Today's Top Five award winners announced

Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie of Boston College heads the list of student-athletes who have been named recipients of the Association's Today's Top Five awards. Joining Flutie are Auburn University football player Gregg Carr; University of Florida swimmer Tracy Caulkins; University of Nebraska, Lincoln, football player Mark Traynowicz, and University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, swimmer Sue Walsh.

While all five will be remembered for their success in intercollegiate athletics, each has succeeded in the classroom. The grade-point average for the five, based on a 4.000 scale, is 3.340.

These current student-athletes will join five former varsity letter winners who will receive Silver Anniversary awards to become the College Athletics Top Ten for 1984. The Silver Anniversary winners were announced in the December 19 issue of The NCAA News.

The awards will be presented at the 20th annual NCAA honors luncheon, to be held January 14, 1985, in conjunction with the NCAA Convention.

CBS news correspondent Diane Sawyer will serve as master of ceremonies for the event.

The Today's Top Five awards are presented to student-athletes who have achieved athletic success, shown leadership qualities and displayed academic prowess.

Gregg Carr

A four-year starter for Auburn, Carr has maintained a 3.320 (4.000 scale) grade-point average while earning a degree in civil engineering. With a career average of more than 12 tackles per game, Carr has led the Tigers in tackles the past three seasons. His single-game high was a 17-tackle performance against Florida in 1982.

A consensus all-America and all-conference performer, Carr also has been named academic all-conference three times.

A National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholar-Athlete, he was tabbed the outstanding student in the Auburn School of Engineering for 1983. A member of the Chi Epsilon civil engineering honorary and the Omicron Delta Kappa leadership honorary, Carr also holds membership in Spades, an honorary consisting of the top 10 students on the Auburn campus.

He is listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges and has served as a spokesman for ABC Television's institutional messages on the student-athlete.

NCAA gives views on ruling by IRS

Editor's Note: The following statement was submitted by NCAA President John L. Toner to Charles M. Morgan, associate chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Service, regarding the Association's position on an IRS ruling that would jeopardize deductions for tax purposes of contributions to college athletics programs in those cases where the contributions produce benefits to the contributor, such as the right to purchase season tickets to football games.

Because of the potential impact of the ruling on intercollegiate athletics programs, some members of Congress persuaded the IRS to withdraw the ruling and provide time for an administrative hearing, which has been scheduled January 7.

"My purpose in writing is to comment upon the implications of now-suspended Revenue Ruling 84-132, 1984-36 I.R.B.5., by which it was ruled that no part of a contribution to a university athletics scholarship fund, in exchange for which was received the privilege to purchase preferred season tickets to the university's football games, would be treated as a charitable contribution under Section 170 of the Internal Revenue Code.

"If permitted to stand in present form, this ruling will have a profound negative impact on the fund-raising activities of a significant number of NCAA member institutions, not only in the relatively narrow factual context set forth in the ruling itself, but also by implication in a variety of other athletically related fund-raising contexts as well.

"Based upon the vigorous reaction of our membership to the ruling, it is clear that a large number of institutions employ this mechanism, or one similar thereto, to raise badly needed funds for a variety of educational purposes. This fund-raising practice widely exists not only with respect to seating at football games but at basketball games as well.

"Most often, contributed funds are utilized to support an institution's athletics program or to provide athletically related financial aid to student-athletes, but the NCAA understands that at some institutions they are utilized for even broader institutional purposes connected and unconnected with athletics.

"Coming as it does when most college athletics programs are under increasingly severe budgetary constraints and when all institutions are attempting to expand intercollegiate athletics programs for women while maintaining or expanding existing programs for men, the ruling carried to its apparent extreme could have a devastating effect at a large number of institutions.

"I. The ruling and its rationale: The stated facts upon which the ruling is based were as follows: An individual paid $300 to an athletics scholarship program and in return gained 'membership' in the program. The only benefit of membership was the right, for an addi-

Proposal would limit competition in all sports in Divisions I and II

A proposal to establish limitations on the maximum number of contests or dates of competition in all Divisions I and II sports is one of 25 playing-and-practice-seasons proposals that will be considered at the 1985 Convention in Nashville, Tennessee.

Sponsored by the NCAA Council with the support of the Special Committee on Legislative Review, Proposal No. 96 also would establish limitations on the dates for the first and last contests in all Divisions I and II sports and authorize Council approval of foreign tours in all sports.

Following are the recommended maximum numbers of contests in Division I: baseball (60), basketball (28), football (11), ice hockey (38), soccer (22, during fall season) and softball (60). The recommended maximum numbers of dates of competition in

Smith eligibility case dismissed

A Louisiana state court December 21 dismissed a case involving the eligibility of Virginia Polytechnic Institute's Bruce Smith to play in a football bowl game that already has been played.

Seven hours before kickoff December 15, a state appeal court ruled that Smith, Outland Trophy winner, should be allowed to play in the Independence Bowl against the U.S. Air Force Academy, which won the game, 23-7.

A full hearing on Smith's eligibility status was scheduled December 21 before Judge Eugene W. Bryson Jr.

NCAA counsel Arthur R. Carmody of Shreveport said lawyers for Smith filed the motion to dismiss the case. A member of Judge Bryson's staff said the motion was filed December 19 and signed by Bryson that day.

Smith participated in the bowl game after obtaining temporary restraining orders to prohibit his school and bowl officials from barring him from competition under NCAA rules.

Smith obtained the order against dates listed for various sports in Proposal No. 96.

The Council, with the support of the Division III Steering Committee, also has submitted Proposal No. 104, which would establish limitations on the length of each sport season in Division III by specifying the permissible starting and ending dates for practice and competition.

Another proposal in this grouping that likely will create interest is No. 109, which would establish a preseason National Invitation Tournament. Proposed by six Division I member institutions, the 16-team, single-elimination event would be conducted during the last two weekends in November.

Norrell has opened doors to women in sports

By Maury White
Des Moines Register

This is the saga of how Gwen Norrell, who didn't have the physical coordination to lead cheers, let alone play basketball for Eudora (Arkansas) High School 50 years ago, became a highly placed person in the world of collegiate athletics both at Michigan State and nationally.

Norrell sat in the press box last month, smiling happily, as the Spartans claimed a 17-16 football victory over Iowa. She was there as MSU's faculty representative, the first woman ever to so serve in the Big Ten Conference and, possibly, as any school's top liaison with a major athletics conference.

A faculty representative serves without pay as the president's personal representative to the conference and is in charge of helping make rules and interpreting them on the campus. Not things like infield fly rules, etc., but the jillions pertaining to academics, recruiting, cheating, etc.

Some of the fellas in the Big Ten were mighty wary five years ago when Norrell succeeded John Fuzak. "A few held back, until they'd determined I was interested in all sports, not just the ones for women," admits Norrell, a hearty, outgoing person who can listen to your language without blushing and, if of a mind, answer with the same. "She's an OK lady," says Michigan athletics director Don Canham, who had early reservations.

Additionally, for the last two years, Norrell has been Division I vice-president of the NCAA, sits in on the high decision-making for athletes of both sexes and chairs the Special Committee on Academic Research, now striving to determine how much English and math potential student-athletes must take in high school.

Eudora is in the southeast corner of Arkansas, where cotton is king and the Mississippi rolls mightily by. The town had about 2,000 residents when Gwen grew up; her parents struggled along with a country store, but her stepfather was a great believer in higher education.

"Every 10-cent piece taken into the store all the time I was growing up was put aside for Gwen's college fund," she recalls. "It's still hard for me to give anybody a dime in change."

When it came time for college, Norrell decided to study the choices from every angle. All by herself, she took trains and buses to 16 schools (Texas, Arkansas and Alabama among them) before settling on Peabody College in Nashville, Tennessee. After qualifying as a teacher, she came back to Eudora.

"The superintendent said he would give me a teaching job if I would coach girl's basketball, volleyball and track. I hadn't been good enough for any sport and didn't know a thing about them, other than they were fun to watch."

Crash course followed. Bob Ray, the boys' coach, helped her buy some books and gave her lots of help and support but Eudora didn't win a single girls' basketball game that season. The next year, it won the district title.

"I didn't get that much smarter, but I'm very competitive. What I did was convince some of the bigger, taller girls it was OK to be in athletics and you could have as much fun as men, especially if you won."

And that was how she learned about recruiting.

Norrell went to work for Michigan State in 1945 and is assistant director council and helped pave her path to be his successor.

"I've never had any kind of hostile feeling toward men. If you do, men will pick it up, just like women pick it up on men," says Norrell. "You have to be able to compromise, to understand political situations, and I was always aware that men had always run athletics and were among the last to integrate power."

"At my age, and I'll soon be 65, I would not be interested in trying for the presidency of the NCAA. I think the next two presidents will be male."

of the school's counseling center. She helped set up a testing program at the school after earning a master's degree at Columbia and left once to get her doctorate at Colorado.

"In the early days, the counseling department ran the tutoring service for athletes, and I helped on the financial aid program, too. I got to know a lot of the kids... they all call me Doc," she says. Fuzak, the faculty rep of 20 years, came to admire her wisdom, common sense and style and went to work. He got her on the athletics with maybe a female secretary-treasurer by 1987. But, when you get to places women haven't been before, you become a role model. And I hope that's what I've done with my life."

I, for one, would bet a dime that she has done that very thing.

Editor's note: At the 1985 Convention in January, Norrell concludes four years of service on the Council and two years as Division I vice-president. She was the first woman to serve as an NCAA officer.

"This new program (Lambuth College's starting a football program again) opens the door to dozens of high school football players who otherwise would not have the opportunity to play. High school coaches are thrilled to death about there being a new college football program in the area."

"We're looking for good students who have the desire to play football and who want to be in on the beginning of something good. Everybody who has called is very enthusiastic about the program. Inquiries have come from Tennessee, Kansas, Mississippi, Alabama and Texas."

"The baseball program will be enhanced by the presence of 40 football players on campus. The concept of Division III athletics, every sport in its season, allows a student to be a two-sport athlete."

"With the expanded field, I would hope that seven Big Ten teams could make the NCAA tournament (which expands to 64 teams in 1985.) Other conferences have had seven and they've been seven-team conferences. With that in mind, I've proposed to the athletics directors and coaches that we go back to a 14-game conference schedule. Football has done it. They're playing eight games instead of nine. Minnesota doesn't play Illinois for the next three years."

"For us (Big Ten Conference) to have three teams in the NCAA's last year was ridiculous. All we've done is dominate the NIT. Purdue, Michigan and Indiana have won it in recent years. Minnesota and Ohio State have been in the final four. We're making money for the wrong people. I don't think we've had a lot of breaks in the NCAA tournament."

"The pressures involved today are out of control at a lot of places. We have the (NCAA) Presidents' Commission now and that's good, but presidents are under pressure, too. In a lot of places, the board of trustees is appointed by the governor, and they all want to get out there and whip old Siwash U."

"Let's face it; there are places where the football coach has more power than the college president. That's got to change."

"Locks don't stop robbers and rules don't stop cheaters. There has always been cheating in college sports. If (NCAA Executive Director) Walter Byers thinks 30 percent of the schools cheat now, I'll bet 60 or 80 percent cheated 30 years ago."

"But now there's television and now everyone notices everything. So, it's a problem, a big problem, and we have to find answers."

Letters to the Editor

Coaching box gets coach's support

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the article by Dick Joyce of the Associated Press about Lou Carnesecca squaring off against the basketball coaching box. I, for one, am in total agreement with (Edward S.) Steitz. This is one of the greatest rules that has ever been instituted, and I would not be surprised to see the pros follow up on it.

Coaches have no business running up and down the sidelines trying to intimidate officials. John Wooden won many national championships and never got out of his chair. I think this is one of the best rules ever made, and I am 100 percent behind it. If coaches cannot operate in their 10- to 15-foot area, I think they are completely out of control.

Columnist's accuracy questioned

To the Editor:

With regard to the recent column by George White of the Houston Chronicle on the football programs at the three service academies, which appeared in the December 3, 1984, issue of The NCAA News, I wish to make the following points:

1. Your attempt at cynicism over the football programs at the service academies fails miserably. Witness the fact that a service academy has been in a bowl game for the past five years and six of the past seven years. In addition, Navy may be "hard-pressed to beat a team of Eagle Scouts," but it did beat South Carolina (when it was ranked No. 2 in the nation) and North Carolina this past season and took Notre Dame to the wire before losing, 18-17. I am sure Gerry Faust and Joe Morrison would appreciate having their respective teams considered a "bunch of Eagle Scouts."

2. The service academies are playing with students, which is more than can be said for a number of institutions of higher learning throughout the country.

3. Your accuracy comes into question in light of the fact that Navy running back Napoleon McCallum broke his leg in the second game of the year, against Virginia, not the opener against North Carolina.

TV receipts. Relations with alumni are profoundly influenced. Is that good or bad? I'm inclined to think it's a little of both. It certainly puts pressure on that didn't exist before.

"To some people, that (admission by Mike Rozier that he accepted money before the end of his senior season at Nebraska) diminished the status of the Heisman. Not to me. It simply means that these people are real. Being outstanding football players doesn't make them immune to the frailties of us all."

"In the high-pressure environment of today, especially with the cadre of agents, it's hard to hold to the amateur ideal we set for ourselves."

"There remains a valid expectation that young men who play college football will come out of the college experience with a degree. That ought to be the bedrock of college football. We have an obligation to people with talent in athletics to require some threshold level of scholastic accomplishment. There is life after football."

Dennis Bridges, athletics director and basketball coach

"A lot of people predicted it [the Supreme Court decision] wouldn't be good for all schools, and that's what's happening. I see it getting worse, with more and more cutbacks. With the NCAA having less money, and there being less to go around, the little schools are going to suffer. I think that possibly travel and per diem expenses for all sports will no longer be available."

1984 Column No. 34

Participation against outside team— Revised Case No. 205

As set forth in revised Case No. 205, published in the Interpretations column of the August 29, 1984, issue of The NCAA News, an institution's varsity intercollegiate team is prohibited from participating in a contest against a high school or preparatory school team. Recently, the NCAA Administrative Committee determined that revised Case No. 205 would not preclude a member institution's varsity intercollegiate team from participating in a contest against an established outside team that includes prospective student-athletes, it being understood that the outside team is continuing and ongoing and was not established for the specific purpose of competing against the collegiate team.

Transportation of prospective student-athletes

Member institutions are reminded that the provisions of Bylaw 1-8-(j) prohibit an institution, or a representative of its athletics interests, from providing any transportation to a prospective student-athlete except as specifically permitted under NCAA recruiting legislation. For example, a member of an institution's coaching staff who visits a prospective student-athlete at the athlete's high school may not transport the prospect to his or her home or any other location (with the exception of transportation to the member institution in connection with an expense-paid visit as set for in Bylaw 1-8) for any purpose whatsoever, regardless of whether the prospect provides reimbursement for mileage.

Participation prior to enrollment—Case No. 117

As set forth in Case No. 117 (page 276, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), a prospective student-athlete may participate in an institution's regularly scheduled practice sessions or intercollegiate contests during the official vacation period immediately preceding initial enrollment in the certifying institution, provided the student-athlete has been accepted by the institution for enrollment in a regular full-time program of studies at the time of the student-athlete's initial participation; further, the student-athlete no longer shall be enrolled in the previous educational institution and shall be otherwise eligible under all institutional and NCAA requirements, including any applicable transfer regulations. An institution's official vacation period begins the day following the institution's scheduled final examination period as published in the institution's catalog or other official publication. Accordingly, if an institution's final examination period ends on a Friday, a prospective student-athlete who otherwise meets the conditions of Case No. 117 could be eligible for practice sessions and intercollegiate contests on Saturday.

Graduate student coaching expenses

Under the principles set forth in Case No. 384 (page 355, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), a Division I graduate assistant coach, per Bylaw 7-1-(h), may receive only actual and necessary expenses from the institution incurred in the performance of the individual's coaching duties for the team the individual coaches, in which case the expenses shall be limited to the same expenses permitted team members. Accordingly a member institution may not provide a graduate assistant coach with expenses to attend clinics or conventions, such as those of the American Football Coaches Association or the National Basketball Coaches Association, if receipt of those expenses would place the total amount received by the graduate assistant in excess of commonly accepted educational expenses as set forth in Bylaw 7-1-(h) and Case No. 383 (page 355, 1984-85 NCAA Manual).

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Western teams plan to leave their brand on Eastern style of hockey

By Ken O'Quinn

Eastern fans unfamiliar with Western college hockey are getting their first glimpse this season of schools that have enjoyed preeminence in the sport for more than two decades.

The Universities of Minnesota, Minnesota-Duluth, Denver, North Dakota, Wisconsin and Colorado College, members of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association, are visiting Eastern campuses as part of an interlocking schedule with the new Hockey East Association.

For years, there has been an aura surrounding Western hockey teams, which have won 19 national titles in 25 years. Only Cornell (1967, 1970) and Boston University (1971, 1972, 1978) managed to intrude on the West's lofty status.

In fact, BU's championship victory in 1978 was the only one for an Eastern team in the past 12 years, and only three ECAC teams even reached the finals in that span. Besides BU, Boston College was a finalist in 1978 and Harvard appeared in 1983.

Although the East and West have approached parity in the past three years, with Eastern teams winning their share of regular-season games against the West, WCHA clubs are enjoying an edge this year, winning 41 and losing 27. There have been three ties.

Teams in the WCHA and in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association historically have had more powerful hockey programs than the East.

Western schools emphasize long, grueling conditioning programs to prepare for 40 games, many of which are before sellout crowds of 7,000, even with live television.

Until this season, Eastern teams played 32 games or fewer, and television appearances were rare.

The styles were different, too, with Western teams playing a tough, physical style, while Eastern teams displayed more finesse.

With the advent of the face mask, Eastern players have become more aggressive, knowing they can use force without fear of being hurt through retaliation.

And Western teams—such as Minnesota, and Northern Michigan this season—are displaying more speed, more European-style weaving, more playmaking.

However, some differences remain, though less distinct today, in the types of players found in the East versus those in the West.

Whether they be in the WCHA or in the CCHA, non-Eastern teams still attract more of the Canadian-trained "Grinders" who love to play crunch.

One of them is Rob Bryden, a 6-2, 215-pound left wing for Western Michigan in the CCHA.

"I looked at Eastern hockey, and I looked at the West, and the West was more my style—hump and run, take the man out of the play," he said earlier this season. "And Eastern schools are a little harder to get into."

Because only Minnesota and Wisconsin have quality high school programs, Western schools depend heavily on Canadians. Eastern schools also attract many Canadians, but they recruit more high school talent than Western teams.

The majority of Canadians that Western schools recruit are rugged players from the prairies of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba. They frequently are older, stronger and more mature than many players in U.S. high school hockey.

As a freshman at Colorado College, "I was an 18-year-old forward looking across the line at a 23-year-old," said Wisconsin coach Jeff Sauer.

Canadian junior hockey is rougher; referees are more lenient, and the rules in most leagues still require only a five-minute penalty for fighting. In American high schools and colleges, fighting means ejection from the game and disqualification from the next game.

Another factor contributing to the difference in players is that junior hockey is managed by businessmen and former pros whose purpose is to cultivate future National Hockey League talent. Their interests are different from the academicians who oversee U.S. high school hockey.

O'Quinn is an Associated Press writer.

tional $120, to purchase a preferred seating season ticket to the university's home football games at a location between the 40-yard lines. Only members of the program were entitled to such preferred seating; some 2,000 persons were on a waiting list to become members of the program.

"The rationale of the ruling, derived from Revenue Ruling 67-246, 1967-2 C.B. 104, was that in order for the payment to be a gift and, therefore, a deductible contribution, the taxpayer may not receive 'adequate consideration' in exchange, and that if payment to a charitable organization results in the receipt of a 'substantial benefit,' the presumption arises that no gift has been made. In order to sustain his claim of a gift, the taxpayer must overcome this presumption by showing that the amount paid exceeds the value of the amount of monetary benefit received in return; in such event, a charitable contribution will be allowed for the excess, and for the excess only.

"2. Recommended withdrawal of the ruling: You should be aware that application of the rationale of Revenue Ruling 67-246 to the facts set forth in the present ruling effectively destroys the opportunity for a university to raise charitable contributions to its programs through this kind of mechanism.

"This is because, unlike any of the examples set forth in Revenue Ruling 67-246, there appears to be no practical way to place a value on the benefit received in exchange for the gift. In the present case, because the contributor pays face value for the ticket itself, the only unanswered valuation issue involves determining the market value of the privilege to purchase the ticket. Except perhaps by determining, on a 'catch-as-catch-can' basis, the premium over face value at which tickets between the 40-yard lines are illegally 'scalped' at each home football game, neither the contributor nor the institution has any basis for placing a market value on the privilege.

"Application of the substantial benefit presumption of Revenue Ruling 67-246 thus means that the taxpayer cannot avoid loss of the opportunity for a charitable contribution, even if the required contribution is so large that we could all agree that no one in his right mind would make such a contribution, without donative purpose, merely for the privilege of purchasing desirable football tickets.

"We seriously question whether the privilege to purchase football tickets in a preferred location is, as a matter of tax policy, a substantial benefit, when in practical fact it is not possible to place a value on the privilege except possibly by reference to illegal transactions.

"In a very real sense, the privilege here in question is closely akin to the charitable fund-raising event at which a famous personage agrees to appear, in order to lend his reputation to the charitable cause and thus to attract attendance by others.

"Although it is normally possible to place a value on the food and drink that may be provided at the event, what value is placed on the opportunity to meet and converse with a national political, scientific or entertainment figure? We are aware of no suggestion by the Internal Revenue Service that such a benefit must be valued and subtracted from the admission price to the event; and yet, to many individuals, this opportunity for personal or business enhancement may have been the primary factor leading to the decision to attend.

"The presumption of equivalent value of price paid and substantial benefit received is a creature of the government's own making—not through the terms of the International Revenue Code or the regulations issued thereunder after an opportunity for public comment—but through the terms of a revenue ruling addressing itself to certain specific fact situations, none of which involves a case in which the 'bargained-for' privilege is, as here, an intangible benefit not susceptible of valuation by cost analysis or commercial marketplace study.

"Under these narrow circumstances, we believe that social policy favoring public charitable support for educational endeavors is best served by a determination that the privilege in question is insubstantial, and that no presumption of equivalent value will be applied.

"We thus urge the Internal Revenue Service to withdraw Revenue Ruling 84-132. It is not required by anything written in the code or the regulations; it deals with a situation materially different from the examples set forth in Revenue Ruling 67-246; because of the unusual nature of the privilege in question, it places the taxpayer in an impossible position by requiring him to overcome a presumption with no hard data, and because of that impossible position, it effectively destroys this important method of charitable support for college programs.

"3. Recommended alternative ruling. If for some reason the Internal Revenue Service is unwilling to withdraw the ruling, then we believe that at the very least it should be revised in such fashion as not to destroy the opportunity to provide charitable support to the institution in the present context. We believe this could be most effectively accomplished by permitting the institution unilaterally to place a value on the privilege and by permitting this valuation to operate unless it can be demonstrated by the government or the taxpayer that the valuation is improper. Revenue Ruling 67-246 (Example 8) contemplates the legitimacy of this general approach:

"In order to raise funds, W Charity plans a theater party

She was inducted into the Florida Blue Key honor society in 1984.

Doug Flutie

While winning the hearts of college football fans everywhere with his incredible talents, Flutie also has maintained a 2.900 grade-point average in speech communication.

Flutie led Division I-A in passing efficiency and captured all-time NCAA records in both passing and total offense. He also set nine school passing records.

He is the 1984 winner of the Heisman Trophy as the nation's top college football player. Flutie also has earned all-East and all-America recognition, and he was named 1983 New England player of the year by United Press International. He earned MVP honors at the 1983 Liberty Bowl and was selected outstanding offensive player at the 1982 Tangerine Bowl.

Like Carr, Flutie also is a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholar-Athlete, and he participated in the NCAA-ABC Football Promotion Tour.

He serves as Massachusetts spokesperson for Students Against Drunk Driving, and he performs volunteer work with a variety of charities in Boston and throughout New England. Flutie has directed a town youth recreation/instruction program in Waltham, Massachusetts, for two years, and his volunteer work has earned commendation from the governor of Massachusetts.

Mark Traynowicz

A top candidate for the 1984 Outland Trophy, Traynowicz has maintained a 3.360 grade-point average in civil engineering. A consensus all-America, three-year letterman and two-time all-conference lineman, he served as a team cocaptain this season and was a semifinalist for the 1984 Lombardi Award.

Traynowicz also has been selected academic all-conference twice and has maintained a spot on the dean's list at Nebraska. He is active as a youth-group volunteer and in the school's Newman Center.

Sue Walsh

While earning a business administration/accounting degree and maintaining a 3.770 grade-point average at North Carolina, Walsh never lost a backstroke race in NCAA championships competition.

She gained all-America status 27 times and won eight NCAA championships, dominating the backstroke events for four years. She holds the NCAA championships records at distances of 50, 100 and 200 yards, and she has swum nine of the 10 best performances ever recorded at 50 yards. Walsh holds 35 short-course records and has won three indoor and two outdoor national championships in United States Swimming competition. A veteran of international competition, Walsh earned a spot on the 1980 U.S. Olympic squad and has won championships at the Pan American Games and the World Championships.

The holder of 15 individual Atlantic Coast Conference titles, Walsh is only the second woman in 61 years to win the Patterson Medal, given annually to the Tar Heels' outstanding athlete.

Secretary of Phi Beta Kappa, Walsh also was elected to the Phi Eta Sigma, Beta Gamma Sigma and Beta Alpha Psi honoraries.

Media provided women's college basketball data

In its continuing efforts to advance women's intercollegiate athletics, the NCAA has assembled the most comprehensive and authoritative women's basketball press kit available.

The press kit was mailed to 1,730 persons on the NCAA media list, representing 90 percent of the daily newspapers with circulations of more than 40,000 readers, along with newspapers of smaller circulations situated in college towns.

The publication also was mailed to all major television stations, all sports information directors of NCAA member institutions and a special list of persons who have a particular interest in women's college basketball.

James M. Van Valkenburg, NCAA director of statistics, and Regina L. McNeal, assistant statistics coordinator, were primarily responsible for compiling and editing the publication.

Basketball notes, statistics to be resumed January 9

Basketball notes and statistics are not included in this issue of The NCAA News and will not be published in the January 2 issue because of the holiday vacation period at member institutions.

Notes and statistics will be resumed in the January 9 issue of the News.

Series on cable for I-AA teams under discussion

The NCAA Division I-AA Football Committee discussed the possibility of a game-of-the-week series with a national cable network at its December 14 meeting in Charleston, South Carolina.

The committee met with Dave Kempton, sports programming director of Satellite Programming Network, to discuss the possibility of a game-of-the-week series involving Division I-AA, as well as Divisions II and III, teams.

The committee also discussed the size of future play-off fields.

year period and only one member of a conference could participate in each year's tournament. The games would not count toward the playing-season limitation of 28 games per institution.

Following are summaries of the remaining proposals in the playing-and-practice-season category:

Proposal No. 105—Sponsored by the Council, this proposal would clarify the limit on postseason practice in soccer and permit up to six soccer student-athletes from the same institution to serve as counselors in the same summer camp or to participate on the same outside, amateur soccer team.

Proposal No. 106—This is an amendment to No. 105. It would exclude the part of the proposal that allowed only six student-athletes to serve as counselors or participate on an outside, amateur soccer team.

Proposal No. 107—Sponsored by 137 institutions from the Eastern College Athletic Conference, this proposal would clarify that the 19-day practice option in preseason soccer applies to days prior to the first scheduled regular-season game, rather than the permissible scrimmages that may be held prior to the start of the regular season.

Proposal No. 110—Sponsored by nine member institutions, this proposal would specify that the October 15 starting date for preseason basketball practice refers only to on-court practice held at the direction of the institution's coaching staff.

Proposal No. 111—This proposal, sponsored by the High Country Athletic Conference and four other member institutions, would permit women basketball student-athletes to be employed as summer camp counselors without such activity being considered postseason practice in that sport.

Proposal No. 112—Sponsored by the Jersey Athletic Conference, this proposal would permit Division III member institutions to participate in two informal practice scrimmages after the initial practice date in basketball without the scrimmages counting against the permissible number of contests.

Proposal No. 113—To be effective August 1, 1985, this proposal would set new starting dates for the beginning of practice in ice hockey from October 1 to the 18th day prior to the second Friday in October in Division I and October 15 for Divisions II and III. It also would change the beginning date for competition in Division I from October 1 to the second Friday in October and allow a maximum of 38 contests for Division I members. No. 113 is sponsored by the Hockey East and Western Collegiate Hockey Association members.

Proposal No. 114—Sponsored by the ECAC, this proposal would permit the taking of squad pictures in ice hockey and providing medical examinations in ice hockey and basketball at sites other than those regularly used by the institution. It also provides for exceptions for practice at the sites of regularly scheduled competition and in emergency situations.

Proposal No. 116—Another Council proposal, this would permit student-athletes entering Division I-AA institutions for the first term to engage in a four-day (rather than two-day) orientation period prior to the start of preseason football practice.

Proposal No. 117—The Pacific-10 Conference is sponsoring this proposal, which would permit member institutions to begin the football season on the Saturday prior to September 1 in those years in which September 1 falls on a Sunday or Monday.

Proposal No. 118—Sponsored by the Council, this proposal would permit institutions in Alaska or Hawaii to play a 12th football game each season.

Proposal No. 119—This proposal, also sponsored by the Council, would require the use of NCAA playing rules in any sport in which the Association draws the playing rules in all regular-season competition in that sport, with the NCAA sports committees authorized to identify exceptions as appropriate.

Proposal No. 120—Sponsored by the Council, this proposal would require the use of NCAA women's basketball playing rules in all regular-season or postseason contests in that sport.

Editor's Note: This is the seventh in a series of articles covering legislation to be considered at the 79th annual Convention. In the January 2 issue of The NCAA News, the final groupings—eligibility and recruiting—will be considered.

NCAA

consisting of admission to a premiere showing of a motion picture and an after-theater buffet. The advertising material and tickets to the theater party designate $5 as an admission charge and $10 as a gift to W Charity. The established admission charge for premier showings of motion pictures in the locality of $5.

'Notwithstanding W's representations respecting the amount designated as a gift, the specified $10 does not qualify as a deductible charitable contribution because W's allocation fails to take into account the value of admission to the buffet dinner.'

'Inferentially, if W Charity had reasonably valued the admission to the buffet dinner and reduced the stated amount of the 'gift' by this value, the reduced gift would absent abuse have been allowed as a charitable contribution.'

'It is obvious from the discussion earlier in this letter that if this approach to the problem were permitted, the institution will have some difficulty in valuing the preferred-seating privilege.'

'We believe, however, that a valuation of the privilege that appears to take account of the face value of the tickets themselves, the relationship of that face value to the tickets for locations elsewhere in the stadium, the cost of popular limited-seating entertainment events of similar import in the community and the level of demand for preferred seating in the immediate past should be acceptable both to the government and the taxpayer. Although there admittedly would be no basis for determining with precision the correctness of the institution's valuation figure, we believe it can be assumed that educational institutions will act reasonably in this context; in the event of obvious abuse, the matter could be dealt with on a case-by-case basis.

'Use of such an approach, we suggest, is far more fair in the circumstances than the creation of a presumption of no gift that is effectively impossible to overcome. Although we submit that in fact the value of these privileges is minimal and should simply be disregarded for tax purposes, we also submit that an alternate methodology permitting the institution to set the value within a reasonable range would not be inconsistent with Congressional intent in permitting charitable contributions for educational purposes.'

'Such a revised ruling should make clear (a) that it is inapplicable to situations in which tickets in the desirable location can be purchased without contribution to an athletics scholarship program or to some other institutional fund, or perhaps otherwise stated, (b) that it is inapplicable when there is no waiting list for participation in the preferred-seating program (by definition, if no waiting list exists, there are seats available in the preferred location that may be purchased by means other than through the program).

'Under these circumstances, it would seem clear that the 'privilege' is without value, and that in the last analysis, it is the existence of a waiting list for the privilege of purchasing a ticket that gives rise to the entire question of the necessity to value the intangible privilege, and any revised voting should make this fact abundantly clear so as not to call into doubt other charitable programs related to the purchase of tickets for athletics events.'

'4. Code amendment: If the IRS determines, contrary to the considerations set forth above, not to withdraw or appropriately modify the ruling, then it appears that the only alternative for solution to the problem is to obtain an amendment to the code itself. Although the NCAA sincerely hopes that pursuit of such an alternative is not necessary, we have asked our Washington counsel to suggest appropriate legislative language that would accomplish the purpose. They have recommended that subsection 170 (f) of the code be amended by adding new paragraph (8) as follows:

'(8) Valuation of preferred seating tickets for educational-institution-sponsored events—For purposes of this section, in determining the value of a contribution to an educational institution where a privilege to obtain preferred-seating tickets to the educational institution's sponsored events is received by the contributor in exchange for the contribution, such privilege shall be deemed to have no fair market value and the value of such tickets shall be deemed to be equal to the stated price of such tickets.'

'We are certain that this amendment would receive virtually unanimous support among our membership, and it would be of interest to learn the views of the Treasury Department on the appropriateness of the amendment. We are equally certain that the higher education community is not anxious to undertake passage of this amendment by the Congress, and believes that the proper course is for the Internal Revenue Service to withdraw Revenue Ruling 84-132 or, as a less desirable alternative, to amend and clarify it as we have suggest herein.'

'The NCAA appreciates this opportunity to comment on Revenue Ruling 84-132.'

Men's soccer TOM GRIFFITH resigned at Dartmouth for personal reasons. He had been head coach for 11 seasons.

Women's track and field THADDEUS BUGGS selected women's track coach at Grand Valley State, replacing OLE KRISTENSEN, who resigned in November. Buggs has been on the Grand Valley State staff since the fall as assistant football coach.

STAFF

Sports information director ANNE ABICHI selected acting director at St. Cloud State, replacing MIKE SCHROEDER, who resigned to become public relations director for the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States. Abicht has been sports information director for women's athletics at North Dakota State and women's sports publicist for the North Central Conference since 1982.

Assistant trainer DEBORAH SPRINGER named at Grand Valley State, succeeding CHARLES BARFELTZ, who resigned.

NOTABLES

PHIL PINCINE named Northeast region soccer coach of the year. He guided Brown's women's team to a 13-1-1 record and its sixth straight postseason tournament appearance. Pincine will be included on the ballot for National Soccer Coaches Association of America coach of the year honors for women's soccer. Also on the ballot are PETER TUFTS, New Hampshire, New England region coach of the year; CRAIG WEBB, Wisconsin, Midwest/South region coach of the year; DANG PIBULVECH, Colorado College, West region coach of the year. DOUG FLUTIE, winner of the Heisman Trophy, selected recipient of the Maxwell Football Club Award as the outstanding college player in 1984.

CORRECTION

In the Executive Committee story in the December 19 issue of The NCAA News, the policy developed by the committee in the women's softball section was incorrect. The policy should read as follows: "For all championships that do not generate revenue, there will be no air fare, officials must drive and there are no mileage restrictions."

NBC gets Fiesta Bowl contract

The Fiesta Bowl and NBC reached agreement on a contract for the network to broadcast the postseason game for the next four years, including the January 1, 1985, contest between Miami (Florida) and UCLA.

League games won't be televised

Financial restrictions and a lack of advertising revenue have forced cancellation of plans to televise 10 regular-season Southern Conference basketball games.

Conference Commissioner Kenneth G. Germann said the seven-game postseason tournament would be televised.

He said a dramatic rise in production costs for the television package and hardships placed on the athletics budgets of the nine league teams also led to the decision, which was made jointly by the league and Sports Communications, the series' executive producer.

Loyola (Maryland) signs with SPN

Loyola (Maryland) and the Satellite Program Network have reached agreement to broadcast six of the school's men's basketball games.

The network also will televise the ECAC Metro tournament semifinal and championship rounds in March. The tournament will be conducted on the Loyola campus.

College football viewing increases

The cumulative number of television viewers who watched college football through October has been put at 16 million by A. C. Nielsen.

That figure represents an increase of 1.5 million over the cumulative number of viewers who tuned in during the same period in 1983.

CFA series highest for ESPN

The 15 College Football Association games telecast by ESPN in 1984 drew a 4.0 Nielsen average rating, making the series the highest rated ever on the all-sports network.

The previous best draw was for the United States Football League, which had a 3.3 rating in 1983.

West Virginia's 17-14 victory over Penn State October 27 drew the highest single rating at 6.3. It was the Mountaineers' first victory over the Nittany Lions since 1955.

Newsworthy

Reinhardt spends time at home

University of Colorado football player Ed Reinhardt spent Christmas at home as he makes gradual improvement from the brain injury he suffered in a game at the University of Oregon last September.

He was scheduled to spend several days and nights at home in Denver with the assistance of private nurses. Doctors say Reinhardt continues to work on improving his coordination, endurance and communication. He has limited use of the left side of his body, but he still is paralyzed on the right side.

The 6-foot 5-inch tight end collapsed on the sideline moments after catching a pass and being tackled by two defenders. Hours later, he underwent surgery to remove a blood clot from his brain. He was in a coma for two months.

Official suspended for two games

A veteran basketball official for the Big Eight and Missouri Valley Conferences has been suspended for two games because of errors he made in a game between Iowa State University and Drake University December 8.

Johnny Overby, supervisor of officials for both conferences, said he suspended Wayne Unruh of Hutchinson, Kansas, and that similar action would be taken against the game's two other officials—Charles Greene of Oklahoma City and Kent Henry of Springfield, Illinois.

The officials called 49 personal fouls in Iowa State's one-point victory in Ames. Two of those calls were technical fouls against Iowa State coach Johnny Orr.

Team survives crash of airliner

East Tennessee State University basketball players, coaches and school officials escaped serious injury when their chartered Convair 440 airliner crash-landed in Jasper, Alabama, December 16.

The plane, which had transported the Kentucky and Vanderbilt teams the previous two weekends, burned after the forced landing, but the 33 passengers and six crew members escaped without serious injury.

The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating the crash.

The Buccaneers were traveling to a game with Mississippi at Oxford, but the contest was canceled and team members were transported by bus back to the East Tennessee State campus in Johnson City.

"Somehow, basketball doesn't seem very important after that crash," said Barry Dowd, East Tennessee State coach. "You find yourself smelling the roses that you didn't even know were there before."

Air Resort of Carlsbad, California, owned the plane and had leased it to Tennessee Valley Airways. The California company voluntarily has grounded all similar aircraft until an investigation is completed.

Championships Corner

1. The following conferences have been awarded automatic qualification for the 1985 NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship: Atlantic Coast, Atlantic 10, Big East, Big Eight, Big Ten, Gateway Collegiate Athletic, High Country Athletic, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic, Metro Atlantic Athletic, Mid-American Athletic, Mountain West Athletic, Northern Pacific Athletic, Ohio Valley, Southland, Southwest Athletic, Sun Belt and Western Collegiate Athletic Association.

2. The Division I subcommittee of the Women's Tennis Committee will be permitted to seed 16, rather than eight, teams for the championship.

Kentucky has credit course in school's basketball history

University of Kentucky students should not look for instant replays or seas of big blue pennants if they are signed up to take "The History of Kentucky Basketball" next term, the professor says.

Nor should they hope for field trips to observe the Wildcats in action before their customary 22,000-plus fans at Rupp Arena.

"I don't have tickets to the games," conceded professor Humbert Nelli, author of the newly published book, "The Winning Tradition, A History of Kentucky Wildcat Basketball," and teacher of the three-credit history course.

"I think that UK basketball is serious," said Nelli, calling the sport "the most important traditional aspect in the state of Kentucky."

The university's history department offers such one-time courses every term, dealing with topics not covered in regular classes, said department chair E. Rudolph Daniel.

"The only thing that is different about this is that it's basketball and not some other aspect of the university," Daniel said, comparing Nelli's course to courses at other colleges that trace the individual institution's history. "The attention it has gotten suggests that there's something controversial about it."

Nelli, 54, is a specialist in American ethnic and urban history. He has taught at UK since 1967 and has written books about Italian immigrants. A previous one-time course focused on organized crime in America.

But not all students are convinced a legitimate history course can be taught on Kentucky basketball, despite the school's storied five national championships, 35 Southeastern Conference crowns and 1,359 victories since the team was organized in 1903.

The Kentucky Kernel, the school's student daily, debated the merits of the course in its counterpoint section. "They're basketballing us to death," complained senior Melvin Gentry, interviewed at a campus cafeteria.

Nelli says the basketball program has an effect beyond the locker room, an influence on Lexington's economic health and Kentucky's social habits.

Seven of the 14 two-hour seminars are devoted to the teams and games, but Nelli says the class is supposed to make students aware of the effect of organized sports on society.

He had planned to limit enrollment to 15 or 20 students but says all of the 45 people who preregistered for the course probably will be assured places.

The course will require a 15- to 30-page research paper on a topic in college basketball.

Nelli said the course's main purpose is to give students experience in methods of historical research, including use of oral history through the use of guest speakers.

Set fee recommended for NCAA from Division I soccer play-off

A recommendation guaranteeing the NCAA 75 percent of the net receipts of host institutions for the NCAA Division I Men's Soccer Championships will be presented for approval to the NCAA Executive Committee.

Meeting last week in Seattle, the NCAA Men's Soccer Committee proposed that potential host institutions submit a budget indicating expected net receipts from which the guarantee would be determined.

The committee also will recommend for Executive Committee approval using head-to-head results as a major determining factor for team selection in addition to the three standard criteria currently employed, expanding the Division III tournament field to 28 teams from its current 24-team level and moving the Division III championship game date to December 7 or 8 so the game would not be played during the Thanksgiving weekend.

Changes in championships fields and formats must be approved by the Executive Committee. Proposals from the Men's Soccer Committee will be submitted in May.

The proposal for the Division I guarantee came in response to the belief that current suggested permissible-game expenses are not practical for many Division I institutions and the belief that some potential hosts may inflate attendance figures and revenue expectations to gain the home-field advantage for the playoffs. The committee will continue to examine the quality and availability of facilities as the first priority in awarding championships sites.

Divisions II and III will continue using the current budgetary process and maintain on-campus sites through the championship game.

The committee also will recommend returning the Division I championship game to Seattle December 13, 14 or 15, 1985, depending upon availability of the Kingdome. Other Division I championship games will continue to be played at on-campus sites.

The Executive Committee will be asked to approve an increase in the Division III field by four teams, offering four bids to each of the six regions and four at-large bids to the New York, New England, Great Lakes or Pennsylvania-New Jersey regions. No more than six teams would be selected from each region.

The Division III championship-game move was prompted by the current schedule calling for the Thanksgiving weekend date. The committee is proposing moving the game back to the December 7 or 8 date and playing the semifinal games the weekend before Thanksgiving.

In rules changes, the committee voted that if a game is terminated, it is to be replayed in its entirety. Statistics from the terminated game will not count, but red-card violations will be carried over. Also, the tie-breaking procedure used to settle tournament or championship games was changed to require each coach to designate 10 players and a goalkeeper at the end of the overtime period. Any players ejected or injured during the tie-breaker would reduce the number of players equally for both teams.

The committee's official-ball subcommittee voted to accept a licensing proposal from Mitre as part of the official-ball program. The Mitre Multiplex will be the official ball for the men's and women's championships.

The committee also will ask the Executive Committee to approve a change in the annual soccer committee meeting in 1986 to February 7-9. Rather than meeting at the championship-game site, the change would allow the committee to receive more information from the January coaches convention.

An examination of the officials' reports indicated that 25 percent fewer red-card violations were recorded during the 1984 season and that 75 percent fewer games were terminated as a result of fighting. The improvements may have resulted from a stricter red-card penalty requiring a one-game suspension instituted last season.

The committee will mail a rules survey to all coaches next fall.

This year's meeting marked the first time in recent years that representatives from the National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics and the National Soccer Coaches Association of America were present.

Three-day championship play-off is Water Polo Committee's goal

The NCAA Men's Water Polo Championship may have a new look if recommendations by the Men's Water Polo Committee to change the championship format and selection process are approved by the NCAA Executive Committee.

In its December 12-14 meeting in Pacific Grove, California, the Men's Water Polo Committee recommended that the two-day championship be changed to a three-day tournament. It is estimated that little, if any, cost would be added, because teams already arrive at the site in advance and because the championship has not generated enough revenue for per diem payment. Teams no longer would be required to play two games in the same day, and conducting Friday evening and Saturday evening sessions might increase the championship's revenue potential.

Another committee suggestion is the establishment of East and West regional championships, with the Midwest region being eliminated. In addition to the regional winners, the eight-team finals would include automatic qualifiers from the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and the Pacific-10 Conference, one at-large team from each of the two regions and two at-large teams with no restrictions. The current format includes four teams from the West, two from the East, one from the Midwest and one at large.

The new structure would encourage intersectional play and would ensure a more equitable selection process, the committee believes. For example, the existing system guarantees a berth for one Midwest team, where only five institutions sponsor the sport. Regional tournaments would be limited to $750 in expenses, with teams paying their own transportation costs.

In other business, the committee:

- Decided to require teams to submit season report forms prior to tournament selection to guarantee accurate information about teams under consideration.

- Recommended an increase in officials' fees from $30 per game to $35 per game.

- Completed revisions in the 1985 Men's Water Polo Rules, which will be published in March.

- Received a report that Chaminade University and Chapman College would be adding varsity programs in 1985 and that the University of Hawaii and California State University, San Bernardino, were planning to add varsity teams in 1986. The committee will continue its efforts to achieve conversion of existing club teams to varsity status.

contacts, extra expense-paid visits to the Virginia Tech campus and the provision of a load of firewood to the Smith family by a booster of the institution's athletics program.

The Association's eligibility appeals bodies failed to restore Smith's eligibility at Virginia Tech because they determined that the violations resulted in a recruiting advantage to the institution over other members that were properly observing NCAA rules. Each of the involved NCAA committees asked the institution to inform Smith of his opportunity to transfer to a different member institution and have that institution seek a waiver of the normal transfer-residence requirement under the provisions of Bylaw 5-3-(e).

In another court case involving the NCAA, the Third United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia affirmed a lower court's decision to deny Albert "Truck" Butts, a center on La Salle University's basketball team, a preliminary injunction against La Salle and the NCAA.

Butts, who has played the past three seasons for La Salle, was determined by La Salle to be ineligible for further basketball competition. Prior to attending La Salle, he participated in organized basketball competition on behalf of Frederick Military Academy, a preparatory school in Virginia, after his 20th birthday. Accordingly, La Salle charged Butts with one season of collegiate eligibility in the sport of basketball under Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3).

In a hearing in Federal District Court in Philadelphia on Butts' motion for a preliminary injunction to allow him to participate this year, his lawyers argued that Bylaw 5-1-(d)-(3) was never intended to apply to basketball and that Butts did not have notice of the bylaw provision during his final year of competition at the military academy. Butts' lawyers also claimed that the bylaw improperly discriminates on the basis of age and race.

Attorneys for the NCAA presented evidence that the bylaw had been properly adopted by vote of the Division I members and included no exception for the sport of basketball. It also was argued that the intent of the bylaw was to equate competitive experiences after the 20th birthday whether in outside competition or in intercollegiate competition and that the legislation did not discriminate on the basis of age or race.

The Federal District Court denied the motion for preliminary injunction and the case was appealed to the circuit court.
