

Two special committees appointed for new NCAA projects

Two special NCAA committees have been appointed to begin work on two projects approved earlier by the Council and the Administrative Committee.

The Special Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification will consider the feasibility of possible "deregulation" or modification of some NCAA rules in certain areas, including the transfer rule, the recruiting contact rules and the financial aid legislation.

That project was part of the seven-point program to enhance institutional integrity and compliance with intercollegiate athletics policies and rules that was approved by the Council in its April meeting (April 24, 1985, issue of The NCAA News).

The Special Committee on Measuring Athletics Program Success will oversee the development of a program that would measure and provide recognition to successful athletics programs on bases other than the won-lost record.

That program, approved earlier by the Administrative Committee, was developed initially by the national office staff and supported in concept by both the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee and the NCAA Public Relations and Promotion Committee.

NCAA Secretary-Treasurer Wilford S. Bailey, faculty athletics representative at Auburn University, was appointed to chair the committee dealing with rules simplification, while Homer C. Rice, director of athletics at Georgia Institute of Technology, will chair the committee on athletics program success.

Appointed to the Special Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification in addition to Bailey were Clayton Chapman, Eastern College Athletic Conference; Prentice Gautt, Big Eight Conference; Donna A. Lopiano, University of Texas, Austin, and G. David Price, Pacific-10

Athletes help Fiesta Bowl in fight against drug abuse

Eight football players and five basketball players joined University of Iowa football coach Hayden Fry in Phoenix, Arizona, May 20 for the 11th annual NCAA-Fiesta Bowl banquet to combat drug abuse.

The 13 student-athletes taped public-service announcements to urge the nation's youth to choose sports instead of drugs. The announcements will be shown on college football and basketball telecasts this fall. In addition, Boys and Girls Clubs of America will be using the public-service announcements.

Gary Bender, CBS sportscaster, served as master of ceremonies for the event, which is a partnership between the Fiesta Bowl and the NCAA. The Samaritan Medical Foundation also was a sponsor of the event.

Ohio State University's Keith Byars, the nation's leading rusher last year, was one of eight football players who attended the banquet. Other football players were Steve Beuerlein, quarterback, University of Notre Dame; Robbie Bosco, quarterback, Brigham Young University; Kenneth Davis, running back, Texas

Durant, Ingram appointed to Division I Council vacancies

Della Durant, assistant director of athletics at Pennsylvania State University, and C. W. "Hootie" Ingram, director of athletics at Florida State University, have been appointed by the NCAA Administrative Committee to fill two vacancies on the NCAA Council.

Durant replaces G. Jean Cerra, University of Missouri, Columbia, as a Division I at-large member of the Council, while Ingram replaces Hindman Wall, Tulane University, as the representative of Division I-A South independent institutions. Cerra and Wall resigned.

Durant has been assistant athletics director at Penn State since 1973 and a member of the institution's staff since 1956, when she was hired as an instructor in physical education. She now is an associate professor in the college of health, physical education and recreation in addition to her athletics administration duties.

Durant holds a master's degree from Penn State. She was a member of the faculty at the University of Delaware for five years before being appointed at Penn State.

She serves as chair of the NCAA Women's Fencing Committee and has been a member of the Special NCAA Committee on AIAW Rules for the past four years.

Ingram has been athletics director at Florida State since January 1981, taking that position after serving as associate commissioner of the Southeastern Conference. He joined the SEC staff as assistant commissioner in 1973.

A former football and baseball player at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, he began his career as a high school coach and then was an assistant football coach at Wake Forest University; Virginia Polytechnic Institute; the University of Georgia, and the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville. He was head football coach at Clemson University until joining the Southeastern Conference staff.

He has served as a member of the NCAA Nominating Committee for the past two years.

CEOs seek athletics budget control in special Convention legislation

[Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of articles explaining the legislation to be considered at the special NCAA Convention June 20-21 in New Orleans.]

Chief executive officers of NCAA member institutions clearly believe that they should have control of their institutions' athletics budgets, and they will have the opportunity to realize that control if Proposal Nos. 6 and 7 are adopted at the special NCAA Convention June 20-21.

The two proposals, sponsored by the NCAA Presidents Commission and cosponsored by the NCAA Council, would establish requirements for athletics budget control and audit procedures in the NCAA constitution. Both will be voted upon by roll call, and each will require approval of at least two-thirds of all delegates present and voting.

Even before the Commission surveyed all CEOs in the NCAA membership regarding integrity and economic issues, the Commission sponsored an amendment at the January 1985 Convention to require that all funds used for or generated by a member institution's athletics program be controlled by the institution via its regular accounting, budgeting and auditing procedures. The Commission withdrew that proposal, however, when questions arose regarding its application to moneys from foundations and other "outside" organizations.

The results of the CEO survey supported the Commission's intent and resulted in development of two separate proposals — Nos. 6 and 7 — to answer the questions raised in January while achieving the same goal.

In the survey, 96 percent of all respondents (94 percent in Division I and 95 percent in Division I-A) said it is a major necessity as an institutional-control factor that the athletics budget be subject to final approval by institutional administrators and/or the institution's governing board.

Later in the survey questionnaire,

I-A summer meeting unlikely

The Division I-A members of the NCAA Council have voted 11-1 not to conduct the Division I-A summer legislative meeting this year if Proposal No. 10 is adopted at the special Convention in June.

If that proposal — which makes the annual I-A and I-AA summer legislative meetings optional rather than mandatory — is approved by the Convention, a two-thirds majority vote of the Division I-A Council members would be necessary to schedule the meeting in any given year.

The I-A vote was taken by mail ballot so Convention delegates will know prior to the vote in June whether that subdivision would have a summer meeting this year. The Division I-AA Council members voted unanimously in April not to conduct a summer meeting for that subdivision this year, if Proposal No. 10 is approved.

Won-lost record is not a true gauge of success

By John D. Swofford
Director of Athletics
University of North Carolina,
Chapel Hill

It is time to redefine success in intercollegiate athletics. We need a rebirth of appropriate values and a new and more appropriate perspective of the role that intercollegiate athletics should play in our colleges and universities. The obvious and most commonly heard definition of success in intercollegiate athletics is a simple reflection of the won-lost record of a team or total program and how many championships that program has won.

Winning is important, and there is nothing wrong with it unless it is accomplished in an inappropriate way. Winning currently is the dominating criterion for success in intercollegiate athletics, and I suspect it will always be so — at least with the public. We compete to see who wins — that is the object of competition and, believe me, winning ranks well ahead of the other two alternatives.

Keeping a won-lost record is a barometer of how a team, individual or program stacks up against the rest, and certainly that record should be a major factor in determining athletics success at the intercollegiate level. It should not stand alone, however, in determining whether or not a university's athletics program is deemed successful. We must go beyond the obvious in defining success.

Our universities and those in charge of athletics programs must broaden their perspective of what success truly is if we are to deal pro-

Six criteria listed that can be used to determine the success of an athletics program ductively with the various crises that exist in intercollegiate athletics today.

I believe there are six specific criteria that can be identified in determining whether a university's athletics program can be termed successful. I think these criteria are measurable enough to be used in self-evaluation in particular, and, I hope, to be used by the public at large — at least in a general way — in its perception of successful and unsuccessful athletics programs.

The six specific criteria are these: A successful intercollegiate athletics program:

(1) Consistently competes to the best of its abilities.

Winning is a part of this, but not only winning.

I am a firm believer that one doesn't have to talk a great deal about winning — not because it is unimportant (it obviously is), but because in reality, it is a byproduct of reaching individual and collective potential. If an athletics program fully utilizes its abilities and assets and goes about its business in an appropriate way, winning will come more often than not. Yet, as an individual, a team or an organization, if we are as good as we can possibly be, if we have reached our potential and it still is not good enough to win, then so be it. At times, this will be the case, and realistically, it must be accepted.

True champions will not win all the time, but true champions will compete at a high level consistently and over an extended period of time. Consequently, the truly successful intercollegiate athletics programs do compete successfully and consistently.

John D. Swofford

(2) Graduates a high percentage of its athletes.

This very noble goal has gotten lost in too many institutions because of the overriding commitment to winning and the pressures that come with it. There are far too many athletes in some universities "majoring in eligibility"; that is, taking courses only to stay eligible for competition. The trouble, of course, comes after the eligibility is up, when these athletes are light-years away from any specific degree. This is a classic example of the exploitation of athletes and is a grave injustice.

The commitment to seeing student-athletes leave their institutions with a degree as well as a meaningful education must be an identifying characteristic of a successful intercollegiate athletics program.

(3) Adheres to the principles of integrity.

In short, it plays by the rules; it doesn't cheat; it doesn't tarnish the reputation of its institution; it operates within the parameters of NCAA and conference regulations, as well as the regulations of its own institution. Certainly, any program can break rules inadvertently with today's numerous and complex rules and regulations, but the commitment to the integrity of sports is evident in successful programs. Nothing less should be tolerated.

Is winning a national championship by stretching the rules and degrading the good name of an outstanding educational institution being successful? Certainly not in this definition; but as long as the public fails to recognize or accept that cheating is too great a price to pay for winning, we will continue to have problems with the perception of what constitutes a successful intercollegiate athletics program.

(4) Represents its university in a positive fashion.

A successful athletics program is one its alumni, faculty and students are proud of. It brings honor to the university in how it is conducted and in how the coaches, athletes and administrators represent themselves and their university to the public at large. It reflects the values and character of the university of which it is a part and realizes its appropriate place within the educational community.

(5) Enhances the college experience of its participants.

First and foremost, sports should be for the participant, and he or she should be better for having become involved in athletics. Athletics are often difficult because of the commitment involved: the training, the practicing, the losses, the personal disappointments, and the fact that personal as well as team hopes and expectations are not always met. However, the relationships and experiences encountered in intercollegiate athletics should be of such quality that when the experience is over, the athlete, upon reflection, will say, "I am better for having been involved; it enriched my college experience."

This may sound trite and ideal, but coaches can and should be educators. The values of sports competition are not inherent; they must be accentuated and taught. The commitment of coaches and the goals and objectives set by administrators should be toward the development of the young men and women in our athletics programs.

(6) Produces contributors to our society.

The graduate student-athletes that are turned out of successful programs generally are individuals who in turn are contributors to our society, rather than burdens. Athletics programs, or even universities, cannot determine the outcome of an individual's life after the college experience, but if the values of the program are appropriate and the basic commitment to the development of young people is there, the result often will be helping to send outstanding and productive young people into life's mainstreams.

Success in intercollegiate athletics must include more than just winning

Because a successful program stresses competing to one's best ability, graduating its athletes, adhering to integrity and representing itself in a positive fashion, it enhances the college experience. The majority of the time the end result will be individuals leaving that program who make positive contributions to our society.

Success in intercollegiate athletics is not one-dimensional; it must include more than just winning. Winning, with all of its value, simply is not enough, particularly as part of an educational experience. The will and commitment to win should remain an important part of the definition, but true success must incorporate the proper values and methods that can and should be paramount in university athletics programs. If not, our programs are not worthy of the term "successful."

Division I-A: best of two worlds

Don James, head football coach
University of Washington

The Associated Press

"You're talking about passing it (a national football play-off) through a lot of groups. The coaches are the least of the worries about getting it passed. It's got to go through the NCAA Council, the presidents, the faculty athletics representatives and the athletics directors.

"There's quite a large body that would have to be sold on that. In my opinion, it never will happen in Division I-A football.

"I think we've got the best of two worlds in Division I-A. We've got the bowl structure. We get great visibility there. We've got a poll system. No one's ever going to agree on the polls, but they're kind of fun, too. You've got a chance to play in a bowl, and you can win a national championship, too."

"We must understand and appreciate what is happening around us, and we must not become so jaded that anything less than an undefeated season is seen as a failure or even a disappointment.

"The argument almost always is fueled by a hint of arrogance — that we should be doing better because we are Ohio State. But let us remember that the people at Notre Dame, Michigan and Penn State feel the same about their schools and are working just as hard as we are to succeed.

"Despite those pressures and expectations, however, I want to reassure you (university senate) that, if nothing

"The educational benefits and exchange possibilities that exist for the student-athlete also make this an exciting time for the Miners and Rainbow Warriors.

"The WAC covers more time zones than Europe; has football players on the nine university teams representing six countries; including Australia, and has seen three teams play games in Japan. So this trip just represents one more step in the WAC's goal to provide the best educational and athletics experience possible for its student-athletes."

"Athletes who regularly use anabolic steroids claim that swallowing them or injecting them into their bodies at 10 to 20 times the maximum dosage recommended by drug companies can produce increases in strength, body weight and lean muscle mass.

"Some researchers recently have confirmed that very slight increases in strength and muscle mass may occur in some individuals as a result of steroid use.

"That finding prompted the American College of Sports Medicine last year to correct its longstanding position claiming that steroids do not help athletic performance.

"But even so, many scientists and the sports-medicine college continue to deplore the use of steroids to enhance performance. Most athletes who use the drugs, they say, obtain none of the desired effects but do run risks to their health."

Board's role in athletics: 'Is anyone in charge here?'

[Editor's Note: Following is the text of a speech entitled "The Board's Role in Intercollegiate Athletics" or "Is Anyone In Charge Here?" that was presented by Harold L. Enarson, president-emeritus of Ohio State University, during a meeting of the Association of Governing Boards April 23 at Miami Beach, Florida. Enarson, now serving as senior adviser for the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education in Boulder, Colorado, was president of Ohio State from 1972 to 1981 and also served as president of Cleveland State University from 1966 to 1972. He and the Association of Governing Boards granted permission to The NCAA News to reprint his remarks.]

He was a school superintendent and he wrote with deep bitterness about the professionalization of college athletics and the disgraceful recruiting practices of college coaches. "The cynicism of high school students," he wrote, "cannot be blamed if they think we are shedding crocodile tears today in our wailing about the lack of intellectual vigor in our secondary schools."

The school superintendent was outraged by free-ride scholarships for students manifestly incapable of college-level work. He also wrote of the decline of good sportsmanship and quoted the Sportsmanship Code. (I do not recall ever seeing it.) It reads: "Honorable victory; respect for a worthy opponent; no personal or team advantage, and no disadvantage to the opponent, through dishonorable and unfair means."

I have quoted from an article published nearly 30 years ago in "Atlantic Monthly" — long before cocaine had infected sports, before coaches had discovered muscle-building drugs, before the win-at-all-costs philosophy had become endemic.

Today, the athletics scholarship is all but sacrosanct. Intensive tutoring, training tables, counseling into snap courses, even assistance in completing registration are accepted routine. The athlete is quickly brought under the protective wing of the athletics department, whose special counselors are charged with keeping the athlete eligible. Art Schlichter, Ohio State quarterback, played as a freshman, opening his career with a great pass, a great game. He was an instant hero. A few years later Schlichter was to be exposed as a compulsive gambler, a disgrace to his team, to sports and to Ohio State. Art Schlichter, 18 years old, played before a stadium jammed with 87,000 excited fans. I heard a fan scream over and over, "If you ain't No. 1, you ain't nothing." A week or so later, classes

Colleges and universities have imposed on themselves by NCAA rules the obligation to inform their boosters on the rules governing recruitment. And most universities do a conscientious job in educating their more avid boosters of the dangerous consequences of their well-intentioned acts. But it will never be possible to seal off the sports program entirely from those who are Patriots. It was disastrous adventurism by the governing board. Colorado's football fortunes declined even as the deficit in the budget increased. At Colorado State, the decision was made to expand the football stadium. Now, the euphoria is gone and generation after generation of students are assessed a fee to pay off a very bad investment. The predictable result is student cynicism on matters athletic.

In the past half-dozen years or so, the demand for fundamental reform has been building. It is fueled by one disclosure after another of cheating, fraud, systematic corruption that reaches deep within the university. I do not refer here to isolated examples of violations of the rules. NCAA rules can be baffling even to the initiated. Example: "The trademark, not to exceed 1½ square inches in size, may appear on goggles but not on visors." We deal instead with pervasive fraud, with athletics programs that virtually are out of control in the sense that they violate NCAA rules and bypass the existing system of governance.

All signals are flashing red when student-athletes are admitted in violation of clearly established admission requirements, when the evaluation of academic transcripts is subverted, when grades are falsified on a systematic basis, when there are phantom classes and forged transcripts, when blue-chip athletes are recruited and routed to junior colleges to gain minimum eligibility.

The red lights are flashing when the governor, the legislative leadership, the top business leadership entertain ghetto youngsters and seem to promise jobs ahead.

The red lights ought to flash when decisions of far-reaching consequence — for example, expanding the stadium, building boxes for wealthy donors or shifting to a more prestigious athletics conference —

Eligibility for financial aid

As set forth in NCAA Constitution 3-4(b), financial aid, including a grant-in-aid that carries with it a partial work requirement, may be awarded for any term (semester or quarter) during which a student-athlete is in regular attendance as an undergraduate with eligibility remaining under Bylaw 4-1, or within six years after initial enrollment in a collegiate institution (provided the student does not receive such aid for more than five years during that period), or as a graduate eligible under Constitution 3-3(a)-(3), provided the student athlete is not under contract to or currently receiving compensation from a professional sports organization. This being the case, in order for a student-athlete to receive institutional financial aid during the academic year, the student-athlete must be enrolled in a minimum full-time program of studies and be a regularly matriculated, degree-seeking student as set forth in Constitution 3-3(a).

Under the provisions of Constitution 3-4(b)-(1), financial aid may not be provided to a student while attending a summer school or summer term unless the student has been in residence a minimum of one term during the regular academic year or the student is attending a summer orientation program for which participation (by both athletes and nonathletes) is required and financial aid is administered on the same basis for all participants in the program. A student-athlete who is eligible for institutional financial aid during the summer is not required to be enrolled in a minimum full-time program of studies for the summer term in order to receive such aid. However, a student-athlete may not receive financial aid that exceeds the cost of commonly accepted educational expenses (i.e., tuition and fees, room and board, and required course-related books) for attendance in that summer term.

Division III financial aid — employment earnings

Division III member institutions are reminded that under the provisions of Bylaw 11-3(a)-(3) and Case No. 410 (page 376, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), all financial assistance received by a student-athlete from sources outside the institution, including employment earnings during the regular academic year, which is an all-inclusive period from the opening to the closing of classes of the regular semester, quarter or term, except for the vacation periods properly listed on the institution's official calendar, must be reported to the Division III institution's director of financial aid. When outside aid is received after the financial aid program of the institution has been offered to the student, the director of financial aid shall be notified and an adjustment of that aid already offered shall take place in order that the total aid now available from all sources does not exceed financial need.

Summer employment earnings and Proposal No. 49

At its recent meeting, the NCAA Administrative Committee affirmed that the adoption of Proposal No. 49 by the 1985 NCAA Convention, to amend Constitution 3-4(d)-(1) to permit a student-athlete to receive legitimate summer employment earnings without total dollar limitations even if the student is attending summer school as a recipient of institutional financial assistance, permits such a student to be employed during the summer by the member institution in a legitimate employment position. Accordingly, the Administrative Committee confirmed that under this legislation, legitimate summer employment is permitted either on or off the institution's campus, and it is the responsibility of the member institution to confirm that compensation paid to a student-athlete is only for work actually performed and at a rate commensurate with the going rate in that locality for services of like character.

Committee Notices

Nominations must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan in the NCAA national office no later than June 12, 1985.

Nominating Committee: Replacement for Cecil W. Ingram, Florida State University. Ingram must be replaced inasmuch as he now is a member of the Council, replacing Hindman Wall, resigned. The committee already has the maximum number of Council members (four) without Ingram. Appointee must be from Division I, Region 2 (District 3).

Drug Education: Replacement for Matthew Skalla, Wesleyan University, now in his senior year. Appointee must be an undergraduate student-athlete who is a varsity letter winner.

'But the NCAA — this great effort at self-regulation — must be judged to have failed to stem the tide of violations. Too many coaches and too many players resort to cheating, and too many powerful persons... have become their allies.'

for that year opened. For Art Schlichter and young men like him everywhere, sports are the all-consuming goal. Classes are attended as necessary to retain eligibility. Among the blue-chip athletes, there are exceptions, but they are just that — exceptions.

Let me tell you about an event at Ohio State that today seems scarcely believable. It was a successful season for Ohio State football. The telephone call comes from the West Coast. Would Ohio State play UCLA in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day, if invited? Can there be any doubt? Well, in 1961 — nearly a quarter century ago — it developed that, among a majority of faculty on the faculty council, there was doubt. The fear was that academic values were being sacrificed on the altar of big-time football, that athletes were being given preferential treatment, that the effective control of athletics policy was inexorably slipping into the hands of the Buckeye boosters. On a close vote of 25 yeases and 28 noes, Ohio State became the first Big Ten team ever to refuse a Rose Bowl bid. As you would guess, indignation knew no bounds. Letters of protest deluged the administration. A local newspaper learned the names of those voting in opposition and printed their names along with their salaries and out-of-town trips taken.

What is one to make of this bit of local history? Simply that the control of intercollegiate athletics becomes a matter of contending values. Now, a quarter century later, it is inconceivable that any faculty council, any university anywhere would reject a coveted bowl bid. The Ohio State faculty was concerned, among other things, that class time would be lost by participation in postseason games. But what is one to say about a baseball season that included — I'm told — more than 100 away-from-home games or more than 30 basketball games away from home?

The conclusion is inescapable. On campuses everywhere, college sports loom ever larger, and rules violations are on the rise. It won't do to consider the Tulane tragedy as simply a regrettable aberration. Is there no memory? The first penalties imposed by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions, on October 16, 1952, were against Kentucky and Bradley for periodic cash gifts to players from secret funds. Over the years, the NCAA rule book has gotten more and more detailed and the investigative staff has grown. But the NCAA — this great effort at self-regulation — must be judged to have failed to stem the tide of violations. Too many coaches and too many players resort to cheating, and too many powerful persons — businessmen, politicians, alumni — have become their allies.

We call them boosters, and often they are organized as clubs. At their best, they express the pride we all feel in our team, our university, our state. At their worst, they pose a threat to the integrity of the univer-determined to manipulate it.

Wayne Duke, the Big Ten commissioner, has said publicly that "the booster problem is worse than it's ever been." Boosters subsidize student-athlete scholarships, new sports facilities and packages of financial inducements to coaches. In the past few years, real income of coaches has risen astronomically. The university's salary contribution to the full package, which may include TV programs, club membership, housing, insurance, is rapidly becoming the smallest part of the package. It should be obvious that booster clubs are often tempted to improper intrusions. Indeed, it requires a singular innocence about the ways of American life to believe that booster clubs will leave the money on a stump at midnight and expect absolutely nothing for their loyal contributions. When Arizona State dismissed its football coach, Frank Kush, the president of the Sun Angels Foundation threatened to withhold promised funds for expansion of the stadium. The foundation asserted that it should have been consulted about the dismissal and suggested that the director of athletics, Fred Miller, be dismissed instead.

At Florida State, the Seminole Boosters paid for stadium expansions and even assumed payments on an apartment complex housing student-athletes. At the time, the Boosters operated independently of the athletics department. It is not an unusual arrangement. The most recent fracas at Clemson University developed over the insistence of the president that he have effective control over the director of athletics, whose ties to the board and whose power base there and in the community made him a law unto himself, invulnerable to presidential management. In a confrontation with the board reminiscent of Gary Cooper in "High Noon," the president demanded a vote of confidence. He did not get it. Clemson's troubles had deep roots. In 1975, the NCAA found that some basketball players had received cash payments and had gotten loans from boosters. The penalty was probation for three years. Now, once again, Clemson University is uncomfortably in the news.

It is the individual fan who poses the greatest threat. These are the loyalists who put money in shoe boxes, who provide cars and trips, who pay for make believe jobs, and who are part of the "hard sell" done on the blue-chip athlete. Some of this is patently illegal. Much of it is borderline. Incidentally, the booster mentality crops up within the academic community. Every campus has a few professors who will give a sure pass grade to any athlete who enrolls.

The individual booster is not always outside the university. Far from it. The regents of the University of Colorado decided to hire Chuck Fairbanks as football coach. You may recall that they bought up his $200,000 contract with the Boston

Marshall takes post with NCAA

Frank Marshall, director of accounting at Southwest Missouri State University, has been named director of accounting in the NCAA national office, effective May 28.

Marshall replaces Marjorie K. Fieber, who retired April 30 after 33 years with the Association.

Marshall has been director of accounting at Southwest Missouri State for the past nine years. He previously was junior accountant for two years at the institution.

A graduate of Raytown, Missouri, South High School, Marshall earned a bachelor's degree in accounting from Southwest Missouri State and later completed several graduate-level courses.

Marshall and his wife, Pam, have two sons.

Georgia wins first Division I men's tennis crown

Playing before a capacity home crowd, the Georgia Bulldogs captured their first NCAA Division I men's tennis team championship with a 5-1 victory over No. 1-seeded UCLA. Georgia, seeded sixth and appearing in the championship match for the first time, was the lowest seed to reach the finals since the team format began in 1977.

The Bulldogs led the Bruins, 4-1, as the last singles match was being played; and when Georgia's Philip Johnson clinched the victory with a 7-6 (7-3), 3-6, 7-5 victory over UCLA's Brett Greenwood, he was mobbed.

"I thought about how I was going to react," said Georgia's No. 1 singles player Mikael Pernfors. "I was going to calmly walk up, but you can't just walk; you have to run or scream or jump. Your brain stops functioning and you go crazy."

Pernfors eventually regained enough composure to successfully defend his 1984 singles championship. He faced his teammate and roommate George Bezcny in the finals, the first time two teammates met for championship honors since 1981. Pernfors, a senior from Hollvixnas, Sweden, downed Bezcny, 6-2, 6-3, and became the first champion to repeat since 1964, when Southern California's Dennis Ralston won his second title.

In the individual doubles championship, Kelly Jones, part of the winning Pepperdine team in 1984, teamed with Carlos DiLaura to win 1985 honors over Charles Beckman and Royce Deppe of Texas, 7-5, 7-6 (8-6). Jones and Jerome Jones won last year's title.

En route to the team finals, Georgia defeated Harvard, 6-2; Stanford, 5-3, and Southern California, 5-3. The Trojans took third place with a 5-4 victory over Southern Methodist.

Trojans weather Hurricane warning for top spot

No. 2-seeded Southern California breezed to its second team title in three years at the Division I Women's Tennis Championships at the Oklahoma City Tennis Center May 16-24.

The Trojans crushed Arizona State, 8-1; San Diego State, 9-0, and California, 9-0, en route to the finals, where they met more formidable competition from Miami (Florida), the No. 4 seed.

In the finals, the Hurricanes jumped out to an early lead as Ronni Reis, in the No. 1 position, upset Caroline Kuhlman in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3. However, the Trojans won the remaining five singles matches to clinch the championship before doubles play began. The final score: Southern California 6, Miami (Florida) 3.

Trinity (Texas) defeated California, 5-1, for third place. The Tigers are credited with the biggest upset of the tournament — a 5-4 beating of No. 1-seed Stanford in the second round.

In the individual championships, however, Cardinal athletes were not to be stopped. Stanford's Linda Gates, 1984 doubles champion with Elise Burgin, defeated the No. 2-seeded Beverly Bowes of Texas and No. 3-seeded Caroline Kuhlman of Southern California to advance to the finals, where she completed the sweep with a victory over No. 1-seeded Gretchen Rush of Trinity (Texas), 7-6 (7-5), 6-2.

Gates and teammate Leigh Ann Eldredge, the No. 3 seed in doubles, defeated another Trinity (Texas) entry, No. 2-seeded Rush and Lisa Sassano, for the doubles championship, 6-4, 6-3.

Johns Hopkins powers its way to another lacrosse crown

Johns Hopkins erased a three-goal, first-quarter deficit and overpowered Syracuse, 11-4, to take a second straight Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship May 25 at Brown University.

The Orangemen were up 3-0 less than 11 minutes into the game, but the Blue Jays evened the score with three goals in less than two minutes and added a fourth before the first quarter ended.

Syracuse was unable to penetrate Johns Hopkins' defense again until only 20 seconds remained in the third period; by that time, the Blue Jays had built a comfortable 10-3 lead. Blue Jay goalkeeper Larry Quinn turned in one of the finest performances of his career, stopping 13 Syracuse shots.

"I thought it would be a close game," said Johns Hopkins coach Don Zimmerman, who became the fourth coach (the second from Johns Hopkins) to lead teams to consecutive Division I championships. The others were Richie Moran (Cornell, 1976-77), Henry Ciccione (Johns Hopkins, 1978-79-80) and Willie Scroggs (North Carolina, 1981-82).

"Syracuse did a great job the first 10 minutes," Zimmerman continued. "Our defense played a great game; Larry Quinn showed why he is the best goalkeeper in college lacrosse."

Orangemen head coach Roy Simmons Jr. put this third consecutive Johns Hopkins-Syracuse title game in perspective quite simply. "We played our worst game of the year, and they played their best game of the year. There's no explanation for it. Even though we came out strong, it's a 60-minute game."

Del Dressel led the Blue Jay attack with three goals, while Syracuse's Tim Nelson, all-time leader in scoring and goals in the college game, never found the Johns Hopkins net. Nelson did notch three assists, however.

"We lost intensity, and they turned the game around," said Syracuse midfielder Brad Kotz. "They did a good job shutting down the transition; they shut off the right people. You make your own breaks... we didn't make enough breaks for ourselves."

Syracuse broke on top quickly when Kotz scored unassisted only 1:29 into the contest. Junior Kevein Sheehan then took a feed from Tim Nelson to make the score 2-0 about four minutes later. Nelson fed senior Fred Opie at the 10:50 mark to give Syracuse a 3-0 margin and what looked like a comfortable advantage.

Johns Hopkins soon found scoring range, however, and the Blue Jays took control of the contest. Dressel hit an unassisted strike during a man-up situation to cut the Syracuse advantage to two. Craig Bubier added an unassisted goal, and Dressel notched his second unassisted tally at the 14:40 mark to tie the score at 3-3. With four seconds left in the quarter, John Krumenacker scored Johns Hopkins' fourth unassisted goal to give the Blue Jays a lead they never would relinquish.

Brian Wood and Dressel added unassisted goals in the second quarter. The half-time score (6-3) made a typical Syracuse offensive explosion seem possible. Certainly at least a few of the 17,500 in attendance at Brown Stadium recalled the 1983 championship game when Syracuse rallied from a 12-5 deficit to take an 18-17 victory and the title.

A Syracuse comeback was not in the second-half script this afternoon, as Johns Hopkins blew the game open in the third period. Before the Orangemen could score again, Blue Jays Mike Morrill (from Steve Mutscheller), Wood (unassisted) and Bubier (from Wood) had extended the advantage to 10-3.

Tom Nelson took a feed from brother Tim at the 14:20 mark of the third quarter, making the score 10-4 and bringing the Orangemen as close as they would get. Blue Jay Brad McLam scored the game's final goal, an unassisted tally at the 8:46 mark of the final period.

"After Syracuse took a 3-0 lead, I told the offense to be patient," Zimmerman recalled. "We knew Syracuse would pressure our offense on the perimeter, so I told the guys to go to the goal, and they did."

Zimmerman also was pleased with his defense, which held Syracuse to the lowest goal output (four) in 15 Division I title games. "It was our best defensive game of the year; we wanted to cut the field in half, and the middies did a great job doing this."

"They shut off our offense," explained Simmons. "They made us play a poor game by taking the intensity away from us." Johns Hopkins finished the season at 13-1, while Syracuse was 14-2.

Florida captures women's golf championship by 15 strokes

Florida's Deb Richard was favored to win the individual title, and Florida was favored to win the team title. Only one of those predictions about the fourth annual NCAA National Collegiate Women's Golf Championships proved correct — Florida won the team title by 15 strokes over Tulsa.

Arizona State's Danielle Ammaccapane won the individual title by one stroke as Richard, the leader after three rounds, took a triple-bogey eight on the 70th hole after driving into the rough and then putting her second shot in the woods.

Ammaccapane shot a two-over-par 75 for a 72-hole total of 298, six over regulation, and then sweated it out while Richard, Furman's Dottie Pepper and Tulsa's Jody Rosenthal failed in their bids to force a play-off at the 6,088-yard New Seabury Country Club in New Seabury, Massachusetts.

Pepper, who began the final round one stroke off the pace, also took a bogey on the 15th hole. That left Richard, Pepper and Rosenthal six-over-par for the distance — just as Ammaccapane finished six over for the tournament.

All three then fell one stroke behind the clubhouse leader with bogey 5s on the 16th hole. Rosenthal then fell two strokes back with a bogey on the 17th but made up for that with a birdie on the last hole.

Ammaccapane, a sophomore, nervously waited in the clubhouse before returning to the 18th green to watch the final group of the tournament, expecting a play-off.

"I had put away my bag, but I kept my shoes on," Ammaccapane said. "I was fortunate that I didn't have to play with them. It made it a little easier for me. I knew that I'd rather be six over and finished instead of six over with a few holes to go."

For Richard, the 1984 U.S. Amateur champion, her second-place finish was a bittersweet ending to a stellar career.

"We came here for only one thing — for the team to win," Richard said. "I didn't feel any pressure; I just lost a lot of shots today. I gave myself opportunities, but I couldn't make the shots. I missed birdie putts on both of the last two holes."

Pepper and Rosenthal tied Richard for second with 299s. Florida freshman Karen Davies contributed to the Gators' team title with a fifth-place finish at 301.

Tournament plan announced

The National Invitation Tournament, for 48 years a fixture in the postseason but recently operating in the shadow of the expanded NCAA play-offs, announced plans May 22 for a 16-team preseason event, the Associated Press reported.

The tournament, to be called the Big Apple NIT, will be held from November 21 to December 1, said Peter Carlesimo, executive director of the NIT. He said the field should be announced in two weeks.

As the NCAA expanded its field, ultimately reaching 64 in 1985, the NIT also expanded and moved preliminary games to sites around the country in an effort to build interest and become more national in scope. Since 1980, the NIT has had 32 teams each year.

In the preseason Big Apple tournament, opening-round games will be played at four regional sites, with the semifinals and finals in New York.

Houston wraps up its 16th men's team golf championship

A couple of interesting "firsts" occurred at the 88th annual NCAA Division I Men's Golf Championships. Houston became the first team to repeat as champion since Wake Forest accomplished the feat in 1974 and 1975. And Clark Burroughs sank a 2 1/2-foot putt on the first play-off hole to become the first Ohio State golfer to win the individual title since 1961. The last Buckeye to win the title was Jack Nicklaus.

The Cougars shot a three-over-par 291 in the final round to hold off Oklahoma State for a three-stroke victory. Marc Pendaries and Billy Ray Brown both shot 70s as Houston finished with a 20-over-par 1,172. Oklahoma State, runner-up to Houston by one stroke in 1984, posted a final-round 293 to close at 1,175.

Houston started the final round with a one-stroke lead after Oklahoma State fired a third-round 289 to make up 11 strokes. But Houston, led by Steve Elkington, extended its advantage to nine shots midway through the round and then fought off a challenge from Oklahoma State on the back nine.

Houston's 16 NCAA team titles have all come under coach Dave Williams, who hinted that he may retire. "This is the greatest one ever," Williams, who has coached Houston since 1952, said. "I always wanted sweet 16, and this is a sweet 16."

Host Florida finished third in team standings with a four-round total of 1,185, followed by Mississippi's 1,186 and Texas' 1,188.

Burroughs started the final round three strokes behind Southern California's Sam Randolph, who led the individual competition after each of the first three rounds.

Randolph, the low amateur at the Masters last month, hiked his lead to six shots before faltering on the back nine of the par-72, 7,100-yard Grenalfe Resort Golf Course in Haines City, Florida.

Burroughs, who birdied the 11th hole, picked up two strokes on Randolph on the next three holes, but the big swing started on the 13th hole when Randolph made a double bogey. Randolph then bogeyed 14 and Burroughs birdied 15 — a swing of four shots on three holes. That made it even with three holes left to play, but the tie was not broken until the play-off. Randolph missed an eight-foot birdie putt that could have won the tournament on the final hole.

Randolph bunkered his drive on the first play-off hole and scrambled for a bogey. Burroughs hit his drive to the middle of the fairway and won the tournament by sinking his putt for par on the 456-yard, par-four first hole.

Florida's Scott Dunlap fired a 68 to finish third at 287. Lamar's Trevor Dodds and Georgia's Peter Persons were next at 289, followed by four golfers at 290, including Oklahoma State's Scott Verplank.

Doom hurls UCLA to a third softball crown in four years

Debbie Doom finished her collegiate career the same way she started it four years ago — by leading her UCLA squad to the Division I Women's Softball Championship.

Against local favorite Nebraska, Doom outdueled Lori Sippel, who threw a no-hitter earlier in the tournament, 2-1, May 26 in Omaha, Nebraska, as the Bruins won their third championship in four tries.

As a freshman in 1982, Doom won five consecutive games in leading UCLA to the first NCAA championship. Last season, she won four tournament games to help UCLA to another title. During four years of NCAA competition, Doom was 13-4, recorded 176 strikeouts in 146 innings and had an 0.57 earned-run average.

Doom won the final struggle with Sippel, but Tracy Compton was the main reason the Bruins were able to advance to the championship game. Compton, who did not allow a run in four years of NCAA championship competition, won three of the five Bruins' victories, all by the shutout route.

After winning its first game against Utah, UCLA was defeated by Cal State Fullerton in the second round, forcing the Bruins to win all of their remaining games of the championship. Nebraska was making its first appearance in the championship finals. The Huskers received three outstanding pitching performances, two by Sippel and one by Mori Emmons.

Doom, Compton and Sippel were the pitchers named to the all-tournament team. Nebraska had four other players named to the team — catcher Lisa Busby, first baseman Ginger Cannon, second baseman Lori Richins and outfielder Stacy Sunny — and UCLA placed two other players on the team — shortstop Leslie Rover and utility player Chris Olivie. Others named to the team were Joann Ferrieri, third baseman, Cal State Fullerton; Regina Dooley, outfielder, Adelphi, and Alison Stowell, outfielder, Cal Poly-Pomona.

Eastern Connecticut State claims trophy in Division III

The 1985 Division III Women's Softball Championship came down to a best-of-three series between host Eastern Connecticut State and Trenton State, and the host Warriors prevailed in the May 18-21 championship by winning consecutive 1-0 games.

Kim Durocher was the pitching star for Eastern Connecticut, winning both 1-0 games over Trenton State and compiling a 4-1 tournament record. Durocher struck out 10 and allowed only 10 hits and one earned run in 28 innings.

Eastern Connecticut and Trenton State, both former championship winners, won their first two games in the double-elimination tournament to set up the confrontation. Eastern Connecticut had defeated Allegheny, 2-0, and Wisconsin-Whitewater, 3-2. Trenton State had beaten Luther, 3-0, and Allegheny, 2-0.

Trenton State's Gina LaMandre shut down Eastern Connecticut 1-0 on a five-hitter before the Warriors won the final two games to take a second championship. Eastern Connecticut won the first NCAA championship in 1982. Trenton State won the 1983 title and has finished runner-up the other three years.

In the championship game, catcher Kim Hardy scored the winning run in the first inning on a hit by first baseman Cindy Walz. From that point, Durocher blanked Trenton State and allowed only four hits.

Moccasins win title in baseball

Florida Southern scored 47 runs in four games to win its sixth title at the 1985 Division II Baseball Championship May 25-28 in Montgomery, Alabama.

Tom Temrowski and Johnnie Pleicones had nine of Florida Southern's 21 hits as the Moccasins defeated Cal Poly Pomona, 15-5, in the championship game. Temrowski hit for the cycle and had six runs batted in, while Pleicones had five hits, including a solo home run.

Tracy Toy, 7-2, pitched eight innings for Florida Southern, which finished 54-10 this season. He received credit for the victory.

To reach the championship game, Florida Southern defeated Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, 12-5; Troy State, 10-5, in 12 innings, and Cal Poly-Pomona, 10-3. Prior to its two losses to Florida Southern in the double-elimination tournament, Cal Poly-Pomona defeated New Haven, 6-5, and Valdosta State, 10-0.

Florida Southern's championship, its first since 1981, breaks a three-year domination of the tournament by California teams. California-Riverside, Cal Poly-Pomona and Cal State Northridge had won the three previous Division II championships.

Linescores of the tournament's first nine games and a box score of the championship game will be published in the June 5 issue of The NCAA News.

Abilene Christian cruises to track championship

Abilene Christian scored 171 points in 16 events to dominate the field at the 1985 Division II Men's Outdoor Track Championships May 20-25 at Cal State Los Angeles. The victory was the Wildcats' fourth consecutive NCAA title.

In addition, Abilene Christian took top honors in the women's championships, marking the first time that one school has won both team titles.

The Wildcat men captured eight individual titles, equaling the record set in 1984 by Abilene Christian. First-place finishers were Mark Witherspoon, 100-meter dash (10.36); Arthur Williams, 200-meter dash, 20.56; Freddie Williams, 800-meter dash, 1:48.64; 1,600-meter relay team of Ladrack Trusty, Freddie Williams, Witherspoon and Arthur Williams, 3:04.73; Dale Jenkins, pole vault, 17-0; Jose Salazar, triple jump, 54-0½ (meet record); Ahmed Shata, shot put, 60-8¾; and David Simmons, discus, 194-1.

East Texas State, which boasted Sampson Obwacha in the middle distances, finished a distant second with 63 points. Obwacha claimed firsts in the 1,500 meters (3:43.35) and 3,000-meter steeplechase (8:38.86) and second in the 5,000 meters behind the record-breaking performance of Rob Juergens of Ashland (13:58.49). The new mark surpassed the 13:59.10 by Charles Assumma of California-Riverside.

Another meet record was set in the decathlon by William Motti of Mount St. Mary's (8,090), who beat his 1984 showing of 7,985 points.

Tournament set in mid-May

The Atlantic Coast has agreed to move its annual baseball tournament to mid-May to lengthen the conference season and give teams a more competitive edge in the NCAA playoffs, officials said May 22.

The baseball tournament was changed because coaches believe it will give them a better opportunity to improve and build baseball back to where it was, the Associated Press reported.

The Carmichael Cup, awarded to the overall sports champion in the league, will be continued, the conference decided.

The ACC basketball tournament will return to Greensboro, North Carolina in 1986 and be played during the first week of March.

Foster's jump lets Wildcats walk off with Division II honors

Ann Foster's triple jump of 41-9½ in the closing moments of the Division II Women's Outdoor Track Championships at Cal State Los Angeles did more than just set a meet record — it clinched Abilene Christian's first team title, knocking off three-time defending champion Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, 106-103.

The Mustangs had just taken the team lead with a first-place finish in the 1,600-meter relay before the close of the triple jump, and Foster had to finish No. 1 or No. 2 for the Wildcats to win.

In addition to Foster's first-place finish, Abilene Christian scored in 12 other events, including winning performances by Sonya Smith in the javelin (180-10) and Yolanda Henry in the high jump (6-0). The latter tied the meet record.

The Mustangs scored in 14 events, winning four: Gladees Prieur in the 1,500 meters (4:16.78, meet record); Robyn Root in the 10,000 meters

(33:24.24, meet record); Cece Chandler in the 100-meter hurdles (13.53, equaling meet record), and the 1,600-meter relay team of Felicia Saville, Patrice Carpenter, Loretta Jordan and Veronica Storvick (3:36.37).

Third-place finisher Alabama A&M boasted the only double winner — Dannette Young, who won the 100 meters in 11.39 and set a new Division II mark in winning the 200 meters in 22.92. The Lady Bulldogs' 400-meter relay team of Cherylann Bourne, Cefornia Polk, Fredricka Wright and Young broke the meet record with a 44.83.

Three other marks were set: Karen Dunn of Wake Forest in the 3,000-meter run with a 9:22.54; Julie Bowers smashed her own record of 16:21.92 in the 5,000 meters with a 15:59.34, and Diane Oswalt of Cal State Hayward won the discus with a 174-11, surpassing her own 1984 mark of 173-7.

In all, 10 records were either equaled or broken.

Hayes' condition good

Former Ohio State University football coach Woody Hayes is listed in good condition at University Hospitals, where he is being treated for a stroke he suffered May 22 while in Canada.

Asked if Hayes was having trouble speaking, a hospital spokesperson said, "That's still being evaluated. His whole right side is affected."

Cortland State sprints, hurdles its way to III women's title

Paced by sprinter Tracey Armstead and hurdler Andrea Spaulding, Cortland State won its first Division III Women's Outdoor Track Championships team title May 20-25 at Denison University.

Armstead and Spaulding scored 45 of the Red Dragons' 62 points, edging Southern-New Orleans by one point. Two-time defending champion Wisconsin-LaCrosse was third with 50, followed by St. Thomas (Minnesota) with 48. Massachusetts-Boston, the 1985 indoor champion, was fifth with 39 points.

Armstead, the only double winner in the indoor championships, finished second in the 100-meter dash (12.36), fourth in the 200-meter dash (25.20) and first in the long jump (19-2¼). Spaulding won the 400-meter hurdles in record time (1:00.43), placed second in the 100-meter hurdles (14.71) and was fifth in the triple jump (36-3¼). Red Dragon distance runners Anne Knight (second in 1,500 meters, 4:38.70) and Diane Schmitt (second in 10,000 meters, 36:12.86) added valuable points.

The only double winner of the meet was Zina Age, a sophomore from Southern-New Orleans. Age won the 100 meters (12.07) and set a new meet record in capturing the 200 meters in 24.17. The old record was 24.78. In the women's 400-meter relay, Age teamed with Lisa Trask, Shelly Jackson and Angelina Darenbourg to set another Division III record (47.14).

Two other meet records were established: Margo Edwards of Redlands in the 100-meter hurdles, 14.24, and the Massachusetts-Boston 1,600-meter relay team of Sonji Larts, Genesis Eddins, Kelly Rainey and Murtonda Durant in 3:45.26.

Lions parlay second-place relay finish into a championship

Lincoln (Pennsylvania) scored eight points with a second-place finish in the final event of the meet to claim its first NCAA Division III Men's Outdoor Track Championships team title. The Lions barely edged Wisconsin-LaCrosse, 61-58, while St. Thomas (Minnesota) finished third with 56 points. Occidental was fourth with 46.

Glassboro State, NCAA team champion from 1980 through 1984, scored 27 points for eighth place.

Lincoln (Pennsylvania) coach Cyrus D. Jones attributed the success to attitude. "There were times when I didn't think we would make it through the season because of bad attitudes; but when we arrived at the meet and the athletes walked around that track, something happened.

"They were waiting for me and said, 'Coach, let's have a prayer.' They prayed that day and after that they wouldn't go to eat without one another. That time we spent together gave us the incentive to pull this out."

The Lions were led by Barrington Fearon in the 200-meter dash (second, 21.77) and the 400-meter dash (first, 47.08). Fearon had won the 400 meters in the Division III Men's Indoor Track Championships, where the Lions finished second behind St. Thomas (Minnesota).

Three meet records were set in the championships: Jim Gathje of St. John's (Minnesota), 3,000-meter steeplechase, 8:46.71; Jay Hibert of Pomona-Pitzer, hammer, 209-10, and Max Harn of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 800 meters, 1:49.30.

CEOs

96 percent (97 percent in I and 96 percent in I-A) agreed that the CEO should have ultimate control of the athletics budget. Of those responses, 73 percent (75 percent in I and 78 percent in I-A) marked "strongly agree."

Speaking specifically to the concept of a required audit of athletics expenditures, 87 percent said there should be such an audit by institutional or independent auditors. The belief was even stronger in the major programs, with 89 percent agreeing in Division I and 91 percent in Division I-A.

Budget control

Proposal No. 6 would amend Constitution 3-2 (the Association's principle of institutional control and responsibility) to require that each member institution's annual budget for intercollegiate athletics shall be controlled by the institution.

That control would be achieved by specifying that the athletics budget must be subject to the institution's normal budgeting procedures and that the budget must be approved by the institution's chief executive officer or the CEO's designee.

The chief executive's designee would have to be an institutional administrator from outside the athletics department.

Earlier NCAA research by Mitchell H. Raiborn, now at Bradley University, indicates that nearly all member institutions prepare formal budgets for intercollegiate athletics. It is those budgets that would be subject to the institutional control procedures specified in Proposal No. 6.

Annual audit

Proposal No. 7 also would amend Constitution 3-2. It would require an annual audit of all expenditures for an institution's intercollegiate athletics program.

Specifically, the proposal would require that the annual audit be conducted by a qualified auditor who is not a staff member of the institution and who is selected for that task by the institution's chief executive officer or the CEO's designee. Again, such a designee would have to be from outside the department of athletics.

Conference. Named to serve on the Special Committee on Measuring Athletics Program Success in addition to Rice were Marino H. Casem, Alcorn State University; D. J. DiJulia, Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference; Judith

R. Holland, University of California, Los Angeles; Malcolm C. McInnis Jr., University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Donald R. Perkins, Wittenberg University, and Helen Smiley, University of North Dakota.

The two committees will report periodically to the NCAA Council.

Alcohol ban seen as threat to play-by-play sports on TV

Curtailment of beer and wine commercials could force local and regional sports play-by-play off free television, the head of the National Association of Broadcasters warn.

Congress has been asked to ban such ads or force broadcasters to give equal-time warnings on the health and safety consequences of excessive drinking. It generally is agreed that most brewers and vintners would cancel commercials rather than open the door to counter ads, the Associated Press reported.

Dudley S. Taft, president of Taft Broadcasting Co., says beer and wine ads brought $877 million to broadcasters in 1984; and NAB president Edward O. Fritts says the bulk of that money finances live, on-location sports broadcasts.

"Coverage would diminish, perhaps move to pay-per-view or disappear altogether," Fritts testified May 21 before the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications, Consumer Protection and Finance.

He said the audience for these broadcasts is "predominantly middle-age males," as if to emphasize that beer and wine ads are not aimed at getting young people to drink more.

But subcommittee chair Timothy E. Wirth, D-Colorado, pointed out that the armed forces spend 88 percent of their advertising recruitment dollars on sports programming — presumably to reach young males.

Donald B. Shea, president of the United States Brewers Association, quipped that it was clear that one of the advertisers was spending money in the wrong place.

In a telephone interview, Rick Gentile, director of college sports press information for CBS, said, "They're both right."

He said ratings for college football show large numbers of viewers for the two key categories, males 18 to 49 and males 25-54.

"If you're selling the Army, you're selling at the bottom end of that scale. If you're selling beer, you have both ends."

Fritts said that if the large brewers and wine-makers dropped TV ads, there were no new advertisers waiting in the wings to fill the void, "certainly not at the revenue levels necessary to support this expensive programming."

Challenging beer and wine ads was

Michael F. Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest. He attacked the ads for selling "a whole new generation on the pleasures of drink." He said it was a "distorted view of drinking that is promoted by the massive amounts of broadcast alcohol advertising."

The center is seeking an ad ban or free time to present an opposing view. The hearing was called to consider legislation requiring broadcasters to provide free time for counter-ads.

"Without question, advertisements for beer and wine present the products in an appealing fashion," Fritts acknowledged. "Yet, they do not depict overconsumption, or extol dangerous practices, and they are not targeted at the underaged."

Speaking as a private citizen, but pointing to tactics his action on smoking and health used in obtaining a ban on cigarette TV commercials, law professor John F. Banzhaf III suggested Congress force brewers and vintners to reveal their marketing strategies.

He said Federal Trade Commission subpoenas uncovered documents that indicated to the staff that many ads were "deliberately designed to persuade young people to begin smoking."

"Congress should not accept the unsubstantiated and self-serving assurances of the alcohol industry that their ads do not help to create a climate in which people are persuaded to imbibe," he concluded.

Arizona uses weight room to aid school's disabled students

At the University of Arizona, it's a surprise to some people that the school's varsity weight room is not solely for varsity athletes. In addition to 495 athletes from 18 varsity sports who use the room, about 40 people from nonathletic groups also use the facility — side by side with the Wildcats.

The group that benefits most is the institution's disabled students.

For the past four years, the university has provided supervised weight-training and conditioning programs on Nautilus equipment for that student population.

Students with varying physical disabilities use the sophisticated apparatus in learning how to maximize strength and motion. It's the thrust of an adaptive physical education weight-training course offered to disabled students.

"I think this is one of only two or three schools in the country that have a program like this for disabled students," said Keith Engelke, a graduate student of exercise physiology who works with the disabled students.

"The particular equipment is excellent. We can really adapt it to their needs," he said.

Three times a week, the disabled students use the weight room, working alongside the athletes in the facility, which is situated in Arizona's McKale Center arena and office complex.

"I think students get a lot out of it simply because of the atmosphere," Engelke said.

Mike Jones, the strength-conditioning coach for all Arizona athletics, said the presence of the disabled students is beneficial to the athletes in a motivational sense.

"To see a person learning how to walk again...to see that person able to go from the electric to a manual wheel chair...it's quite a display of courage," Jones said. "I think it gives the athletes a lift at the same time," he said.

But the disabled-student program provides more than inspiration.

A recent grant to Arizona's disabled student services by the Arizona Department of Economic Security has allowed the institution to purchase additional Nautilus equipment that can be used by both the disabled students and the athletes.

Another group that uses the weight room consists of participants in the department of physical education's adult-fitness program.

Although the program emphasizes aerobics, weight training provides several of the adults in the program with a complete workout and helps others strengthen muscles necessary for aerobic training.

Philip Stanforth, director of the adult-fitness program, said his group does not train in the weight room as much as others because of the program's emphasis on aerobics and the early-morning hours in the facility that are scheduled for his group. But for those who do use it, it has been very beneficial, he says.

"It (weight training) gives them a better-rounded program than just walking or biking would," Stanforth said. "And in terms of rehabilitation, it really has helped a lot."

Jones said the nonathletic groups are scheduled at nonpeak times to avoid overcrowding of the weight room, an 8,600-square-foot facility that ordinarily handles more than 100 athletes simultaneously.

"That way," he said, "we're able to handle a large number of people without having athletes stand and wait for a machine."

"I think the important thing is that we're offering the person who uses the facility a variety of lifting lines and speeds that you can't find at other facilities," Jones said.

Board's

are done in deliberate violation of the usual processes of internal review and consultation.

The root cause of creeping corruption? We know the answer, but hardly dare say it lest we be labeled as un-American. It is the win-at-all-costs notion, which is at war with sportsmanship itself. Jesse Owens, watching his German competitor fidget at the starting line, walked over to him and suggested a different stance. Jesse was a sportsman. His sick imitators are frauds and they disgrace the ideals of high achievement and equality of competition he espoused and lived by. When winning becomes the overriding goal, the temptations to cheat become almost irresistible. It is not only the teenager screaming, "We're No. 1," but the banker rejoicing at the country club. When winning becomes obsessive, the result is that an all-consuming temptation, overriding conscience and conviction on small matters, finally overrides conscience and conviction on large matters. And so some coaches cheat, some athletics directors connive in cheating, and some presidents and trustees look the other way.

On this slippery downward slope, the minor transgression paves the way for the larger violation, and the college or university slips from illegal recruiting to doctored transcripts to padded expense vouchers for coaches. And with it comes the comforting self-deception: "Isn't everybody doing it?" Fortunately, everybody isn't doing it; everybody isn't cheating. I believe that the majority of our colleges want a clean program. And I know they bitterly resent competing with institutions whose flagrant violation of the rules has become common gossip.

During the Watergate hearings, Sen. Baker asked, "What did you know and when did you know it?" It is a question that should haunt every member of every governing board with any kind of an intercollegiate program. You know the answer.

Governing boards may be in some instances victims of mistaken excesses of delegation. But not often. Among the major sports powerhouses of the nation, there have been governing boards that have been silent accomplices in the prostitution of an athletics program. How can they pretend to an innocence they plainly do not have? Few trustees can tell us the names of deans, let alone distinguished faculty. They permit the president to select the top officials of the university, including all vice-presidents. But it is a remarkable governing board that does not become significantly involved in the processes by which the athletics director and the coaches of football and basketball are selected and separated.

Americans look everywhere for the villains — among the gamblers who bribe basketball players, among the arrogant rich who make college sports their playpen, among coaches who succumb to outright cheating, among athletics directors whose loyalties run to powerful alumni, among presidents who turn a blind eye on rules violations, among governing boards who push the president aside on the big decisions in athletics, among the officers of the NCAA whose sanctions seem always to be too little and too late.

There is an escalation in the number of violations discovered and in the seriousness of the violations. Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, spoke out publicly last fall. He said that the problem is much worse than he had thought, and that the NCAA is losing ground in its efforts to enforce the rules and maintain the integrity of big-time college sports. "The rewards have escalated so fast and the penalties have not increased at the same rate," he said. "Probation is considered the price of doing business by some schools." (The NCAA investigation at Illinois disclosed 85 violations and had harsh words for two of the coaches who it said displayed a pattern of intentionally breaking the rules. The NCAA said that the repeated violations cast doubt on management of the program by Neale Stoner, the athletics director, and Mike White, the head coach. They remain.)

Who is responsible? Who is to be made accountable? It is no secret that the NCAA is dominated by the athletics directors and no secret that its leadership has bitterly resented and resisted any intrusion by presidents. But make no mistake about it. The power that is exercised by the athletics directors in NCAA affairs simply mirrors the reality of power back at the home campus. Our problems begin right here in River City. If intercollegiate athletics is out of control on your campus, if it is an empire unto itself, if the president is admission of futility on the part of one-fourth of the presidents in the NCAA. Reading the results of the survey, we learn that presidents believe that athletics budgets should be subject to approval by administrators or governing boards or both, that head coaches should report directly to athletics administrators and that the president should be the final authority in hiring head coaches. These suggestions hardly seem unreasonable. After all, under NCAA rules, it is the president who is held responsible for protecting the integrity of the athletics program.

The Presidents Commission is heading for a showdown at the forthcoming NCAA Convention. Much tougher penalties are proposed for repeat violators, along with sweeping ...the minor transgression paves the way for the larger violation, and the college or university slips from illegal recruiting to doctored transcripts to padded expense vouchers for coaches.

bypassed, it is because governing boards let it happen. No one can plead ignorance or innocence. Presidents have not relinquished authority over college sports because of laziness or indifference. They take seriously their responsibilities for the entire enterprise, including the athletics program. Presidents have been elbowed aside because they get in the way.

A Presidents Commission is working along with the NCAA to bring to a special Convention of the NCAA in June a complete package of basic reforms. In a survey of 475 chief executive officers conducted by the NCAA, 98 percent said they believed they should be personally responsible for the integrity of the institution's athletic program, but only 76 percent said they were able to exercise that responsibility. Ponder that chilling prohibitions that reach to the pattern of violations. It would be hard to exaggerate the importance of this last-ditch effort to clean up college sports.

In this major reform effort, where will you members of the governing board stand? Will you demand a complete briefing from your president on the reforms recommended? What will happen on those 115 or so campuses where the president is effectively excluded from major decisions on athletics? Will the governing board or those on the board who claim athletics as their province once again take their signal from the athletics establishment? If it is institutional integrity that is at stake, and this is what the leaders in higher education are saying, then surely no governing board in the nation dare remain indifferent. Reform is a collective effort. It is no time to stand on the sidelines. Also, on each measure proposed at the Convention, there will be a roll-call vote. Where your institution stands will be a matter of public record — a significant advance in itself.

Governing boards have been part of the problem. They simply must be part of the solution. In athletics, of all areas, individual board members must recognize that their power is rightfully exercised only as a voting member of the body. No individual board member should "own" the football program. Make it clear to all concerned that violations of the rules will not be condoned. Above all, be informed about athletics policy, athletics budgets, athletics recruiting, about what you are doing or not doing with women's sports. The NCAA rules are your rules, and when they are weakened, it is your institution's credibility that is weakened. A reform measure that is to go into effect August 1, 1985, provides that a student-athlete must be "in good standing." Would you believe that the NCAA and some member institutions already have interpreted this to permit students on probation to be declared in good academic standing? Is there any issue that goes more to integrity than honesty in reporting academic status?

I say to members of governing boards everywhere: There is too much that is good in college sports to permit it to be corrupted. You are charged by oath of office and by conscience to preserve and protect the integrity of the institution you serve. The president is your chosen agent in administering the affairs of the university. Support, strengthen and sustain your chief executive officer in seeing that the sports program is fully under institutional control. It is your university — its students, faculty, alumni — whose reputation you hold in trust. In matters of athletics, where the inherent risks are high, it is you who ultimately will enjoy the pride or endure the shame.

Georgia placed on probation for violations in recruiting

The University of Georgia has been placed on probation for a one-year period by the NCAA Committee on Infractions for violations occurring in the recruitment of prospective student-athletes in men's basketball.

The NCAA penalty will require the university to forfeit 90 percent of the net receipts ($254,880) from its participation in the 1985 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship. The NCAA's records of the university's participation in this event also will be deleted.

Also, all men's basketball coaching staff members at the university will be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities (including the evaluation of prospects) for one year.

In addition, one student-athlete who was involved in recruiting violations has been declared ineligible to represent the institution, it being understood that the university may appeal for restoration of eligibility to the NCAA Eligibility Committee.

The university also imposed additional penalties directly on the head basketball coach and one assistant basketball coach following its investigation of the case.

No additional sanctions regarding future postseason events or television appearances were imposed by the NCAA.

"This case primarily evolved from the NCAA's review of the recruitment of one prospective student-athlete," said Frank J. Remington, Committee on Infractions chair. "The follow-up investigations conducted by the NCAA and the university were hampered, however, by inconsistent and conflicting information provided by several principals in the case, and the seriousness of the case heightened when substantial information was developed by the university and the NCAA to indicate that a now former assistant basketball coach had provided false and misleading information concerning his involvement in the matters under inquiry.

"It should be emphasized," Remington said, "that the university took appropriate action on its own initiative against its head basketball coach and one assistant based upon their involvement in the violations. In addition, the university intended to take action against another assistant basketball coach but was prevented from doing so because the coach left to be employed by another member institution. Reportedly, that institution was aware of the allegations involving the individual, and the committee intends to contact the institution's president for his comments or any information he deems appropriate to explain the decision to employ this coach.

"The committee believes that its penalty in this case is meaningful and appropriate," Remington said, "in that it directly affects the university's basketball coaching staff. Further, the penalty will require the university to return any benefit gained from its participation in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship and will adversely affect future efforts by the basketball coaching staff to recruit new team members."

The case involved violations of NCAA regulations related to ethical conduct, recruiting and certification of compliance.

Host selected

The University of Alabama at Birmingham has won its bid to host the 1986 Sun Belt Conference basketball tournament.

The Sun Belt's eight member schools voted to return the event to the 17,000-seat Birmingham-Jefferson County Coliseum after a one-year absence. Birmingham was the site of the Sun Belt's 1982, 1983 and 1984 postseason tournaments, all of which were won by Alabama-Birmingham.

The following is a complete text of the penalties imposed upon the University of Georgia and a summary of the violations in the case.

Penalty to be imposed upon institution

1. The University of Georgia shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of one year, effective May 22, 1985, it being understood that should any portion of the penalty in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalty shall be reconsidered by the NCAA; further, during this period of probation, the NCAA shall review the athletics policies and procedures of the university, which will include periodic visits to the university by NCAA staff members.

2. In accordance with the provisions of Section 7-(b)-(11) of the NCAA enforcement procedure, the university shall be required to forfeit $254,880 to the Association from a total of $283,200 due the university for its participation in the 1985 NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship (90 percent of its share of net receipts); further, the record of the university's performance in the championship shall be deleted, and the team's place in the final standings shall be vacated.

3. No member of the men's basketball coaching staff shall be permitted to participate in any off-campus recruiting activities (including scouting activities involving the evaluation of prospective student-athletes) during the probationary period.

4. The Committee on Infractions adopts as a part of its penalty the following actions that were imposed by the university prior to the Committee on Infractions' consideration of this case:

a. The men's head basketball coach shall receive an official letter of reprimand; his salary shall not be increased during the 1985-86 academic year; his employment contract shall not be extended for an additional year (as is normally done by the institution), and his employment contract shall be altered to indicate that he may be suspended or terminated from the university if found to be in violation of any NCAA regulation, rather than in a deliberate or serious violation as previously stated. b. An assistant basketball coach shall receive an official letter of reprimand; the renewal of his employment contract will be reviewed pending the results of the NCAA infractions case, and if the employment contract is renewed, the language in his contract will be altered to indicate that he may be suspended or terminated from the university if found to be in violation of any NCAA regulation, rather than in a deliberate or serious violation as previously stated. c. The university intended to impose disciplinary action on another assistant basketball coach for his actions in this case but was prevented from doing so because during the processing of this case, he was employed by another

NCAA member institution. This institution reportedly was advised of the violations in question, and the committee is writing the president of the second institution to invite any comment or additional information that he deems to be appropriate to explain the basis for that institution's decision to proceed to select its head basketball coach.

Summary of violations of NCAA legislation

1. NCAA Constitution 3-6-(a) and the opening statement of the official procedure governing the NCAA enforcement program [ethical conduct] — In December 1983, an assistant basketball coach failed to deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics programs in that on two occasions he knowingly provided false and misleading information to representatives of the NCAA (also to an institutional representative on one of these occasions) concerning his involvement in the alleged violations in this infractions case.

2. NCAA Bylaws 1-8-(j) and 1-8-(j)-(4) [improper transportation and entertainment] — (a) In September 1983, the head basketball coach provided a prospective student-athlete local automobile transportation between the young man's home and the home of a friend (a distance of 26 miles); (b) in November 1983, the head basketball coach provided the friend of a prospective student-athlete local automobile transportation between the Georgia Coliseum, a local restaurant and a hotel where the coach entertained this individual for a meal; (c) in December 1983, an assistant basketball coach provided his automobile to a friend of a prospective student-athlete in order to attempt to locate the prospect, and (d) during the 1983-84 academic year, an assistant basketball coach permitted a prospective student-athlete and a friend to use a rental automobile while the coach visited with the prospect's mother in their home.

3. NCAA Bylaws 1-1-(b) and 1-1-(b)-(1) [improper recruiting offer and gifts] — (a) In March 1982, while recruiting a prospective student-athlete, an assistant basketball coach offered to provide the prospect and his brother a pair of basketball shoes at no cost to them; (b) in August 1983, an assistant basketball coach gave a prospective student-athlete a gray T-shirt embossed with a large red "G" and a basketball logo on the front, and (c) during the 1983-84 academic year, an assistant basketball coach provided several articles of athletics clothing to the friend of a prospect who later gave the items to the prospect.

4. NCAA Bylaws 5-6-(d) and 5-6-(d)-(5) [certification of compliance] — With full knowledge at the time that certain practices of the university's intercollegiate basketball program were not in compliance with NCAA legislation, an assistant basketball coach attested on August 24, 1984, on a statement filed with the chief executive officer of the university that he had reported his knowledge of and involvement in any violation of NCAA legislation involving the institution.

Summer basketball leagues receive approval

Acting for the Council, the NCAA Administrative Committee has approved 37 additional summer basketball leagues, bringing to 143 the number of leagues approved this year.

Under the provisions of NCAA Constitution 3.9 (b) (1), a male or female student-athlete with intercollegiate basketball eligibility remaining may participate between June 15 and August 31 in a basketball league approved by the Council.

The first list of approved leagues appeared in the May 15 issue of The NCAA News.

Any questions concerning the application process or requirements for NCAA approval of summer basketball leagues should be directed to Jamie McCloskey, legislative assistant, at the NCAA national office.

Following are the latest summer basketball leagues approved by the

Fiesta Bowl signs pact with NBC

The Fiesta Bowl has signed a new five-year contract with NBC-TV and become the fifth postseason college football game to offer participating teams more than $1 million each.

"It makes us a solid No. 5," said Fiesta Bowl Executive Director Bruce Skinner as the bowl joins the Rose, Orange, Cotton and Sugar in $1 million-plus payouts.

Skinner said the Fiesta's new pact with NBC becomes effective January 1, with the 1986 game worth $1.3 million to each team. The payouts will then increase in $100,000 increments each year, reaching $1.7 million in 1990.

The Fiesta Bowl, played in suburban Tempe at Arizona State University's 70,021-seat Sun Devil Stadium, paid just $168,000 per team in its first game in December 1971. The University of California, Los Angeles, and the University of Miami (Florida) each received $886,000 in Fiesta Bowl 14 last January 1.

Bill seeks to force higher graduation rate among athletes

Rep. James Howard, D-New Jersey, aiming at improving "the dismal graduation rate" of some college athletes, introduced a bill May 23 designed to force schools to do a better job of graduating students receiving athletics grants-in-aid.

The measure states that 75 percent of a school's students receiving athletics scholarships for at least three years would have to graduate within five years.

If they did not, contributions to that school's athletics department — and contributions to any organization that donates money to that school's athletics department — would no longer be tax deductible.

Howard, a former teacher who described himself as an "avid sports enthusiast," said that only four of 43 basketball players at Memphis State University have graduated since 1972, a situation that he said was not isolated.

"When you consider that only one percent of college athletes sign a professional contract, you have to wonder what happens to those athletes who have been used for their athletic ability but fall between the cracks without a pro contract or a degree," he said.

"I just want to see a goal everyone talks about having a little clout behind it," he added.

Word of the bill evoked negative comments from officials of two New Jersey colleges that award athletics scholarships.

Paul Vitek, assistant athletics director at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, said that although most student-athletes graduate within five years, such progress is not always possible.

"A youngster might go off into the professional ranks and not finish the last semester of classes," Vitek said. "It seems unfair to penalize a school and a contributor because they are pursuing a livelihood. We work hard to see that those who go into the professional ranks come back and finish up."

An assistant vice-president at Seton Hall University, John B. Wilson, said he believed Congress was not the forum in which to address the problem.

"Seton Hall voluntarily belongs to the NCAA, which gives us strict limits on the number of scholarships and on what is normal progress toward a degree," he said. "So we feel we're already regulated."

Asked at his news conference if his measure would encourage schools to bylaws, are binding on all league matters.

But those bylaws were written long before the U.S. Supreme Court ruled last summer in the Oklahoma-Georgia suit. The court said in effect that the NCAA could not compel schools to give up the property rights to their football games as a condition of membership.

"We do not have a specific rule that speaks to this issue," said Snell. "I think the fact of the matter is we simply grant diplomas to their scholarship athletes, Howard said: "I don't think that would happen. It would tarnish the reputation of a university."

Sooners get OK

The Big Eight Conference May 22 conceded the University of Oklahoma's right to boycott the conference television package while still collecting a full share of the proceeds.

Conference chair Robert R. Snell said a committee would be appointed to update league rules on the thorny legal question of television property rights.

"It was voted that the conference proceed to complete a seven-team television package with Raycom Sports and that the conference invite Oklahoma to participate fully in such a package," a news release said.

Should the Sooners "decide not to be a full participant, Oklahoma will be allowed to decide whether it should participate in the revenue-sharing from the Raycom package, pursuant to conference rule 6.4011," the release said.

The league's action forestalled what some people believed was an impending crisis over the Oklahoma Board of Regents' refusal to abide by a 7-1 conference vote approving the two-year, $1.7 million deal. Snell said that lawyers had decided that 6-2 or 7-1 votes, according to conference have done a lot of things in the past ... we have kind of done things by custom and by habit. We do not formalize them to the degree we should."

Snell, the faculty athletics representative at Kansas State University, said the league would attempt to clarify its rules.

"We appointed a committee to develop a conference rule relating to the relationship between conference members and membership and their property rights," Snell said. "We hope to have their recommendations by our next meetings in September."

'We'll survive'

Athletics directors for the predominantly black schools of the Southwestern Athletic Conference may not like the NCAA's Proposal No. 48, but they'll live with it and thrive, said Marino H. Casem of Alcorn State University.

"We'll be here the day after Ole Miss closes," Casem said. "There'll always be an Alcorn, a Grambling, a Southern."

Casem is football coach and athletics director at Alcorn.

Proposal No. 48 mandates higher academic standards for entering scholarship athletes. A prospect who doesn't meet the standards can sit out a year and earn eligibility in the college classroom.

Casem said he read somewhere that only about 20 percent of the black students coming out of high school would meet the requirements for a grant-in-aid under Proposal No. 48.

"I don't think we're going to be satisfied with being able to recruit from only 20 percent of the kids who can get into college, but we're going to survive," Casem said.

Edward G. Robinson, football coach and athletics director at Grambling State University, said it might help to do a thorough breakdown of the requirements and write them down in a simple list for everyone.

He said there appears to be confusion over exactly what the rule requires. "I don't want to underrate anybody's intelligence, but we have to itemize, to spell it out," he said. "Proposal 48 isn't the end of the world."

Richard A. Hill, athletics director at Southern University, Baton

Marino H. Casem

Rouge, said he expects some modifications of the rule, but also expects most of it to be enacted as-is.

"It's about over, folks. I think it's a moot issue, now," he said. "It's going through."

"We need to get involved in it, strip it naked, look at it, and we'll see that it's not as life-threatening as we might think."

"Athletes tend to measure up to the challenges placed before them."

No additions yet

The Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference is happy with seven members for the present and sees no urgent need to replace Tulane University, conference Commissioner Steven J. Hatchell said May 22.

Hatchell, speaking at the close of the conference spring meeting, said while eight is "really an ideal number," the conference isn't actively recruiting another school.

Tulane was dropped from the Metro after the New Orleans school eliminated its basketball program in the wake of allegations of point shaving. The Metro requires that member institutions play basketball.

During the four-day meeting, the conference leaders agreed to form a close working relationship with the FBI to help keep drugs and other criminal activities out of athletics.

Group challenged

If Memphis State University is to graduate more black athletes, groups like the NAACP will have to encourage students to work harder, the school's president said May 22.

The Memphis chapter of the NAACP complains that the university exploits black athletes, worrying about them only until their athletics eligibility expires.

Memphis State has graduated four of the 43 grant-in-aid basketball players enrolled since 1972, but Thomas G. Carpenter, MSU president, said those figures give a "distorted view."

He said many students, athletes and nonathletes alike, leave school for several years, but eventually return to get a degree, the Associated Press reported.

Memphis State has enrolled 73 scholarship basketball players since 1968, Carpenter said.

"In addition to the 22 who have graduated, all but 15 still are in good standing and could return and get their degrees if they wanted to," he said.

In response to complaints from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Carpenter wrote to the group, saying it could help in raising the number of black graduates.

"If individuals such as those in your membership, parents, friends and MSU personnel will all work together to encourage athletes to complete their degrees, I feel sure we would be more successful," Carpenter wrote.

Carpenter also said Memphis State will hire an additional full-time tutor to work with basketball players.

Officials say the school provides two full-time tutors for athletes, in addition to a rotating pool of tutors made up of graduate students.

Boosters warned

Letters have been sent to 15 University of Florida boosters, including New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, telling them to keep a proper distance from the school's athletics program because of their involvement in NCAA rules violations.

Those violations, along with others, landed the football program on two years' probation and probably stripped the Gators of a national title.

The letters, sent last week by athletics director William Carr, tell the boosters what they no longer can do because of their previous activities that violated rules.

Florida sent out four versions of the letters, depending on the severity of violations. The NCAA approved the final wording.

New staff member

James Worley, an associate with the law firm of Winstead, McGuire, Sechrest and Minick in Dallas, has joined the NCAA national office staff as an enforcement representative.

Worley, a graduate of Austin College in Sherman, Texas, received a law degree from Texas Tech University. He was editor of the school's law review and was a member of the board of barristers.

He was student body vice-president and chair of the interfraternity council at Austin College. He earned varsity letters in football and baseball and was baseball team captain.

Worley and his wife, Angie, have two children.

Worley replaces Ronald E. Watson, who resigned May 12 to join the Tulane University athletics department.

Motion is filed

Mark Olensky, accused of a plot to shave points in Tulane University basketball games, has asked a judge to make prosecutors tell him about anything they have discovered that might be favorable to Olensky.

It was the same sort of discovery motion filed earlier by five other defendants in the case. District Judge Alvin Oser had given lawyers for Olensky an extra week to file.

Olensky, 21, of Fair Lawn, New Jersey, has pleaded innocent to charges of conspiracy and sports bribery.

His lawyer, Julian Murray Jr., has asked that prosecutors be made to spell out in full detail the charges against Olensky, that they detail any statements he is alleged to have made and that they reveal anything they have found that might be in his favor.

Murray also asked that Olensky be included in motions filed in late May to have the indictments thrown out on the grounds that an unauthorized person was in grand-jury chambers during the investigation and that an unrelated charge is included in the indictment.

Among the six under indictment are former players John Williams and David Dominique. Three former players are working with the prosecution, two under grants of immunity and one in a plea bargain.
