope each campus head will be in attendance as the institution's voting delegate," he stated.

Results of the survey of all CEOs will be available not later than mid-March of 1985 and will be sent immediately to the Presidents' Commission, which then will determine the legislation it wishes to propose during its April 3-4, 1985, meeting in Chicago.

The deadline for the Commission, the NCAA Council or member institutions to submit legislation for the special Convention will be Monday, April 22, 1985. The Official Notice of the special Convention—the fifth such special meeting in the Association's history—will be mailed from the NCAA national office not later than May 7, 1985.

The 16-page questionnaire being mailed by the American Institutes for Research this week is divided into two sections, one dealing with integrity issues and the other with economic problems. It asks each CEO to report information and perceptions regarding the "nature and dimensions of economic and integrity problems in college athletics, the causes of these problems, and possible solutions that the Presidents' Commission might recommend for adoption by the NCAA membership," according to Ryan.

"We need to receive the views of all presidents and chancellors in the NCAA membership," Ryan said. He also noted that the responses to the questionnaire would be tabulated by NCAA membership division and

Coaching-staff limits sought in Division III

Proposals to establish coaching-staff limitations in all Division III sports, to implement a drug-testing program for NCAA championships and postseason games, and to delete existing restrictions on invitations to bowl games highlight the personnel limitations and general legislative proposals at the 1985 NCAA Convention.

Currently, only Division I has limitations on the permissible number of coaches in a sport, and only in football and basketball. However, six members of the Old Dominion Athletic Conference are sponsoring Proposal No. 70, which would permit one head coach and four assistant coaches in football and one head coach and one assistant coach in all other sports in Division III.

The legislation would take effect August 1, 1985, although an institution would be permitted to meet the limitations through normal attrition when employment commitments prevent immediate compliance.

Among the nine proposals in the general section, the drug-testing plan—Proposal No. 75—probably will gain the most attention.

Sponsored by the NCAA Council with the backing of the Executive Committee and the Special Committee on Drug Testing, the proposal, in addition to testing athletes at NCAA championships and certified postseason football games, would establish a certified list of banned drugs and issue recommended guidelines for regular-season drug testing.

In addition, the drug-testing proposal would require student-athletes to provide information related to drug usage, authorize penalties for institutional staff members who know or should know of use by student-athletes of banned drugs, and establish loss of eligibility as a consequence of use of a banned drug by a student-athlete.

Sponsored by the Council, Proposal No. 78 would delete all restrictions on the permissible dates for extending and considering invitations to participate in certified postseason football bowl games. Currently, NCAA legislation prohibits a member institution from considering bowl invitations before the conclusion of its football game on the Saturday following the third Tuesday in November or 6 p.m. local time, whichever is earlier.

Four other personnel-limitations proposals and seven additional proposals in the general grouping will be considered. Following are brief summaries of the remaining proposals:

Personnel limitations

Proposal No. 71, sponsored by the Council, would reduce the number of full-time assistant coaches from eight to seven in Division I-AA football. It also would permit three part-time assistants at institutions that preclude freshmen from competing on the varsity and sponsor separate freshman teams instead.

All eight members of the Ivy Group are sponsoring an amendment to the Council's proposal. This proposal, No. 72, would permit two additional part-time coaches (beyond what the Council is proposing) in Division I—

Catastrophic injury insurance plan available for member institutions

A lifetime catastrophic injury insurance program now is available for NCAA member institutions.

Approval earlier this month by the Kansas Department of Insurance cleared the way for the long-awaited program, which will provide disability benefits and lifetime medical and rehabilitation benefits to any male or female student-athlete representing a participating institution.

"This is a significant step for intercollegiate athletics," said Charles A. Taff of the University of Maryland, College Park, chair of the NCAA Insurance Committee. "From the time the committee began work on this idea three years ago, the goal was to provide protection for athletes and their families. This program provides that protection."

Benefits, on an excess basis, will begin once the student's medical and dental expenses reach a deductible level of $25,000 and will be payable for life, with no limit on the total dollar amount (see accompanying story for details). Hospital, surgical, extended care facilities, home health care and rehabilitation expenses are included.

Initial annual premiums will range from $2,000 to $8,000, depending on the sports sponsored by a participating institution. Future premiums will be based on claims experience for all participating institutions (combined) and the level of participation by the membership.

The 1985-86 academic year will be the first full period of coverage. However, institutions that wish to participate prior to August 1, 1985, may purchase the plan on a pro-rated basis beginning January 1. Complete information will be circulated through The NCAA News during

Major elements of the NCAA's new lifetime catastrophic injury insurance program include the following:

• Coverage. All male and female student-athletes at participating member institutions will be protected. This includes cheerleaders, student coaches, student trainers and student managers, as well as participating athletes. Coverage will be provided for injuries incurred while participating in scheduled games; organized, supervised practices, and official team or group travel.

• Benefits. The policy will provide lifetime medical and rehabilitation benefits to covered participants. Benefits would begin once the injured student's medical and dental expenses reach a deductible level of $25,000.

The policy provides medical and rehabilitation expenses incurred in excess of the deductible amount that would not be covered by any other applicable insurance program, government program or other source.

The benefits are payable for life, with no limit, and include hospital, surgical, extended care facilities and rehabilitation expenses. Additional benefits, subject to certain dollar limits, are provided for housing adaptations, special transportation expenses (including personal vehicle adaptation) and other special expenses approved by the attending physician. Provisions for lost earnings and miscellaneous expenses are included for those persons totally disabled or partially disabled following a period of compensable total disability.

• Premiums. A group of high-risk sports has been identified by the insurance company, and those sports determine the premium. This group includes spring and fall football, men's and women's gymnastics, men's ice hockey, men's lacrosse, men's and women's swimming and diving, and wrestling.

Football was used as the premium base to determine the six rate classifications. The annual premium for an institution with spring and fall football and at least two other high-risk sports will be $8,000; an institution with no football and fewer than two other high-risk sports will pay $2,000. Three other classes for football-playing schools and one for schools without football complete the package, with premiums ranging from $3,000 per year to $7,000.

• Enrollment. A procedure similar to that used for other NCAA insurance programs will be used. Each institution will have an opportunity to enroll voluntarily, using an enrollment form that will be mailed in March 1985.

Information will be sent to member institutions to prepare for an August 1, 1985, effective date. If institutions wish to participate prior to that time, the coverage can be purchased on a pro-rated basis beginning January 1, 1985.

• Administration. The program will be underwritten by State Mutual Life Assurance Company of America and administered by American Sports Underwriters, Incorporated.

Major independents mull over possible league

Chicago Sun-Times

On the day after Bobby Knight boycotted the annual Big Ten Conference basketball press conference, reportedly because some of his fellow Big Ten coaches didn't meet his exacting standards, four other coaches enjoyed each others' company so well their meeting could have "historic proportions."

The quotes surround what Billy Packer had to say about their get-together, so overwhelmed was he at the significance of this gathering of the mentors from Notre Dame, DePaul, Marquette and Dayton on the same dais.

Coaches Digger Phelps, Joey Meyer, Rick Majerus and Don Donohue and their athletics directors had met to trumpet this season's start of round-robin scheduling, home and away, among their basketball powers. But Packer, television's foremost authority on the sport, read more into it.

"The greatest thing they could do would be to join up in a conference as strong as the Big Ten in basketball," he said.

His suggestion evoked pleased applause from the hundreds of alumni from the four schools who had turned out in the basement of the Hyatt Regency Chicago for the first annual "Great Independent Tip-Off Luncheon."

In reality, Packer was only bringing the idea out of the closet. The athletics directors and coaches of the four schools had discussed such a marriage among themselves. It isn't going to happen tomorrow or the next day, but maybe in some season not far distant.

Dayton and Marquette are all for it. DePaul might warm to the idea. Notre Dame would be hardest to persuade. As Hank Raymonds, the Marquette AD, said: "I imagine it would depend on how Notre Dame reacts."

Notre Dame is "not interested" now, Irish athletics director Gene Corrigan said. "But I can't say three years from now we won't be."

Three years from now, their round-robin scheduling will have thrown them together enough so they'll know how well they can live with each other.

For now, as Digger Phelps said, "Playing each other twice is very, very powerful for us in the Midwest." It would give this part of the country "the same attraction as Georgetown, St. John's (New York), Boston College and Villanova" in the East.

As far as DePaul is concerned, this season's schedule brought Notre Dame to the Rosemont Horizon December 8. The Demons will return the visit January 20. DePaul visits Dayton January 26; the Flyers come to Chicago February 6. Marquette comes to Rosemont March 2; DePaul visits Milwaukee March 9, the last game for both schools before the NCAA tournament.

These schools are drawn together by common needs because they are among the last of a rare breed, the independents. Raymonds remembers when about 80 independents were playing major-college basketball. The number has dwindled to 20 or fewer.

Most schools have had to sacrifice independence to the needs of scheduling and making the NCAA tournament. They have joined conferences so they always have somebody to play and last two years," Corrigan said. "DePaul has elevated its schedule. Three or four years ago, DePaul's schedule was terrible. They had five or six real games on it. Then they'd get in the tournament and get wiped out right away."

Notre Dame was notorious for scheduling schools it could beat in the friendly confines of the Athletic and Convocation Center, with no return engagements in the other schools' snakepits. DePaul would play Valparaiso and St. Mary's of Minnesota as often as possible. But Phelps and Joey Meyer now favor a bumpier road.

By going to this round-robin tieup, the four schools get some of the scheduling advantages enjoyed by conferences, without the drawbacks. DePaul and Notre Dame get to keep their big haul of national television loot without sharing with other conference members. Corrigan likes to retain the freedom to play a national schedule without being tied too much to conference opponents. And he doesn't want to get involved in the season-ending tournaments most conferences now play.

DePaul's athletics director, Ed Manetta, says his school wants to maintain its "tradition" of independence, rather than joining a conference.

Dayton's AD, Tom Frericks, and his coach, Donohue, are most desirous of these four forming the nucleus of a new, high-quality conference because it would bring Dayton more national attention. Marquette's Raymonds is for it, too. But he points out they would need at least six members. Eight would be a better number.

Raymonds thinks these four Roman Catholic institutions should be ecumenical enough to draw in non-Catholic members.

There also is the problem, he said, that they don't consider it ethical to try to lure an attractive school away from another conference into a new league, unless the desirable school makes the first approach.

Ethics doesn't have much to do with college basketball, or football, these days. But these schools think it should. They wouldn't want to invite any school into their midst that didn't share their reputation for playing by the rules. Even Bobby Knight could find this company worth keeping.

Columnary Craft

because conference champions get automatic bids to the tournament that has become the leading attraction in college sports.

It has been particularly difficult for independents to schedule attractive opponents in January and February, when conferences are too busy with civil warfare to be distracted by outsiders.

The pressure of getting into the NCAA tournament will be eased somewhat next March by its expansion from 48 to 64 teams. But it still will be tough for an independent to squeeze in unless it has compelling credentials.

Corrigan, a member of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee, says that committee's emphasis on strength of schedule has forced independents to upgrade the quality of opponents.

"You'll notice our schedule is a lot tougher than it's been the

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

This year's college bowl bids have been signed, sealed and delivered, accompanied by the usual wailing and gnashing of teeth by those teams left out of the bowl lottery. And the roars of the powerhouses who felt they didn't get the prestigious invitation they were hoping for have quieted to mere groans.

For most of those teams that felt slighted, the letdown has just set in. But there are a handful of outstanding teams around the country that received their disappointment dosage a couple of weeks ago. Some are schools only the most ardent football followers have heard of, but the disappointment of being passed over is just as real.

Earlier this year, the NCAA Executive Committee agreed to expand this year's Division III play-off field from eight to 16 teams. But then in August, the NCAA voted to take back the sugar plum it dangled in front of the mouths of the nation's best small-college teams. The reason: This summer's Supreme Court ruling on the college football plan "relieved" the NCAA of some $4.2 million in revenue that would have helped finance the enlarged Division III play-off field.

When our nation's top justices decided to turn college football into a gridiron auction, they weren't only deciding the futures of the Georgias and the Oklahomas of the football world. Just ask Hope College (9-0) or Hamline College (9-0-1) or Case Western Reserve University (9-0), three teams that had great seasons but recently found themselves all dressed up with no place to go.

Once again, the true spirit of collegiate athletics, as found at the Division III level, has been victimized by the avaricious college football factories.

ACC has the inside track against outside foes

It is time again to take a look at the changing face of Division I men's basketball.

Among the 15 conferences with winning records against Division I teams outside the conference over the first five seasons of the 1980s, five were not in existence 10 years ago (for the 1974-75 season, that is). Its members were independents then.

The Big East Conference ranks second, the Metro Conference sixth, the Sun Belt Conference 11th, the Metro Atlantic Conference 12th and the Atlantic 10 Conference 14th on the list. The Big East actually has only five seasons under its belt and the Metro Atlantic just three.

The Big East has been a big winner against outsiders all five seasons. The Metro, Sun Belt and Atlantic 10 had winning records four out of five years and the Metro Atlantic its last two after an under-.500 start. The Metro was just one game under .500 in 1981 but was a big winner other seasons in the 1980s, topped by 79-36 in 1983. The Sun Belt was 10 games under .500 in 1980 but by 1984 had improved to 60-36—sixth best in the country behind the Atlantic Coast Conference (99-18), Big East (74-29), Big Ten Conference (72-32), Big Eight Conference (62-34) and Southeastern Conference (60-34).

Atlantic Coast on top

The Atlantic Coast has led throughout the 1980s except for 1983, when it slipped to third behind the leading Big Ten and second-place Southeastern. The ACC's remarkable .846 winning percentage last season will be something to shoot at for years to come.

During the first half of the decade, the ACC is far in front with 421 victories and 106 losses vs. outside Division I opponents for a .799 percentage. The Big East (.708), Big Ten (.700), Southeastern (.681) and Big Eight (.631) complete the top five.

Other conferences that enjoyed their best outside records of the 1980s last season (besides the ACC and Sun Belt) were the Western Athletic Conference (61-39) and the Mid-American Conference (31-37).

Remember, all games against teams below Division I are deleted in the rankings. This is because Division I teams annually win 85 to 90 percent of such games. The top conferences play fewer such games and win a higher percentage. The Big Ten (39-0) and Big East (63-0) are undefeated over the five years in such games and the top five conferences are 323-9. If all such games are included, only eight conferences have losing records over the five years.

Here are the rankings for all 30 Division I conferences with all-Division I lineups, with the number of winning seasons in parentheses (remember, too, the record says nothing about the quality of opposition or where the games were played):

One winning season is not a misprint for the Pacific Coast Athletic Association—it was 60-35 in 1983 and barely under .500 the other four seasons. It should be noted that the Eastern College Athletic Conference South underwent drastic revision in 1982—five teams leaving—and since then has been a winner every year, with a three-year record of 163-127 for .562.

Independents vanishing

A decade ago, there were almost 70 independents in Division I. Today there really are only seven true independents—Chicago State, Dayton, DePaul, Florida A&M, Marquette, Notre Dame and Tennessee State. All others now listed as independents are in a new conference, have applied for membership in an existing conference or have hopes of forming a new conference.

Basketball notes

ference. Why? It did not take a Phi Beta Kappa to decide that the best way to reach the tournament was to form a conference and obtain automatic qualification. Now, there are 32 conferences and counting (in 1974: 18).

For instance, Augusta, Baptist, Campbell and Radford are in the new Big South Conference, which begins next season with five other teams hoping to become Division I then. The new Gulf Star Conference is under way now with four of the six members in Division I. Brooklyn, Eastern Washington, U.S. International and Utica hope to join existing conferences soon. A proposed new conference includes New Orleans, Southwestern Louisiana, Stetson, Texas-San Antonio, Pan American and Central Florida. Monmouth (New Jersey) is waiting to become eligible for the Eastern College Athletic Conference Metro title. That leaves only the seven true independents mentioned above (and some of those eventually could decide to go the conference route.)

Tournament leaders

The ACC also leads the list in the National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship the first five years of the 1980s, with 22 entrants, five Final Four teams and two champions. The other champions came from the Big East, Big Ten and Metro, and all Final Four teams came from seven conferences.

The Metro (.679), ACC (.672), Southwest (.621), Big East (.617) and Big Ten (.604) are the top five in winning percentage. The standings generally reflect each conference's standing against outside opponents, but there are some notable exceptions, such as the Ivy Group, last at .311 vs. outsiders but 4-5 for .444 in the tournament, and the East Coast Conference, 21st at .413 but 4-5 also (ranking is by victories):

Perhaps it is coincidence; perhaps there is a special type of magnet drawing them to Oxford, Mississippi, to ply their basketball talents. Perhaps head coach Van Chancellor and his assistants recruit with double vision. Whatever the cause, the Mississippi Lady Rebels have welcomed their sixth set of sisters (how is that for a tongue-twister) and second set of twins, Rosie and Valerie Rushing, as members of the 1985 team.

Unlike 1984 squad members Lindy and Lucy Noble, the Rushings are not identical twins. Rosie is a 5-7, redhaired guard, and Valerie plays forward, is 6-1 and has blonde hair.

"We have always been successful with sisters in the past," explained Chancellor. "I don't think Rosie and Valerie will be an exception. It's been our policy to treat each sister as a separate person and this has worked well."

Rosie was Mississippi's first signee during the 1984 recruiting season. Valerie joined her by committing to Mississippi in the spring after taking a look at several other schools. "Neither Rosie nor I wanted to go too far from home. Our parents have always given us a lot of support, and we wanted them to see us play," Valerie said. The Rushings are from New Hope, Mississippi. "After Rosie signed with Mississippi, we really didn't discuss where I would be going. She knew that it was my decision to make. Although we may be twins, we are two completely different people and I wanted to decide on my own. I am very happy with my decision and think we will both be able to help the team."

The Rushings have played basketball together since junior high school, so they are accustomed to working together. "I guess you could say that I can anticipate when and where Valerie is going to be on the court," Rosie explained. "We know each other well and are close friends even as sisters. I think this has helped us on the basketball court." "I can't recall fighting with Rosie about basketball," Valerie assented. "We talked about the games and what we could have done differently, but I never got upset with her. On the court, even though we're sisters, we regard each other as just another player. I believe that helps our feelings a little." (Leslie Williams, Mississippi assistant SID)

Barbara and Dolores Bootz, basketball-playing sisters from Marlboro, New York, have been transplanted to Georgia to establish their college careers. Unlike the Rushings, they are basketball rivals. Barbara, a 6-7 sophomore who is one year older and a half-inch taller than Dolores, plays for coach Andy Landers at Georgia. Dolores selected Georgia Tech, where she is a freshman this season.

A November 29 game between the two schools marked the first time the sisters had ever played against one another. Their mother and stepfather, Nancy and Bob Ripley, made the trip south to watch. The parents spent the night before the game in Athens with Barbara and game night with Dolores in Atlanta. The trip was planned the day Dolores signed with Georgia Tech.

"Somebody asked me what I was going to do," Bob Ripley told the Atlanta Journal's Karen Rosen. "I'll sit way up in the back by myself and root for them both. They're both so darn good." "It's going to be something," admitted Nancy Ripley. "I never thought I'd see them play each other. I'm just hoping Do doesn't throw the ball to Barb. They're so used to doing it."

"That would work pretty well, as long as Barbara doesn't throw it to Dolores," joked Andy Landers. "Thursday night I hope they're enemies from Barbara's perspective. I hope Dolores comes out with sisterly love and Barbara with hatred in her eyes."

The sisters were separated for the first time in 1983, when Barbara was a freshman at Georgia and Dolores was a senior in high school. Now, the on-court rivalry notwithstanding, Barbara is glad Dolores is nearby.

"I don't see the Georgia-Georgia Tech rivalry," admitted Barbara. "Maybe it's because I'm from the North. I have a Georgia Tech sweater, and I wear it around here. People say, 'What are you doing with that on?'"

Georgia won the clash, 100-69, with Barbara's 27-point contribution. Dolores accumulated 17 points in Tech's cause.

Messiah's Jamie Noble, a 5-6 senior, was also part of a sister act when she first came to the Grantham, Pennsylvania, school. Her sister, Jodi, was a sophomore forward for the Falcons when Jamie arrived as a freshman for the 1982 season. Jamie began on the junior varsity team. Four weeks into her initial season, she joined her sister on the varsity, and the two were starters. Jodi as a forward and Jamie at guard. Each had to adjust to a different position from that played in high school. Jodi had been a center and Jamie a forward.

Phil Cox of Vanderbilt is ranked among the top Division I scorers with 22.5 average

"I was a little uneasy," Jamie recalled of her switch to shooting guard. "I wasn't used to handling the ball. But now I've adjusted, and I don't think I'd want to switch back to forward."

Jamie was happy to be back playing with her sister after a year of separation. "The year we were apart I'd always try to come up to as many of her games as I could, and she'd come to as many of mine (in their home town of Hanover, Pennsylvania) as she could. We always clicked in high school and I knew we could do the same in college. We always got along well. We don't really fight or anything."

Quotes of the week

Maine women's basketball head coach Peter Gavett was ready with an explanation for his team's decisive 115-57 loss to Virginia in Maine's season opener. "I think the whole game hinged on one call," he sighed. "The one I made last April scheduling the contest." (Len Harlow, Maine SID)

Memphis State men's coach Dana Kirk got his 100th coaching victory at Memphis State recently, 79-62 over Arkansas State (he was 132-78 previously in eight seasons at Tampa and Virginia Commonwealth). Coincidentally, Kirk's first win at Memphis State was also against Arkansas State nearly five years ago on the same day. Afterwards, Kirk said: "Zach Curlin (who had 118 wins at Memphis State in 1924 through 1948) had a street named after him. If I keep winning, who knows, they might name a river after me. I just hope it's not Mud Island." (Mike Finn, Memphis State SID)

Talbert Turner is a 5-9 freshman guard at Morehead State who comes from Peach Grove, Kentucky (population about 50), where he had a 3.700 grade-point average (he is now majoring in mathematics). He has surprised everyone by leading the team in scoring (10.0 per game) through five games after becoming a starter in game four. "After I took the floor at Oklahoma and looked up at Wayman Tisdale (a foot taller at 6-9), I thought to myself, this ain't too bad for a country boy from Peach Grove," Turner said with a smile. (Rick Hesterberg, Morehead State SID)

Lady Racer guard Melody Ottinger on the new smaller ball for women: "It took a little getting used to at first, but I think our entire team can tell a difference. Our shooting is a lot better, we're scoring more, and we're handling the ball a lot better. The regular-sized balls seem a lot heavier and more awkward now." (Craig Bohner, Murray State). (NCAA Statistics Service will report on a midseason survey on national Division I women's trends in The NCAA News.)

Championships Highlights

Sunblazers triumph in Division II soccer

Troy Edwards converted Florida International's only corner kick of the game into the winning goal as the Sunblazers dashed Seattle Pacific's attempt to repeat as national champion with a 1-0 victory in the NCAA Division II Men's Soccer Championship game December 9.

The host Falcons, winners of the national title in 1978 and 1983 and trying to become the first three-time NCAA champion, played Florida International to a scoreless tie through regulation time.

Just over five minutes into the first overtime period, Orlando Barrios put the corner kick to the far side of the Falcons' goal, where Edwards' header landed just inside the left post. It was Edwards' fifth goal of the season but the Sunblazers' first shot at the net.

Playing in damp, cold conditions on an artificial surface that forced Florida International to purchase special shoes prior to the game, the Sunblazers won their second national crown under Karl Kremser and took a 3-1 advantage in their series with Seattle Pacific.

"Not to take anything away from what our club accomplished," Kremser told the Seattle Times-Post Intelligencer, "but I told Cliff (Seattle Pacific coach McCrath) I thought we stole the game from them. SPU played brilliantly, especially in the first half when we were very fortunate not to be down by a goal or two."

"But I honestly feel the turf kept us from playing our game. We like to attack out of the backfield and keep the ball on the ground and move it around. We tried that in the first half and found we couldn't control the ball at all on the turf. We were forced to abandon our style and go to an air game."

Statistically, the Falcons controlled the game, outshooting the Sunblazers 29-5 and taking 19 corner kicks to Florida International's one. It also was the first overtime game that Seattle Pacific failed to win in the championship tournament this year.

"Sometimes, when you keep missing chance after chance, you wonder on the sidelines what you've done wrong, and you think there's no way you'll win," McCrath said. "Today, for some reason, I didn't feel we would continue to miss."

"I thought it was just a matter of time until we broke through. I felt that way until the reality of their goal hit me."

Florida International finished the season 14-4-3; Seattle Pacific was 19-6-1.

Seattle Pacific's Tom Blahous was named the game's top offensive player, and teammate Dennis Gunnell earned the top defensive player award.

Augustana (Illinois) makes history in football play-offs

Augustana (Illinois) became the first team in the 12-year history of the NCAA Division III Football Championship to win consecutive titles with a 21-12 victory over Central (Iowa) December 8 at the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl in Kings Island, Ohio.

Augustana capped its second straight perfect season with its conservative wing-T offense by rushing 66 times for 247 yards, throwing the ball just seven times. The Vikings controlled the ball almost 17 more minutes than Central.

"Their offense is hard for a defensive back to read," Central safety Scott Froehle said. "A couple of times, I didn't know where the ball was. As a defensive back, I've never seen so many people smashed together, and then the ball carrier fires through the crowd of people."

Augustana, which led the division with an average of 338 yards rushing per game, relied on fullback Ron Nelson, the Vikings' favorite weapon for short yardage. Nelson carried 32 times for 155 yards and scored three touchdowns on Galbreath Field's muddy turf.

On Augustana's first possession, Nelson ran 44 yards for a touchdown on a fourth-and-two situation. The point-after-touchdown kick failed.

Later in the first quarter, Nelson capped a 55-yard, 13-play drive that consumed more than seven minutes with a three-yard scoring plunge off left tackle. Augustana quarterback Kirk Bednar's two-point conversion run extended the Vikings' lead to 14-0.

Central, 11-1, struck back with field goals of 33 and 42 yards by Matt Schulte to cut the half-time lead to 14-6. But Nelson went two yards on a fourth-and-goal play early in the fourth quarter, and Augustana's defense, which held Central to 111 yards and seven first downs, took over until Central added a touchdown late in the game on a 37-yard pass from Pat Dale to Schulte.

Augustana coach Bob Reade, who has led the Vikings to 24 consecutive victories, attributed this victory to his team's ability to run the ball in short-yardage situations and the team's winning attitude.

"We're an excellent short-yardage team," Reade said.

"Their attitude and team work and

Field goals give Troy State Division II title

Ted Clem kicked a 50-yard field goal as time ran out in the NCAA Division II Football Championship to lift Troy State to an 18-17 victory over defending champion North Dakota State.

Troy State overcame deficits of 14-0 and 17-15 to win its first title December 8. Clem booted three field goals in the game, including ones of 32 and 24 yards during a 15-point Troy State rally, and quarterback Carey Christensen played a supporting role in the comeback victory.

Christensen came off the bench to complete two key passes in a final-minute drive to set up Clem's game-winning kick. Christensen sat out much of the season with an injury, but his performance in the Palm Bowl in McAllen, Texas, before 4,500 fans looked like that of a seasoned veteran.

Christensen completed 11 of 20 passes for 167 yards and rushed 14 times for 60 yards in his final collegiate game.

"I thought Carey did a great job for us," Troy State coach Thomas

Seattle Pacific's Dennis Gunnell (13) directs the ball out of a crowd.

Gailey said. "The first person to congratulate him was (freshman starting quarterback) Mike Turk. It's that kind of attitude that carried this team this far."

North Dakota State, attempting to become the first team to win consecutive titles in the 12-year history of the championship, took a 14-0 lead on its first two drives of the game, with running back James Molstre scoring on a six-yard run and quarterback Jeff Bentrin on a one-yard dive.

Christensen replaced Turk in the second quarter and scored Troy State's only touchdown on a four-yard run that trimmed North Dakota State's lead by half time to seven.

Clem's first two field goals, sandwiched around a safety, gave Troy State a 15-14 lead early in the fourth quarter that stood until North Dakota State's Ken Kubisz kicked a 19-yard field goal with 1:36 left for a 17-15 lead.

Christensen then took charge, hitting on a 20-yard pass to Lee

Hollingsworth and a 13-yard pass to Greg Walls before Clem's winning kick.

"We practice kicking field goals with no time left and it paid off tonight," Gailey said. "I'm proud of the way the team hung in there under adversity. We turned the ball over two times in the first half, got down 14-0 and looked bad doing it. But they did a great job of keeping up their intensity. They fought their guts out to the very end."

North Dakota State blew a chance for victory after quarterback Dale Hammerschmidt, replacing the injured Bentrin, led the Bison to Troy State's one-yard line but had to settle for Kubisz's 19-yard field goal.

"Give all the credit to Troy State," North Dakota State coach Don Morton said. "They came back from a 14-0 deficit and showed a lot of character. They deserved to be national champions."

North Dakota State, making its sixth play-off appearance, defeated California-Davis and Nebraska-Omaha to reach the championship and finish 11-2.

Troy State's debut in the play-offs included victories over Central Ohio and Towson State to bring its record to 12-1.

Vikings live up to top billing in Division II volleyball

Portland State proved it was worthy of its No. 1 ranking by defeating defending champion Cal State Northridge, 15-7, 15-8, 15-11, at the NCAA Division II Women's Volleyball Championship December 8 in Portland, Oregon.

The Vikings, who compiled a 33-4 record without a loss to a Division II opponent, needed just one hour and 20 minutes to win the title under first-year coach Jeff Mozzochi.

"The fact that we were playing so aggressively may have taken them back a bit," Mozzochi said. "We played with so much determination that a lot of things Northridge tried didn't work."

Fired up by a home-court crowd of 2,500, Portland State broke a 3-3 tie in the first game with eight consecutive points and was not threatened again until it faced an 8-4 deficit in the third game.

The Vikings battled back to within one point and after Northridge scored a point, Portland state scored four points in a row to lead 11-9. After trading four points, Theresa Huitinga and Beanie MacLaurie teamed for a double block that put Portland State one point away from the title. Cal State Northridge lost the match and championship with a double-hit violation on the final point.

Cal State Northridge, which finished the season with a 39-9 record, was paced by Kristy Olson, who had 16 kills. Olson was named to the all-tournament team along with teammate Shelli Mosby.

Portland State was led by Huitinga and three-time all-America Lynda Johnson with 13 and 11 kills, respectively. MacLaurie, Terri Jo Kelly and Lisa Couch added seven kills each.

Couch, Huitinga, Johnson and MacLaurie also were named to the all-tournament team.

Cal State Sacramento rebounded from its semifinal loss to Cal State Northridge with a third-place victory over Sam Houston State, 15-6, 16-14, 15-8.

Portland State's first NCAA title was preceded by a third-place finish in 1982 and a second-place finish last year. Mozzochi, a former assistant at California, guided the Vikings to 31 victories in their last 33 matches with an assist from his wife and assistant coach, Marty Kennedy Mozzochi.

In conjunction with the championship, the 1984 Collegiate Volleyball Coaches Association Division II all-

America team was named. First-team members are Clara Piersma, Cal Poly-Pomona; Terri Nicholas, Cal State Sacramento; Heather Hafner and Mosby, Cal State Northridge, and Couch and Johnson, Portland State.

The second team consisted of Geraldine Mattaur, New Haven; Barbara Schumacher, Cal State Sacramento; Sharon Sanders, Ferris State; Dana Cozine, Florida Southern; Olson, Cal State Northridge, and Huitinga, Portland State.

UC San Diego picks up second Division III volleyball crown

UC San Diego played in the fourth annual NCAA Division III Women's Volleyball Championship as if it had a plane to catch. The Tritons' 15-7, 15-12, 15-9, victory over MIT in the championship match capped two other

3-0 shutouts in UC San Diego's charge to its second title.

UC San Diego, 23-12, became the first team to win two championships; the Tritons placed second in their other two tournament appearances.

The Tritons' balanced offensive attack dominated MIT throughout the championship match. UC San Diego compiled a .272 hitting percentage with Karin Kalk leading the way with 12 kills and .500 percentage. Molly Wheatley added 10 kills in 23 attempts and finished with a .347 hitting percentage.

Wheatley and Kalk were named to the all-tournament team along with teammates Christy Wada and Carol Lipson. Other members included MIT's Lori Cantu and La Verne's Laura Argonza.

Argonza and her teammates presented the toughest challenge to UC San Diego in the semifinals before falling 15-11, 9-15, 15-10, 15-12. MIT (36-5) defeated Calvin 15-13, 15-10, 13-15, 15-10 to advance to the championship.

In the third-place match, La Verne's Shauna Hinrichs exploded for 14 kills to lead the Leopards to a 15-8, 15-5, 15-6 victory over Calvin.

Tropical paradise

The conservatory, with more than 8,000 plants, is one of the highlights of a $50 million expansion at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville. The structure is crowned by a one-acre skylight that connects two six-story wings of guest rooms. Included in the 110-foot-high room are 212 species of plants, including towering palm and banana trees.

In addition to Opryland, Nashville offers many activities

Although the Opryland Hotel, site of the 1985 NCAA Convention, is situated on the grounds of Nashville's most popular tourist facility, the state capitol of Tennessee offers Convention delegates many other activities with which to occupy their spare time.

In addition to the Opryland Hotel, the Grand Ole Opry and other activities at Opryland USA listed in the December 3 issue of The NCAA News, here are some other points of interest in Nashville:

Ryman Auditorium—116 Fifth Avenue North, 254-1445. Home of the Grand Ole Opry from 1943 to March 1974. Admission: $1. Guided tours: 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Delegates have short ride from airport to Opryland

Delegates arriving at the 1985 Convention in Nashville by plane have only a seven-mile ride by car to the Opryland Hotel, site of the 79th annual Convention January 14-16.

The Opryland Hotel, located on the 406-acre Opryland USA site, is located between the Cumberland River and Briley Parkway and surrounded by wooded, rolling hills.

Delegates should exit the Nashville Metropolitan Airport north on Briley Parkway. After the seven-mile ride by car to the Opryland area, delegates should take the McGavock Pike West/Music Valley Drive exit (exit No. 17).

Two other hotels to be used

Once the Opryland Hotel is full, delegates to the 1985 NCAA Convention will be housed at the Holiday Inn Briley Parkway or the Marriott Hotel.

Both hotels, like the Opryland, are a few minutes from the Nashville Metropolitan Airport. The Holiday Inn and Marriott each have about 400 rooms and are located just north of the airport at Briley Parkway and Elm Hill Pike.

The College Athletic Business Managers Association will be meeting January 13-16 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in downtown Nashville. The Hyatt is located at 7th and Union Streets.

Other organizations that will be meeting at the Opryland Hotel in conjunction with the NCAA Convention are the American Football Coaches Association (January 7-12), American Baseball Coaches Association (January 3-6), National Association of Academic Advisors for Athletics (January 11-13), and the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

Legislative Assistance

1984 Column No. 32

College or high school broadcasts

As set forth under Bylaw 1-4-(c) and Case No. 199 (page 300, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), a member institution shall not permit a prospective student-athlete or a high school, college preparatory school or junior college coach to appear on a radio or television program: (1) conducted by the member institution's coach; (2) in which the NCAA institution's coach is participating, or (3) for which a member of the athletics staff of the NCAA institution has been instrumental in arranging the appearance of the prospect or coach or related program material. This prohibition applies to appearances in person or via film or videotape. Accordingly, a prospective student-athlete may not be interviewed or otherwise featured in any type of broadcast or telecast involving a member institution.

This legislation also would prohibit a member of the athletics staff of an NCAA member institution from serving as an announcer or commentator for a high school, college preparatory school or junior college contest or from appearing, either in person or via film or audio or videotape, on a radio or television broadcast of such contests.

Division membership criteria—scheduling requirements for women's basketball

Member institutions should note that the governance plan adopted at the 1981 NCAA Convention provided that Bylaws 11-1-(c), 11-2-(e) and 11-3-(c) regarding basketball scheduling requirements for Divisions I, II and III member institutions, respectively, would not be applied to women's basketball programs until such time as the appropriate division specifically adopts such criteria. Accordingly, inasmuch as none of the divisions has proposed such criteria for women's basketball, the scheduling criteria will continue to apply only to men's basketball.

For example, an institution that desires to be a member of Division I may allow its women's basketball team to play more than four basketball games against institutions that are not members of Division I without adversely affecting its classification status. Likewise, Divisions II and III member institutions are not required to play a minimum percentage of their women's basketball games against other division members.

Further, it should be noted that Bylaw 11 relates only to division membership criteria and does not address selection criteria for NCAA women's basketball championships.

Exchange student eligibility

As a result of numerous inquiries related to the eligibility of "exchange students," the following summary is provided to assist member institutions in evaluating a student's eligibility status. Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(4) provides for an exception to the normal transfer residence requirement for a student enrolled in the certifying institution for a specified period of time as a bona fide exchange student participating in a formal educational exchange program that is an established requirement of the student-athlete's curriculum. Institutions that request Eligibility Committee approval of the exchange program must include documentation that the transfer is a curriculum requirement.

Students participating in voluntary exchange programs (e.g., National Student Exchange, semester abroad, cooperative exchanges between individual institutions) do not qualify for a waiver of the residence requirement under Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(4). Such a student may qualify to be eligible immediately at the certifying institution under Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(14) or, if he or she is enrolling in a Division III institution, Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(12) or (13). The student then could reestablish eligibility upon return to the student's original institution after participation in a cooperative educational exchange program under Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(1), provided the student is to receive a baccalaureate degree from the institution from which the student transferred to participate in the exchange program.

Foreign-exchange students may establish their eligibility under the legislation cited above, as well as Bylaws 5-1-(m)-(6) and 5-1-(k)-(5) and Case No. 299 (page 328, 1984-85 NCAA Manual). This legislation provides a waiver of the normal transfer residence requirement for a student who is sent by the government of the student's nation or is sponsored by the U.S. Department of State, Rotary International, the Ford Foundation, the Institute of International Education or similar organizations.

Revised Case No. 182—posters

After the October 29, 1984, publication of the Council's clarification of Case No. 182 and information concerning the case provided in the November 19, 1984, Legislative Assistance column, numerous institutions have contacted the national office regarding publications that unfold into posters or are posters with informational material on the reverse side. In this regard, no poster (regardless of informational content) or other printed materials that unfold into a poster may be provided to prospective student-athletes under Case No. 182. Also excluded would be pull-out posters or centerfolds from press guides or recruiting brochures. Press guides or recruiting brochures provided to prospects should be of conventional size.

Totten, Rice head Division I-AA coaches' all-America

The leaders of Mississippi Valley State's record-setting offense—quarterback Willie Totten and wide receiver Jerry Rice—were named to the 1984 Kodak Division I-AA all-America football team as selected by the American Football Coaches Association.

Mississippi Valley's offense set seven all-time NCAA collegiate records (all divisions), and the school earned a berth in the Division I-AA play-offs. The Delta Devils became the first team in modern football history to average 60 points a game.

Boston University running back Paul Lewis, who finished fourth in the division with a 116.5 average, was selected for the second consecutive year. Lewis set a division career scoring record with 308 points.

Also in the backfield is Delaware State's Gene Lake, the division's No. 1 rusher, with a record 172.2 yards-per-game average.

Montana State, which rebounded from a 1-10 season to capture the Big Sky Conference title and a berth in the play-offs, also had two selections—linebacker Mark Fellows and punter Dirk Nelson.

The Big Sky had four all-America selections, followed by the Southwestern, Southern and Southland Conferences with three each.

Kodak all-America teams below Division I-AA as chosen by the AFCA also were announced. The College Division I team is selected from NCAA Division II and National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Division I schools; the College Division II team is selected from NCAA Division III and NAIA Division II schools.

Following are the three 1984 Kodak all-America football teams.

DIVISION I-AA

Offense

Tight end—Brian Forster, Rhode Island; Wide receivers—Jerry Rice, Mississippi Valley State; Jerry Wright, Eastern Illinois; Linemen—Bruce Collie, Texas-Arlington; Roger Caron,

Pitt's Fralic, Texas' Gray repeat on Associated Press all-America

The 1984 Associated Press all-America football team has two repeat members—Pittsburgh offensive tackle Bill Fralic and Texas defensive back Jerry Gray—plus Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie of Boston College.

This year's 24-member first team, which consists of 16 seniors, seven juniors and sophomore defensive back David Fulcher of Arizona State, also features Ohio State running back Keith Byars, the nation's leading rusher, and Illinois wide receiver David Williams, whose 101 receptions for 1,278 yards set Big Ten Conference records.

Fralic, one of four finalists for the Lombardi Trophy, recently had his No. 79 jersey retired and was named to the all-America team for the third year in a row. Texas' Gray was selected last year as a junior.

Flutie, the first quarterback in 13 years to win the Heisman Trophy, passed for 10,579 career yards and also set an NCAA career total-offense mark of 11,317 yards. For the year, Flutie completed 233 of 386 passes for 3,454 yards and 27 touchdowns and led the nation in passing efficiency.

The rest of the offense consists of tight end Mark Bavaro, Notre Dame; wide receiver Eddie Brown, Miami (Florida); tackle Lomas Brown, Florida; guards Dan Lynch, Washington State, and Del Wilkes, South Carolina; center Mark Traynowicz, Nebraska; running back Kenneth Davis, Texas Christian, and kicker John Lee, UCLA.

On the defensive unit, Gray tied a Texas record by intercepting seven passes this season, while Boston College's Tony Thurman led the nation with 12 interceptions.

The rest of the defense consists of tackles Leslie O'Neal, Oklahoma State, and Bruce Smith, Virginia Tech; middle guard Tony Casillas, Oklahoma; linebackers Gregg Carr, Auburn; Jack Del Rio, Southern California; James Seawright, South Carolina, and Larry Station, Iowa; defensive back Kyle Morrell, Brigham Young, and punter Ricky Anderson, Vanderbilt.

The Pacific-10 and Big Eight Conferences each had four representatives named to the all-America team. Boston College and South Carolina had two selections each.

Juniors named to the team were Williams, Byars, Davis, Lee, O'Neal, Casillas and Station.

The all-America team, which is selected by a panel of the wire service's sportswriters, will be featured on Bob Hope's Christmas Show at 9 p.m. EST December 16 on NBC-TV.

SEC with seven dominates wire service all-America

Seven players from the Southeastern Conference, led by Georgia with two selections, headline the 1984 United Press International all-America football team.

Georgia kicker Kevin Butler, whose 77 career field goals set an SEC record, and defensive back Jeff Sanchez were the Bulldogs' selections.

Other SEC selections include Louisiana State offensive tackle Lance Smith, Tennessee offensive guard Bill Mayo, Mississippi defensive end Fred Nunn, Auburn linebacker Gregg Carr and Vanderbilt punter Ricky Anderson.

Boston College, Texas and Ohio State also had two players named.

Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie and defensive back Tony Thurman, who led the nation in interceptions with 12, represented Boston College.

The heart of Texas' defense—tackle Tony Degrate and back Jerry Gray head the defensive team, and Ohio State guard Bill Lachey and running back Keith Byars, the nation's top rusher, lead the offensive unit.

Newsworthy

High school sports to be featured

High School Sports, a four-color magazine devoted to the efforts and achievements of four million boys and girls in 18,000 U.S. high schools, is scheduled to begin production next May.

Distribution of the magazine, to be published by Pindar Press, New York, will be coordinated by the National Federation of State High School Associations through member state associations, with assistance from school administrators, athletics directors and coaches.

"Interscholastic competition is the grass roots of athletics in America," said Brice Durbin, executive director of the national federation. "It is the forum in which most of our teenagers are exposed for the first time to professional coaching and to the unifying spirit of sportsmanship that develops poise, confidence, teamwork and self-satisfaction in accomplishing goals."

"The purpose of our new magazine is to not only provide broader recognition for the boys and girls already participating in high school sports, but, more importantly, to demonstrate to those students who are not involved how much pleasure, excitement and growth opportunity there is in the other half of education."

The magazine will be published five times a year.

Villanova scrimmage draws 13,200

A sellout crowd of 13,200 fans watched the homecoming game at Villanova University this year. Nothing unusual, except that Villanova will not return to intercollegiate football until the 1985 season.

Alumni, who paid $10 each, and students ($2 each) watched a scrimmage at the homecoming festivities. The university dropped the sport in 1981 because of rising costs; however, alumni and students wanted the sport back, and the administration agreed.

The Wildcat Club, an alumni organization, presented a $100,000 check to the Rev. John M. Driscoll, the university's president, at half time. The club has pledged to make a similar donation to the football program each year.

Andy Talley, former head coach at St. Lawrence, was hired to run the renewed program, and he staged six weeks of fall practice that concluded with the homecoming scrimmage.

CCIW may be nearing dissolution

If the women's programs at Millikin University, Illinois Wesleyan University and Augustana College (Illinois) cannot agree on a conference soon, the end may be at hand for the College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin.

Three years ago, six of the CCIW's nine schools entered women's teams in the Chicago Metro Conference. The remaining three teams—Millikin, Illinois Wesleyan and Augustana—were left with no conference affiliation for their women's teams.

The CCIW's faculty representatives, athletics directors and presidents have been discussing a variety of options, including a CCIW for women, the disbanding of the men's CCIW to begin a men's Chicago Metro Conference, and the beginning of an entirely new men's and women's conference for Millikin, Illinois Wesleyan and Augustana.

A decision is not expected until February 6, when the CCIW presidents will discuss the matter.

Other members of the CCIW are Carroll College, Carthage College, Elmhurst College, North Central College, North Park College and Wheaton College (Illinois).

Buckeyes act to meet rising costs

Ohio State University's athletics department, despite sellouts of almost 90,000 fans for football games, is moving into the mail-order business to meet rising department costs.

Slick mail-order advertising for trademarked Ohio State athletics souvenirs, novelties and wearing apparel will be included in 1985 football-ticket mailings.

"Football and basketball receipts cannot continue to support our 30-varsity-sports program," Al Bohl, assistant athletics director, said. "We have to look into new areas for revenue, not only for our operating budget but for capital improvements."

Ohio State's annual athletics department budget is $12.87 million.

Richard M. Bay, athletics director, said, "We were approaching the point that the cost of our programs was going to outstrip receipts from ticket sales and television. Our stadium crowds for football have peaked, and attendance in the arena for men's basketball is 85 to 90 percent of capacity. And the television picture is cloudy at best. Raise ticket prices? They're already too high."

Butts' request for injunction denied

A Federal judge has denied a request by Albert "Truck" Butts, a center on La Salle University's basketball team, for a preliminary injunction against an NCAA eligibility rule that has kept him from playing this season.

Butts played basketball for a military academy in 1980 after his 20th birthday, leaving him only three years of playing time at La Salle.

Wildcats forfeit hockey victories

A long season turned longer for the University of New Hampshire men's ice hockey team when the team was forced to forfeit three of its four victories.

Junior Kirk Lussier registered for only eight credits this semester, four less than required, and played in six games before the violation was confirmed. Hockey East Commissioner Louis A. Lamoriello approved New Hampshire's request to forfeit victories over Western Michigan, Maine and Michigan after Andrew T. Mooradian, director of athletics at New Hampshire, informed him of the violation.

Lussier had scored one goal and three assists in the six games. Last year, he played in 36 games and had nine goals and five assists.

The forfeits dropped New Hampshire's record to 0-13 in Hockey East play, 1-15 overall. The Wildcats earned an Eastern College Athletic Conference play-off berth last season with a 20-17-1 record and perennially are among the East's best teams.

subdivision in the final report prepared by the research organization.

All responses will be completely confidential, and all information from the survey will be reported to the Commission in aggregate form, with no identification of individual respondents.

"Each questionnaire will be numbered, with that number keyed to a master institution list to facilitate tabulation by division or subdivision, as well as reminders to those not responding," according to Steven M. Jung, principal research scientist and director of the Institute for Analysis of Educational Policy at AIR. "This list will be destroyed at the completion of the survey."

All chief executives are being urged to complete the questionnaire and return it to AIR's Palo Alto, California, office as quickly as possible, and preferably not later than the second week in January.

Ryan termed the survey and special Convention "a concerted effort to enhance the integrity of intercollegiate athletics. The Commission believes this effort can help to reverse a worsening and unacceptable condition in athletics—one that threatens to damage, perhaps permanently, a system that is a valuable part of higher education."

He said the Commission looks forward to joining its presidential colleagues "in a successful effort to establish wise policies that can preserve the benefits of athletics competition within the framework of higher education."

AA football programs that sponsor varsity, junior varsity and freshman teams.

The Council and Division I-A midyear legislative meeting are sponsoring Proposal No. 73, which would permit a volunteer coach in the sports of football and basketball to receive specified expenses related to coaching duties in that sport.

The final personnel-limitations proposal, No. 74, would permit strength and conditioning coaches to be exempt from counting against the Division I coaching limitations in football and basketball. Sponsored by nine Division I institutions, this proposal would allow strength and conditioning coaches to conduct stretching, conditioning and warm-up drills prior to games as well as prior to and during practices.

General

After the drug-testing and post-season-football proposals, probably the most significant amendment in the general section is No. 77, which could require sponsors of proposed legislation to provide a statement of estimated costs to the Association if the legislation, once enacted, would result in significant expenditures by the Association.

This proposal, sponsored by the Council, would adjust the language of Bylaw 8 to conform with court decisions regarding the NCAA's involvement in college football television.

The proposal would add the three television principles approved by the Division I membership in July and upheld by the courts—protection of Friday nights for high schools, agreement of both institutions for a game to be televised and NCAA assessment of four percent on fees paid to institutions for appearances on national telecasts.

Proposal Nos. 79 and 82, sponsored by the Council and supported by the Postseason Football Committee and Extra Events Committee, respectively, are the remaining extra-event related proposals.

No. 79 would permit the Postseason Football Committee to impose a fine on the management of a certified postseason football bowl game that does not comply with the provisions of Bylaw 2. Fines would be subject to approval of the Council.

No. 82 would preclude the use of institutional facilities by noncertified all-star football or basketball contests.

Proposal Nos. 80 and 81, both sponsored by the Council, deal with summer basketball leagues. No. 80 would affirm that individuals employed by collegiate institutions are not permitted to serve on the staffs of NCAA-approved summer basketball leagues or the teams in those leagues and are not permitted to participate in approved leagues.

No. 81 would not allow a summer basketball league to receive approval if it generated revenue from activities such as raffles, parking, or over-the-air or cable television or radio rights fees for any game.

The final proposal in the general grouping is No. 83, which would clarify the Council's procedures in considering appeals from actions taken by the Committee on Infractions.

Editor's Note: This is the fifth in a series of articles covering legislation to be considered at the 79th annual Convention.

ing the next several months and special mailings that will begin next week.

State Mutual Life Assurance Company of America will underwrite the policy. State Mutual, based in Worcester, Massachusetts, is one of the nation's top 20 mutual life insurance companies, with assets of approximately $3 billion. The program will be administered by American Sports Underwriters, Incorporated, of Woburn, Massachusetts, a company that specializes in sports insurance coverage.

The agreement was reached nearly a year after the Insurance Committee came close to implementing a plan with a different administrator and insurance company. The primary insurer pulled out, however, and approval could not be obtained from appropriate state insurance departments.

"We must remember that this policy had to be created," Taff said. "When the impetus for catastrophic protection came from the membership, there was no vehicle in place to provide that protection."

That challenge, of creating a new program, was one reason for State Mutual's interest.

"This kind of insurance had never been done before and justified special attention," said Benjamin R. Schenck, senior vice-president of group operations at State Mutual. "We also think it is a useful program because of its social implications. If State Mutual is going to be involved in a program, we would rather participate in a useful program."

"We wanted to be involved in amateur athletics," added James D. Price, director of group special projects. "This is an extension of existing programs we have with ASU, and we think it is a good starting point."

State Mutual is involved in an unusual situation, Schenck acknowledged, because there is no way to predict how many institutions will participate or how many claims might occur.

"Widespread participation is the key," he said. "After the first few years, we hope the program will succeed and the risk will become less."

The involvement of State Mutual, especially senior staff members like Schenck, was vital in the plan's development, according to Peter T. Eshelman, president of American Sports Underwriters.

"It is highly unusual and significant that a major insurer would step forward and take a risk on a new product," Eshelman said. "State Mutual's stability makes this program possible."

ASU has been active in sports-related insurance for several years, mostly on the professional level. A separate division was created 1½ years ago to specialize in developing sports insurance programs for colleges and universities.

Plans are being made by ASU to supplement the News stories and special mailings with personal contact between now and next spring. Presentations at conference meetings and other related events are among the activities on ASU's calendar.

Persons with questions about the lifetime catastrophic insurance program should contact American Sports Underwriters at 1-800/621-2116 or Richard D. Hunter, director of finance, at the NCAA national office.

Virginia Tech's Smith gets Outland Trophy

Virginia Tech defensive tackle Bruce Smith and Texas defensive tackle Tony Degrade have been honored as the top linemen in collegiate football in 1984.

Smith received the Outland Trophy, and Degrade was the recipient of the Lombardi Award.

Smith, the first defensive tackle to be selected since 1977, was honored by the Football Writers Association of America.

This season, Smith, a 6-3, 275-pounder, had 71 tackles behind the line of scrimmage for a loss of 504 yards. Smith also had 16 quarterback sacks, giving him 46 for his career.

Known as "the sack man," Smith led Virginia Tech to the best rushing defense this season with a 71.5 yards-per-game average.

Smith also was selected to the FWAA's all-America team. Smith's final collegiate game will be against Air Force December 15 in the Independence Bowl.

Degrade was selected by a panel of 217 college football coaches, sports-writers and sportscasters representing a geographical cross section of the country. The award has been presented annually since 1970 and is sponsored by the Rotary Club of Houston.

Degrade, a 6-4, 280-pound senior, led Texas to a 7-3-1 record and a Freedom Bowl bid by making 147 tackles, 123 of which were unassisted.

TV in the News

Suit against NBC is dismissed

A Federal judge has dismissed a $75.4 million lawsuit brought by Mizlou Television Network, Inc., against NBC, charging the network violated antitrust laws in obtaining television rights to the Citrus Bowl.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green said the suit proves only that the independent network, not the market, had been wronged in the securing of rights to the December 22 game between Florida State and Georgia.

Musburger signs five-year pact

Brent Musburger has signed a five-year contract, starting at more than $1.2 million a year at CBS, making him the highest paid sports broadcaster in history. Musburger will continue as NFL Today anchor in addition to becoming chief broadcaster for college basketball games. He will do some professional basketball broadcasts, work on the Masters golf telecast and continue his role on CBS Radio's baseball broadcasts.

Major networks' ratings declined

The quarterly television rating sweeps completed in November show a drop in the combined ratings for ABC, NBC and CBS, indicating solid competition from cable TV, independent stations and entertainment alternatives such as videocassette recorders, The Wall Street Journal reported.

The rating during a 28-night period dropped eight percent from a year ago. An adjustment in the ratings for an increase of 1.1 million homes with televisions since last November did not offset a six percent decline in the number of households watching one of the three networks during the four-week period.

CBS earned the highest ratings, but NBC was the only one to improve its ratings from the 1983 period.

Fiesta Bowl tickets turned back

The Fiesta Bowl may not be televised to the Phoenix area if 15,000 unused tickets are not sold 48 hours prior to the game between Miami (Florida) and UCLA.

The participating institutions each returned about 7,500 tickets from their total allotment of 22,000. The 14th annual postseason game will be played in Tempe, a Phoenix suburb, and telecast by NBC but not within a 90-mile radius of Phoenix if the game is not sold out.

Football TV meeting postponed

A meeting between television network executives and producers and officials of 83 universities to discuss bringing big-time college football schools under one national television plan has been postponed.

Scheduled for December 13-14 in Dallas, the meeting was delayed because of conflicting schedules.

Joseph L. Kearney, commissioner of the Western Athletic Conference and chair of a national ad hoc football television committee, told the Associated Press that most conferences have scheduled annual meetings in mid-December and more time was needed to "thoroughly digest what has been circulated to them."

Four networks to cover ACC

NBC, CBS, Raycom Sports and Jefferson-Pilot Teleproductions will combine to carry 45 regular-season games and all three rounds of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

Raycom and Jefferson-Pilot will telecast 32 regular-season games and seven tournament contests. NBC will telecast nine games, and CBS four. The conference package and tournament also will be televised on ESPN.

Network football ratings compared

CBS broadcasts of Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conference football games posted a 5.7 rating as compared to ABC's telecasts of College Football Association contests, which drew an 8.4.

ESPN pulled in a 4.4 average rating for Saturday night games, which was its best rating ever, topping the 3.3 by the USFL in 1983, according to Sports Industry News.

SPN plans basketball telecasts

The Satellite Programming Network (SPN) will telecast basketball games involving 12 Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) Metro and South members as well as the ECAC Metro tournament semifinals and championship games.

Included in the schedule is Holy Cross at Loyola (Maryland), the first game to be played in Loyola's new Emil G. Reitz Jr. Arena.

Big Ten seeking payment in full

The Big Ten Conference is trying to recover $2.9 million from a Tennessee television syndicator under a football TV contract.

Wayne Duke, Big Ten commissioner, said conference attorneys are negotiating with Sports View in Nashville to recover the balance of revenue still owed.

Advertising Age reported that "at least $500,000" in advertising revenues had been paid to Sports View for Big Ten football, but the agreement between the network and conference called for the money to be turned over directly to the Big Ten. Advertisers were identified as Stroh Brewery, GM Parts, Noxema and The Sporting News.

In another situation, the new Gulf Star Conference is owed $30,000 by Baton Rouge-based College Sports Network for not televising three football games as required by the contract. Gulf Star, with three teams each in Louisiana and Texas, had scheduled one game each Thursday night during the football season to accommodate CSN and then switched the games back to Saturdays after the season had started.

CSN subsequently went out of business, according to Steve Roe, spokesman for Northwestern State (Louisiana), a conference member.

Also, it has been announced that Jefferson-Pilot Teleproductions may not renew a contract to televise Atlantic Coast Conference football games next season after losing an undisclosed amount of money.

Executive Producer John Shreves said the economics of the situation will be reviewed.

National Football Foundation recognizes scholar-athletes

The National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame awarded 11 scholar-athletes $3,000 fellowships and honored its Gold Medal and Distinguished American award winners December 4 at its 27th annual awards dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City. Thirteen new members—11 former players and two coaches—were inducted into the foundation's hall of fame.

The NFFHF has awarded fellowships to senior scholar-athletes since 1959. In June, the foundation sends nomination forms to directors of athletics, who nominate seniors for the fellowships. The foundation then selects the 11 scholar-athletes who will receive the money if they pursue an advanced degree.

Winners this year are Brian Bergstrom, Harvard defensive back, 13.650 grade-point average (on a 15.000 scale) in economics; Duane Bickett, Southern California linebacker, 3.670 grade-point average (on a 4.000 scale) in accounting; Gregg Carr, Auburn linebacker, 3.320 in civil engineering; David Crecelius, Ohio State defensive tackle, 3.420 in engineering; Daniel Eernisse, Washington center/guard, 3.700 in business administration; Doug Flutie, Boston College quarterback, 3.100 in speech communication and computer science; Monte Goen, Southern Methodist linebacker, 3.710 in premed; Carmen Masciantonio, Penn State linebacker, 3.540 in chemical engineering; Gary Rolle, Florida wide receiver, 3.680 in premed; Scott Strasburger, Nebraska defensive end, 3.820 in premed, and David Twillie, Virginia Military offensive guard, 3.540 in biology.

Goen, Rolle, Strasburger and Twillie also qualify for an additional grant from the foundation's medical economics fellowships.

John McGillicuddy, chairman of Manufacturers Hanover Bank and Trust Company, was awarded the foundation's Gold Medal award, which previously has been presented to six U.S. presidents—Dwight D. Eisenhower, Herbert Hoover, John F. Kennedy, Richard M. Nixon, Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan.

David M. Nelson, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Football Rules Committee since 1962, was awarded the foundation's Distinguished American award, which has been given in the past to Bob Hope, Vince Lombardi, Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh and Jerome Holland, among others.

Players inducted into the hall of fame were Lance Alworth, Arkansas; Bob Griese, Purdue; Joe Greene, North Texas State; Doug Kenna, Army; Joe Romig, Colorado; Sam Chapman, California; Warren Ameling, Ohio State; Bobby Reynolds, Nebraska, and Chuck Taylor, Stanford.

Former Michigan State coach Duffy Daugherty and the late Jim Tatum, who coached at Oklahoma, Maryland and North Carolina, also were inducted.

In addition, four deceased players—Emil Sitko, Notre Dame; Jackie Jensen, California; Johnny Bright, Drake, and Monsignor George Kerr, Boston College—were saluted. The players formally were inducted on their respective college campuses this past season.

JOE MORRISON, who coached South Carolina to a 10-1 record this season, named Walter Camp Foundation 1984 coach of the year. Morrison's 1983 team was 5-6, his first year as head coach. He will be honored February 2 at Yale.

DEATHS

DEL WILLIAMS, a star offensive guard at Florida State and with the New Orleans Saints, died November 28 of the illness known as Lou Gehrig's disease. He was 39. Williams was a third-round draft choice of the Saints in their first National Football League draft in 1967, becoming a starter in his rookie year. Released in 1973, he played a year in the now-defunct World Football League, later becoming a part-time scout with the Saints. He worked as a color analyst for the USFL New Orleans Breakers this season but left the job because of the illness—amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

Players warned about standing in bench area

Men's basketball players and coaches at NCAA member institutions should be reminded that players cannot stand in the bench area while a game is being played (i.e., with the clock running).

"Players may not stand or remain standing either on offense or defense while the game is being played," said Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor for the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee. "They may not wave towels or resort to any unsportsmanlike conduct at any time while standing or seated. A player may spontaneously react to an outstanding play by a team member and thereupon immediately return to his seat."

Steitz pointed out that game officials are responsible for enforcing this rule, which is similar in context to the coaching box instituted for the 1984-85 season. Questions may be directed to Steitz at Springfield College.

Postseason bowl pairings listed

Toledo and Nevada-Las Vegas and Virginia Tech and Air Force kick off the 1984-85 bowl season December 15 in the California and Independence Bowls, respectively, two of 18 postseason bowl games certified by the NCAA.

Following is the complete 1984-85 bowl schedule with Eastern Standard Time kick-offs:

California: Toledo (8-1-1) vs. Nevada-Las Vegas (10-2), 4 p.m., December 15, Fresno, California.

Independence: Virginia Tech (8-3) vs. Air Force (7-4), 8 p.m., December 15, Shreveport, Louisiana.

Holiday: Brigham Young (12-0) vs. Michigan (6-5), 9 p.m., December 21, San Diego, California.

Florida Citrus: Georgia (7-4) vs. Florida State (7-3-1), 1 p.m., December 22, Orlando, Florida.

After leaving the service, he signed with the Steelers, completing his undergraduate degree in the off-season and earning a master's degree in education from Temple. He was a 1976 inductee into the Duquesne Hall of Fame.

ANDREW G. "ANDY" McWILLIAMS, an administrative assistant at USA Wrestling's national office the past 18 months, died of a massive heart attack November 9 at his home in Richmond, Virginia. He was 42. He had served as chief of delegation for a team of U.S. wrestlers competing in the Pan American Youth Championships at Buenos Aires, Argentina, in October. Prior to the trip, he had received a special award from USA Wrestling for his service to the sport and to the organization as a volunteer worker. As administrative assistant, McWilliams served as field leader for national and international tournaments and had developed the structure for international cultural exchange programs. He also was a category-I candidate as a referee-judge in freestyle and Greco-Roman. He had been in failing health since his return from the trip to Argentina.

CORRECTIONS

Due to incorrect information provided The NCAA News, it was reported in the November 12 issue of The NCAA News that Rick Dellagatta, new head wrestling coach at Hunter, won three NCAA championships.

Dellagatta was fourth in 1979, third in 1980 and third in 1981 and was not a member of the 1980 and 1984 Olympic teams as was previously reported.

In the story on the Division I Women's Cross

Country Championships in the November 26 issue of The NCAA News, North Carolina State was referred to as the defending champion. Oregon, in fact, won the 1983 championships and was the defending champion.

The final Division I-A individual punt return and kickoff return statistics in the December 3 issue of The NCAA News were incorrect. Here are the correct statistics:

Briefly in the News

Ed Martin, men's basketball coach at Tennessee State University, says he is looking forward to his next 100 victories after the Tigers gave him victory No. 500 last month. He is the sixth active coach in Division I to have 500 victories. "I'm healthy, not wealthy and not always wise. I'll let nature take its course. I think I'm a better coach now than I ever was," Martin said... Basketball fans at Syracuse University will see floor action by means of a 16-by-20-foot screen at one end of the Carrier Dome during two home games in January. The use of the screen for instant replays will be tried as an experiment to help fans in the 6,000 seats designated as "long-range view." The screen will be used during Big East Conference games with the University of Connecticut and Georgetown University January 19 and 28, respectively.

Steve Guback, former sportswriter for The Washington Star, has joined the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports as director of information. He is a 1950 graduate of Indiana University, Bloomington... Joe Restic of Harvard University and Jim Walden of Washington State University have been named head coaches for the 60th Shrine East-West football game January 5 at Stanford University stadium. They replace Earle Bruce of Ohio State University and Don James of the University of Washington. Bruce and James were to have coached in the Shrine game, but their teams were selected for January 1 bowl games... Jim Valvano, head men's basketball coach at North Carolina State University, is one of 272 men and women under 40 years of age selected by Esquire magazine as those who are changing America. Esquire began its search for the elite group with more than 5,000 candidates.

Northern Michigan University will become the third year-round training site for American Olympic athletes if a U.S. Olympic subcommittee's recommendation is adopted. Current sites are Colorado Springs and Lake Placid. A decision on the proposal is expected in February during the annual congress of delegates of the U.S. Olympic Committee... The National Catholic Basketball Tournament will be conducted January 3-6 for men and January 10-13 for women at Loras College and the University of Dubuque. Thirty-two Catholic schools from 18 states will play for a national title... A toy was an admission ticket to the basketball game between the Monmouth College (New Jersey) Hawks and Brooklyn College December 12 at West Long Branch, New Jersey. The first 300 fans to donate a toy to a "Toys for Tots" campaign were admitted to the game free... Massachusetts Institute of Technology will add women's soccer to its intercollegiate athletics program next September. MIT then will have 12 varsity sports for women.

Basketball rules corrections made

The following editorial corrections have been made in 1985 NCAA Men's Basketball Rules and Interpretations, according to Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball rules Committee:

Page BR-55 — Rule 10-9-(h) should read: "Failure to replace a disqualified or injured player within 30 seconds if a substitute is available; or"

Page BR-57 — Delete Rule 10-11-(d).

Page BR-58 — The answer to Question [2] should read: "For a multiple foul, one free throw is awarded for each nonflagrant foul and two free throws for each flagrant foul. For a double foul, no free throws are awarded. In either case, any player who commits a flagrant foul is disqualified."

Page BI-20 — The last sentence of Rule 2-10 should read: "All points scored, time consumed or fouls committed prior to recognition of the error shall not be nullified, except when a foul occurs during an unmerited free throw."

Page BI-24 — The sixth sentence of Play 13 should read: "The official is advised that BI has committed five personal fouls, upon which the referee then advises the player and the coach of Team B that BI has five personal fouls."

Page BI-43 — Delete Play 2-(c) under Rule 4-13-(h).

Page BI-95 — The first sentence of the ruling under (b) of Play 10 should read: "In (b), a two-shot technical foul is charged to B2."

Page BI-102 — Under Rule 10-11, delete Plays 3 through 6.

Basketball committee requests attendance figures

Attendance figures for regular-season women's basketball games will be requested by the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee when proposed budget forms are mailed to institutions in February.

A modification of Executive Regulation 1-13-(b)-(3), approved by the NCAA Executive Committee in August, permits selection of first-round sites for the Division I Women's Basketball Championship based on these criteria, listed in priority order:

In 1985 NCAA Men's Illustrated Basketball Rules, the following editorial corrections have been noted:

Page 11 — The first sentence of the caption under the photo for Rule 3-4-(c) should read: "The undershirt is considered to be part of the shirt or jersey and must be of similar color to the jersey or shirt."

Page 137 — The first sentence of the illustration should read: "A4 a-lights to the floor and B3 moves into position illegally."

1. Quality, availability of facility.
2. Submission of a proposed budget that guarantees a minimum of $5,000 of the estimated ticket sales.
3. Geographical location.

If these factors are comparable, the higher-seeded team will host the first-round game.

A memorandum requesting proposed budgets will be sent in early February to all institutions being considered for selection to the tournament. The proposed budget, along

Atwell named president of ACE

Robert H. Atwell is the new president of the American Council on Education. He was named to the post November 30 after having served as vice-president of the ACE since 1978.

A native of Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, Atwell was a vice-chancellor for administration at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, from 1965 to 1970 and was president of Pitzer College from 1970 to 1978. He began his career in the late 1950s as a Federal budget analyst.

Merits of college degree debated

Two education researchers disagree on whether a college degree pays off.

Alan Wagner, research associate at the State University of New York Center for Educational Research and Policy Studies, says college graduates earn about 25 percent more than high school graduates of the same age. "The evidence is that a college degree has held up well," Wagner says.

Russell Rumberger, senior research associate at Stanford University's Institute for Research on Educational Finance and Governance, disagrees. He says only six college graduates in 10 get a professional or managerial job.

Wagner claims the following: As an investment, a college degree offers a 10 to 15 percent rate of return for life; 95 percent of college graduates are employed 1½ years after graduation; and from 1979 to 1982, the salary difference between high school and college graduates aged 25 to 35 was larger than it was in the mid-1970s.

Rumberger says: Among college graduates, less than five years out of school, only 62 percent had professional or managerial jobs in 1980 compared with 76 percent in 1970; and in 1980, 22 percent of the women college graduates were employed in secretarial or clerical jobs compared with 13 percent in 1970.

Wagner says that much of the value of a college education cannot be measured by employment. "People may become better investors by taking an economics course. They may have better math skills. Perhaps they're better shoppers, or use preventive health care, or raise their children better."

More reliance on teachers urged

The president of the National Council of Teachers of English said last month that students would be the losers if the day-to-day decisions of teachers were sacrificed to public-school reform.

Sheila Fitzgerald, the group's president and an education professor at Michigan State University, said the ability of teachers to decide what is best for their students is threatened by "prepackaged education" and the growing reliance on standardized tests. Her comments were made during the group's annual convention in Detroit, which was attended by about 4,000 teachers.

"Teachers' insights into the language needs of students should have precedence over narrowly prescribed curricula, technological hardware, state mandates or test-determined instructional goals," Fitzgerald said.

The organization adopted a resolution against the use of writing as a means of punishment in many schools.

Athletics reform gains support

The Auburn University Senate has adopted a resolution supporting efforts to address problems in intercollegiate athletics.

In providing a copy of the November 13 resolution to the NCAA, Gerald W. Johnson, chair of the Auburn University Senate, said the intent of the action was "to express in a positive way appreciation of and support for the efforts under way to assure the academic integrity and credibility of intercollegiate athletics."

The text of the resolution follows:

Whereas, intercollegiate athletics and the student-athlete are integral parts of the university community, and;

Whereas, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), particularly through the Council and the Presidents' Commission, has expressed serious concerns about the integrity and credibility of intercollegiate athletics, and;

Whereas, the NCAA has addressed these concerns and has further actions under review, and;

Whereas, the integrity and credibility of intercollegiate athletics reflects, in part, the integrity and credibility of the institution, and;

Whereas, the maintenance of institutional academic integrity and credibility is the highest responsibility of the University Senate;

Therefore, Be It Resolved, that the University Senate does hereby commend the efforts to address the problems of intercollegiate athletics and expresses its support of the president in his administration of full compliance by the institution with all internal rules and regulations of the institution and compliance with and support of those policies and proposals of the SEC and the NCAA designed to assure the academic integrity and credibility of intercollegiate athletics.

Responsibility is a full-time job to part-time Howard women's coach

By Edward Hill Jr.

Sanya Tyler has devised a way of splitting herself, on demand, into three personalities. From 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., she is a full-time employee at the Howard University hospital. Then, from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m., she changes her "hat" and becomes the head women's basketball coach at Howard.

It does not end there. At 7 p.m., Tyler is at home with her four-year-old daughter, Ebony, and managing her single-parent household.

The job of being a head basketball coach on the major-college level is taxing enough with recruiting and road games. Yet, the 33-year-old Tyler has managed to maintain a unique balance among three time-consuming responsibilities.

"The key to maintaining some perspective is through careful planning," explains Tyler. "You have to map out your entire year and stick to it."

At the hospital, Tyler is a quality-assurance technologist in the radiological technology department. Her duties include maintaining diagnostic records, testing equipment and evaluating the department.

Tyler says her department has been supportive, for the most part, of her other ventures.

The strong-willed Tyler was named head women's basketball coach in 1980, when she was pregnant with Ebony. In her first year, she led a junior-dominated squad to an 11-14 mark. She followed with a 14-11 record that included a Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference title and Howard's first and only trip to the NCAA championship tournament.

"Looking back, I think the trip to the NCAA came too soon in a very young coaching career," says Tyler. "A lot of the credit for that success should go to those athletes who took part. It was not necessarily the coaching."

"The important thing was that it gave Howard University visibility in women's athletics."

What makes Tyler's accomplishments even more remarkable is that she and her coaching assistant, Linda Spencer, are both part-time coaches.

"When you consider that we play a major-college schedule (nationally ranked teams such as Maryland,

Sanya Tyler

North Carolina State, Cheyney, Temple and Penn State) that includes 27 to 28 games in nine or 10 states, we're at a distinct advantage," says Tyler. "The majority of the schools that we play have full-time coaches and full-time assistants who have more time to work with the athletes on techniques, who have the time to scout opponents and who have time to counsel the student-athletes one on one. We do not have that luxury."

Still, despite back-to-back losing seasons (8-16 in 1982-83 and 7-20 last season), Tyler says she is not discouraged.

"We knew that after we went to the NCAA with that senior squad, we were going to take our lumps with a young group," she says. "Some people measure success through wins and losses. But I've learned to accept things differently. My colleagues have often told me how much they respect me for what I'm doing under the circumstances. We may not always win, but we are competitive."

That respect also has had an impact on Tyler's ability to recruit. Last season, she signed high school all-America guard Vanessa Graham and followed that this year by signing another all-America, Courtney Bulard, who is one of the best female players ever to attend Howard.

"We can't sell them on the idea of a winning program here at Howard," says Tyler. "We have to impress upon them the idea of their helping us to become a winning program and at the same time getting some of the best education in the world."

Tyler's roots in basketball began with her days at Ballou High School in Washington, D.C., where she lettered in basketball, volleyball and field hockey.

In 1976, Tyler volunteered to assist Ballou's basketball coach. The Ballou team won the championship that year, followed by two more.

A graduate of Howard, the Pittsburgh native also has been a member of the National Association of Girls and Women in Sport officiating team.

Because she spends so much time away from home, Tyler says that it is important that she put in "quality time" with Ebony.

Says the coach, "When Ebony was younger, it was not that difficult. But as she becomes older, it's a little harder to explain to her why I'm too tired to play with her sometimes or why she can't go along (to road games). Overall, though, I would have to say she has adjusted well."

Tyler admits that there are times when she contemplates giving up coaching. "I took this job because of the challenge it offered and because of the opportunity it affords to interact with people," she said, noting that she has a personal commitment to youth.

"There are times, though, when I just say it's not worth it. Then I think about the young people I recruited and the obligation and responsibility I have to them...."

Hill is assistant sports information director at Howard University.
