Davis, Bailey and Roaden named to top positions

John R. Davis, faculty athletics representative at Oregon State University who has served as secretary-treasurer of the NCAA the past two years, was named president of the Association January 16 during closing activities of the 79th annual Convention in Nashville, Tennessee.

Davis succeeds John L. Toner, University of Connecticut director of athletics, who concluded eight years of service in the NCAA administrative structure—four years on the Council, two years as secretary-treasurer and two years as president.

Davis will serve as president for two years. He will be assisted by Wilford S. Bailey, Auburn University faculty athletics representative, who was elected secretary-treasurer.

Other Administrative Committee members who will serve in 1985 are Arliss L. Roaden, Tennessee Technological University president, Division I vice-president; Ade L. Sponberg, North Dakota State University director of athletics, Division II vice-president, and Elizabeth A. Kruczek, Fitchburg State College director of athletics, Division III vice-president.

Davis is director of the Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station at Oregon State, which has 16 academic departments on campus and a network of branch stations throughout Oregon. Prior to directing the experimental station, Davis was head of the agricultural engineering department at Oregon State for four years.

From 1965 to 1971, Davis was dean of the college of engineering and architecture at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Davis, who served on the Council and Governmental Affairs Committee prior to his appointment as secretary-treasurer, was a lecturer at the University of California, Davis, and was a member of the agricultural engineering faculties at Purdue University and Michigan State University.

A native of Minnesota, Davis received bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural engineering from the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities. He later earned a Ph.D. in agricultural engineering from Michigan State.

Bailey was elected to the NCAA Council in 1983 when the Council was restructured to include 44 members. He will serve as secretary-treasurer of the Association for the next two years.

Bailey has been faculty representative at Auburn since 1976 and served as interim president of the university from February 1983 to early 1984.

Since graduating from Auburn in 1942, Bailey has been associated with the university in various capacities for the past 42 years. He was vice-president for academic and administrative affairs from 1966 to 1972, when he took a two-year leave of absence from the university to work with the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland.

Bailey, a professor of pathology and parasitology at Auburn, received his doctor's degree in veterinary medicine from Auburn in 1942 and a master's degree in parasitology from Auburn in 1946. He later earned a doctor of science degree in parasitology from Johns Hopkins University.

In addition to his two years on the Council, Bailey currently is serving as chair of the NCAA Research Committee.

Roaden replaces Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University, as Division I vice-president. Roaden will serve for the next two years. Sponberg and Kruczek, the Divisions II and III vice-presidents, will complete their terms in January 1986.

President of Tennessee Tech since 1974, Roaden has served two years on the Council. He also served on the Special Committee on Division I Criteria.

Prior to coming to Tennessee Tech, Roaden served 12 years at Ohio State as vice-provost, professor and dean. He also has been a professor at Indiana University, Bloomington, and at Auburn.

Roaden earned a bachelor's degree from Carson-Newman College in 1949 and later received a master's degree (1958) and doctorate (1961) from the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

Roaden served as chairman of the Ohio Valley Conference in 1981 and is the Tennessee representative to the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Four new members join Executive Committee

Four new members of the NCAA Executive Committee were appointed by the NCAA Council following the 79th annual Convention in Nashville, Tennessee.

Edward Bozik, director of athletics at the University of Pittsburgh, and Leanne Grotke, acting athletics director at California State University, Fullerton, were elected for full five-year terms. Those selected to fill other vacancies were Col. Harvey Schiller, faculty athletics representative at the U.S. Air Force Academy, and Merrily Dean Baker, director of women's athletics at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities.

The Executive Committee, which is responsible for the championships and financial affairs of the Association, is composed of 14 members, nine of whom are elected by the Council. The remaining five members are the Association's president, secretary-treasurer and three division vice-presidents.

Arliss L. Roaden, president of Tennessee Technological University, is the newly elected Division I vice-president and will replace Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University, on the Executive Committee. Wilford S. Bailey, faculty athletics representative at

Merrily Dean Baker

Col. Harvey Schiller

Auburn University, also joins the committee as secretary-treasurer.

Bozik

Bozik has been director of athletics at Pittsburgh since September 1982 after serving nine years as principal staff assistant for Wesley W. Posvar, president of the university. From 1975 to 1982, he served as the university administrative liaison to the athletics department.

A 1953 graduate of California University of Pennsylvania, Bozik served in the U.S. Air Force from 1953 to 1966, principally as an air crew member in the Strategic Air Command. He was a comptroller and management analysis officer.

In July 1966, Bozik joined the faculty at the U.S. Air Force Academy as an instructor and remained in that capacity until 1971, when he was named chair of the political science department at the academy.

After his stint at Air Force, Bozik was head of the faculty at the National War College in Washington, D.C.

A native of Donora, Pennsylvania, Bozik earned a Ph.D. in political science from Georgetown University.

Baker

Baker has been women's athletics director at Minnesota since September 1982 after a 12-year stint at Princeton University as associate director of athletics.

A native of Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, Baker earned a bachelor's degree in health and physical education from East Stroudsburg University of Pennsylvania and accumulated 12 letters in field hockey, lacrosse, swimming and gymnastics.

Prior to her tour of duty at Princeton, Baker coached and taught at the high school level, coached at St. Lawrence University, and was director of women's athletics at Franklin and Marshall College. She also taught one year in Istanbul, Turkey.

Baker was active in the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, serving as president and vice-president. She also was president of the Eastern AIAW and the New Member institutions in Division I will have different sports sponsorship requirements for membership in that division as a result of actions taken on Proposal No. 43 at the 1985 NCAA Convention in Nashville.

First, Division I members voting together adopted Proposal No. 43-A, to reduce the required minimum number of sports for men and for women in that division from eight to six for each sex. The new legislation will be effective September 1, 1986.

Then, the members of Division I-A defeated Proposal No. 43-B, which would have effected the same reduction for Division I-A classification. The Division I-A members thus retained the eight-sport requirement in that subdivision.

Finally, members of Division I-AA adopted No. 43-C, reducing from eight to six the required number of sports for each sex in order to be classified in that subdivision.

As a result, Division I-A members will retain the "eight-and-eight" mini-

College basketball should have a Division I-AA

By Jack Chevalier
Wilmington News-Journal

There is nothing wrong with the Siena Invitational Tournament, a nine-year-old holiday basketball event that is efficiently run and highly competitive.

Actually, it is refreshing to watch Delaware, Fairleigh Dickinson and Howard University come to this little suburb of Albany to trade baskets with host Siena College before crowds of 2,750. I even got to see a Franciscan monk puffing on a cigar in the gymnasium lobby.

But this is not big-time college basketball by any means. We are far from the vastness of Kentucky's Rupp Arena, the intensity of Syracuse's Carrier Dome, the lunacy of Duke's Cameron Indoor Stadium.

This is a different world. It presents striking evidence that the time has come for the NCAA to split its Division I men's basketball teams into two divisions and conduct separate tournaments.

Siena vs. Howard was an interesting, logical match-up for this holiday championship one Saturday night. But Siena vs. Georgetown or DePaul or Indiana in an NCAA tournament contest would be a one-sided joke—an unsuitable climax to a good season and an embarrassment to the NCAA.

There are 275 schools playing basketball in Division I. That's far too many. There is a clear distinction between the big-timers and the middle-sized pretenders, and it is up to the coaches, athletics directors and NCAA officials to split the field and create a new Division I-AA basketball tourney.

The following conferences should remain in Division I:

Atlantic Coast, Atlantic 10, Big East, Big Eight, Big Ten, Metro Atlantic, Metro, Midwestern City, Missouri Valley, Pacific 10, Southeast, Southwest, Sun Belt and Western Athletic.

Those 14 leagues plus five major independents—Notre Dame, DePaul, Dayton, Marquette and Southwest Louisiana—would provide a total of 129 qualified teams for the Division I tournament.

The other 146 teams belong in Division I-AA, playing for a national championship of their own.

I polled the four coaches at the Siena Invitational—all from different conferences—and found them evenly divided on the subject.

"I'm all for it," said A.B. Williamson, who has been coaching Howard for 12 years. "If the NCAA would put some money in it, about $100,000 or $150,000, and get it televised, it would be acceptable."

Williamson agreed that the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, whose members include Howard and Delaware State, was overthe pot of gold.

"Our conference (ECAC Metro) has an automatic berth in the 64-team tournament. That means $75,000 to the team that goes and $75,000 more for the rest of the conference to divide evenly. But the prestige means more than the money."

All four coaches agreed that a shot at the big event was a valuable recruiting tool.

"It's definitely a selling point," said Siena coach John Griffin. "And having a shot at the NCAAs is what motivates us all year. I'd be opposed to a Division I-AA. I think it would be ignored. Who follows Division I-AA in football? How many people go to that tournament?"

"Who would have heard of James Madison or Robert Morris if they hadn't played in the big tournament? How about Virginia Commonwealth? That's why more and more teams are moving up to Division I every year and the tournament now has 64 teams."

"To me, starting a Division I-AA would be a step backward, putting us where we were 10 years ago. It would be like being in Division II."

Griffin's arguments were sound, even though he should know that Montana State beat Louisiana Tech for the I-AA football championship. I am sure that the coaching ranks include many other dreamers (masochists?) who would agree with him.

But I still believe that the champions of 16 middle-sized conferences—including the East Coast, MEAC, ECAC and Ivy League—deserve a tournament of their own. They should end their seasons with a chance for a national title, not with a spanking at the hands of a big-time opponent.

Coach Williamson of Howard had the best solution: give the new tournament a fancy name, put some money in it and get it on television. If Division I-AA had some prestige, all the coaches would throw their support to it.

Columnary Craft

matched in the current NCAA tournament. The MEAC champion (North Carolina A&T in recent years) is usually eliminated in an NCAA preliminary round.

"The big teams probably would vote for it, too," said Delaware coach Ron Rainey. "I think it's a good idea."

"What everybody wants at the end of the season is to run off the court with their fingers in the air, saying, 'We're Number One.' What difference does it make if it's Division I or I-AA?"

It would make a large difference to Fairleigh Dickinson coach Tom Green.

"I can't stand the idea of being called Division I-AA," he said. "I'm definitely opposed. The way it is now gives us one shot at

Too much ado about athletics abuses

To the Editor:

Recently, I listened to an interview on television involving President Edward Jennings of Ohio State, ex-coach Pepper Rodgers and coach Richard "Digger" Phelps of Notre Dame. It was rather interesting, not from what was said, but from the general tone of unrealistic solutions to alleged abuses in recruiting in Division I football and basketball.

We have a marvelous mechanism in the form of the NCAA to curb these abuses, if not to entirely stamp them out. Every now and then, we find coaches, either with conference affiliation or as independents, who point accusatory fingers at their colleagues, either in their own conference or at independents or whomever they desire. Sometimes, I have the feeling they are more concerned with the ensuing media coverage rather than carrying out their self-appointed mission of the "hero in shining armor who has the solution for all problems." I wish they would adopt a policy of "Actus non Verbus."

If sincerity and genuine concern over stamping out these alleged abuses motivate these allegations, why not use the NCAA as the correction agency by doing the following:

1. Furnish names of the violators and the names of the schools and the conference of the violator to the NCAA.
2. Furnish concrete and accurate documentation, which will stand up in the ensuing litigation.
3. Back off and stay out of the ego-serving media coverage and allow the NCAA to do its job.

Coach Phelps' solution to alleged under-table payments is to give student-athletes a stipend of $1,000 a year as compensation for their not being able to work. As Phelps says, the athletes cannot work during the acceptable NCAA period of time during the academic year because of bowl games, tournaments, spring practice and early return to school in August for preseason practice, which mitigates against the athletes' time to earn money by working in the summer to cover expenses other than those covered by their grants-in-aid.

The athletes are required, or perhaps I should say volunteer, for a year-round weight-training program, which further cuts into their free time. All of this is the overemphasis of athletics, which eventually causes these alleged abuses. How about considering these options:

1. Eliminate spring practices, which will give the student-athletes time to relax and seek employment for the coming summer vacation and also give them the much-needed time to study and even make up missed assignments (academic), which may have occurred during the hectic football or basketball season.

The argument against this, which some coaches will make, is that this time is needed to prepare for the coming season to achieve a greater degree of excellence. Why? If all schools are governed by a "no spring practice" regulation, the competition will be equitable. Football, like all our sports, is supposed to be an educational experience without spring practice. Or is the spring practice really geared for the junior college transfers who come in at midyear? Or is it a means to justify large coaching staffs with the responsibility of spring practice?

2. Reduce the number of allowable football games and start the playing season one or two weeks later than the current policy. This would eliminate the necessity of having to cut so deeply into August when the student-athlete could be gainfully employed.

I find it totally unacceptable to believe that these alleged abuses cannot be cleared up. A firm commitment on the parts of chief executives, athletics directors and coaches can make it happen.

Spring football practice

As set forth in Bylaw 3-4-(a), O.I.s 310, 311, 312 and 313, postseason football practice for Divisions I and II member institutions shall be limited to 20 sessions in a period of 36 calendar days (vacation and examination days excluded). Postseason football practice for members of Division III is prohibited. Postseason practice is any practice or instruction in football held after the last game of the institution's playing season and before the first day of the practice season for the next ensuing year, except as otherwise provided in O.I.s 311 and 313. "Calendar days," as the term applies to the period within which postseason football practice must fall, are consecutive days, omitting vacation and examination days officially announced on the institution's calendar. Spring football practice sessions conducted during vacation periods may not be of longer duration than those normally held during days when academic classes are in session.

Off-season conditioning classes

As set forth in O.I.s 304, 305 and 306, regular physical-education classes, with or without credit, that are listed in the institution's catalog and open to all students shall not be construed to be practice activity. In addition, it is permissible for a member of the athletics staff (including a football coach) to conduct a physical-education class for students of the institution, provided attendance of any intercollegiate football players shall be on a voluntary basis, the classes are open to any student of the institution, and the class hours and programs have been publicized in appropriate publications and/or on the proper bulletin boards of the institution and sessions shall be limited to a total of eight hours per week.

In addition, no football equipment may be used, including football shoes; teaching of football fundamentals or techniques shall be prohibited; no instruction in football shall be permitted (this prohibition includes walking through offensive or defensive plays); showing of football movies for instruction shall be prohibited, and blocking dummies, machines, sleds and like equipment shall not be used; contact and combative activities or drills of any kind shall be prohibited; class or activity sessions shall be conducted only in areas in which normal physical-education activities or student-recreation courses are conducted, and organization of participants in the class or program, as well as any activities conducted therein, based upon play or position(s) or offensive and defensive units shall be prohibited.

Financial aid—Convention Proposal Nos. 52, 53 and 55

At the recent NCAA Convention, Proposal No. 52 was adopted to amend Constitution 3-4-(b) to permit a maximum of five years of financial aid to an undergraduate student-athlete in a six-year period. Under this legislation, financial aid may be awarded for any term during which a student-athlete is in regular attendance as an undergraduate with eligibility remaining under Bylaw 4-1 or within six years after initial enrollment in a collegiate institution, provided the student does not receive such aid for more than five years during that period and provided the student-athlete otherwise complies with NCAA legislation governing financial aid.

Proposal No. 53 amending Constitution 3-4-(g) was adopted to specify that a member institution is required to provide notice of renewal or nonrenewal of financial aid only to those student-athletes who have remaining eligibility under Bylaw 4-1 or Constitution 3-3-(a)-(3) to compete in intercollegiate athletics.

Proposal No. 55 was amended by Proposal No. 55-1 and adopted to add a new subparagraph (4) to Constitution 3-4-(a) to permit a student-athlete to receive an established financial aid award on the basis of the recipient's past performance, including athletics participation, provided the award is dispersed through the recipient's institution for educational expenses; the recipient's choice of institutions is not restricted by the donor; the donor and awarding organization or individual are not representatives of the athletics interests or an athletics booster group of a member institution; the value of the award shall not exceed the sum of $1,000 for an academic year and is provided to the recipient on only one occasion; and provided that if the recipient is recruited, the award is considered "financial aid" per O.I. 600, the recipient is considered a "countable player" per Bylaw 6-3 and the amount is applied to the maximum awards limitation of Bylaw 6 for the sport in question.

The adoption of Proposal No. 55, as amended, could permit the immediate receipt of established scholarship aid from groups such as community service clubs and other organizations unrelated to a particular institution even though the recipient's athletics participation is a criterion for the award.

Please note that all three proposals became effective with the adjournment of the Convention January 16, 1985.

Women's championship proposed for Division III lacrosse in 1985

The approval of Proposal No. 93 at the annual NCAA Convention has prompted recommendation of a women's lacrosse championship double-header beginning in 1985.

Proposal No. 93 amended Bylaw 5-6 to create a National Collegiate Division III Women's Lacrosse Championship. The NCAA Women's Lacrosse Committee has submitted a plan for administration of the new championship, which will be considered by the Administrative Committee in a January 31 telephone conference.

The plan calls for the Division III title game to be played at the University of Pennsylvania Sunday, May 19, in conjunction with the Division I women's championship contest.

The NCAA Executive Committee already has approved field sizes for both Division I (four) and Division III (eight). If approved by the Administrative Committee, Division I semifinals will be played at on-campus sites either Saturday or Sunday, May 11 or 12.

The Division III tournament would include first-round games at on-campus sites Wednesday, May 8, and semifinals, also on campus, either

May 11 or 12. The two finalists in each division would travel to Pennsylvania for their respective championship games.

In selecting on-campus sites, the committee would utilize the following tie-breaking criteria (not in preferential order) if the selection criteria contained in Executive Regulation 1-13-(b)-(3) determine two institutions to be nearly equal: management capability and previous experience of the host institution with other major events, availability of officials in proximity to the site, and seeding.

Under the committee's plan, all four teams would be selected at large for the Division I tournament. Division I regions would be reduced from four to three (New England, Mid-Atlantic and South), inasmuch as the West region now has only one Division I team. Automatic qualification will not be awarded to any conference, since only four teams will participate, and none of the three regions would be guaranteed representation in the championship.

In establishing the Division III championship, the committee recommended that the nation be divided into five regions: New England (three Division II and 14 Division III institutions represented), Northeast (zero and 18), Pennsylvania (eight and 11), South (three and 14) and West (none and seven).

At least one team would be selected from each region, with the remaining three teams to be selected at-large. Believing that more time for evaluation was needed, the committee recommended that automatic qualification not be awarded to any conference for this tournament in 1985.

The committee has requested that the number of officials and their fees for each tournament be set to include three field officials, each receiving $75 for preliminary games and $100 for the championship game, and one table official to receive $30 and $35 for preliminaries and the championship, respectively.

In planning the administration of the Divisions I and III championships, the committee noted that Division II institutions soon will receive forms on which they must declare their intention to participate in Division I or III in accordance with Bylaw 10-6-(c).

mums for men and women, while the remainder of Division I will be required to sponsor six for men and six for women.

In accordance with Bylaw 11-1-(b), and as announced by the NCAA Administrative Committee at the Convention, all Division I member institutions must sponsor eight varsity intercollegiate sports for men (or mixed teams) and six varsity intercollegiate sports for women during the 1985-86 academic year.

Beginning with the 1986-87 academic year, the sponsorship requirement for all members of Division I except those classified in Division I-A will be six for men's or mixed teams (including football if classified in Division I-AA) and six for women's teams. But in Division I-A, the minimum sports sponsorship requirements beginning in 1986-87 will be eight sports for each sex (including football in the men's program).

The Administrative Committee's action—affirmed by the full Council in its post-Convention meeting in Nashville—was based on an interpretation of Bylaw 11-1-(f)-(1) to reflect the intent of the Division I-A membership in defeating Proposal No. 43-B. Bylaw 11-1-(f)-(1) requires Division I-A members to sponsor a minimum of eight varsity intercollegiate sports, with such sponsorship based on the provisions of Bylaw 11-4.

While Bylaw 11-1-(f)-(1) does not refer specifically to male or female teams, Bylaw 11-4 was amended by Proposal No. 69 at the 1985 Convention to establish specific minimum requirements for each sport utilized to meet the sports sponsorship criteria for women as well as men. Accordingly, the Administrative Committee determined that Bylaw 11-1-(f)-(1) should be interpreted to require the sponsorship of a minimum of eight sports for each sex in Division I-A.

Because the gradual increase in the required minimum number of sports for women's programs at all Division I members that currently is set forth in Bylaw 11-1-(b) was deleted, effective September 1, 1986, by adoption of No. 43-A, that graduated increase will remain in effect only through the 1985-86 academic year. At the end of that time, the requirement will increase immediately to eight sports for women in Division I-A and will remain at six women's sports for all other Division I members.

In their April meeting, members of the Division I Steering Committee and the Council will review possible legislative proposals to reinstate the gradual-increase provisions for women in Division I-A. Such an amendment could be acted upon at either the 1985 Division I-A midyear legislative meeting or the 1986 Convention, well before the September 1, 1986, effective date of the changes approved at the Convention this month.

"I didn't miss game days and gagging when I brush my teeth in the morning. I didn't miss the late hours and the late meetings. I played golf up until the start of school. I had never done that before. I even raked leaves."

"It has been evident from its inception over 10 years ago and continuing through the present that the women's program is an essential ingredient in our overall program.

"We will continue to upgrade all of our programs and facilities and hope that our scholarship resources improve to a point where we will be second to none."

John Thompson, head men's basketball coach

"I feel I am not being fair to any athlete to permit him to stay here if he is not progressing toward a degree. If he is not progressing toward a degree, the relationship should be terminated, or he should be encouraged to spend more time with his studies.

"I don't want somebody to play here for four years while the school uses his ability to play, and then he does not get a degree."

Hugh Cunningham, professor of journalism

University of Florida

The Washington Post

"It is unrealistic to expect football and basketball players—and perhaps other athletes—to meet high academic standards during their season of activity. Their practice, travel and thinking time (required for truly competitive participation) simply will not allow it.

"Therefore, their academic burdens should be lessened, consistent with other academic programs. Here's how:

"Permit athletes to enroll during the semester of seasonal participation at a greatly reduced academic load, or for no credit at all. This is now done in many fields—engineering work-study programs, journalism internships, etc.

"As in those fields, athletics participation should be considered professional development. Indeed, athletic skill development is professional, even though a relatively small number of college athletes succeed as pros. An ever-increasing number enter coaching, athletics and recreation administration, or take business jobs that call directly on their athletics skills or knowledge...."

Harshman proves nice guys don't finish last

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Like DePaul's Ray Meyer a year ago, Washington's 67-year-old Marv Harshman is enjoying a royal final season as the latest grand old man of college basketball coaching.

Schools and fans are giving him gifts, the media are writing and saying nice things about him, and fellow coaches are calling him a nice guy, honest and a coach's coach. And why not? The 40-season veteran has another contender for the Pacific-10 Conference championship, and he is the winningest active coach in the land in terms of total victories.

He started the season with 620 career victories—seventh on the all-time Division I list behind the 667 by John Wooden of UCLA—and likely will finish above 640 with a chance at 650. He is the sentimental favorite to reach the Final Four.

"I've been a lucky man," Harshman told Nick Bertram of the Portland Oregonian. "I've lived a good lifestyle. I've worked with good people, and I've been able to teach. And I've never had to apply for a job in my life... In the eighth grade, they asked you what you wanted to be, and I guess I wrote down 'coach.' My mom found the paper, but I don't remember doing it."

Harshman has been outspoken for many years about recruiting abuses, often naming names. He has had plenty of phone calls and letters from coaches telling him to shut his mouth. He says he is from the old school of coaches, which he calls a vanishing breed.

"There aren't many of us left," he says. "There were Rupp (Adolph, at Kentucky), Iba (Hank, at Oklahoma State), and Eddie Hickey (St. Louis, Creighton and Marquette). It was fairly common then to stay a whole lifetime in coaching. There was a greater loyalty between coaches and universities that went both ways. I don't think too many people shopped around."

Marv Harshman

Other milestones

Another coach from the old school is Oregon State's 65-year-old Ralph Miller, who is closing in on 600 career victories at the four-year college level if you do count 15 victories several years ago forfeited by NCAA Council action in the Lonnie Shelton case. Miller and Harshman tangled verbally over that one, although Harshman told Steve Richardson of the Kansas City Star, "We have actually laughed about it since."

Two more Division I coaches have reached 500 career victories since the season started—Tennessee State's Ed Martin before his resignation and Old Dominion's Paul Webb. Maryland's Lefty Driesell started the season with 480 and likely will reach 500 before season's end.

Indiana's Bobby Knight and Alcorn State's Davey Whitney both have surpassed 400 career victories since the season started. By the way, Knight at 44 is the youngest Division I head coach ever to reach 400.

Gay Hemphill, Texas junior, is among the leaders in field-goal percentage in Division I

South Carolina's Bill Foster is closing in on 400, and Nevada-Las Vegas' Jerry Tarkanian probably will reach that figure by the end of the season, whether or not you count six NCAA tournament victories at Long Beach State voided by action of the NCAA Executive Committee several years ago.

Iowa State's Johnny Orr, Pittsburgh's Roy Chipman and Murray State's Ron Greene all have reached 300 since the start of the season; Mississippi State's Bob Boyd needed only one victory entering Wednesday night's game with Tennessee and Notre Dame's Richard "Digger" Phelps, who started the season with 282, likely will make it by the end of the season.

Greene's 300th, reports SID Craig Bohnert, was also Murray State's 900th of all time. "When I began coaching, I never thought about 300 wins or any other goals," Greene said. "I thought mainly of winning championships. With those came the numbers."

Quotes of the week

Texas-Arlington men's coach Bob "Snake" LeGrand always has a few words for the officials. At Oklahoma State, the arena was dark for 30 minutes because of a power failure. During the blackout, LeGrand chided one of the officials: "This is a message from God, because you've been gyping us." Later that week, LeGrand was questioning a call to an official near his bench. The official explained that another official had made the call, so LeGrand replied: "Well, rotate him over here so I can fuss at him." (Jim Patterson, Texas-Arlington SID)

Southern California men's coach Stan Morrison on the fact that his Trojans will play three home games at Cal State Dominguez Hills because the Los Angeles Sports Arena is not available (after playing twice at the Forum last year and at numerous small gyms in the area over the years for the same reason): "The only team that has played more places than us is the Harlem Globetrotters." (Nancy Mazmanian, Southern California assistant SID)

Fresno State men's coach Boyd Grant after his team defeated San Jose State for a 2-0 start in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association: "Love it. We'd like to see it continue. We'd like to go undefeated, but with all the good teams in our conference, why, that's probably like trying to sprinkle yourself with fairy dust." (Scott Johnson, Fresno State SID)

The James Madison women's team has been nationally ranked in scoring defense this season, and head coach Shelia Moorman is quick to acknowledge its defensive prowess. As she was rushing through the Washington D.C., National Airport with assistant coach Andy Morrison, they were approached by a political activist sporting promotional buttons and handing out flyers.

Alfredrick Hughes, Loyola (Illinois) senior ranks among the leading scorers in Division I

"Good morning, ladies. Are you for a strong defense?" he asked preparatory to offering his flyers. Without breaking stride, Moorman replied, "Yes, we are. We believe in holding all our opponents to under 60 points." (Milla Sue Wisecarver, James Madison women's SID)

Women's college basketball has evolved into a sport as interesting to watch as it is to play, and no one is more convinced than Wake Forest sophomore guard Amy Privette.

"A lot of my friends do look at women's basketball as the game they saw back in junior high where there were nothing but jump balls," she told Tucker Mitchell of the Winston-Salem Journal. "But then, after they come to a game here, they say, 'Wow, I had no idea women's basketball could be as exciting as that.' I'm prejudiced, of course, but I think a lot of people are missing out by not watching women's games. They at least should give it a try." (Bert Woodard, Wake Forest assistant SID)

Southwest Missouri State women's head coach Valerie Goodwin would have been satisfied with a little less excitement during the first week of Gateway Conference play. After her team lost to Illinois State, 84-37, and defeated Indiana State, 70-65 in overtime, playing both games on the road, Goodwin sighed, "The week was like a roller coaster. At times, we felt like regurgitating; and at other times, we felt like giggling." (Jeff Sernick, Southwest Missouri women's SID)

The Iowa women's team was recently hampered by bouts with the flu; as many as five players had it at one time. Asked about the status of her team after a sloppy 62-41 victory over Nebraska, head coach Vivian Stringer admitted, though her team was still slowed by illness, "we have a lot of healthy kids who are playing sick." (Rick Klatt, Iowa women's SID)

The Wagner women's team's first overnight trip of the season was a journey to Albany, New York, where they stayed prior to playing a game against Siena in nearby Loudonville. Upon arriving, the entire group—players, coaches and SID—went out to dinner. While waiting for the meal to be served, cocaptain Cindy Bonforte, seated at one end of the long rectangular table facing head coach Gela Mazella at the other end, speculated, "Gee, this must be what it's like at the Paterno household every night." Cocaptain Grace Paterno, one of 11 children, laughed. "It sure is," she agreed. "During holiday get-togethers, it's worse. There are so many around the dinner table, I never see who's seated at the other end." (Renata Jacynicz, Wagner assistant SID)

Ron Abernathy, Louisiana State recruiting coordinator, learned about starting point guard Dennis Brown from Ron's godmother. Said Ms. Venita Patterson: "I kept after Ron to come out and look at Dennis, but you know how godsons are. They think you might know something about science and chemistry (she is a teacher at Woodlawn High in Baton Rouge), but what do you know about basketball?" Said Abernathy: "She was right. I saw him play in the first game of his junior season and I couldn't believe how good he was." (Jimmy Hyams, Louisiana State assistant SID)

Can you top these?

Annette Alverson, a 5-7 junior guard for Ohio Northern, provided some real excitement in a January 11 game against Northern Kentucky. Northern Kentucky was leading, 67-65, in the closing seconds of regulation when Alverson grabbed the rebound of a missed Northern Kentucky free throw and heaved the ball 79 feet and 10 inches. The shot was good, touching only the net and sending the game into overtime. Though Ohio Northern subsequently lost the game, the fans went home with something to remember. Asked about the shot, head coach Gayle Lauth said, "Obviously we've been having her shoot from too close in." (Ron Kuhlman, Ohio Northern SID)

Basketball notes

Reserve guard Debra Brock of Southeastern Louisiana was pressed into service during the Christmas break to sing the national anthem before a women's game at which the pep band was not present. Her a cappella rendition was greeted with such enthusiasm from the fans that Brock has continued to sing prior to each of the Lady Lions' home games, and performed the anthem when the Southeastern men hosted Northeast Louisiana. The result? The Lady Lions are undefeated at home, and the men broke a four-game losing streak when they defeated Northeast, 71-68. (Ward Grant, Southeastern Louisiana assistant SID)

San Diego State sophomore Tina Hutchinson established a streak of 32 consecutive free throws, beginning November 24 against West Texas State and ending January 4 when she missed her second attempt against Hardin-Simmons. (John Rosenthal, San Diego State SID)

Northwestern senior forward Anucha Brown scored 30 or more points in six consecutive games this season. Has any college woman player done that? (Tom Kroeschell, Northwestern assistant SID)

The New Mexico State men's team attempted an incredible 30 three-point field goals last Saturday, January 19, and made 10 (the three-point circle is 19 feet, 9 inches from the basket). The Aggies were 10-for-27 from two-point range. Seven of the nine New Mexico State players attempted at least two three-pointers, led by Gilbert Wilburn, who was 4-for-8. The opponent, Fresno State, tried only one three-pointer, missed it, but won the game, 70-59. (Dennis Farrell, Pacific Coast Athletic Associ- ation SID)

The smallest starting five in Division I men's basketball? Drexel is claiming that title. The Dragon starters are 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, 6-0 and 6-0 for an average of 6 feet, 1.8 inches per man. Can anyone top (or get under) this? (Bob McComas, Drexel SID)

What a difference a week makes. After losing, 46-77, to Purdue on a neutral court at El Paso, Texas, Mississippi State came back six days later to take an unbelievable lead of 59-32 with 6:49 left over Alabama. State won, 71-67, despite a 27-point game by Alabama guard Mark Gottfried (son of South Alabama Athletics Director Joe Gottfried and nephew of Kansas head football coach Mike Gottfried) for its first victory at Tuscaloosa since 1969. (Bo Carter, Mississippi State SID)

After coaching 867 consecutive college basketball games, Florida coach Norm Sloan missed a game for the first time in his career. He was forced to stay home with pneumonia. Assistant Monte Towe took over and the Gators beat Mississippi, 82-64. (Chris Cameron, Florida associate SID)

Scholar athletes

He is a systems engineering student with a 3.700 grade-point average (out of 4.000) at the U.S. Naval Academy. He did not play high school basketball until his senior year, yet he has a chance to finish in the top 10 nationally in three Division I categories—scoring, rebounding and field-goal percentage. He is 6-11 David Robinson, who helped Navy to a 24-8 season in 1984 and has led an 11-2 start this year. If that is not enough, he is only a sophomore. Navy coach Paul Evans says his only concern is keeping Robinson interested in basketball: "In the basement of his home, he once built his own computer in two weeks. He's into so many things. The biggest thing I'm worried about is his getting bored with it. And he does get bored. Last year, he had an A going in one class for eight weeks. Next thing you know, I'm getting a report that he's sleeping."

Now many people are wondering out loud whether Robinson will transfer someplace where a five-year military commitment would not interfere with a pro basketball career. Robinson finds such talk amusing. "I've got so many things to work on, it's not even a serious thought," he told Michael Wilbon of The Washington Post. "I haven't really thought about transferring, because if nobody had asked me, I never would have thought about it. I don't understand this big deal about my playing... when I watch myself on film, it just isn't that thrilling... If I transferred, I'd be giving up my Naval Academy degree, which means a lot to me. I'm pretty happy here." (Tom Bates, Navy SID)

Two ex-Navy players have found their way to the Illinois-Chicago team. Willie Jett is sitting out this season to fulfill the rules, while Dick Knar is now starting. Both have not forgotten the academic training they received at Navy. Jett had a 4.500 grade-point average on a 5.000 scale his first quarter, while Knar now has an accumulative 4.400. (Jim Schmidt, Illinois-Chicago SID)

Last semester, 14 of the 16 members of the DePauw varsity men's team had grade-point averages above 3.000 on a 4.000 scale. (Joe Owens, DePauw SID)

Gary Roper, a 6-7 senior forward for North Carolina who is majoring in chemistry and headed for medical school, has been inducted into Phi Beta Kappa, the national scholastic honorary society. (Rick Brewer, North Carolina SID)

Only 5-9 but a first team academic all-America and an outstanding ball handler and outside shooter for Purdue, senior Steve Reid is a candidate for the Naismith Award, presented annually to the nation's top player. (See Harshman, page 12)

Council Summary

Following is a listing of all actions taken by the NCAA Council in its January 11-14 (1984 Council) meeting in Nashville. Actions dealing with legislation at the 1985 Convention are excluded inasmuch as they are part of the record of that Convention.

Interpretations

All new or revised interpretations approved by the Council will appear in The NCAA News, which constitutes official circularization per Constitution 6-2.

In addition to those, the Council:

Approved a Division I Steering Committee decision to specify that to qualify for appointment as a graduate assistant coach under Bylaw 7-1-(h), the student must be enrolled as a graduate student in a classification that qualifies the student for appointment as a graduate assistant under the policies of the institution, rather than in a specific graduate degree program.

Membership

The Division II Steering Committee granted requests for geographical waivers per Bylaw 11-2-(g) to the Colorado School of Mines, Metropolitan State College and Winona State University.

Infractions

Denied an appeal by the University of Florida of certain findings and penalties proposed by the Committee on Infractions; voted to express publicly the Council's support of the actions taken by current university officials, particularly the "courageous actions" of President Marshall M. Criser, noting that the infractions committee's decision to suspend the third year of the institution's probation and one year of the television and postseason sanctions was an expression of appreciation for the decisive actions of the president.

Committee Reports

Professional Sports Liaison: Agreed to consider in April legislation to expand the committee's membership to include representatives of the American Football Coaches Association and the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Approved participation by members of the Ice Hockey Committee and the NCAA staff in discussions with representatives of the National and Canadian Major Junior A Hockey Leagues to explore possible circumstances in which participation in Canadian Major Junior A hockey would not jeopardize remaining eligibility at NCAA member institutions.

Division I Steering Committee: Placed on a future agenda consideration of the feasibility of an exception procedure through which relief could be provided to a student disadvantaged by a mistake made by a member institution.

Heard appeals by La Salle University and the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, regarding earlier decisions of the Administrative Committee; voted to sustain the Administrative Committee in both instances.

Division II Steering Committee: Requested that legislation be developed for consideration in April to provide exceptions for illness or injury in the Division II five-year eligibility rule.

Division III Steering Committee: Agreed with Division II regarding an exception to the division's five-year eligibility rule for illness or injury.

Voted to utilize a form to be signed by the financial aid officer in the certification of compliance procedure.

The Council also received the reports of the Executive Committee (including a document regarding funding decisions), the Governmental Affairs Committee and the Special Committee on Women's Interests.

Courtney Leishman's coaching at BYU is akin to having a six-person staff

Courtney Leishman, Brigham Young University head women's basketball coach, is surrounded by familiar faces, and not just those in Cougar uniforms.

Leishman's family is part of the coach's support crew. Wife Pat travels with the team, keeping the time chart among other responsibilities; daughters Kathy Lee and Jearlene keep the rest of the statistics during home games, while sons Michael and Richard record assists as part-time official scorekeeper and ball boy, respectively.

The Leishmans have been a basketball team since 1977, when Courtney took over the women's team. He had been an assistant with the men's program.

"Two days before school started eight years ago, I was called and asked to help with the women's program," Leishman said. "I thought they would want me to go scout a team or a player for them. They told me they wanted me to take over the program."

"At first I said no. I had all of the Division I basketball pressure I wanted. My wife said no, because life had been too pleasant the past year. I had finished my doctorate and things were too comfortable."

A little more thought and the fact that "they had some nice girls on the team" prompted Leishman to consider the job for a year—on one condition.

"I thought that maybe I would try it for a year, but I told them I didn't want to travel with 10 girls and not have someone along with me who couldn't go all the places where the girls could go," Leishman recalled. "I wanted to train my wife to travel with me. The administration gave me all the concessions I wanted. I thought that, after a year, if I didn't feel good about it, I would step out."

A 13-0 conference record his first year was only part of the reason Leishman stayed with the program.

"It was one of the most enjoyable years I've had in coaching. Girls really appreciate things," he said.

In addition, he had surrounded himself with a crew he knew to be competent.

Clockwise, from top, are Michael, Kathy Lee, Courtney, Pat, Jearlene and Richard

"My daughters were both students here. I was very fussy about how I wanted stats kept, and they knew how to do it because they both knew the game," he said. "I told our SID people and they didn't have anyone to do the stats. That's the way this thing started. The boys both started out as ball boys."

A 23-year coaching veteran on both the prep and collegiate levels, Leishman's past eight seasons have resulted in a 145-60 overall record, including the Cougars' first-ever appearance in the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship last season.

His daughters graduated from BYU but maintain their ties to the team both on and off the court.

"If any gals on the team need help with their studies, it's not unusual for me to come home at night and find two or three of my basketball players getting some help," Leishman said.

His son Richard does not make it to all the games these days because he is playing on his high school junior-varsity team.

"Some days when he plays, we play," Leishman said. "But the kids have been great; they're all involved in the team. They're all interested in what's going on."

That is not surprising for a family that has been around basketball for most of their individual lives.

"The first word my oldest daughter ever learned was 'ball,'" Leishman said.

Baker replaces Barbara B. Hollmann, associate director of athletics at the University of Montana. The addition of Roaden, who represents a Division I-AA institution, as Division I vice-president increased to three the I-AA members on the Executive Committee, and the NCAA constitution limits I-AA representatives on the committee to two, necessitating the replacement of one I-AA committee member. Baker will serve the remaining two years of Hollman's term.

Schiller

Schiller is a professor and head of the chemistry department at Air Force, where he has been assigned since 1978. He has served as the academy's faculty athletics representative for the past four years.

Schiller replaces R.J. Snow, vice-president for university relations at the University of Utah, who is leaving the institution to pursue a career in private business. Schiller's term will expire in January 1989.

Grotke

Grotke recently was appointed acting athletics director at Cal State Fullerton. She had been serving as associate athletics director after joining the Fullerton staff in 1978 as women's athletics director.

A 1963 graduate of Bowling Green State University, Grotke worked at Indiana University, Bloomington, from 1968 to 1978 and became the university's first full-time women's athletics director. Under her guidance, Indiana increased the number of sports for women from two to 10.

After earning a master's degree from Indiana in 1966, Grotke taught in several high schools before joining the Indiana staff as an assistant professor of physical education.

Bozik and Grotke replace Ernest C. Casale, Temple University, and Charley Scott, Mississippi State University, whose terms expired.

Computer benefits Indiana athletes

A computer system designed for the academic affairs office at Indiana University, Bloomington, has created more time for staff members to work with student-athletes while increasing efficiency and communications with other campus departments.

"We feel that our office needs to be working with students," said Elizabeth Kurpius, Indiana's associate director of academic affairs. "If we have less time spent on generating reports, we have more time to work with the students."

Kurpius, her staff of three and Indecon, Inc., an Indianapolis software firm that implemented the system, spent a year and a half on the project that went on line during the summer of 1983.

S4A monitors athletics and academic progress of the student-athletes, maintains grade-point averages and charts progress toward a degree. The computer is linked with those used by various departments on campus, eliminating the need for extensive research each time a report is required.

The system also generates a list of tutors for use by the academic office and monitors attendance at study sessions and tutoring time spent by students and tutors. It also allows Kurpius and her staff more time to work with the approximately 700 student-athletes enrolled at Indiana.

"It has eliminated the mounds of paperwork and increased our accuracy," Kurpius said. "By having a computer, it takes less time to generate a report. It was a good way to get the dialogue going between the athletics department and the rest of the campus when we were setting up the program."

"We're not an entity unto ourselves. We work with the registrar, student records and financial aid. We're all tied in together and it gets the dialogue going between the offices, which I think is beneficial.

"We can take our information and manipulate it and generate any report asked for, which I think is a real advantage," Kurpius said. "With NCAA and Big Ten rules changing all the time, we have a program designed to meet those changes."

Indecon representatives spent more than a year actually working in the academic affairs office "to see what kind of problems we had," Kurpius said. "I don't think most people in athletics departments have a great deal of computer knowledge, at least we don't here. That's why we went to an outside source to come in and work with us. I think that would be the case in most athletics departments."

Kurpius said interest in similar systems has been expressed by several institutions. She said the Indiana software system is available for sale—and can be modified by Indecon to meet individual needs—or a system can be developed by interested institutions on their own.

"We would obviously like to sell our software, and Indecon would do all the composing as far as hardware and modification for other schools," Kurpius said. "But our idea at the NCAA Convention was to show how the program is working for us."

Bennett nominated to replace Bell

William J. Bennett, president of the National Endowment for the Humanities, has been nominated by the Reagan administration to replace Terrel H. Bell as secretary of education.

Bennett, 41, has kept a tight rein on Federal funds as NEH president and called for rigorous academic standards for students.

He is expected by some education experts to step up pressure for stricter certification requirements for teachers and for varied pay scales based on performance.

In November, Bennett released a report charging that the humanities programs at most colleges have deteriorated to the point that many graduates lack even the most rudimentary knowledge about the foundations of their nation and civilization.

Bennett earned a bachelor's degree at Williams College and a doctorate in philosophy at the University of Texas, Austin. He also has a law degree from Harvard University.

He taught philosophy at Boston University, North Carolina State University, the University of Southern Mississippi and Texas.

degree of interest from those institutions that do not have catastrophic injury insurance programs."

Institutions that wish to participate prior to August 1, 1985, may purchase the plan on a prorated basis. Wilson said that a couple of institutions already had enrolled in the program.

"As a benefit to institutions and conferences, we will provide a slide presentation and conduct an in-depth presentation of the program," Wilson said. "Naturally, we would rather attend conference meetings so that we can talk to a large group of people at one time."

State Mutual Life Assurance Company of America will underwrite the policy. State Mutual, based in Worcester, Massachusetts, is one of the nation's top 20 mutual life insurance companies, with assets of approximately $3 billion.

A brochure containing a summary of benefits of the lifetime catastrophic injury insurance program will be mailed to all directors of athletics and conference commissioners by February 1.

Benefits, on an excess basis, will begin once the student's medical and dental expenses reach a deductible level of $25,000 and will be payable for life, with no limit on the total dollar amount. Hospital, surgical, extended care facilities, home health care and rehabilitation expenses are included. Initial annual premiums will range from $2,000 to $8,000, depending on the sports sponsored by a participating institution. Future premiums will be based on claims experience for all participating institutions (combined) and the level of participation by the membership.

All member institutions of the NCAA are eligible to purchase coverage. Students who participate in a sanctioned and recognized intercollegiate sport are eligible, including student-athletes, student coaches, student managers, student trainers and officially recognized cheerleaders.

Enrollment forms for the 1985-86 academic year (beginning August 1, 1985) will be mailed to all member institutions by March 1, and the deadline for returning completed enrollment forms is May 15. Premium payments will be due by August 1.

Early enrollment forms still are available for those institutions that want to enroll prior to August 1.

To enroll in the program or obtain additional information, contact Wilson at 1-800/621-2116 or Richard D. Hunter, director of finance, at the NCAA national office.

Briefly in the News

The Pepperdine University men's basketball team is hoping for big scores in its next six home games. David Brittain, a junior forward, is enlisting students to contribute a penny for every point Pepperdine scores to establish a fund to aid the starving in Ethiopia. "We're out here playing home games and having a good time," Brittain said. "Over there, people are dying. This just seemed like the right thing to do." The Waves have been averaging 80 points a game. If they maintain that average, the donations would be $4.80 per student... John A. Reeves, director of athletics and recreation at the University of Rochester, has been named president of the Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America. He succeeds Jerry Yeagley, head soccer coach at Indiana University, Bloomington, who coached the 1982 and 1983 NCAA Division I Men's Soccer Championship teams.

Bill Edwards, former athletics director and head football coach at Wittenberg University, has been selected for honorary membership in the American Football Coaches Association. In 14 years, Edwards' teams had a 98-20-4 record and won two Division III championships... National Youth Hockey Week has been set for February 9 through 16. The event, in its fourth year, is sponsored by the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States. Ice hockey is played in nearly every state, and more than 250,000 players on more than 11,500 teams are registered with AHAUS.

Bill Harris, sports information director at Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science, says the institution's new basketball booklet works two ways—for both the men's and women's programs. One half is reversed from the other, so it matters not where one starts reading. If that is not clear, perhaps Harris can provide a sample to those interested in producing a similar booklet... Brown University's men's ice hockey team has been invited to China to play against what could be that country's first Olympic hockey team, which is preparing for the 1988 Games. It is believed that the Bruins will be the first American ice hockey team to compete in the Peoples Republic of China (the Harbin Ice Festival next December). Brown was selected by People to People, an American group promoting international understanding through exchanges of students, workers and athletes.

Beginning next fall, Ohio Northern University will offer sports management as a major program of study through the department of health, physical education and sports medicine. For further information, contact Janet R. Kittell, department chair, HPE, Ohio Northern University, King-Horn Center, Ada, Ohio 45810... The Utah legislature honored Brigham Young University's national championship football team January 18, and Gov. Norm Bangertter declared the day "Coach LaVell Edwards Day." The governor also declared January 19 "BYU Football No. 1 Day."

Gymnastics field could be enlarged

Effective with the 1986 championship, more participants in Division I women's gymnastics competition may qualify for the national finals.

Approved by the Executive Committee in December, an event winner from regional competition who is not part of one of the 10 qualifying teams or all-around competitors may advance from the regional meet to the national championship in that event if she scores at least a 9.4.

The Women's Gymnastics Committee will report to the Executive Committee after the 1986 championships on the effect of the new policy.

Georgia granted time to appeal order of court

A superior-court judge granted lawyers for the University of Georgia one week to appeal an order demanding the release of all documents relating to NCAA investigations into the institution's football and women's basketball programs.

Judge James Barrow revised an earlier order calling for immediate release of the documents concerning the recruitment of football player George Smith and the release by 11 a.m. January 23 of all remaining documents relating to the investigation into the football and basketball programs.

Barrow gave Georgia's attorneys until 9 a.m. January 29 to take the case before the Georgia Supreme Court. If a higher-court ruling is not made by then, the university would have to release the documents.

The original ruling demanding release of the documents resulted from lawsuits filed against Georgia by Cox Enterprises and Morris Communications Corporation, which publish newspapers in Atlanta and Athens, Georgia, respectively.

Barrow refused to order the release of documents pertaining to a continuing NCAA investigation into the men's basketball program.

Division I approves philosophy statement

All three NCAA membership divisions now have official statements setting forth the philosophies of membership in those divisions.

The delegates attending the Division I round table January 14 at the 1985 NCAA Convention in Nashville approved a philosophy statement with no discussion and no dissenting votes. The approved statement was a revised version of one that had been rejected by the 1984 Division I round table.

The statement approved in Nashville was modified by a subcommittee of the Division I Steering Committee consisting of Francis W. Bonner, Furman University, chair; Mikki Flowers, Old Dominion University, and David L. Maggard, University of California, Berkeley.

NCAA Divisions II and III have had formal philosophy statements for several years, and they appear in the NCAA Manual. The Division I statement will be added to the 1985-86 NCAA Manual.

Following is the statement approved by the Division I round table:

In addition to the purposes and fundamental policy of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, as set forth in Constitution 2, members of Division I support the following principles in the belief that these statements assist in defining the nature and purposes of the division.

1. A member of Division I subscribes to high standards of academic quality, as well as breadth of academic opportunity.

2. In its athletics program, a member of Division I strives for regional and national excellence and prominence. Accordingly, its recruitment of student-athletes and its emphasis on and support of its athletics program are — in most cases — regional and national in scope.

3. A member of Division I recognizes the dual objective in its athletics program of serving both the university or college community (participants, student body, faculty-staff, alumni) and the general public (community, area, state, nation).

4. A member of Division I believes in offering extensive opportunities for participation in varsity intercollegiate athletics for both men and women. A Division I member sponsors at the highest feasible level of intercollegiate competition one or both of the traditional spectator-oriented, income-producing sports of football and basketball. In doing so, members of Division I recognize the differences in institutional objectives in support of football; and, therefore, the division provides competition in that sport in Division I-A and Division I-AA.

basketball player under six feet tall. He has been Purdue's No. 2 scorer each of the last two seasons, shooting close to 80 percent at the line during his career and ranking high in career assists. (Mark Adams, Purdue assistant SID)

Talk about tradition

If you doubt that people live and breathe basketball at Kentucky, consider this: A class on the "History of University of Kentucky Basketball" is being taught by professor Humbert Nelli for the spring semester and 45 students have signed up. "I think UK basketball is serious," the 17-year faculty member told Mary Dickman of the Lexington Herald-Leader. "It is the most important traditional aspect in the state." Nelli said the basketball program influences Lexington's economic health and the state's social habits. And although seven of the 14 two-hour seminars are devoted primarily to UK's teams, Nelli said the class is designed to make students aware of the effect of organized sports on society as a whole. The course could have a field trip or two, but Nelli said the class would not hold any meetings in Rupp Arena (23,000-seat site of the Final Four this season), because "I don't have any tickets to the games." (John Painter, Kentucky student assistant SID)

The Shaffer family players

Florida State senior Dean Shaffer had a personally satisfying evening against North Carolina, even in a losing effort—six rebounds, seven assists and 10 points. You see, Dean Frank Shaffer was named for North Carolina coach Dean Smith and Smith's predecessor, Frank McGuire—two of the winningest coaches in basketball history. Shaffer's father, Lee, was voted most valuable player for the Tar Heels in 1960, and Dean played for Smith at North Carolina as a freshman in 1982 before transferring to Florida State (he was a backup to Michael Jordan and figured he would not play much). That is not all. Lee Shaffer III was an all-Atlantic Coast Conference line-backer at North Carolina in 1971 and played with Lawrence Taylor, while younger brother David, 6-8, is sitting out a transfer year at Florida State and sister Marel is ranked No. 2 in the female 16-and-under tennis age group in the state of North Carolina. (Lisa Morton, Florida State assistant SID)

Best start ever

Could a third-generation Pete Carril be in the making? Kevin Bannon's Trenton State men's team is 13-2, best start in the 60-year history of the sport here, and this includes 10 victories on the road. Bannon played for and assisted Bob Dukiet at St. Peter's, who assisted Carril at Princeton. (Pete Manetas, Trenton State SID)
