Women's basketball gets its own rules

For the first time in the history of women's intercollegiate basketball, the next season will be conducted under rules formulated by the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee.

The Committee will meet March 27-29 in Austin, Texas, to put the finishing touches to a manuscript that will be published and available in June. However, it is not likely that there will be any notable change in how the women's game is played.

"Probably the most controversial change in recent years was the decision to use the smaller ball this season," said NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee Chair J. Elaine Hieber. "That decision already has been made, and I do not see that there will be another change this year."

The decision to adopt the use of the smaller ball was made by the National Association for Girls and Women in Sports, the organization under whose rules women's intercollegiate competition has been conducted for several years.

"The individuals in the sport who have made the greatest impact in the past — the coaches — still are the individuals who will make the greatest contribution," said Hieber, assistant athletics director at Iowa State University. "Ten of the 13 people on the committee are coaches."

The appointment of the committee was made at the 1985 NCAA Convention and included the same individuals who had served for a year on a special committee to prepare a preliminary manuscript.

"I believe the greatest apparent change will be in the organization and administration of women's rules," Hieber said. "The rules will be published and available to member institutions the same time each year and well in advance of the season."

"Also, there will be one national interpreter for the women's rules, rather than regional interpreters as in the past. I believe this will result in more consistent interpretations and more consistent officiating."

Secretary-rules editor for the women's committee and the official interpreter for the rules will be Marcy Weston, Central Michigan University.

To assist the committee in determining the opinions of coaches and other individuals involved in the sport toward various rules, a survey was sent to more than 1,700 individuals.

J. Elaine Hieber

The tabulated results will be considered by the committee when it meets.

"More than 1,200 individuals, including NCAA, NAIA and junior college coaches, have responded to the survey," said Hieber. "I believe this is considerably more input than women's basketball rules ever have had before."

Hieber noted that there had been

Committee nominations deadline set

Nominations for vacancies on the NCAA Nominating Committee and Men's and Women's Committees on Committees must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than April 5.

The Council will appoint individuals to fill those vacancies during its April 15-17 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Members of the committees for 1985 were listed in the January Convention Program. Composition of the three committees appears in Bylaws 12-2-(g) and (h) of the NCAA Manual.

Following is a list of those whose terms expire, including those eligible and not eligible for reelection. Com-

Tournament expansion keeps pace with basketball parity

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

The expansion years and the post-UCLA years virtually coincide in the National Collegiate Basketball Championship — the first in a series of expansions came in 1974 (to 32 teams) and a year later came the 10th UCLA championship in a 12-year span.

Since that turning point, it has been a wide-open affair. A total of 25 different teams have reached the Final Four in the nine seasons since then — no team more than three times and 17 just once. No team has won two straight men's titles since UCLA.

An examination of the 1985 Sweet

16 shows the results of expansion and parity in Division I basketball. Of the remaining 16, only four — Georgetown, North Carolina State, North Carolina (the last three champions) and Kentucky (third last year) — have reached the Final Four in the 1980s.

Six have never made Final Four

Six Sweet 16 teams never have reached the Final Four — Louisiana Tech, Auburn, Maryland, Georgia Tech, Alabama and Boston College. Three more have not made the Final Four in more than 30 years — Illinois (1952 — third), St. John's (New York) (1952 — second) and Oklahoma (1947 — second). The other three have not done so in the last decade — Loyola (Illinois) in 1963 (champion), Villanova in 1971 (second, but voided) and Memphis State in 1973 (second).

A total of 49 different teams have reached the Sweet 16 at least once already in the 1980s. That is, on average, the largest group for any decade since expansion to 16 teams took place in 1951. There were 80 different teams in the 1970s, 78 in the 1960s and 74 in the 1950s. Here are the 28 teams making the Sweet 16 at least seven times (only six in the current field), with times as regional

Are coaches hypocrites when it comes to alcohol?

By Dave Altopp

Head baseball coach, Greenville College (Illinois)

I have got to get this off my chest. I have been coaching now for almost 20 years, and there is one thing that has troubled me all these years about this profession.

As a head coach, I was invited by a sporting-goods salesman to a company-sponsored display of new equipment. Obviously, I was interested and especially so when he said there would be plenty to eat and drink.

I was totally unprepared when I arrived and discovered that the free drinks included alcohol. I was dumbfounded. I couldn't believe my eyes. Here were coaches drinking alcohol and some very obviously becoming inebriated. I was really shocked.

Why? Let me explain. Just the other day, I sat down and tried to remember exactly how many different coaches I had played for in my 12 years of interscholastic and intercollegiate competition (going back to the fifth grade). My memory is fuzzy, but I know it was at least eight and maybe as many as 10.

However, there is one thing that I do remember about all of them; and in this regard, they were all consistent. As a member of the team, no one was allowed to smoke, drink alcohol or use drugs. The most often given reason for this rule was that these substances would hurt our performance. At this point, I can only speak for myself. The coach said it would hurt my performance. I believed my coach and I would do exactly as I was told, because the penalty for disobeying would mean suspension or expulsion from the team.

I made up my mind that I did not want to jeopardize the opportunity to compete. It was a rule.

I know that many of my colleagues at the amateur level in this profession essentially espouse this philosophy: They believe that how much a player drinks, where he drinks and when he drinks is his business. As soon as drinking affects performance, then disciplinary action will be taken. That philosophy is only interested in a player for what he can do on a baseball field. It takes responsibility off the coach for how the player conducts his personal life. That is "his business." I think my good friend Gordie Gillespie, (baseball coach at St. Francis (Illinois), would denounce that philosophy in typical Gordie fashion, as I heard him say very emphatically in a recent clinic.

"Do you have conception of the impact you (coaches) make upon your players and in your school? You have an awesome responsibility with the power of your influence. We teach skills, fundamentals, etc., etc., but the most important thing is your positive influence on young people."

Gordie exemplifies a master teacher who truly cares about every one of his players from the star to the last man on the bench.

The point is this: More is learned visually or by doing rather than by words alone. Actions speak louder than words. I read just recently where a man commented on how he teaches things to his children.

His response was, "I just give priority to how objectives are exhibited in my life. When I am teaching one thing and living another, my children may believe the same things I believe, but they will act the way I act."

That, my fellow coaches, is powerful stuff. We can't be so naive to believe that players only learn from our coaching skills. They learn from our lifestyles as well.

Think about this, coach. Would you mind if your players saw you drinking, especially if you have a team rule that disallows drinking alcohol? Or do the rules only apply to the players? Oh, I know. You are an adult. You can handle it.

Whatever happened to those qualities of honesty, integrity and character that coaches instill in their players through their leadership? Is the most important impact we can have on our players the ability to develop a winning team?

Something better on Sundays

By Steven Ginsburg

United Press International

Former Notre Dame All-America Ken McAfee, who entered the NFL amid great fanfare but left in relative obscurity, had prepared for life after football. Unfortunately, he says, many players do not.

"Players have to prepare for a career after football because something can happen at any moment and you're out of the game," he said. "It happens more often than people think."

McAfee, now an oral surgeon at a prestigious Pennsylvania hospital, said he prepared for the end of his career by attending medical school in the off-season. He contended his San Francisco 49ers coaches were not pleased with his springtime endeavor.

McAfee, now 28, said some coaches discourage players from pursuing a career outside of football, but players must take the initiative. He also said that although virtually every football player went to college, many ignore the advantages of a free education.

"Just about every person playing pro football went to college," he said. "They have a chance for a free education and they waste it — they either don't get a degree or don't learn anything."

"Being a doctor was my main aspiration; I never really intended on being a pro football player," he said. "I saw football as a means to an end. I received a free education, and the money paid for my medical schooling."

"I think I was the only one in my class who got out of medical school without any bills."

"People used to want my autograph because I was a football player. Now, they want it to fill a prescription," he said. "I had my glory in college; that was enough. Now, I find something better to do on Sundays than watch football."

Going for long-term glory

By Dot Nuechterlein

The Valparaiso University Cresset

During the past few years, I have had many associations with collegiate varsity athletes of many sports and both sexes. Their life is no bed of roses and laurel wreaths.

What I like about sports is that good old-fashioned theory that this can be a character-building part of life. And that is what I delight in seeing among student-athletes.

Not that they are all that superior to other students. Some have a tough time translating what they learn on the field or the court into principles useful for the rest of their lives. But athletes do have opportunities to experience certain lessons in commitment and teamwork and determination that are not so readily accessible to many others. Most of them know that success does not always come easily; that losing is the sure counterpoint to

1985 Column No. 12

Participation for improper expenses

As set forth in Case No. 10 (page 248, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), an individual who participates in competition (e.g., tennis, golf, track and field) for which the amount of expenses received is based upon the place finish achieved, would jeopardize eligibility for intercollegiate athletics competition. Receipt of such expenses would be considered taking pay for participation in that sport and would be contrary to the Association's permissible expense legislation as set forth in Constitution 3-1-(a)-(1) and 3-1-(h)-(1). For example, this case is applicable to satellite-tennis tournaments both in the U.S. and abroad, which base reimbursement of expenses on place finish achieved in the tournament.

Summer camps and Proposal No. 111

As plans are being made for summer sports camps, it is important to note that NCAA summer camp regulations (Case No. 412, pages 364-366, 1984-85 NCAA Manual) apply to any summer camp that: (a) is operated by a member institution, either on or off the institution's campus; (b) involves one or more of a member institution's athletics department personnel in the operation of the camp, or (c) utilizes the facilities of a member institution.

A prospective student-athlete (as defined under Case Nos. 213 and 412, 1984-85 NCAA Manual) may not be employed by or enroll and participate in a summer camp that meets the description of (a), (b) or (c) above, with the following exception. Under an NCAA Council interpretation published in The NCAA News February 1, 1984, it is permissible for prospective student-athletes to enroll and participate in summer camps or conferences conducted by the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, even though such camps or conferences would otherwise be subject to NCAA summer-camp legislation.

The Case No. 412 restrictions on employment of a member institution's football or men's basketball student-athletes at summer camps specializing in their sport originate in the Bylaw 3-4 out-of-season practice limitations for those sports. Effective August 1, 1985, the practice limitations in Bylaw 3-4 will become applicable to women's programs at member institutions. However, the adoption of 1985 Convention Proposal No. 111 exempts employment of members of an institution's women's intercollegiate basketball squad as camp counselors from the definition of postseason practice. Accordingly, members of an institution's women's basketball team could be employed in the institution's women's basketball camp without violating the provisions regarding postseason practice. However, this legislation would not permit practice activities to be conducted under the guise of summer camp employment.

Correction-sports sponsorship criteria—Division II

Convention Proposal No. 44 required Division II member institutions to sponsor a minimum of four varsity intercollegiate sports—including at least two teams—involving all-male teams or mixed teams of males and females during the 1985-86 academic year, and four varsity intercollegiate sports—including two team sports—involving all-female teams during the 1986-87 academic year.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

The question of athletes earning money from track and field competition—so well explored in your February 27 issue—is indeed nettlesome and pervasive.

Why not, however, allow eligible athletes to accept funds earned in approved "open" competitions; and then, turn those funds over to the athletics department of their respective schools?

It would quickly turn track and field from "nonrevenue" sport—with all the attendant disadvantages—to "revenue sport," with the benefits passed on to many, the whole sport, whole institutions and the athletes themselves.

I am sure track and field athletes would be happy to turn back funds earned in competition to their schools—because it is the schools, after all, which provide them with education, coaching, facilities and much more.

On the subject of NCAA pride in the accomplishment of Olympic track and field athletes, however, let it be said that NCAA pride might be drastically improved if only it would see fit to include all the Olympic events—i.e., the race walks and the marathon run—in its programs.

In the women's area, specifically, the NCAA now embraces the women's triple jump and weight throw, which have no international standing, while continuing to shun women's race walking, which will be on the program of the 1985 World Student Games and the 1987 IAAF World Championships and the women's marathon.

winning; and that when you fail, you have two options: try again (good) or quit (not good).

I admire the intensity that so often appears on the faces of those engaged in competitive sports. I especially like to see someone who perhaps is less gifted than others identify and then capitalize on the strengths that do exist. When these qualities are present, I don't even care if my team wins or loses. (Well, okay, I care, but in my view, success is not measured in the W/L columns.)

My university is one that strives for academic excellence, and we do not make things easy for our athletes. We give out athletics scholarships, but we emphasize the scholar part. We don't have any easy majors here, and there are very few snap courses to be found in the catalog.

So, if a young woman or man wants to compete on a varsity squad, she or he has to see it as above and beyond what is expected of everyone else. Our coaches and administrators talk like educators—which they are—and don't fool around too much with the athlete who can't hack it as a student.

Some of our players come from high schools where nobody seems to take academic preparation seriously; they come in thinking of college as a brief stop on the way to the pros. That attitude cannot last long in this environment, and some are able to reorient themselves and learn a few things about reality and maturity in the process.

Others don't. Our sports programs suffer a bit from the nationwide revolving-door syndrome, as potential stars go from buildup to dropout. What is not publicized is that the academic achievers don't leave.

Some academics complain that colleges spend too much time and money on athletics. That may be true of those that depend on a top-ranked football team for financial stability or gain their prestige from attracting as many superstars as they can hire. But not at schools like mine, where the perspective is both clearer and cleaner than that.

We know that many of those who come here for the chance to play games also give themselves to scholarly pursuits, leadership roles and friendships. They go from here and contribute to homes and jobs and churches and communities in many places. That is the long-term glory, and I wouldn't miss knowing these people for anything.

Tournament

1951 when eight-team field.

Georgetown, Kentucky, Illinois, North Carolina, Memphis State and Maryland are the six Sweet 16 repeaters from 1984; Georgia Tech had not made it since 1960, Loyola since 1964.

Tournament individual leaders

Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale leads the Sweet 16 in scoring average at 28.5 and is tied for first in field-goal accuracy at 81.3 on 26-for-32 (with Auburn's Frank Ford and Bill Wennington of St. John's (New York), both 13-for-16). Tied for second at 26 are North Carolina State's Lorenzo Charles (shooting 69 percent) and Kentucky's Kenny Walker (61.1). Next are Chris Mullin of St. John's 23.5, Len Bias of Maryland 22.5 (60.7), Brad Daugherty of North Carolina 21.5 (73.9), Chuck Person of Auburn 20.5 and two at 20 — 5-7 Spud Webb of North Carolina State (70.6) and Walter Berry of St. John's. Louisiana Tech's Karl Malone leads in rebounding at 12. Daugherty has 11.5.

Wichita State's Xavier McDaniel finished at 27.2 in scoring and 14.8 in rebounding and can become the first player ever to win both those championships. Alfredrick Hughes of Loyola (Illinois), now at 26.9 (19 in the tourney) can still catch him, however. Hughes now ranks fifth on the all-time career scoring list at 2,906 — 67 behind Oscar Robertson (Cincinnati '60), recently having passed Elvin Hayes and Larry Bird.

National scoring still up

Scoring is up more than two points per game nationally in Division I men's basketball, but only part of the increase can be attributed to the 20 conferences using the 45-second shot clock. Without doubt, a small scoring increase was going to happen, regardless of the clock, because the conferences not using the clock also showed a scoring increase.

Heading into tournament play, the national-scoring average was 138.6 points per game (both teams combined), an increase of 2.3 over last season's final 136.3. The 20 conferences using the clock (174 teams in all) averaged 139.1, while the other 108 teams in Division I averaged 137.8. (Three shot-clock conferences also used the three-point play, but their combined average with the three-pointers was only a shade above at 139.8; for national trends purposes, three-pointers have always been counted as two points.)

Tournament scoring down

With 48 games played and only 15 left in this tournament, it seems certain scoring will be down from last year but probably above the 1983 tournament, which ended up at 125.3 — lowest in 31 years. The current average is 129.1, compared to 136.5 at this stage a year ago. That is 9.5 points under the national average.

Why? We submit that the lack of a shot clock in tournament play is only part of the reason. But it probably will make it more likely that a shot clock is approved by the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee next month. It likely would have been voted in last year, except that rules makers could not agree on whether to keep the clock on the whole game or turn it off for the last few minutes.

No doubt, a number of big underdogs took advantage of the no shot clock situation and rediscovered the four corners as a way to shrink the game and have a chance for an upset. More than that, though, is the fact that many of the top teams play excellent defense. Also, thanks to television, virtually every opponent can be well scouted. Controlling the tempo becomes a prime concern at tournament time. Many teams had some trouble adjusting to a no-clock situation. As usual, cliffhangers were numerous.

Quotes of the week

North Carolina State and coach Jim Valvano returned to Albuquerque, scene of their 1983 championship triumph over Houston, and won twice to reach the Sweet 16. But he was concerned: "Sometimes when you go back to a class reunion, you find your best friend is now fat and bald. I didn't want to be fat and bald out here."

Auburn coach Sonny Smith on his February resignation: "Football has always been the thing to do at Auburn . . . I didn't entertain enough. It's a serious thing, coaching, but it's not brain surgery." His players are not convinced he will not return. Said Frank Ford: "If we can keep it up and win it all, he might change his mind."

Washington coach Marv Harshman on the end of his 40-year career: "That was tough. It didn't hit me until I got to the locker room . . . I'll miss the people — the fans, the players, even some of you in the media."

Kentucky coach Joe Hall on his team's 1-4 start: "I had to hold myself from packing my bags and getting out of town." Now, he still is on the road to Lexington, saying: "We never doubted for a minute we belonged in this tournament."

10 repeaters in women's Sweet 16

The Sweet 16 field has a familiar look, with 11 repeaters from 1984. Five teams are in the Sweet 16 for the fourth consecutive year in this fourth annual Women's National Collegiate Basketball Championship. They are Louisiana Tech, Southern California, Tennessee, Old Dominion and Long Beach State.

Among them, these five have gained eight of the 12 Final Four spots over the first three tournaments — Louisiana Tech three Final Four trips and one championship, Southern California two with two championships, Tennessee two and Old Dominion one. (The other three Final Four berths? Cheyney had two, Maryland and Georgia one each.)

Georgia, Mississippi and Texas are in the Sweet 16 for the third straight season, North Carolina State, Penn State and Auburn for the third time in four years and San Diego State and Northeast Louisiana for the second straight year. As mentioned, Georgia is the only one in this group that has reached the Final Four. (N.C. State is a repeater.)

That leaves three teams making the Sweet 16 for the first time — UCLA, Ohio State and Western Kentucky (this is also Western's first NCAA tournament).

Attendance up again

Tournament attendance is up again, with an average of 2,629 per game heading into women's regional play. That is 184 per game, or 7.5 percent, above last season, when the average was 2,445 at this stage, en route to a final average of 3,439 per session.

In 1983, the per-game average was only 1,644 at this stage, en route to a final 2,456 average. The 1984 final figure represented a big jump of 983 per game, or 40 percent.

Ohio State led the way, drawing 5,168 for the Holy Cross game. Next came 4,517 at Tennessee, 4,082 at Texas, a school-record 3,832 at Washington, a school-record 3,764 at Penn State and 3,754 at Nevada-Las Vegas.

A record Final Four at Texas

Texas already has sold more than 10,000 tickets for the women's Final Four, without assurance that Texas will be in Final-Four field. This means a record attendance seems certain, since the largest Final-Four crowd is 9,531 for the Louisiana Tech (76) vs. Cheyney (62) championship game March 28, 1982, at the Scope in Norfolk, Virginia.

The top crowd in women's college basketball history, of course, was that figure of 14,821 paid at Iowa for the Ohio State game of February 3. (A total of 22,157 packed into the arena including free admissions.)

The seating capacity of the Frank Erwin Special Events Center at the University of Texas is "a little more than 16,000," so if Texas makes the Final-Four an all-time record for college women is quite possible.

Tourney scoring is up

Tournament scoring is up two points per game over the same stage a year ago. So far, 16 games averaged 151.6 points (both teams combined) compared to 149.6 a year ago. How does that compare to the national average in Division I women's basketball? Well, it was 138.5 for 7,438 games heading into conference tournament play, a tiny bit above the mid-season average of 138.4. Twelve teams in the first round shot at least 50 percent, and two of them lost.

Individual leaders

Mississippi's Jennifer Gillom leads the Sweet 16 field in tournament scoring at 30 (all teams have played one game), followed by Northeast Louisiana's Eun Jung Lee at 29, teammate Lisa Ingram 27, Georgia's Janet Harris 24, teammate Katrina McClain 24, Long Beach State's Jackie White 24, Western Kentucky's Gina Brown 24, Penn State's Kahadecjah Herbert 23, San Diego State's Penny Toler 22, teammate Shelda Arceneaux 21, Southern California's Cheryl Miller 21, Texas' Andrea Lloyd 21, Northeast Louisiana's Chana Perry 21, Western Kentucky's Lillie Mason 21, Southern California's Holly Ford 20, North Carolina State's Trena Trice 20, Auburn's Helene Baroody 20 and Long Beach State's Kirsten Cummings 20.

Mason leads in field-goal accuracy at 80 percent (8-for-10), followed by Tennessee's Shelly Sexton 77.8, Baroody 77.8, McClain 75, Ford 75, Herbert 73.3, Penn State's Joanie O'Brien 72.7, Trice 70, Old Dominion's Tracy Claxton 70, Harris 66.7, Auburn's Debra Larkin 66.7, Brown 66.7, Louisiana Tech's Tori Harrison 64.3, Texas' Cara Priddy 64.3, Ohio State's Yvette Angel 63.6, Lloyd 62.5, Arceneaux 60 and White 60.

In rebounds, Long Beach State's Carol Brandt leads with 16, followed by Perry 15, Ingram 15, Lloyd 15, Mississippi's Eugenia Conner 15, Harrison 14, Miller 13, Claxton 13, Cummings 13, Long Beach State's Cindy Brown 12, UCLA's Jackie Joyner 12, teammate Herma Van deLagematt 11 and Arceneaux 11. In blocked shots, three are tied with five each — Mason, Conner and Long Beach State's Janet Davis — and Miller has four. In free-throw accuracy, Gillom is 10-for-10 and Louisiana Tech's Pennee Hall 6-for-6.

The leading playmaker with 17 assists is Penn State's Suzie McConnell. Next are Georgia's Teresa Edwards at 13, Lee 12, Texas' Kamie Ethridge 10, Long Beach State's Roslind Bolger 10, Old Dominion's Marie Christian 9, North Carolina State's Robyn Mayo 8, Southern California's Rhonda Windham 8, Angel 7 and Tennessee's Dawn Marsh 7. Two players lead with seven steals each — Mayo and Edwards — with Bolger at six and Miller and Northeast Louisiana's Chrissa Hailey at five each. (Miller also has five assists.)

Division I Wrestling

"Eighth straight in the Okie State" has been a popular slogan at Iowa since the Hawkeyes won their seventh consecutive NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships team title last year.

Coach Dan Gable's team turned the slogan into reality as his Hawkeyes wrapped up their eighth consecutive title in the past 10 years, outdistancing Oklahoma, 145 1/2-94 1/2, in the March 14-16 championships at The Myriad in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Iowa's eight straight titles, and ninth overall, puts it within one of the NCAA record. Yale won nine straight golf titles from 1905 to 1913 and Southern California won nine straight men's outdoor track titles from 1935 to 1943.

The Facts...

DRUG ABUSE is one of American society's most compelling problems. Whether on the job, on the playing field or in the classroom, its effects and consequences can create serious and oft times hazardous situations.

While there is no easy solution to this problem, drug screening programs are proving effective in many ways: productivity is improving, absenteeism is being reduced, safety and security are enhanced, and the programs themselves are serving as deterrents.

Once the decision has been made to establish a drug screening program, careful consideration should be given to the selection of the laboratory which will perform the testing. While some clinical laboratories offer limited drug screening as a part of their testing capabilities, at The American Institute for Drug Detection, the Facts speak for themselves:

Fact: A laboratory dedicated solely to testing for drugs of abuse

Fact: A professional staff committed to providing results of the highest quality, accuracy and precision

Fact: State-of-the-Art instrumentation and quality control

Fact: Strict confidentiality and documented chain of specimen custody

Fact: Immediate confirmation of positive findings by Gas Chromatography/Mass Spectrometry

Fact: Unparalleled responsiveness with most testing completed within 72 hours of receipt in the laboratory (priority testing services are available)

Fact: Test regimens individually designed to meet your most specific service requirements

YOUR SPORTS TRAINING TEAM JUST GOT A WINNER.

Now you've got a book as big as the field itself, the medical care and training of career, amateur and recreational athletes, from the sunrise jogger to the high-priced pro.

Encouraged by the National Athletic Trainers Association, we developed this all-inclusive, professional book to deal with every aspect of prevention, care and reconditioning to help stem the tide of the estimated two million athletes who are injured annually.

At your fingertips you'll have more than 600 pages detailing the latest advances in 51 comprehensive chapters, including conditioning, prevention, musculoskeletal injury management, emergency care, special medical considerations, rehabilitation and an extensive section on the knee. Then, to clarify terms, a complete glossary has been provided.

Naturally, you'd want a book this broad to be amply illustrated, so we've added over 450 drawings, charts, x-rays, photos and diagrams to aid understanding. A book this thorough requires a team approach. So, better than 50 contributors—orthopaedic surgeons, other physicians, athletic trainers and allied experts—combined to assure the kind of accuracy and timeliness you can count on.

Chances are this single up-to-date volume by itself could replace a collection of other books and still deliver more knowledge. Adding this winner to your sports training team is as easy as completing and mailing the coupon below. Or by calling 1-800/624-5199 (in Illinois 1-800/972-5855) and using your charge card to order. Of course, your satisfaction is guaranteed.

NCAA News incorrectly stated that Convention Proposal No. 44 would require a Division II institution to sponsor two team sports involving all-female teams during the 1985-86 academic year. Constitution 4-2-(g) requires an institution to sponsor four varsity intercollegiate sports for all-female teams beginning with the 1985-86 academic year.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.
