Insurance for membership

May 15 is deadline for enrollment in lifetime catastrophic insurance plan

May 15 is the scheduled deadline for member institutions to enroll in the NCAA's lifetime catastrophic injury insurance program, which will be available to colleges and universities for the first time in 1985-86.

A fifth and final mailing of enrollment forms and additional information was completed April 15 to those institutions that have not yet enrolled in the program. Forms should be completed by May 15 and mailed to the administrator of the plan, American Sports Underwriters' Inc., Woburn, Massachusetts.

A check for the appropriate premium amount can be included with the enrollment form, or ASU will send an invoice to the institution July 1.

Through the efforts of the NCAA Insurance Committee, this program was approved late last year and will provide disability benefits and lifetime medical and rehabilitation benefits to any male or female student-athlete representing a participating institution.

"The response for information about the plan has been good," said Charles A. Taff, chair of the Insurance Committee, from the University of Maryland, College Park. "Because of differing timetables at institutions, it may be later in the spring before some institutions make the decision to enroll in the program."

Since the announcement of the NCAA catastrophic injury insurance program in December 1984, other programs with similar benefits have come to the attention of the committee; however, Taff said that the committee believes the NCAA program will best meet the needs of the members.

"The Insurance Committee believes that this program represents the best coverage available to provide lifetime benefits to seriously injured student-athletes and other students involved in intercollegiate athletics," Taff said. "Prior to the introduction of this program, coverage with these broad benefits at a reasonable price was not being offered to the college community."

A detailed question-and-answer story on the catastrophic insurance program appeared in the March 13 issue of The NCAA News. Any institution may examine a copy of the policy by contacting American Sports Underwriters, 300 Unicorn Park Drive, Woburn, Massachusetts 01801. The telephone number is 1-800-621-2116.

Three new programs gain approval, will be available to membership soon

Three new insurance programs for the NCAA membership have been approved by the Administrative Committee and will be available for member institutions soon.

Two of the three programs—basic athletics accident medical insurance and an athletics staff accident program—could be available by mid-May. The third program, a loss-of-revenue insurance plan, may be available by mid-June.

These programs, to be underwritten by State Mutual Life Assurance Company of America, will replace the travel accident and loss-of-revenue programs underwritten by Aetna Life Insurance Company, which were discontinued due to declining enrollment.

The NCAA Insurance Committee recently has completed negotiations with State Mutual on the language and benefits of the basic medical and staff accident programs and the policies have been filed with the Kansas Insurance Department. Once approved by the state of Kansas, both programs would be available for purchase by the membership.

The basic athletics accident medical insurance program will include an accidental death and dismemberment provision and cover medical expenses up to a maximum of $25,000 per occurrence, which is where the NCAA catastrophic injury insurance program begins.

State Mutual also is the primary insurer of the catastrophic insurance program.

Institutions and allied conferences can provide their staff members with 24-hour all-risk accidental death and dismemberment coverage through the athletics staff accident program.

Basic benefits and the language of the loss-of-revenue program are still under negotiation by the Insurance Committee and State Mutual.

Although the loss-of-revenue insurance program would be similar to the previous program, it would be broadened to include postponement and rescheduling of games and would be extended to sports other than football and basketball.

Prior to the programs being approved by the state of Kansas and offered to the membership, any questions regarding the benefits can be directed to Richard D. Hunter, NCAA director of finance, at the national office.

D. J. DiJulia to fill vacancy on Council

D. J. "Don" DiJulia, commissioner of the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference for the past year, has been appointed by the NCAA Administrative Committee to fill a vacancy on the NCAA Council.

He replaces John W. Kaiser, St. John's University (New York), as a Division I-AAA Council member. Kaiser resigned from the Council.

DiJulia was commissioner of the East Coast Conference for two years before taking the Metro Atlantic position. Prior to the ECC position, he was director of athletics at St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania) for five years.

He earned a degree in political science at St. Joseph's in 1968 and played on the 1964-65 Hawk basketball team that compiled a 26-1 record, the best in the institution's history.

He also has been an assistant basketball coach at Fairfield, George Washington and American Universities and served as director of alumni support at George Washington and American. He has been a high school teacher and has officiated in baseball, basketball, soccer and softball.

Presidents' Commission selects Dennis O'Brien

Dennis O'Brien, president of the University of Rochester, has been appointed to fill a Division III vacancy on the NCAA Presidents' Commission.

O'Brien replaces Dallas K. Beal, who left Fredonia State University College to head the Connecticut State University system. The appointment was made by Commission Chair John W. Ryan, based on recommendations from the other Commission members representing Region 2 of Division III.

O'Brien was appointed to the presidency of the University of Rochester last year after serving as president of Bucknell University since 1976.

He joined the philosophy faculty at Princeton University in 1958 and became assistant dean of the college in 1961. In 1965, he moved to Middlebury College as a philosophy professor and dean of men; he then was named dean of the college in 1967, acting dean of the faculty in 1973 and dean of the faculty in 1975.

O'Brien is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate in English from Yale University, and he earned a Ph.D. degree in philosophy from the University of Chicago in 1961.

He is a member of the board of directors of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities (NAICU).

Two longtime NCAA staff members planning retirements

Two of the more visible NCAA staff members—one known primarily for her voice and the other for her Convention duties—retire this month after 45 years of combined service.

Business Manager Marjorie K. Fieber, who joined the Association July 28, 1952, as secretary to Walter Byers, executive director, retires at the end of April. Martha Westbrook as receptionist has handled the switchboard since March 12, 1973. She retired April 12.

"They are two superb, dedicated individuals who set a standard of professional performance for their colleagues to match—Martha for the past 12 years and Marge for a full three decades," Byers said.

Fieber, who became business manager in 1960, has watched the Association's staff grow from five to its current level of 108. She was a part of two moves, the latter from the NCAA's headquarters in downtown Kansas City, Missouri, to 63rd and Nall in Mission, Kansas.

CEOs want bigger play-off

Chief executive officers of Division III member institutions sponsoring football are in favor of expanding next year's play-off field from eight to 16 teams even if transportation expenses are not guaranteed for first-round games, according to a recent survey conducted by the Division III Football Committee.

Seventy-two percent of 127 respondents (64 percent of Division III

"There have been a lot of high points and a lot of low points. There were some low points where we had to work around the clock to get back on track," Fieber said. "But everyone worked and helped out, and we did get things right."

Fieber said when she was hired, she did not know what the NCAA was.

"I called my father, who was very informed, and told him who I was going to work for; he told me that 'the only way for that organization to go is up,'" she recalled.

She said she was "giving myself 48 hours" in retirement before resuming an active life that would include some travel, volunteer work and an occasional appearance at the NCAA national office.

"I'll miss the people, both here and outside the office," she said. "But I'll always have the feeling that because of all the people I've met, anywhere I go in the country, I will know someone. I'll never be alone or bewildered, because I'll feel I have someone I can contact."

Westbrook's "Good morning—NCAA" greeted the thousands of calls that lit up the national office switchboard each week.

"I loved every minute of it," she said. "And that's not a lot of schmaltz. I love people, and I was in a job I loved to do. I tried to treat everyone the same way and always give good service."

It won't pay to give college athletes more money

By Fred Mann

The Wichita Eagle-Beacon

In the wake of the Tulane point-shaving scandal, there again comes a cry to pay college athletes $50 to $100 a month to remove the temptation to take a bribe and eliminate the hypocrisy of "shamateurism." That cry has reached a pitch that would shatter a diamond.

There's something sad about this cry.

You know how far down the wrong track college athletics has gone when level-headed people seriously propose paying kids cash just because they play ball for dear old State U.

Not that I know what the solutions are, but introducing more money into college sports doesn't seem to be one of them. It might even just up the ante. I mean, how far can you go on $50 to $100 a month today, anyway? How long would it be before athletes wanted more?

The solution seems to lie in the opposite direction—in getting the money out of college athletics, in deemphasizing athletics, in reemphasizing the "student" in that quaint phrase "student-athlete."

So hang me for naivete. Of course, it's too late to return to the days of true amateurism in big-time college sports. Not that those days ever really existed. Nobody believes there was a time when, say, five students were hanging around the chem lab one day and one of them said, "Hey, I've got a basketball," and another said, "Hey, my uncle's got a gym," and another said,

"Hey, let's put on a basketball game!" and they all said, "Gee, that's a swell idea!"

Even point-shaving goes way back.

So, it is impossible now to completely reverse the process that has turned major-college sports into the perversely mercenary diversions they've become. But there are ways to change course, and many proposals to do so are floating around these days;

Columnary Craft

some of them are fairly sane, and all of them would reduce, if not eliminate, the potential for scandal:

- Toughen college entrance requirements. Even prestigious schools are admitting athletes who have the brains of a dust pan and require frantic last-minute tutoring to pass "The History of Tennis Shoes in American Civilization." It's not fair to the kids, or anybody else.

- Raise the academic expectations for athletes, and athletes who are capable will raise their academic performances.

- Redshirt freshmen. Let them adjust to college life. Let them get over missing Mom's apple pie, and give them a chance to learn where the campus library is before they disappear into the gymnasium for the next four years.

- Crack down on cheaters. Fire coaches the first time they knowingly cheat, no matter if at the time they're caught they are employed at another school.

- Take away the scholarship of a kid who is caught on the take, and don't permit the school to use that scholarship again.

- Suspend for a year the athletics programs of schools that cheat chronically. Define "chronically" as twice. Then, let athletes from those schools transfer without making them sit out a year.

- Find some way to hurt boosters who cheat. Make laws that will punish them financially. Why? Because stringing them up by their thumbs is too good for them.

- Don't rely on the NCAA to ride to the rescue. Like crime in society, crime on the campus is best fought close to home. Get the university administrations directly involved. Give individual conferences time and manpower to investigate member schools, because they know their people best.

- Find some way to limit the amount of money schools can earn by going to bowl games or basketball finals. Or if there has to be so much money, spread it around to everybody. Give all NCAA Division I schools an equal share of the NCAA Final Four money, for example, with the participants getting an extra share.

The stakes today are too high, the temptation to cheat too strong, the sense of self-importance among athletes too wildly skewed out of proportion, the excuse that a bribe offer is simply one way to get a fair piece of the pie too convenient.

"Top players have their pick of colleges to attend. Frequently, the player's choice of institution is determined by the inducements offered. These inducements sometimes exceed the grant values permitted by the NCAA.

"This doesn't happen at all colleges, certainly. Not even at all of the so-called big-time institutions. But, it happens often enough so that college players know which players at which schools are getting the 'extras.'

"Those who get no more than legal grant allowances may question why they are playing basketball for nothing, while their counterparts at other colleges are getting the gravy. The guy who came to college because of the 'extras' wonders why those benefits are so limited.

"In addition to stiffening sanctions to the point where competitive levels are reduced, we have got to erase the feeling that the other guy cheats, so I have to cheat. . . . We'll never eliminate cheating altogether. The very nature of competition is to seek an edge that will get you a victory over a loss. There always will be those who will take any risk as the price of doing business, no matter what the cost.

"The key is for us to greatly decrease that number by increasing the practice of auditing and stiffening sanctions, even to the point that denies competition or a game to watch."

NBC-TV says it might cut regular-season college basketball

NBC says it may be forced to quit televising regular-season college basketball games unless it can regain broadcast rights to the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

CBS, which owns those rights for the next two years, says it doesn't plan to give up a good thing.

"We want to stay in college basketball, but we're facing a situation where we might—and I emphasize the word 'might'—have to pull back our involvement entirely if we can't get a piece of the tournament action. It means that much to us," said NBC spokesman Tom Merritt.

"We don't want to appear threatening or heavy-handed," he said. "We just want the college community to understand our situation—that we are being squeezed financially to do college basketball."

It may not be the World Series or the Super Bowl, but the college championship, known this year as "The Road to Lexington," has fast become one of the major sports events on TV.

That's why NBC wants it back, and that's why it openly courted the NCAA at last week's Final Four in Kentucky.

NBC's ambassadors included commentators Dick Enberg and Al McGuire; Ken Schanzer, executive vice-president of NBC Sports; George Finkel, coordinating producer for basketball coverage, and Rich Hussey, director for program planning.

"We're saying at least give us a

Tulane's senate votes to abolish men's basketball

The Tulane University Senate voted 42-5 April 15 to ratify President Eamon Kelly's recommendation to abolish the school's basketball program, which has been hit by charges involving point-shaving, drugs and NCAA violations.

The senate also voted to establish a blue-ribbon panel to study Tulane's continued participation in intercollegiate athletics.

The final step in the process to end the basketball program will be a vote by the school's board of directors April 18, and Kelly said he expects the board to endorse his recommendation.

The action by the senate came hours after basketball stars David Dominique and John "Hot Rod" Williams pleaded innocent to charges of bribery and conspiracy. (See story on this page.)

The five dissenting votes on abolition of men's basketball were cast by student members of the 56-member senate, Kelly said. There was one abstention and apparently eight absences.

Kelly said he believes Tulane can continue in the NCAA's Division I-A, but not at any great cost to his school's academic reputation.

"I am committed to such participation only insofar as it complements—not compromises—the central mission of Tulane, which is teaching, learning and research, and only insofar as it does not undermine institutional values of honesty, fairness and respect for the principle of rule by law.

"It is essential that the university demonstrate beyond any doubt that it will not wink at sports corruption operating within it and will not tacitly condone such corruption operating outside it," Kelly said.

glimmer of hope," Merritt said. "We'd like to think there's at least a chance we can be in the tournament picture.

"We're at a great disadvantage in sales because we can't tie the regular-season package to the tournament," he continued. "CBS can do that, and it gives them leverage with an affiliate."

"In many ways, we feel we helped to get the thing off the ground," he said. "We were the first to do the tournament. We were the first to do regular-season games."

From 1969 to 1981, the NCAA championships belonged to NBC, which began televising regular-season games in 1975-76.

CBS got the tournament in 1981 after the NCAA and NBC failed to come to terms within a 30-day bargaining period. The network's latest three-year deal expires in 1987.

This year's championship was every network's dream.

It was the most-watched, highest-rated college basketball game on CBS; and a week after the game, the network was still taking bows.

In full-page newspaper ads, CBS Sports noted that "more households tuned in to watch this broadcast than any other NCAA basketball championship game!" The all-time ratings winner was shown on NBC—the 1979 title game between Michigan State University and Indiana State University, Terre Haute (Magic Johnson vs. Larry Bird).

CBS, so far, doesn't appear amenable to splitting the tournament with NBC, similar to the way NBC splits the Major League Baseball play-offs with ABC.

Kevin O'Malley, executive producer for NCAA basketball, said CBS made a strong pitch during the last negotiations to keep the tournament on one network, and it would do it again.

"I think we were selected as the network once again because we kept promises we made when we originally negotiated for the contract," O'Malley said. "We said we would be on the air every day that the tournament is played and that we would bring to the tournament a new level of coverage and exposure."

Based on the tournament's growing popularity, the growing number of media covering it and steadily growing ratings, CBS believes it honored its promises.

"We have no special plan on how we're going to keep the tournament except to continue improving the job we've been doing," O'Malley said.

Turner signs two-year pacts for Big Ten, Pac-10 football

Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., has signed two-year agreements for live prime-time telecasts of Big Ten Conference, Pacific-10 Conference and Atlantic Coast Conference football games.

In addition, the Big Ten signed a separate two-year contract with TBS for a total of 22 games—11 each season.

The games during the 1985 and 1986 seasons will be carried on cable station WTBS and a network of syndicated TV stations, according to Bob Wussler, TBS executive vice-president.

The Associated Press reported the deal to be worth $9 million for the Big Ten and $5 million for the Pac-10 during the two years. No figures were available for the Atlantic Coast Conference or an October 12 game between Boston College and the U.S. Military Academy to be televised by TBS.

TV in the News

The cable network, which reaches 40 percent of the nation's television homes, will cablecast and syndicate 12 games involving the three conferences' teams in prime time on Saturdays in 1985 and 13 during the 1986 season.

Wussler said games involving independent teams may be added to this year's schedule.

Under the prime-time setup each year, the Big Ten has a minimum of five games, the Pac-10 a minimum of four and the ACC a minimum of three.

ESPN draws its largest audience

ESPN's live telecast of the February 27 basketball game between Georgetown University and St. John's University (New York) drew the largest audience ever for a program on a basic cable-originated network, according to the A.C. Nielsen Company.

The 8.0 rating and 12 share translates into 2.9 million homes, the highest rating ever for a single telecast on ESPN. The previous best was the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship tournament game between St. John's (New York) and the University of Georgia, which earned a 7.3.

The previous high viewership came during a football game between Pennsylvania State University and West Virginia University, which reached 2.14 homes.

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 16

Certifying compliance with Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(14)

Member institutions are reminded that in order to determine whether a student-athlete can qualify under the provisions of Bylaw 5-1-(m)-(14) for an exception to the normal transfer residence requirement, the institution to which the student transfers must obtain specific information on which to decide whether the student-athlete has met all the criteria of this legislation. For example, the procurement of a statement from the student-athlete's prior institution indicating that there is no objection to the transfer by itself does not qualify the student-athlete to use this transfer exception. Such a statement may satisfy the requirement of subparagraph (iv), but it does not address the criteria in the other subparagraphs. Particular attention must be directed to subparagraph (ii) [nonrenewal of aid] as it has been interpreted by the Council and published in The NCAA News, including the April 4, 1984, and January 30, 1985, Legislative Assistance columns.

Financial aid notification

As the academic year comes to a close, member institutions are reminded that under Constitution 3-4-(g), they are required to notify each student-athlete who received financial assistance during the current academic year and who is eligible to receive an award and has eligibility remaining under Bylaw 4-1 or Constitution 3-3-(a)-(3) for the ensuing academic year, whether or not the grant has been renewed. This notification must come from the institution's regular financial aid authority (notification from the institution's department of athletics does not satisfy this requirement) on or before July 1 prior to the academic year for which it is to be effective.

In addition, in a situation where a student's financial assistance has not been renewed for the ensuing academic year, the institution shall inform the student-athlete that if he or she believes the award has not been renewed for questionable reasons, the student-athlete may request, and shall have the opportunity for, a hearing before the institutional agency making the financial award. In this regard, it is not permissible for the institution's regular financial aid authority to delegate the responsibility of conducting the hearing to the university's department of athletics or its faculty athletics committee.

In all cases, the institutional agency making the financial aid award shall give the recipient a written statement of the amount, duration, conditions and terms thereof. The chair of the regular committee or other agency for the awarding of financial aid to students generally, or the chair's official designee, shall sign the written statement. The signature of the director of athletics attesting to the committee's award does not satisfy this requirement. The definition of "questionable reasons" for nonrenewal of a scholarship or grant-in-aid is left to the discretion of the involved member institution to be determined in accordance with its normal practices for students generally.

Constitution 3-1-(e)—shopping malls

Recently, the NCAA Administrative Committee affirmed that an appearance by an institution's intercollegiate team at a local shopping mall—including any common area in or parking space around such a mall—is precluded by the provisions of Constitution 3-1-(e) inasmuch as such appearances inherently involve promotion of the businesses involved, including the shopping mall itself.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Innocent pleas entered by Williams, Dominique in Tulane investigation

Basketball stars David Dominique and John "Hot Rod" Williams pleaded not guilty April 15 to charges of bribery and conspiracy in connection with a point-shaving investigation at Tulane University.

The pleas came early in the day on which the university senate met to ratify President Eamon Kelly's recommendation that the school's basketball program be abolished.

Also pleading not guilty April 15 were Roland Ruiz, 48, who has a gambling conviction on his record, and Craig Bourgeois, 21, allegedly the courier for money used to buy players in what prosecutors describe as one of two separate but simultaneous fixes.

Principles in the other alleged scheme—students Gary Kranz of New Rochelle, New York, and Mark Olensky of Fair Lawn, New Jersey, both 21—pleaded not guilty last week.

In addition, presiding Judge Alvin Oser issued a gag order forbidding anyone involved with the case to make any public comments about it.

The gag order came at the request of Mike Green of Chicago, one of the lawyers representing Williams. Green said that he was outraged by prosecutors' remarks to reporters—particularly those that appeared in Sports Illustrated.

Oser set a tentative calendar April 15, aiming at an August trial. He gave defense lawyers until May 15 to file any preliminary motions or pleadings and prosecutors until June 7 to answer those filings. He set June 25 for arguments on the preliminaries.

Two players, senior forwards Clyde Eads and Jon Johnson, are testifying for the prosecution under grants of immunity.

Another player, senior point guard Bobby Thompson, pleaded guilty to conspiracy in a plea bargain. Student David Rothenberg of Wilton, Connecticut, also struck a bargain and pleaded guilty to conspiracy in connection with the case as well as pleading guilty to an unrelated count of cocaine possession.

Oser said that the conspiracy and sports-bribery charges can be tried before either a six-member jury or by him alone. A unanimous verdict is necessary for conviction if a jury trial is chosen.

Krantz, however, is also accused of distributing cocaine, and that would require a 12-member jury for a trial. Oser did not indicate how that difference would be handled.

District Attorney Harry Connick said his investigation of point-shaving also turned up evidence of NCAA violations—specifically that Williams had been paid to sign up with Tulane and that some players were being paid to play.

Coach Ned Fowler and two assistants resigned, and Kelly said they had admitted the infractions.

Athletics Director Hindman Wall also has resigned, but he denied he had any knowledge of either point-shaving or NCAA violations.

After qualifying for the team finals by five-hundredths of a point, Ohio State rocketed to its first National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships team title April 12-13 at Lincoln, Nebraska.

The Buckeyes scored 284.05 in Friday's preliminary action to edge Arizona State (284.00) and earn a spot in the finals with favored Penn State (286.55) and Nebraska (285.35).

The Nittany Lions faltered in the first event of the finals, scoring only 46.20 in the pommel horse. After five events, the Buckeyes led the Cornhuskers, 238.00 to 237.60. They hung on to post a season-high 285.35 and won the championship by the closest margin in 15 years (285.35 to 284.55).

Leading the way for Ohio State was Seth Riskin, who also tied with brother and teammate, Noah, and Arizona State's Dan Hayden for the parallel bars championship in individual competition.

The bright spot for host Nebraska, which had been hobbled by injuries, was the performance of Wes Suter, who won the all-around and floor exercise titles. Suter also got a share of the horizontal bar title by tying Hayden with a 9.90.

Utah women claim fourth consecutive crown

Utah won its fourth straight Division I Women's Gymnastics Championships team title, and Lady Utes gymnasts won two of five individual championships April 12-13 in Salt Lake City, Utah.

A "home-gym" crowd got its money's worth as Utah outlasted Arizona State, 188.35 to 186.6, for the team honors, while Elaine Alfano took her third vaulting championship in four years. Teammate Lisa Mittel won the floor exercise title.

Alabama's Penny Hauschild won the all-around championship by five-hundredths of a point over Arizona State's Kim Neal. Hauschild also took the uneven parallel bars championship. Arizona State's Lisa Zeis earned top honors on the balance beam.

Utah has dominated the women's team competition in the four-year history of NCAA women's championships. The Lady Utes are the only team to have swept every team title in any NCAA women's championships competition.

Utah gymnasts also have won nine of the 20 individual titles that have been awarded in the four Division I meets. Alfano's potential sweep of the vault competition was broken a year ago when teammate Megan McCunniff-Marsden won the event.

The recommendation will be considered by the Association's Executive Committee at its May 6-7 meeting.

The committee reached its decision on the recommendation during its March 27-31 meeting in Austin, Texas.

Ex-secretary views proposed cuts in aid as attack on private schools

Terrel H. Bell, former secretary of education, says the Reagan administration proposals to cut back on Federal aid to college students is an assault on the nation's private colleges and universities.

Bell, now a professor at the University of Utah, charged that the proposed legislation would force thousands of students to transfer from private colleges, strain the budgets of states and effectively preclude able students from low-income families from setting their sights on some of the better institutions.

"This higher-education package," he told The New York Times, "flies in the face of the arguments advanced by the Reagan administration that government policy should encourage the private sector to do more, so that government can do less."

He said recent changes in the Reagan aid proposals "makes the position of the administration not as rigid as it was," but said they did not address the fundamental criticisms.

Bell took issue in a Times article with his successor, William J. Bennett, who has supported the government proposals and has stated that the proposed cuts might force some students into "divestiture" of stereos, automobiles and vacations on the beach.

"It is not true that great numbers of students who neither need nor deserve a loan are ripping off the taxpayers so they can live in luxury on campus," Bell said.

Earlier, the government proposed that guaranteed loans would be restricted to students from families with no more than $32,500 of income yearly and a $4,000 limit would be placed on the total amount of Federal grants, loans and work-study funds any single student could receive.

In an accommodation with Senate Republicans earlier in April, the proposal was modified so that the $32,500 income limit on loans would be raised to $60,000. The $4,000 limit on total aid was eliminated but replaced with a different restriction.

Under the compromise, total Federal aid would be limited to $8,000 minus the "expected family contribution," which is determined by a formula and varies from family to family. All except the poorest students and families are expected to provide the money from savings, summer earnings and other sources.

"The revised proposals are less punitive to low-cost private colleges," Bell said, "but we still are going to have some economic segregation.... If you're going to have an aristocracy, it ought to be related to ability, not to means."

Cooperation vital

A study released to a convention of school administrators in Dallas recently predicts that by the year 2000, classrooms will become training centers for children and adults, teachers will be on a par with other professionals, and corporations will play a greater role in supporting education.

The report "Schools of the Future"—was commissioned by the American Association of School Administrators and was conducted by Forecasting International Inc.

Marvin Cetron, president of the research firm, told 15,000 administrators that the future of education depends on the cooperation between schools and business.

"Without such cooperation," Cetron said, "both the educational and economic situations in this country will deteriorate."

"We're falling so far behind, we can no longer compete in some areas," Cetron said. He said the change from an industrial to a technological society and world in which 88 percent of the work force is in the service sector has prompted the changes.

In the schools of the future, a new type of vocational education will be emphasized, such as how to deal with hazardous waste disposal, how to read CAT scans, how to operate robots, Cetron said.

He also said schools will serve as sites for retraining and education of an increasing number of adults as many jobs become obsolete every five to 10 years.

"In the year 2000, adults will want strong schools for themselves and their parents, not only for their children," he said.

Skills lagging

Even the better students from the country's high schools no longer can perform basic academic skills that were common a decade ago, according to a national study by three University of Texas, Austin, researchers.

According to the researchers, the problem is not going to disappear quickly despite expensive educational reform efforts around the country.

"We found that the most selective, the most elite universities in the nation today are up to their eyeballs and elbows with freshmen who can't read, who can't write and who can't figure well enough to be in freshman work," said John Roueche, a Texas professor and one of the three researchers.

"I don't think colleges will be out of the remedial business in this century," Roueche said.

The Texas study, the first of its kind, surveyed all community, technical, junior and senior colleges in the U.S. to determine the remedial needs of entering freshmen.

The study found that it is not uncommon to find 30 percent to 40 percent of entering freshmen reading below a seventh-grade level.

calling and for their comments. And, somebody always talked to them."

She met only a small percentage of those whose voices she recognized, but she never stopped imagining what callers actually looked like.

"The very few people I met were not always like I imagined," she said. "And I could tell from their faces that I'm not what they imagined, either. I would have rather seen so many of them face to face, but this was the second best thing."

After raising her son, David, who gradually lost his sight to glaucoma, Westbrook joined the NCAA staff and "listened" as staff members' children grew up.

"I got a real kick out of hearing kids call over the years whom I first knew when they were born," she said. "I heard them grow up on the phone."

"I would not have changed a single thing. I will remember it all."

Volleyball seeding sought for Division I teams

The NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Committee will recommend several changes in the championship format to the NCAA Executive Committee May 6-7.

Two recommendations will attempt to reverse a 1984 Executive Committee decision affecting nonrevenue-producing championships. The volleyball committee will recommend the seeding of the top four teams and also seek permission to fly officials to championship sites when necessary.

Although the seeding and air travel of officials have been utilized since the championship began in 1981, the recent Executive Committee decision to cut expenses of nonrevenue-producing championships would change that for the 1985 tournament.

The volleyball committee hopes to persuade the Executive Committee to follow its recommendations because net receipts for the 1985 championship are projected to increase by $28,000. The committee also points out that volleyball has the second largest sponsorship of women's team sports and generates strong spectator interest.

West Coast teams have dominated the Division I championship. All have been won by teams from California or Hawaii, and no team from any other state has played in the final four. In the past three championships, all but one of the top four seeded teams advanced to the final four.

The committee recommended that 13 conferences be given automatic qualification for the 1985 championship: Atlantic Coast Conference, Atlantic 10 Conference, Big East Conference, Big Eight Conference, Big Ten Conference, Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference, High Country

Athletic Conference, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference, Mid-American Athletic Conference, Northern Pacific Athletic Conference, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Southeastern Conference and Southwest Athletic Conference.

The committee voted that the West Coast Athletic Conference would participate in the West region, while the Pacific Coast Athletic Association will be moved to the Northwest region. The committee also will recommend an increase in officials' fees.

Division III volleyball committee recommends final-four site change

Changing the Division III women's volleyball final-four competition to the site of one of the four participating teams will be recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee by the Division III Women's Volleyball Committee.

The volleyball committee wants the format change to reduce transportation expenses and generate more media and spectator interest.

The committee also is recommending that institutions applying to host a championship guarantee a minimum of 75 percent of the proposed budget's estimated receipts.

Eight conferences were given automatic qualification to the championship tournament: Chicago Metro Women's Conference, Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association, Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Ohio Athletic Conference, Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and State University of New York Athletic Conference.

The committee approved the use of a power-rating scale in determining the weekly team rankings. The scale, which should introduce more objectivity into the polls, was given strong support by the membership in a survey conducted earlier this year.

The criteria for ranking include: (1) victories over ranked Division III schools; (2) losses to ranked Division III schools; (3) victories against non-Division III schools; (4) victories against nonranked Division III schools; (5) losses against non-Division III schools; and (6) losses against nonranked Division III schools.

The committee also discussed the possibility of changing the championship format to two weekends instead of the customary three. However, this topic was tabled.

Friars' Terreri named to seven-man academic all-America first team

Providence's Chris Terreri, the most valuable player in the 1985 Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship, has been named to the Division I academic all-America team sponsored by the College Hockey Statistics Bureau.

The seven-member first team and six-member second team were chosen by the 41 Division I ice-hockey playing institutions. Nominees had to have at least a 3.200 grade-point average and be a starter or important reserve.

Terreri, who set an NCAA record with 102 saves during the two games of the Division I championship, has a 3.300 grade-point average in business management. Terreri stopped 62 shots in Providence's 4-3 victory over Boston College in the semifinals and 40 in the Friars' 2-1 loss to Rensselaer in the championship.

Joining Terreri on the first team were Providence teammates Tim Army and Steve Rooney. Army, the team's captain last year, has a 3.240 grade-point average in political science; and Rooney, a senior, has a 3.200 GPA in business management.

Other members of the first team are Dave Fretz of Clarkson, Rene Comeault of Maine, Kelly Miller of Michigan State and Steve Moria of Alaska-Fairbanks. Fretz, Comeault and Miller were members of last year's academic all-America team. Moria was the leading scorer in the nation this past year.

Fretz compiled a 3.340 grade-point average in mechanical engineering, Comeault has a 3.330 mark in premed and zoology, and Miller registered a 3.510 GPA in business.

On the second team, Northern Arizona placed goalie Kreg Korinek (3.420 in business) and forward Alton Baldwin (3.250 in premed). Other members are Northern Michigan's Dave Moree (3.610 in accounting), Ohio State's Mike Rousseau (3.350 in zoology), Brown's Joe Kuzneski (3.600 in economics) and Western Michigan's Rob Bryden (3.260 in agricultural business).

Committee proposes recertifying 18 postseason football bowl games

The NCAA Postseason Football Committee has recommended the recertification of bowl games played last year and considered guidelines for implementation of a fine system for bowl groups as authorized by Bylaw 2-2-(p). The recommendations must be approved by the NCAA Council.

The committee will submit the following bowl games to the Council for 1985-86 certification:

California Bowl, December 14, 3 p.m.; Cherry Bowl, December 21, 1 p.m.; Independence Bowl, December 21, 8 p.m.; Liberty Bowl, December 27, 8:30 p.m.; Aloha Bowl, December 28, 8 p.m.; Florida Citrus Bowl, December 28, 1 p.m.; Sun Bowl, December 28, 3 p.m.; All-American Bowl (the committee approved the Birmingham Football Foundation's request to change the name of its bowl game from Hall of Fame), December 29, 8 p.m.; Freedom Bowl, December 30, 7:30 p.m.; Gator Bowl, December 30, 8 p.m.; Bluebonnet Bowl, December 31, 8 p.m.; Holiday Bowl, December 31, 6 p.m.; Peach Bowl, December 31, 3 p.m.; Cotton Bowl, January 1, 1:30 p.m.; Fiesta Bowl, January 1, 1:30 p.m.; Orange Bowl, January 1, 8 p.m.; Rose Bowl, January 1, 5 p.m., and Sugar Bowl, January 1, 8 p.m.

These 18 bowl games generated gross receipts of approximately $50 million, of which in excess of $39 million was distributed to the participating institutions. This is an increase of $6 million from the previous year.

Other recommendations submitted to the Council by the Postseason Football Committee include:

- That the minimum payment to competing teams be increased from $400,000 to $500,000, beginning with the 1986-87 bowl games.

- Removing the word "informal" from Bylaws 2-2-(j) and (k) and moving this legislation to the recommended policies and practices section of the NCAA Manual.

- Declaring the postseason radio policy as a recommendation only. The committee further recommends that the policy be amended to provide that each participating institution may designate one official station to broadcast the game. The current policy requires that one official station or network of each participating institution be permitted to broadcast the game.

USC's Miller wins 1985 Wade Trophy

The University of Southern California's Cheryl Miller has been named winner of the 1985 Wade Trophy as the most outstanding women's collegiate basketball player. There were 30 candidates for the award.

Miller led the U.S. Olympic team to the 1984 gold medal in Los Angeles, and she has helped the Lady Trojans to three straight appearances in the Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

Southern California won titles in 1983 and 1984 and advanced to the West regional semifinals this season.

The Wade Trophy, which is being administered for the first time by the National Association for Girls and Women in Sport, is to be presented April 19 during the NAGWS annual convention in Atlanta.

Miller finished among the top five scorers and rebounders in Division I for the regular season, averaging 27.1 points (third highest) and 19.1 rebounds (fourth highest) per game.

Including tournament action, Miller finished the year shooting 52.8 percent from the field, although her scoring (26.8) and rebounding (15.8) averages dropped slightly.

to 16 teams at its January 1984 meeting. The Executive Committee later rescinded its approval as a cost-saving measure after the Association's football television contract was voided by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Executive Committee uses a 1-to-8 ratio of championship participants to total sponsoring institutions as a guide for determining the field size for team championships. The Division III Football Championship, as an eight-team field, has a 1-to-24 ratio. Expanding the field to a 16-team bracket would provide a 1-to-12 ratio.

The present 1-to-24 ratio is the most restrictive of any NCAA team championship; however, the Executive Committee is reluctant to expand the championship field in view of the Association's present resources. Estimated expense for expanding the play-off field to 16 teams is approximately $40,000, if transportation expense is guaranteed for all rounds of competition.

Under the Division III Football Committee's expansion format, transportation expenses would be guaranteed only for quarterfinal, semifinal and championship games.

According to the plan, revenue generated from first-round competition would be distributed as follows: (1) NCAA-approved game expenses, (2) transportation expenses for the visiting team, (3) transportation expenses of other teams traveling during first-round competition and (4) remaining receipts would become a part of championships revenue.

The committee's initial recommendation to expand the bracket was based upon the premise that deserving teams were being denied an opportunity to participate in the play-off. Three undefeated teams were denied the opportunity to participate last year.

As a result of its survey, the committee will resubmit its recommendation to expand the championship field from eight to 16 teams to the Executive Committee.

20 basketball players awarded postgraduate scholarships

Postgraduate scholarships of $2,000 each have been awarded to 10 men and 10 women basketball players at NCAA member institutions.

The Association annually awards 90 such scholarships. In addition to the 20 basketball awards, 25 scholarships are presented to student-athletes who participated in football, and 45 awards (25 for men and 20 for women) are made to student-athletes in other sports in which the NCAA conducts national championship competition.

The NCAA postgraduate scholarship program has presented scholarships worth $2,214,000 to 1,579 student-athletes since 1964. To qualify, a student-athlete must maintain a minimum 3.000 grade-point average on a 4.000 scale—or its equivalent—and perform with distinction in a varsity sport.

Ohio Stadium could get a 'first' after 64 years

Ohio State University's 1985 football home opener against the University of Pittsburgh September 14 could become the first night game in Ohio Stadium in 64 seasons. Turner Broadcasting System officials have indicated they would like to carry the game, but CBS-TV, as the primary telecaster of Big Ten Conference games, has a first choice, in which case the game probably would be played in the afternoon. The CBS-TV schedule will be announced by June 1. In its two-year supplemental television series with Turner Broadcasting, the Big Ten is committed to five night games in the 16-game package... Matt Arnot of the University of New Mexico has won the 1985 Nissen Award as the country's top collegiate gymnast. He was selected from a field that included Rick Atkinson, Iowa State University; Bobby Fleming, Temple University; Mark Oates, University of Oklahoma, and Robert Playter, Ohio State University. Arnot has won the Western Athletic Conference Scholar-Athlete Award the past three years.

The University of Southern Colorado will be allowed to remain in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference for a two-year study period although the institution has decided to drop varsity football. It was reported by the Associated Press that the sport had not generated as much interest as the school had hoped and that cost-related factors were involved. The conference's presidents' council will review requirements for conference membership during the two-year period... Frank Howard, former head football coach and athletics director at Clemson University, was in Anderson, South Carolina, Memorial Hospital April 12 with a blocked digestive duct. Howard, who coached the Tigers for 30 years, was admitted to the hospital April 10.

Baptist College will add three women's varsity sports in 1985-86. The sports are cross country, track and softball, which will give the school six women's teams. Baptist trustees also have voted to move the women's program from National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics competition to NCAA Division I, beginning in 1985-86. The men's program is an NCAA Division I member... St. Lawrence University will drop its varsity skiing program at the end of the current academic year.

Bruce to produce own TV program

Ohio State University head football coach Earle Bruce will produce and market his own television show this fall as a result of a disagreement with the Columbus station that has carried the program for the past two years.

Bruce's personal attorney, John Zonak, said Bruce will use his own company, Bruce Sports Inc., to produce the show and market it statewide.

"The show will have an entirely different production format," Zonak said. He described the program as "a recruiting tool" and said it would be done "with full cooperation of the university."

WTVN-TV general manager Paul Dinovitz said Bruce declined an offer that would have increased the amount he received last year—$3,500 per show.

Although Dinovitz did not disclose how much the station offered, The Columbus Dispatch reported that Bruce was seeking $5,000 to $6,000 per show next season.

WTVN has produced "The Earle Bruce Show," a half-hour recap of OSU's Saturday games, for the past two seasons.

Mueller critical of reports concerning lacrosse injuries

In response to some media reports concerning the safety of lacrosse in high school and college, Frederick O. Mueller of the National Center for Catastrophic Sports Injury Research at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, says only results of a preliminary report were published, and "lacrosse was unfairly branded as an unsafe sport."

"After two years of data collection, a preliminary report on catastrophic sports injury was made at the Olympic Scientific Congress in Eugene, Oregon, and it was emphasized that only two years of data were available and conclusions or recommendations could not be made at that time," Mueller said.

Due to the low number of participants in lacrosse involved in the study, the incidence of injury rates was high when compared with other sports, according to Mueller.

Mueller said the researchers in the injury-data collection system initiated by investigators at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, wish to emphasize that no conclusions can be made after two years of data collection and that there must be a continuous data-collection effort before conclusions and recommendations can be made with any degree of reliability.

"It should be emphasized," Mueller said, "that there were no catastrophic lacrosse injuries in high schools or colleges during the 1983-84 school year."

Drug probe continues

Arizona State University is continuing an investigation into the use of a mood-altering drug by athletes. It has been reported by Phoenix newspapers that at least eight members of the baseball team had used or had been prescribed a controversial drug generally used on people suffering from depression.

The drug, marketed under the name Nardil, alters body-chemical structures to lessen depression and improve stamina and performance.

The drug was prescribed for players by Dr. James Gough, a psychiatrist who formerly was director of mental health for student health services at the institution. He currently is a consultant for ASU athletics programs.

Georgia wins court case against novelty beer distributor

The University of Georgia Athletic Association won its case against a novelty beer distributor when a Federal appeals court ruled there was little difference between a "Battlin' Bulldog" and a Georgia Bulldog.

Both look like UGA, the University's mascot, according to a three-judge panel of the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals. Because of the similarity between UGA and the picture on a can of Battlin' Bulldog beer, the beer cannot be distributed, the court said.

"The 'Battlin' Bulldog's football career thus comes to an abrupt end," Judge Phyllis A. Kravitch wrote for the panel.

The case began in the fall of 1982 when novelty beer wholesaler Bill Laite of Macon began marketing beer sold in red and black cans that featured a picture of an English Bulldog.

The dog wore a red sweater emblazoned with a black 'G' and had a football tucked under his right "arm." He also had bloodshot eyes and was holding a beer mug.

Laite maintained it was not a Georgia Bulldog. He said the can had a warning label saying that the Battlin' Bulldog had nothing to do with the university or its dogs.

The Georgia athletic association took exception, however, concerned that people might believe the university was endorsing beer.

So, the association sued Laite, and U.S. District Judge Wilbur D. Owens of Macon ruled in favor of the association, prohibiting Laite from distributing any more Battlin' Bulldog beer.

Laite appealed the ruling to the 11th circuit.

Akers testifies

Fred Akers, head football coach at the University of Texas, Austin, says state control of sports agents is needed to prevent illicit meetings with college athletes, the Associated Press reported.

Akers pointed to such a meeting in which several agents "wined and dined" a group of Texas players three days before the annual game with the University of Oklahoma.

Akers testified April 1 before the Texas House Business and Commerce Committee on legislation that would regulate sports agents.

The agents had told the players such a meeting had been cleared with Texas athletics officials when it hadn't, Akers testified.

"They were not there to instruct the players, but to wine and dine them," Akers said.

He said he also found out those athletes had met with different agents on five other occasions during the fall. He said bedchecks before games were necessary not only to make sure players were home but to check for agents as well.

Book dedicated

A book entitled "The American Football Coaches Guide to Championship Football Drills" and dedicated to former Duke University head football coach William D. Murray has been released by the American Football Coaches Association.

The book contains drills from hundreds of head collegiate coaches, past and present.

Murray, who resigned as executive director of the association in 1982, resides in Durham, North Carolina. He compiled a lifetime record of 213-77-14, including a 93-51-9 record at Duke. He had eight top-20 teams and led Duke to two appearances in the Orange Bowl and one in the Cotton Bowl.

Broncos sign pact

A negotiated contract with radio station KBOI calls for the station to spend $411,400 in the next three years for coverage of athletics events, Boise State University officials say.

The agreement covers payments to Boise State covering advertising and promotions, half-time promotions, Bronco Athletics Association advertising, and rights fees to the games, said BSU President John H. Keiser.

The school put the broadcast contract up for bid three years ago, but unnamed sources as saying the investigation grows out of concerns that the state's public-bid law is not being followed and that construction contracts ignore the state law that requires that workers on public contracts be paid wages equivalent to union scale.

Coach suspended

Joseph Rietano has been suspended as head men's baseball coach at Sacred Heart University after his conviction on professional gambling charges April 10 in Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Rietano, 28, pleaded no contest to charges of professional gambling, using a telephone to transmit and receive gambling information, and possession of gambling records. He was fined $2,000.

Sacred Heart competes in Division II of the NCAA and had a 14-4 record as of April 12.

Rietano was a highly regarded Holmes said.

Skiles said he regretted his behavior and asked to be spared a prison term.

"It's obviously been a great stress on my life," he said. "It will never be quite the same as it used to be.

"I've made a mistake," he said, "but I don't see any reason to keep paying for it."

Skiles elected to perform community service work, either with the county highway department or at a home for the aged, rather than accept an option of serving five days in jail, Holmes said. After the hearing, however, Skiles said a crowded summer school class schedule could leave him too little time to perform the work and might force him to serve the brief jail term.

Appeal considered

The National Football League and its lawyers are considering an appeal of a Federal judge's order disqualifying the league's law firm from taking part in an antitrust suit filed by the United States Football League.

"We've read the decision, we disagree with it and we're considering with our client whether to take an appeal," attorney Max Gitter said.

The USFL, which brought the antitrust action against its more-established rival last October, persuaded U.S. District Judge Peter K. Leisure to bar the New York City Park Avenue firm from representing the NFL, because the law firm did some work for the USFL's founders when the league was being organized in 1981.

But the victory is somewhat of a mixed blessing for the USFL, which has been pressing for early action in the lawsuit. The suit charges the NFL with illegally trying to monopolize access to players, stadiums, television contracts and game officials.

More to come?

Former National Basketball Association all-star forward Connie Hawkins, who was a victim of a point-shaving scandal while playing for the University of Iowa in 1961, says the college game will always be susceptible and "it will happen every decade."

The 42-year-old Hawkins said the investigation at Tulane University "doesn't surprise me at all."

"There are a lot of people in college who really aren't involved in basketball," he said. "They'll take out these kids who don't have a whole lot and, maybe, the kid is working a job. First, they buy you a dinner, and then, who knows what?"

However, Hawkins said he is sorry to hear that Tulane President Eamon Kelly plans to abolish the sport at the school in the wake of the point-shaving disclosure.

"That's too bad because somebody always answers a scandal with an extreme," he said. "There has got to be some guidelines, but to go to the extreme of abolishing basketball is unfair."

It may be 'indestructible,' but this ball still won't break par

An Ohio professor has developed what he calls a virtually indestructible practice golf ball.

"After a year or two, you just wash them off and they're ready for the next two," Miami University (Ohio) physical education Professor Richard Mackey says of his invention.

Jay Colville, the Mid-American Athletic Conference school's late athletics trainer, helped Mackey develop the ball.

They called it the Mac-Col ball. It's made of a hard rubber compound that makes it bounce like a deflated basketball. Mackey contends the ball is ideal for indoor practice.

"You just stand about 10 feet away from any hard wall (concrete or brick), hit the ball as hard as you want. It will bounce once and roll back to you. Less bounce to the ounce," he said.

Mackey believes the ball is just as adaptable for outdoor driving. Regular balls travel about 200 yards. His invention goes about 100 yards, which is nice for the golfer who dislikes chasing his practice balls.

Mackey carried the "tape ball" idea with him to teaching positions at Pennsylvania State University, the University of Kentucky, Shepherd (West Virginia) College and Miami.

Colville and Mackey experimented with a new practice ball, trying to improve it. An athletics equipment salesman in 1962 suggested they mold the balls in rubber. The suggestion was a good one.

Most of the practice balls—600 to 800 dozen per year—are sold to high schools and colleges, more than 800 institutions in all 50 states. Because the balls last so long, Mackey admits he gets little return business.
