Presidents' Commission meets to consider results of survey

The NCAA Presidents' Commission will meet April 3-4 in Chicago to review the results of its survey of all NCAA chief executive officers and to determine the legislation to be sponsored by the Commission at the special Convention in June.

Thirty-nine of the 44 members of the Commission are expected at the meeting at the O'Hare Marriott Hotel.

A draft of the survey results was sent to all members of the Commission earlier this month, and the Commission's executive committee met March 21 in Chicago to discuss that draft. The committee also directed the NCAA staff to prepare a number of legislative proposals for consideration by the full Commission next week.

The Commission agreed earlier that it would keep confidential the survey results and the legislation that it might sponsor until after the April 3-4 meeting.

According to Commission Chair John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University, Bloomington, the survey results will be made public April 5, the day after the Commission meets. The specific legislative proposals to be sponsored by the Commission at the special Convention also will be announced that day.

Ryan will make those announcements in a press conference in Washington, D.C. On that same day, the complete survey results will be mailed to all member institutions that participated in the survey, and a summary of the results will be sent to those members that did not participate.

Extensive coverage of the survey results will be featured in the April 10 issue of The NCAA News.

The April 3-4 Commission meeting—the group's fourth since it was created a year ago—will begin the evening of April 3. The full Commission will meet for an overview of the survey results and the proposed legislation suggested by its executive committee.

The Commission's three division subcommittees will convene from 7:30 to 9 a.m. April 4 to consider those matters from each division's viewpoint. Then the full Commission will meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. to make its decisions regarding Commission-sponsored legislation for the special Convention, as well as placement of proposals in the agenda for that Convention and determination of any desired roll-call votes.

Also on the agenda will be means of encouraging CEO attendance at the special Convention.

The Commission also will review the recommendations offered to it by an ad hoc meeting of Division I-A chief executive officers March 1-2 in Miami.

Ryan reported that the executive committee has scheduled the Commission's fall meeting for October 1-2 at the Westin O'Hare Hotel in Chicago.

Sports marketing seminar planned in May by NCAA

The third in a series of professional development seminars sponsored by the NCAA and Host Communications Inc. of Lexington, Kentucky, has been scheduled for May 31-June 1 at the Westin Hotel in Cincinnati.

This seminar will focus on promotion and marketing in intercollegiate athletics.

The cost for the two-day seminar is $145. It includes eight business sessions, a luncheon and an evening reception. Discounted transportation fares are available through American Airlines.

A registration form appears on page 13 of this issue of the News for those who wish to register or obtain more information about the seminar.

Among the topics on the agenda are radio packages, marketing strategies for athletics programs, profitable licensee programs, promotion through television and print media, successful ticket sales promotions, the organization of special events to enhance fans' interest, and effective promotion in the community.

Additional topics include methods of improving the image of the athletics department and securing corporate sponsorship.

Smaller group sessions will be arranged to discuss effective promotion on limited budgets.

Special committees to begin studies in April

Two special committees have been appointed to deal with urgent priorities in intercollegiate athletics—academic standards and drug testing—and both committees will begin work next month.

As a result of the passage of Proposal No. 25 at the 1985 Convention, the Special NCAA Academic Standards Committee has been appointed and will conduct its first meeting April 24 in Chicago, Illinois.

Wilford S. Bailey, faculty athletics representative at Auburn University and newly elected secretary-treasurer of the NCAA, will chair the Special Academic Standards Committee.

Bailey said that suggestions for possible alternatives to academic standards adopted by the NCAA Convention were solicited from a number of educational leaders and organizations and that the committee would make every effort to incorporate the thinking of top educators in completing its charge.

"This is such an important effort that we want to be assured that we have access to the best minds available," Bailey said.

Other members of the special committee are Edward B. Fort, North Carolina A&T State University; Joseph B. Johnson, Grambling State University; Gwendolyn Norrell, Michigan State University; John W. Ryan, Indiana University, Bloomington; Otis A. Singletary, University of Kentucky, and John Taylor, National Institute of Education.

Proposal No. 25 empowered the Council and Presidents' Commission to conduct a cooperative study of possible alternative modifications in Bylaw 5-1-(j), which was amended at the 1983 Convention to take effect August 1, 1986.

The Special Academic Standards Committee will make its recommendations of any changes in Bylaw 5-1-(j) and report those recommendations to the Council and Presidents' Commission, which must present any modifications in Bylaw 5-1-(j) to the 1986 NCAA Convention and announce them to the membership not later than October 15, 1985.

The legislation as adopted by the 1983 Convention will require students to achieve both a 2.000 grade-point

Hoyas' Thompson looking for rare repeat in Final Four

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

John Thompson is coaching Georgetown in the Final Four for the third time in four years and is looking for his second straight championship—something no coach has done since John Wooden 12 years ago. But the other three coaches in this 47th annual NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship are in the Final Four for the first time. That brings to 107 the total of Final Four coaches in history—68 just once.

Only nine coaches in history have more Final Four trips than Thompson's three. Wooden made it 12 times with UCLA and won an incredible 10 titles, Dean Smith seven times with North Carolina, Adolph Rupp six with Kentucky, Louisville's Denny Crum and Houston's Guy Lewis five times each, and four others four times each—Oklahoma State's Henry Iba, Ohio State's Fred Taylor and Harold Olson, and Jack Gardner, twice with Kansas State and twice with Utah.

The four teams combined have won 119 games. That is a record, breaking the 113 by the 1984 field. Three teams are 96-8 combined—34-2 Georgetown, 31-3 Memphis State and 31-3 St. John's (New York). Villanova at 23-10 could tie the record for most losses by an NCAA champion—10 by North Carolina State in 1983 (but four Final Four teams in history came in with more than 10 losses).

This is only the second Final Four appearance by three of the entrants—Memphis State appearing in 1973

(second to UCLA), St. John's (New York) in 1952 (second to Kansas) and Villanova in 1971 (second to UCLA but voided).

Just a mah-velous season

Lou Carnesecca is going to the Final Four for the first time, at age 60, capping a simply "mah-velous" season. Asked a few weeks ago whether he has been able to enjoy the success of this season, with the pressure of being voted No. 1 for several weeks and the pressure of media demands and his cold and laryngitis, little Louie looked momentarily stunned.

"Of course I enjoy it," he rasped. "Who wouldn't enjoy it? You'd have to be a cuckoo nut not to enjoy it. We've had our day in the sun. The kids have been mah-velous, simply mah-velous . . . I don't think I'll ask God for another year like this, because I want other coaches to have a year like this to enjoy. If I stopped coaching tomorrow, I'd say, 'Hey, my cup is overflowed.'"

He is facing his fourth meeting of the year with Georgetown's defending national champions. "It reminds me of World War II," Carnesecca says. "There was the African campaign, the Sicilian campaign, the Italian campaign. Now we're scratching our way up north." Lucky sweater No. 1 was 1-2 against Georgetown. Now, he is operating with lucky sweater No. 2—unbeaten so far in the tournament.

But he has no illusions about why his team is having a great year. James Freeman, St. John's coach for nine seasons until 1936, told him coaching was overrated. "He said your players are 60 to 70 percent of the game; coaching is 10-15 percent," says Carnesecca. See Hoyas, page 4

Knight pulls some strings to help his Hoosiers

By Bob Hammel

Bloomington (Indiana) Herald-Telephone

At its best in these recent glory years, there has been symphonic touch to Indiana basketball performances. It has not escaped discerning eyes. "When I watch you, sometimes I notice that artistry and grace are involved, and the fluency of motions that we are doing in music," Janos Starker told Indiana's basketball team one recent afternoon.

"How to improve it and to make it consistent is what we are all trying to get in every field."

The incongruity of a world-renowned cellist in a basketball locker room talking to students of a different art disappeared almost as soon as Starker began to speak.

He pretended no expertise in basketball. He displayed a great deal of it acquired in the same way that had him teaching a student in guitar minutes earlier that afternoon, although Starker himself does not play the guitar.

"I spent a lifetime trying to understand the underlying basic principles that make it possible for someone to use body, arms and then, the head," Starker said.

"I find that the principles are the same."

"There was a time when people associated sports vs. music and the intellectual professions as the brain and the brawn. Since then, it became clear to everybody who thinks that there is no brain without brawn and there is no brawn without brain."

Why Janos Starker for a basketball team?

Starker admitted he had wondered. "When I received the telephone call asking me to come to talk to you" he told the Hoosiers. "I was startled. Almost as much as you are: 'What is a cellist doing talking to us?'"

The only real wonder is that he hadn't been asked before. Indiana coach Bob Knight has been bringing in people of renown—sometimes in basketball, frequently not—to add to his players' grasp of what they're doing and why.

Of all those people, each of them with a claim to greatness, chances are that none equalled Starker in stature within his profession. Dean Charles Webb of the Indiana University school of music introduced him as one of the top three cellists in the world, by international acclaim. No. 1 to many.

It was not status easily acquired, though the gifts obviously were there. "I started playing the cello when I was six," he said. "At that time, I didn't choose it. My mother did."

"Eventually, three years later, I decided, yes, I would try to play the cello as well as it was possible, with the gifts that nature gave me."

He didn't mention that six weeks after a cello was put in his hands, he was on stage before an audience, a child prodigy. That was in his native Budapest. At age eight, he already was an instructor; at 15, he had graduated from the Franz Liszt Academy and had begun performing with the Budapest Opera and Philharmonic Orchestra.

Why, a Hoosier wondered, did such a career happen to a man on whom the cello was thrust?

"Because I realized that, first of all, it was something that I loved," Starker said.

"I realized that I couldn't go through a day without thinking, doing, making music."

"This is one of the basic principles that I state: That anyone who can go through a day without wanting to be with music or hear music or make music is not supposed to be a musician.

"I believe that to be valid for every single profession. If you can go through a day without wanting it or thinking it or living with professionalism in the profession that you are in, you are not supposed to be in it."

His definition of professionalism was as precise as his concept of discipline.

"I am not talking about being paid for something," he said.

"The professional is the one who knows what he is doing; therefore, he is consistent at a higher level than anybody else."

"Anybody else is called a dilettante."

Dilettante: "an amateur or trifler in art," Webster says.

Dilettantes can sometimes succeed in doing things marvelously well," Starker said.

"Sometimes. But they are not consistent. The word consistency is the key."

Starker dismissed his dean's reference to his international stature, but not in false modesty. He is a man who once responded to a question about what he considered to be his outstanding achievement: "Raising the string-play standard of the 20th century."

"I am deadly serious about what I do," he told the Hoosiers. "I'm not that serious about myself."

Even in those prodigy days, he said, "It wasn't important to me, nor did it ever become important to me, to be recognized as the No. 1 or No. 2, because it is a nonsensical listing. Always, I tried to do the maximum with what nature gave me."

"What is necessary in my profession is no different from yours."

He spoke of a demand for personal excellence every time out.

"After a performance," he said, "if I remember that in the second movement, my mind drifted for a moment... I am ashamed."

"The important thing is never who watches. The only difference in our professions is that when your game is over, the score sort of unquestionably shows whether you succeeded or not. That's a little bit different for us."

"But the self-respect is no different. Whether the audience cheers or not. If I know that I have done well, whether they liked it or not is not important."

"Did I do the best I could, under the circumstances, with total concentration and dedication to the cause at the moment?"

"Discipline means to learn everything that helps us to the maximum performance."

"Discipline means concentration, and concentration means discipline. This is what seems to be the problem, looking at all my students in the studying process: to have the willpower, the ability to concentrate."

"When I go on stage, nothing exists but that piece of music that I'm playing or that objective that I set for myself."

"Discipline means that you have to have your routine that you follow with total conviction or priority."

The words came not at all muted by artistry, as crisp and demanding as the similar philosophy Indiana teams have heard consistently from their own private taskmaster.

Starker dealt with the teaching compatibility. He spun a tale of three cellists who died, went to heaven, had their credentials checked at the gate. Each was asked his teacher on earth. The first two, with distinguished instructors, were denied entrance. The third, whose answer was "Starker," was told: "You can get in. You have already been through hell."

"I don't think I have to elaborate the parallel."

A few feet away, Knight laughed. Parallel established.

Not when you consider (a) the hundreds of thousands of dollars and the years that have been expended by the helmet manufacturers through their National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment program to research and produce state-of-the-art head protection or (b) the continuous efforts of the rules-makers to take

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

It was a major disappointment personally and professionally that as an educator and administrator I read your "Opinions Out Loud" column dated March 6, 1985, and the quotes attributed to Jim Walden.

For people in leadership positions to advocate "that anyone guilty of a major offense twice should be out of a job" is ludicrous at best.

NCAA legislation calls for releasing from contractual obligations the first time; and if more university presidents and athletics directors made this clear, our problem would be reduced 50 percent.

To allow cheating once and punish the second time cannot be condoned. For The NCAA News to publish and not comment on views contrary to the established ethical standard is most inappropriate.

Expanded drug testing recommended

U.S. Olympic officials, concerned by reports of increased drug use in sports, want to conduct drug tests on American athletes at major competitions between this summer and the 1988 games. The New York Times said March 24.

It would be the first time that tests carrying penalties were conducted in non-Olympic years.

Under the plan, athletes found to have used any banned drugs would be barred from competition for one year. A second offense would carry a four-year suspension, meaning an athlete could miss an Olympic competition.

The drugs on the International Olympic Committee's banned list include narcotics, stimulants and anabolic steroids.

The plan requires approval by the USOC's executive committee as well as by the governing bodies of various sports. It would be an expanded version of a testing program begun in 1983 after tests at the Pan American Games in Caracas showed that some athletes, including Americans, were using banned drugs.

"Wherever the athletes compete, they'll be tapped on the shoulder and told it's time for the urine sample," Dr. Kenneth Clarke, director of sports medicine for the U.S. Olympic Committee, told the Times.

He said all athletes would be eligible for testing but not all would be tested. Clarke said that up to 1,500 individual tests could be conducted a year.

Dr. Robert Voy, the USOC's chief medical officer, said it probably would call for tests on the top three finishers in most events, while other athletes would be tested at random.

"We have to have a method of detection that guarantees that the athletes are competing to the best of their ability, not the best that chemistry can buy," Voy said.

Youth groups aided

About 360 youth facilities in 17 Southern California cities will receive $2 million from last summer's Olympic Games.

The "Summer Games '85" program was unveiled by the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee March 26.

The $2 million will go toward opening or expanding the hours of existing facilities in the communities where the games took place last summer.

"This is our way of repaying those communities for their participation," said Paul Ziffren, LAOOC chair. The program is funded through the committee's Amateur Athletic Foundation, which was set up in 1982 to administer some of the surplus from the games.

nesecca. "I told him that doesn't add up. He said the rest is luck. Joe Lapchick (another great St. John's coach) gave me the best advice I've had: 'Remember, proud peacock today, feather duster tomorrow.'"

Carnesecca's record is 371-130 and 11-13 for 12 NCAA tournaments, but stories about his sideline antics and forgetfulness about nonbasketball matters come before his stature in the game: "All I know is, when I go home, Mary says, 'Take out the garbage.'"

Another 'gym rat'

Like his coach, Chris Mullin is classified as a "gym rat." And like his coach, Mullin gets no special treatment at home. He, too, takes out the garbage — when he's not in the gym, that is. Of course, Mullin would never ask for special treatment. He really is embarrassed by praise, and his modesty is real. "When there is something about Chris in the paper, he doesn't want anything said about it, so we don't," says his mother, Eileen Mullin. "But I keep all the clippings."

No player, gifted or otherwise, has worked more hours, 12 months a year. He has been very diligent to make his game just as disciplined as possible. Every pass is made with a purpose, and he has great court vision. "Whatever he's performed in a game, he's done in rehearsal a thousand times," says Carnesecca. "He has a great feel for the game. But how many people you know have talent, and don't put it on the line... It's not like it comes out on cue. He works at it. That's why he can make it look easy. I watch him and I see Joe DiMaggio playing center field. He captures the imagination without dunking."

Time for the 'last roundup'

Dana Kirk made masterful use of his foul-plagued big men and the clock in that 63-61 victory over Oklahoma that sent his Memphis State team to the Final Four. Asked about his tactic of holding the ball more than two minutes until the four-minute mark, Kirk said: "My cowboys were on the bench, and I wanted them around for the last roundup."

Kirk, a 49-year-old West Virginia native, talks that way, and Memphis fans love it. In fact, they love everything about Kirk and the Tigers, whose popularity these days would make even Elvis Presley jealous. Eleven of the 12 players are from Memphis (and the other is hardly an outsider — David Jensen of Greenville, South Carolina, was born in Memphis, and his mother and grandmother are Memphis State alumnae).

The citizens have adopted Kirk as one of their own. Last year, he was voted the number-one celebrity in a newspaper readers' poll. He was raised by a widowed mother. "I grew up one of seven kids with no dad," he says. "My mama told me to start fast in life and get faster." Kirk indeed has a hard edge, but it melts when he talks about his family. Mention his wife, Ann, or daughters Koby or Kasha and you have his undivided attention.

Rising to the occasion

Time and again, 6-10 Keith Lee has shown an ability to rise to the grand occasion. As a sophomore, he outplayed Pat Ewing in an NCAA tournament game; as a junior, he did the same to Wayman Tisdale; and as a senior, he has done it again to Wayman. In between, he has invariably produced in big, television-type games. Still, his painfully shy nature and lumbering gait (he had a knee operation in the ninth grade but never has missed a game in college) have raised questions. Indeed, he is a Mr. Cool — the opposite of the fiery Ewing. He seems to play effortlessly.

Actually, not many realize that he can handle the ball better than most guards. He is a combination of Sam Perkins and Magic Johnson. "There are things Ewing can do that Keith can't do, and there are things Keith can do that Ewing can't do," says

John Thompson

Marianne Stanley

Lou Carnesecca

Pat Ewing

Kirk. "People look at Keith as a finesse player, but he can get physical, too."

Lee married a former Memphis State player. They became parents a year ago. "My family is very important to me," he said, explaining why he passed up the Olympic trials. He also had to deal with his mother's major illness and death at that time.

Lee has had a lot of help from some giant teammates, but not one has been a bigger help than 5-10 point guard Andre Turner. Kirk calls him the "Little General." Time and again — twice in four NCAA games — he came through with game-winning shots in the closing seconds. He missed the Kansas game (a 71-75 loss) because of the death of his father. "Keith and I have had some talks... He knew how I felt," said Turner. He has been a better player ever since then.

A complex man

Thompson is a complex man, and the stories written about him reflect that. He is both praised and criticized to the extreme — praised for the fact that 44 of his 46 four-year players have graduated and criticized for keeping his players away from the media. Some say he is more than sheltering. They call him paranoid.

In an interview with John Wide-man, a prize-winning author and former all-Ivy player at Pennsylvania, who pointed out that he had much in common with Thompson (both 43, black, poor kids raised in cities), Thompson put some of his feelings into words. He pointed out he had never written a book telling other coaches what to do: "See, certain things have worked for me. I tried them and they worked. Which doesn't mean that's the only way. But it's my way... I did what came naturally to me. Yet, people get worried because my ways are different from theirs. Hey, what's Thompson doing in there? Is he using race as a weapon? Is he preaching us against them? That kind of nonsense bothers me. I'm not going to ask anybody's permission to be a human being."

"Lots of people are very threatened when Blacks make statements instead of asking questions. Individuality is the American myth. We preach it but we reject it in people. ... When I find myself having to constantly explain, I feel weakened. It's a threat when a person, especially a black person, wants to be creative and that creativity doesn't conform to guidelines that already exist... I chose coaching because I can put something of John Thompson in it. I can express who I am in my coaching. If I couldn't do that, it wouldn't be worth the trouble..."

In another interview Thompson decried the fact that athletes are looked upon as somehow different. "We have an educational problem in this country, and I'm tired of people focusing in on athletics as if that's the only place there's a problem," he said. "Personally, I think the athlete is fortunate... There is a public interest in him.... Some little kid who doesn't play anything and doesn't have a 2.000 (grade-point average), nobody gives a damn whether he has one."

Ewing's mother the key

Dorothy Phipps Ewing left Jamaica for the United States in 1971, leaving behind her husband and their seven children in Kingston. She promised to send for them before long. "Ultimately, the dream of all island people is to come to America and accumulate something," she said. She got a job in Massachusetts General Hospital and rented an apartment in Cambridge. Her work shift started at 6 a.m., and she was very conscientious and hard-working. She took work as a privilege.

By ones and twos, the Ewing children began to arrive. Twelve-year-old Patrick arrived on January 11, 1975. Her dream for all her children was education. She believed in it because she didn't have it. Thompson knew this when he recruited Patrick. They spent the better part of an hour in the Ewing household discussing the subject. Then Patrick spoke up. He asked about the social life in Washington, D.C. "With your schoolwork and the athletics, you won't have much time for social life," the coach said. Ewing's mother made up her mind then: Her son would attend Georgetown.

The summer after Patrick had led the team to the national finals, Thompson and academics coordinator Mary Fenlon went back to Cambridge to make sure the Ewings realized what riches Patrick might receive if he turned pro. "I went to educate them on the situation," Thompson said. "Instead, they educated me." Dorothy's fist hit the table: "I want him to get his education." In the fall of 1983, Dorothy died. Patrick never again mentioned turning pro. "What he accomplished after that showed what kind of strong man he is," Thompson said. "Patrick is a proud warrior." On October 12, 1984, less than a decade after he arrived from Jamaica, he was presented the keys to the city on "Pat Ewing Day" as a "native son" who had won three state championships, the NCAA crown and Olympic gold.

Massimino's best job

Rollie Massimino has been a consistent winner and one of the most respected members of his profession, coaching Villanova to the NCAA tournament almost every year and contending for the Big East title consistently. Three times he came within one game of the Final Four — in 1978, 1982 and 1983. But the crowning achievement in his 258-153 career is making the Final Four for the first time with a team seeded No. 8 in the Southeast regional (but most of its losses were to top-ranked teams).

And the story is not over. Memphis State's Dana Kirk was quoted as saying that the Oklahoma-Memphis State winner "will be playing for the national championship." Rollie says, wait a minute: "He just might have another thought coming. This is a pretty darn good defensive ball club (holding North Carolina to 44, Maryland to 43 and Michigan to 55 points)." Memphis State will have a height advantage but so did North Carolina.

In any event, it is hard to imagine any team or coach displaying more emotion than did Villanova after the regional championship game. Massimino led the way: "I want to thank my mother, my brother, everybody... This is just great." He almost never yells at his team at half time, he said, but he admitted he did so after the team trailed, 17-22, at half time. Then, everything jelled. Massimino is a master at mixing defenses, leaving the other team off-stride and confused. Usually, it is some kind of zone, but "we throw a little man-to-man at 'em too," he said with a wink.

Perhaps the most touching post-game scene of all: the seniors draping a net around the shoulders of longtime trainer Jake Nevin in his wheelchair.

'Guts, heart and soul of this team'

Dwayne McClain, Gary McLain and Eddie Pinckney — Villanova's three outstanding seniors — have been close friends since they attended Howard Garfinkel's basketball camp in the Poconos as prep players. When the "Three Musketeers" — as McLain calls them — entered Villanova, they were cocky enough to have cards printed announcing they were forming the newest NBA expansion team. They just missed the Final Four in 1982 and 1983. Now, they have made it at last.

"McClain and McLain have played great," says Massimino, "but Eddie Pinckney is the guts, the heart and soul of this team. He plugs up the defense, and (Harold) Pressley picks up the garbage around the basket. In the Big East, these guys have had some wars. I think it helps us to play in that league."

Pinckney, 6-9½, has come a long way since he started playing basketball in the parks in the Bronx. Massimino signed him out of Adlai Stevenson High School, hoping he would take some pressure off his 6-7 bull, John Pinone, in 1982 and 1983. Pinckney had a great freshman year, when the team lost to eventual champion North Carolina in the early regional final. He did not always assert himself as well as he could in his early years at Villanova: "Gary helped me. He'd get me to try certain things. They'd work, and I'd just build from there."

Big East dominates

By now, you may have noticed that an unprecedented three Final Four teams are from the Big East Conference. And it can tie the Big Ten's feat of finishing 1-2 in the tournament in 1976, when Indiana defeated Michigan in the championship game. The Big East is 15-3 so far in this tournament for its six entrants, making its NCAA tourney record 44-21 since the conference started in 1980. That is a 67.7 winning percentage, best in the country, using actual conference line-ups for the 47-year history.

La Salle, Cincinnati most improved

Both men's and women's tournament teams were involved in the ranks of most-improved teams for 1985, published in The NCAA News March 13, but the champions are not in either tournament. We overlooked La Salle, which is the women's season champion at 10½ games improvement — 22-8 vs. 11-18 a year ago. Bill Morris, in his first year as head coach at the four-year level after a 387-96 high school record, did an outstanding job. So did second-year coach Tony Yates at Cincinnati, the men's most-improved champion with 17-13 and a National Invitational Tournament bid after 3-25 in 1984 — a jump of 13 games (14 more victories, 12 fewer losses, divide by two).

Two new to women's Final Four

Old Dominion coach Marianne Stanley and Georgia coach Andy Landers both are in the women's Final Four for the second time in its four-year history, but it is a new experience for Western Kentucky's Paul Sanderford and Northeast Louisiana's Linda Harper.

For the first time in three years, the defending champion is not in the Final Four. Louisiana Tech won the first title in 1982 and made the Final Four in 1983 and 1984, but not this time. Southern California won the 1983 and 1984 championships.

Attendance headed for record

Attendance in this fourth annual women's National Collegiate Division I Basketball Championship is running well ahead of last year's record pace. Heading into the Final Four, the tourney per-session average is 3,380 for 24 sessions, compared to 3,201 for 23 sessions heading into the Final Four (there was a doubleheader at one first-round site a year ago, hence one less session). That is an increase of 179 per session — 5.6 percent.

The final tournament average for last season was 3,440 per session. Thus, the last two sessions, the Final Four, must average only 1,720 per session for a record. (The 1983 tournament averaged 2,456 per session, the 1982 tourney 2,495 per session.) A per-session record seems assured, because Texas had sold 10,000 tickets before the Texas team was eliminated.

'15 different personalities'

As an all-America player and super-successful coach, Old Dominion's Stanley always was known as an intense, aggressive competitor who led the team in floor burns and as a coach who often roamed the sidelines, storming from buzzer to buzzer.

About three years ago, however, Stanley realized she was not fully satisfied with her coaching. She wondered whether her extreme intensity was the right way to go about it. "Maybe I was trying to push too hard. If someone doesn't learn the same things I've learned in my institutional setting, then you have to allow room for differences."

"I was being frustrated in that I See Hoyas', page 5 wanted to be successful, but I didn't want to be a taskmaster... People were misinterpreting my intensity. I was yearning for good, open lines of communication where I was being understood and vice versa.

"You have 15 different personalities on a team. The way I operate may not be the way they do; so for it to work, you have to have good understanding and cooperation between people."

Here is Stanley's solution: Every year for the last three seasons, she has taken her team on weekend retreats to work on group dynamics. Usually, they rent a place at a beach near the campus before the season, then follow up those sessions during the year.

"We learn about body language, how to communicate effectively and to understand people's feelings, and how to project your feelings on someone else," Stanley said. "Throughout a six-month season, with all the attention and intensity, demands on your time and school work, people run the gamut of problems."

"It's really important that if someone's having a bad day, you don't think she's being lazy or selfish. It's translating for me into good business and personal management."

Led by a Ewing classmate

Medina Dixon and her Old Dominion running mate, Tracy Claxton, may be the best forward tandem in the country in women's basketball. Dixon certainly thinks so. "I can't honestly say Cheryl (Miller, Southern California) is the best," she says. "I think there are five players who are above the rest -- Janet Harris (Georgia), Cheryl, Lisa Ingram (Northeast Louisiana), Tracy, and, of course, me."

She spent her formative years in Cambridge, Massachusetts, challenging a houseful of brothers and Patrick Ewing (Georgetown all-America), a classmate. "Patrick used to teach me his Jamaican slang," says Dixon. "Stuff that can't be repeated here." In her teens, she disdained girls' night at the recreation facility for the boys' games, which often included Ewing. Her family includes three girls and 11 boys. Her brothers include Zachary, now a running back for the Seattle Seahawks, and Robin, a former New Hampshire star now playing professional hoops in England.

Claxton is a transfer from Kansas and a tough and hard-nosed competitor. Medina compares her to Moses Malone ("That's the type of game she plays"). Dixon herself likes to be called the Ice Woman, and she certainly lived up to that when she hit two crucial free throws with 40 seconds left to give ODU a three-point lead in a 72-68 victory over Ohio State for the East regional championship.

Time to 'go for it'

Before the season started, Northeast Louisiana coach Linda Harper said: "Realistically speaking, we only will be a challenger for the national championship. It is going to be tough this year to win 20 games because of our schedule."

But is a national championship possible? "Well, as the old saying goes, 'Go for it.' If you do that, you haven't failed."

As it turned out, of course, Harper was being too conservative. Her team is 30-1, with the only loss at Louisiana Tech. As expected, all-America Lisa Ingram, 6-3, and Eun Jung Lee, the 5-6 playmaker, again had outstanding seasons. The difference was the remarkable play of a freshman, 6-4 Chana Perry of Brookhaven, Mississippi, who led the team in rebounding at 12.6 per game, in field-goal accuracy at 58 and was second in scoring with an 18.4 average. She also led the regulars in free-throw accuracy at 76.6 percent for the season. A remarkable season for anyone, much less a freshman. In fact, she virtually duplicated her high school senior figures something that almost never happens -- a high-school all-America who even exceeded the fondest expectations of her biggest fans. Says Harper: "Her greatest asset is her desire to learn."

South Korean Magic

A South Korean Magic Johnson that is what her admirers call Lee, the lady from Seoul. "When you think in terms of E.J.," says Harper, "you think of adjustment. Before she came to our country, she was used to international rules. The American style of ball, although you wouldn't notice it, slowed her game down. She wasn't used to players standing still on the court."

"So what I do now is tell the kids on the floor with her to just run, run, run and look for the ball. Because, without doubt, E. J. Lee is one of the best fast-break women in the game."

This was her third season at Northeast, and she now is more comfortable than ever as a student and player. Harper found Lee while scouting Ingram at an AAU international tournament in Florida three years ago, got a message to her through the Korean ambassador and brought her to Northeast the next year.

'He fusses because he cares'

Andy Landers has turned Georgia from a laughing stock among those in the state's basketball circles (37 victories in six years) to a perennial potential national champion. How? "He's a man of high expectations," said Traci Waites, rated the best player to come out of the state last year. "He plays no favorites. If you're wrong, you're wrong. If you're right, you're right. You want to play hard for him." But playing well will not eliminate the fussing.

"He fusses because he cares," said Waites. "Sometimes, he'll jive around with you for a while; but when you get on the court, it's like, 'Dang, this man hates me.'" If Landers hates anything, it is a lack of effort and enthusiasm. To get one practice session rolling, he ran down the court and did a belly slide from midcourt all the way to the lane. "They enjoyed that one," Landers said. "I think I broke my watch and burned a hole in my sweatpants."

Landers claims he mellowed every year and will quit yelling... someday. "I've never had a kid come to me and say, 'Coach, I can't handle it,'" he said. "You think the kids would put up with it if I was as bad as people think?" Landers has found that winning causes its own problems. "It does funny things to you," he said. "It makes you forget how you became a winner."

He will never forget how desperately he wanted to be a good player. "Nobody ever wanted to be a good player as bad as I did," he said. "I shot basketballs in the mud, with mud caked around my ball until it was too big to go through the net. The same with snow. I'd leave it up there until it thawed out and fell through."

2,616 points, 1,383 rebounds

Georgia boasts two of the top players in the country in 6-3 junior Janet Harris and 5-11 junior Teresa Edwards, a gifted playmaker who was a member of the gold medal-winning U.S. Olympic team. Harris, with 2,616 points and 1,383 rebounds over her career, ranks among the elite in the game's history statistically. She has two major goals -- winning the national championship and winning the Wade Trophy.

Hidden away in a trunk in her room is a poster of the Wade Trophy, given to her by Landers when she was a freshman. Landers wanted her to know how good he thought she could be. Harris believed him and she believed in herself. "He probably doesn't know I still have it," she said. "Sometimes I take it out and just look at it and look at it. But I know it's a team effort. I couldn't do it without a good team." She is a three-time all-American but still feels hurt that she has not brought her team final No. 1 honors. While at Marshall High School on Chicago's west side, her team reached the state tournament four times but never won it. Georgia made the 1983 NCAA Final Four, losing to eventual champion Southern California despite 27 points by Harris. Her high school coach, Dorothy Gaters, said Harris learned to shoot on the playground courts but had no experience in organized basketball before coming to her.

"I wouldn't be in college if it were not for coach Gaters," Harris says. "She always emphasized that if you don't do well in your academics, you wouldn't go anywhere." That is a major speech for Harris, who is shy about interviews. She is not a pushy person and does not like pushy people. Landers' Southern manners and small, quiet Athens appealed to her. She felt at home. Harris is the last to leave the gym after a game. She has her own fan club of kids who want her autograph and says, "It really makes me happy when they ask."

Cinderella at the ball

Western Kentucky head coach Paul Sanderford has reached the Final Four in only his third season with the Lady Toppers. He probably should not be surprised by his team's accomplishment -- after all, his first two squads each earned more than 20 victories -- but he is. Sanderford had planned to attend the Final Four in Austin, but not as a participant. "Last Sunday, I was scared to death we wouldn't even win our first-round game (over Middle Tennessee)," he said. "I made plans to sleep and play golf next week in Texas. Those plans have changed. I guess we are the Cinderella team of the Final Four, but then I was tickled to death to just get invited (to the NCAA tournament)."

Like father, like daughter -- sometimes

One of Sanderford's Lady Toppers has become accustomed to the type of intense scrutiny that the Final Four teams will face. Sophomore point guard Clemette Haskins is the daughter of former Western Kentucky great and current men's head coach Clem Haskins. Clemette was featured on national television earlier this season when she was interviewed by Al McGuire, and she has been the subject of numerous magazine and newspaper articles. She is inevitably compared to her father when it comes to her style of play; however, aided by an easy-going personality, she has learned to take the comparisons in stride.

Clem Haskins says: "I don't want comparisons. She can do her own thing. She's a heck of a lot better than I ever thought about being. I want people to look at it that way."

"Early in the season, of course, a lot of the older people who were here and saw him play thought we played a lot alike, but it kind of died down," Clemette recalled. "It's no big deal to anybody anymore. It never really entered my mind because he's Clem Haskins and I'm Clemette. I didn't come here to play on his name or anything like that. I just wanted to come here to help the women's program. It's funny, because everybody thinks we're so close, but the only time I ever see him is when we're changing practices."

Clem played professionally in the NBA when Clemette was a child, and she reaped the advantages of contact with some of the sport's best players. She was three years old when her father took her to his practices with the Chicago Bulls. Clem had a pair of seven-footers as teammates, Tom Boerwinkle and Dave Neumark, and Clemette would sit on one's shoulders and shoot 100 to 200 times while the other would rebound.

"That really helped her with fundamentals and technique," Clem said. "Coaches' kids have an advantage over other kids. If you're around the game a lot and have any mentality at all, you can pick up a lot just watching and listening to what the coach is saying. Clemette learned the game because she loved to play it."

In the women's tournament there have been 12 single-digit margins (fewer than 10 points) -- eight of them last week in 12 regional games. There were 11 such games at this stage last year and seven at this point in 1983. Competition is leveling off. Scoring is averaging 150.7 points (both teams combined) vs. 149.1 last year and 148.5 in 1983. Field-goal shooting accuracy now is 47 vs. 46.8 last year and 46.7 in 1983.

In the men's tournament, there have been 22 games so far decided by four points or fewer, one more than the record 21 for the entire 1981 tournament (48 games in each case but 60 games now vs. 48 then). Measured by one- and two-point games, though, the 1984 tournament still is the leader with 16. This tournament has had 13 such games so far. Scoring now is averaging 127.7, well below last year but above the 1983 31-year loss of 125.3. Tough defensive play in the regionals shoved the combined field-goal percentage down to 45.4 percent for those 12 games vs. 46.6 in the regionals last year (it was higher in the first two rounds both years). Scoring in the 12 regional games dipped to 122.

Men's statistical leaders

Chris Mullin at 25.5 points per game and Walter Berry at 20.3 both of St. John's (New York), run 1-2 in tournament scoring among the Final Four teams. Andre Turner of Memphis State leads in assists with 35, to 25 by Michael Jackson of Georgetown. Berry is first in rebounds with 36, to 33 for Villanova's Ed Pinckney. In field-goal accuracy, it is Pinckney on top with 73 percent on 27-for-37, with Bill Wennington of St. John's next at 71.4. In blocked shots, it is -- guess who -- Patrick Ewing of Georgetown with 12, to 11 by William Bedford of Memphis State, another 7-footer. Mullin and Harold Pressley of Villanova are tied with 11 steals. In team defense, Georgetown has given up 49 points per game and allowed a mere 36.2 percent in field-goal shooting, with Villanova next at 47.8 and 42.4. Offensively, St. John's is scoring 76.5 and shooting 53.8 to lead.

Women's statistical leaders

Lisa Ingram of Northeast Louisiana, a 1,915-point career scorer in three seasons, leads tournament scoring among the Final Four teams at 24.7, with teammate Chana Perry second at 22.3 and teammate Eun Jung Lee (22) and Western Kentucky's Lillie Mason (22) next. Mason leads in field-goal accuracy at 71.4 percent to 70.4 by Georgia's Katrina McClain. Mason also leads in blocked shots at 11. Georgia's Teresa Edwards leads in steals with 11. Lee is first in assists at 31 to 25 by Edwards. Georgia leads in scoring (88.7), field-goal accuracy (54.7) and field-goal defense (40.4), and its 66 per-game allowance is tied with Old Dominion in scoring defense.

Centers and repeaters go together

Giant centers and repeat champions go together in NCAA history, and Patrick Ewing could be the next in line. The last team to repeat was UCLA in 1972-1973 with Bill Walton. Before that, it was UCLA with Lew Alcindor (now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) in 1967-1968-1969, San Francisco with Bill Russell in 1955-1956, Kentucky with Alex Groza in 1948-1949 and Oklahoma State with Bob Kurland (the first 7-footer) in 1945-1946. Only Cincinnati in 1961-1962 did not have the same center both years.

Final Four balance

In the 10 years since UCLA's last national championship, 28 different teams have reached the Final Four (including 1985) -- 20 of them just once each, including three in this field -- Memphis State (not since 1973), Villanova (not since 1971) and St. John's (not since 1952).

Georgetown, Houston, Louisville and North Carolina made the Final Four three times each since 1975 and four more teams twice each -- Kentucky, Virginia, Indiana and UCLA.

Texas overwhelms foes for women's swim title

The Texas Longhorns muscled their way to 643 points and a commanding victory at the 1985 NCAA Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships March 21-23 at the University of Alabama Aquatic Center. The championships featured 22 Olympians.

The Longhorns' second title in two years set a new championship scoring record, bettering the old mark of 505 points by Florida in 1982.

Florida's 400 points was good for second place, while Stanford finished third (340) and California fourth (283).

Texas' depth was apparent, as 16 of the 18 team members scored points. Of the 20 events on the program, the Longhorns took top honors in 10. Going into the final round of competition, Texas already had fueled a 210-point lead.

"No question, everything has gone well for us," said Texas coach Richard Quick. "I'm really pleased with the places we have finished. I just wish the times could have been a little faster."

There were some notable times, as Texas' Tiffany Cohen set NCAA and meet marks in both the 1,650- and 500-yard freestyle events. Her time of 15:53.85 in the 1,650 broke the previous NCAA record of 15:58.52, set by Kim Lineham of Texas in 1981; and a showing of 4:37.90 in the 500 eclipsed NCAA and meet marks by Marybeth Linzmeier of Stanford (4:38.91 in 1984).

Mary T. Meagher of California bettered the meet mark in the 100-yard butterfly with a 53:50, surpassing Texas' Jill Sterkel's 53:54 in 1983.

Wayne State (Michigan) edged host Notre Dame, 141-140, March 19-20 to win its fourth straight title at the NCAA Men's Fencing Championships.

Wayne State won two of the three weapons — Stephan Chauvel in foil and Ettore Bianchi in epee. New York University's Michael Lofton won his second consecutive sabre title. Bianchi's epee championship also was his second consecutive title.

Foil was the strongest event for Wayne State. The Tartars finished first and third for 58 of their 141 points. Peter Dinsdale compiled a 16-4 record and finished third in the foil.

Other Wayne State finishers were Michele Giulietti, 18th in epee; Neil Kessler, 10th in sabre, and Giovanni Girotto, 12th in sabre.

Notre Dame's Charles Higgs-Coulthard, the defending foil champion, placed fourth with a 14-4 record. Mike Van der Velden placed eighth in the same event for the Fighting Irish. In the sabre, Notre Dame placed fifth (John Edwards) and ninth (Don Johnson). Andy Quaroni was Notre Dame's top epee finisher, placing third with a 12-8 record.

Wayne State, with six titles in the past seven years and seven overall championships, is one behind second-place Columbia in all-time team titles. New York University is the all-time leader with 12.

Elis defend fencing crown

Yale won its second straight team title and Columbia's Caitlin Bilodeaux took individual honors March 21-23 in Notre Dame, Indiana, at the fourth annual NCAA Women's Fencing Championships.

Yale and Pennsylvania each won eight bouts in the championship match, but the Elis won the title on the basis of fewest touches received, 58-61. Yale had defeated Columbia in the first round by the same score and then ousted Temple, 9-5, in semifinal competition.

Andrea Metkus, who finished fourth in individual competition, clinched the team title for Yale. With Yale trailing 8-7 against Pennsylvania, Metkus defeated Penn's Mary Jane O'Neill, the defending individual champion, to tie the match 8-8.

In Yale's victory over Columbia in the first round, Beth Hull was the star. Hull won two bouts in the Columbia match; and although she was 0-4 against Penn in the championship match, she contributed to that victory as well with fewer touches allowed.

Bilodeaux won the individual crown for the first time, finishing ahead of 1983 and 1984 champions O'Neill and Penn State's Jana Angelakis. Metkus was fourth, and Notre Dame's Molly Sullivan finished fifth.

Jacksonville State's Melvin Allen (4) grabs a rebound

Late flurry by Jacksonville State sews up Division II men's crown

Jacksonville State guards Melvin Allen and Earl Warren combined for 10 points in the last two minutes for a 74-73 victory over South Dakota State in the Division II Men's Basketball Championship March 23 in Springfield, Massachusetts.

"Our players have got a way of making some things happen toward the end of basketball games that sometimes astounds even me," said Jacksonville State coach Bill Jones, whose squad trailed 71-64 with 2:10 left.

South Dakota State center Mark Tetzlaff, who averaged 27 points and 13.5 rebounds in the Division II final four, fouled out with less than two minutes to go, and his departure signaled the end for South Dakota State.

Allen hit both free throws, and two by Warren, after being fouled by Tom McDonald, cut the Jackrabbits' lead to one. With 50 seconds left, Allen hit a layup to give Jacksonville State the lead for good, 72-71. Warren added two free throws with two seconds left.

The lead bounced back and forth throughout the second half, after Jacksonville State led 40-35 at half time. Tetzlaff led all scorers with 21, while Allen had 20 for the Gamecocks.

"We just lost our composure at the end there," said Jackrabbit guard McDonald. "We're usually a team that keeps our composure, but about four times down in a row, we lost it."

South Dakota State advanced to the finals behind Tetzlaff's 32 points and 14 rebounds in a 78-71 victory over Mount St. Mary's. Jacksonville State beat Kentucky Wesleyan, 72-61, in the other semifinal.

Cal Poly-Pomona detours Jennies' title bid

Cal Poly-Pomona raced to a 40-26 first-half lead and never looked back in upsetting defending titlist Central Missouri State, 80-69, for the 1985 Division II Women's Basketball Championship March 23 in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Midway through the first half, Cal Poly-Pomona went on a 16-4 scoring tear, opening a 30-14 lead against the Jennies. Most of that damage was done by forward Vickie Mitchell, who finished with 24 points and 12 rebounds, and guard Kelley Fraser, who scored all eight of her points in the first half.

The Jennies, who finished the year 28-3, were led by Division II player of the year Rosie Jones' 28 points. The Broncos out-rebounded Central Missouri State, 42-32, and out-shot the Jennies 51.7 percent to 41.4, on their way to a second title.

Cal Poly-Pomona won the first Division II championship in 1982. "This is definitely a better team," said Fraser, who played on both squads. "You had 12 individuals who contributed (to the 1985 title), and when you have 12 instead of three, it's more exciting."

After averaging less than 70 points per game throughout the regular season, the Broncos exploded in the Division II final four. Their 40-point margin of victory over Hampton University in the semifinals (91-51), combined with the victory over Central Missouri State, gave the Broncos an average margin of victory of more than 25 points over two of the best teams in Division II.

In that semifinal game with Hampton, Cal Poly-Pomona actually got help from the Lady Pirates, who hit only 18 of 53 attempts from the field.

In the other semifinal game, Central Missouri State got 28 points and 12 rebounds from Jones and had five players in double figures in outlasting Mercer, 82-79.

Anita Meadows led the Teddy Bears with 24 points.

Semifinalists in NIT overcome 'mediocrity'

The National Invitation Tournament, like its NCAA Men's Division I Basketball Championship counterpart, is down to four teams and the champion will be crowned Friday, March 29, at Madison Square Garden in New York City.

Tennessee (21-14) and Indiana (18-13) meet in the first semifinal game Wednesday, March 27, while Louisville (19-16) and UCLA (19-12) play in the second game.

"We (the semifinalists) are not poor basketball teams; we just had mediocre seasons," Tennessee coach Don DeVoe told USA Today. "But we're all playing well or else we wouldn't be here."

UCLA opened its schedule with losses to NCAA Final Four teams St.

John's (New York) and Memphis State, in addition to losing to DePaul, but had won 10 of its last 11 games heading into the semifinal contest.

Louisville, which opened the season with a victory against Kentucky, battled injuries to key players, while Indiana coach Bob Knight suffered through a disappointing season after many Big Ten watchers had predicted a conference championship for his Hoosiers, who returned almost intact from the 1983-84 season.

In NIT quarterfinal action, Tennessee defeated Virginia, 61-54; UCLA beat Fresno State, 53-43; Indiana stopped Marquette, 94-82, in double overtime, and Louisville beat Tennessee-Chattanooga, 71-66.

Born delivers Kenyon to championship ranks

There are those who are born to run, but James Born of Kenyon definitely was born to swim.

The junior freestyler led the Kenyon Lords to a sixth straight NCAA Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championship March 21-23 at Emory University. Born raced to titles and new NCAA meet records in the 50- and 100-yard freestyles and the 100-yard butterfly, and contributed to victories in the 400-yard medley, 400-yard freestyle and 800-yard freestyle relays. The Lords established new meet records in the 400-yard medley (3:24.20) and 400-yard freestyle relay (3:01.89).

Kenyon's 504 tally was the highest total in the meet's 11-year history, surpassing the 465 points by 1975 champion Cal State Chico.

"I never really expected us to win. However, I knew we had exceptional people, and it all depended on how they performed," said Kenyon head coach Jim Steen. "Claremont-Mudd-Scripps brought the meet to us. They forced us into better swimming. Another team that was exceptional was St. Olaf."

Steen called Born's performance "an incredible display of relaxed speed. He's as smooth and quick as any swimmer I have ever seen."

Steen's Kenyon women captured their own NCAA Division III title last week.

Eight NCAA meet records were broken in the men's three-day competition. In addition to Kenyon's titles, Tom Harrison of Claremont-Mudd-Scripps broke his own record in the 200-yard individual medley with 1:51.00; Robert Hauck of St. Olaf swam to a record 51.38 in the preliminaries of the 100-yard backstroke, but lost in the finals to William Kazmierowicz of UC San Diego, and Roger Brisbane, also of UC San Diego, erased almost 1½ seconds off the 200-yard butterfly record with a 1:49.87 time.

Hallice throws net over Bemidji State

Behind the play of goalie Chet Hallice, Rochester Institute of Technology defeated Bemidji State, 5-1, March 12 in Schenectady, New York, to win the Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Hallice had 26 saves and held Bemidji's powerful offense at bay until early in the fourth quarter, while Bobby Trowell, Peter Schroeder, Ritchie Herbert and Larry Shomple supplied the offense. The championship was RIT's second NCAA hockey title; the Tigers won the 1983 Division II championship.

Bemidji State, ranked No. 1 most of the season, survived a three-overtime, 8-7 victory over Plattsburgh State in the semifinals. Tim Lescarbeau ended the marathon struggle with a goal at 1:26 of the third overtime. RIT advanced to the championship with a 3-2 victory over host Union (New York). Union had defeated RIT, 5-4, in four overtimes in last year's semifinals.

Schroeder and Herbert gave RIT a 2-0 lead after two periods, and the first of Trowell's two goals at 2:52 of the final period was the clincher.

"This makes up for last year's disappointment," Trowell said. "Getting it (the national title) on Union's home ice makes it a little tastier. I started getting lucky around the net during the play-offs. They weren't going in all year."

Because of his superlative performance in the championship game, Hallice was voted the tournament's most valuable player. Other members of the all-tournament team were Jamie Knight, forward, Union; Trowell, forward, RIT; Peter DeArmas, forward, Plattsburgh State; Bob Hawkins, defense, RIT, and Dave Geatz, defense, Bemidji State.

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 13

Limitation on number of contests—games played in Hawaii, Alaska and Puerto Rico

The provisions of NCAA Bylaw 3-3-(d) (as amended by 1985 Convention Proposal No. 8) provide that any game played in Hawaii, Alaska or Puerto Rico, either against or under the sponsorship of a member institution in Hawaii, Alaska or Puerto Rico, shall not be considered a "contest" by a member institution outside the area in question in computing the maximum number of contests set forth in Bylaw 3-3 (as amended by 1985 Convention Proposal Nos. 96, 96-3, 96-5, 97 and 99).

To take advantage of the provisions of Bylaw 3-3-(d), the sponsoring Hawaiian, Alaskan or Puerto Rican NCAA member institutions must participate in the competition as well as sponsor it.

Permissible practice expenses

As set forth in NCAA Constitution 3-1-(h)-(1), an institution may provide a student-athlete actual and necessary expenses on intercollegiate athletics trips or reasonable trips (within the state in which the member institution is situated or a distance not to exceed 100 miles if outside that state) to practice sites other than those of the institution.

As set forth in Case No. 87 (page 268, 1984-85 NCAA Manual), it would not be permissible for a member institution to transport its team to a practice site outside the state in which the member institution is situated or in excess of 100 miles from the member institution if outside that state if no competition is scheduled at that practice site. For example, traditional "spring trips" to warm-weather locations must involve actual competition, as listed on the institution's official schedule, in order for the institution to provide any expenses for the trip.

Amateur status determination

Member institutions are reminded that an individual must meet NCAA standards of amateurism set forth in Constitution 3-1 to be eligible for intercollegiate athletics competition at an NCAA member institution. It should not be assumed that an individual considered an amateur by a sport's national governing body or, in the case of a foreign athlete, by the amateur rules for the athlete's country, is automatically eligible under NCAA legislation. Therefore, member institutions should continue to emphasize to their student-athletes and coaches that there are differences in various organizations' amateur regulations and that care must be exercised to insure that the individual is and will remain eligible under NCAA amateur regulations.

Off-campus contact—spouses of institutional staff members

At its recent meeting, the NCAA Administrative Committee determined that the provisions of Bylaw 1-2-(b) generally would not permit the spouse of a coach to be involved in off-campus contact with prospective student-athletes and/or their families. The committee noted it would be permissible for the spouse to accompany the coach to a dinner with a prospect during his or her official visit and within a 30-mile radius of the institution's main campus. Other off-campus, in-person contact by the spouse of a staff member is prohibited. For example, it would not be permissible for the spouse of an institution's coach to transport a prospect (or the parents of a prospect) who is making an official expense-paid visit to the campus off-campus for any purpose, even if the transportation occurs within 30 miles of the institution's campus.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

average in a core curriculum of 11 high school courses and a combined score of at least 700 on the SAT or a 15 on the ACT for initial eligibility at a Division I member institution.

The Special Committee on Academic Research, which will finish its duties August 1, had proposed some modifications in the legislation; however, the Special Academic Standards Committee will be seeking information from many sources.

John L. Toner, director of athletics at the University of Connecticut who just completed a two-year term as NCAA president, will chair the Special NCAA Committee for National Drug-Testing Policy, which is to study Proposal No. 75 from the 1985 Convention and report its findings to the Council.

Other members of the drug-testing committee are William D. Bradford, M.D., Duke University; Daniel F. Hanley, M.D., Dartmouth College; Roy Kramer, Vanderbilt University; Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M University; and John R. Thompson Jr., Georgetown University.

Proposal No. 75, which created the most pre-convention discussion of any proposal, was remanded to the Council for further study, and it is the task of the special committee to implement this study. No. 75 would have established a list of banned drugs and implemented a drug-testing program for NCAA championships and postseason football games.

"We will review all data gathered by the previous committees and previous charges to the Council, as well as transcripts of all dialogues at the 1985 Convention," Toner said. "We want to get as much feedback as possible so that we can make a report to the Council meeting in October."

Toner said he expects to have a telephone conference with the special committee prior to the April Council meeting and then have a formal meeting at a later date.

"It is fundamental that we get as many fingerprints on the final report as possible; our report must reflect the sense of membership," Toner said. "I was a little disappointed at the Convention that we didn't exhibit competent awareness of what was before us. The strong caution signals that were exhibited, the hard questions that were asked weren't responded to. We want to get all the answers. Chemical-substance abuse is not just someone else's problem; it's our problem. The NCAA must be a pivotal group in solving the problem."

Toner said he anticipates working with other organizations that are dealing with the problem of drug abuse, such as the United States Olympic Committee, the National Federation of State High School Associations and the various professional sports organizations. (Related story on page 3.)

TV in the News

Metrosports files for bankruptcy

Metrosports, a television sports syndicator, has filed for bankruptcy.

Metrosports had been acquired by TCS, a Pittsburgh syndicator and production company, but the two companies did not merge despite operating under the banner TCS-Metrosports.

Tom Betz, an attorney for both TCS and Metrosports, said, "TCS is a very strong and profitable operation. Metrosports has lots of problems, so we filed for bankruptcy to protect the company from other creditors. They are two separate companies, but the name has caused lots of confusion."

In January, the Big Ten revoked Metrosports' rights to telecast conference basketball games after the syndicator failed to make scheduled rights payments. Two weeks later, DePaul and Marquette Universities made similar claims.

The Pacific-10 Conference filed suit in Federal Court in California this month after Metrosports failed to make payments totalling $1.5 million.

ABC considers prime-time opener

ABC is considering opening its College Football Association season with a prime-time game Monday, September 2, according to Sports Industry News.

The plan is in preliminary stages, and the network has not contacted specific institutions about playing, the publication reported.

ABC and the CFA have reached a $31 million agreement for two years, bringing the CFA television revenue total to $55 million when ESPN revenues are included.

Turner seeks college football games

A push is expected by Turner Broadcasting for prime-time college football games featuring teams passed over by CBS, the Sports Industry News reported.

Rex Lardner, TBS sports director, said he has had preliminary talks with several conferences, including the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Big Ten Conference, but does not expect final agreements for some time.

He said he expects no repeat of the glut of games on television last fall and predicts syndicators will withdraw from the market this season because of weak ratings and heavy losses during 1984.

"I think we can be competitive with ESPN at night," Lardner said. "I think we can put together a pretty viable package of Big Ten, Pac-10, ACC and independent games. It depends on their contractual agreements with CBS and the syndicators."

Future championships

The dates and site have been determined for the following NCAA championship:

1985 Division I Women's Volleyball Championship (December 20 and 22)—Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Lady Dons to add soccer program

San Francisco, winner of four Division I Men's Soccer Championships, will add women's soccer to its intercollegiate program for 1985.

Erik Visser, a 1982 graduate of San Francisco and men's assistant coach the past three years, will coach the women's team. Former all-America Erik Nielsen will be an assistant for both the Lady Dons team and coach Steve Negroesco's men's team.

"Soccer has become very popular with young women in the bay area," said Robert A. Sunderland, director of athletics. "We feel that with the tradition set by the men, we can have an outstanding program."

Women's soccer is one of two sports that San Francisco will add for the 1985-86 academic year. Men's basketball, which was dropped after the 1981-82 season, will resume next year, giving the school nine men's sports and six women's sports.

East Carolina track athlete dies

A member of East Carolina University men's track and field team died March 24 of injuries he received earlier that day when a van overturned while returning team members from a meet in Georgia.

Junior Erskine Evans, 22, of Greenville, South Carolina, died at 11 a.m. in Pitt County Memorial Hospital after the 2 a.m. accident.

The track team was returning from the Georgia Relays in Athens when one of two vans carrying team members ran off U.S. 264 and overturned. Evans suffered massive head injuries. He was a sprinter for the Pirates.

Six members of the team were hospitalized with injuries ranging from broken bones to lacerations. The cause of the accident was not known.

Morrison released

Joe Morrison, head football coach at the University of South Carolina, was released from a Columbia, South Carolina, hospital March 25 after undergoing a procedure to ease blockage of arteries.

Morrison was expected to return to spring practice March 27. He underwent a coronary angioplasty procedure March 22 after complaining of chest pains.

Northwestern considers 16 percent cut in athletics budget

A revenue shortfall, particularly in television receipts, has led Northwestern University to consider cuts of up to 16 percent in its athletics budget, the Chicago Tribune reported.

Athletics director Doug Single said the shortfall would be made up by cuts in staff travel and delays in capital improvements at the Big Ten Conference school, which has an athletics budget of $6 million. A revenue shortfall of $500,000 has been projected.

Single did not pinpoint exactly where cuts would be made to save $1 million to offset smaller revenue projections for 1985-86. He did not rule out the possibility that some of the 21 sports could be eliminated.

"I don't want to scare my coaches," Single said, "but it may prove more effective to concentrate the funds in fewer sports than to spread ourselves thin trying to support what we have."

This is the first time since Single became athletics director in 1980 that the university has been forced to cut back on an enlarged commitment to intercollegiate athletics, the Tribune reported.

"Media and attendance are the only ways to increase our income. We are using almost every dollar trying to keep the programs where they are," Single said.

Don't need TV, Walden says

Washington State University head football coach Jim Walden says he's convinced the Cougars can be good with or without national television exposure.

"We can't sit around and hope television will come by and pick us up," Walden told the Associated Press. After learning the Cougars were not on CBS-TV's projected schedule next fall, Walden said, "Let's go by the basis that we're not going to make a dime on TV."

Walden said the omission of Washington State, particularly in its game with defending Big Ten Conference champion Ohio State University next September in Columbus, may permanently color his attitude toward television schedule-makers.

"If we can get 30,000 people every game for two or three years, our finances will be in good shape. We need to sell 10,000 season tickets, and we'll be surprised at how little we'll need the CBS and ABC people," Walden said.

Prescription for victory?

The mood-altering drug Nardil has been prescribed by a psychiatrist to help members of the Arizona State University baseball team improve their performances, the Associated Press reported.

"Players and coaches are very happy with the work (Dr. James) Gough's done," said baseball coach Jim Brock.

Gough, who is a part-time consultant to the university's sports programs, said he regarded the drug as safe, although the manufacturer, Parke-David, had identified potentially dangerous side effects. "The worst that has happened," Dr. Gough said, "is that four of my patients got severe headaches."

Dr. Gough says he warns patients about possible side effects, some of which result when certain foods or over-the-counter medications are eaten or used in conjunction with Nardil.

The drug is an antidepressant. "If you feel better about yourself, you'll do a better job," Dr. Gough said.

AP names all-freshman team

The Southeastern Conference placed two players on the Associated Press all-freshman basketball team this season.

John Williams of Louisiana State University and Cedric Henderson of the University of Georgia, representing the SEC, were joined by Danny Manning of the University of Kansas, David Rivers of the University of Notre Dame and Gary Grant of the University of Michigan.

Manning, a 6-10 forward, led Kansas (26-8) in rebounding (7.6) and was second in scoring (14.6). Rivers, a 6-1 guard, led the Fighting Irish to their first NCAA tournament berth in four years as the team's leading scorer (15.8). Henderson scored 15.5 points per game and grabbed 7.1 rebounds per game for Georgia. Grant's scoring average at Michigan was 12.9, and Williams averaged 13.4 points and 6.6 rebounds for Louisiana State.

UC Irvine plans new center

Ground will be broken April 11 for the $13.5 million Donald Bren Events Center at the University of California, Irvine. The center, which is expected to be ready for the 1986-87 basketball season, will seat 5,000 for athletics events and 1,000 for other university functions.

The institution, which opened in 1965, has been playing its home games in Crawford Hall, which seats 1,500. The new facility is named for Donald Bren, chair of the board of the Irvine Company, who made a $1 million contribution.

By vote, students at the school provided $7.7 million for the center through fees. The university provided $2 million with gifts-in-kind, and the additional $3.8 million was raised with an events center capital campaign.

Harkness says he'll return

A former Clemson University coach living in Canada says he will return to South Carolina to face charges that he illegally distributed prescription drugs to student-athletes, the Associated Press reported.

Jack Harkness, former strength coach, did not say when he would return, because he has taken a job in Mississauga, Ontario, and did not want to jeopardize his job by taking time off.

He faces two counts of illegal distribution and two counts of illegal possession of prescription drugs. Each of the misdemeanor or drug charges carries a maximum sentence of 18 months in prison and a $500 fine.

Harkness is one of three former Clemson coaches charged with dispensing prescription drugs to athletes. Former coaches Sam Colson and Stan Narewski were fined and placed on probation March 11 after they pleaded guilty in Pickens County court. Both men were ordered to perform community service.

Institution sued for $1 million

Former East Carolina University head football coach Ed Emory, saying he was fired with "complete disregard of more promises and a written contract," has filed a $1 million suit against the institution.

The suit charges the school with breach of contract, interference with prospective advantage and right to contract, intentional infliction of mental anguish, libel, slander, and civil conspiracy, according to the Associated Press.

Emory is seeking damages for the value of his employment contract and other related income losses, according to his attorney, Marvin Blount Jr. of Greenville.

The suit said Emory earned $50,000 annually as head coach and received two fully insured cars per year and other benefits, including membership in a local country club.

Emory was dismissed last December 10. His 1983 team was 8-3 and finished No. 20 in the college football polls. Last year's team was 2-9.

Our Support For The NCAA Includes A Strong Commitment To The Future.

Valvoline Oil Company is very proud to be a supporter for NCAA sports at the intercollegiate level.

But as the NCAA has recognized, the needs of our country's youth begin long before college. And our young people are our future.

That's why we are also involved with the National Youth Sports Program, which provides underprivileged young people with summertime sports training and exposure to the benefits of higher education.

And with the NCAA Volunteers for Youth Program, where current and former college athletes provide positive role models for young people.

We feel that these programs serve a vital purpose for America's youth. And we're proud to be part of the effort.
