10 coaches selected for football preview

LaVell Edwards, coach of national-champion Brigham Young University, and nine other coaches have been selected to participate in the College Football '85 Preview February 24-26 at the Vista International Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

Other coaches who will participate in the ninth annual NCAA-sponsored preview are Bill Arnsparger, Louisiana State University; Jack Bicknell, Boston College; Archie Cooley, Mississippi Valley State University; Hayden Fry, University of Iowa; Pat Jones, Oklahoma State University; Joe Morrison, University of South Carolina; Jim Walden, Washington State University; George Welsh, University of Virginia, and Bill Yeoman, University of Houston.

Charles McClendon, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, also will attend the preview.

Included among the agenda items for the three-day preview is a question-and-answer session February

25. Each coach will preview his team and conference, and the media then will have a chance to question the 10 coaches. Approximately 60 sportswriters are expected to attend.

NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers will address the sportswriters before the preview adjourns February 26. Joseph L. Kearney, commissioner of the Western Athletic Conference and chair of the NCAA Public Relations and Promotion Committee, will serve as moderator for the preview, which is designed to generate interest in the 1985 football season.

The nation's top sportswriters will have an opportunity to meet with coaches from different parts of the country, in addition to those from areas they normally cover.

Following are capsule summaries of the 10 coaches selected for this year's preview:

Two legislative meetings tentatively set for August

The second Division I-A midyear legislative meeting and the first Division I-AA summer legislative meeting have been scheduled tentatively for August 7-9 at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare, Chicago.

The Association's Administrative Committee directed the staff to investigate possible sites on those dates, the intention being that the Division I-A meeting would be conducted August 7-8, with the I-AA session beginning in the afternoon of August 8 and concluding August 9.

In discussing the scheduling of those meetings, the committee noted that a number of members in both subdivisions had questioned the need for the meetings this year, especially in view of the fact that within Division I, members now enjoy greater voting autonomy at NCAA Conventions due to approval of Proposal Nos. 29 and 30 by the 1985 Convention.

In short, NCAA President John R. Davis said, some institutions are suggesting that with the special Convention called by the Presidents' Commission June 20-21 and the implementation of the autonomy and round-table voting provisions at the January 1986 Convention, there may be only limited interest in the summer legislative meetings.

The NCAA constitution states that there "shall be" annual legislative meetings for Divisions I-A and I-AA. The Association's parliamentarian, Alan J. Chapman of Rice University, has advised that under Robert's Rules of Order, Newly Revised, an organization must conduct those "annual meetings" that are specified in the organization's own documents.

The Administrative Committee will make a final decision regarding the meetings during its February 14 tele-

Smaller ball has little effect on Division I women's scoring

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The new, smaller ball in women's college basketball has helped ball handling and passing skills but apparently will have little effect on shooting accuracy—at least this season in Division I.

Field-goal accuracy and scoring are down a tiny bit at midseason compared to the final 1984 figures—less than one percent in each case. However, no midseason figures were compiled for women in 1984; so, no true comparison is available. Shooting accuracy in men's basketball has almost always improved in the last half of the season, sometimes by as much as half a percentage point. In 1984, for instance, the midseason figure was 47.7 percent and the final was 48.1 percent in Division I men's national figures.

If the same thing happens in women's national trends, the midseason-accuracy figure of 43.7 percent from the field will reach 44.1 percent in the final figures, a minimal increase over last season's final 44 percent.

The ball itself is approximately 3.4 percent smaller in circumference, with a decrease of about one inch from the previous 29 1/2 to 30 inches. It is also about two ounces lighter than the previous 20 to 22 ounces. It now seems obvious that a 3.4 percent decrease in circumference is not going to translate into an immediate 3.4 percent increase in accuracy, because that would mean a national figure of

Basketball notes

45.5 percent, well above the current 43.7 at midseason.

Some observers think the new smaller ball is livelier, causing more shots to bounce out, but that could be colored by expectations of higher percentages.

Not far from men

Regardless of the small ball, it is still true that in terms of pure shooting skill, Division I men and women are not as far apart as some might imagine. At midseason, the men were at 47.6 percent—less than four percentage points more than the women. From another angle, the men did not reach 44 percent until 1970 and hit only 29.3 percent in 1948—the first year of official national trends.

At midseason, Division I women were averaging 138.3 points per game (both teams combined) vs. the final 1984 figure of 139.4 and were putting up 128.4 field-goal attempts per game—13.3 per game more than the men's total of 115.1 (no doubt a direct result of the 30-second clock in use throughout the women's game vs. a 45-second clock in 17 of the 31 men's Division I conferences). Men's scoring was 138.7 at midseason.

At the free-throw line, the women are shooting 64.2 at midseason vs. a final 1984 figure of 65.3 (the men were at 68.2 percent at midseason).

The women play much more of a finesse game—more like the men's game used to be played before the leapers took over with their dunks, blocks and in-your-face intimidation.

Southeastern leads

The Southeastern Conference at midseason ranks as the top women's conference in the country in shooting accuracy at 47.5 percent (remember, the national men's figure at midseason was 47.6), followed by the Big Eight Conference, Atlantic Coast Conference, Southwest Athletic Conference and Western Collegiate Athletic Association. At the end of last season, the same five conferences ranked 1-3-4-5-2, with the SEC ending at 48.3.

The ACC ranks in the top five in six categories of the seven listed; the SEC ranks in the top five of five categories, while the Big Eight and WCAA each make four top-fives. No other conference makes more than two.

The East Coast Conference and Ivy Group rank 1-2 in scoring defense but each is averaging even less offensively, and the East Coast, Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference and Cosmopolitan Conference rank 1-3-4 in field-goal percentage defense, but

Toner outspoken in behalf of women's sports

Women'sCourt Magazine

John Toner was relaxed as he sat in his office. Tired, but relaxed. It was the end of another long, pressure-filled day. He loosened his tie, plopped himself down in an easy chair in his neatly appointed office and put his feet up on a coffee table as he prepared to talk to a Women'sCourt reporter.

Toner had every reason to be "out on his feet." For more than five years, the lanky ex-football coach literally has performed two full-time jobs. His bread-and-butter job (the one that pays him a salary) is the busy role of athletics director at the University of Connecticut. His "labor of love" has been his work in a wide variety of duties on behalf of the NCAA.

And throughout his dedication to the improvement of intercollegiate athletics, Toner has been one of the staunchest boosters for continued growth of women's sports.

Toner is proud to point out that as early as September 1974, the University of Connecticut board of trustees ruled full responsibility for implementation of Title IX to the division of intercollegiate athletics. Said Toner, "Long before the required date for Title IX responsibility, we were on our way; and frankly, I'm pleased that when our program was tested by the government, we passed with flying colors."

When the government (under the then Department of Health, Education and Welfare) set about to regulate the law, it was Toner who carried some of the load. He recalled, "The law, of course, needed a policy interpretation. That job was handled by HEW. In my role as an AD and representative of the NCAA, I testified on a number of occasions in Washington and was involved in hearings and meetings."

Toner added, "Let's face it. There is always room for improvement and honing, but overall I believe that at all levels—junior high school, high school and college—everybody has responded. The enormous growth is testimony to that. I feel the women should not look over their shoulders and say, 'we want what men have.' By that, I am not referring to scholarships, staff, budget and such. What I mean is that I believe women should strive for a set of rules that best suits the abilities of women's sports. They should strive for equipment that is designed specifically for women. The size of playing fields, the distance of races, etc., need not necessarily be the same for men and women."

Toner is a proponent of all women's sports, and he jumps at the chance to point out that "the NCAA is spending considerable dollars" to promote all NCAA women's championships. He added, "One of the problems we face now is that women's sports do not get the same media coverage as do the men. But, traditionally, nonrevenue sports involving men face the same problem. It will take more time for women's sports to start getting more coverage, but it will happen as the crowds increase.

"The fact that last year the NCAA women's basketball championship game was carried live on the CBS television network is a good example. The success of our women's athletics in recent Olympics helped."

The rules don't break, or bend

Mike Giomi's college grades were ordinary—not penthouse, not basement. "I expected an average student, not Einstein," his father said. "And that's what Mike was. He was coming along good. I was not upset with his grades in any respect. I was satisfied." Bobby Knight, Indiana University, Bloomington, head men's basketball coach, however, was not.

Last summer, Mike Giomi took two courses at Indiana, missed a few hours in math and failed. He was not the first student-athlete to find an F on his transcript; he will not be the last. Nevertheless, he was informed that the transgression would cost him his scholarship.

"He was beside himself," Doug Giomi said. "He came home and we talked it over. He decided he wanted to go back to school. He considered himself an Indiana Hoosier."

With no scholarship, Mike Giomi needed a student loan for tuition. When basketball tryouts were announced, he showed up as a walk-on. "That took a lot of guts," his father said. "He didn't even have a locker. That was for the scholarship players. He carried his stuff back and forth."

Not surprisingly, this particular 6-foot-7 walk-on made the team and was Indiana's leading rebounder this season. But good enough under Indiana and NCAA standards. Knight, though, has his own standards.

"They all know that the only way they can lose their scholarship is if they aren't doing what they should be doing academically," Knight told New York Daily news columnist Mike Lupica. "I tell them when they're still in high school: 'The only problem you'll encounter with me as far as the scholarship is concerned is if you don't go to class.'"

So now, a week from his 21st birthday and in his third year of college, Mike Giomi is off the team that he made not once, but twice.

He tested Bobby Knight's rules and found that they don't bend, and they don't break.

Officials shouldn't work at home

By Buck Turnbull

The Des Moines Register

Officials have a tough enough job in big-time college basketball without being assigned to work conference games in their home state.

Remember what happened recently when Illinois, then ranked sixth in the country, lost a game at Iowa?

Obviously, it hadn't escaped Henson's attention that Jaspers is from the north-central Iowa town of Waverly.

Then, in Des Moines one Saturday night, Southern Illinois coach Allen Van Winkle was tossed out of a game his team lost to Drake when he blew up on the sidelines and was socked with three straight technical fouls. The third one brought automatic expulsion.

The official who called the technicals was Ralph Pickett of Ottumwa. And somewhere in their dialogue, Van Winkle apparently referred to Pickett as a "homer."

Pickett works in both the Missouri Valley and Big Eight Conferences, and he also has officiated some Iowa State games at Ames.

I don't know Pickett, but I count Jaspers as a good friend, and I think the homer charges against both of them are absurd.

But I also think it's wrong for supervisors of officials to assign them and others to games in their home states—except perhaps in a last-minute weather emergency.

Officials have to be above suspicion, and since many coaches take leave of their senses in the heat of battle, the only solution is to remove any doubt about the neutrality of those working the games.

Columnary Craft

Knight's pressure was relentless. He criticized Giomi and wouldn't allow him to take the team plane home from the Ohio State game two weeks ago. He rode with the team doctor to the next game at Purdue and didn't play. He didn't even make the trip to Illinois, where Knight started four freshmen.

Then, last week came the announcement that Giomi was off the team, dropped when he admitted to the coach that he had missed two history classes and a speech class since the start of the semester. Cutting classes is an indiscretion that Bobby Knight simply will not endure.

Giomi's mother said her son had a 2.410 grade-point average last semester. Up from the 1.910 after the summer failure and

"I started talking to the NCAA four years ago about consideration of a smaller basketball for women. My suggestion was scoffed at. The size of the ball women used was only because that is what the manufacturers produced for men. Now that we finally have a smaller ball, definitely more suited for women, there are those who are complaining the ball isn't small enough.

"Women are naturally dexterous and agile. They have speed. The basketball court wasn't too big. Nor was the 10-foot rim too high. Simply, the ball was too big for their smaller hands. It was obvious to me that to speed up the rhythm of the women's game and to allow them to develop their skills, the real need was for a smaller ball.

Attendance at women's game 22,157

By James M. Van Valkenburg

NCAA Director of Statistics

A remarkable thing happened Sunday, February 3, in Iowa City, Iowa. An all-time record women's basketball crowd of 22,157—that was the turnstile count—packed Carver-Hawkeye arena to see Iowa play Ohio State. That is 6,707 more than the arena's listed capacity. No seats were reserved, and 9,000 people were in the stands an hour and a half before game time.

When the game started, people were standing in the aisles. "It looked like a football Saturday around here," said one state trooper. The game, matching the top two teams in the Big Ten Conference, was won by Ohio State, 56-47.

Paid admissions? "It may be a couple of days before we know that," said Rick Klatt, women's sports information director at Iowa. "We are getting calls from all over the country. My estimate is that 70 percent were paid admissions. Only children aged 10 and under were admitted free."

The record crowd for women's basketball had been 12,336 on March 6, 1977—all paid admissions at Madison Square Garden in New York for a double-header. Montclair State faced Queens College in the first game on that Sunday. Top-ranked Delta State faced Immaculata in the second game.

Even if Klatt's estimate is high, only 56 percent paid admissions would be enough to break the record. Seventy percent would mean 15,510 paid admissions. If you want to split hairs, it is possible that actual gate receipts were higher in New York. Some people bought special two-for-one tickets at Iowa and some used a "gold card" that is good for all women's games; regular adult admission was $3 and students $1. About 2,600 tickets were sold in advance at the university.

How did it happen? It goes back to last season, when Vivian Stringer, who had taken Cheyney to the Final Four, took over as Iowa coach. The team had a winning season and attendance increased almost nine-fold to 3,381 per game—second nationally. "It was still only about 3,000 with the team undefeated in the Big Ten," Klatt said. "Then about four weeks ago, when it appeared both teams might go into this game 8-0 (as it turned out, Iowa went in 7-1, Ohio State 8-0), we decided to promote this one game. Vivian wrote a letter to Iowa alumni, saying her two dreams were to fill the arena and to reach the NCAA tournament."

Seven teams are not included—Arkansas-Little Rock, Baptist (South Carolina), Chicago State, Davidson, Loyola (California), St. Mary's (California) and Tulsa. Some are also NAIA members, have chosen that tournament and declined to report. Some kept no figures and some did not report.

32,520 at men's game

Syracuse's home game with Villanova February 1 drew 32,520 spectators—largest crowd ever on a college campus. It broke the record of 32,382 in the same Carrier Dome two years earlier for a game with St. John's (New York). Attendance at Syracuse this season is certain to break the all-time season high set by Kentucky in 1984 at 23,778, because season tickets already sold will average 23,815 per game and thousands of "walk-in" tickets are being sold in addition for every game.

The midseason ranking of men's conferences against outside Division I opponents has a familiar look, with the same conferences in the top three spots—but in a different order. The Big East Conference leads the Atlantic Coast Conference by a single percentage point, .808 to .807, with the Big Ten Conference a close third at .789. At the end of last season, the ACC had an incredible .846, a record, on 99-18, with the Big East at .718 and the Big Ten .692. Games against opponents below Division I are deleted, and the midseason ranking includes games through January 19. Most nonconference games have already been played, with conference races now in full swing, but it seems certain the race will go down to the wire.

Most improved

The Midwestern City Conference shows the most improved outside record, going back two seasons, with 25-58 in 1983, 38-49 in 1984 and, at midseason, 34-33 against eighth-ranked opposition. That is a gain of 181 percentage points (.326 to .507). Next is the West Coast Athletic Conference, from 30-47 in 1983 to 39-49 in 1984 to 44-37 now.

Purely in terms of increase over the 1984 final, the Southwest Athletic Conference is up 161 percentage points (from .527 to .688) and the Pacific-10 Conference is up 111 (from .532 to .643).

Schedule differences

As the chart shows, six conferences among the top 10 in outside winning percentage also played schedules ranking among the top 10 in combined winning. Of the other four who played top-10 schedules, only one—the Midwestern City—was above .500 at midseason.

However, all this says nothing about where the games were played, and the home-court advantage is a big factor in college basketball. Jim Delany, commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference, points out that, generally, teams in the top conferences seldom play nonconference games on the road against members of the lower conferences. As for the annual .900-plus winning percentage by Division I teams vs. teams below Division I, Delany observes that the Division I teams almost never play such games on the road.

Indeed, a midseason analysis shows the OVC 12-5 at home vs. Division I outside foes, 5-2 on neutral courts but 6-30 on the road for an overall 23-37 against opposition ranked 13th among the 31 conferences, with the OVC playing more than twice as many road games as home games (36 vs. 17). On the other hand, OVC teams were 27-3 against teams below Division I, with all 30 games on OVC home courts.

An analysis of the Mid-Eastern Conference is even more striking. MEAC teams played just seven home games against outside Division I foes and won four, a .571 percentage. MEAC teams were 0-38 on the road and 2-7 on neutral courts for an overall 6-48 against opposition ranked 10th nationally.

Quotes of the week

Kansas men's coach Larry Brown, asked how the capacity of Allen Fieldhouse is only 15,200 when crowds in the Wilt Chamberlain days were announced at 17,000: "Bigger fannies." (Doug Vance, Kansas SID)

Murray State women's coach Bud Childers after a recent loss to Tennessee Tech: "With about five minutes left in the first half, we thought we smelled something burning. I thought it was (athletics director) Johnny Reagan setting the gym on fire to put an end to the mercy killing." (Craig Bohnert, Murray State SID)

Illinois State men's coach Bob Donewald after his fourth straight overtime game: "I keep attempting to demonstrate the value of a 45-minute game. I'm hopeful the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee will take a serious look at extending it to 45. Besides, I think the fans would like 45 better than 40—it's more exciting." (Rick Nolan, Illinois State assistant SID)

Iona men's coach Pat Kennedy, after his team completed a seven-game road trip with three straight overtime victories: "I have asked Brother (John G.) Driscoll (president of Iona College) for a salary increase for all the overtime work." (Tom Didato, Iona SID)

West Virginia junior center Georgeann Wells, as the first woman to dunk in a regulation college basketball game (January 9 Notes), has been inundated with requests from the media for interviews. Debbie Becker of USA Today reports that the 6-7 Wells handles herself with aplomb when confronted by reporters. Asked whether dating a man four inches shorter than she bothers her, Wells answered a 5-7 reporter, "No, I'll go out with anyone—even you!"

Last week, Wells received what may be the ultimate honor for a "dunker." Houston men's coach Guy Lewis sent her a letter welcoming her as an honorary member in Houston's Phi Slamma Jama "dunking fraternity." "You can always be proud of your distinction as a pioneer in your sport," Lewis wrote.

The season of Mardi Gras has just begun, but New Orleans women's head coach Joey Favaloro thought his team had begun to observe Mardi Gras customs a week early when it defeated Southeastern Louisiana recently. "There were so many fouls called (a total of 59 for both teams), I felt as if we were in a parade for Mardi Gras," he lamented. "All we kept doing was parading from one end of the court to the other." (Mike Bujol, New Orleans SID)

Illinois senior Kendra Gantt possesses a knack for impersonations, and regularly mimics the voices and mannerisms of many people, ranging from Illinois athletics staff members to Howard Cosell. Gantt was having an off-season on the basketball court, however, until she exploded against Wisconsin and Northwestern in recent conference matchups. It turns out that head coach Laura Golden had given Gantt a special motivational speech prior to those games. "Kendra, you can impersonate just about anyone," observed Golden. "There is someone I would like you to impersonate this weekend." "Who is that, coach?" asked Gantt. "Magic Johnson," deadpanned Golden. (Lani Jacobsen, Illinois women's SID)

Purdue men's coach Gene Keady after a loss to Ohio State (two days after an impressive win over Indiana): "What do you want me to do, bite a frog's head off and spit blood all over them? Shoot, I thought I gave 'em a heckuva talk before the game. That's not the answer . . . We've got six new guys who do not understand the intensity of a Big Ten situation. But I'm not saying it's anybody's fault. I blame myself . . ." (Bob Goldring, Purdue assistant SID)

Siena men's coach John Griffin, when asked what it's like playing on the road: "You have to travel, sleep in beds you're not used to and play in front of hostile crowds. But I don't even let them become issues. We'd play them on a ski slope if we had to." (Diane Tuman, Siena SID)

Can you top these?

The Division I record for two-team free-throw accuracy in a game—100 percent by Purdue (25) and Wisconsin (22) in 1976—may never be topped, but the January 26 Southern Conference matchup between Davidson and Citadel still was quite a clinic. Davidson was 48-for-57 and Citadel 30-for-36 for a combined 83.9 percent, and their combined 93 attempts were nearly twice the 47 by the two Big Ten teams in the 1976 game. (John Geis, Southern Conference SID)

The West Texas State women's basketball team is stocked with over-achievers. The entire team posted a combined grade-point average of 2.900 for the fall semester, down from last spring's 3.200 but including five freshmen new to college basketball and academics. Leading the team in GPA is senior Maria Linggi, who boasts a 3.900 while double-majoring in physical education and Spanish. Four of her teammates are also above the 3.000 mark, with majors ranging from math education to accounting. Among the ranks of the Lady Buffs are four players who were among the top 10 people in their high school classes as graduating seniors; valedictorians and salutatorians; a member of Phi Kappa Theta honor society; recipients of the Daughters of the American Revolution citizenship award, and various other academic and civic excellence awards. (Karen Christensen, West Texas State assistant SID)

Bucknell freshman guard Stacey Spitko has played all but nine minutes of the team's first 18 games. She has missed playing the entire 40 minutes only three times and has been on court for all 40 minutes of the last 12 consecutive games. (Brad Tufts, Bucknell SID)

The Trenton State women's team defeated Rutgers-Newark, 98-22, recently, but the 76-point margin of victory, a school record, was not the most remarkable aspect of the game. All 22 of Rutgers-Newark's points were scored by Lorie McDonald. The junior forward accounted for 36 of her team's 46 field-goal attempts (she made nine) and eight of the team's nine free-throw attempts (she was successful on four). (Pete Manetas, Trenton State SID) at Brigham Young literally was perfect. The Cougars became only the second major-college team in the past 80 years to compile a 13-0 record that included a 24-17 victory over Michigan in the Holiday Bowl.

Brigham Young was voted the nation's No. 1 football team at season's end by the Associated Press and United Press International, and Edwards was named the coach of the year by both the American Football Coaches Association and AP.

Seven times since 1972, when Edwards took over the BYU program from Tommy Hudspeth, the Cougars have led the nation in passing offense, and 1984 marked Brigham Young's 10th consecutive Western Athletic Conference title and ninth bowl appearance.

The 1952 graduate of Utah State boasts a 118-37-1 record at BYU, ranking him in the top 10 among the nation's active coaches. His teams have won more games during the past five years than any other Division I school in the country. Edwards has coached teams appearing in the Hula Bowl, Blue-Gray Classic, East-West Shrine Game, Japan Bowl and

Cougars, Eagles scheduled for Kickoff Classic

Defending national champion Brigham Young University and Boston College will meet in the third annual Kickoff Classic August 29 at the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, New Jersey.

The Cougars, who have topped the nation in passing seven times in the past nine years, will be led by quarterback Robbie Bosco, who finished first in total offense with an average of 327.7 yards per game in 1984.

Boston College compiled a 10-2 record in 1984, with a Cotton Bowl victory over the University of Houston. The Eagles were the highest scoring team in the country with an average of 36.7 points per game.

Coaches' All-America game.

He joined the Brigham Young staff as an assistant in 1962.

Arnsparger

Arnsparger had not coached a college team since leaving Tulane University in 1963 for the National Football League. But, in his first season at Louisiana State, the Fighting Tigers put together an 8-3-1 record, a far cry from the 4-7 finish in 1983.

The Tigers, who were 0-6 in Southeastern Conference play in 1983, finished 4-1-1 last season and earned a Sugar Bowl berth.

Arnsparger left a job as assistant head coach and defensive coordinator for the Miami Dolphins, where he was credited with designing the team's famous defense, to become head coach at Louisiana State in 1984. He was head coach for the New York Giants from 1973 to 1976. He then returned to the Dolphins, where he had coached from 1970 to 1973.

Arnsparger also was on the Baltimore Colts' staff from 1964 to 1969.

His college coaching career began as an assistant at Miami University (Ohio) in 1950. He later coached at Ohio State University, the University of Kentucky and Tulane.

Bicknell

Bicknell ended Boston College's 45-year absence from the Cotton Bowl with a 1985 appearance that capped a 10-2 season. After that New Year's Day game, he coached in the Japan and Hula Bowls.

He led the Eagles to a 9-2 record in 1983 and the Lambert-Meadowlands trophy as the best team in the East. It was the Eagles' first Lambert award since 1942.

Such has been Boston College's fortune since Bicknell became head coach in 1981, when the team finished 5-6. During the next three seasons, the Eagles never won fewer than eight games or lost more than two.

Before becoming the Eagles' head coach, Bicknell was head coach for five years at the University of Maine. He had been a Boston College assistant prior to that assignment.

Cooley

Under Cooley's direction, Mississippi Valley made its first appearance in the NCAA Division I-AA Football Championship in 1984. Mississippi Valley teams, under Cooley since 1980, have won or tied 32 of their 52 games and have earned records of 9-2 and 7-2-1 in the past two seasons.

Nicknamed "Gunslinger" for his Western apparel, Cooley shared 1980 coach of the year honors in the Southwestern Athletic Conference with Eddie Robinson of Grambling State University.

Cooley's coaching career began on the prep level, where his record was 61-3 for four seasons. His teams won four state championships and were unbeaten four of the six seasons he coached.

Before taking over at Mississippi Valley, Cooley was an assistant at both Alcorn State University and Tennessee State University.

Fry

In his sixth year as head coach at Iowa, Fry led the Hawkeyes to an 8-4-1 record and a victory in the Freedom Bowl.

For 20 seasons before Fry's arrival, Iowa had not produced a winning record. Since Fry, the Hawkeyes are 42-28-1.

He was head coach at Southern Methodist University from 1962 to 1972. He then led North Texas State University to a 40-23-3 record in six seasons.

Jones

Not since 1932 had an Oklahoma State team won nine games during a regular season and never had a Cowboy team recorded 10 victories overall.

Jones, who was named head coach in June 1984 after five seasons as an assistant, ended both streaks last season when the Cowboys were 10-2 after beating South Carolina in the Gator Bowl.

For his efforts, Jones was selected United Press International's Big Eight Conference coach of the year as Oklahoma State produced its first perfect record at home since 1931.

A 1969 graduate of the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, where he served as graduate assistant with the defensive line, Jones was an assistant at Southern Methodist and the University of Pittsburgh before joining the OSU staff as defensive end coach and defensive coordinator in 1979.

Morrison

Morrison's second season at South Carolina was expected to produce a record only slightly better than the 5-6 mark of 1983. The Gamecocks, however, finished 10-2 and Morrison was named national coach of the year by the Walter Camp Football Foundation.

Ten victories in one season are the most in South Carolina football history, boosting Morrison's two-year mark to 15-8 and his overall coaching record to 77-52-5.

Morrison played college football at the University of Cincinnati and spent 14 years playing eight positions with the NFL New York Giants. Upon his 1972 retirement, the Giants retired his jersey (No. 40).

One year later, Morrison opened his college coaching career at the University of Tennessee, Chattanooga, where he built a 44-29-4 record during a seven-year span. He spent three seasons at the University of New Mexico. He had a 10-1 record his final year, before taking the head coaching job at South Carolina.

Walden

Since becoming head coach at Washington State in 1977, Jim Walden has improved the Cougars' football fortunes.

He has put together three winning seasons in the past four years—the most by any Washington State coach.

A quarterback on two conference-championship teams at the University of Wyoming, Walden played three years in the Canadian Football League before taking a high-school coaching job. He spent five years as an assistant at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and was an assistant at the University of Miami (Florida) from 1973 to 1976. Walden started at Washington State as a backfield coach in 1977 and was named head coach in December of that year. He has been a member of the coaching staffs for the 1981 Japan Bowl and 1982 East-West Shrine game.

Welsh

Welsh brought a tradition of success to Virginia from the U.S. Naval Academy, where in seven years he became the winningest coach in Navy history.

He has continued that trend in three years with the Cavaliers by turning a team that was 2-9 in 1982 into a 6-5 program in 1983 and 8-2-2 this past season. During each of the last four of his nine years at Navy, the Midshipmen won at least seven games. A former Navy quarterback himself, Welsh led the nation in both passing and total offense in 1955 and still is ranked seventh among all-time Navy passing leaders.

He was selected to coach the East team in the 1977 East-West Shrine game. His Navy coaching career started in 1960 after a 32-month tour of duty. He left in 1962 for a second tour of duty and then became an assistant at Pennsylvania State University in 1963, before returning to Navy as head coach in 1975.

Yeoman

Yeoman created more than a solid football program at Houston; he created the veer offense and, as a result, has racked up 155 victories in 23 seasons as head coach.

Since 1966, the Cougars have had just two losing seasons under Yeoman's direction, winning 140 of 214 games.

After graduating from the U.S. Military Academy, where he was an all-America center in 1948 when the Cadets were 8-0-1, Yeoman joined the Michigan State staff of Duffy Daugherty in 1954, where he worked until becoming the head coach at Houston in 1962.

He has been a coach twice at the East-West Shrine game, twice in the Hula Bowl and once in the Blue-Gray game.

Men's crown expected to remain on West Coast

By Timothy J. Lilley
The NCAA News Staff

California schools should dominate Division I men's tennis in 1985; or, as they say, the more things change, the more they stay the same.

Stanford was a surprise two seasons ago when the Cardinal won the Division I team crown in unexpected fashion. Last year, coach Glen Bassett's UCLA squad took the title, and the Bruins begin the 1985 season leading the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association (ITCA) preseason rankings.

With three other West Coast programs in the top 10, the only question left may be which one of those teams will hang in there and take it all next June at the University of Georgia, the site of the championships.

To avoid misunderstanding, there are strong programs nationwide. Seven of the eight NCAA Division I tennis regions are represented in the preseason list of the top 50 players in the country. All eight are represented in the team rankings.

But most of the talent is near the Pacific, and most of the competition for supremacy will take place in California. Before the season ends, there undoubtedly will be some surprising matches played; a shining star here, an outstanding newcomer there.

Southern California, for example, owns the nation's preseason doubles standouts in Ricky Leach and Tim Pawsat. Although UCLA is ranked as the preseason favorite, the Bruins do not have a doubles player ranked in the top 10.

Georgia's Michael Pernfors is back to defend his 1984 singles title, and he still is king of the hill in that category. Three of the remaining top-10 positions belong to Southern California, while UCLA and Southern Methodist each have two and Louisiana State has one.

Here is a rundown of the teams that make up the preseason ITCA standings:

UCLA—Although the Bruins finished second in the Pacific-10 Conference race to Southern California, they made it to the Division I finals after the Trojans were knocked off by Georgia. Stanford, after finishing in a tie for second in the Pacific-10 Conference with UCLA, also made it back to the finals, but the Bruins' strength in doubles prevailed in the title match. Five of six all-Americans are back for UCLA, including top singles players Jeff Klaparda and Mark Basham, and the top doubles team of Basham and Michael Klures.

Stanford—Coach Dick Gould also has five of his top six players back, including the Nos. 1-5 singles. And, there is a McEnroe on the Cardinal roster again. Patrick, younger brother of Stanford alumnus John, could be effective. Juniors Jimmy Grabb and John Letts again should hold down the top doubles position, while Danny Goldie and Eric Rosenfeld head the singles chart. Stanford will contend for the Pac-10 and NCAA titles.

Southern Methodist—All-American selections John Ross and Mark Styling lead the way for coach Dennis Ralston and the Mustangs. Adding power to the lineup is freshman standout Richey Reneberg. The doubles teams probably will feature a new look, but four singles positions are locked up, and the Mustangs are poised to strike in the Southwest Athletic Conference.

Southern California—Had the draw been different, Southern California coach Dick Leach and his Trojans could have played for the national championship. Playing Georgia in Athens in the 1984 quarterfinals proved to be the end of the line. The defending Pac-10 champions have a standout in Todd Witsken, ranked No. 2 in doubles at the start of the season, and Ricky Leach and Jorge Lozano were No. 7 and No. 8, respectively. Again, the toughest aspect of Southern Cal's quest for the championship may be getting out of its conference.

Pepperdine—With a dozen straight West Coast Athletic Conference titles behind him and the return of four outstanding players, head coach Allen Fox has to be excited about the 1985 season. Junior Kelly Jones is one-half of the 1984 NCAA doubles champions. It is likely that the Waves will make a run for their fifth trip to the final four.

Georgia—The Bulldogs will be led by Pernfors, the defending Division I singles champion. Georgia coach Dan Magill has brought in talented freshman Trey Carter to help shore up a squad that features five of the top six players from a year ago. Georgia must be considered the top dog in the Southeastern Conference and a threat to win it all.

Trinity (Texas)—Coach John Benson enters his first full season with four solid players back from a year ago. Senior David Egdes has been struggling with a nagging back injury; his return to health could make a difference. Chris Kennedy, Fanie Reinach and Dexter McBride also will have major roles for the Tigers.

Clemson—More Tigers in the top 10. Coach Chuck Kriese will be after another Atlantic Coast Conference championship with returners Miguel Nido, Richard Matuszewski and Brandon Walters. The ACC is one of the country's most competitive leagues, so Clemson's rebuilding efforts will be severely tested during the regular season.

Louisiana State—Another group of Tigers hopes to continue among the nation's elite this season, as LSU coach Jerry Simmons adds talented newcomers Billy Uribe and Jeff Brown to veterans Carlos Homedes, Jason Noonan, Steve Wood and Fernando Perez. Brown and Uribe may be especially helpful in doubles, where Perez lost partner Gilberto Cicero, who transferred to Pepperdine.

Arkansas—Ron Hightower, the Razorbacks' first-ever tennis all-American, returns to take over the coaching chores at his alma mater. His young team is loaded with solid players, including Bobby Blair, Richard Schmidt, Tim Siegel and Bobby Banck. Look for Siegel and Schmidt to team up as an explosive doubles team.

Following is a regional look at more of the top teams and players in Division I men's tennis for 1985:

Region 1—Harvard is the team to beat in the Eastern Intercollegiate Tennis Association, and the Crimson has found a spot in the national rankings. West Virginia probably will win a fifth straight Atlantic 10 Conference title.

Region 2—Clemson will battle Duke, North Carolina and Maryland for the Atlantic Coast Conference title. Furman and Tennessee-Chattanooga will fight it out in the Southern Conference. South Carolina and new coach Kent DeMars will tackle Florida State in the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference, and South Carolina State probably will be the force in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

Region 3—Georgia, Louisiana State, Alabama and even Auburn could win the Southeastern Conference championship. Florida State will be strong in the Metro; Georgia Southern will be tough in the Trans America Conference, as will Georgia State. Northeastern Louisiana is the team to beat in the Southland Conference. South Alabama and South Florida will fight it out in the Sun Belt Conference, while Murray State and Middle Tennessee State will do battle in the Ohio Valley Conference. Miami (Florida) is a strong independent.

Top players—George Bezcny, Georgia; Roger Blackburn, Tennessee; Andrew Burrow, Miami (Florida); Necvet Demir, South Florida; Gregg Hahn, Alabama; Scott L'Heureux, Georgia State; Gary Meanchos, Georgia Southern; Allen Miller, Georgia; Bobby Montgomery, Murray State; Fernando Perez, LSU; Michael Pernfors, Georgia; James Poxon, South Alabama; Joey Rive, Florida State; Andy Solis, Alabama; Shawn Taylor, Florida; Jon Trembl, Northeast Louisiana; Paul Varga, Kentucky; and Marcel Van Der Merwe, Auburn.

Region 4—Five teams (Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio State and Wisconsin) have a chance to be the 1985 Big Ten Conference champion. Notre Dame will be in the Midwestern City Conference hunt, and Ball State and Western Michigan should be at the top of the Mid-American Conference standings.

Top players—Peter Bowton, Illinois; Tom Coulton, Ball State; R.J. Dunkle, Western Michigan; Matt Grace, Minnesota; Keith Jensen, DePaul; Jim Sharton, Michigan; Roger Smith, Ohio State, and Chuck Swayne, Wisconsin.

The Big Eight Conference title fight will be fought in Oklahoma again this season, with Oklahoma and Oklahoma State the combatants. Oral Roberts and Oklahoma City will join Notre Dame in the quest for the championship of the Midwestern City Conference, while Southwest Missouri State works on locking up the Association of Mid-Central Universities title.

Top players—Rich Ambrosini, Iowa State; Ross Campbell, Oklahoma City; Jim Carson, Nebraska; Andy Castle, Wichita State; Jeff Fuchs, Southwest Missouri State; Rodney Kowis, Southwest Missouri State; Peter Mallet, Oklahoma State; Jimmy Nelson, Iowa, and Mike Wolf, Kansas.

Region 6—Southern Methodist will face stiff competition from Arkansas, Texas A&M, Texas and Houston for the Southwest Athletic Conference title. New Mexico will be a contender in the Western Athletic Conference.

Top players—Steve Bickham, New Mexico; Bobby Blair, Arkansas; Dacio Campos, Houston; Grant Connell, Texas A&M; David Egdes, Trinity (Texas); Tom Fontana, Texas; Greg Hill, Texas A&M; Chris Kennedy, Trinity (Texas); Mikael Knutas, Arkansas; Little Rock; Richey Reneberg, Southern Methodist; John Ross, Southern Methodist, and Mark Styling, Southern Methodist.

Region 7—Utah will battle New Mexico for the Western Athletic Conference title, while Weber State may win another championship in the Big Sky Conference after taking the crown a year ago.

Top players—Tom Barth, Air Force; Jonas Ehrlin, Weber State; Dave Harkness, Brigham Young; Rod Horton, Weber State, and Paul Lobban, Utah.

Region 8—It might be easier to list the teams without a chance to do well in this region. California, California-Irvine, Fresno State, Long Beach State, Stanford, Southern California and UCLA all have the players and experience to win a conference title and make the Division I tournament.

Stanford, Southern Cal top contenders for women's title

By Bruce L. Howard
The NCAA News Staff

Women's college tennis fans in the states of California, Texas and Florida will be watching the cream of the crop in 1985, as the top 10 preseason Division I teams are from those three states.

California leads the way with six top 10 teams, and the battle in California, the Western Collegiate Athletic Association and the NCAA is expected to be waged between defending national champion Stanford and 1983 champion Southern California.

Other preseason top-10 teams from California, as ranked by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association, are San Diego State, UCLA, California and Pepperdine. Miami (Florida), Florida, Texas and Trinity (Texas) are other top-10 teams.

Stanford, which had a 26-0 dual-match record last year en route to its second NCAA title in three years, returns three all-Americans but heads into the 1985 season with a little less experience than last year.

"We will have three freshmen out of our top six," said coach Frank Brennan, who has guided the Cardinal to both NCAA championships. "Although I think we had a good recruiting year, you can't replace experience that fast. The talent is there, but we may be lacking experience; we also are not as strong in doubles this year."

"USC is awfully tough, and I expect a two-horse race between USC and ourselves."

Experience comes in the form of Linda Gates, the senior captain who played fourth in the Cardinal rotation last year but who made it all the way to the NCAA championship, where she lost to Georgia's Lisa Spain. Gates is ranked No. 2 this year behind Trinity's Gretchen Rush.

"I think the team looks up to her (Gates) because she has accomplished so much in collegiate tennis," Brennan said. "I think she is ready to provide the leadership we need for the team."

In addition to finishing second in singles last year, Gates teamed with Elise Burgin to win the doubles title.

Other veterans in the starting lineup are Patty Fendick and Leigh Anne Eldredge. Fendick, a sophomore, compiled a 35-7 record as a freshman from the No. 1 singles position. The only previous Stanford freshman to play No. 1 was Kathy Jordan. Fendick is ranked third in the preseason ITCA rankings.

Eldredge advanced to the NCAA quarterfinals last year after upsetting No. 1 seed Kathleen Cummings of Texas. Eldredge, ranked ninth this spring, was 35-5 in dual matches last year.

Among the newcomers, freshman Anna Ivan from Palo Alto High School appears to be the most promising. Even prior to playing a collegiate match, Ivan is ranked sixth among Division I players heading into the 1985 season.

Competing for the Nos. 5 and 6 spots will be sophomore Stephanie Savides and Alyce Werdell and freshmen Kay Tittle and Cari Hagey.

"I think singles will be our strongest area this season," Brennan said. "We have four players ranked in the top nine in the country, and I would be comfortable with any one of them playing No. 1."

Southern California coach David Borelli will try to overtake Stanford behind the one-two punch of Cecilia Fernandez and Heliane Steden.

Fernandez and Steden, both juniors, played second and third, respectively, in singles last year and teamed for a 26-3 record in doubles. Steden advanced to the third round at last year's NCAA championships before losing to San Diego State's Cynthia MacGregor.

Speaking of MacGregor (37-11 last year), she is one of five returning starters for the Aztecs. She will be joined in the rotation by Cathy Berry (32-7), Dana Bleicher (21-8), Linda Howell (28-14) and Anne Moeller. MacGregor and Howell were 29-6 as the No. 1 doubles team.

Like Stanford, Texas is short on experience but very talented. Coach Jeff Moore's squad will be led by sophomore Beverly Bowes and freshmen Michell Carrier and Anne Groubeck.

Bowes, who lost in the first round of NCAA competition last year, will team with junior Rebecca Callan in doubles. Groubeck, from Weston, Massachusetts, is ranked 14th prior to playing her first collegiate tennis match, while Carrier, from Memphis, Tennessee, is ranked 42nd.

Other key Texas players are sophomore Robyn Field (26-6), sophomore Heather Eldredge and senior Gen Greiwe.

Trinity coach Emilie Foster hopes this is the year that her team stops the California dominance of Division I women's tennis; and with Rush and Lisa Sassano on her side, it just may be the year for the Tigers.

Gretchen Rush, Trinity (Texas)

Rush, 31-2 last year and 61-3 in her two-year career, is the top-ranked women's player entering the 1985 season, and the doubles team of Rush and Sassano also is at the top of the charts.

Rush competed in the Olympics last summer in Los Angeles and was a member of the U.S. team that played Great Britain in London for the Wightman Cup. She was the only amateur on the U.S. team. In 1983, she won two gold medals at the Pan American Games in Caracas, Venezuela. Rush was named women's amateur tennis player of the year in 1984 by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Other members of Trinity's top six who return from a 31-2 campaign are Jana Klepac (23-8) and Elvyn Barraque (27-1). Foster's top newcomers are freshmen Dabney Langhorne, ranked ninth nationally in girls' 18 singles, and Mary Graber.

UCLA faces a rebuilding year after losing its top two singles players—Elizabeth Minter and Patricia Hy—to the professional circuit. Coach Gayle Godwin must rely on junior all-America Lynn Lewis and sophomores Jane Thomas and Jessica Algazi. Top recruit Joni Urban also must contribute for the Bruins to be national contenders.

California, ranked eighth in the preseason poll, could be the sleeper. The Golden Bears return all six singles players from last year's 18-10 team that lost in the first round of NCAA competition.

Two of California's players—Heather Ettus and Linda Oechsle—are ranked among the nation's top 40 singles players. Also included in that group is freshman Jennifer Prah, ranked 23rd.

Southeastern Conference champion Florida also will contend nationally with five starters returning, including SEC singles (No. 2) and doubles (No. 1) champion Jill Hetherington (21-13). Joining Hetherington will be Tammy Whittington (29-3), Michele Sniffen (19-10), Julie Quamme (22-11) and Jan Martin (20-11).

Completing the preseason top 10 is Pepperdine, which is led by the one-two punch of Pam Jung and Elisa Fernandez. The only question for coach Gualberto Escudero's squad is depth at the Nos. 5 and 6 spots.

In the Big Ten Conference, look for a battle between Northwestern and Indiana. Tracy Hoffman will lead the Indiana charge, and Eva Lucido will help Northwestern try to unseat the Hoosiers as conference champion. Both teams are ranked in the preseason top 20.

Oklahoma State, behind Renata Marcinkowska and Mary Boudreaux, is ranked No. 11 nationally and should win the Big Eight Conference. Oklahoma, led by Allyson Ingram, will be the chief challenger.

Clemson appears to have a slight edge over North Carolina and Duke in the Atlantic Coast Conference race. Melissa Seigler of Clemson and Duke's Sue Taylor are among the ACC's best singles players.

Besides Florida in the SEC, Kentucky and Georgia have promising outlooks for 1985, although Georgia must overcome the loss of Spain, last year's NCAA singles champion.

Other teams ranked in the top 20 are Arizona, South Florida, Harvard, Arizona State and U.S. International.

New champion is a certainty in Division II men's tennis

Life at the top of the Division II men's tennis world has belonged to one team the past seven years, but 1985 brings a year of change and a renewed hope of winning an NCAA championship for many teams.

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, winner of the past seven NCAA championships, has deferred the sport for one year to allow time to rebuild the program. Kent DeMars, who led the Cougars to all seven titles, was named to direct the program at South Carolina, prompting the move by the Edwardsville administration.

The move of Southwest Texas State from Division II to Division I further opens the way for new front-runners. The Bobcats finished second in three of the past four NCAA championships.

Hampton Institute, which won the 1976 championship, would appear to be the new favorite; however, the Pirates' outlook is somewhat uncertain because of a coaching change.

Among the top challengers this

Moccasins' Division II goal is third championship in row

Will Division II have a new woman's tennis standard-bearer for the first time since the NCAA adopted a single-elimination tournament? And can Davidson defend its 1984 team title and No. 1 preseason ranking? These and several other questions will soon be answered as the 1985 tennis season gets under way.

Although Tennessee-Chattanooga won the Division II women's title a year ago, successfully defending a crown first earned in 1983, the Lady Moccasins have been ranked fourth in the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association (ITCA) preseason poll.

With explosive doubles players Sue McCulloch, Christine Pilcher and Louri Pilcher, it will be interesting to see if a team that returns basically intact has as much trouble with the contenders as some coaches seem to foresee.

The players who battled for the 1984 singles title, Elizabeth Calander of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville and Sharon Swanberry of Stetson,

Another NCAA title would suit Houston to a T

By Michael V. Earle
Assistant Editor

If Houston's golf team is as good as Division I coaches say, the Cougars better make room in their trophy case for a slew of spring tournament trophies and another NCAA championships title.

Mike Holder, whose Oklahoma State team finished runner-up to Houston in last year's championships, is one of several coaches predicting another NCAA title for Houston, which has won 15 championships in the past 29 years under coach Dave Williams.

"Houston is head and shoulders above the rest of the teams in the nation," Holder said. "They have the experience it takes to be a national champion."

"They could field a second-string team that could place in the top 10. When you look at teams across the country, there aren't any that can match Houston's experience. Hopefully, some team will close the gap as the spring season progresses."

Houston's lineup is laden with talent; however, Williams is not recommending opposing coaches mail in their scores.

"If we are so great, why am I worried?" Williams said.

"We did play well this fall; we actually played over our heads. Whether we can play like that this spring is hard to say."

Houston won all five of the fall tournaments it entered against most of the nation's top teams. The Cougars' most impressive victory was a 16-shot triumph over runners-up Wake Forest and Oklahoma at the Grenelefe Golf Resort in Grenelefe, Florida, site of this year's NCAA championships.

Williams has the enviable task of selecting his five-man roster from at least eight solid players.

Williams' decision actually boils down to his Nos. 3 through 5 spots. Steve Elkington, individual runner-up at last year's championships, and Billy Ray Brown, the 1982 NCAA individual champion, have the top two spots secured.

Scott Verplank

The remainder of the lineup will be filled by either Mike Standly, David Tentis, Tray Tyner or Carlos Espinosa, all of whom significantly contributed to Houston's fall success.

"If everybody plays well, we could have a better team than last year," Williams said. "Golf is a funny game. A bad shot here and a bogey there, and some team could sneak up on us."

Teams that have bright outlooks and a chance of catching Houston include the following:

Wake Forest—Coach Jesse Had-dock's experienced lineup is led by seniors Jerry Haas, Mark Thaxton and Mike Barrow and complemented by juniors Billy Andrade and Chris Kite. All five are consistent golfers who make the Deacons a real threat.

UCLA—The Bruins have one of the nation's top golfers in senior Duffy Waldorf, who had a red-hot summer tour and steamed into the fall season with a victory at the first annual 24-team Americana Invitational, which UCLA won by 14 strokes. Coach Eddie Merrins believes this year's squad has gained enough experience and confidence to turn seven runner-up tournament finishes of last year into victories.

Oklahoma State—Coach Mike Holder has a young but talented squad led by veteran Scott Verplank, who put on a dazzling putting display with five birdies down the stretch to capture the U.S. Amateur Championship. Freshmen Brian Watts, Mike Bradley and E.J. Pfister, all of whom carry impressive junior golf credentials, will need to mature in a hurry for Oklahoma State to be a top contender.

North Carolina—The Tar Heels' fourth-place championships finish and John Inman's record-breaking 17-under-par individual title capped an outstanding season. Davis Love, defending Atlantic Coast Conference champion, who placed eighth at the championships, will fill the void left by Inman's graduation. No fewer than 11 veterans and newcomers are in contention to make the lineup.

Brigham Young—Despite graduating the three top golfers, coach Karl Tucker is confident the Cougars will have another fine year. Tucker has a highly touted recruiting class that includes Brent Franklin, Canada's top prep prospect.

Oklahoma—If coach David Yates finds the right blend of experience and new talent, the Sooners will be contenders for the national title. Three starters return from last year's third-place championships squad—Jim Begwin, Grant Waite and Todd Hamilton. Begwin shot a championships-record 63 last year en route to an 11th-place tie. The Sooners have played well at Grenelefe, winning there in 1983 and tying for second this year.

Louisiana State—Three key players from last year's squad that tied for sixth in the championships and two talented transfers could propel the Tigers to the Southeastern Conference title. Rob McNamara, who was voted the SEC freshman of the year, and all-SEC selection Emlyn Aubrey and veteran Bob Friend provide a solid nucleus.

Billy Andrade

San Jose State—After winning three of the last four Pacific Coast Athletic Association team titles, the Spartans will have a new look under first-year coach Dick Schwendinger, who was hand-picked by his predecessor, Jerry Vroom. Plenty of talent remains for Schwendinger—including conference champion Larry Silveira—to keep his team among the best.

Southern California—After a school-record seven tournament titles, including the Pacific-10 Conference championship, Southern California's prospects look bright. The Trojans have one of the best in the nation in Sam Randolph, runner-up in the U.S. Amateur, Southern California Amateur and Pacific Coast Amateur. Randolph, who has won seven collegiate titles, and Mike Blewett, who had an outstanding freshman campaign, will keep the Trojans among the leaders in every tournament they enter.

Florida—A blend of experience and leadership has coach Lynn Blevins confident that Florida, host of this year's championships, will crack the nation's top 10 teams. The Gators have improved under Blevins, placing 16th at the 1983 championships and 11th last year. Seniors Scott Dunlap and Robb Burns turned in consistent fall performances. Individually, two-time all-America David Jackson, who finished in the top five in four fall tournaments, leads the Gators.

Georgia—Coach Dick Copas enters his 15th season with a one-two punch that he would not trade. Peter Persons and Louis Brown will keep Georgia in the title hunt for their spring tournaments. Copas needs to find consistent golfers to complete his lineup and vie for national honors.

South Carolina—After a 12th-place championships finish, South Carolina's hopes for a return trip rest with three freshmen, one sophomore, a junior and a senior. However, coach Bobby Foster's freshmen—Rudi Rudisill, Mike Thigpen and Brian Lehnhard—have the talent to overcome their inexperience.

Other top teams—Arizona State, Arkansas, Texas A&M, Weber State, Lamar, Texas, Ohio State and Stanford.

Miami (Florida) has the talent to defend its women's title

Tracy Kerdyk, Miami (Florida)

It is a good thing Lela Cannon was a swimming coach before she became golf coach at Miami (Florida). After the Hurricanes were presented last year's NCAA Women's Golf Championships team trophy, Cannon was tossed into a nearby pool by her team to kick off a victory celebration.

Cannon's swimming ability again could be put to the test at the conclusion of this year's championships. Miami is an early favorite to defend its title despite the graduation of two-time all-America and 1983 NCAA individual champion Penny Hammel.

After opening last year's season with a sixth-place finish at the Florida State Lady Seminole, Miami rode a hot streak that included five team titles in its next eight tournaments. The streak was capped with a six-stroke victory at the championships, Miami's fifth national title in the past 15 years.

With the addition of Tracy Kerdyk, who many feel has the ability to be as good as Hammel, Miami should get off to another quick start. Kerdyk had a tremendous prep career, winning the Orange Bowl International and PGA Junior title as well as the Florida junior golfer of the year award twice.

Heading the list of returns is senior Michele Bertecotti, who finished regulation play at last year's championships in a three-way tie for first before losing in the play-off. Bertecotti's 75.6 average ranked second to Hammel last year.

Donna Cusano, a top-25 championships finisher last year with a 76.1 stroke average, recently captured the Florida Intercollegiate individual title. The surprise on the Hurricanes' squad is Gina Hull, whose steadily improved play last year earned a 17th-place championships finish.

If another victory swim is in store for Cannon, the Hurricanes will need to defeat some pretty heady competition. Teams in contention for national honors include:

Florida—The Lady Gators had a strong fall season despite the absence of No. 1 golfer Deb Richard, the 1984 U.S. Amateur champion, who was competing in the World Cup in Hong Kong. Florida won three tournaments and placed third in two others this fall. Veterans Lisa Stanley, Page Dunlap and Tammy Towles carried the Lady Gators during Richard's absence. With a healthy Richard in the lineup, look for Florida to make a strong bid for the championships title.

Duke—The Blue Devils may be without all-America Mary Anne Widman, but the rest of the lineup that helped Duke claim the Atlantic Coast Conference title is back and has been supplemented with the arrival of two highly regarded freshmen. With the talent first-year coach Dan Brooks inherits, bettering Duke's seventh-place championships finish appears likely.

Furman—With top-10 finishes in the past two championships, Furman once again is a top contender. Coach Mic Potter's lineup is bolstered by Sara Anne Timms, the individual titlist at Fall Creek Falls last spring; Dottie Pepper, the low amateur at the U.S. Open, and Kathy Hart, who captured the New York Women's Amateur this summer.

New Mexico—If the Lady Lobos' fall season is an indication of things to come, a top-five championships finish is likely. New Mexico won its first two tournaments, followed by a one-stroke runner-up finish at the McGuire Invitational. Senior all-America Theresa Schreck leads the Lady Lobos, along with Kristi Arrington, who almost always finishes among the top 10.

North Carolina—Despite failing to win a tournament for the second straight year, North Carolina had a consistent 1984 season, finishing in the top half in 10 of its 15 outings. Page Marsh leads the Lady Tar Heels with a 78.5-stroke average. Last year's 12th-place championships finish was paced by Kandi Kessler, who enters

Blue Devils—sixth in '83, fourth in '84—in title countdown

Central Connecticut State has improved in each of the past five NCAA Division II Men's Golf Championships.

The Blue Devils finished 18th in 1980, 11th in 1981, ninth in 1982, sixth in 1983 and fourth in 1984, the last behind the play of individual champion Greg Cate.

But, if a championships title is in the Blue Devils' future, they will need to get the job done by September 1, 1986, the date on which the Central Connecticut golf program hopes to be classified in Division I.

Blue Devils coach Lowell Lukas is optimistic about the chances of winning a Division II title.

"With a little luck, we could win the whole thing," Lukas said. "We have four guys back from last year, and that experience should be a great asset to us."

The best of Lowell's assets is Cate, whose final-round flurry, which included four straight birdies beginning with the 13th hole, carried him to medalist honors last year.

"Greg winning the national championship was a real surprise and a big bonus for us," Lukas said. "I think that opened doors for him and really gave him a big boost of confidence."

"It also gave the whole team confidence. They know they can compete with Greg, so that gave them the confidence of knowing they can play with anybody."

The confidence Cate instilled in his teammates was evident this fall. In three consecutive fall tournaments, Central Connecticut walked away with top individual honors.

Shawn Baker, who led the team with a 73.6 fall stroke average, won the prestigious Yale University Invitational Tournament with a three-day total of 220. Cate finished fourth, while teammate Don Muccino was fifth.

Cate later took center stage at the Toski Tournament, where he captured individual honors and led the Blue Devils to third place.

Muccino then followed up with a great performance at the 50th annual New England Intercollegiate Golf Association Championships, capturing medalist honors on the tough New Seabury Country Club course.

Central Connecticut capped the fall season by defending its title at the 24th Eastern College Athletic Conference championships with a two-day total of 612. The team title was Central Connecticut's fifth under Lukas. Cate, who led the Blue Devils' charge with a two-day total of 148, finished tied for medalist honors, but lost in a sudden-death play-off; Baker finished third, one stroke behind Cate.

Rounding out Lukas' lineup is Shaun Wheatley, who posted a 78.3 fall average, and Kevin Giancola, whom Lukas describes as the player that "filled our missing link." Giancola's best fall performance came at the West Point Invitational, where he tied with Baker for third.

"On any given day, any one of those guys can beat the others," Lukas said, "It gives us the depth you need to do well in the NCAA championships."

"I'm really looking forward to the spring season. Hopefully, we'll continue up the ladder at the championships. I think we are headed in the right direction and feel we have as good a shot as any team to win it all."

Central Connecticut's shot looks even stronger with the reclassification of Southwest Texas State to Division I. The Bobcats won the 1983 championships and last year edged Central Connecticut by one stroke for third place.

Other top teams in contention for national honors include:

Troy State—Gone from last year's first-place championships team are six players, four of whom were all-Americans, and coach Mike Griffin. Former Troy State all-America Ron Mobley succeeds Griffin and has three returning lettermen, some top-notch junior college transfers and a talented group of freshmen. Returnees Charlie Moller and Wes Tuck had good fall seasons and should carry the Trojans to their sixth straight Gulf South Conference title and keep them in contention at the national championships.

Columbus—After being ranked No. 1 for most of last season, Columbus finished fifth at the championships. The Cougars, who have won two national championships in the past seven years, are led by Hugh Royer III, who posted a 71 fall average. The Cougars' balanced lineup includes four golfers who had fall-stroke averages of 75.5 or lower.

Sam Houston—When the Bearkats host this year's championships, they will not be unaccustomed to either their role as host or the quality of the field. Sam Houston, which will host its third national championships tournament in the past seven years, won four consecutive National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championships from 1978 to 1981 and finished seventh in last year's NCAA championships. The Bearkats return three players, including all-America honorable mention Jim Phenice. Mark Dees and Ronnie Fletcher, both of whom had 311s, finished tied for 35th at the championships. The championships course—Waterwood Country Club was the site of the Bearkats' last national title.

Slippery Rock—Coach Al Schmittlein will field a team primarily made up of freshmen who showed great promise this fall. Leading the Rockets, who posted their highest (ninth) championships finish last year, is junior co-captain Jim Hagstrom, an 11th-place championships finisher with a 74.8 average. Mike Wyland, who averaged 77.4 this fall, and Art Brunn, whose three-under-par 69 helped Slippery Rock capture the Davis and Elkins Invitational, pace Schmittlein's freshman recruits.

Indiana (Pennsylvania)—The Big Indians' 13th straight championships trip resulted in an 11th-place finish, Indiana's worst finish since 1980. With a top five composed of veterans, things look better for coach Ed Slogner, whose teams won top-10 finishes in the past eight championships. Leading the Big Indians is Joe Klinchock, the defending Pennsylvania Conference medalist who was in the running for individual honors at last year's championships after opening rounds of 73 and 75.

Other top teams—Florida Southern, Central Florida, California-Davis, Gannon, Cal State Sacramento and Southern Illinois-Edwardsville.

Cal State Stanislaus is regrouping to defend Division III men's title

After a two-year absence, Cal State Stanislaus finds itself back where it had been in six of the previous nine seasons—defending the NCAA Division III Men's Golf Championships team title.

Wooster captured the first title in 1975. But the next six years (1976-1981) Cal State Stanislaus dominated the championships, including a record 72-hole total of 1,156 in 1980.

Ramapo broke the Warriors' championships grip in 1982, and Allegheny won the title in 1983. But Stanislaus got back in the winner's circle last year, coming from six strokes back in the final round for a 293 and a 1,210 total.

"It's like that old Gene Autry song, we're 'Back in the Saddle Again,'" coach Jim Hanny said. Three years ago, we lost by one stroke; and two years ago, we just played poorly and were never really a factor.

"Last year's team didn't have the talent of some of the teams we've had, but it had more character than any of those before. Those young men showed a lot of character."

With the loss of three all-Americans, Hanny will need to do some rebuilding if the Warriors are to defend their title. However, Hanny has the materials with a first-rate group of transfers and key recruits.

"We've got a good group of student-athletes, who are pressing each other to make the team," said Hanny, who enters his 13th season at Cal State Stanislaus. "Early qualifying rounds have been encouraging."

Leading the fall-season circuit was all-America Doug Dunakey, the Northern California Athletic Conference player of the year last season and a leading contender for championships medalist honors. Nick Bocchino, an honorable mention all-America after his first championships tournament, is Hanny's No. 2 golfer.

Although Hanny's squad has the potential for an eighth championships title in 11 years, he concedes winning is not as easy as it once was.

"A few years ago, there might have been only two or three teams that were serious contenders," Hanny said. "Now, the top 10 teams are getting closer together. I would say there were at least a half-dozen teams at last year's championships capable of winning, and that's a good sign."

Teams capable of winning this year's championships, which will be conducted at the Monroe Golf Club in Pittsford, New York, include host Rochester, Methodist, Ramapo, Worcester State, Greensboro, Central (Iowa), Nebraska Wesleyan, Allegheny and Wooster.

Brenda Corrie, who finished in the top half of the championships field. Corrie leads the Lady Deacons with a 76.9 stroke average, followed by Helen Wadsworth (79.2) and Cara Andreoli (79.9).

Tulsa—Not only can Tulsa coach Dale McNamara boast about having one of the finest programs in the nation, she also can crow about having two of the best freshmen in the nation—Melissa McNamara and Carey Ruffer. Each proved her outstanding prep career was not a fluke by winning an individual title this fall. Ruffer won the Oklahoma State Cowgirl Invitational with an impressive three-round total of 224, while McNamara earned a title at the Nancy Lopez Invitational.

Other top teams—Arizona State, Florida International, Indiana, San Jose State, Ohio State, Mississippi State, UCLA, U.S. International and Oklahoma State.

Miami (Florida)

the spring campaign with a 78.9 average.

Stanford—After three exceptional recruiting years, Cardinal coach Tim Baldwin has his squad primed for a run at the championships title after a ninth-place finish last year. The gem of Baldwin's recruiting classes is Kathleen McCarthy, who won five tournaments, compiled the nation's third-lowest scoring average and placed fifth at the championships as a freshman.

Georgia—NCAA individual champion Cindy Schreyer ensures a successful season despite a youthful lineup. Coach Liz Murphey was pleased with the fall play of her young squad, as five golfers carried averages of 78 or below into the spring season.

Wake Forest—Second-year coach Amy Geithner returns her top five players, including NCAA qualifier

1985 Column No. 6

Determination of divisions—Convention Proposal 63

At the NCAA Convention, Proposal No. 63 was adopted to amend Bylaw 10-1-(f) by adding a new subparagraph (3) and renumbering subsequent subparagraphs to specify that an institution's athletics program for men and women shall be placed in the "unclassified membership" category if either its men's program or its women's program fails to meet the appropriate division's sports sponsorship criterion. An institution placed in "unclassified membership" is ineligible for NCAA championships and postseason football contests during that period. In addition, the institution would be able to vote only on constitutional issues at the Convention.

Proposal No. 63 became effective with the adjournment of the Convention January 16, 1985.

Multidivision classification—Convention Proposal 65

At the NCAA Convention, Proposal No. 65 (as amended by Proposal No. 65-1) was adopted to amend Bylaw 10-3-(b) to eliminate the opportunities for a Division I member to have a women's sport classified in Division II or III and a Division II member to have a women's sport classified in Division III. Proposal No. 65, as amended, becomes effective September 1, 1986. Accordingly, during the 1986-87 academic year, and thereafter, such multidivision classification opportunities will no longer exist.

Graduate assistant coaches

At its January meeting, the NCAA Council revised its earlier interpretation regarding graduate assistant coaches to provide that a graduate assistant coach under Bylaw 7-1-(h) must be enrolled as a graduate student in a classification that qualifies that student for appointment as a graduate assistant under the policies of the institution and must be enrolled in a minimum of 50 percent of the institution's minimum full load of courses applicable to the student's specific graduate program. The Council's prior interpretation required the graduate assistant coach to be enrolled in a specific graduate degree program.

Awards regulations—golf and tennis tournaments

As set forth in Constitution 3-1-(i)-(1)-(ii) and as summarized in paragraph II of the Legislative Assistance column in the January 9, 1985, issue of The NCAA News, the value of any and all awards received by any one competitor in a special event such as an invitational golf or tennis tournament may not exceed $300 and must be properly personalized (i.e., the event for which the recipient is receiving the award and/or the identity of the recipient are permanently inscribed on the award). Merchandise items that cannot be properly personalized (e.g., gift certificates, appliances, sporting goods) are prohibited.

For example, it would not be permissible for a participant in a tournament to receive as an award a merchandise item or gift certificate from a pro shop.

As provided in Case No. 93 (page 269, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), the receipt of an award that does not conform to NCAA awards legislation would jeopardize the student-athlete's eligibility for all intercollegiate competition and not solely for the sport involved.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie Vaughan, administrative assistant, NCAA national office, no later than February 18, 1985.

Wrestling: Replacement for Michael B. Edwards, Winston-Salem State University. Replacement must be from Division II, District 3.

return for another season, as do many of the top-ranked players.

A reshuffling of team and individual rankings may be in order, but wholesale changes and an influx of new faces into the national spotlight do not seem likely.

In Division III, all-America selection Caroline Barclay heads the Davidson roster, as the Wildcats hope to defend the 1984 team title they won in thrilling fashion over challenges from California-San Diego and Occidental, squads that again look strong.

Principia's Courtney Allen reigns as the queen of individual players in the division, and her 1984 doubles partner, Suzy Verheul, also is back. Another Principia sweep in the individual events is a definite possibility in the championships at Kalamazoo College in May.

As in Division II, many of the top teams and players from 1984 will be battling for national rankings and championships berths in Division III this spring. Following is a look at some of the leading teams and individuals in NCAA Divisions II and III women's tennis:

Division II

Top teams: California-Davis (Polly Garbell, Helen Nazar, Marla Newton); Cal-Poly Pomona (May Hollycross, Debbie Jung, Sandra Rodriguez); Cal State Northridge (Missy Conn, Marla Reid, Shari Ryave, Cindy Woodhouse); Denver (Kim Dans, Caren Honig); Florida Southern (Allison Avery, Barb Borzari, Betty Broadwater); Morehead State (Helen Curtis, Helen Hadden, Angela Longo); Notre Dame (JoAnn Biafore, Mary Colligan, Lisa LaFratta); Southern Illinois-Edwardsville (Candler, Laurie Foederer, Jan Petras, Lisa Schuito, Patty Tiddy).

Top players—Betsy Bender, Georgetown; Karen By, Pace; Caroline Clark, Stephen F. Austin State; Robin Cloverdale, Montana State; Dawn Coccozza, Central Connecticut State; Rebecca Duster, Allegheny; Sandra Elliott, Northern Colorado; Kathy Federici, Georgetown; Dawn Furseth, San Francisco; Lois Jackson, Florida International; Debbie Jones, Tennessee-Martin; Judy Kniffen-Clardy, Abilene Christian; Susan Lacace, Pace; Justine Landis, Bloomsburg; Diane Milos Ianick, San Francisco State; Biljana Mirkovic, Stephen F. Austin State; Johanna Nicholls, Sam Houston State; Diana Pursiana, East Stroudsburg; Marcy Roe, Northern Colorado; Laura Slade, Idaho State; Anne Starr, Ferris State; Tory Thomas, Allegheny.

Division III

Top teams—California-San Diego (Nadine Akimoto, Lisa Gilbert, Glenna Moses, Melly Santi, Jessica Vernon); Davidson (Barclay, Tricia Ives, Lolly Johnson, Debbie Podolin); Emory (Mary Elliot, Dennis Herbert, Julie Price); Hollins (Krista McShane, Jennifer Patinga, Amy Ware); Mary Washington (Krissy Andrews, Lisa Cope, Susie Groah, Noelle Lasar, Michele Marangi); Occidental (Kristin Carter, Carolyn Chen, Susan Johnson, Holly Kuwayma, Frannie Leon, Tina Martin); Principia (Allen, Ellie Clark, Tish Hopkins, Suzy Verheul); Rhodes (Mary Ann Fesmire, Laurie Laughlin); Trenton State (Ilde Ardigo, Kathy Crowley, Lynne Heinemann, Wendy Kaufman); William Paterson (Dawn Olson).

Committee begins planning for first Division III women's soccer play-off

The NCAA Women's Soccer Committee will consider proposals regarding the newly established Division III championship—scheduled to begin in 1986—but will not make recommendations to the Executive Committee concerning field size until more information about sponsorship figures is available.

Meeting in New Orleans, Louisiana, January 28-31, the committee decided to mail questionnaires to all Division III institutions for reaction to possible formats and tentative plans.

Proposal No. 95, passed at the NCAA Convention last month in Nashville, Tennessee, established the Division III championship. Teams from Divisions I and II will continue to compete in the National Collegiate Women's Soccer Championship.

The committee will recommend that the National Collegiate Championship final four continue to be conducted at a predetermined site but that the third-place game be eliminated. George Mason University will host the 1985 final four.

No site was recommended for 1986.

Proposals for realigning the regions were reviewed but no action was taken.

The use of Federation International de Football Association (FIFA) rules was discussed. Committee members emphasized that modified FIFA rules, not NCAA men's soccer rules, are used for National Collegiate Championship play. Committee members

Division II declaration of intent is not required

Division II institutions will not be required to declare their intention to participate in either the existing National Collegiate or the Division III Women's Lacrosse Championship.

In a report in the January 23 issue of The NCAA News, it was incorrectly also emphasized that if an institution does not intend to use FIFA rules during the regular season, opponents should be given reasonable notice.

The committee noted that as of August 1985, seeding of the top four teams nationally will not be allowed. Instead, teams will be assigned to tournament sites within their respective regions, in accordance with Executive Committee policy.

In addition, the committee will request at the Executive Committee's meeting in May an increase in the current bracket from 14 to 16 teams.

stated that such a declaration would be necessary.

Inasmuch as the original championship was established as a National Collegiate event by the membership in 1981, Division I and Division II institutions are eligible only for that event.

New champion

year are five California teams, including Chapman and Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, ranked second and third, respectively, in the Division II preseason poll conducted by the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association.

Chapman returns five starters and has four of those five ranked among the preseason top 35 individuals. Junior Troy Turnbull is ranked 14th in singles after a 25-15 season last year. Other starters are Terrel Davis, John Soldat, John Hancock and Paul Charlesworth. All five returnees were all-conference performers last year.

Not only will Chapman and Cal Poly-SLO be top rivals in the California Collegiate Athletic Association; the national title may be decided between those Division II powers.

Coach Hugh Bream's Cal Poly-SLO team has so much depth that some of last year's starters may not be able to crack the starting rotation.

Junior redshirt Brian Bass, who sat out last season, probably will play from the No. 1 singles position. Bass was an all-America in doubles two years ago. California-Irvine transfer Bob Zoller will fight for one of the other five spots, along with returnees Dave Reynoldson (11-8), Rob Pritz-kow (17-7), Jim Rakela (17-5) and Mike Giusto (14-3).

Cal State Hayward, led by the doubles combination of Rolf Wiedenmeyer and Brian Mehmedbasich, has won nine consecutive Northern California Athletic Conference titles and has a 61 dual-match victory streak alive in conference play. Wiedenmeyer and Mehmedbasich lost in the Division II doubles championship last year and became the first twosome in Hayward history to win a match in Division I competition.

Trying to end Hayward's NCAC streak will be California-Davis, which must rebound from the loss of four starters. Coach Bob Bigg will have freshman Nigel Thomsen of Australia to help offset those losses. Aleco Prevolos is the top returnee from last year's 18-2 team.

With one of the division's best singles players in Scott Appledorn, Ferris State could emerge and challenge the California schools. Ranked fourth in the preseason poll, the Bulldogs return four starters, all seniors, and have added two top-notch freshmen in Greg Stickle and Chris Caldwell. Teaming with Appledorn, who had an 18-2 record and advanced to the quarterfinal round last year, will be Lee Isler (11-5).

Sunshine State Conference champion Rollins is ranked this year after a 26-8 season. Key returnees are Brian Talgo (25-8), Rob Bates (21-11), Jonas Martinsson (25-5) and Brian Morrissey (20-11).

Dan Merritt leads the charge for Tennessee-Martin, which returns four top singles players. Merritt, ranked 23rd in preseason, was 23-12 last year.

Division III

Unlike the situation in Division II, Redlands will return to defend its Division III title, however, the Bulldogs face a rebuilding year and many tough teams ready to challenge the three-time NCAA champions.

Coach Ralph Rabago takes over at Redlands for Jim Verdieck, who led the Bulldogs to national titles in 1979, 1983 and 1984. Although Rabago faces a rebuilding job, he has defending singles titlist Scott Moore back to lend experience at the top of the lineup. The other returning player is all-America Roy Chow.

Two-time NCAA champion Kalamazoo may be able to unseat Redlands; at least that is the prediction of the division's coaches who ranked the Hornets No. 1 in the preseason poll.

That ranking was based on the fact that Kalamazoo returns its entire singles rotation and all three doubles teams. Alex Palladino, who lost in the NCAA singles championship last year, and Tim Corwin are the top threats for coach George Acker's squad.

Gustavus Adolphus, another two-time NCAA champion and runner-up last year, will be in the thick of the national battle if coach Steve Wilkinson can find replacements for three singles players. The Gusties have one of the division's best doubles teams in Raman Jayapathy and Riley Horan, runners-up last year. The other returning starter, junior Mayank Capoor, probably is the Gusties' best singles player.

Steve Gittleston, ranked seventh in the ITCA preseason poll, is one of five returning starters for Emory, 25-8 in dual matches last year. The No. 5-ranked Eagles also will have veterans Haig Kazazian, David Utter, David Eastman and Marvin Hale in the starting singles rotation.

Two other teams with NCAA championship trophies—Swarthmore and Claremont-Mudd-Scripps—also are among the preseason top 10. Claremont, which advanced to the NCAA championship despite a 13-22 dual-match record, will rely on seniors Mark Nys and Alex Cioth.

California-San Diego, which lost last year's doubles championship team of Dan Beers and Eugene Jones, returns only two starters from a 14-11 squad. Coach Steve Mott's only experienced starters are Mike Gates and Roy Derevanik.

And then there were two.

Lois Blackburn, women's tennis coach at Mary Baldwin College, started the 1984 fall season with 10 players on the roster and a lot of enthusiasm. "One by one," Blackburn said recently, "they just kept falling by the wayside," until only two players remained.

Libby Miller was attending a party on campus when an accident landed another Mary Baldwin student on one of her knees; Libby was out for the season. Marce Willard had put together a great serve; only trouble was, every time she used it, her shoulder hurt. Marce also was gone for the fall.

Four matches into the "snake-bit" campaign, Kerry Rohloff suffered a severe ankle injury, and teammate Dawn McKinney had a fall that put her on crutches for the rest of the season. Even with these losses, Blackburn had enough players to fill six singles spots and to put together three doubles combinations.

Right?

Almost. Doctors' orders relieved the Squirrels of the services of Coco Rivers and Jasmine Reyes.

Then, Sarah Miller was diagnosed as suffering from tendinitis of the foot, and Karen Griffin had a bout with the flu that left her so weak she was unable to return to the squad.

"At that point, I had Beth Davidson, who had been playing No. 1 singles, and Kim Wooten, who had been No. 9 on the roster," Blackburn recalled. "I even used Kim Dawson, who had played in the spring. Well, we tried to play her."

"Kim had wrist problems, so she tried to go left-handed. That didn't work; so we called the people we had left on our schedule and told them we just wouldn't be able to make it for those last three matches."

Adding insult to injury, Blackburn was playing indoors with some friends when she broke her foot, not too long after one of the team's managers had fractured an ankle during a trip home.

"When everybody saw me on those crutches, all they could do was laugh," Blackburn said with a chuckle. "I got no sympathy at all!"

STEVE BYRNE, defensive line coach at Gustavus Adolphus the past two seasons, named defensive coordinator, replacing WARREN WEST, who resigned after 14 years on the staff... ROBERT ESTOCK, offensive coordinator at Davidson since 1979, named offensive line coach at Yale. Estock will coordinate recruiting and handle the budget... DON BOCCI, an assistant at Kansas State the past 10 years, selected as recruiting coordinator at Arizona State. Bocchi replaces GREG MEYER, who resigned to become an assistant at Wichita State. At Kansas State, Bocchi also was assistant athletics director for academic certification and NCAA compliance... JIMMY HEGGINS named offensive end coach at Southwestern Louisiana... ROY GREGORY named at Vanderbilt. He had been an assistant and recruiting coordinator at New Mexico... JOHNNIE MAC HOLLINGER, offensive line coach at New Mexico, resigned to become offensive coordinator at Valdosta State... BILL MEYERS named assistant head coach, offensive coordinator and offensive line coach at Missouri. He had been offensive line coach for the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League.

Men's golf—RUSSELL GALLIANO chosen at Nicholls State, replacing CLARK SMITH, who entered business. Galliano, a teacher in the education department the past 18 years, coached high school and college football.

Men's soccer—TIM MALONEY resigned at New York University after two seasons... DAVID GOLDSTEIN selected head soccer and lacrosse coach at Mount Union. He had been an assistant at Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, where he lettered in football, track and soccer. A draft selection of the Los Angeles Aztecs of the North American Soccer League, Goldstein also coached at Pacific and Cal State Los Angeles.

Women's soccer—ERIK VISSER, who has been an assistant the past three years with the men's program, named at San Francisco to coach the institution's first women's soccer team.

Women's soccer assistant—ERIK NIELSEN named at San Francisco. Nielsen graduated from San Francisco in 1984, where he earned all-America honors in 1982. He also will serve as an assistant for the men's team.

Women's softball assistants—CURT BENSON chosen volunteer assistant pitching coach at Nebraska-Omaha. He had been pitching coach at Buena Vista during the team's NCAA Division III national championship season last year and second-place finish in 1983... MARGARET SUTTER and JACQUE BOWMAN, former players at California, selected at San Francisco.

Women's tennis—KELLY HENRY, a four-time Southern California all-America and member of the women's 1983 NCAA championship team, named at Pomona-Pitzer. She replaces ANNE BAGES, who is on leave while serving as acting director of the institution's international hall. Henry has competed at Wimbledon, the United States Open and the French Open.

Men's track and field—KEVIN COYNE resigned at Boston University for personal reasons, effective immediately. He has been head coach since the summer of 1983 and a member of the track and field staff since 1980.

Men's track and field assistants—DAVID ANDERSON named a volunteer assistant at Hartwick and RONALD HEBBARD selected as assistant coach. Anderson, a 1983 Hartwick graduate, competed for four years in both cross country and track and field. Hebbard, a 1984 Cortland State graduate, competed in cross country and track at his alma mater.

Wrestling—ROBERT PRADO chosen at Pomona-Pitzer to replace Walt Ambord, who was named baseball coach (see Baseball). Prado had been wrestling coach at Cal Tech.

STAFF

Athletics academic advisor—TIM SHEA, head women's basketball coach at Salem State, appointed, effective February 20. He is the institution's first athletics academic advisor.

Athletics department fund-raiser—BILL HENNEBERRY selected at San Francisco, where he played on the 1951 unbeaten football team.

Director of alumni relations—MICHAEL E. LEIGHTON named at Creighton.

Associate sports information director—JOHN O. MOORE promoted at Duke after seven years as assistant SID.

Assistant sports information director—STEVE JANISCH named at Long Beach State.

DEATHS

ARTHUR C. "DUTCH" LONBORG, a former athletics director at Kansas and one-time chairman of the NCAA Basketball Committee, died January 31 after an extended illness. He was 86. After graduating from Kansas with a law degree in 1923, he coached basketball at McPherson and Washburn. He later coached at Northwestern for 23 years. His record was 237-198 at Northwestern and included the 1931 Big Ten championship. He was AD at Kansas from 1950 until his retirement during the 1964-65 school year, during which time the Jayhawks won 38 conference titles and the Allen Fieldhouse was constructed. He was elected to the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame after his retirement... LEANN DAVIDGE, who coached Miami (Ohio) to four Mid-American Conference tennis championships, died from injuries suffered in a car accident. She was 28. Davidge played for four years at Ohio State... FRANK SEVIGNE, track coach at Nebraska for 29 years prior to his 1984 retirement, died January 29. He was 62. Sevigine coached the Cornhuskers to five Big Eight Conference titles and was a Nebraska Track Officials' Hall of Fame inductee. His athletes won 10 NCAA individual and relay titles and nine athletes became Olympians... A. C. "BUTCH" LAMBERT, a former Southeast Conference official, died January 26 of Lou Gehrig's disease. He officiated football and basketball for 30 years and was recently honored by having the football field at Jackson's Mississippi Memorial Stadium named after him.

Correction

In the January 23 issue of the News, Harold Nichols was listed in one reference as having compiled a 463-68-11 record at Iowa. He built that record at Iowa State.

Briefly in the News

Director of Athletics Robert Brodhead is asking the Louisiana State University board of supervisors for $27 million to build a new athletics dormitory and administration building and to renovate and enlarge Tiger Stadium, which has a capacity of 76,869. The funds would be raised from a special bond issue backed by revenue generated from high-priced seating included in the stadium enlargement plans... Ohio State University will solicit $8 million in private funds to build an indoor football practice field and to renovate its football practice facility, according to Richard M. Bay, director of athletics. The plan will be presented to the university trustees within the next few weeks... The Rice University athletics department has planned an appreciation event for retired Sports Information Director Bill "The Barber" Whitmore and his wife, Lucy, February 14. Whitmore was the Owls' SID for 35 years before retiring last summer to become a consultant to the department.

William Fuller, a two-time all-America defensive tackle at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has presented his alma mater with a $50,000 endowed scholarship for athletics. Fuller was drafted last spring by the Philadelphia Stars of the United States Football League and was a starting defensive lineman until breaking a leg in midseason. "I made a name for myself in North Carolina and want to come back here some day to live. I'm hoping this scholarship will be an indication of the commitment I have made to the university and this state," Fuller said.

West Virginia University will sell $7.5 million in state-backed stadium construction bonds to increase seating for football by 4,668. The result would be a U-shaped stadium seating 61,738. The project also includes more athletics offices and facilities in the stadium. Fred A. Schaus, director of athletics, said the expansion would not raise ticket prices to Mountaineer games... Texas A&M University's right to license and otherwise control the use of logos, emblems and other service marks identified with the institution has been reaffirmed by the state's 10th court of appeals. A lawsuit was initiated by a group of College Station merchants and originally tried in October 1983. The earlier verdict favored the merchants, but an appeal was filed by the university.

Wesley A. Stanger, a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania who graduated in 1929, has endowed men's racquet sports at the university with a $100,000 donation. Stanger was captain of the university's first squash team in 1929, and he also was captain of the tennis team. The gift is part of the university's $2 million drive to endow all sports... Forty-six percent of all student-athletes at Western Illinois University earned at least a 3.000 grade-point average (4.000 scale) during the 1984 fall semester. In addition, 93 percent of all varsity athletes achieved at least a C average. Eight of the Westerwinds' 97 athletes earned 4.000 GPAs.

At Temple University, 70 women and 40 men student-athletes achieved a grade-point average of 3.000 or higher (4.000 scale) for the 1984 fall semester, while maintaining a minimum of 12 semester hours... A volunteer track official who was struck in the head by a 16-pound shot at the 1980 NCAA Division I Track and Field Championships in Austin, Texas, has been awarded $97,261 by a jury for injuries he suffered in the accident. James P. Smith sued the University of Texas, Austin; track coach Cleburne Price, and the supervisor of the event. The institution is considering an appeal.

Committee members turnover rate reviewed

About 20 percent of the membership of NCAA standing committees changes each year, according to a study prepared for the NCAA Council.

The study included all of the Association's general (Council-appointed) committees listed in Bylaw 12-3 and all of the men's and women's sports committees in Bylaws 12-4 and 12-5. The Council, Executive Committee and Presidents' Commission were excluded.

Committee membership from 1981 through 1984 was the basis for the study. During that four-year period, there was a total turnover of 80 percent on men's sports committees, 57 percent on women's sports committees and 81 percent on the general committees. The combined percentage for men's and women's sports committees was 71 percent; the percentage for all of the committees studied was 75 percent.

The study was undertaken to provide information for the evaluation of 1985 Convention Proposal No. 37, which would have reduced the current three-year term (with one permissible reelection) on NCAA committees to two years (with one permissible reelection).

That proposal originally was developed by the Council, which then decided in its pre-convention meeting, in light of the study results, to ask the Convention to refer it back to the Council for additional study. The four-year committee study had not been available when the Council originally voted to submit the proposal.

The desire for shorter committee terms has been urged by women representatives, who believe such a change would involve more individuals in the committee procedure and cause an infusion of new ideas.

Those Council members who believe the issue needs additional study point out that a turnover of 20 percent per year or more on those committees is more than enough for purposes of stability; women's sports committees have been in existence for only four years and thus are not yet fully into the rotation pattern; of the 66 standing committees, 46 meet only once per year and an individual on one of those 46 committees would be involved only twice, or four times if reelected, in the work of the committee, and there is no evidence that a more rapid turnover rate would result in better committee decisions.

phone conference.

In another summer-meeting consideration, the Administrative Committee discussed the need for a proposed meeting of primary women's athletics administrators this summer. While the majority of the Special Committee on Women's Interests reportedly does not believe such a meeting is necessary, that committee suggested that there is sufficient interest in the membership to conduct a meeting.

The Administrative Committee took the position that it is inappropriate for the NCAA to sponsor a meeting if there are not compelling reasons to do so inasmuch as member institutions incur the costs of sending individuals to the meeting. The committee agreed to confer with G. Jean Cerra, University of Missouri, Columbia, newly appointed chair of the special committee, regarding a likely agenda and to discuss with the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics that organization's interest in holding such a meeting in conjunction with the annual NACDA meeting in June.

The Council canceled the 1985 Division I summer meeting.

Among the sports committees, the lowest four-year turnover rates were on the Men's and Women's Rifle Committee and the Women's Soccer Committee, both with 33 percent. Lowest among the men's sports committees was the Division II Football Committee at 50 percent. The highest turnover in the four-year period was experienced by the Men's Ice Hockey and Men's Volleyball Committees, both at 133 percent.

The lowest among the general committees was on the Extra Events Committee and the Volunteers for Youth Committee, both with no changes. The Extra Events Committee was established in 1981 and the VFY Committee became a standing committee in 1984.

Highest turnover rates among the general committees were on the Professional Sports Liaison (183 percent) and Top Ten Selection (171 percent) Committees.

The NCAA Council will review 1985 Convention Proposal No. 37 in its April meeting.

No hit with this miss

Despite her attire, or lack of it, this miss failed to make a hit with Hope College's Scott Gelandner who stoically sank both free throws in a recent 75-49 victory at Calvin College. He jump-shoots his free throws to boot.

It's not all fun and games. Today's teams mean business.
