Silver Anniversary award winners selected

Five men whose athletic achievements include a world record, Olympic medals and all-America recognition for athletics and academics have been named recipients of the NCAA's Silver Anniversary awards. The awards honor former student-athletes who have led distinguished lives after outstanding athletic careers in college 25 years ago.

Recipients of the awards are Ralph H. Boston, Tennessee State University track and field athlete; Maj. Gen. William S. Carpenter Jr., U.S. Military Academy football and lacrosse player; Paul J. Choquette Jr., Brown University track athlete and football player; Abner Haynes, North Texas State University football player, and Oscar Robertson, University of Cincinnati basketball player.

Presentation of the awards will be made January 14 during the NCAA honors luncheon in Nashville. The Association also will honor the recipients of the Today's Top Five awards and the Theodore Roosevelt Award, the highest honor given by the Association.

Ralph Boston

The world-record holder in the long jump from 1960 to 1968, Boston competed in the long jump, triple jump, hurdles, high jump, pole vault and javelin throw at Tennessee State.

A six-time Amateur Athletic Union all-America performer, he won the Olympic gold medal in the long jump in 1960, the silver in 1964 and the bronze in 1968.

He was captain of his college track team twice, and he served as a tutor to Tennessee State students and youngsters in local primary and secondary schools. He was a junior Olympic coach for three years.

After graduation, Boston served as a medical research technician at Los Angeles' Mount Sinai Hospital and Research Clinic. He became assistant track coach at Tennessee State in 1963 but left that post in 1968 to become the coordinator of minority affairs and special services at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

Boston has served as a commentator for ESPN since 1980 and has been an account executive for South Central Bell since 1982.

The first inductee into the National Track and Field Hall of Fame (1974), Boston also has been enshrined by the U.S. Track and Field Hall of Fame. He was the first Black elected to the Mississippi hall of fame.

Boston was an original member of the Special Olympics staff and has served on the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

He served on the U.S. Olympic Committee in 1972 and was an athletes' representative to the games that same year.

William Carpenter

Army's fabled "Lonesome End," Carpenter earned first team all-America honors in 1959. A national statistical leader in 1958 with 22 catches for 453 yards, he tied the Army record for catches in a single season. As a senior, he caught 43 passes for 591

Agenda announced for faculty representatives forum

John B. Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland, College Park, and Earl M. Ramer, former faculty athletics representative at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, will highlight the agenda for the special meeting of faculty representatives to be conducted Sunday, January 13, at the NCAA Convention in Nashville.

The meeting, first announced in the November 26 issue of The NCAA News, is intended as an attempt to establish an ongoing forum for faculty athletics representatives at NCAA member institutions. It is scheduled from 1 to 3 p.m. January 13.

Slaughter and Ramer will speak on the role of the faculty representative, with Slaughter presenting a chief executive officer's view and Ramer providing an in-depth perspective based in part on his study, "Athletic Committees and Faculty Representatives," that was published by the NCAA in 1980.

Slaughter, chancellor at Maryland since 1982, is a member of the NCAA Presidents' Commission, vice-chair of the Commission's Division I subcommittee and chair of its Presidential Nominating Committee.

Ramer, now retired, was faculty representative at Tennessee from 1961 to 1978. He served on the NCAA Council from 1964 through 1970 and was president of the NCAA in 1971 and 1972. He then served on the NCAA Executive Committee from 1973 through 1978.

The January 13 meeting will be opened by William D. Bradford, M.D., faculty representative at Duke University and chair of a special Council subcommittee that planned the meeting. He will introduce the other two members of that subcommittee—Francis W. Bonner, faculty athletics representative at Furman University, and Charles H. Samson, faculty representative to the NCAA at Texas A&M University—who will chair the remainder of the meeting.

After the presentations by Slaughter and Ramer, Bonner and Samson will lead an open discussion of the need for a continuing forum for faculty representatives and possible agendas for future meetings.

Football attendance in '84 shows increase of 350,000

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Record years in per-game average by the Big Ten, Atlantic Coast and Western Athletic Conferences and by Division I-A Southern independents offset big losses by the "grass roots" teams and helped college football attendance reach an all-time high.

The increase was 350,302 spectators, making the total 36,652,179 for all 654 four-year colleges in the United States with varsity teams (501 are NCAA members). It is the 29th increase in the past 31 seasons, with small decreases in 1974 and 1983.

After major-attendance declines in the early 1950s with no television restrictions, the NCAA Football Television Plan was instituted. Attendance started back up in 1954, reaching 17 million, and is now more than twice that figure.

Division I-A attendance increased

Resolution would reaffirm commitment to amateurism

A resolution to reaffirm the NCAA membership's commitment to the Association's principles of amateurism and a proposal to establish a National Collegiate Championship for any sport in which only one championship is conducted headline 12 amateurism and championships proposals facing delegates to the 1985 NCAA Convention.

The Council is sponsoring Proposal No. 84, which was recommended by the NCAA Eligibility Committee in response to "growing differences between the amateur regulations of the Association and those of various other amateur sports organizations in the United States and internationally."

NCAA President John L. Toner, following the Council's October meeting, said the Council's action means that it does not intend to follow "the recent tendency of our Olympic movement to loosen those standards of amateurism."

Change announced in Council slate

The Nominating Committee has announced a change in its slate of candidates for vacancies on the NCAA Council. In a telephone conference December 18, the committee nominated Frederick Hemke, faculty athletics representative at Northwestern University, as the Big Ten Conference candidate, replacing Gilbert S. Banker, who is leaving Purdue University.

The complete slate appeared in the November 19 issue of The NCAA News and the Official Notice of the 1985 Convention. The corrected slate will be printed in the Convention Program.

tutions to reaffirm their commitment to amateurism principles outlined in Articles 2 and 3 of the NCAA constitution and directs the Eligibility Committee to maintain these principles in considering appeals for restoration of the eligibility of affected student-athletes.

Proposal No. 90, sponsored by the Council and supported by the NCAA Executive Committee, tops six championships proposals. In addition to establishing a National Collegiate Championship in a sport in which only one championship is conducted, the proposal would:

- Require any member institution that competes in such a championship to meet institutional and individual eligibility rules of the division in which a two-thirds majority of the institutions that sponsor the sport are classified (as well as rules of its own membership division).

- Allow any National Collegiate Championship (for which all divisions are eligible) to continue so long as at least 50 member institutions sponsor the sport.

- Not permit such a championship to receive transportation expenses if

Old-fashioned ideals give new life to Kentucky

By Billy Reed
Louisville Courier-Journal

The national publicity and the big awards will go, as always, to the coaches of the teams that finish highest in the polls and do the best in the bowls.

But it says here, there should be a special award somewhere in the world of college football for Jerry Claiborne. At least he ought to get the Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval.

A plain man of simple virtues, the University of Kentucky coach has the misfortune to be employed in a profession where style usually is rewarded far more grandly than substance.

And style isn't the 56-year-old Claiborne's long suit. He's not one to grab for headlines or hog the TV lights. He endures the media rather than woos it. His ego could fit on the head of a pin.

But as for substance, well, that's something else. The native of Hopkinsville has come back to his alma mater and, in only three seasons, turned a chronic loser into an 8-3 team on the way to a second straight bowl game.

That's good, but it's not the main reason why Claiborne deserves the respect and applause not only of the people of Kentucky, but of everybody in the country who cares about college athletics.

When he left Maryland to come home in 1981, the UK program was the bad joke of the Southeastern Conference: always near the bottom on the field and in the classroom, and second to none in turmoil and trouble.

Claiborne has changed all that, but it hasn't been easy. As he cleaned house, he had to endure an 0-10-1 season in 1982—the first winless year in the university's history. But he knew what he was doing, and he knew it would be worth it.

Now UK has a winner built around good players and good citizens, and the fans have back their pride and self-respect. Instead of being reviled and ridiculed, the UK program today is a model of integrity and decency.

So, no wonder on a Saturday last month Claiborne felt such a rush of emotion as he watched his jubilant players rushing to the end zone to embrace their fans after UK's glorious 17-12 upset of Tennessee in Knoxville.

He knew then, for certain, that it was not only all right to come home again, but that it could be far more rewarding than he had imagined.

"All our players had gone down in front of our fans and were going bananas," Claiborne said. "A lot of those kids remembered when they were 0-10-1 two years ago, and those fans gave them a standing ovation when they left the field after the last game. It's one of the most gratifying things I've ever been around."

The character so obvious in Claiborne today was forged in Hopkinsville during the Great Depression and World War II. His father, Jim, made ends meet by working as a sheriff, mostly, but also as an auctioneer.

It was left to his mother, Katherine, to raise the nine Claiborne children. Even now, Jerry remembers the licking she gave him when she caught him lying about sneaking a cigarette. He was six or seven at the time.

"I never lied to her again," he says, "and I never smoked again, either."

His mother died of a heart attack in 1949, the first day of practice in Jerry's senior year at UK—but by then her principles already were firmly imbedded.

At the time, it was common knowledge that the UK coach, the late Paul "Bear" Bryant, was paying some of his players—a practice that Bryant admitted years later. But Claiborne never took a dime, even though he was UK's best defensive back.

Columnary Craft

It just wasn't right, you see.

He came back to UK to coach under Bryant in 1952 and 1953, left with him for Texas A&M after the 1953 season, and moved with him again when Bryant returned to his own alma mater, Alabama, in 1958.

From the time he began his own head-coaching career at Virginia Tech in 1961, Claiborne always had it in the back of his mind that someday he would like to return to UK.

His record certainly merited his alma mater's consideration—he was 138-76-5 during 10 years each at Virginia Tech and Maryland, putting him among the winningest active coaches—but somehow never managed to click with UK.

Oh, UK talked with him after the Charlie Bradshaw and John Ray eras. Both times, Claiborne eventually asked that he be removed from consideration.

"I just didn't have the feeling that they really wanted me," he says now. "They never showed any real interest. It just seemed to be a token thing."

And Claiborne's pride is as big as his ego is small. Even so, he was ready to listen again in 1981 after the UK athletics board of trustees voted to terminate Fran Curci's contract in the wake of four straight losing seasons and a seemingly endless stream of unseemly incidents involving football players.

"Now that's progress of the sort that the NCAA should make required reading for every one of its member institutions"

At the time, it was said that another alumnus, Howard Schnellenberger, was UK's top choice. If so, that still didn't stop Claiborne from taking the job when it was offered. The difference, he says, was a matter of sincerity of the part of athletics director Cliff Hagan and the administration.

"This time I felt they really wanted me," Claiborne said.

Once he took over, Claiborne was appalled by much of what he found, especially in the area of academics. He rolled up his sleeves and got out his broom.

When he first imposed his old-fashioned sense of discipline and order, the initial reaction on the part of some players was to snicker. He seemed so corny, so outdated, so unhip.

However, when the few who tested him quickly found themselves ex-UK football players, it became apparent that Claiborne was ready to endure anything—even a winless season—to get things done his way.

The snickers were replaced by respect.

"He's so genuine," says UK president Otis Singletary, "and the kids like that. He is exactly what he appears to be: a good man."

The numbers began to change last season. Not only did UK forge a 6-4-1 record and earn a trip to the Hall of Fame Bowl (only the second team in NCAA history to go from a winless season to a bowl), but it had 24 players with at least a 3.000 academic standing.

And this season, while putting together the 8-3 record, UK had eight players on the SEC all-academic team—more than any other team, even Vanderbilt.

Now that's progress of the sort that the NCAA should make required reading for every one of its member institutions.

"Basically, kids want discipline and good grades because people will respect them," Claiborne says. "Once they get good grades, they see how good it makes them feel and how happy their parents are."

The fans are happy, too.

Anybody who truly loves UK had to hate to see its name constantly being dragged through the mud the way it was during the Curci regime.

Curci claimed it wasn't really his fault. Because of the lack of blue-chip high school prospects produced in Kentucky, he felt he had to take players from out of state who were good athletes but only "marginal" citizens.

That philosophy backfired on him. He got burned time and again, until the combination of losing records and police records cost him his job.

But Claiborne has proved that it's possible to win not only with good kids, but with Kentucky kids. The large majority of his skilled players this season are from the state, and that only enhances what UK has accomplished.

"If you can get all the good players from the state," Claiborne says, "then you don't have to take that many chances when you go out of the state."

He has yet to be offered a new contract or an extension, even though that surely will come. After all, UK never again wants to make its native son feel unwanted.

Bravo, Jerry

And congratulations.

You bring great honor to your university, your state and to the game of college football.

Letters to the Editor

Division III grid officials criticized

To the Editor:

Being specific and to the point, Division III football officiating is terrible—not only terrible, but there are so many calls that are unjust, especially against visiting teams.

Having officials come from the same area as the college is real bad, and it gets worse every year. There is just too much favoritism toward the home team.

People with the authority have to reevaluate this serious problem. The officials should be neutral and not from the immediate area of the college hosting the game.

The NCAA Executive Committee voted to extend the number of play-off teams to 16. It should have stayed that way and not gone back to eight teams. Ithaca College, which was 10-1, should have gone to the play-offs. Union College (New York), which also lost a game, plays a much weaker schedule, but it went to the play-offs. Come on, you people; open your eyes. Is it the 'I don't care' attitude because it's Division III?

Play now, make your money later

To the Editor:

I keep seeing articles in your paper about some football coaches wanting to give football players $50 or $100 a month. Some say because they deserve it, and some say they are poor.

How about basketball players, baseball, tennis, golf, volleyball, water polo, squash, track, cross country, swimming—in both men's and women's sports?

Put a pencil to that amount and see what you come up with. I am sure the athletics director would be more than pleased to go out and raise the money.

There are some poor and deserving folks in all sports. The next move would be to give the starting team more money than the subs.

The rules are good; an athletics scholarship is a great thing. Make your money later. How about paying the faculty like you pay coaches, or vice versa?

Coaching turnover rate is lowest in 20 years

Perhaps there is something to the theory that increasing the field for the National Collegiate Division I Men's Basketball Championship helps to save coaching jobs.

Over the last decade, the Division I field has been increased from 32 to 40, 48, 52, 53 and now 64 teams. Now, let us look at the turnover rate in major-college coaching in that span:

A total of 26 Division I teams have changed coaches for this season. That is a turnover rate of 9.2 percent—lowest in 20 years, or since 1965 when it was 8.1 percent. It also is the sixth lowest since 1950, first year of such compilations (7.3 percent in 1954 is the record low).

And it compares to 13.8 percent in 1984, 13.5 percent in 1983, 12.5 percent in 1982 and 16.1 percent in 1981. It was 16.8 percent during the 1970s. So, maybe it is time to attribute the declining turnover rate to the expansion of the tournament field—can anyone give us another reason?

Not all were losers

Sixteen of the 26 teams that changed coaches had losing records in 1984. But nine were winners and one was .500. This included some big winners, like DePaul, 27-3; Miami (Ohio), 24-6; Samford, 22-8; South Alabama, 22-8; San Diego, 18-10 (champion of the West Coast Athletic Conference); UCLA, 17-11; Robert Morris, 17-13; Southern-Baton Rouge, 16-12, and Southwest Texas State, 14-12.

Remember, the changes include successful veteran coaches retiring and successful young coaches moving up—or starting new programs, like Bill Foster, from Clemson to Miami (Florida), which resumes basketball in 1986. Fourteen of the new head coaches had no head-coaching experience at the four-year level in men's basketball:

College	First-year coach
Arkansas-Little Rock	Mike Newell
Arkansas State	Nelson Catalina
California	Ron Williams
Columbia	Wayne Szoke
Dartmouth	Paul Cormier
DePaul	Joey Meyer
Florida A&M	Willie Booker
Long Beach State	Ron Palmer
Miami (Ohio)	Jerry Peirson
Rhode Island	Brendan Malone
Robert Morris	Jarrett Durham
Southeastern Louisiana	Newton Chellette
Southwest Texas State	Celester Collier
West Texas State	Gary Moss

Eleven of the 14 were assistants at the Division I level, with six of these (Catalina, Williams, Meyer, Peirson, Durham and Collier) moving up at the same college. Two were junior college head coaches—Moss at Laredo, Texas, and Booker at Trenton, New Jersey. Palmer was a high school head coach in Long Beach.

In addition to those already mentioned, three more came from assistant jobs at highly successful programs—Newell (Oklahoma), Cormier (Villanova) and Malone (Syracuse).

New-job coaches

The other 12 new coaches in Division I have previous head-coaching experience at the four-year level. Here is that list, with each man's career record in men's basketball and his last men's college head-coaching job (in 1984 unless otherwise noted):

Air Force—Reggie Minton (11-15 for one season, Dartmouth); Akron—Bob Higgins (71-26 for three, Walsh); Clemson—Cliff Ellis (171-84 for nine, South Alabama); Lafayette—Bill van Breda Kolff (339-130 for 18, New Orleans—1979); Marist—Matt Furjanic (73-71 for five, Robert Morris); Middle Tennessee State—Bruce Stewart (64-9 for two, West Virginia Wesleyan); St. Francis (New York)—Bob Valvano (25-30 for two, Kutztown); Samford—Mel Hankinson (188-161 for 13, Delta State 1983); San Diego—Hank Egan (147-186 for 13, Air Force); South Alabama—Mike Hanks (46-38 for three, Samford); Southern-Baton Rouge—Bob Hopkins (169-73 for nine, Xavier of Louisiana 1974); and UCLA—Walt Hazzard (43-14 for two, Chapman).

Hankinson was an assistant at Iowa last year, while van Breda Kolff was a high school head coach in Picayune, Louisiana (more about him later). Hopkins was women's head coach at Grambling State last year. He had five 20-victory seasons in a seven-season span at Alcorn State and

Linda Page is averaging 24.7 points per game for North Carolina State

Xavier (Louisiana) from 1967 through 1973. Yes, he is the same Hopkins whose 3,759 career points at Grambling from 1953 through 1956 ranks second among all NCAA collegians in all divisions, all time.

Youngest and oldest

Youngest of the 26 new head coaches? Bobby Valvano, whose older brother, Jim, is head coach at North Carolina State. Bobby has a tiny recruiting budget and no full-time assistants, but, he says, "St. Francis is in Division I. This gives me an opportunity to grow professionally." And it does not hurt that he is back home in New York City.

The oldest? That is easy. Bill "Butch" van Breda Kolff, 62 years young, is back at Lafayette where he started his head-coaching career 33 years ago. After going to the Final Four with Princeton and Bill Bradley; after 10 years in pro basketball coaching—Wilt Chamberlain, Jerry West, Elgin Baylor, Pete Maravich and others; after coaching women's pro basketball, and, last season, high school ball, his colorful, boisterous career spanning 30 seasons, 10 teams and 666 victories has come full circle.

Basketball notes

His playing career started at Princeton before World War II—before most of the new coaches were born. His country has been in two wars; there have been eight presidents; putting people in space has become commonplace; skirts have gone up and come down; hair has gone down and come up, but van Breda Kolff is doing it the way he always has done it.

"The game is predicated on seeing people and getting the ball to them," he told Sam Smith of the Chicago Tribune during practice recently. "A guy might be pickin' or slicin' and we've got a good thing going over there and the guy with the ball is looking, looking. But he doesn't see anything. I tell them since they've been five years old, their eyes have been going 17 inches—25 if their parents have money. It's not tunnel vision—it's television... It's such a nice game when it's played right."

Pressure, pressure

There is pressure to win in all coaching jobs in all divisions—it is just a matter of degree. After 11 years as Ray Meyer's top assistant, son Joey is stepping in for a legend, a 724-game winner. "I'd be a fool not to be a little scared," Joey says. "But I don't feel pressure succeeding Coach—there's no way I can do what he did. I feel pressure in the fact that DePaul has the best won-lost record in the country over the last seven years." Joey recruited most of the current squad, which was undefeated until losing to top-ranked Georgetown on the road last Saturday.

UCLA boasts an incredible 505-78 won-lost record over the last 20 seasons, and this includes 200-56 for nine seasons since John Wooden retired. Walt Hazzard, playmaker and cocaptain of Wooden's first NCAA championship team in 1964, says, "The pressure comes from within." Alumni? "I'm an alumnus, too," he says. He is the fifth head coach of the post-Wooden era. "Coach Wooden came down to practice the other day for the first time since he retired. He spoke for 20 minutes about the UCLA tradition and reinforced what we've been telling the kids."

Hazzard, Meyers, Peirson and Collier are the new coaches returning to their alma maters.

51 women's coaching changes

In Division I women's basketball, at least 51 teams have changed coaches for this season. That is a turnover rate of 18.9 percent, excluding the five teams that have not reported the name of their coach. This includes 32 coaches with no previous head-coaching experience at a four-year college. Here is that list:

Alabama-Birmingham (Bill Ivey), Arkansas (John Sutherland), Arkansas State (Jerry Ann Winters), Austin Peay (Marvin Williams), Boise State (Tony Oddo), Bowling Green (Fran Voll), Butler (Russ Sarfaty), Central Michigan (Donita Davenport), Dartmouth (Jacqueline Hullah), Evansville (Bill Barnett), Fordham (Gary Orr), George Mason (Jim Lewis), Hartford (Carlos Aldave), Hawaii (Bill Nephel), Iowa (Rose Marie Battaglia), Lamar (Charlotte Mason), La Salle (Bill Morris), Loyola of California (Dick Beede), Loyola of Maryland (Becky Lovett), Miami of Ohio (Susan DeKalb), Michigan (Bud Van de Wege), Mississippi State (Eddie Vaughn), Monmouth of New Jersey (Roseanne McGlade), Montclair State (Jill Jeffrey), Northern Illinois (Jane Albright), Ohio (Amy Prichard), Radford (Charlene Curtis), Stetson (Nancy Nichols), Texas-San Antonio (Bill MacLeay), Toledo (Steve Mix), Tulsa (Katie Fisher), Utah State (Robert Corbin).

Ivey, Van de Wege and Jeffrey were announced as interim coaches. Sixteen were Division I assistants last season, and eight of these are returning to their alma maters—Aldave, Fisher, Mix, Van de Wege, Curtis, Jeffrey, Winters and Voll.

Five were junior college head coaches and at least three had outstanding records—Barnett (56-9), Battaglia, Corbin (98-19), Williams (100-20) and Winters. Five more came from the high school ranks—Beede, Ivey, Lewis (59-15), Morris (387-96) and Sarfaty. No information was submitted on Mason, Nichols and Voll.

Nineteen more new coaches have had previous head-coaching experience on the four-year level. Here is that list with each coach's career record:

Appalachian State—Linda Robinson (101-36), Bucknell—Lori Howard (34-12), DePaul—Jim Izard (73-21), East Carolina—Emily Manwaring (97-56), Fairleigh Dickinson—Icanek Ferné Labati (80-60), Illinois—Laura Golden (175-77), Iowa State—Pam Wettig (131-102), Kansas State—Matilda Willis (67-27), Murray State—Bud Childers (15-13), Nevada-Reno—Anne Hope (100-54), North Carolina—Charlotte Cindy Connelley (9-17), Northern Iowa—Kim Mayden (32-24), Northwestern—Don Perelli (175-71), Princeton—Joan Kowalik (53-30), St. John's (New York)—Joe Mullaney Jr. (66-27), South Carolina—Nancy Wilson (193-64), Texas A&M—Lynn Hickey (125-39), Virginia Commonwealth—Mike Dunavant (46-28), Yale—Diann Nestel (51-32).

Regan Truesdale is averaging 21.3 points per game for The Citadel

Izard was an assistant at Louisiana State last season but a head coach at Southwestern Louisiana before that. Seven came directly from other Division I head-coaching jobs—Connelley (from Bucknell), Mullaney (Providence), Willis (Arkansas), Golden (Central Michigan), Perelli (St. John's, New York), Wettig (Miami, Ohio) and Hickey (Kansas State). The other 11 moved up from other divisions.

First-year misfortune

Eddie Vaughn, first-year women's coach at Mississippi State, has had a career's quota of bad luck in his first month on the job. When he took the job in August after two years as an assistant, he said: "There's no doubt we will have the least talented team—at least in terms of just numbers—in the nation's toughest conference—the Southeastern." That was before two-year starter Polly Branch went down the first day of fall practice with a knee injury. She had surgery and still is healing. On December 1, star forward Sandra Butler had an emergency appendectomy and is probably lost for the season. The worst blow, though, was the death of freshman guard Mary Joyce Carr in an auto accident November 18. Vaughn now has eight players left—three freshmen and three sophomores included. (David Murray, Mississippi State women's SID)

She's back—and how

Minnesota's Laura Coenen was the nation's No. 7 scorer at 24.2 in 1983, but when the 1984 season began, she was a different person. She lost weight and strength and was always tired. She even started watching films of 1983 games to solve the problem. "I'd watch those films," she told Doug Grow of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune, "and I'd say, 'Where is that girl? Find her. Please.' I was losing weight, so I changed my eating habits. Five meals a day and I'd still lose weight. I thought, 'Maybe I'm pressing. Relax. That didn't work. I even thought I might have a mental problem. I tore myself up.' Finally, a thorough exam disclosed her problem—she had a hyperactive thyroid. "The doctor told me, 'You've got the same thing Archie Manning's got,'" she said. The cause is unknown. Despite it all, she still averaged 15 points a game.

She began treatment, including medication (which she will need the rest of her life), extra rest and consumption of carbohydrates during games, and is feeling and playing like the Laura Coenen of old. She scored a career-high 42 points vs. Nebraska and except for some missed free throws near the end might have surpassed the men's record. She tied the women's school record. "I didn't know that until after the game," she said. "I just wanted to play a normal game to prove to everyone I was back to normal." (Karen Smith, Minnesota women's SID)

Illinois College's Carol Johnson is among the leading rebounders in Division III

Quotes of the week

After Southern California played Memphis State, Trojan men's coach Stan Morrison had a few thoughts about tall players: "Mark Eaton (7-3 ex-UCLA center now playing pro basketball) makes our center, Clayton Olivier (6-10), look like a Cabbage Patch doll. But Eaton doesn't have long arms like (Memphis State's 6-10) Keith Lee. When he plays, Lee looks like he's 7-6." (Nancy Mazmanian, Southern Cal assistant SID)

You cannot accuse James Madison's men's team of playing boring basketball—their first three games went into overtime (they won two). It has given 13th-year coach Lou Campanelli plenty of gray hair: "It's incredible! I don't know if I'm going to make it through the season at this rate. I don't know if my wife's gonna make it." (Ken Ries, James Madison SID)

Meg McDowell, Delaware women's cocaptain: "This team has a lot of talent and potential. But you can say that all season and still go 1-26." (James Lanzalotto, Delaware assistant SID)

After his Stevens Tech men's team hit only 37 percent from the field and still won, 67-50, in a game at New York Poly marked by 44 turnovers and combined 53-percent shooting at the line by the two teams, coach Wally Whittaker quipped: "After a game like this, you wonder why everybody didn't stay home and watch 'Dynasty.'" (He then quickly added that any time you play poorly on the road and win you have to be satisfied.) (John Lyon, Stevens Tech SID)

It has been quite a year for the family of Clarence and Donna Young of Upper Sandusky, Ohio. First, son Ed, a 6-7 junior at Dayton and a key figure in the Flyers' Cinderella 1984 season, had his car totaled in July and wrecked the family car in August. Then on the first day of classes, he tore ligaments in a knee in a pickup game and was lost for the season. Then son Ken, a 6-3 sophomore at Ohio Wesleyan, was felled by a broken navicular bone in November and is not expected back until January. If that is not enough, their son-in-law has been in the hospital since August. It's really been wild," said Donna. Coach (Don) Donohoe called and said we're going to have to start praying Catholic. We're not Catholics, but we're praying a lot anyway." (It has not been all bad, though. Son David presented them with a grandson November 23.) (Mark Beckenbach, Ohio Wesleyan SID)

Long Island-C.W. Post found it difficult to prepare for Bridgeport's 7-6 Manute Bol, with its tallest player standing 6-6. Post assistant Doug Iglehart developed the "Bol Stick," a broom handle with a wooden hand on top, used by Post centers in practice. "If this works, I will manufacture it and sell it to all Bridgeport opponents the next four years," said Iglehart.

Indoor Track Preview

Arkansas has the inside track on championship

By Wallace I. Renfro
The NCAA News Staff

Arkansas track coach John McDonnell is in the catbird seat.

Fresh from the team title in the NCAA Division I Men's Cross Country Championships in November, the Razorbacks also are the defending indoor team champion and acknowledged by most as the team to beat in 1985.

McDonnell is happy, but he also is nervous.

"There are so many things that can go wrong," he said. "If we stay healthy, if everyone stays eligible, if we can avoid all the other jinxes, maybe we will do well."

Arkansas' strengths are in the middle-distance and field events. The Razorbacks can convert the runners who produced the cross country championship and score points from the 800 through the 3,000.

Rod Richardson, Texas A&M

Included in this group are Paul Donovan, David Swain, Gary Taylor and Joe Falcon, a freshman who was a major factor in the Razorbacks' cross country victory.

McDonnell also can count on transfer Espen Borge from Wyoming, who was sixth in the 800 indoors last March; Wallace Spearmon, who primarily is a 200-meter runner, and freshman Roddie Haley, the Texas state high school champion in the 400 last spring with a 45.66.

Arkansas set a collegiate record in the distance-medley relay last winter, and that team is back intact, making the Razorback running corps worthy of any coach's envy.

The real Arkansas power, however, is in the field events—particularly in the horizontal jumps—specifically in Mike Conley. The senior jumper has won the long jump and triple jump at both the NCAA indoor and outdoor championships the past two years.

"He is such a great kid," McDonnell said. "He is a tremendous competitor, but he also is a great team man. He has the points added up before we get off the bus. There are not very many kids like Mike."

A product of Luther South High School in Chicago, Conley first caught the attention of Arkansas assistant track coach Doug Williamson, who had traveled to Chicago to watch Wallace Spearmon run.

"Then he saw this kid jumping out of the triple jump pit and began trying to find out who he was," the coach said. "Oddly enough, Mike wanted to come to Arkansas... but to play basketball."

According to McDonnell, Arkansas basketball coach Eddie Sutton told Conley he would have to be a walk-on in basketball. Conley and his parents decided that is what he would do, and he entered Arkansas without benefit of a grant-in-aid.

"Mike went in to see Sutton after he went out for basketball the first year and asked if the coach thought he could make the team as a sophomore. Eddie told him he thought he could in one more year, but Mike decided to wait and we got a jumper in our track program."

Actually, McDonnell has five long jumpers who can beat the NCAA qualifying standard. The others are Mike Davis, third in the NCAA indoor meet in 1984; John Register, a freshman who can jump 25-3; senior David Wehmeyer, a 25-3 jumper, and UTEP transfer Joey Wells, who was sixth in the Olympic games this summer.

Arkansas also can score in the high jump with Bill Jasinski, ninth in the NCAA outdoor meet last spring; in the pole vault with Mark Klee, fifth outdoors last year, and in the shot put with Marty Kobza, fourth indoors last winter.

"This has got to be our year," McDonnell said. "Everything has fallen together for us. You know, Mike Davis walked into my office two years ago and said he wanted to try out for track. We had no idea what he could do. Then Wells and Borge, the two transfers, both contacted us. Those are just breaks that came our way."

Whatever it is, Arkansas will be the standard bearer for collegiate indoor track this winter.

However, there is an abundance of returning talent on other teams.

In fact, eight national champions return, including Conley. Washington State, which finished second last year, has one—Peter Koech, the 3,000-meter winner.

The Cougars could have a great indoor season. Returning, in addition to Koech, are Julius Korir, Olympic gold medalist in the steeplechase; Richard Tuwei, former steeplechase champion; Lee Gordon, second in the NCAA 100 last spring; Gabriel Tia-cob, Olympic silver medalist in the 400; James Cunningham, 1984 Pacific-10 Conference high jump champion; Brett Lowery, 1983 conference high jump champion; Dimitrios Koutsoukis, third in the NCAA indoor shot put last winter, and Tore Gustafsson, eighth in the NCAA hammer in 1984.

Iowa State has enjoyed success both indoors and outdoors the past few years under the coaching of Bill Bergen. The Cyclones finished fourth in the NCAA indoor meet a year ago after an athlete was declared ineligible, dropping them from the runner-up spot.

It should be another outstanding winter for Bergen and the Cyclones. Back are Olympic 400-meter hurdles silver medalist Danny Harris, who was fourth in the indoor 400 last year; Sunday Uti, 400-meter indoor runner-up last year, and Yobes Ondieki, injured in 1984 but the three-mile runner-up in 1982.

The Cyclones received two setbacks, however, when 1984 third-place high jumper Brian Tietjens broke a foot in preseason practice and when 1,500 indoor finalist Paul Black did not respond satisfactorily from foot surgery after the cross country season.

Southern Methodist, the team indoor champion two years ago, has finished in the top four for four years. The Mustangs definitely will miss weightman Mike Carter, four-time NCAA shot put champion.

However, SMU should have a good season. Back are hurdler Henry Andrade, third in the 55-meter hurdles last year; 1983 NCAA intermediate hurdles champion Sven Nylander, who probably will run the 500 meters, and Paul Rugut, 11th outdoors in the 1,500 last year.

Villanova, the 1983 NCAA indoor runner-up, finished 39th last year. It is not likely that coach Charles Jenkins' Wildcats will do that again.

The leader of the group is John Marshall, the 1983 NCAA 880-yard champion; and he has plenty of help in middle-distance and distance runners Sean O'Neill, John Keyworth and Gerry O'Reilly. They can score from the 800 through the 3,000.

Mike Conley

Other returning individual champions from last year include Texas A&M's Rod Richardson in the 55-meter dash, Georgia's Antonio McKay in the 400-meter dash, Alabama's William Wuyke in the 1,000-meter run, Boston University's Nick Saunders in the high jump and Oklahoma State's Joe Dial in the pole vault.

Listed below are other top returning individuals event-by-event:

Nebraska has enough talent for third consecutive crown

Chances are that the reason Nebraska has won only two team titles at NCAA women's indoor track championships is because there have been only two championships.

The Cornhuskers also have won five consecutive Big Eight Conference crowns.

Fortunately for everyone else around the conference and country, Nebraska will have to do without sprinters Merlene Ottey, the NCAA meet-record holder at 55 meters, and Janet Burke, the 60-yard record holder.

The bad news for opponents is that coach Gary Pepin believes the Cornhuskers may be better than ever.

"We have the best conference-level team we've ever had," Pepin said. "And on a national level, we probably are stronger than last year. We are a really young team—only two seniors and two juniors and all the rest are underclassmen."

Although youth makes performances unpredictable, the four upper-class team members are tried and true. Together, they accounted for 35 of Nebraska's 59 points in the last NCAA indoor meet.

The two seniors are Rhonda Blanford, second in the 55-meter hurdles last year, and Marcia Tate, third in the 500. The juniors are Angela Thacker, defending long jump champion and second in the 55-meter sprint, and Nicole Ali, who was a member of the second-place mile relay team in 1983.

"Ali is training mainly for the 800 this year, but I don't know where we will use her exactly," Pepin said. "Marcia had the best season she ever had last year. It was her first year without an injury, and she is ready."

Blanford is the top returning hurdler and can help the Cornhuskers in a number of ways. She won five medals in the Big Eight Conference meet last year.

Thacker is the premier long jumper in the country and the top returning 55-meter sprinter.

Those four put Nebraska strides ahead of most other teams in the nation in 1985, and the Cornhuskers have an impressive support cast as well.

Heather Smith tied for third in the high jump indoors last year, and she will help in the triple jump, a new event for the women indoors this year. The Cornhuskers also have some outstanding freshmen.

Included in the group are Michelle Lyons, an Australian who has run a 2:08.6 in the 800; Tammy Thurman, the Nebraska state high jump champion at 5-11 1/4, and Karen Kruger, who has performances of 13.21 in the 100 hurdles and 20-8 in the long jump.

Tennessee also has made a habit of indoor success. The Volunteers finished second in the two NCAA meets and won the first Southeastern Conference indoor meet last year.

That is the tradition—and the pressure—that Gary Schwartz inherits from Terry Crawford, who is the new track coach at Texas. Schwartz already has started rebuilding after graduation and transfer losses.

"It is pretty hard for me to say how good we will be," Schwartz said. "We had a good recruiting year, but they are untested."

Tennessee returns Ilrey Oliver, fifth in 400-meter dash indoors last year; Alisa Harvey, a sophomore who was seventh in the outdoor 1,500 last spring; Alison Quelch, a sophomore who was fifth in the 3,000 last spring, and Patricia Walsh, a 53-5 1/2 shot putter who was fifth indoors last year.

They will provide a strong foundation for Schwartz and the Volunteers, and if the freshmen come through, Tennessee could be a contender again.

The best of the new crop are LaVonna Martin, the junior Pan American champion in the 100 hurdles; Robin Benjamin, a 6.8 sprinter, and Menka Sykes, the best high school long jumper in the country last year at 21-4.

No one in the collegiate track community doubts that Crawford will do for Texas what she did for Tennessee. The only question is how soon?

Crawford believes that Houston still is the dominant team in the

Nawal El Moutawakil

Southwest Conference and that the Longhorns are a year away from national contention.

It is unlikely, however, that Texas will fail to improve on its tie-for-17th finish indoors a year ago. Two reasons are Terri Turner and Robyne Johnson in the triple jump.

Turner and Johnson finished first and second in the event last spring, the first time it had appeared in the women's championships, and both are back as the event is added to the indoor meet this year.

Also back are Tara Arnold, second in the indoor 1,000 last winter, and Juliet Cuthbert, a sprinter who was ill most of the 1984 season but competed for Jamaica in the Olympics last summer.

Houston is in position to defend its conference championship. Back are sprinters Jackie Washington, third in the 100 last spring; Michele Glover, second in the 100 in 1983, and Tara Mastin, 10th in the 200 last spring.

Also, there are Cindy Anzalone, third in the 1,000 last winter at the NCAA meet, and Kym Carter, a 6-2 1/4 high jumper and only a sophomore. Coach Tom Tellez has improved the Cougars with freshman high jumper Jolanda Jones, who has cleared 6-11 1/2; long jumper Keri Harris, also a freshman, and freshman shot putter Cheryl Kline, No. 2 in the high school shot put in 1984.

Villanova was third in the NCAA meet last year and is off to another good start. The Wildcats return Veronica McIntosh and Patty Bradley, winner and runner-up in the indoor 800 last winter.

Back intact are both the third-place 3,200-meter relay and fifth-place 1,600-meter relay teams.

Florida State coach Gary Winckler says that his team does not work very hard at indoor competition, but the Seminoles worked hard enough last year to finish fourth.

Vermont hopes to shed its role as runner-up

By Wallace I. Renfro
The NCAA News Staff

In intercollegiate skiing as in Kipling's poetry, East is East and West is West. Unlike the poetry, skiing eventually will bring the two together—but only once.

"We guess about how strong they are, and they guess about how strong we are," said Vermont skiing coach Chip LaCasse. "We never meet during the season, so we never have a way of evaluating how we compare before the NCAA championships."

That is part of the excitement of the meet, LaCasse says; and as the two regions prepare for their seasons, that is the meet to which everyone points.

"It is always interesting," said LaCasse.

Vermont has been almost unchallenged in the East for the last six years, and LaCasse has the Catamounts poised for another campaign from which they should emerge as the region's best.

Second at the NCAA meet the past four years after their only team championship in 1980, Vermont will be stronger this year. LaCasse is plainly pleased with his team.

"We didn't lose many, and we had a great recruiting year," he said. "So, we think we are pretty strong."

In addition to retaining what they had and recruiting well, the Catamounts regain the services of two Nordic skiers who missed last year because they were on the U.S. Olympic ski team.

Todd Boonstra and Bruce Likly, who competed in cross country for the United States last winter, join Fredrik Thaulow, ninth in the NCAA meet last year, and freshman George Welk.

The men's Alpine squad at Vermont is strong and deep. Team members include giant slalom champion Andrew Shaw and Bart Tuttle and Scott Heald. Tuttle and Heald both scored in the NCAA meet last year.

Also back on the men's Alpine team is Mark Smith, who did not ski for Vermont last year but has been the No. 1 slalom skier in the East for two years. Joining that group is Par Melander, a freshman from Sweden and the brother of two-time NCAA giant slalom champion Tor Melander.

The Vermont women's Alpine team includes the top returning slalom skier, Julie Woodworth, second in the NCAA meet last year, along with Amy Bergstrom and Beth Morrissey.

LaCasse also added three top freshman Alpine skiers—Jana Caldwell, Heidi Frost and Allison Putnam.

The women's Nordic team includes two-thirds of the team that won the NCAA cross country relay—Joanne Conchieri and Jorann Gran-Hendricksen—and a freshman from Norway, Hanne Korgstad, considered to be the top junior skier in the world.

Vermont's competition in the East will come from Dartmouth, with Alpine skiers Miles DeChamps, second in the NCAA giant slalom last year, and George Macomber, eighth in the giant slalom and fourth in the slalom; Middlebury, with Nordic skier Mike Graham, fifth in the NCAA cross country event, and women's Alpine recruit Ingrid Pundersen, and New Hampshire.

The race in the West will be much tighter. Utah has been the leader of the pack for the last couple of years, and the Utes still will be tough.

Three teams should give Utah and coach Pat Miller a run for the regional crown. New Mexico finished third in the NCAA meet last year and is strong again. Colorado coach Alan Ashley believes that the Buffaloes are ready to regain their position at the top (they have won nine of the past 13 team championships). And Wyoming has put together a team that may be the best in the West.

Jill Robins, Utah

The Cowboys return Neils Eriksson and Ian White, third and fourth in the NCAA giant slalom last March. The other Alpine skiers are Ulrika Lundeborg, sixth in the women's slalom; Sharie Aholo, ninth in the slalom, and Heidi Ward, 13th in the event.

The Nordic returnees include Lat Straley, seventh in cross country, and Per Henning Grimsrud, the top skier on the team last season but who was ill during the NCAA meet. Also back are Hege Peikli-Randall, second in women's cross country, and Grethe-Lise Hagenson, an all-America in 1983.

"We finished fifth last year and were very disappointed," said coach Tim Ameel. "We recruited a lot of new kids, and now we have more depth and more scoring power. We met all the needs we had with our recruiting."

The most exciting of the new additions may be Ann Melander (sister of Par and Tor), an eight-time Swedish national Alpine champion and ninth in the slalom at the 1980 Olympics.

Joining her is Becky Simning, who won three AIAW national championships for Wyoming from 1979 to 1981 and has skied with the U.S. team the past three years.

Ameel also recruited three men Alpine skiers and three men Nordic skiers, as well as Goril Stav, a four-year member of the Norwegian national Nordic team and 21st in the World Cup races last year.

Utah has won the last two NCAA team championships, and Miller has given no indication that he is ready to give up the crown. Miller lost half of his squad to graduation.

"Fortunately, we recruited well considering the number we had to replace," Miller said. "We have no margin of error this year, and we'll need to recruit big again next year to get back to where we like to be in terms of depth."

Back in the Alpine events are Knut Aaronsen, seventh in the giant slalom and second in the slalom; Harald Gefle, sixth in the giant slalom and third in the slalom; Andrea Trepp, fourth in the women's giant slalom, and Jill Robins, sixth in the giant slalom and fifth in the slalom.

Miller recruited Rolf Bjorne, considered one of the top 100 Alpine skiers in the world, and Mark McGee, a freshman from Vermont who took 1984 off but was one of the top skiers in the East in 1983.

Miller also recruited three Canadians, all of whom were members of the Canadian national women's ski team last year.

Utah wins with a balanced team, and the Nordic team is just as strong as the Alpine squad. Back are John Aalberg, the NCAA 15-kilometer champion, and Knut Engelbreiten, who was second. They make up two-thirds of the relay team that won the NCAA championships.

Also, two-thirds of the women's team that finished second is back—Tone Jahren and Hanne Mete Erikson. They finished ninth and 10th, respectively, in the individual cross country event.

The biggest question mark for Miller is how quickly Aaronsen will recover from a broken leg.

Coach George Brooks has the same problem at New Mexico. The Lobos finished third in the NCAA meet last year, and Brooks figured that his squad would be stronger in 1985.

That was before Anders Peinert, fifth in the men's giant slalom, broke his leg. He is out for the season, but Brooks still has Richard Abruzzo and Anders Bjurman returning in the Alpine events. Top recruits are Jonas Lundgren, ranked in the top 30 in Sweden, and Per Wassgren, fifth in the slalom in Sweden last year.

Brooks' women's Nordic team also will be strong again with the return of Heidi Sorensen, the individual cross country champion last year.

Colorado also expects to be better and will build around Brenda Buglione, second in the women's giant slalom, and Thomas Holder, third in the men's cross country.

counted out with sprinters Michelle Finn, fourth indoors in the 55 last year, and Janet Davis, sixth outdoors in the 200; middle-distance standout Kelley Hackler, sixth in the 800 indoors last year, and high jumper Wendy Markham, coholder of the NCAA outdoor meet record at 6-1 1/4.

Stanford returns its middle-distance and distance runners. Returning are Regina Jacobs, Alison Wiley and Ceci Hopp. The Cardinal can score a lot of points in the 800 through 3,000.

A team that everyone will be watching is Southern California. The Trojans have junior college transfers Gervaise McCraw, the junior college 400-meter record holder; Robin Simmons, a sophomore who anchored the U.S. junior team to a world junior record in the 400 relay, and LeWanda Cabell, the No. 1 junior college 400-meter runner last year. A lot is expected from freshman Wendy Brown, second in the junior nationals in the hurdles and a 42-10 1/2 triple jumper. Brown also can high jump 6-2 1/4, the best high school jump last year.

The Trojans also have Sabrina Williams, fourth in the NCAA long jump outdoors last spring; Diana Clements, a 52-2 shot putter, and 800 runner Donna Curtis, ninth in the NCAA outdoors last year.

The other returning national champions from last winter's NCAA indoor meet are Wisconsin's Cathy Branta in the 3,000; Washington State's Mary Moore in the high jump, and Rice's Regina Cavanaugh in the shot put.

Top returning individuals are:

Championship Highlights

After one victory in 1983, Bobcats win it all this year

Montana State, which had a 1-10 record last season, got a two-touchdown passing performance from quarterback Kelly Bradley to cap the best single-season turnaround in Division I-AA history with a 19-6 victory over Louisiana Tech December 15 in the Division I-AA Football Championship.

Bradley was razor sharp before the 9,125 sun-drenched fans at Johnson Hagood Stadium in Charleston, South Carolina, completing 32 of 57 passes for 334 yards against the division's leading pass defense. Louisiana Tech had allowed only 105 yards per game in the 1984 regular season.

Meanwhile, Montana State's swarming defense stymied Louisiana Tech, which did not gain a first down or move into Bobcats' territory until the second quarter. Louisiana Tech's only touchdown came with 48 seconds remaining in the game as Kyle Gandy hit Michael Sherman with a 10-yard pass.

"There's no question about it. It was a great team effort all year long," said Montana State coach Dave Arnold, who led the Bobcats to a 12-2 record. "I've been waiting a long time for this one. These kids have deserved everything they've gotten."

Montana State jumped to an early 3-0 lead after cornerback Derrick Abell intercepted Gandy and set up a 33-yard Mark Carter field goal. The Bobcats increased their lead to 9-0 on a 16-yard pass from Bradley to tight end Joe Bignell. Carter's conversion attempt was wide to the left.

Bradley, who finished with 10 catches for 130 yards, teamed up with Bignell again with 4:54 left in the second quarter on a 33-yard pass to extend Montana State's lead to 16-0. Carter finished the scoring with 48-yard field goal with six seconds remaining in the half.

Led by defensive end Mark Fellows, Montana State had four interceptions, 11 quarterback sacks and three fumble recoveries against the Southland Conference champions, who finished 10-5.

"They went to the pass, but we put great pressure on the quarterback and the rest of the defense did a great job," said Fellows, who sacked Gandy five times and had eight tackles and a fumble recovery. "I don't think this defense has played any better this season. It was just a great team effort; I can't explain this feeling."

Louisiana Tech, which made the seventh annual play-offs after a 4-7 finish last season and a 1-3 start this year, advanced to the championship with victories over Mississippi Valley State, Alcorn State and Middle Tennessee State.

"We just couldn't keep anything going offensively because of their

Clemson tops Indiana for first soccer title

John Lee's header with less than two minutes left in the game provided Clemson the winning margin and its first NCAA Division I Men's Soccer Championship with a 2-1 victory over Indiana December 16 in the Seattle Kingdome.

A crowd of 7,926 watched Clemson senior Maxwell Amatasiro take the corner kick that teammate Dick Landgren headed toward Lee, who was inside the six-yard goal box.

The championship was the first for Clemson coach I.M. Ibrahim, the Tigers' coach for 18 years, and prevented Indiana from becoming the first team to win three consecutive Division I soccer crowns.

Ibrahim motioned for his players to go for the near post on earlier corner kicks, but his signals went unnoticed.

"It was one of our secrets; we waited for this one chance to go to the near post," Ibrahim said. "I'd been screaming for it earlier, but they didn't hear me."

Indiana beat Clemson, 4-3, in their first meeting this season but was forced into a catch-up role in the championship game after a scoreless first half.

The Tigers took the lead at 78:46 when Gary Conner scored from the right side four yards out after a shot by Amatasiro bounced off Indiana's Keith Meyer and then off the right goal post. Conner kicked the ball past Hoosiers' goalkeeper Bruce Killough, who was out of position.

Indiana tied the score about five minutes later on an indirect kick in the penalty area. John Stollmeyer passed the ball to Paul DiBernardo, who rifled a shot into the upper left corner of the goal.

"That's the first time I've ever gotten to touch the ball on that play all season," said Lee, a senior midfielder from England. "This is the most important and best goal of my life."

Clemson's victory completed an upset-laden trip through the national-tournament bracket. Earlier, the Tigers defeated top-seeded Alabama A&M, 3-1; second-seeded UCLA, 4-1, and third-ranked Virginia, 1-0.

"OK, now you can say it: We are the hottest team in the country," Ibrahim said. "I didn't want the players hearing that before, because it would go to their heads; but it's incredible

UCLA captures first NCAA volleyball title

UCLA rallied from an 11-2 deficit in the fifth and deciding game to upset Stanford and win its first NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Championship and fourth national title.

After quickly falling behind in the fifth game, UCLA came back to score the last seven points of the match to the delight of 4,285 partisan fans at Pauley Pavilion. Liz Masakayan got the match point for the Bruins on her 32nd kill to end the hard-fought, 2½-hour contest. The scores were 15-12, 7-15, 15-10, 9-15, 15-13.

The victory gave the Bruins a 33-6 record, and it was doubly sweet for Merja Connolly and Katie McGarrey, who had 22 and 20 kills, respectively.

Connolly's status in early season was questionable because of anemia. Although the 6-0 middle blocker missed the first 10 matches, she bounced back to play an integral role in the Bruins' drive to the championship.

McGarrey was responsible for the match point that vaulted Southern California past UCLA for the 1981 championship.

She was injured during the 1982 season and last season transferred to UCLA, where she used the year to recover. McGarrey rebounded this season to make the Western Collegiate Association all-conference team and help the Bruins to a No. 2 ranking.

Kim Oden paced top-seeded Stanford with 17 kills and 13 digs, while Bobbi Broer and Susan Compton finished with 22 and 16 kills, respectively.

In the third-place match, Robin Burns turned in 18 kills to lead fourth-seeded Pacific to a 7-15, 15-13, 15-9, 15-6, victory over unseeded San Jose State. Eileen Dempster chipped in 16 kills and had eight blocks for the Tigers, who finished 31-8.

San Jose State, which finished with a 26-11 record, was making its first final-four appearance.

The all-tournament team consisted of UCLA's Masakayan, Connolly and Michelle Boyette and Stanford's Broer, Compton and Oden.

Indiana coach Jerry Yeagley was making his sixth appearance in the championship game.

Nebraska leads CoSIDA academic all-America team

Three members of co-Big Eight Conference champion Nebraska's Cornhuskers and Miami (Florida) sophomore quarterback Bernie Kosar, who passed for 3,642 yards and 25 touchdowns, headline the 24-member 1984 academic all-America university team selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America.

Two of Nebraska's selections—defensive linemen Scott Strasburger and Rob Stuckey—were named to the team for the second consecutive year. Nebraska center Mark Traynowicz also was selected. Stuckey, who has been accepted into the Harvard school of business graduate program, and Strasburger anchored Nebraska's defense, which led the country in total defense.

Kosar led Miami to an 8-4 record and a berth in the Fiesta Bowl. He finished third in passing efficiency and fourth in total offense while maintaining a 3.360 grade-point average in finance.

Kosar is joined in the backfield by the only other sophomore on the team—Western Carolina running back Eddie Maddox. The rest of the team consists of seniors and juniors Michael Lanese, Ohio State; Mark Fatkin, Western Kentucky; Tim Green, Syracuse, and Lance Hamilton, Penn State.

The Big Eight led all conferences with the three selections from Nebraska. Rose Bowl-bound Ohio State, Penn State and Bucknell each placed two players on the squad.

To be eligible for the team, players had to be regular performers and have at least a 3.200 grade-point average (on a 4.000 scale) during their collegiate careers.

Those criteria were met and in most instances exceeded by members of this year's team. The 12-man offensive team had a cumulative GPA of 3.580, while the defensive unit compiled a 3.610 average. Eighteen players had an overall grade-point average of 3.500 or better. Nine players will be participating in postseason bowl games.

The CoSIDA academic all-America college-division team was paced by Dayton with three selections—offensive guard Jeff Slayback, kicker Greg French and linebacker David Kemp.

Montana State, winner of the Big Sky Conference, defeated Arkansas State and Rhode Island after receiving a first-round bye.

Coaches will be polled on expanded football play-off

The NCAA Division III Football Committee, at its December 7 meeting in Kings Island, Ohio, discussed plans for a poll of Division III football-playing institutions about the possible expansion of the championship play-off field from eight to 16 teams.

Earlier this year, the NCAA Executive Committee approved a recommendation to expand the field to 16 teams. However, the Executive Committee rescinded its action after the U.S. Supreme Court voided the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan and the Association's contracts with ABC, CBS and ESPN. Revenue from the television plan helped to finance the Division III championship.

The committee plans to poll Division III coaches and administrators to see if they would favor a 16-team play-off without transportation-expense guarantees to first-round games. If results favor a 16-team play-off, the committee again will submit a proposal for an expanded field to the Executive Committee.

team include Case Reserve running back Jim Donnelly, Luther defensive lineman Larry Bonney and Rose-Hulman linebacker Jack Grote.

The 12-man offensive unit compiled an average GPA of 3.820; the defense had a 3.800 average. Twenty-one players had GPAs of 3.600 or better.

Following are the 1984 CoSIDA university and college academic all-America teams.

UNIVERSITY DIVISION

First-team offense

Quarterback—Bernie Kosar, Miami (Florida), 3.360 grade-point average in finance; Running backs—Eddie Maddox, Western Carolina, 3.720 in manufacturing engineering; Rob Masonis, Bucknell, 3.500 in English and economics; Wide receivers—Michael Lanese, Ohio State, 3.740 in English; John DeBoer, Central Michigan, 3.680 in accounting; Tight end—Jim Reilly, Bucknell, 3.500 in accounting; Center—Mark Traynowicz, Nebraska, 3.360 in civil engineering; Linemen—David Twillie, Virginia Military, 3.540 in biology; Mark Fatkin, Western Kentucky, 3.750 in computer science and health; Dave Morton, New Hampshire, 3.650 in chemical engineering; Bob Gustafson, Wyoming, 3.800 in business administration; Kicker—Juan Carlos Betanzos, Louisiana State, 3.360 in management.

First-team defense

Linemen—Tim Green, Syracuse, 3.770 in English; Scott Strasburger, Nebraska, 3.820 in premed; Rob Stuckey, Nebraska, 3.680 in finance; David Creelius, Ohio State, 3.420 in mechanical engineering; Linebackers—Gregg Carr, Auburn, 3.320 in civil engineering; Duane Bickett, Southern California, 3.670 in accounting; Carmen Masciantonio, Penn State, 3.540 in chemical engineering; Defensive backs—Lance Hamilton, Penn State, 3.790 in political science; Brian Bergstrom, Harvard, 13.650 (on 15.000 scale) in economics; Mark Kelso, William and Mary, 3.500 in business; Brent Koetter, Idaho State, 3.480 in athletic administration; Punter—Dirk Nelson, Montana State, 3.540 in physical education and exercise sciences.

Second-team offense

Quarterback—Stan Weber, Kansas State, 3.860 in accounting; Running backs—Kevin Scott, Stanford, 3.200, undeclared major; Brian Jager, Furman, 3.450 in chemistry; Wide receivers—Emile Harry, Stanford, 3.200 in psychology; Gary Rolle, Florida, 3.680 in zoology; Tight end—Bob Illes, Vanderbilt, 2.430 (on 3.000 scale) in geology; Center—Ricky Thompson, East Tennessee State, 3.900 in chemistry; Linemen—Scott Carpenter, Stanford, 3.400 in international relations; James Martin Harrell, Idaho State, 3.600 in physical education; Clay Miller, Michigan, 3.210 in economics; Mike Hartmeier, UCLA, 3.280 in economics; Kicker—Andre Guardi, Utah, 3.320 in business.

Second-team defense

Linemen—David Van Metre, Cornell, 4.040 (on 4.000 scale) in pre veterinary medicine; Greg Dings, Notre Dame, 3.790 in premed; Anthony Tulliani, Ohio State, 3.450 in political science; Steve Dailey, Miami (Ohio), 3.300 in zoology; Linebackers—Marv Allen, Brigham Young, 3.210 in zoology; Shawn O'Malley, Northeastern, 3.630 in mechanical engineering; Matt Soderlund, Stanford, 3.200 in human biology; Defensive backs—Doug Kimball, Montana State, 3.430 in premed; Mike Armentrout, Southwest Missouri State, 3.200 in political science; Daniel Carson, Dartmouth, 3.300 in biology; Craig Yokley, Vanderbilt, 3.880 in biomedical engineering; Punter—Mike Morrow, Bucknell, 3.300 in electrical engineering.

COLLEGE DIVISION

First-team offense

Quarterback—Steve Dembowski, Adrian, 3.900 in marketing; Running backs—Jim Donnelly, Case Reserve, 3.950 in mechanical engineering; Tom Kreller, Millikin, 3.970 in accounting; Wide receivers—Roger Roble, Carnegie-Mellon, 3.970 in industrial management; Dan Glowatski, Delaware Valley, 3.800 in business administration; Tight end—Ernie Siegrist, East Stroudsburg, 3.300 in computer science; Center—Jerry Kripal, Nebraska-Omaha, 3.870 in arts and sciences; Linemen—Jeff Slayback, Dayton, 3.950 in environmental engineering technology; Rick Marabito, Mount Union, 3.830 in accounting; Steve Sanders, Augustana (Illinois), 3.950 in physics and mathematics; Gerald Carbonaro, Southern Connecticut State, 3.600 in political science; Kicker—Greg French, Dayton, 3.730 in industrial engineering.

First-team defense

Linemen—Steve Kollias, Butler, 3.800 in zoology; Larry Bonney, Luther, 3.970 in economics and psychology; Sean Flanders, Springfield, 3.610 in biology; John Coyle, Loras College, 3.910 in philosophy and economics; Linebacker—Jack Grote, Rose-Hulman, 3.950 in electrical engineering and computer science; Gerry Quinlivan, Buffalo, 3.860 in chemical engineering; David Kemp, Dayton, 3.510 in engineering; Defensive backs—Teel Bruner, Centre, 3.980 in biology; Bob Jahelka, Long Island-C.W. Post, 3.700 in accounting; Scott Jeemen, Hope, 3.900 in business administration and computer science; Pete Kovatisis, Loras College, 4.000 in premed; Punter—Mike Siegel, Bowdoin, 3.400 in government.

Second-team offense

Quarterback—Tom Kupcc, Long Island-C.W. Post, 3.330 in criminal justice; Running backs—J. C. Anderson, Illinois Wesleyan, 4.000 in biology; Rich Bonaccorsi, DePauw, 3.600 in Spanish; Wide receivers—Tim Weaver, DePauw, 3.800 in history; Scott Love, North Park, 3.780 in natural science; Tight end—Glen Kucera, North Dakota, 3.870 in accounting; Center—Michael Bukuts, Case Reserve, 3.270 in management science; Linemen—George Stahl, Delaware Valley, 3.900 in horticulture; Tony Johnson, Augustana (Illinois), 3.480 in political science; Dan Remsberg, Abilene Christian, 3.260 in accounting; Brian Gifford, Millikin, 3.700 in history; Kicker—Bradley Cary, Hampden-Sydney, 3.860 in mathematics and economics.

Second-team defense

Post, 3.350 in accounting; Defensive backs—Steve Turchik, Clarion, 3.970 in accounting; Mike Liljegen, North Park, 3.900 in mathematics; Bob Bertagna, Union (New York), 3.670 in economics; Jim Johnson, Nebraska Wesleyan, 3.800 in business administration; Punter—Leland McCully, Livingston, 2.290 (on 3.000 scale) in physical education and biology.

402,046 this season and Division I-AA increased 108,630. Both were up slightly in per-game average and both played more home games, helping swell the total. The 462 teams below Divisions I-A and I-AA, however, were down 160,374, or 2.69 percent. This was the biggest loss by the "grass roots" teams since 1979 and totaled more than the last three seasons combined.

These teams averaged only 2,641 per game—lowest since 2,583 in 1958—and totaled only 5,806,892, lowest since 1959, when 515 teams in this category totaled 5,725,376. Historically, however, it should be noted that this is now a different group of teams, since this category lost many members to current Division I-AA.

'No-shows' a factor

There is some question, too, whether actual in-stadium attendance in fact increased in Division I-A this fall. This is because the big-attendance teams for the first time reported a definite problem with "no-shows"—those who bought tickets but did not attend the game. The huge increase in games on television, often with different starting times, was certainly a factor (and this doubtless was a factor in the big losses by the "grass roots" teams).

Attendance figures submitted to the NCAA generally reflect tickets sold (and season tickets were sold before the U. S. Supreme Court decision resulting in the huge increase in games on television). Only "eyeball estimates" are available, but they have been large enough to raise the question. There are 29 teams averaging at least 50,000 per game and they played 181 home games. Only 2,500 no-shows per game for this group would mean a loss of 452,500—more than the I-A national increase.

There always have been no-shows because of bad weather and losing records, but this is the first time the successful, big-attendance teams have reported such a problem.

Historically, it is healthy

Despite any current problems, there is no denying the remarkable growth of college football and its essential health from a historical point of view over the past quarter of a century. There are now 654 varsity teams—an increase of 36 since 1958. This means the number of new varsity teams has far exceeded the number dropping football. These new teams, with small attendance figures, move into the grass-roots category, which in turn loses its top attendance teams to I-AA, established in 1978, and this accounts for much of the attendance decline in the grass-roots group.

In 1958, there were 108 teams averaging 25,460 in the top category, then called the University Division. Now, there are 105 teams averaging 42,548, plus 87 more in I-AA averaging 10,885. Division I now totals 192 teams—nearly twice the 1958 figure—and they now average 28,800 per game, well above the figure for half as many teams in 1958.

Big Ten still king

The NCAA statistics service first compiled team-by-team attendance figures from its membership in 1957 (before that it was done by a Chicago firm using spot checks and projections, and detailed figures are not available). Since then, the Big Ten never has failed to lead the nation, and in 1984 it set an all-time national high of 67,997 per game, breaking by 526 the mark it set in 1983. The Atlantic Coast (43,441) and Western Athletic (31,669) Conferences also set new per-game records, as did the I-A Southern independents (42,106). The ACC did not break its total-attendance record set in 1983 because it played three fewer home games.

The Southeastern Conference again was second at 63,609—third highest in its history. The Big Eight Conference's third-place 49,934 was its eighth highest. Next was the Pacific-10 Conference, and its 47,248 average incredibly was the same as a year ago. However, it played five more home games, so it was one of six conferences in I-A and I-AA setting total-attendance records (at 2,976,655); the others: the Big Ten, WAC, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Southern Conference and Yankee Conference (see table for figures). The Southwestern Athletic Conference, perennial leader in I-AA, did it again with 17,555, up 1,438 per game, or 8.92 percent (one of the bigger increases).

The new Gulf Star Conference, with four of its six members in I-AA, averaged 7,111, but for conferences below I-AA with no I-AA members, the new national leader is the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, with a 6,743 per-game average. The CIAA replaces the Lone Star Conference, which lost three members to the Gulf Star. Here are those below I-A and I-AA that averaged at least 2,500 in 1984:

Team leaders

Michigan increased its amazing record streak of 100,000-plus crowds to 60 in 1984 and won its 11th consecutive national-attendance championship with an average of 103,819 spectators per game. Tennessee was next at 93,515, and Ohio State—the perennial national leader before Michigan took over—again was third at 89,449.

Penn State was fourth at 85,273, and Texas jumped from 14th to fifth at 79,243. Rounding out the top 10 were Louisiana State, Georgia, Clemson, Illinois and Nebraska (see table for figures). The second 10 included Oklahoma, Auburn, Wisconsin, Florida, South Carolina, Michigan State, Alabama, Arizona State, Iowa and Brigham Young—the only new team in the top 20 (moving up from 21st, replacing Purdue).

Forty-eight I-A teams averaged at least 40,000—the same figure as a year ago.

The largest increase in per-game attendance, exclusive of those involving neutral sites counted as home games, came at Wichita State, up 12,062 per game to 23,887. Remember, though, that this reflects tickets sold, not in-stadium attendance, because Wichita drew only 1,100 for its final home game in bad weather. Next were Syracuse, up 9,969 to 44,132; Kent State, up 9,964 to 21,201; Virginia Tech, up 7,567 to 39,367, and Georgia Tech, up 7,398 to 43,280.

Navy increased 12,955 to 40,976 per game, with both the Notre Dame game at East Rutherford, New Jersey (61,988), and the Army game at Philadelphia (73,180) counted as home games for Navy by mutual agreement (the Army game alternates—next year Army will be the home team). Tennessee's average went up by 8,587, but this was solely because a game at Memphis in 1983, totaling only 20,135, was a home game. Texas was up 8,122 not counting a designated home game at East Rutherford (see table) and up 7,650 counting that game.

There were three repeat champions besides Michigan—Jackson State

Legislative Assistance

1984 Column No. 33

Provision of travel apparel

Member institutions are reminded that the January 1976 special Convention amended NCAA Constitution 3-1-(h) to abolish the opportunity for a member institution to provide travel uniforms or travel apparel to its student-athletes (e.g., blazers, sweaters, slacks, etc.). This legislation also would prohibit a clothing manufacturer or other commercial sponsor from donating travel apparel to an institution for use by its student-athletes on team trips.

However, NCAA awards legislation [Constitution 3-1-(i)] permits a member institution to award items such as institutional sports blazers as part of its established season-end awards program.

Campus entertainment—expense-paid visit

Under the provisions of Bylaw 1-8-(j) and Case No. 232 (page 309, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), it is permissible to provide entertainment for a prospective student-athlete on an expense-paid visit in the form of a luncheon, dinner or brunch at the home of an institutional staff member (e.g., the director of athletics, a coach, a faculty member or the institution's president) or at another site on the institution's campus or within a 30-mile radius of the institution's main campus, it being understood that the entertainment is at a scale comparable to that of normal student life and not excessive. If such entertainment is off the institution's main campus but within the permissible 30-mile radius, the provisions of Bylaw 1-2-(b) would prohibit in-person contact by individuals other than institutional staff members (and their spouses if they accompany the staff members to the function).

Football recruiting calendar—

American Football Coaches Association convention

Division I member institutions sponsoring football are reminded that Bylaw 1-2-(a)-(6)-(iii) prohibits any on-campus or off-campus, in-person contacts or evaluation activities in connection with the recruitment of prospective student-athletes by an institutional staff member or representative of an institution's athletics interests during the period beginning at 12:01 a.m. on the day of registration at the annual convention of the American Football Coaches Association (AFCA) and ending at 12:01 a.m. on the day after the completion of that convention. This legislation also would preclude the provision of expense-paid visits or any other visits by prospective student-athletes to the institution's campus during that time. Based on the dates of the 1985 AFCA convention, this legislation would apply from 12:01 a.m. January 7 until 12:01 a.m. January 11.

Championships Corner

Future championships

1. Dates and sites have been determined for the following future NCAA championships:

1986 Division I Men's and Women's Outdoor Track Championships at Indianapolis, Indiana, with Indiana University, Bloomington, as host institution, changed from May 26-31 to June 2-7 to avoid a scheduling conflict.

1985 Division I Men's and Women's Cross Country Championships (site to be determined) changed from November 18 to November 25 to be consistent with established policy regarding championships dates.

1985 Division III Men's Tennis Championships (May 13-19) — Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Virginia.

1985 Men's and Women's Rifle Championships (March 8-9) — U.S. Military Academy, West Point, New York.

1985 Division II Men's and Women's Swimming and Diving Championships (March 13-16) — Justus Aquatics Center, Orlando, Florida, with Rollins College as host institution.

Resolution

the sport did not meet the sponsorship percentages of Executive Regulations 1-1-(a) and 1-1-(b).

Five other amateurism and five additional championships proposals will be considered. Following are brief summaries of the remaining proposals:

Amateurism

Two proposals—Nos. 85 and 86—are sponsored by the Southwest Athletic Conference and deal with complimentary tickets.

No. 85 would discontinue the practice of providing complimentary tickets to student-athletes and permit complimentary admission by a pass list only, and only for family, relatives and fellow students designated by the student-athlete.

Proposal No. 86 would permit member institutions to provide complimentary admissions for all sessions of a conference's regularly scheduled, season-end, single-elimination basketball tournament.

Sponsored by the Council and supported by the Special Committee on Player Agents, Proposal No. 87 would permit a student-athlete, under certain conditions, to borrow against his or her future earnings potential in order to purchase insurance against a disabling injury that might prevent the individual from pursuing his or her chosen career.

The proposal would require the student-athlete to report the transaction to and file appropriate documents with the member institution he or she attends.

Proposal No. 88, sponsored by four members of the Southwest Athletic Conference, one member of the Gulf Star Conference and one Pacific-10 Conference member, would permit up to $300 in awards for national championships, rather than $150.

The final amateurism proposal is the Council-sponsored No. 89, which would permit member institutions to pay drug rehabilitation expenses for student-athletes.

Championships

Two of the remaining five championships proposals would create additional NCAA championships in women's lacrosse and women's soccer.

Proposal No. 93, sponsored by the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, would establish the National Collegiate Division III Women's Lacrosse Championship, with the first championship to be conducted in May 1985.

Proposal No. 94, sponsored by members of the State University of New York Athletic Conference, would establish the Division III Women's Soccer Championship, with the first championship to be conducted in the yards and four touchdowns.

He led Army in scoring, kickoff returns and receiving in 1959 and left the academy with reception records for a season and a single game. Carpenter still ranks among Army's top eight in six categories.

Carpenter also earned all-America honors as a defenseman in lacrosse in 1960.

Academically, he ranked 20th in a class of 551 over a four-year period. He ranked among the top 25 percent in his class in military aptitude. He was a member of the debate council, as well as the pistol, skeet, handball, ski, weightlifting and Portuguese clubs.

Recently earning his eighth promotion, Carpenter served in Vietnam in 1963 and 1964 and was a company commander there in 1967 and 1968.

He has been awarded the Silver Star, Bronze Star and Army Commendation Medal. In 1966, Carpenter was awarded the National Football Foundation's first Distinguished American Award in recognition of his heroic action in combat.

He served as an instructor at West Point from 1970 to 1973 and worked as personnel management staff officer at the U.S. Army Military Personnel Center in Alexandria, Virginia, from 1973 to 1975.

After serving as a commander in Korea in 1975, Carpenter was senior military assistant in the office of the Secretary of the Army in Washington. He attended the National War College and from 1979 to 1982 served as commander of the 3rd Brigade of the Army's 9th Infantry Division. Since 1982, he has been stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington, where he serves as assistant division commander of the 3rd Brigade, 9th Infantry.

Paul Choquette

A three-year letter winner in football and track, Choquette twice was named all-Ivy, all-East and all-New England in football. Brown's career rushing leader, he was an academic all-America and earned the 1910 Award for the highest academic award on Brown's varsity football team.

In 1959, Choquette was Brown's most valuable player and was named Rhode Island athlete of the year. He was named a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame scholar-athlete in 1959.

After receiving a law degree from Harvard in 1963, Choquette served as an associate with Edwards & Angell law firm from 1963 to 1965, and again from 1967 to 1969. In 1966, he served as legal counsel to Gov. John H. Chaffee of Rhode Island.

Since 1969, Choquette has served as president of Gilbane Building Company, one of the nation's top 25 construction companies. He has served as chairman of the board of Gilbane Properties, Inc., since 1970.

Choquette has served or is serving in the following professional and civic capacities: vice-chairman of board of directors of the Rhode Island Port Authority and Economic Development Corporation; trustee emeritus of Brown University; past president of the Greater Providence Chamber of Commerce; board of directors of National Conference of Christians and Jews; vice-chairman of New England Council; board of director of Narragansett Council of the Boy Scouts of America; Rhode Island Commodores; board of directors of Rhode Island Industrial Facilities Corporation; the United Way; Providence College President's Council; Knights of Malta; National Association of General Contractors Construction Management Committee; Rhode Island Strategic Development Commission; director of Fleet National Bank and Fleet Financial Group, and director of Taco, Inc.

Abner Haynes

The holder of four North Texas State rushing records, Haynes was seventh in the nation in rushing and fifth in scoring in 1959, and he earned all-American honors from Time magazine.

Haynes was the first Black to participate in intercollegiate athletics at North Texas State. He was an active member of the choir at St. Andrew Church of God in Christ in Denton, Texas, and he participated in leadership programs through the church and in the black community to inspire young people to attend college and seek a higher education.

After leaving North Texas State, Haynes went on to a stellar, eight-year pro football career with the Dallas Texans (who became the Kansas City Chiefs), Denver Broncos, Miami Dolphins and New York Jets of the American Football League.

A three-time all-pro selection, Haynes was voted rookie of the year and Sports Illustrated player of the year in 1960. He set a professional football single-season scoring record with 114 points in 1962, all on touchdowns (19). He was the first AFL player to reach 10,000 yards in all-purpose running.

After retirement, Haynes served as assistant vice-president of employee affairs and urban relations with the Zale Corporation, a world-wide jewelry retailer.

He now serves as executive vice-president for promotions and advertising at Financial Planning Services, Inc., an organization for which he established a complete division and management program for athletes.

Haynes is active in Race To See, a program working with blind students, and he is a past volunteer and speaker at the Huntsville State Prison in Texas.

Oscar Robertson

"The Big O" is recognized as one of the greatest players in basketball history. For three straight seasons at Cincinnati, he was national player of the year, consensus all-America and NCAA scoring champion. He led the Bearcats in scoring, rebounding and free-throw shooting during all three seasons.

His career averages were 33.8 points and 15.2 rebounds per game, and he held 18 Cincinnati, 16 Missouri Valley Conference and 14 NCAA scoring records. He played on the 1959 U.S. Pan American team and was cocaptain of the 1960 U.S. Olympic team, which won the gold medal.

During a 14-year career in the National Basketball Association, Robertson's teams advanced to the playoffs 10 times. He was NBA rookie of the year for the Cincinnati Royals in 1961, and he played for that team until 1970, when he was traded to the Milwaukee Bucks. The NBA's most valuable player in 1964, he still is the league's all-time leader in free throws made and assists; he is second in field goals made, minutes played and free throws attempted.

The NBA's fourth all-time leading scorer, Robertson was inducted into the hall of fame and named to the league's all-time all-star team in 1980. He played in 12 NBA all-star games, earning MVP honors three times, and is the all-time scoring leader in all-star contests. His play-off scoring average was 22.2.

After retiring as a player, Robertson served as a commentator for CBS Sports in 1974 and 1975, and he worked with the Metro Conference Television Network from 1977 to 1983.

He is president and sole shareholder of the Oscar Robertson Company, a general contractor and developer of the Avondale Town Center since 1975. Robertson also is on the board of the Midwest Trust Company, a regulated investment company "money fund" with assets exceeding $300 million.

Postgraduate scholarship winners in football announced

Postgraduate scholarships of $2,000 each have been awarded to 25 football players at NCAA member institutions.

The Association annually awards 90 such scholarships. In addition to the 25 football postgraduate scholarships, 20 awards (10 for men and 10 for women) are presented to student-athletes in basketball, and 45 awards (25 for men and 20 for women) are made in other sports in which the NCAA conducts national-championship competition.

The NCAA postgraduate scholarship program has presented scholarships worth $2,174,000 to 1,559 student-athletes since 1964. To qualify, a student-athlete must maintain a minimum 3.000 grade-point average on a 4.000 scale—or the equivalent—and perform with distinction in a varsity sport.

Following are the accomplishments of the 1984-85 postgraduate scholarship winners in football:

Division I

Gregg K. Carr (Auburn University, 3.320 grade-point average in civil engineering)—Named to four all-America teams this season, Carr has been the leading tackler at Auburn the past three seasons as a linebacker. He is a three-time all-Southeastern Conference selection and is a finalist for the NCAA's Today's Top Five awards. Carr is a four-time all-academic selection in the SEC and recently was named a scholar-athlete by the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame. He was the outstanding junior in the school of engineering and was selected to Spades, composed of Auburn's 10 finest leaders (out of enrollment of more than 18,000). He plans to pursue a graduate degree in business.

David Robert Crecelius (Ohio State University, 3.420 in mechanical engineering)—A two-year starter at defensive tackle, Crecelius was among the team's leaders in tackles in 1983 with 54. A 1984 NFFHF scholar-athlete, he was named to CoSIDA's first team academic all-America team in 1983 and 1984 and was all-academic in the Big Ten Conference three consecutive years. He was named to the dean's list seven times. He ranks in the top 11 percent of his four-year class in the college of engineering. He plans to enroll in an engineering graduate program at Ohio State.

Scott Edwin Strasburger (University of Nebraska, Lincoln, 3.835 in premed)—From his defensive end position, Strasburger has been instrumental in Nebraska's defensive prowess the past three years. He made 18 tackles behind the line of scrimmage for losses of 84 yards during career. He was named a scholar-athlete by the NFFHF and was selected academic all-America by CoSIDA for the second consecutive year. He is a two-time all-academic selection in the Big Eight Conference and made the dean's list three years. He plans to enter medical school and specialize in orthopedics.

Marvin R. Allen (Brigham Young University, 3.220 in zoology)—A three-year starter at linebacker, Allen had 106 unassisted and 126 assisted tackles in sophomore and junior seasons. He received player-of-the-week honors in Western Athletic Conference last year. He was a supervisor of missionaries in Thailand. Winner of the BYU Cougar Club's academic award, Allen was named second team academic all-America by CoSIDA. He plans to attend medical school.

Duane Bickett (University of Southern California, 3.670 in accounting)—One of the larger linebackers in college football at 6-5 and 235 pounds, Bickett was a first team all-America selection by United Press International and the Football Writers Association of America. He has started at three defensive positions and had six career interceptions. Bickett was first team academic all-America this year and made the all-academic team in the Pacific-10 Conference three consecutive years. He was named player of the game against Notre Dame in 1983. Other academic awards include David X. Marks Award, Trojan Diamond Medal Award and student-athlete of the year award by the Half Century Club. He plans to pursue a master's in business administration at Southern Cal.

Daniel W. Lynch (Washington State University, 3.030 in finance)—A first team Associated Press all-America selection at offensive guard, Lynch is a finalist for the NCAA Today's Top Five awards. He is a three-year starter, two-time all-Pacific-10 Conference selection and Washington State's lineman of the year in 1983. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega and was named the school's outstanding senior. Lynch is a two-time academic selection in the Pacific-10. He plans to pursue a master's in business administration at Washington State.

Divisions II and III

Raymond David Nurme (Amherst College, 3.958 in economics)—Starting fullback for Amherst the past two years, Nurme gained 378 yards in 1983 but was particularly tough as a blocker. His academic honors include the Samuel Walley Brown Scholarship, given to the top member of the junior class at Amherst. He also was one of four Amherst students to receive Phi Beta Kappa honors. He is a member of Psi Upsilon. Nurme plans to obtain a master's degree in business administration from Harvard.

Daniel James Glowatski (Delaware Valley College, 3.802 in business administration)—A four-year performer at split end, Glowatski holds the season and career records for catches at Delaware Valley with 53 and 154, respectively. He also holds the career yardage record with 2,645. Three-time all-conference selection in Middle Atlantic Conference. Academic awards include the William Owens Memorial scholarship, Dorothy McCool Memorial scholarship and dean's list all four years. Also participated in track and field. Glowatski hopes to pursue a master's degree in business administration.

Richard James Bonaccorsi (DePauw University, 3.470 in Spanish)—A four-year starter at fullback, Bonaccorsi rushed for about 2,000 yards during career. He also caught 64 passes for 563 yards. He received freshman-of-the-year and offensive-player-of-the-year awards. He also set record for career touchdowns with 27. Bonaccorsi served as a translator and medical instructor for mission team in impoverished village in Peru. He also has studied in Barcelona, Spain, under Brethren Colleges Abroad program. He plans to obtain a master's in international management.

Glen Allen Kucera (University of North Dakota, 3.810 in accounting)—A 6-3, 230-pound tight end, Kucera led his team in 1983 with 35 catches for 502 yards and three touchdowns. He also was the squad's punter, finishing his four-year career with 39.6 average. Kucera was fourth in Division II punting in 1983 with 43.4 average. He was all-conference in 1983 and is a three-time North Central Conference all-academic choice. Plans to pursue master's in business at North Dakota.

Daniel Lloyd Rensberg (Abilene Christian University, 3.320 in accounting)—A 6-5, 282-pound offensive tackle, Rensberg was the most valuable player on offense in 1983. He was named first team College Division all-America by the American Football Coaches Association. An academic all-conference selection three consecutive years, Rensberg was the most valuable offensive player in the Lone Star Conference in 1983. He has been on the dean's list six semesters and was a honor student at ACU in 1982 and 1983. Rensberg plans to enter law school at Baylor University.

Alexis James Vlahos (University of Santa Clara, 3.432 in psychology)—A four-year starter at center, Vlahos is first Santa Clara athlete to start for four consecutive years since 1972. He was all-Western Football Conference and Associated Press Little all-America in 1983. Vlahos is a member of the psychology club and the American Psychological Association. This past summer, Vlahos was a volunteer at a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center. He plans to pursue a doctorate in clinical psychology at the University of California, Berkeley.

At large

Brian Daniel Bergstrom (Harvard University, 3.640 in economics)—Bergstrom, a three-year letterman, successfully made the transition from quarterback to defensive back in his sophomore year and tied Harvard's team lead for interceptions in his junior year with three. Bergstrom, who also was a two-year golf letterman, was active in the Boys and Girls Club of Boston as a tutor to high school students. Bergstrom plans to pursue a joint degree in business and law and hopes eventually to become self-employed and active in public affairs.

Richard Alan Leclerc (University of New Hampshire, 3.290 in computer science)—Leclerc led New Hampshire to a 9-2 record and a No. 11 Division I-AA ranking. A four-year letterman and 1984 team captain, Leclerc ranked sixth in passing efficiency last year and was a second team all-Yankee Conference punter in 1982. Leclerc was awarded the Craig Scholarship as New Hampshire's outstanding student-athlete in 1981 and recently received the University of New Hampshire Alumni Association student-athlete award. Leclerc is enrolled in New Hampshire's computer science graduate school.

David Martin Kucera (Bucknell University, 3.100 in studio art)—The career record holder for touchdown receptions at Bucknell, Kucera ranked fourth this season in Division I-AA receiving with 73 catches for 1,029 yards and six touchdowns. During the 1983 season, Kucera was named player of the week three times. Kucera received the Phi Beta Kappa Award during his junior year. Kucera, a four-year letterman, has applied for the visual art programs at Yale University and Princeton University and hopes to become an active participant in the art world and possibly an art teacher at the college level.

Douglas Scott Strang (Pennsylvania State University, 3.310 in accounting)—Strang, the Nittany Lions' quarterback and offensive captain this season, led Penn State to an 8-3-1 record last year after an 0-3 start. Strang participated in Fellowship of Christian Athletes and was a representative of the Second Mile Big Brothers Program. He was selected most valuable player in Penn State's come-from-behind victory against Alabama last season. Strang plans to attend law school at the University of Virginia or Rutgers University, New Brunswick.

Mark Allen Kelso (College of William and Mary, 3.520 in business administration and management)—Kelso established school records in interceptions, single-game unassisted tackles and career tackles. He was selected rookie of the year as a freshman and the team's defensive player of the year twice. Kelso was an active member in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the NCAA Volunteers for Youth program. He also was active in the college's student ministry program and the Catholic Student Association. Kelso would like to pursue a graduate program in finance or economics.

Garrison Anthony Rolle (University of Florida, 3.680 in zoology)—In addition to the NCAA postgraduate scholarship, Rolle was one of 11 student-athletes selected for a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame fellowship. A Southeastern Conference all-academic selection, Rolle received Florida's highest ROTC award for combined excellence in classroom and nonclassroom activities. Rolle, a three-year letterman, was regarded as one of Florida's finest downfield blockers from his wide-receiver position. Rolle plans to enter the medical profession.

Kyle Richard Aug (Hamline University, 3.750 in business administration)—Aug quarterbacked Hamline to a 9-0-1 record and a No. 10 Division III ranking this season and was among the nation's leaders in passing efficiency and total offense. Aug, a proficient rusher and passer, also established Hamline's best season punting average. Aug also excelled on the baseball field, earning all-Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference honors three years as a center fielder. Aug's future plans include becoming a certified public accountant after obtaining an MBA.

Kevin Michael Egnatuk (Central Michigan University, 3.700 in finance)—Egnatuk, a walk-on who later was named to the all-Mid-American Athletic Conference team as a linebacker, established a reputation as Central Michigan's big-play man. Egnatuk won the 1984 Bill Boyden Leadership Award, which is presented to student-athletes who have combined academic excellence with athletic performance. A member of the University United Methodist Church and Sigma Iota Epsilon, an honor art fraternity, Egnatuk is licensed to sell life and health insurance by the state of Michigan. After obtaining an MBA, Egnatuk would like to become involved with the stock market and to eventually own a financial planning company.

Stephen Louis Kollias (Butler University, 3.797 in zoology and chemistry)—Kollias is a three-year letterman who significantly contributed to Butler's recent success, including a berth in last year's Division II Football Championship. Kollias, a defensive end, finished his career among the team leaders in tackles, quarterback sacks and interceptions. After obtaining a medical degree, Kollias would like to stay involved in athletics by being a team physician.

Michael James Armentrout (Southwest Missouri State University, 3.160 in public administration)—Armentrout played a key role for Southwest Missouri State since his first start as a freshman when he intercepted a pass late in the game to stop an opponent's scoring drive and preserve a victory. Armentrout was the 1983 Division I-AA leader in pass interceptions and holds school records for season and career interceptions. A four-year letterman, Armentrout twice was named to the all-conference and all-academic teams in the Mid-Continent Conference. Armentrout would like to pursue a degree in law and practice criminal law and eventually enter politics.

Larry J. Bonney (Luther College, 3.970 in economics and psychology)—Bonney will graduate as a four-year letterman in football and track and field. On the football field, Bonney earned all-Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference honors and was named to the CoSIDA academic all-America squad. Bonney also was a conference place-winner in the shot put. He also served as captain of both squads this season. Bonney, who was named to the dean's list six semesters, would like to have his own law firm after his postgraduate studies.

Bob John Gustafson (University of Wyoming, 3.830 in anthropology)—Gustafson is proof that determination and courage can overcome physical hardships. Gustafson required emergency surgery in his freshman year to remove an abscess on his spinal cord that caused paralysis. After successful surgery, Gustafson broke his ankle in his sophomore year but fought his way back to become Wyoming's starting offensive tackle and earn three letters. Gustafson was selected to "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities" in 1983 and was a 1984 member of Phi Beta Kappa. After pursuing an MBA, Gustafson would like to establish a business career and eventually have his own company.

Scott R. Carpenter (Stanford University, 3.400 in international relations)—Carpenter was one of Stanford's most versatile offensive linemen. Although he started at guard, Carpenter was called upon to play other interior line positions. A four-year letterman, Carpenter was active in the Campus Crusade for Christ, Stanford College Republicans and Stanford-in-Government groups. Last summer, Carpenter was an intern in the California Governor's Washington D.C. office and was in charge of monitoring and lobbying Congress on legislation dealing with international trade. Carpenter plans to seek a one-year position on a congressional committee staff before entering law school. He eventually would like to pursue a political career.

Missouri-St. Louis soccer players warrant a second look

By Steven M. Carr
The NCAA News Staff

Most women's soccer teams finished matches against Missouri-St. Louis with a case of double vision during the past few seasons. The problem was temporary, however. It was the result of contact with identical twins Joan Gettemeyer and Jan Gettemeyer-Parris.

The 22-year-old St. Louis sisters opened their college careers during Missouri-St. Louis' first season four years ago and began working on the first draft of the Riverwomen's record book. Closing the final chapter this season, the Gettemeyers set 15 records and contributed to a 55-11-4 overall mark that included two national-tournament appearances and a fourth-place finish in 1982.

But Joan, a midfielder and younger by one hour and 15 minutes, and Jan, a sweeper, do not suffer from tunnel vision. You might say they established twin standards: the right mix of soccer and scholastics that culminated in honors both on and off the field.

They both were NCAA Today's Top Five award nominees. Joan maintained a 3.740 grade-point average while earning a degree in biology. She does volunteer work at the DePaul Health Center in St. Louis, coaches a young girls' team (since 1978) and is a member of the Missouri State Soccer Referees Association. She graduated this fall and will pursue an advanced degree in physical therapy.

Jan boasted a 3.700 grade-point average in elementary education. She joined Joan in coaching the junior girls team and officiates both Missouri club and high school games. She graduates in June.

Those honors were in addition to various all-tournament, all-region and outstanding-player awards.

"Playing soccer was a fringe benefit," Joan said. "I just wanted to go to college. They (Missouri-St. Louis coaches) were just starting a club team and that was available to us. That was nice, but I would have gone without a soccer team. I wanted to do something (academically) in college."

Staying in the St. Louis area and financial considerations were factors in selecting Missouri-St. Louis, but securing a degree was uppermost in their minds.

"The reason I enrolled wasn't because they were having a soccer club," Jan said. "This was the school I wanted to go to, and I decided that since they had a soccer team, I would play. Education was my first priority."

Coach Ken Hudson was just glad to have them.

"They kept us near the top of the heap in the country with their ability and their play," he said after the team finished 12-4 in 1984. "They'll be hard to replace."

"They've got the brains, and they've got the ability," he said. "There's no pro soccer for women and they were here to get an education. Joan almost didn't come back to play because she was going to transfer to a school with a physical-therapy program. They were here to get an education, which is the way it should be."

Joan found soccer provided the added benefit of enhancing her study time.

"It made me keep to a certain schedule as far as studying goes," she explained. "If I had that spare time I might have spent it goofing off. It made me buckle down to study and in that way was a help."

"It was a good feeling starting as a club and the next year becoming a varsity team and one of the top four teams in the nation," Jan said. "We were able to continue that, and it makes you want people to remember that you started right off the bat and got to the top real quick."

"We did set high standards and realized that college careers just last four short years. We want it to go on, but women can't try out for pro teams and we have to face the facts."

Joan sees graduation as the end of an era.

"We look at it as the end of an era because the players that first started here are leaving now," she said. "We formed the basis of the program, and it's nice to know we made it known as a good soccer program."

"Soccer has been very, very good to me," Joan said. "It's gotten me some publicity, and we have been able to let people know who we are. As much as soccer has been good to us, we've been good to soccer by making contributions coaching and officiating."

Throughout their careers, Jan and Joan pushed each other to become better players. Joan gained more individual honors, but Jan found ways to use that praise to her own advantage.

"I felt that she (Joan) was a little above my skill level and decided if I wanted to get some of those honors she was getting, I would have to work harder. But when she got an honor, I was happy for her. When I See Missouri-St. Louis, page 14 got something, she was glad for me. There never has been any jealousy between us."

Joan agreed.

"Mentally, it's always good knowing there's someone else on the field who knows what's going on and in whom you have confidence," she said. "Physically, we help each other out as far as improving skills and tactics."

Hudson found the two complemented each other despite playing different positions.

"They work together really well," he said. "It's like a sixth sense; one always knows where the other is."

Both women consider coaching as a possible future profession but plan to start careers in their respective fields first.

"Jan and I have both taken coaching courses and we have state licensing," Joan said. "We're interested in getting higher licenses, but I do want to get my physical-therapy career rolling."

Jan still has one semester remaining at Missouri-St. Louis to think about her future.

"It's going to be tough to adjust to not having soccer to play like this, except for the senior leagues," she said. "But I thought about that even before our season ended."

hart. "If we could just develop a machine to duplicate Bol's sky hook, we'd be in business," said head coach Tom Galeazzi. (Despite holding Bol to a season-low 12 points and six rebounds, Post lost 83-70.) (Bill Huffman, Long Island-C.W. Post SID)

Tom Franklin, a Carnegie-Mellon freshman from Brookfield, Ohio, knows what he wants for Christmas. In a recent game with Pittsburgh-Johnstown, Franklin received a hard elbow to the mouth. After the play, he picked up two objects off the floor. "I didn't know he wore contact lens," said coach Larry Anderson. "I don't," Franklin said. "These are my teeth." His two front teeth were sheared in half. (Bruce Gerson, Carnegie-Mellon SID)

After his team's first four games were decided by a total of five points, one in double overtime (he lost three), Nicholls State men's coach Gordon Stauffer said: "We've played four, but it feels more like 40. If this keeps up, I may need an early grave. I have a point guard going to the doctor for stomach problems—it's bound to be an ulcer." (Martin Harmon, Nicholls State SID)

Drexel's Walter Fuller, a junior guard, is the youngest brother of playwright Charles Fuller, author of the highly acclaimed movie "A Soldier's Story." Asked if he was as talented with the pen as his brother, Walter replied: "No, but he can't shoot the jumper like I can." (Bob McComas, Drexel SID)

Two milestones

The Indiana-Kentucky basketball rivalry took on an especially celebratory tone this month. First Maryalycie Jeremiah's women upset the Lady Kats, 65-64, for her 250th career victory. Then, the next night Bob Knight's men beat the Wildcats, 81-68, for his 400th career victory (at 44 he is the youngest Division I coach ever to reach 400). (Susan Williams, Indiana women's SID)

49 in a row

Longwood senior David Strothers made his last 25 free throws last season and his first 24 this season before a miss in the ninth game ended his streak at 49. Can any current player top that? (Hoke Currie, Longwood SID)

"We'll take it"

After her 10th-ranked team became the first Big Ten Conference women's team ever to make the top 10, Ohio State coach Tara Van Derveer said: "I can't believe there are only nine teams in the nation playing better than we are right now. But don't get me wrong—we'll take it." (Claudia Dinges, Ohio State assistant SID)

No horse for Nate

Nate Harris, North Central's 6-5 junior center, led the team in scoring (16.0) and shooting (68 percent) the first three games, but he may be one player who would not like to get into a game of "Horse" with his sister. You see, Janet Harris, a two-time all-America at Georgia, is the better-known player in the Harris family. (Marv Meinz, North Central SID)

One of those days

Oral Roberts left Tulsa, Oklahoma, in 65-degree weather and landed in College Station, Texas, in 35-degree weather. Then, their ground transportation to return from game-day shooting practice was "fowled" up. The team was stranded until one player flagged down a chicken truck, which took the eight players back to the hotel (the SID wound up in the trunk of a car for the return trip). If that was not enough, Texas A&M then handed the Titans a 71-70 loss. (Don Ott, Oral Roberts SID)

No Foul, No Harm

The Indiana State women Sycamores have to tread lightly during games, at least for the time being. Due to various unlucky circumstances, only seven players are available for on-court duty. With no reserves, these seven absolutely cannot afford to get into foul trouble, and they seem to be successful at avoiding it. Through the first six games, the Sycamores have made 134 trips to the free-throw line themselves but have allowed opponents that opportunity only 46 times. (John Cannon, Gateway Conference publicity director)

A Bootz in the Door

Remember Georgia Tech freshman Dolores Bootz, featured in last week's notes? She almost made history December 1 when she attempted a dunk in a game against Converse College, which Tech won, 116-31. Bootz stole the ball at midcourt early in the first half and was off on a breakaway. When she attempted to dunk, however, the ball bounced off the front of the rim, squirted out of her hand, hit the backboard and fell through the basket anyway. Bootz has successfully dunked the ball in practice. (Frank Zang, Georgia Tech assistant SID)

Group affirms CEO's athletics responsibilities

The membership of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities has adopted a resolution affirming the responsibility of the chief executive officer to "manage and monitor" the institution's intercollegiate athletics program.

Adopted at AASCU's 24th annual meeting last month, the resolution states:

"Resolved, that the members of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities affirm the responsibility of the campus chief executive to manage and monitor the institution's entire athletics program with reference to budget and to the academic eligibility and performance of student-athletes, in accordance with athletics association rules."

AASCU President Allan W. Ostar submitted the resolution to John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University, Bloomington, and chair of the NCAA Presidents' Commission.

"The resolution comes at a time when the athletics associations continue to examine various proposals for internal and external review," Ostar said, citing various proposals suggesting audit and/or accreditation of athletics programs. "The AASCU Committee on Athletics concluded that an additional layer of external audit is not necessary and is undesirable."

Reinhard named to position on Presidents' Commission

Herb F. Reinhard, president of Morehead State University, has been appointed to serve as the Division I-AA Central region representative on the NCAA Presidents' Commission, effective January 1, 1985.

He will replace J.C. Powell, president of Eastern Kentucky University, who is retiring December 31. Reinhard will serve the final two years of Powell's term. He was the only candidate nominated for that position in response to a call for nominations in the September 10, 1984, issue of The NCAA News.

Reinhard originally was elected to the Commission earlier this year as a Division II representative, when he was president of Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania. When he accepted the Morehead State presidency, he was replaced in the Division II Commission position by Thomas A. Bond, president of Clarion University of Pennsylvania.

A Kentucky native and one-time minor-league baseball player, Reinhard was assistant to the president at Florida A&M University for five years before becoming president at Slippery Rock in 1979. He also has

Championships per diem levels increased by Executive Committee

An increase in the minimum per diem levels for championships participants and approval of the 1983-84 report of the treasurer highlighted the December 11-12 meeting of the NCAA Executive Committee in Atlanta, Georgia.

The Executive Committee raised the minimum per diem amount from $25 to $30 per participant. Per diem is awarded to institutions for participants in championships in which tournament receipts exceed disbursements.

From the 1983-84 surplus amount of $3,135,600, an additional $1 million was added to the Funded Operating Reserve, bringing to $5,200,000 the amount in that account. Another $1,332,600 was allocated for championships transportation for 1984-85 and 1985-86. Other allocations were $103,000 for development and $700,000 for equipment.

Revenue for the 1983-84 year was $39,969,096, compared to expenses of $37,410,391.

The Executive Committee also received an analysis of the 1983-84 championships and noted that 32 of the 73 championships had increases in paid attendance over 1982-83. Twelve of the 19 Division I men's championships had increases and seven of the 14 Division I women's championships were up. Most noteworthy, perhaps, were the Division II women's championships, where seven of the nine championships had more paid spectators than the previous year.

Following is a listing of all other actions taken by the Executive Committee:

Financial

The Executive Committee took the following actions on financial affairs and related matters:

Reviewed plans of the NCAA Presidents' Commission relating to the two major studies of chief executives to be conducted and the special Convention to be held in June.

Approved the distribution of 1984-85 television rights fees from ESPN for coverage of NCAA championships and noted a seven percent increase. Fifty percent ($675,000) of the total of $1,350,000 was allocated for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Basic minimum rights fees of $10,000 were awarded for each of the 22 championships that will receive full coverage, and $3,000 was allocated to each of nine championships that will receive special feature coverage. An additional $428,000 will be apportioned among 15 championships according to average gross net receipts from 1981 to 1984.

Committee Recommendations

Special Championships Standards Committee: A number of items approved by this committee are endorsed by the Executive Committee in later sections of this summary. In addition, the standards committee determined to maintain the present definition of a participant and requested institutions to provide further information on the sports sponsorship form. The number of participants that received coaching or practiced with the team is used to determine the 1:16 participation ratio for individual championships.

Special NCAA Marketing Subcommittee: The Executive Committee reviewed activities of the Association regarding corporate sponsorship of NCAA youth programs. Contracts have been signed with Valvoline Oil Company for $200,000 per year for three years and with Gillette for one year at $100,000, for a total of $300,000 for 1984-85. Among the beneficiaries are the National Youth Sports Program and the Volunteers for Youth. The Executive Committee requested that written principles regarding corporate sponsorship be developed.

Championships

Division I Women's Basketball: The Executive Committee approved a recommendation from the Division I Women's Basketball Committee that for the 1985 championship, $125,000 of the television rights fees would be included when calculating the host institution's percentage; the policy for 1986 and subsequent championships will be reviewed later.

Division II Men's and Women's Basketball: The Executive Committee approved a recommendation from the combined Division II basketball committees that the Division II Men's and Women's Basketball Championships be conducted at separate sites, beginning with the 1987 championships. The events have been conducted at a common site since 1982.

Women's Lacrosse: The Executive Committee determined that a Division III women's lacrosse championship would be composed of eight teams if it is approved at the 1985 Convention and that the existing championship would be reduced to four teams instead of the current 12, as had been recommended by the Women's Lacrosse Committee.

Women's Softball: The Executive Committee denied a recommendation from the Women's Softball Committee that umpires may be obtained from outside a 75-mile radius for Divisions II and III regionals with the maximum mileage reimbursement of $30. Rather, the Executive Committee developed a general policy: "For all championships that do not generate revenue, there will be no air fare, teams must drive and there are no mileage restrictions." The Executive Committee encouraged use of local officials whenever possible.

Divisions II and III Indoor Track: The Executive Committee determined that the maximum number of participants in the Divisions II and III Men's and Women's Indoor Track Championships will be 134 for men and 114 for women. The Executive Committee approved a minimum of 10 events for men and women and indicated that the events should be determined in accordance with NCAA track and field rules.

Divisions I and II Men's and Women's Outdoor Track: The Executive Committee requested that the Men's and Women's Track and Field Committees select an alternative date for the 1986 Division I Men's and Women's Outdoor Track Championships in Indianapolis. The original date conflicted with the running of the Indianapolis 500.

Convention

The Executive Committee reviewed all legislation for the 1985 Convention that would affect Executive Committee responsibility. The Committee noted that it has an official meeting schedule during the Convention.

Miscellaneous

Executive Regulations: The Executive Committee approved several changes in executive regulations, which will be published in future issues of The NCAA News.

Appeals process: The Executive Committee reviewed a suggested appeals process for championships selections but reaffirmed that decisions of the sports committees are final and may not be appealed. The Executive Committee directed sports committees to make sure that they have complete and accurate information prior to selection calls and not to deviate from policies in championships handbooks.

Meetings: The Executive Committee approved the following future meetings—May 6-7, 1985 Hyatt Regency Hotel, Kansas City, Missouri; August 12-13, 1985, Westin Hotel, Copley Place, Boston, Massachusetts; December 9-10, 1985, Hilton Riverside and Towers, New Orleans, Louisiana. In addition, the Executive Committee asked the Council to consider scheduling all 1985 summer meetings in conjunction with the June special Convention in New Orleans.

Awards: The Executive Committee voted to award commemorative certificates to all officials at NCAA championships finals, which will eliminate the watches given to officials at the Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships.

won it again in Division I-AA (29,215—up 98), Norfolk State repeated in Division II (18,500—up 3,083) and Dayton did it again in III (8,332—up 1,790). Elon led the non-NCAA group.

Texas Southern had the largest increase in I-AA—10,712 per game to 18,183, followed by Harvard (up 7,468 to 21,500), Boston U. (7,073 to 10,133), Marshall (6,219 to 15,335) and Pennsylvania (5,220 to 24,141). Mississippi Valley State was up 10,180, including two neutral-site games counted as home (63,808 at Jackson for Alcorn State was the largest I-AA crowd of the year).

Hermann Award goes to Amr Aly

Columbia University midfielder Amr Aly has been named winner of the Hermann Award as the college soccer player of the year in voting by coaches and members of the Professional Soccer Writers of America.

Aly is a four-time all-Ivy League player. The award is named after Robert Hermann, a founder of the North American Soccer League.
