Basketball coaches' 500-victory club is growing

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

In the men's College Basketball 1984 Press Kit, we published the first-ever list of all men's college coaches in history—regardless of division or association—who won 500 games at the four-year level. There were 32 on that list and only five had joined it in the 1980s.

Now, less than two seasons later, the 500 club could reach 40 members by the end of this season. North Carolina's Dean Smith and Northern State's (South Dakota) Bob Wachs joined in 1984. Earlier this season (January 23 News), Tennessee State's Ed Martin and Old Dominion's Paul Webb reached 500. Early this month, Duane Woltzen of Lakeland (Wisconsin), a non-NCAA member like Northern State, made it 37 members.

Tuesday night, February 19, Albany, (New York) Richard "Doc" Sauers had a chance for his 500th, but his team lost at Hamilton in its last regular-season game (he was not with the team because of his mother's death). But the 20-4 Great Danes will be home Friday, February 21, to meet Brockport State in a conference play-off game.

The same night, Maryland's Charles "Lefty" Driesell saw his team fail for the fourth time (three of them tough Atlantic Coast Conference road games) to get No. 500, losing at Georgia Tech. But the 19-10 Terps were back home Thursday night, February 21, heavy favorites to defeat 7-16 Towson State.

Both can reach 700

"I don't know if it's all that significant," says Driesell. "I guess if you're dumb enough to coach for 25 years, you'll probably win 500." The truth is, however, that only Dean Smith, among active 500-game winners, can top Lefty's .707 winning percentage.

And, Driesell has a good chance to win 700 or more (only six have won 700) if he keeps going. "Right now, I feel like I could coach another 15 to 20 years," said Driesell, 53.

Sauers is in top condition. He can beat any of his players in racquetball or golf. He has never had a losing season in his 30-year career (one .500 team, 1964) and he, too, is a good bet to reach 700 victories if he keeps going. (He is 54.)

The 40th member of the 500 club? That could be Angelo State's Ed Messbarger, now at 495. But his 17-12 team would have to win an NCAA tournament game to make it.

Washington's Marv Harshman, in his final season, leads active Division I coaches at 638, while Clarence "Big-house" Gaines, Winston-Salem State, tops all active coaches in all of college basketball at 731—fifth on the all-time list.

Oregon State's Ralph Miller needs three to reach 600 victories (only 12 have done it in all divisions), if you don't count 15 victories forfeited in the Lonnie Shelton case by NCAA Council action. South Carolina's Bill Foster recently got his 400th.

200 wins in nine seasons

Syracuse's Jim Boheim last week got his 200th victory in just his ninth season of coaching—a rare feat indeed. Louisville's Denny Crum had 219 at the end of his ninth. Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas had 224 after nine, but his first year at Long Beach State, the team was in Division II. Grambling State's Fred Hobdy had 218 after eight, but the team was in Division II that entire span. But no other big winner in Division I can match Boheim (it should be added that big winners like Adolph Rupp did not even play 20 games a year early in their careers)

NCAA pays about $1 million in legal fees from TV suit

The NCAA has paid nearly $1 million in legal fees to the Universities of Georgia and Oklahoma and to the attorneys who represented them in the litigation that resulted in the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan and implementing contracts being declared in violation of the Federal antitrust laws.

Judge Juan C. Burciaga earlier ordered the Association to pay the plaintiffs' legal fees in the amount of $975,702.34.

The amount paid included the following:

- $354,543.75 for charges by attorneys Andy Coats and Clyde A. Muchmore.
- $135,497.75 to the firm of Crowe & Dunlevy, Oklahoma City (firm of which Coats and Muchmore are members).
- $2,750 to University of Georgia attorney James F. Ponsoldt.

- $34,087 to Washington, D.C., attorney Philip R. Hochberg.

- $12,962.50 to University of Oklahoma attorney Stanley M. Ward.

- $22,283.45 to the firm of Jones, Day, et al., Washington, D.C.

- $59,034.14 for various legal expenses.

- $354,543.75 as an extra award for attorneys Coats and Muchmore.

The extra award of $354,543.75 for Coats and Muchmore was established by Judge Burciaga when he increased Muchmore's billed rates by 50 percent and Coats' billed rates by 35 percent and multiplied by two. According to advice from the plaintiffs' attorneys, that money will be retained by Coats and Muchmore and will not be distributed to the plaintiffs or other organizations and individuals who paid the actual time and charges for those attorneys during the litigation.

Play-off drive

Dan Gustad of Hope has helped the Flying Dutchmen achieve a 17-3 record this season and become a contender for a play-off berth in the NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship. (See story on page 7). Gustad is shown in action against Wheaton (Illinois).

316 radio stations to broadcast play-offs in men's basketball

More than 300 radio stations across the country are gearing up to broadcast the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

The NCAA Radio Network will cover all four regional finals, the national semifinals and the national championship, the latter two scheduled March 30 and April 1 in Lexington, Kentucky.

As of February 19, 316 stations were included in the network and more stations were expected to join in the coming weeks.

The total includes 96 of the nation's top 173 radio markets. CBS radio affiliates accounted for 166 stations, while Host Communications, Inc., of Lexington, Kentucky, received commitments from 150 additional stations.

Coaching not the means to an end; it was the end

By Bill Reynolds
Providence Journal

When it was all over, when the press conference was over, when the team had been told and the well-wishers had left, when everyone finally knew that he officially had resigned, Joe Mullaney (Providence College men's basketball coach), sat in the locker room with Dave Gavitt (Big East Conference commissioner). Just like he did in the old days.

It was only fitting.

In a sense, Mullaney belongs to the old days, to a simpler time when a coach was a coach and not an Organization Man. His days were long before recruiting camps and recruiting letters and selling your soul to a 17-year-old because he hit two jumpers in a row. It was long before everyone started recruiting high school sophomores and watching a prospect play 43 times because if you didn't, someone else would. It was long before college basketball became a business often run with the class of a used-car lot.

"I would never have gone into the game if I had to do what assistants have to do now to get their chance," said Mullaney... "if I had had to go through what they have to do now to pay their dues."

Mullaney always wanted to be a coach, not a recruiter. Not a salesman. Not a West Coast promoter. Just a coach.

If you were not around in the late '50s and early '60s, maybe it's impossible to know just what Joe Mullaney meant. It was not just the crowds that lined up all the way from the Connecticut border to downtown Providence after the Friars won their first National Invitational Tournament title in 1961. Or that a college basketball team grabbed hold of a state's heart. Or that tiny Providence College was putting New England basketball, putting Providence, Rhode Island, on the national map.

Joe Mullaney

It was just that it seemed a wonderful fairy tale, a dream come true. And Mullaney? He was the dream-weaver.

But even then, when Mullaney was as close to a living legend as any coach could ever be, he never cared about glory. But the thing to understand is that coaching was never a means to an end. It was the end. All the rest was frosting.

And not only had coaching been Mullaney's first dream, it had been his only dream. It had started way back in the '30s, back when he was coming of age in Elmhurst, Queens, another New York kid weaned on the city game, another kid traipsing into the doubleheaders at the old Garden as a communicant. But while others only wanted to be players, Joe wanted to coach. He would go to the Garden and study the moves of Clair Bee, then the coach of Long Island University, a man years ahead of his time.

By the time he got to high school, he knew he wanted to coach. Mullaney got a chance during his senior year when the football coach — summoned at the last minute to fill a vacancy, knowing little and caring less — often skipped practice and left Mullaney in charge.

His record speaks for itself: six trips to the NIT, two titles. Three trips to the NCAA championships. Nine 20-victory seasons in a row. A winning percentage of .742, at the time the third-highest in the country behind only John Wooden and Adolph Rupp.

"I never had any money," said Mullaney. "There was never any program. We just got lucky with some kids."

But recruiting always was luck. Mullaney got Len Wilkens on a fluke. He got Jim Hadnot and John Thompson, who wanted to play for the Celtics, because of an NBA rule that gave pro teams the rights to any collegiate players in a 50-mile radius.

"It never was because Providence was the place to go," said Mullaney.

It also never was big time. Dee Rowe, the former University of Connecticut coach, can remember visiting Mullaney when the coach shared a partitioned office with the track coach and some ROTC officers. This was the big time?

Gavitt tells a story about the first year he served as Mullaney's assistant. He had come from being an assistant at Worcester Academy, working for Rowe, who had every minute of practice accounted for, everything programmed. For a month, Mullaney never mentioned what they were going to do when practice started. What's going on, thought Gavitt. Even the day before practice was to start, Mullaney said nothing. Finally, the two met in the men's room minutes before practice began and Mullaney asked, "What do you think? Start them off in two lines?"

The point is, Mullaney always operated that way. It always was a team, not a program. A team coached by the consummate basketball junkie, a man who liked nothing better than coaching. A purist who'd learned the game by watching how teams played each other, who always had been intrigued by the game.

What he came up with was a zone defense with man-to-man principles, a defense years ahead of its time, a friends who've been through a lot of wars together, men who symbolize the greatest eras in Providence basketball.

The conversation cut through the years, but the underlying themes were how the game has changed, how people here have unrealistic expectations; how the game has changed; how people here have unrealistic expectations; it was all done on a wing and a prayer, a Hail Mary pass that connected.

"Maybe if we had been weaned on the way it is now, it would be different," said Gavitt. "But we came of age in a different game."

Now, the bottom line has become filling arenas and signing big-money television contracts. Now it's all bodies; about who has the bigger, stronger, faster bodies. All the roads lead back to recruiting, not coaching.

"People say I didn't like recruiting,"

Columnary Craft

defense that was his trademark as the names changed from Wilkens and Egan to Jackson and Thorpe. It was a defense that, combined with the hard work of Mullaney's players, enabled tiny Providence College to play schools packing much more raw talent.

He was getting ready to go to practice, putting on the sneakers to go out on the court as he has his entire life. A few minutes before, a reporter had asked him how long he had been involved in basketball.

"Since I was 12 years old," he said. Across the floor sat Gavitt, who as athletics director had brought Mullaney back to Providence. Once, Mullaney had been his mentor. They are mused Mullaney. "No one likes recruiting. But we recruit about a thousand times more now than we ever did in the old days. Recruiting has gotten rough. It's a tough, aggressive, nasty scene out there."

"But what happens when there are no more games to look to?" he was asked. "Won't you miss it?"

"Ten, 15 years ago it would have been different," he answered. "But I've had my run."

Then, Joe Mullaney, the once-upon-a-time dream-weaver who ended up having to go one-on-one with his own legacy, went out to coach his team.

Just like he did in the old days.

Don't exploit student-athletes, help them

State Senator Ernest Chambers, Nebraska
The Kansas City Times

"You have to make them (student-athletes) employees. I do think they're exploited. They're treated like gold mines to be mined for the enrichment of others; yet, they are the only category of students that generates rather than consumes revenue. Then, when they are through, they get lost in the shuffle.

"All of the rules should be aimed at giving the athlete a break, not holding him down. Coaches can sign a three-year contract and not think twice about going to another school without a problem. A student-athlete may want to leave a place, but they tell him he can't play for a year; so, he loses a year, and that detracts from his growth and potential. The purpose of this is to keep the stud in the barn."

Brice B. Durbin, executive director
National Federation of State High School Associations
USA Today

"(Alcohol and drug programs in high schools) will be an education tool rather than enforcement. The record shows that enforcement does not reduce the problem.

Opinions Out Loud

Education is the way to go. We started last fall with seminars on chemical health education, and we hope to grow with programs for coaches, officials and students. We are going to be aggressive on this."

Don DeVoe, basketball coach
University of Tennessee, Knoxville
Knoxville News-Sentinel

"I think it is unfair that our players have to compete against them (cheaters). There are unethical programs all over the nation. But I think the practice (of cheating) is more widespread in our conference. I think we are on the verge of developing a credibility problem."

Bobby Brown, coordinator for amateur baseball
Major League Baseball
Collegiate Baseball

"All of us have losses in life. We should never alibi or offer excuses or blame someone for a loss. I found the best way was to keep quiet and control your emotions. For you will get an opportunity to try again the next day or next game."

James W. Shaffer, commissioner
Midwestern City Conference
Indianapolis News

"We are not trying to be another Big Ten. Sometimes, I think they will enhance us.

"What we want to do is build a really solid league, but we want to keep everything in perspective in our philosophy and academics.

"Someday, we'd like to look back and think we have been part of building something good that has national respect."

Ron Maly, columnist
The Des Moines Register

"C. Vivian Stringer is doing a marvelous job of building a women's program at Iowa... However, the hope here is that people quickly forget about what was listed as a record crowd of 22,157 at a recent game.

"The figure is phony and should never be put in the record book as the most ever at a basketball game in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"Hawkeye officials all but begged for people to show up to the game just so a record could be broken. When some were let in free, the whole deal lost all credibility."

Nora Lynn Finch, head women's basketball coach
North Carolina State University
The Associated Press

"Anyone can win it (the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship) this time. It's got to be great for us (women's basketball) from a marketing standpoint."

Eddie Sutton, head men's basketball coach
University of Arkansas, Fayetteville
The Associated Press

"It's frustrating. I know people are winning because they're doing things illegally. In the pros, everything is legal. You pay them their money; and then, you fine them if they don't do what you tell them."

Dave Bliss, head men's basketball coach
Southern Methodist University
Chicago Tribune

"Sometimes, you can have a lot of problems with concentration simply because you've had the same players so long. They've heard the same speeches from me quite a few times. I just can't get them up for every game the same way. Sometimes, I tell them you have to go out and win simply because you're better. But, they know we've worked too hard not to cover ourselves against the teams we should beat."

half a century ago).

Three Division I women's coaches have reached 300 career victories this season — UCLA's Billie Moore, Memphis State's Mary Lou Johns and Louisiana Tech's Sonja Hogg.

89 feet, 10 inches

Here is the update on that "longest" controversy (February 13 News): Mac Yates, Marshall SID, reports: "Julian Farino of the Guinness Book of World Records told me he understood the Virginia Tech goal in 1980 (in the Guinness book as 89 feet, 3 inches) was measured from his back foot to the backboard, not the back of the rim (as was reported to the NCAA and announced in wire stories). We measured the Bruce Morris shot as 89-10 from the heel of his back foot, as estimated from film, to the backboard and that is what we are submitting to Guinness. But who really knows? Morris hit a 22-footer at the buzzer last week to beat Davidson, 65-63, and he said he'd trade a game-winner for a long one any day."

60-point game

Ernest Lee of Clark (Georgia), the top scorer in NCAA men's basketball this year, scored 60 points against Benedict in his team's final regular-season game. Is this the national season high? Lee is averaging 34.1. The 6-3 sophomore next plays February 26 in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference tournament. (Bill Jordan, Clark assistant coach)

Bullets will bounce off me now

Southern California junior Rhonda Windham, a 5-5 point guard, is averaging 6.1 points and 6.3 assists per game this season, but the numbers don't begin to describe her on- and off-court contributions. Windham has returned to the Southern Cal lineup after three operations and 16 months of rehabilitation on her right knee.

Windham injured the knee while charging the offensive backboard to tip in a teammate's missed shot during a National Sports Festival game in June 1983. "I jumped up and everything changed," she recalled for Mike DiGiovanna of the Los Angeles Times. "I couldn't see the sides of the court, and everything was blurry. It felt as if I was suspended in air, like a slow-motion picture." When she landed, her kneecap had moved toward the inside of her knee. Unable to look at the sight, she held her arm over her eyes from the time she was carried off the floor until doctors at the hospital popped the kneecap back.

"There were a lot of people in the observation room, but when Dr. (Richard) Steadman said he had to pop my knee back, everybody left. Nobody wanted to watch."

"The next day, I asked if I was going to need surgery, and as Dr. Steadman passed me the box of tissues, he said, 'Yes,'" Windham continued. "He was really straightforward with me and positive the entire time. He told me he'd fix my leg 100 percent so I could play again. He gave me confidence throughout the ordeal. I never had any doubts. I just knew it would be a long time and I'd have to stick with it."

The injury was severe. The knee and kneecap were completely dislocated; all of the knee ligaments were torn. Had there been any damage to the artery, doctors said they might have had to amputate Windham's leg.

"It was just about the worst knee injury you could get," declared Bob Beeten, the sports festival trainer. "Most people who go through their lifetimes as athletics trainers will never see anything like that."

"Tearing just one cruciate (cross-shaped) ligament is hard to come back from," said Dr. Steadman. "Tearing all the ligaments makes it that less likely. Not many have returned to play at such a high level. I wonder if there are any?"

Janet Hourihan, a junior at Holy Cross, is among the Division I women's leaders in three categories.

Though she was rusty at first, Windham was determined to return to her old form. "I knew in my mind I was going to come back all the way and play the way I once played," she asserted. "I wasn't going to settle for anything less. I put my heart and soul into the game and I can't hold back. My knee is very strong now. If I got shot, I wouldn't feel it. Bullets will bounce off me now. I feel I can do anything I want to."

Remembering Estes

Twenty years ago this month, Utah State's Wayne Estes, a 6-6, 225-pound forward, was leading the country with an average of almost 34 points per game. He had just played the best game of his life, scoring a field-house record of 48 points to boost his career total to 2,001. Three hours later, on February 8, 1965, he died when he walked into a hanging, high-voltage power line that had been knocked loose when a car skidded into a power pole. No one knew it was a live line.

Basketball notes

Hundreds of people had been walking under it all night long, but nobody else was 6-6.

"He was the greatest variety shooter who ever lived," said Ladell Anderson, his coach at Utah State and now men's head coach at Brigham Young. "Maybe (Larry) Bird is as good, I don't know. Guys are getting a million dollars now for making dunks and maybe a few jumpers, but there has never been anybody who had such a command of all the shots as he did."

Del Lyons, his roommate and teammate and now an insurance agent in Logan, Utah, told Mike Clark of the Associated Press: "Athletics is such a small, minute part of life. I want to talk about the things Wayne did and the way he was as a person. He was one of the greatest people I've ever been around."

Many people recall how he spent many hours with children in Logan, umpiring Little League games and signing autographs. His mother, Helen, says she asked him, "Wayne, don't you ever get tired of all those kids hanging around?" And he said, "Mom, I just love it."

The kids loved it, too. Greg Hansen, now a sports columnist with the Arizona Daily Star in Tucson, was one of the kids who shadowed Estes: "He was so big, but so gentle. Remember when you'd have playground games and pretend to be some big star? Well, you had to stand in line for three weeks to be Wayne Estes."

32 seasons later, not 33

We keep hearing and reading that St. John's (New York) has not been ranked No. 1 since 1951. Technically, that is true, but it was really the 1952 season — 1951-52 — that is. In December 1951, the Redmen were voted No. 1. Frank McGuire was head coach. And in their very next game, the Redmen went to Kentucky and were bombed by Adolph Rupp's team, Dave Hoppen, a junior at Nebraska, ranks among the Division I men's leaders in two categories.

But the story does not end there. St. John's got revenge late that season, knocking Kentucky out of the 1952 NCAA tournament, 64-57, in the regional championship game at Reynolds Coliseum, Raleigh, North Carolina, led by Bob Zawoluk and Jack McMahon. It ended Kentucky's 23-game victory streak and put St. John's into the Final Four in Seattle, where it reached the championship game, losing to Kansas, 80-63.

Now, the Redmen are No. 1 again and threatening to give "Louie the Lunch" Carnesecca, one of the country's winningest coaches, his first-ever trip to the Final Four. His team was 22-1 (the only once-beaten Division I team) heading into a Wednesday night home game February 20 vs. Boston College.

The lucky sweater

St. John's had won 17 in a row at that point since a road loss at Niagara (when point guard Mike Moses was unable to play), and the last 11 came while Carnesecca was wearing a "lucky sweater," an unlovely brown, red and blue creation that a friend sent from Italy. "I'll keep wearing it until we lose," says Carnesecca. And then? "And then I'll burn it," he said. Says Al McGuire, former St. John's player, Marquette men's coach and now a television color man, among other things: "Not even the moths will go after that thing." It was McGuire, by the way, who tagged him "Louie the Lunch" because: "He was my second baseman and third-base coach on the (St. John's) baseball team. His father owned a deli, we'd get hungry around the seventh inning and Louie would break out the sandwiches (the team went to the third round of the College World Series in 1949 before losing to Southern California)."

Coaches are cuckoo

Another former coach and now color man, Detroit's Dick Vitale of ESPN, says: "We won 21 in a row at Detroit before we lost to Michigan. I wore the same clothes, everything, including underwear, the whole streak. But I was so cuckoo, I went a step further. I did everything the same way — shaving, eating, everything. I love Louie. He has to believe it's Chris Mullin, Walter Berry and Bill Wennington winning for him, not a sweater. But boy, he's got that sweater going for him. Well, all coaches are goofy. Anybody depending on somebody's jump shot for his living is a little cuckoo."

Pete Newell, who coached an NCAA championship team at California (1959) used to do it, but Nevada-Las Vegas men's coach Tarkanian says that is not the reason he chews on towels during games. "It started 24 years ago," he told Owen Canfield of the Hartford Courant. "I was coaching Redlands High School in an afternoon championship game. It was boiling hot and I kept getting up and running to the water fountain for a drink. The game wound up tied in regulation. I grabbed a towel and soaked it in water, and then sucked on it so I wouldn't have to keep getting up. We won the game and I've done it ever since. Superstitious? Sure, but we all do strange things. We're basketball coaches."

Quotes of the week

Former DePaul men's coach Ray Meyer in his weekly column in the Chicago Sun-Times: "Pro basketball is for the chosen few... You tell the player it's wonderful to have that goal, but he has to have a secondary plan. I had good teams at DePaul the last seven to 10 seasons, yet in all that time, we put only three players into the pros... Dave Corzine, Mark Aguirre and Terry Cummings. Only the superstars last a long time. The kid who is the 10th or 11th man on the pro squad lasts only a year or two."

North Carolina men's coach Smith after a narrow victory over Jacksonville: "Adolph Rupp once told me to be wary of anyone who calls you up for a game. If I had placed the call, we might have expected a breather, but it was (coach) Bob (Wenzel) who called me." (Gary Izzo, Jacksonville SID)

Memphis State women's coach Mary Lou Johns after her team lost to powerful Mississippi: "They just outmuscled us. We could eat for months and not be big enough to play physically with that team." (Carla Stephens, Memphis State sports information office)

After a frantic spell of four straight overtime games, Illinois State men's coach Bob Donewald could look ahead to an open Saturday. "Some might think I won't be under any pressure Saturday," he said. "Well, they'd be wrong. I have to take my daughter (Lisa, 16) for her driver's license test. Now that's pressure." (Lisa passed, and he went back to coaching, and back to working overtime, as his team edged Tulsa, 73-72, for their fifth victory in six overtime games this season (the Division I record is eight). (Rich Nolan, Illinois State assistant SID)

San Jose State men's coach Bill Berry had this classic quote after his team held Pacific to 12 points in the first half and won, 76-46: "I was pretty sort of pleased with the defense — except half the time." (Rick Weber, Stockton Record)

North Carolina State's Jim Valvano went to Rutgers but says he actually wanted to go to St. John's. "But they said something I didn't like," he told Furman Bisher of the Atlanta Journal. Which was? "They said they didn't want me." Valvano adds that he was born in Manhattan and grew up in Queens under the elevated-train line: "That's the reason we talk so fast. We had three minutes to make our point before the next train came along."

The nation's top turnaround? Well, how about the Cal State Hayward men, 1-25 last season, the first under Gary Hulst, but at 17-5 this season and leading the Northern California

Tammy Beeler, a MacMurray senior, leads Division III women in field-goal percentage.

Athletic Conference. "Everyone should go through that," Hulst told Denise Tom of USA Today. "What they say about athletics building character isn't true. Athletics magnifies character. When you win, that's great. But when you lose, the alibis really come out." Marty Valdez, Cal State Hayward SID)

The "high five" is as much a part of sports now as instant replays, shot clocks and marching bands. But Loyola (Illinois), with an eight-game winning streak and 14 victories in its last 16 games, has come up with the "low five." In pregame warmups, the first four Ramblers go out with the usual high-raised open palms. Then, 5-9 Carl "Go Go" Golston runs out in a crouch, his palms opened barely inches from the floor. The Rambler reserves all lower their arms to the floor and Golston slaps them as he goes by. "We started it about halfway through the season," said Golston. "It's not to show anyone up, but just to get ourselves going and get us loose. The fans like it, too. It's kind of a sign that we're together and having fun." (Paul Mettewie, Loyola SID)

Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs on the Big Eight Conference title race: "They can throw water on the fire and call in the dogs. It's not over, but we put it out of sight." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID)

Good time Wanda

Drake junior Wanda Ford, among the national leaders in Division I scoring and rebounding, is a leader in other ways as well. Ford is a member of the school's "Good Time Gang," a group of students under the direction of professor Ray Pugh that travels to community elementary and junior high schools to discourage alcohol, drug and tobacco abuse. The group performs in comic skits at Des Moines schools to demonstrate to young students that they can have a good time without drinking, smoking or using drugs. Ford, the only female member of the "Gang," is a recreation major who aspires to a career working with young children. (Minerva Carrillo, Drake assistant SID)

The Reitz stuff

Evansville is reaping rewards from its "Reitz Connection." Two of the players on this season's women's roster, Shelly Adlard and Barb Dykstra, attended Evansville Reitz High School, leading that team to the 1981 Indiana state high school girls' championship. Both made the state high school all-star team, both competed in track and volleyball, and both have surpassed 1,000 points at Evansville. Adlard is the leading scorer in Lady Ace history, and Dykstra should be No. 2 on the scoring list by season's end.

Adlard, who is a senior, will graduate this spring, but another Reitz graduate, sophomore forward Lisa Martin, is rising in the ranks to keep the connection intact. (Schoan Hensel, Evansville student assistant SID)

Another Division II crown? Cougars can just picture it

The traditional photograph that will be taken of the 10 individual champions at the March 2-3 NCAA Division II Wrestling Championships could turn out to be Southern Illinois-Edwardsville's team picture.

The Cougars, paced by three defending national champions, have lived up to their preseason No. 1 ranking, compiling a 20-3 dual-meet record and placing first in three of the five tournaments they entered.

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville rolled over all of its Division II dual-match opponents. The Cougars have lost only to Division I powers Oklahoma, Nebraska and Iowa. The Cougars' mastery over Division II teams is expected to continue at the championships, which will be hosted by Wright State.

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville's well-balanced lineup includes defending national champions Tim Wright (118), Booker Benford (177) and Ernie Badger (190).

Benford, who set a school record last season with 45 victories, was sporting the team's best record (41-3) through matches of February 15 and already has established a school career record with 147 victories.

The Cougars' upper-weight strength is capped by heavyweight Al Sears, whose school record of 104 falls is just two short of the all-time NCAA record set by Clarion's Wade Schalles from 1970 to 1973.

Other Cougars with title aspirations include Alan Grammar (34-6-0), who placed third at 134 last year, and 142-pound runner-up Maurice Brown (28-8-0). Steve Stearns, who placed third in 1983 but sat out last season with an injury, has bounced back with a 30-13-0 record and is a top contender at 126 pounds.

Although the Cougars could widen the 43½-point gap they had over last year's runner-up, the battle for second place should be a good one.

The North Central Conference, which placed five of its teams in the top 15 last year, again should be well-represented among the leaders.

North Dakota State has good middleweight strength and probable place-winners in Jack Maughan (134), Mike Frazier (142) and Lance Rogers (150).

Nebraska-Omaha's 1983 150-pound champion, Mark Manning, is favored to regain the title, while Mark Weston (118) and Doug Hassel (167) both will be out to improve upon last year's fifth-place championships finishes.

If Augustana's (South Dakota) Jon Groskreutz (150) can recover from an elbow injury, the Vikings should be in contention for a top-10 finish, led by last year's 126-pound third-place winner Kyle Presler.

Other top teams include Cal State Bakersfield, South Dakota State, St. Cloud State, North Dakota, Portland State, Ferris State, Northwest Missouri State, San Francisco State, Northern Michigan, Springfield and Humboldt State.

Springfield hasn't had a losing wrestling team since '48

Adversity is just a wrestler's lot, maintains Springfield College coach Doug Parker.

But after 30 years of coaching, things are coming up roses for Parker, who has turned the 2,000-student school, which offers no athletics scholarships, into a big name in amateur wrestling.

His prize pupil, Jeff Blatnik, overcame cancer to win an Olympic gold medal. Parker has won his 410th victory against 124 losses in 31 seasons with a squad featuring two national finalists and four freshmen Parker calls his "best in 10 years." And his fellow coaches rank the Chiefs tops among all divisions in New England and in the top 10 nationally in Division II.

The winning is nothing new. Springfield College has not had a losing season since Parker was a lowly freshman in 1948. Parker has a 75 percent winning percentage.

Among Springfield's victims this season were Air Force and Harvard, the top-rated Division I school in New England.

But after years of searching out the "one or two" high school champions who may have been overlooked by the big schools and turning a lot of average wrestlers into solid contenders, Parker is now being recruited himself.

"Television, the Olympics and Jeff Blatnik changed a lot of things," Parker said. "Now, the kids are calling me."

"He helped me as a person as well as a wrestler," said Blatnik, who battled back from Hodgkin's disease to win the first U. S. gold medal in Greco-Roman wrestling last summer. "He's a man who believes adversity builds character. I owe a lot of my attitude and mental confidence to coach Parker."

"He's not intense like some coaches. But where he has the edge is that he gets people to commit themselves on a personal level," Blatnik said, recalling how Parker often conducted his team meetings over pizza and beer. "He's an optimist. He believes life should be a learning experience and is supposed to be fun. And if you have that positive attitude, it doesn't matter what the outcome is."

"Wrestling is a survival sport. It's blood, sweat and tears out there. The enjoyment comes after the match is over. Then, it's fun," said Parker, a boxer in high school and the Air Force, who did not discover wrestling until he came to Springfield as an undergraduate.

"Sometimes, the hardest thing is getting the kids to stick it out," he said. "It's a big transition from being a star in high school to starting over at the bottom again in college."

Things are a little easier now than when he started 30 years ago, Parker said. The facilities are better and, boosted by television and the Olympics, the increasing popularity of the sport has led to "more and better" wrestlers coming out of the high schools.

"And the kids today have a lot better attitudes. That's all you need," he said. "Good kids and good assistants."

Injuries to two standouts dim Ithaca's Division III hopes

Ithaca was a clear-cut favorite to win the NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships team title until a fateful dual match with Albany (New York) this season.

Bob Panariello, last year's championship runner-up at 118 pounds, and Glenn Cogswell, a fourth-place championships finisher, went into the Albany dual with 10-0 and 13-0 records, respectively. Both came out with season-ending injuries. Panariello suffered a dislocated shoulder moments before Cogswell's season ended with a dislocated elbow.

Ithaca survived the injuries, setting a school-record 14-0 dual mark. But the Bombers' title hopes were dashed, opening the door for several other teams.

Ithaca's chances for its first title are pinned on Bart Morrow (134), who has a 46-0 career dual record and three New York State Championships titles, and Pete Mankowich (142), who also won an individual title at the state championships. Ithaca also had upper-weight strength in Dave Kittay (177) and Bill Condon (190). Kittay had a 14-0 dual record at one time this season and should improve last year's third-place championships finish. Condon, who placed eighth at the championships, was injured at the New York State Championships but should be at full strength for the March 1-2 Division III championships hosted by Augustana (Illinois).

Binghamton coach Steve Erber, who was named Division III coach of the year after guiding the Colonials to last year's third-place championships finish, has the personnel to win the school's first NCAA title.

Defending 177-pound champion Tom Pillari anchors a powerful group of upper-weights that includes Mike Truncale (150) and Keith Cavayero (167), both of whom placed third at last year's championships. Heavyweight Chris Mackin, a championships qualifier last year, caps Binghamton's upper-weight strength.

First-year coach Brian Arnold has a team that should continue Augsburg's recent championships success, with defending 118-pound champion Steve Gliva in the lineup along with probable place-winners Tom Hall (142), Jeff Schlieff (167) and heavyweight Greg Chmelik. The Auggies wasted little time in establishing a national reputation, placing third the first year they participated in the championships, followed by last year's runner-up finish.

It has been 10 years since coach

Tony DeCarlo led John Carroll to the championships team title, but the Blue Streaks have a lineup that could get him back on top.

DeCarlo, who coached John Carroll to its 100th consecutive Presidents' Athletic Conference dual-meet victory last month, has a potential national champion in heavyweight Sal D'Angelo, winner of this year's Ohio Northern, National Catholic and Rochester invitational. John Carroll's impressive middleweight strength, led by Vito Gruttadauria (134), Tom Bennett (142) and Jeff Anderson (158), also should pile up plenty of points at the championships.

Although defending champion Trenton State is rebuilding, the Lions should be a factor with Tim Jacoutot in the lineup. The 118-pound freshman has rolled to a 29-2 record and is ranked ninth among all divisions. Championships veterans Larry DeSimone (150) and Bob Henig (190) have the Lions aiming for a top-five finish.

With perhaps the most balanced lineup in the tournament field, Central (Iowa) also should be high on the leader board. Central has six wrestlers with at least 25 dual-meet victories, and the Flying Dutchmen easily won the Cornell Invitational against a top-flight field.

Other teams in contention include Olivet, Brockport State, Albany (New York), Buffalo, St. Lawrence, Augustana (Illinois), Oswego State and Wisconsin-Whitewater.

Augsburg's Steve Gliva controls Ithaca's Bob Panariello

Potsdam State wants to take its No. 1 ranking all the way

Talk about paying dues.

Imagine a men's basketball team that has been to Division III post-season play-off action every year since 1978, compiling a 19-6 (.760) tournament record, one national championship and a pair of second-place finishes. Imagine, if you can, that same team never being ranked No. 1 in the regular-season Division III poll, until now.

The story of Potsdam State's basketball team is stranger than fiction. The Bears are 22-1 and a leading contender to reach the Division III final four again; yet, coach Jerry Welsh is enjoying the honor of leading the division's top-ranked team for the first time in school history.

"Everyone is excited around here," Welsh said shortly after release of the February 12 poll. "We won the thing (championship) in 1981, and we have been to the final four three times, but this top ranking sure has generated a lot of enthusiasm on our campus."

"We do have a very balanced scoring attack," Welsh said. "We have seven players averaging between eight and 15 points a game and we have only had one 20-point scoring performance all year long."

Potsdam State's success has been a team effort. Not one individual shows up among the division's statistical leaders as of mid-February.

One player who might have broken into a national category has not been around. "We have our own rules about grades and course work and hours," said Welsh. "One of our top players last year—an all-conference player—did not pass the 12 hours of course work we required last semester; so, he has not been playing for us."

Potsdam State will rely on the steady play of Brendan Mitchell and the passing of Roosevelt Bullock.

"Brendan has played very good basketball for us this season, and Bullock leads us in assists," Welsh said. "Both of them play great defense, and our continued good team defense may be the key to our advancement in the tournament."

Only three of the top teams in the February 12 Division III poll had lost more than three games, and every team had played at least 20.

Colby had moved up to No. 2 with a 19-1 record, while Wittenberg, previously the division's top-ranked team, had fallen to 10th. Traditional powers Nebraska Wesleyan, Hope and North Central (the only team with more play-off appearances that Potsdam State) again should be in the thick of things.

Hot shooters like Dick Hempy of Otterbein and David Beckman of Hope are sure to make this tournament exciting and memorable. Regional and national quarterfinal games will be played at on-campus sites, with the national semifinals and finals scheduled March 15-16 at Calvin College in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Six teams already have been selected to participate in the 32-team bracket. Centre (College Athletic Conference), Central (Iowa) (Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference) and Washington and Jefferson (President's Athletic Conference) received automatic qualifications by winning their respective league championships. Nebraska Wesleyan, Salisbury State and Worcester Polytechnic have received at-large berths.

Other teams under consideration for play-off spots, with records through February 12, include the following:

Northeast—Clark (Massachusetts), 15-5; Fitchburg State, 15-8;

Massachusetts-Boston, 12-7; Westfield State, 9-12.

East—Albany (New York), 17-3; Buffalo State, 15-4; Hartwick, 14-5; Nazareth (New York), 17-3; Potsdam State, 22-1.

Middle Atlantic—Lycoming, 16-3; Muhlenberg, 16-6; Widener, 19-4.

South Atlantic—Roanoke, 16-7; Trenton State, 21-1; Upsala, 16-6; William Paterson, 17-6.

South—Greensboro, 15-6; LeMoyne-Owen, 17-5; North Carolina Wesleyan, 17-5.

Great Lakes—DePauw, 16-5; Hope, 17-3; Muskingum, 16-6; Ohio Wesleyan 18-7; Otterbein, 19-2; Wittenberg, 20-3.

Midwest—Beloit, 14-7; North Central, 15-5; North Park, 19-4; Monmouth (Illinois), 14-5; Wisconsin-Whitewater, 15-5.

West—Augsburg, 17-4; Bishop, 15-4; Redlands, 16-7.

Lady Royals are 22-1

Scranton cast in favorite's role for Division III crown

Scranton women's basketball coach Mike Strong is no shrinking violet when asked to explain the success of his top-ranked Lady Royals. "You probably wouldn't believe it if I told you it was great coaching."

"Seriously, I believe we are fortunate enough to have the best two basketball players in the division in Deanna Kyle and Shelley Parks. This team has talent, determination and a killer instinct; and, the student body and the community have adopted them."

The Lady Royals have put together a 21-game winning streak (through February 12), earned the top spot in the Division III poll and are called by some observers a definite favorite to win the national championship.

"Along with Deanna and Shelley, who are transfer students, we had some excellent players returning," Strong explained. "Lee Ann Grow, Mary Leedy and Shelley Ritz are our other starters, and they have played very well. Sharon Barone is our top reserve, and she has done everything we've asked of her."

As with the top-ranked men's team from Potsdam State, Scranton did not have a player listed in any national statistical category in the February 13 issue of The NCAA News. And, like the Bears, the Lady Royals are winning.

"We are an aggressive team on defense... I guess I'm what you'd call an adjuster," Strong said. "I'm one of those guys who like to do different things. We'll press and play a man

"When we played Pitt-Johnstown, we had a crowd in excess of 2,800 here," said Strong. "I am not sure that is a record for Division III women's basketball, but I believe it is very close. We have played three straight games to crowds of more than 2,000... the students and this town really have adopted these players."

Strong says that kind of support head coach A.J. Stovall is cautious when analyzing his team's potential in the play-offs.

"For one thing, we had much more depth a year ago," he said. "Last week was the first time all season I have used the same starting lineup two games in a row. We have an awful lot of injuries to key personnel."

"The team has consistently played good defense this season, but realistically, I cannot say this team is as strong as the team that won the 1984 championship."

Top returning scorer Mittie Heideberg was lost with knee ligament damage before the season even started, and arthroscopic surgery has kept her out of action since. She would be available for play-off action if necessary, but certainly not at top form.

All games in the Division III women's tournament will be played at on-campus sites, with the finals set for March 15-16.

Listed below are some of the teams under consideration for play-off berths, with season records through February 12:

Northeast—Bridgewater State

(Massachusetts), 19-1; Clark (Massachusetts), 14-5; Rhode Island College, 14-5; Salem State, 19-4; Western Connecticut State, 17-3.

East—Albany (New York), 19-2; Buffalo State, 13-5; Hartwick, 12-3; New Rochelle, 18-4; Rochester, 13-5.

Mid-Atlantic—Allegheny, 19-1; Elizabethtown, 14-6; Gettysburg, 16-2; Pittsburgh-Johnstown, 19-2; Scranton, 22-1; Susquehanna, 19-3.

Atlantic—Capital, 18-0; Frostburg State, 19-1; Kean 19-3; Muskingum, 19-3; Wooster, 17-4.

South—Knoxville, 13-9; North Carolina-Greensboro, 16-5; LeMoyne-Owen, 14-7; Rust, 18-2.

Great Lakes—Alma, 13-5; Carroll, 17-4; St. Norbert, 16-2; Wisconsin-River Falls, 17-6; Wisconsin-Whitewater, 16-5.

Central—Central (Iowa), 14-5; Millikin, 15-2; Simpson, 15-6; Wheaton (Illinois), 13-5; William Penn, 17-5.

West—Cal State Stanislaus, 21-4; Concordia-Moorhead, 13-9; Nebraska Wesleyan, 13-9; Pomona-Pitzer, 21-1; St. Mary's (Minnesota), 20-0.

Championships Previews

defense. But we will adjust to do the best job we can, no matter what that might mean."

On offense, Scranton will run, and the transition game has served the Lady Royals well. "But we also have excellent outside shooters and that has helped us," Strong said. "Ideally, we like to get the ball to either Deanna or Shelley. But everyone on the floor has the capability of scoring."

The addition of Kyle (who came from Wilkes College) and Parks (from Elizabethtown) and the squad's success have led to much support from the community.

will be needed as his team begins postseason action. "I see a new challenge coming for this team every night. We will have Pitt-Johnstown, Susquehanna and Gettysburg in our regional, and the team that gets to the quarterfinals will have Bridgewater State (Massachusetts) and Salem State, most likely. It looks like we may have a tough time getting to the final four, let alone playing for the championship."

One team Strong did not mention is 1984 champion Rust. The Lady Bearcats were 18-2 and ranked third in the division as of February 12, but

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 8

Extra benefit — professional services

The provisions of Constitution 3-1-(h)-(4) identify benefits incidental to a student's participation in intercollegiate athletics that may be financed by the institution. Specifically, these incidental benefits consist of tutoring expenses, athletics medical insurance, death and dismemberment insurance for travel connected with intercollegiate competition and practice, and counseling about a future professional athletics career through a three-person panel appointed by the institution's chief executive officer from among its full-time employees outside the athletics department.

In addition, the provisions of Constitution 3-1-(g)-(5) and Case No. 58 (page 260, 1984-85 NCAA Manual) prohibit a student-athlete from receiving professional services (for which a fee normally would be charged) at less than normal or at no expense unless such services are available to the student body in general.

This being the case, it would not be permissible for an outside professional individual or organization to provide instructional or training programs to a member institution's student-athletes, either on a voluntary or compensatory basis, unless such programs also are available to the student body in general. For example, it would not be permissible for the institution to pay the costs for a research-and-consulting firm to conduct seminars for the institution's student-athletes in media relations, table etiquette, travel tips or social skills unless the seminars were provided to the student body in general. However, it would be permissible for institutional staff members, at their own expense, to conduct such seminars.

Extra benefit — athletics equipment donations

As discussed in Case No. 62 (page 261, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), a student-athlete is not permitted to accept sports equipment (e.g., footwear, tennis rackets, golf clubs, hockey sticks, shirts) from a manufacturer or commercial enterprise. Receipt of such items by a student-athlete would be an extra benefit not available to the student body in general. Such items may be provided to the student-athlete's institution to be used by that institution's team in accordance with the accepted practice for the issuance and retrieval of athletics equipment generally.

In addition, neither the institution nor the student-athlete may permit the use of the athlete's name or picture in conjunction with the use of such equipment.

TV in the News

College basketball ratings decline

College basketball television ratings on CBS and NBC show a decline compared to last year, but the numbers on CBS are beginning to pick up as the NCAA tournament approaches.

Heading into the weekend games of February 8, CBS' overall average for the season was 5.2, down eight percent from the 1984 average of 5.6 at the same point. NBC, at 4.2 overall, is down two percent from its 1984 average of 4.3.

During the weekend of February 2, the University of Louisville-DePaul University game drew a 5.9 average at noon for the Saturday game, while the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, contest with Georgetown University Sunday, February 4, pulled in a 6.2 average.

Saturday, February 3, NBC averaged 3.2 in a game featuring the University of Illinois, Champaign, and the University of Houston. The second game which matched Notre Dame and UCLA, averaged 5.8.

CBS executive Len DeLuca said he expects the ratings to show a steady rise during the next few weeks as the season gets closer to the tournament, which will be broadcast on CBS.

"Now, as we are approaching the tournament, college basketball ratings are on the increase, and we forecast now that we will get back to where we were last year when our average was 5.3 overall at the end of the year," he said.

Conference gets nationwide exposure

Metro Conference men's basketball is reaching a nationwide audience as the result of cable broadcasts that began in mid-January.

Cable Sports Network of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, has scheduled 10 broadcasts that can be viewed in nearly five million homes on more than 250 systems nationwide while five Satellite Programming Network broadcasts, originating from Tulsa, Oklahoma, reach 11.4 million homes through more than 500 affiliates.

Katz Sports of New York is producing 25 Metro Conference telecasts, including seven on CBS, four on NBC and four via the USA Cable. The CBS package includes the tournament championship game from Freedom Hall March 9 in Louisville, Kentucky.

Big Ten producing own league games

The Big Ten Conference will produce the rest of the 1985 league basketball games scheduled for television, after severing ties with the TCS-Metrosports Television Network because the network failed to pay rights fees for the 1985 conference season, Commissioner Wayne Duke announced.

The conference is going to contract with various production companies, expecting advertising revenues to cover production costs.

The Big Ten was in the third year of a three-year contract with the syndicator, which called for the telecasting of 30 conference games in 1985. Twenty league games were shown in 1983 and 30 were televised in 1984.

Committee Notices

Council: Replacement for Nancy J. Olson, Florida International University/St. Thomas University, resigned. Individual appointed to replace her must be a woman from Division II.

Division I Women's Volleyball: Replacement for Joan Cronan, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, resigned. Appointee must be from Division I.

Nominations to fill these vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, in the NCAA national office not later than March 4, 1985.

Newsworthy

Wenzel recovering from surgery

Bob Wenzel, head men's basketball coach at Jacksonville State University, is expected to be released from the hospital within 10 days after undergoing surgery to "clip" a leaking cerebral aneurysm.

Dr. Walter Grand, who performed the 7½-hour operation, said there "were no serious complications. The surgery went as close to perfect as I could have hoped for."

Wenzel, in his fourth season at Jacksonville, was hospitalized February 7. He had been suffering from the effects of the flu earlier in the week and had complained of headaches and an upset stomach after the Dolphins beat the University of South Alabama, 72-64.

CCIW to begin women's competition

The College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin will begin conference play for women in the 1986-87 school year as the result of a unanimous vote February 18 by presidents of the nine member schools.

The CCIW will extend an invitation to George Williams College of Downers Grove, Illinois, and Concordia College of River Forest, Illinois, to join the women's conference.

George Williams and Concordia are members of the Chicagoland Metro Conference for Women's Athletics, which includes CCIW institutions Carroll College, Carthage College, Elmhurst College, North Central College and Wheaton College (Illinois). Other CCIW members are Augustana College (Illinois), Illinois Wesleyan University and Millikin University.

Southern Cal building student center

Construction of a $12.3 million student recreation center has been approved by the University of Southern California board of trustees. The 66,000-square foot recreation center will include handball courts, recreational basketball courts, a fitness center, exercise rooms, sauna, game room, and men's and women's locker rooms.

The university will continue exploring alternatives for improved playing conditions for the men's and women's basketball teams. Currently, the teams play at the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

Constructing a 9,000-seat arena in the new recreation center did not prove viable, according to James H. Zumbege, university president.

Northern Michigan is training site

Northern Michigan University has been added to the roll of Olympic training centers by a unanimous vote of the U. S. Olympic Committee's house of delegates.

The training center, the third for U. S. Olympic hopefuls, will be financed by the university and the Great Lakes Training Site Association. Room and board for 80 athletes a day in 1985 and 100 athletes a day the following year will be provided.

Wright State seeks Division I status

The faculty at Wright State University voted 81-38 for the institution's athletics program to move from Division II to Division I. Two years ago in a similar advisory vote, the faculty overwhelmingly rejected the idea.

Wright State President Robert J. Kegerreis said he will recommend that the board of trustees approve the move to Division I in April.

The proposal already has been passed by the athletics council, academic council, council of deans, student government and the university budget review committee.

Fitness academy planned in California

The first United States Fitness Academy, a national training center for coaches and physical education instructors, will be located on a 175-acre site in Orange County, California.

The $35 million structure will be financed by private donations, according to George Allen, former professional football coach and chairman of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

Allen said selection of the site was based on climate and proximity to water and to a large city.

Louganis wins Sullivan Award

Greg Louganis, a former all-America swimmer at the University of Miami (Florida) and a gold-medal winner at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, has been named the winner of the Sullivan Award as the nation's outstanding amateur athlete.

Louganis, 25, of Mission Viejo, California, is only the second diver to win the award, which has gone to 32 track and field performers. Sammy Lee was the first diver honored.

Louganis swept the diving competition in the Olympics and accumulated 710.91 points to become the first to break 700 on the 10-meter platform.

Syndicators of television sports receiving fuzzy signals

By Verne Gay
Advertising Age

When Leonard Klompus last month quit the presidency of the largest syndicator of collegiate sports, TCS/Metrosports, he also quit what many observers say is a deeply troubled industry.

Syndicators have been hard hit by the glut in televised sports—a glut to which they contributed—and by a lack of advertiser demand for the product.

Soon, they will have to evaluate their goals for 1985. This month, several major college conferences are sitting down with syndicators to work out details for this year's football packages.

Some of these conferences are concerned about delays last year in broadcast rights payments and about overexposure of their sporting events.

Clearly, 1985 will be a different ball game in syndicated television sports.

When the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the NCAA's hold on college football television rights, syndicators eagerly rushed in to snap up some of the choicest events.

In a hectic six weeks, the biggest syndicators—including Katz Sports, New York; Lorimar Sports Network, Dallas; Raycom Sports, Charlotte, North Carolina, and TCS/Metrosports, Pittsburgh—lined up football packages and potential advertisers. ABC and CBS quickly renegotiated their own new deals.

Some developments have emerged from the confusion that has engulfed the television-football market since that time:

- Sports View, Nashville, a syndicator that secured rights to Big Ten Conference games, has yet to make payment on its $3 million rights fee.

- The University of Oklahoma, part of the Big Eight Conference package that Katz syndicated, reportedly has split from the conference and will hire its own syndicator this year. The university reportedly is hiring the William Morris Agency to act as its television consultant.

- TCS/Metrosports (which has changed its name to TCS Inc. since Klompus' departure) had difficulty paying a $3 million rights fee to the Pacific-10 Conference. The Pac-10 resorted to a letter of credit to secure its fee.

The latest blow to the industry is the departure of Klompus, one of the pioneers in television sports syndication.

A company spokesman said Klompus, an entrepreneur, was not comfortable in the current setup. Klompus founded Metrosports in 1972 and sold the company to TCS Inc. in April.

"It's the typical scenario," the spokesman said. "A person who's run his own company and has had complete reign will, nine times out of 10, not be comfortable."

TCS had made its name producing

Flutie selected for O'Brien award

Boston College's Doug Flutie has been named the winner of the Davey O'Brien award as the nation's top collegiate quarterback for the 1984 season.

Flutie, now with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League, said, "It is one of the greatest awards in all of college football... because it recognizes my play specifically as quarterback and associates me with one of the finest gentlemen to ever play this game—Davey O'Brien."

The late O'Brien was the quarterback of the 1938 national champion Texas Christian University team.

Flutie was the 1984 winner of the Heisman Trophy as the nation's top collegiate football player.

and syndicating Penn State's football and basketball games. When it acquired Metrosports, the latter had the television rights to DePaul, Marquette, Notre Dame and Virginia Tech basketball and football games, as well as Philadelphia Eagles football

ABC and CBS, in their new college-football packages, drastically lowered the prices paid for broadcast rights and charges for advertising time. Thirty-second unit costs, which a year ago were as high as $60,000, plummeted to $25,000 and lower durmade good. But it's happened with a great deal of regularity."

In some cases, final payments were withheld from TCS/Metrosports to compensate for the low ratings, the advertiser said.

The sluggish advertiser market also wreaked havoc with payments of rights fees.

Thomas C. Hansen, executive director of the Pac-10, believes this shortfall in ad revenues contributed to the delay in rights payments to the conference.

"What happened, as nearly as I can tell, is that when Metrosports came to the conference and others and offered rights fees, they did so based on the 1983 market," he said. Hansen said that when the market started to crumble, TCS and others were forced to sell their ad units at vastly reduced rates.

"The problem was universal," he said. "It proved to be devastating to all of them."

The Pac-10 now is looking for a new syndicator for its football games (TCS/Metrosports will syndicate the basketball games until the end of the season). The Pac-10 finally got its rights payments.

"We had a letter of credit that enabled us to realize most of the payments," Hansen said.

The problems are by no means universal. "We've had an excellent relationship with TCS/Metrosports," said Roger Valdiserri, associate athletics director at Notre Dame. The company syndicated about five of the school's football games, considered potentially the most lucrative of all syndicated college football packages because of the Irish's national appeal.

Notre Dame currently is in negotiations with TCS and other syndicators for the '85 season.

"We're sitting back and evaluating last year," Valdiserri said. "I'm not so sure the maximum number of exposures is so good."

Notre Dame may limit its broadcast television exposure this year while adding pay cable distribution, he said.

"I'm not sure we'd make as much money (with such a schedule)," Valdiserri said, "but you'd have to consider less money and exposure as opposed to overexposure. In the long run, this would catch up to Notre Dame."

In some cases, final payments were withheld (by advertisers) to compensate for the low ratings.... The sluggish advertiser market also wreaked havoc with payments of rights fees.

and Baltimore Orioles baseball radio broadcasts.

The acquisition created the country's largest collegiate sports syndicator. TCS/Metrosports secured rights to Big East basketball and Big Ten and Pac-10 football and basketball (it later lost the Big Ten football to Sports View).

Like some other companies in the rough-and-tumble sports syndication business, TCS/Metrosports had great success in securing broadcast rights—but less success in getting advertiser dollars.

ing the 1984 season. Advertisers quickly bought into the network packages.

Syndicators were left scrambling for what little money was left. When their own games, by and large, failed to achieve promised ratings, syndicators were forced to offer advertisers make-goods.

TCS/Metrosports was not exempt from the fallout. "The performance of its football and basketball was nowhere near what they were telling us (it would be)," said one major advertiser. "We're whole. We've been

It's not all fun and games. Today's teams mean business.

Winning is far more complex today than it used to be. Success equates with survival...and survival is serious business. From collegiate teams in need of fatter alumni dollars to professional organizations whose existence depends on profits, success is financially imperative. Anything that boosts performance...that gives you an edge on your opponents...is vital.

Sportsystems provides that edge. Eleven independent software systems...including CASI sports instruction, player evaluation, scouting, ticketing and financial management...give you the tools for better management and better play. And because all Sportsystems run on personal computers, costs are much lower than those of our competitors.

When it's your business to win, call Sportsystems toll-free at 1-800-447-CASI. We'll show you how to improve productivity on and off the field. The fun and games come later...when you celebrate a perfect season.

Figures show drop in participation

More than five million high school students participated in competitive sports last year, according to the National Federation of State High School Associations.

The overall participation count of 5,050,945 students includes 3,303,599 males and 1,747,346 females. These figures represent a decline of about two percent from the previous year.

The decline was attributed to more sophisticated and accurate research submitted by member state associations to the national federation.

The most popular boys' sport was football, which accounted for 944,473 students from more than 14,000 high schools. Basketball provided competition for 497,277 boys. Swimming and diving and soccer showed the most significant gains in participation in boys' sports.

Other participation leaders for boys were outdoor track and field (464,956), baseball (398,608), wrestling (248,300) and soccer (173,423).

Basketball retained the lead as the most popular girls' sport, with 390,678 participants. Among the other girls' participation leaders were outdoor track and field (351,274), volleyball (269,498), fast-pitch softball (194,270) and tennis (114,177).

Briefly in the News

Critics of major-college sports will headline a forum on "Ethics and Athletics" at Louisiana State University May 7-10. Speakers include Nebraska State Senator Ernest Chambers, who has proposed legislation that college athletes be paid wages; John Underwood, senior writer for Sports Illustrated; Harry Edwards, University of California, Berkeley, sociologist, and Robert Brodhead, director of athletics at LSU.

Syracuse University is involved in a state supreme court case over whether the Carrier Dome should be subject to property taxes. The institution claims the $26.8 million arena is an educational building and nontaxable. The state claims that since the dome is used for events with no campus connection, such use negates the school's claim of tax exemption...Fifteen women student-athletes at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, made the fall-term dean's list. Five of the 15 had 4.000 grade-point averages (4.000 scale).

Andee Barnett, a varsity golfer at the University of Tennessee, Martin, is expected to play golf again, but not this season, after losing the ring finger on his right hand while raking snow from the trunk of his car last month. He cut the finger below the knuckle on the louver of his trunk. He underwent eight-hour surgery in Birmingham, Alabama, before it was determined that the finger could not be reattached...Hofstra University set aside the proceeds from its February 9 basketball game with Bucknell University to help Willie Brown (The NCAA News, January 30) in his fund-raising efforts for the World Games for the Deaf. Brown is a member of the U.S. team that will compete in the games in Los Angeles in July. Each participating athlete is responsible for raising $2,000 to help defray expenses.

Holiday Bowl officials are considering moving the date of the game to New Year's Eve afternoon to enhance their chances of attracting better national competition. The game usually is played on the Friday evening before Christmas. Last year, bowl officials were turned down by seven top-20 teams...Varsity athletes at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, earned a combined 2.730 grade-point average (4.000 scale) for the fall semester. Nineteen of the 119 student-athletes earned academic honors, either on the dean's list or chancellor's list...The Eastern College Athletic Conference removed all sanctions it imposed against New York Institute of Technology for violating conference eligibility and recruiting rules. The school, while remaining on probation for one more year, can participate in conference tournaments and postseason championship events.

Ten student-athletes at Illinois State University achieved grade-point averages of 4.000 (4.000 scale) and 26 others earned GPAs of 3.500 or higher for the fall term. The perfect GPAs among the 443 student-athletes represented nine of the school's 20 varsity sports.

Atkins, a 6-8, 245-pounder, helped spark Tennessee to a 28-2-1 record and three bowl appearances under General Bob Neyland. Atkins played professional football for 17 years before moving to Knoxville, Tennessee, where he is a sales representative.

Brown, chief of staff at two hospitals in San Diego, California, won both all-America and little all-America honors while playing at Navy and San Diego State. Brown was awarded the U.S. Naval Academy athletic association sword in 1944, given annually since 1893 to midshipment who have excelled in athletics.

Garrett, the 1965 Heisman Trophy winner, was Southern California's offensive spark plug for three seasons. He was a consensus all-America his senior year when he scored 16 touchdowns to run his three-year point total to 182. Garrett, who now sells real estate in San Diego, played eight years of professional football.

Glass, an author of seven books, including "Free At Last," a story about prison inmates, became a minister and now heads the Bill Glass Evangelistic Association in Dallas, Texas. He played 12 seasons of professional football while continuing his graduate education. He earned a theological degree in 1963.

The 1956 Heisman Trophy winner, Hornung played a pivotal role in the glory years of the Green Bay Packers under Vince Lombardi. He quarterbacked Notre Dame for three seasons and currently is selling real estate and works as a television commentator.

McDonald scored touchdowns in 20 of 21 games during his junior and senior seasons for Oklahoma under coach Bud Wilkinson. The Sooners' leading rusher, he later became one of professional football's best receivers. McDonald owns an oil-portrait firm, which houses portraits of all Heisman and Maxwell Trophy recipients.

Minisi played the 1945 season at Navy before returning to Penn, where he was an all-America. He now is a senior partner in a Philadelphia law firm and has been a college football official for 30 years. He has served as president of the Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Football Officials and has officiated more than 100 college games.

While playing for Colonel Earl "Red" Blaik's "Brave Old Army Team," Olds was selected as the 1943 team captain but elected to graduate early because of World War II. Olds served in the military for 30 years before retiring with the rank of brigadier general. He was credited with downing 13 enemy planes and destroying 11 aircraft of the ground during World War II.

Reid, a three-year letterman for Dick Hanley and Pappy Waldorf at Northwestern, was captain and most valuable player for the 1936 Big Ten champions, winning all-America honors. He was nominated for the Nobel Prize for his work in pioneering medical studies in the field of athletics injuries. Reid is a professor of surgery at Northwestern.

Smith was the first college player to be drafted into professional football. He helped lead Frank Thomas' Alabama Crimson Tide to a 29-13 victory over favored Stanford in the 1934 Rose Bowl. He won the Jacobs Trophy as the best blocker in the Southeastern Conference and was named captain in the East-West Shrine and College All-Star games. Smith played for the Boston Redskins, which later became the Washington Redskins, leading them to the 1936 Eastern Conference title and the league championship in 1937.

Strom attended Indiana before transferring to Air Force, where he was a consensus all-America the year (1959) the Falcons posted a 9-0-1 record and played in the Cotton Bowl. Strom graduated, later earning a master's degree from MIT and a Ph.D. from Arizona State. As deputy of the Space Defense Systems in Los Angeles, Strom is responsible to the secretary of the Air Force for the U.S. space defense program.

Hollerder was 23 when he was killed in combat in Vietnam. He was Army's most valuable player in 1955, winning all-America honors as an end. Upon Blaik's request, Hollerder switched to quarterback his senior year, leading the Cadets to a 14-6 victory over Navy. Hollerder twice turned down professional football offers in favor of a military career.

Miller won all-America honors in 1926 and 1928 at Notre Dame under legendary coach Knute Rockne. Like his coach, Miller died in an airplane crash, with his son, Fred Jr., in 1954. He graduated cum laude, establishing the highest scholastic average of any Notre Dame letterman. Miller, the grandson of Frederic Miller, founder of the Miller Brewing Company, was 48 years old at the time of his death.

A three-year starter for coach "Tiny" Thornhill, Moscrip was a member of the famed Stanford "Vow Boys" teams, which vowed never to lose to archrival California. During Moscrip's career, Stanford played in three consecutive Rose Bowl games and posted a 25-4-2 record. The fastest man on the Stanford team, Moscrip was a standout offensive and defensive end as well as a good kicker. He joins teammates Bob Reynolds, Bobby Grayson and Bones Hamilton in the hall of fame. Moscrip died of a heart attack at the age of 66 in 1980, after winning a valiant fight against alcohol addiction. He managed an alcoholic rehabilitation center for nearly 25 years.

Suhey, a 5-11, 205-pounder, won all-America honors in 1947, playing on Bob Higgins' unbeaten Cotton Bowl team. He played professional football and later coached high school football. Suhey served in the Air Force during World War II. He died in 1977 at the age of 55.

Our Support For The NCAA Includes A Strong Commitment To The Future.

Valvoline Oil Company is very proud to be a supporter for NCAA sports at the intercollegiate level.

But as the NCAA has recognized, the needs of our country's youth begin long before college. And our young people are our future.

That's why we are also involved with the National Youth Sports Program, which provides underprivileged young people with summertime sports training and exposure to the benefits of higher education.

And with the NCAA Volunteers for Youth Program, where current and former college athletes provide positive role models for young people.

We feel that these programs serve a vital purpose for America's youth. And we're proud to be part of the effort.

Supporting NCAA programs.
