Albrecht appointed to Council vacancy

Louise Albrecht, associate director of athletics at Southern Connecticut State University, has been appointed by the NCAA Administrative Committee to fill a vacancy on the NCAA Council.

Albrecht replaces Nancy Olson, formerly at Florida International University, as a Division II Council member. Olson resigned from the Council.

Albrecht, a member of the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee and a national rules interpreter in women's basketball, joined the Southern Connecticut State staff in 1970. She has coached volleyball and softball at the institution, was appointed assistant director of athletics and primary woman administrator in 1980, and assumed her current position in 1984.

She earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Whittier College and played 15 seasons as a pitcher and outfielder in national women's softball competition. She appeared in eight national tournaments, was most valuable player in the 1962 national championships and will be inducted into the Amateur Softball Association Hall of Fame in June.

Basketball rules for women are reevaluated by committee

Although intercollegiate competition for NCAA women's basketball will be conducted using NCAA playing rules for the first time in history next season, the average fan probably will not see a difference in the game.

The NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee, established at the 1985 Convention, met for the first time March 27-29 in Austin, Texas, and made only a few minor changes in the game.

Perhaps the most noticeable change will be in the player control or "offensive" foul. Now, only the player in control of the ball and holding or dribbling it can commit an offensive foul. Previously, any player on the team that had control of the ball could be charged with an offensive foul.

The committee also eliminated the "hold whistle" on jump-ball violations. Violations on jump-ball situations will be called at the time they

Women's basketball is Monarch's dominion

Old Dominion University's Marie Christian goes up for a layup against the University of Georgia's Teresa Edwards in the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship final in Austin, Texas. Old Dominion won the championship with a 70-65 victory.

Men's game gets 45-second clock

The NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee has adopted the 45-second shot clock for use in intercollegiate competition next season.

"The committee felt there was a strong mandate from the coaches and from the 25 conferences that researched the clock through experimentation to implement the clock," said Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the committee and director of athletics at Springfield College.

Lack-of-action counts also were eliminated with the adoption of the 45-second clock.

"We adopted precisely what had been researched," Steitz said.

In addition to the data supplied by the conferences, Steitz said that 68 percent of the coaches who responded to the committee's annual questionnaire favored the shot clock.

The committee will recommend that the clocks be mounted above and behind the backboard, recessed in a manner that will avoid contact with a live ball.

In other action, the committee changed the penalty for an intentional foul on a shooter. "When a player is fouled intentionally in the act of shooting and the field-goal attempt is no good, the shooter will be awarded two free throws and the fouled team will be awarded the ball out of bounds," said Steitz. "The intent of the rule was to stiffen the penalty for an intentional foul on the shooter."

The committee also specifically defined the point at which an official's jurisdiction for a contest ends. "Once the official has left the court at the end of the game," said Steitz, "that official's jurisdiction has ended. Leaving the playing floor is tantamount to approving the final score."

Probe continues at Tulane; drug-testing plan proposed

As a basketball point-shaving investigation entered its second week at Tulane University, more arrests were considered possible; and university officials were considering plans to test all grant-in-aid athletes for drug use, beginning this fall.

Three basketball players, three other students and a convicted bookmaker were arrested late last month. A Louisiana grand jury resumes its investigation April 4, and Orleans Parish District Attorney Harry Connick said more arrests were possible. An eighth person, a 22-year-old nonstudent, Craig Bourgeois of New Orleans, was arrested April 2. His connection with the case was not immediately revealed.

Two other basketball players have been granted immunity from prosecution, Connick said. They testified before the grand jury

Wildcats' tournament shooting spree among all-time best

Villanova's 78.6 percent field-goal accuracy in the national championship game is more than an all-time NCAA tournament record. It is tied for eighth on the all-time Division I list for 38 seasons of official NCAA record-keeping — and that covers a little more than 200,000 games.

Villanova shot 22-for-28 in that stunning victory over Georgetown — 13-for-18 in the first half and 9-for-10 in the last half.

The Division I record is 83.3 percent by Maryland on 15-for-18 against South Carolina in 1971. The NCAA record book lists the record as 81 by Fresno State December 3, 1977, but the Maryland game was found (and confirmed) in extensive research in the hours following the championship game.

That was Charles "Lefty" Driesell's second Maryland team, only 14-12 for the season. His team had lost at South Carolina by 26 points earlier in the season. South Carolina, coached by Frank McGuire, came to Maryland with a 10-1 record, ranked No. 2 nationally. "The score was something like 4-2 at half time and we won, 31-30," recalls Jack Zane, veteran sports information director at Maryland.

Last December, St. Peter's tied Fresno State's 81 percent in a game against Utica. Fordham shot 80.5 percent in a game last season and Holy Cross 80 in 1981 for the other 80 percent games in history.

Here is the all-time top 20 since official NCAA record-keeping started with the 1947-48 season:

Percent	Team, opponent, date
83.3	Maryland (15-18) vs. South Carolina, 1-9-71
81.0	Fresno State (34-42) vs. Portland St., 12-3-77

76.7	Houston Baptist (23-30) vs. NE La., 2-23-82

Needless to say, none of the other games carried quite the importance the Villanova-Georgetown game did.

Another amazing thing about Villanova's tournament performance was that it held opponents to only 50 points per game in the tournament, yet put its foes on the free-throw line only 10.6 times per game — great defense without fouling.

In two Final Four games in Lexington, Villanova was 42-for-53 at the free-throw line, opponents 13-for-17 (in six tourney games 102-136 vs. 42-53).

Basketball's a sport that lends itself to gambling

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

If Dr. Naismith hadn't invented basketball, professional gamblers almost certainly would have.

The game is just right for their needs, perfect for point spreads that balance out the relative strengths of the teams. Those spreads cry out to be controlled by having a player miss a key shot here or there or throw an errant pass now or then. It's easy. And that's how point-shaving scandals develop.

Vanderbilt coach C. M. Newton played his college ball at Kentucky on the 1951 team that was caught shaving points, despite coach Adolph Rupp's declaration that gamblers "could not touch my boys with a ten-foot pole." As it turned out, they had gotten a lot closer than that.

Newton was an innocent bystander in that scandal. He even is able to joke about that now, saying, "You can't throw games from the bench. No one ever asked me."

When the Kentucky fixing story broke, Newton said he was astounded that his teammates and friends had been operating on the wrong side of the street. There had been no hint of anything like that, he said. No clue.

"A guy misses a free throw or doesn't pull a rebound. It happens. But fixing? I was totally shocked. I couldn't believe it."

Kentucky was not the only team involved in those fixes of the 1950s. Several others were, too, including the 1950 CCNY team that won both the NCAA and National Invitation tournaments.

It happened again at other schools in 1961 and again in 1978 and now, perhaps, again in 1985, at the very peak of the sport's popularity and the climax of its season.

"Now," Newton said, "I can believe it. I hope it's not inevitable. I hope we won on you guys last night?"

Hartman said the assistant coach quickly shooed the team away from its uninvited visitor, but the episode had left an impression.

"I was a country kid," he said. "I wanted to see those $100 bills a little more."

A natural reaction. Times have changed since 1944—but not that much. Wave a few $100 bills under the nose of a student-athlete who has received the traditional tuition, books, room and board, and you're likely to catch his attention.

There have been suggestions that one way to combat that problem would be to expand scholarships to

Safer helmet may not be possible

"People are blaming the (football) helmet for all those deaths and catastrophic injuries (over the years). Some people say, in football if you take the helmet off, you'll reduce injuries because you won't be putting your head where you shouldn't. But, of course, you'll see increased broken noses and things like that.

"Coaching, I think, is a big area where they could improve. Some of them maybe aren't aware of the proper technique of blocking and tackling. You can say right now it's going to be a defensive back with his head down making a tackle in the open field (who will be hurt 75 percent of the time). He just cringes a little bit and puts his head down. It's a very natural reaction.

"If you make a helmet any safer, it's going to be a larger helmet. It's going to be a heavier helmet. And that may not be possible. You need something to stop the head from going down."

"I personally like the shot clock. I hope they (the NCAA) put the shot clock in next year, because it does away with the all-out stall.

"The only thing that I fear about the shot clock is that I would hate to see college basketball become strictly a zone defense against a zone offense all the time, because there are so many great players in college basketball right now that I feel that the fans would miss out on seeing some of them at their best...and I think it would eventually begin hurting the development of the players totally if they were strictly to play zone all the time."

learn. But the prisons are full of people who think they'll be the ones who won't get caught."

Sports gambling is not some new intramural activity, invented as a leisure-time diversion to compete with video games and Trivial Pursuit. It's been around for a long time. Consider this anecdote offered by Kansas State coach Jack Hartman, president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Hartman was a member of Oklahoma A&M's NIT team that played at Madison Square Garden in 1944. His team had beaten Canisius, 43-29, in the first round; and the next day, the squad was on its way to a movie, a reward for its victory.

"We were walking down the street with an assistant coach when this guy rushed up to us," Hartman recalled. "He had five $100 bills, one stuck between each finger, and he held up his hand. He said to us, 'See what I include a spending-money stipend of perhaps $50 or $100 a month. Athletics departments, fond of pleading poverty, have not been enthusiastic about that solution even though a first-round loser in the NCAA (Division I Men's Basketball Championship) earns a tidy $141,600.

And how would $100 a month compare with some gambler offering a couple of thousand bucks for a little cooperation?

Coaches know kids are vulnerable. Their antennae always are out, sensitive to the hanger-on types that their programs sometimes attract.

"You're always nervous when you think of the team's exposure to those elements," Hartman said. "I've told kids that they're keeping bad company, to stay away from some people. They'd say, 'He's just a nice guy who buys us pizza.'"

But that could turn out to be an awfully expensive pizza.

"They can copy the players by putting up a basket on a barn. I remember that as a kid, and they're still doing it (by) shooting baskets in driveways. In basketball, you can face hypothetical opponents, playing games with Larry Bird or Wilt Chamberlain.

"You don't get the flavor of other sports as you do in basketball. I coached football for 13 years in small college. The players are better now, but it's become a platoon game. Basketball is still a players' game. It doesn't matter what the coaches say, the players have to make all the choices."

"Momentum is what's at stake here. Should we see a state walk over to the sideline and sit down for two years?" (A Texas House committee has recommended a four percent cut in spending for colleges and universities).

College basketball too business-oriented, some coaches say

College basketball has become such a big business that it places an untold amount of pressure on its players, according to Bobby Cremins, head men's basketball coach at Georgia Institute of Technology.

"I've said all along that it's too big a business," Cremins said. "Look at what the coaches are getting paid and look at all the pressures to get on TV."

Those internal pressures are coupled with outside influences over which coaches have very little, if any, control.

The National Association of Basketball Coaches "supports programs to aggressively solve problems dealing with ethics, drugs and gambling," said Kansas State University coach Jack Hartman, the group's president.

That mission has taken on added importance in the wake of the arrests of three Tulane University players for allegedly violating the Louisiana sports gambling laws.

"I don't know if we have an answer, but we recognize the problem and the dangers," Hartman said. "Times have changed. We're always surprised, but not so naive to think that it can't happen. You are always nervous when you think of your team's exposure to those elements."

"Our position is that it is critical to provide support to the student-athlete to protect the credibility of the sport," Hartman said. "Only having money for basic needs makes them (the athletes) vulnerable."

"Athletics departments all over have budgetary problems," he said.

The coaches agreed that it is virtually impossible to detect any early warning signals involving point-shaving.

Pepperdine University coach Jim Harrick said college basketball's latest incident may be the result of naive young men being taken advantage of by street-wise adults.

Harrick was just one of many NCAA coaches who expressed "shock, dismay and concern."

"I'd rather wait to hear the outcome, but we know these things happen occasionally. You just don't expect it," said Cremins.

"The people behind it ought to go to jail," Cremins said. "If they got to the kids and if the kids did something wrong, they ought to lose some eligibility or maybe all of it."

"I don't know what all the pressures are on kids today," University of Florida coach Norm Sloan said. "The kids are up and down. They are very fragile.

"The fans are going to be sad about it. Basketball is soaring in popularity and, even if there is no substance to the point-shaving charges, we know that something is basically wrong," Sloan said.

"I'm very concerned. I don't want anything to happen to the great game of basketball," added Frank McGuire, currently the director of intercollegiate athletics for Madison Square Garden.

McGuire recalled the point-shaving scandal of the 1951-52 season that hit many New York City schools.

"Almost all the schools around the country were involved, but a lot of it was swept under the carpet," McGuire said.

Harrick said it is becoming increasingly difficult for coaches to keep tabs on their players.

"It is especially difficult in a vast metropolitan area such as Los Angeles. I know my kids are on campus, but I know that some of the people they meet up with sometimes bothers me.

"What can we as coaches do? Well each school instructs its players on what to do if they are contacted by elements involved with gambling or drugs."

"Still, it's very difficult to detect. It almost has to come from within the team," Cremins said.

"The fans are going to feel just like we do," said Vanderbilt University's C. M. Newton. "They are going to feel surprised and hope there is nothing to it."

"We do the same thing everybody else does. We tell our players about drugs, cheating on exams and gambling," said Sloan. "Honestly, I don't know how much of it they hear. Some of them might be approached and never recognize it."

"I always told my kids it's impossible to cheat and get away with it," McGuire said. "Gambling becomes a snowball. If they are contacted, they should come to you."

"If the player tells you, then the coach should contact the authorities. That's the simplest and best thing to do," McGuire said.

"Not only do these people (game-fixers) want to gamble, but they also want an edge. They want to cheat," McGuire said.

Investigators have said players were offered drugs and money to help the team win by a lower margin or lose by a greater margin than the established betting line for the games.

Athletics Director Hindman Wall said that he has submitted a drug-testing program to university officials. He said the program, if approved, would consist of detection, treatment, counseling and penalty procedures in accordance with NCAA regulations.

"I would envision this plan will detect drug use by our athletes, men and women," Wall said.

A New Orleans newspaper has reported that prosecutors were told that five players received a total of $18,000 for shaving points in two games.

The three team members who were arrested last week were senior star John Williams, 23, of Sorrento, Louisiana, a 6-foot-10 all-Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference center with professional aspirations; sophomore swingman David Dominique of New Iberia, Louisiana, and senior guard Bobby Thompson of New Orleans. All three were booked for gambling law violations and were freed without bond.

Williams implicated himself in a point-shaving scheme in a statement taped after his arrest, according to television and radio reports.

Clyde Eads, 22, a starting senior from Tampa, Florida, and Jon Johnson, 22, a starting senior from Columbus, Georgia, were the players who testified under immunity before the grand jury.

Student Gary Kranz, 21, of New Rochelle, New York, was arrested and booked on cocaine dealing as well as gambling law violations. Mark Olensky, 21, of Fair Lawn, New Jersey, was booked on bribery, conspiracy to bribe and conspiracy to distribute cocaine. Both were released after posting bond.

Convicted bookmaker Roland Ruiz, 48, was arrested and booked on five counts of sports bribery and one conspiracy count.

David Rothenberg, a student from Wilton, Connecticut, also was arrested and booked on one count of conspiracy to commit sports bribery.

The games in question were a one-point victory over the University of Southern Mississippi and an 11-point loss to Memphis State University.

Wildcats scratch out Hoyas' hopes Field-goal accuracy propelled Villanova to a 66-64 upset of Georgetown and the Division I Men's Basketball Championship April 1 in Lexington, Kentucky.

The Wildcats (25-10) established a Division I tournament record by hitting 22 of 28 field-goal attempts (.786), and they became the second unranked team in three years to take the title. North Carolina State upset Houston, 54-52, two years ago in the Division I final.

"Nobody thought they could do it, but I did and they did," said Villanova coach Rollie Massimino, seconds after the final buzzer had sounded. "They played a great ball game."

Georgetown coach John Thompson, whose Hoyas shot 54.7 percent from the field, said "Look at those percentages from both the field and the free throw line. Villanova won the ball game fairly. We have no complaints."

Down by as many as six points in the first half, Villanova rallied to take a 29-28 half-time lead, hitting 13 of 18 attempts from the floor. The crowd of 23,124 enjoyed an even more dazzling shooting display in the second half.

Georgetown center Patrick Ewing picked up three personal fouls in 51 seconds and sat down for a while with 15:09 to go. But, the Hoyas maintained their composure, forcing Villanova turnovers and converting key shots to reclaim the lead at 42-41.

With less than six minutes left, the Wildcats had crafted a 53-48 advantage. But Michael Jackson, Horace Broadnax and David Wingate combined to give the Hoyas a 54-53 advantage; with 3:50 left to play, Thompson spread out the Georgetown offense.

The deliberate tempo, which had been Villanova's main weapon, might have worked against the Wildcats had Georgetown's Broadnax not turned the ball over with 3:30 remaining.

Villanova sophomore reserve Harold Jensen then took over, scoring six of the Wildcat's last 13 points, including the go-ahead bucket. His key rebound of a Wingate miss set up the Wildcats' four-corners offense and forced the Hoyas to foul.

Dwayne McClain sealed the victory for Villanova at the free throw line and gave the Wildcats their first men's basketball title. "Nobody in America knows how hard Villanova worked," said Wildcats' guard Gary McLain, who finished with eight points, two assists and two steals. "This (the championship) is what happens when you work hard."

"We just believed in ourselves," said senior Ed Pinckney, the tournament's most valuable player. "There was a lot of hard work on everybody's part. This was my last game, and I knew I just had to go out and play my hardest."

Pinckney scored 16 points, grabbed six rebounds and held Georgetown's Ewing to 14 points and five rebounds. "You can't be intimidated in a game like this," said Pinckney, commenting on this final collegiate encounter with Ewing, also a senior.

Joining Pinckney on the all-tournament team were Wildcats Jensen, McLain and McClain and Ewing. The Hoyas finished the season 35-3, while Villanova ended with a 25-10 record. The Wildcats' winning percentage (.714) is the lowest ever for a Division I champion.

The title marks Villanova's first national collegiate team championship in a sport other than cross country or track, where the Wildcats traditionally have been strong.

Lady Monarchs bounce back from first-half deficit for basketball title

Old Dominion rebounded from a one-point first-half deficit to win the Division I Women's Basketball Championship, 70-65, over Georgia, March 31 at Austin, Texas.

The Lady Monarchs' Tracy Claxton pulled down 20 rebounds, scoring most of her 17 points off the offensive boards. "I've heard Tracy say a million times her favorite part of the game is rebounding, and it showed," said Old Dominion coach Marianne Stanley, who has played on a national championship team (Immaculata) and coached championship squads in both Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) and NCAA competition.

"The last time I coached ODU to a championship (the 1980 AIAW title), people questioned if it was my team, my kids. Now there's no question. This is my team, my kids. Getting to this point has been a thrill," Stanley said. "It's special to share it with a new group of people."

Georgia raced to a first-half lead of nine points, but the Lady Monarchs stayed in the game despite 34 percent shooting and 15 turnovers—with their rebounding. Georgia led by one at the half, but Old Dominion held a 23-16 lead in rebounds after 20 minutes.

"The bottom line in this game was rebounding," said Lady Bulldogs coach Andy Landers. "Old Dominion did, and we didn't. They got a lot of second shots, and we didn't. ODU's first shots were the ones we wanted them to take, but their rebounds gave them all the chances they needed."

Through the first 11 minutes of the second half, the Lady Monarchs out-rebounded Georgia 18-6. Landers used more zone defense than he had in the first half, but the Lady Monarchs seemed able to beat the Georgia zone easier than the Lady Bulldog's man-to-man defense.

Setbacks to Georgia's championship bid were the early exits by fouls of Janet Edwards (with more than eight minutes left) and Katrina McClain (with five minutes to go).

"Part of our game plan was to get Teresa Edward and Katrina McClain into foul trouble," Stanley said. "We did that; then we rebounded well. I didn't know we could rebound as well as we did. The kids hit the boards hard." The final margin on the boards was 55-26 in favor of Old Dominion.

Medina Dixon led Old Dominion with 18 points; Claxton had 17 and Marie Christian 11. She scored eight of the Lady Monarchs' last 12 points. Dixon had 15 rebounds to Claxton's game-high 20.

Traci Waites led Georgia with 19 points, including 13 in the second half. Janet Harris had 13, Edwards 11 and Lisa O'Connor 10. McClain fouled out with eight points and eight rebounds.

Claxton, voted the tournament's outstanding player, was joined on the all-tournament team by McClain, Edwards, Dixon and Lillie Mason, of Western Kentucky.

Georgia advanced to the finals with a 78-71 victory over Western Kentucky, while Old Dominion got by Northeast Louisiana, 57-47, in the other semifinal contest. More than 11,000 tickets were sold for the women's final four.

Bruins fill up in Big Apple

The UCLA men's basketball team did not go away hungry from its second bite this season at the Big Apple.

Sophomore forward Reggie Miller sparked a 19-5 second-half scoring burst and the Bruins beat Indiana, 65-62, in the National Invitation Tournament championship game March 29 at Madison Square Garden.

In December, the Bruins left New York City unfulfilled after an 88-69 setback to St. John's (New York) at the Garden.

Miller scored eight of his 18 points during UCLA's run to a 50-40 lead over the Hoosiers with nine minutes left in the game.

"I felt it was my turn to give the team some life," said Miller, the tournament most valuable player.

Miller led a balanced attack as teammates Nigel Miquel also scored 18 points and Montel Hatcher added 15. Steve Alford paced Indiana with 16 points, nine in the first half which ended in a 29-29 tie. UCLA led by 10 points at one period in the second half, but Alford's field goal with less than 30 seconds left, completed a charge that cut a 61-52 UCLA advantage to 62-60.

The Hoosiers forced a turnover on UCLA's next possession, but the Bruins recovered the ball, and Miller broke free at midcourt to score the game-winning basket.

"We came back to the Apple and conquered the Apple," said UCLA coach Walt Hazzard, who completed his first season as head coach with a 21-12 record and UCLA's first NIT title.

Indiana finished the season 19-14. In the third-place game, Tennessee defeated Louisville 100-84.

Cardinal leaves Division I swimming competition in its wake

Sparked by the electrifying performance of Olympian Pablo Morales, the Stanford Cardinal claimed its first NCAA Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships team title in 18 years March 28-30 at the Texas Swimming Center.

The Stanford sophomore won three events and swam on the winning 400-yard medley relay team as the Cardinal finished with 403½ points, followed by Florida at 329 and Texas with 306.

Stanford was ranked No. 1 by Swimming World magazine before the three-day championship, but few expected coach Skip Kenney's squad to lead the competition wire-to-wire.

"We have been at this meet the last few years with more swimmers than this year, and yet this is the time we win," said Kenney, who was named by the swimming coaches as coach of the year. "This is the happiest experience of my life and just because of the look on our swimmers' faces. That's what makes it so special."

The Cardinal finished third last year, fourth in 1983, third in 1982 and ninth in 1981.

Nine American and 10 NCAA meet records were set or tied during the competition. Morales established new marks in the 100- and 200-yard butterfly events, with times of 46.52 and 1:42.85. Morales first broke his own 100-yard butterfly record of 47.02 in the time trials with a 46.64. His 200-yard butterfly mark lowered the old American record of 1:43.81 by Craig Beardsley of Florida.

Morales and teammates Dave Bottom, John Moffet and David Lundberg clocked 3:10.92 in the 400-yard medley relay, eclipsing the 3:11.93 time they set the afternoon trials.

Another Cardinal, Jeff Kostoff, swam a 3:46.54 in the time trials of the 400-yard individual medley, erasing Southern Methodist's Ricardo Prado's 1984 mark of 3:46.86.

California's Matt Biondi broke records in the 100- and 200-yard freestyle events and teamed with Thomas Lejdstrom, Michael Soderlund and Bengt Baron to tie UCLA's 1982 meet record of 2:53.15 in the 400-yard freestyle relay. Biondi's 41.87 in the 100-yard freestyle broke his time-trials record of 42.36, while a 1:33.22 clocking in the 200-yard freestyle erased a 1:33.80 time by Auburn's Rowdy Gaines in 1981.

Tom Jager of UCLA lowered marks in the 50-yard freestyle and 100-yard backstroke. Jager's 19.24 surpassed Biondi's afternoon trial time of 19.32 in the 50-yard freestyle, and his 48.21 in the 100-yard backstroke knocked Texan Rick Carey's 48.25 1983 mark off the books.

Southern Cal's Mike O'Brien set a standard in the 500-yard freestyle with a time of 4:13.06, replacing one by Florida's Matt Cetlinski, who had swam a 4:14.85 in the afternoon trials.

Crumbley stable after coronary

George Crumbley, executive director of the Peach Bowl in Atlanta, Georgia, was in guarded but stable condition in DeKalb General Hospital after suffering a heart attack March 23.

He suffered the attack en route to his office that morning after having returned from a week of television contract talks in New York City.

His daughter, Cheryl Miles, said it was not known how long Crumbley would be hospitalized.

Final Four could establish CBS record

Villanova's stunning 66-64 upset of Georgetown for the NCAA basketball crown could become the highest-rated Final Four finale televised by CBS, the Associated Press reported.

Overnight ratings, based on a five-city average, registered a 19.1 rating (percentage of TV sets) and a 29 share (percentage of sets in use)—a 23 percent increase over last year's championship game between Georgetown and Houston.

The highest rated Final Four final was North Carolina State's upset of Houston in 1983. That game drew a final 22.3 rating with overnights of 18.2 and a 26 share.

Philadelphia was not one of the markets used in CBS's five-city average because of high local interest in Villanova. Philadelphia alone drew a 38.0 overnight rating and a 51 share.

A six-city average, including Philadelphia, gives CBS a 22.2 rating and a 33 share.

Stanford team members celebrate championship

Rensselaer caps 35-2-1 season with Division I hockey title

Rensselaer overcame an amazing effort by Providence goalie Chris Terreri to defeat the Friars, 2-1, March 30 in Detroit, Michigan, in the championship game of the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Before 16,282 spectators in Joe Louis Arena, Rensselaer's George Servinis beat Terreri on a one-on-one breakaway early in the second period for the deciding goal. Neil Hernberg scored the other Rensselaer goal, and Engineers' goalie Daren Puppa held off a late Providence rally.

Terreri was named the tournament's most valuable player for stopping 102 of 107 shots on goal in two games. The 5-9 junior helped Providence gain the championship final by turning back pretournament favorite Michigan State in the first round and making an NCAA record 62 saves in the Friars' 4-3, triple-overtime victory over Boston College in the semifinals.

Rensselaer, which won its first NCAA Division I ice hockey title since the Ned Harkness-coached team of 1954, finished the season with a 35-2-1 record and a 33-game unbeaten streak. It was the fourth consecutive year that a new Division I champion had been crowned.

"We played together all year. We helped each other out all year, and that's what brought us the championship," said Servinis. "I knew I had to make a split-second decision (on the winning goal), and I decided to make the move to deke him. His (Terreri) poke check nearly worked. I was fortunate to beat him."

"It's an honor, I guess (MVP award)," Terreri said. "I would have liked to win a lot better. Maybe when we reflect in a couple of weeks and see how far we came, maybe we'll be proud of ourselves. But to get this close is frustrating."

Providence, 23-17-5, defeated Boston College in the Hockey East championship to gain a berth in the tournament field and then upset Michigan State in East Lansing to advance to the final four.

Rensselaer defeated Minnesota-Duluth, 6-5, in triple overtime in the semifinals. John Carter, with assists from Tim Friday and Adam Oates, ended the marathon with 5:45 left in the third extra period. Carter and Servinis each had two goals in the Rensselaer victory.

In the match for third place, Matt Christensen's third goal of the game with 7:43 left in the first overtime lifted Minnesota-Duluth to a 7-6 victory over Boston College. Duluth finished the season with a 36-9-3 record; Boston College was 28-15-2.

Named to the all-tournament team with Terreri were Ken Hammond, Rensselaer; Friday, Rensselaer; Servinis, Rensselaer; Bill Watson, Minnesota-Duluth, and Oates, Rensselaer.

The championship crowd of 16,282 broke the previous record of 14,995, set in the Boston Garden in 1972.

Lady Gamecocks claim second title

Jacksonville State became the first two-time winner of the Division II women's gymnastics team championship when the Lady Gamecocks edged Southeast Missouri State, 176.85 to 173.95, March 29-30 at Springfield, Massachusetts. The Otahkians lost to Jacksonville State by less than two points in the 1984 team battle.

Jennifer McFarland of Jacksonville State took the all-around championship in individual competition, besting Slippery Rock's Julie Morrow, 35.80 to 35.75.

Marci McGlenn of Air Force was the only gymnast to successfully defend an individual title as she claimed a second straight vaulting championship with a score of 9.3.

A year ago, Debbie Lindener of Wisconsin-Oshkosh won both the all-around and uneven parallel bars championships; at the 1985 meet, Lindener's only top finish was a tie for third (with Katie Dempsey of Winona State) in floor exercise.

Team results
1. Jacksonville State, 176.85; 2. Southeast Missouri State, 173.95; 3. Winona State, 173.50; 4. Seattle Pacific, 173.00; 5. Southwest Texas State, 172.15; 6. Southern Connecticut State, 170.95; 7. Cal State Northridge, 170.6; 8. Indiana (Pennsylvania), 167.35.

occur. In the past, the "hold whistle" was used to delay the call until it was determined if the offending team had gained possession.

In considering rules changes for 1985-86, the committee studied a survey of more than 1,700 individuals, including the Women's Basketball Coaches Association; all NCAA, NAIA and junior college coaches; administrators, and officials.

"I think we were cautious this year," said J. Elaine Hieber, chair of the committee. "In responding to the survey, we felt we did not have the necessary research or data to support change at this time."

The survey included questions regarding the use of a 45-second clock with a 10-second backcourt count, a three-point field goal at various distances, eliminating the jump ball in favor of alternating possession in tie-ball situations, two free throw attempts awarded on technical fouls called on the bench, a coaches' box, and continuing to permit coaches to request a time out after their team has scored a field goal but before the opponent is positioned out-of-bounds with the ball.

Although there was discussion on both a 45-second clock (women currently use a 30-second clock with no backcourt count) and the three-point field goal attempt, the committee took no action on either.

The committee will seek data from conferences during the 1985-86 season on the number of jump-ball situations and the number of bench-related technical fouls.

It also will accept experimentation by conferences on use of coaches' boxes. Conferences will have to make application to the secretary-rules editor of the committee to experiment with the coaches' box.

The committee received 1,223 questionnaires from which the survey results were compiled.

The greatest margin of difference resulted from a question regarding allowing a coach to call a time out after the team had scored a field goal but before the opponent is positioned out of bounds with the ball. Ninety percent (1,097) of those responding favored use of the time out, while 10 percent (122) wanted to change the rule.

Use of coaches' boxes drew a negative response from 75 percent (921), while 22 percent (265) were in favor of the idea.

Fifty-two percent (642) preferred keeping the 30-second shot clock and backcourt ruling used this season, while 71 percent (870) were against implementing a three-point shot.

Eliminating the jump ball and replacing it with alternating possessions was opposed by 50 percent, while 43 percent were in favor.

The closest voting resulted from the suggestion to assess a two-shot foul on bench technicals. Fifty-one percent (624) were opposed, while 42 percent (511) were in favor.

Copies of the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules will be available from the NCAA publishing department in late June. The cost will be $3, and orders can be placed either by prepaying or submitting an institutional purchase order.

Bill Watson

Duluth's Watson wins Hobey Baker Award

Minnesota-Duluth lost another close game in the final four of the 1985 Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship, but the Bulldogs can claim the country's best amateur hockey player for the second consecutive year.

Junior forward Bill Watson was named the winner of the 1985 Hobey Baker Memorial Award, which is given annually to the top collegiate hockey player in the country, with consideration given to scholastic achievement as well as hockey ability and sportsmanship. The announcement was made March 29 in conjunction with the NCAA Division I championship in Detroit, Michigan.

Watson, a native of Powerview, Manitoba, Canada, has won two scoring titles in three years at Duluth. Watson scored 17 goals and 38 assists as a sophomore and 37 goals and 43 assists this past season. He led the Western Collegiate Hockey Association in scoring both seasons.

Watson, chosen the 1985 winner by ice hockey coaches across the country, was honored April 2 in Bloomington, Minnesota, at the awards dinner.

"Bill Watson epitomizes what the Hobey Baker Award stands for," said Duluth coach Mike Sertich. "He has turned into a complete hockey player. He has proven to the hockey world that he may be the most dangerous player in college hockey right now."

Minnesota-Duluth's Tom Kurvers was last year's Hobey Baker recipient. Other winners in the five-year history of the award are Mark Fusco, Harvard, 1983; George McPhee, Bowling Green State, 1982, and Neal Broten, Minnesota, 1981.

Nittany Lions ready to reclaim crown in men's gymnastics

Men's gymnastics has gone a long way in the past 10 years—all the way back to the doorstep of its most successful champions, the Penn State Nittany Lions, runners-up for the NCAA Division I Men's Gymnastics Championships team title in 1984.

"Although teams like Nebraska, UCLA and Oklahoma have done well in the recent past, NCAA records quickly will show where the most successful program overall can be found," said Karl Schier, head coach of Penn State, which must be considered the team-title favorite April 12-13 at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

"I was talking to Abie Grossfeld (head coach at Southern Connecticut State and a standout at Illinois as a collegian) the other day, and we were recalling the success Penn State gymnastics teams have enjoyed. When you think about it, it's phenomenal."

Nittany Lion gymnastics teams have won nine men's team titles, one more than Illinois and four more than Nebraska.

"Not only that, Penn State teams have finished second six times and third five times," Schier pointed out. "That adds up to 20 top-three finishes since the championships started in 1938, and we are very, very proud of that record."

Penn State last won a team title in 1976. Nebraska has been dominant in the 1980s, winning titles from 1980 through 1983.

Schier probably will be just as proud of his 1985 team by the time the championships have ended. Penn State finished the regular season with a 13-1 record and a scoring average of 285.32, quite possibly the highest average in history, although season-scoring average records never have been kept.

"We have had a very balanced team this season," Schier said. "Since January, we have been scoring at 281 or above on a regular basis, and we have had five or six meets above 284. Of course, that is a sign of the kind of balance this team has displayed."

Maybe a better indicator of the talent is the way the team came together after all-arounder Mario Gonzalez went down with a severe knee injury. "Mario severed the interior cruciate ligament on his knee," Schier explained. "We probably will red-shirt him next season so he can recover and regain the strength in that knee before trying to compete again. But even after his injury, we were able to score in the 284 to 286 range."

Of the 10 gymnasts who will go to the championships (nine team members and one alternate), seven are either freshmen or sophomores.

"It's a little scary," Schier said. "We have a lot of talent and youth on this team." Penn State's lone loss came to Ohio State in Columbus. "We have lost the last three times we have competed on those pads in Columbus," Schier said with a laugh.

An all-time record for team scoring (288.15 vs. Nebraska) sent fair warning to the rest of the gymnastics world that the Nittany Lions are ready to reclaim their throne.

"I really expect a tight race at the championships," Schier said. "I think you will see a team race that is a little more competitive than in past years, and you will see teams that are a little more balanced. There simply are not the kind of big names around that we have had in the past couple of seasons, and I believe that will make the meet very close and very exciting."

Schier said he expects Ohio State, UCLA, Arizona State, Oklahoma and host Nebraska to be battling for national honors. "Nebraska can do just as good a job as any other team at this meet. I have been very impressed with them this season."

The key to victory? "I hate to use this old cliché," said Schier, "but I really believe getting consistent will be important. As a team, we have the experience in this kind of meet. All but two of the people on the squad have performed on the NCAA championships floor before. We have good leadership and experience; now, it is a matter of being consistent and hitting our routines."

Utah women seek fourth gymnastics title in row

There seems to be no reason why Utah women's gymnastics coach Greg Marsden shouldn't sound confident heading into the Division I championships April 12-13 in Salt Lake City.

Three years in a row, Marsden has guided a Utah gymnastics team to an NCAA championship, every women's team title that has been contested under NCAA auspices. Two of those years, the championships were at Utah. In 1984, the Utes had to go on the road, and they edged host UCLA by half a point for the team title.

Leading Utah's dominance in the sport was Megan McCuniff, who took a record three individual championships during her career and later became Mrs. Greg Marsden.

In many ways, 1985 has been a new beginning for Utah gymnastics. About the only familiar aspect has been Marsden's confidence. "I really am pleased with the season," he said. "We have three freshmen and a redshirt, Lynn Lederer, who really have come through for us so far."

The Lady Utes finished the regular season 13-1, losing only to Arizona State, which will be a challenger for the national championship. That loss was later avenged when Utah recorded the highest team score in the nation this year, beating the Sun Devils, 190.15-186.80.

"The team has been successful this season, but things have been different for us than in past years," Marsden explained. "This group's pretty deep; there has not been one standout performer like Megan was for so long."

The all-around competition is a prime example. "Early in the year, Tina Hermann was our standout performer," Marsden said. "As the season progressed, Lisa Mitzel came through with some real good performances; and during the latter stage of the season, Lynn (Lederer) has really come into her own. So, we have three legitimate all-around performers as we head into the championships."

How big of an edge will the home-floor advantage be for the Lady Utes? "I think it is a tremendous advantage to us this year, simply because we have such a young team," Marsden said.

"I guess if I'm worried, it is about the fact that Florida and Arizona State have so much more experience in championships competition than our team does. Any one of the top five teams in the country based on scoring average, but particularly the top three—ourselves, Florida and Arizona State—has the potential to win the championship."

"Florida and Arizona State are at least as talented as we are this season; and although we have the highest average in the country, all three teams really have had similar years in terms of scoring. And if any one of the top three falter, I believe Alabama and Cal State Fullerton will be right there ready to move in."

Although Marsden has a relatively inexperienced team, the Lady Utes have sustained the kind of regular-season success that has led to three straight NCAA team championships.

"I don't mean to sound like we have no experience at all," Marsden said. "Elaine Alfano has won the national vaulting championship two of the past three years, and she has a real good shot at taking it again."

"What I intended to emphasize was the fact that to win another team championship, we will have to depend on some people who have never been through this kind of meet before."

"I have had several people on the team comment that Megan's becoming involved with coaching has been tremendous this season, and I believe it has helped a great deal."

He coached the defensive secondary at Boston College. GEORGE CAFEGO resigned at Tennessee. GREG McMAHON selected as receivers coach and MIKE TURNER named offensive coordinator and offensive line coach at North Alabama. McMahon played at Eastern Illinois before joining the Minnesota staff. Turner was an assistant at Carson-Newman during the team's back-to-back NAIA championship seasons in 1983 and 1984. TOM DODDY named offensive line coach at Muhlenberg, where he was a volunteer assistant last season.

Women's gymnastics GEORGIA NESLADEK resigned at Ball State after eight seasons, effective June 30. She compiled a 50-49 dual-meet record, including an 11-5 mark this season.

Men's ice hockey JOHN MATCHETS resigned at Air Force. Capt. CHUCK DELICH, an assistant, named as Matchets' successor. Matchets has coached Air Force for 10 seasons, posting a 154-150-6 record. His best season was in 1974 when the Falcons were 24-5-1. He will continue as a physical education instructor and assist the new coach with scheduling and recruiting. Delich, a 1977 Air Force graduate, either holds or shares 13 school records in the sport. He is the all-time academy career scoring leader and has been an assistant since 1982.

Women's softball BOB COOLEN selected at Bentley, succeeding Peter Breton, who resigned to concentrate on his responsibilities as head men's basketball coach. An assistant last season, Coolen was head coach at a Massachusetts high school, and his teams were 45-10 over three seasons. R. WAYNE MORGAN resigned at North Central after two seasons. His teams posted a 30-20 record and a fourth-place finish in the 1983 NCAA Division III national tournament.

Women's softball assistant GARY HINES appointed at Kansas.

Men's tennis FRITZ YAMBRACH named at Rochester Institute of Technology, replacing Dave Carter, who resigned. A Michigan State graduate, he assisted the women's tennis program at Utah State for one season and was head professional at tennis clubs in New York, Michigan and Minnesota. IRA MILLER selected at Fairleigh Dickinson, succeeding Wendy Marks, who resigned. He also will coach the women's team, which plays a fall schedule. A graduate of Clark, where he played tennis for four years, he had been head coach at Linfield College for one season.

Men's track and field PETE SCHUDER, track and field coach at Columbia the past seven seasons, named at Boston U., succeeding Rick Taylor, who resigned.

Women's volleyball FRANCES LEE ALBITZ named at Kansas, after four years as head coach at Oral Roberts. She also has coached at Oklahoma State, Northeastern State (Oklahoma) and Southern Methodist.

Water polo KELLY CAPPS named interim coach at Cal State Fullerton. A Cal State Fullerton graduate, he had been head water polo and assistant swimming coach at a California high school.

Wrestling TRACY BORAH will retire from Western State (Colorado). GREG WAGGONER, a former assistant, named as Borah's successor. A two-time NCAA Division II all-America, Waggoner coached three years at a Colorado high school.

Bufs' Reinhardt continues to show improvement

Ed Reinhardt Jr., the University of Colorado football player who suffered a brain injury during a game against the University of Oregon in Eugene last September 15, has been taking short walks as part of his therapy, a Craig Hospital spokesman said April 2 in Denver.

"He is walking," said spokesman Dennis O'Malley. "The walks are measured in yards at a time."

O'Malley said Reinhardt is walking with the aid of a "quad cane," a cane that has four short legs at its base.

"He is beginning to walk," O'Malley said. "He is not using walking as his primary means of getting around," however.

O'Malley said Reinhardt's loss of speech remains his biggest problem, and he is having to relearn speech patterns and phrases.

Reinhardt collapsed soon after he was hit by two Oregon players during the game. He underwent brain surgery for complications that developed after the injury.

He was returned to Colorado about a month after the injury and has remained hospitalized or in therapy since.

Miller, Harris repeat on coaches' all-America

Cheryl Miller of Southern California and Janet Harris of Georgia have been named to the Kodak all-America women's basketball team for the third time.

Harris is the all-time leading scorer for Georgia — men's or women's — and she was joined on the all-America team by teammate Teresa Edwards, who played on the gold-medal Olympic basketball squad.

Miller averaged 27 points and 17 rebounds a game.

The team is selected by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

Other members of the 10-player team are Medina Dixon of Old Dominion, Eun Jung Lee of Northeast Louisiana, Anucha Browne of Northwestern, Sheila Collins of Tennessee, Kirsten Cummings of Cal State Long Beach, Pam Gant of Louisiana Tech and Kamie Ethridge of Texas.

Browne was the leading Division I women's scorer during the regular season with 30.5 points per game.

Miller, Edwards, Lee and Ethridge are juniors. The others are seniors.

Basketball coaches announce silver anniversary all-star team

Five outstanding college basketball players from the 1960 season have been selected to the 11th annual silver anniversary all-America team by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Chosen from the senior class of 25 years ago were Darrall Imhoff, University of California, Berkeley; Oscar P. Robertson, University of Cincinnati; Thomas E. "Satch" Sanders, New York University; Lee P. Schaffer, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Jerry West, West Virginia University.

Everett Dean, who retired after 34 years of coaching at Stanford University and Indiana University, Bloomington, where he was the school's first all-America in 1921, was selected by the NABC for a special golden-anniversary award for 50 years of service to college basketball. Dean has been inducted into the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame.

The five former players and Dean were honored at the NABC awards dinner in Lexington, Kentucky, March 31.

Following are sketches of the 1985 NABC award winners:

Darrall Imhoff—A 6-10 center on two of coach Pete Newell's California basketball teams that reached the NCAA title game, Imhoff tipped in the winning basket with 17 seconds to play to beat West Virginia, 71-70, for the 1959 NCAA championship. In the 1960 championship game, Ohio State beat California, 75-55. A member of the 1960 Olympic gold-medal team, Imhoff was drafted by the New York Knicks the same year. He played 14 seasons in the National Basketball Association before doing radio and television commentary for the Portland Trailblazers. He currently is a member of the executive staff of Kimberland Meadows, a recreational land development in Idaho.

Oscar P. Robertson—The national collegiate player of the year and leading scorer three times while at Cincinnati, Robertson also was a member of the 1960 Olympic basketball team. He was selected as NBA rookie of the year in 1960 by scoring 30.5 points per game for the Cincinnati Royals and was NBA player of the year in 1964. His 10-year NBA career left him ranked No. 4 in career scoring with a 27.5 average, and he was inducted into the Naismith Hall of Fame in 1979. He is the director of the Pepsi-Cola "Hot Shots" program and president of the Oscar Robertson Company, developer of Cincinnati's Avondale Town Center.

Thomas E. Sanders—Known as "Satch," he was captain of the 1960 NYU team, winner of the East regional and a Final Four team that season. A member of eight Boston Celtics world championship teams, Sanders retired in 1973 and became Harvard University's head men's basketball coach. In 1978, he was named the Celtics' head coach. He is president of Thomas Inc., operator of Satch's Restaurant in Boston, and associate director of the Center for the Study of Sport in Society at Northeastern University.

Lee P. Schaffer—A consensus all-America and Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year in 1960, Schaffer led the ACC in scoring. He joined the NBA Syracuse Nationals in 1962 and set a club rookie scoring record (1,267 points). Schaffer returned after the team moved to Philadelphia and he was traded to San Francisco for Wilt Chamberlain. He is now president and chief executive officer for the largest motor carrier of petroleum and chemical products serving the Southeast.

Jerry West—A three-time all-America at West Virginia, he averaged 24.8 points during his career. He was the 1959 NCAA Final Four's outstanding player. A 1960 Olympic gold-medalist, West starred for 14 seasons with the Los Angeles Lakers. He was a 12-time all-pro and the third NBA player to score 25,000 points. He was named to the Naismith Hall of Fame in 1979, two years after becoming head coach of the Lakers posted a three-year record of 141-101, winning the 1977 Pacific Division title. West has been general manager of the club since 1981.

Everett Dean—Named all-Big Ten Conference center and an all-America at Indiana in 1921, he became head basketball and baseball coach in 1924, winning three Big Ten titles in each sport during the next 14 seasons. He moved to Stanford in 1938 and won the NCAA Men's Basketball Championship in 1942. Dean retired in 1955 and remained a long-time NABC officer.

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 14

Expenses for participation in World University Games tryouts

Numerous inquiries have been received regarding tryouts for women's basketball teams for the World University Games and the National Sports Festival. Trials for both teams will be conducted on consecutive two-day periods at four regional sites April 11-14, but the tryouts will involve separate groups of athletes. Member institutions are reminded that NCAA Constitution 3-1-(h)-(3) permits institutions to provide actual and necessary expenses for their student-athletes participating in World University Games qualifying competition. However, inasmuch as the National Sports Festival is not specifically identified in Constitution 3-1-(h)-(3), student-athletes participating in the National Sports Festival may not receive expenses from their member institutions for such participation. In addition, as set forth in Case No. 7 (page 259, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), it is not permissible for a sponsor, other than an individual upon whom the athlete is naturally or legally dependent or the nonprofessional organization that is sponsoring the competition in question, to provide actual and necessary expenses or any other form of compensation to student-athletes for participation in the competition.

Postseason award banquet

As plans are being made for postseason award banquets, member institutions are reminded of an interpretation published in the February 1, 1984, issue of The NCAA News setting forth guidelines for such an event. This interpretation, which appears as Case No. 86 in the 1985-86 NCAA Manual, states that "postseason team award or recognition meeting" is defined as a banquet or other meeting held at the conclusion of the sports season to commemorate the accomplishments of the team and individual student-athletes, conducted by and subject to the control of the member institution and held within 100 miles of the institution's main campus within the same state. Further, only one such event is permitted per season per team in addition to the institution's regular, annual all-sports banquet or meeting, and only the institution or representatives of its athletics interests (through the institution) are permitted to provide expenses for such an event, pursuant to Constitution 3-1-(h)-(1). Member institutions may wish to consult Legislative Assistance Column No. 2 in the January 9, 1985, issue of The NCAA News, which summarizes NCAA awards legislation.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

- make the wearing of an undershirt that includes any type of logo, insignia, lettering or name illegal.

- mandate the addition of a line parallel to the end lines and six feet behind the end lines; non-game-related personnel will not be permitted between this restraining line and the end line. Only players, officials and other team-support personnel will be permitted between this restraining line and the end line.

- requires positive securing of movable backstops and goal supports in multipurpose arenas that use this portable equipment.

In other action, the committee authorized experimentation for the 1985-86 season that includes:

- a three-point field goal, with a line 19 feet, nine inches from the basket at the top of the key.

- use of the rear-boundary arc that will decrease the area of the front court.

- use of a new rectangular backboard that will be six inches shorter at the bottom than current models.

The committee also voted to include the following as points of emphasis for 1985-86.

When a topic is included in the rules as a point of emphasis, there has been evidence during the previous year that there has not been consistency in administering the area(s) of concern:

- the principle of verticality.
- grabbing or hanging on to the rim.
- the intentional foul.
- hand checking.
- minimizing rough play, particularly in the low-post area.

"It is important that officials are consistent in abiding by the mechanics manual," said Steitz, "and also that they remember that there should be absolutely no deviation from these playing rules as they are published."

Player faces charges

Greg Edge, a shortstop on the University of Oklahoma baseball team, faces seven counts of a Federal indictment that accuses him of selling cocaine to undercover agents. The indictment, issued April 1, charges that Edge twice sold cocaine to agents. A U.S. attorney said Edge was charged with two counts of distributing cocaine, three of unlawful use of telecommunications facilities, one of aiding and abetting another person in unlawful interstate travel for the purpose of facilitating a drug felony, and one count of conspiracy.

Jury awards damages to referee in suit against T-shirt firm

Big Ten Conference referee Jim Bain believes a verdict that his privacy was invaded by a T-shirt showing him with a rope around his neck was a victory for all basketball referees.

A Johnson County, Iowa, district court jury March 28 unanimously found Iowa City T-shirt printer John Gillispie guilty of invading Bain's privacy by appropriating his name and likeness and by publicly displaying him in a false light.

The jury awarded Bain $12,300 in damages, including $1,230 for profits from the T-shirt, $1,000 for loss of privacy, $5,000 for emotional distress and $5,000 in punitive damages.

Gillispie claimed that the T-shirt was simply a tongue-in-cheek means of showing that Bain "choked" in the last seconds of a March 6, 1982, basketball game between the University of Iowa and Purdue University. Bain had called a foul that gave Purdue two free throws that led to a victory after time had elapsed.

Bain is a 17-year veteran of Big Ten games and has been a referee in 14 NCAA tournaments. He said his future as a referee depended on the outcome of his suit.

Frieder honored

Bill Frieder, whose Michigan Wolverines won the Big Ten Conference championship, has been named college basketball coach of the year by the Associated Press.

Michigan finished second in the AP rankings but was defeated in the second round of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship. The Wolverines won the Big Ten with a 16-2 record.

Frieder was an assistant at Michigan for one season before becoming head coach for the 1980-81 season.

The Associated Press also named Georgetown's Patrick Ewing as the player of the year.

Ewing is a three-time all-America who has led the Hoyas to the NCAA Final Four in three of the past four years. Ewing leads Georgetown in scoring and rebounding and has blocked more than 100 shots in each of his four seasons.

Also, the United States Basketball Writers Association has voted Louis Carnesecca, head coach at St. John's University (New York), coach of the year for the second straight year.

His Redmen reached the semifinals of the Final Four, the school's first Final Four appearance since 1952. St. John's was 31-4 this season.

Division II move

Delta State University will switch its women's basketball team from Division I to Division II.

The Lady Statesmen won national titles in 1975, 1976 and 1977 in the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women. This year's team posted a 19-7 record.

"We believe that a move to Division II and competition in the Gulf South Conference, in which our men already compete, will be a positive one for our program and will give us a chance to compete nationally once again," said Bradford W. Hovious, athletics director.

"We like the idea of winning and earning our way into national play-offs rather than relying on selection by an NCAA Division I committee as we have in the past two years," he said.

Miller honored

Cheryl Miller of the University of Southern California was chosen from among seven nominees as player of the year by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

The player of the year award was presented at a breakfast meeting during the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship in Austin, Texas.

Miller, a 6-foot-three junior, averaged 25.9 points a game this season and was a star on the United States

Olympic gold-medal women's basketball team last summer.

The coaches' association said the award is based on "statistics, leadership, sporting behavior on the court, 'team player' attitude and each hall of fame.

The coaches, all of whom are retired, are Bill Lufser, Presbyterian College and the University of Miami (Florida); Jack Barnaby, Harvard University; John Conroy, Princeton winner's contribution to her team's national ranking."

Southern California won the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship in 1983 and 1984, and Miller was the tournament's outstanding player. This year, Southern California was No. 15 in the final poll.

Five named to hall

The Collegiate Tennis Hall of Fame in Athens, Georgia, will induct four coaches and one contributor this spring, according to Dan Magill, head men's tennis coach at the University of Georgia and chair of the University, and Chet Murphy, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, and University of California, Berkeley. The contributor to be honored is Jack Kramer, a former world champion.

Lufser coached national powers at Presbyterian and Miami (Florida), compiling a dual-match record of 148-2-1. He had winning streaks of 57 and 72 matches.

Barnaby coached at Harvard for 37 years (1938-75). His teams won 14 New England titles.

Conroy was Princeton's coach for 27 years, retiring in 1971. His Tigers won 11 conference titles, shared four others and ended a record winning streak of 137 by Miami (Florida) in 1964.

Murphy, a member of the University of Chicago's championship team in 1939, coached three years at Minnesota and 10 years at California. He has written numerous books on tennis.

Kramer, who did not play college tennis, has been instrumental in the promotion of varsity tennis in recent years.

All five inductees will be honored in ceremonies May 22 in Athens.

New structure

The State University of New York, Stony Brook, is creating a new division of physical education and athletics, effective September 1. A national search will be conducted for a director.

Henry von Mechow, who has been department chair since 1977, will serve as liaison with campus officials, local and regional schools, and individuals involved in athletics. John Ramsey, who was director of men's athletics for six years, will be the acting director of the new division. He also will be chair of the department of physical education for a three-year term.

Among the goals of the reorganization are an attempt to give more visibility to physical education and athletics and to pay more attention to academics, according to Graham B. Spanier, vice-provost for undergraduate studies.

An architect will be selected for the new physical education facility, which is expected to be ready by the fall of 1988.
