Cheeky move

Miami center fielder Rich Richardi is tagged out by Texas shortstop Coby Kerlin in College World Series play. Richardi was caught trying to steal second. Miami forced the Longhorns into a second game to decide the championship with a 2-1 victory June 9 and later won the title. See page 4.

More details on insurance provided

Although enrollment in the NCAA's lifetime catastrophic injury insurance program is steadily increasing, questions regarding the nature and intent of the coverage have been raised, according to American Sports Underwriters, Inc., administrator of the plan. In addition, there apparently have been incorrect statements made to the membership by other insurance companies and agents not totally familiar with the NCAA program.

The NCAA lifetime catastrophic injury insurance program, the enrollment deadline for which has been extended to August 1, will provide disability benefits and lifetime medical and rehabilitation benefits to any male or female student-athlete representing a participating institution.

One of the "alleged" drawbacks of the NCAA-sponsored program that apparently has been circulated among the membership is that the NCAA program is untested and may not always be available.

"This program is untested only because there never has been a comparable program in existence," said Thomas F. Wilson Jr., vice-president of the college division of American Sports Underwriters. "State Mutual (company underwriting the program) is an A-plus-rated company with more than $3 billion in assets and is the fifth oldest life insurance company in the country. State Mutual also desires a long-term relationship with the

The NCAA catastrophic injury insurance program is designed to cover catastrophic injury costs that exceed the limits of regular athletics accident medical coverage in either dollar amount or benefit period, provided the deductible amount is reached. By providing lifetime payments to meet the expenses of the injury, the NCAA program will minimize the cost problems for the student-athlete and his or her family.

"Benefits are payable in excess of other valid and collectible benefits in order to avoid duplication of payments and reduce premium costs," Wilson said. "Once benefits are payable, coverage is broad, complete and provides for every foreseeable financial need for seriously injured student-

Self-serving rule

One columnist says that the NCAA rule barring players from retaining sports agents while playing for a college is a self-serving rule that protects the school while it wrings its four years' worth out of the athletes. Page 2.

Top performers

Public concerns

Six of 10 Americans believe college sports are overemphasized and seven of 10 say gambling encourages athletes to cheat, according to a poll by the Associated Press and a newspaper group. Page 8.

A state court has ruled that Syracuse University should pay a partial tax assessment on the Carrier Dome. The school had claimed the dome as an educational building and thus nontaxable. Page 12.

Convention dates filled with meetings

The Association's fifth special Convention has attracted numerous related meetings beginning June 18 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in New Orleans.

While the Convention itself does not begin until the general round-table discussion session convenes at 2 p.m. June 20, 20 NCAA member conferences, four NCAA committees, the NCAA Council and the NCAA Presidents Commission all have scheduled meetings in New Orleans.

In addition, there will be three special meetings — Division I-A chief executive officers, the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, and Division I-A private universities.

The I-A CEOs meet from 8 to 10:30 a.m. June 20, and the AASCU meeting is scheduled from 9:30 to 11 a.m. that day. Division I-A private universities are scheduled from noon to 1:30 p.m. the following day.

Both the Council and the Presidents Commission have three sessions scheduled. The Council meets from 8 a.m. to noon and then from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. June 20 and will convene briefly when the Convention adjourns June 21. Similarly, the Commission will meet from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. June 20, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. that day and upon Convention adjournment June 21.

Convention registration begins at 8 a.m. June 20 and continues until 6 p.m. that day. Registration also is scheduled from 8 a.m. to adjournment June 21.

The actual Convention sessions are as follows:

Consideration of ethics codes sought

A four-year effort to develop codes of ethics for athletics directors, coaches and student-athletes will take another step toward completion if the NCAA Administrative Committee approves a recommendation of the NCAA Long Range Planning Committee later this month.

The planning committee reviewed a revised version of the proposed codes during its June 6-7 meeting in

- General round-table discussion session, 2 to 5 p.m. June 20.

- Delegates reception, 6:30 to 8 p.m. June 20.

- Business session (voting), 8 a.m. to noon and (if needed) 1:30 to 4 p.m. June 21.

Most observers believe the business will be completed well before the

The final four proposals to be acted upon by the delegates to the Association's fifth special Convention June 20-21 are sponsored by the NCAA Council, and one of them — Proposal No. 9 — relates to the initiatives of the Presidents Commission in attempting to treat major concerns in intercollegiate athletics.

Proposal No. 9, authorized by the Council in its April 15-17 meeting, is a resolution calling for a one-time affidavit program requiring every head coach and every varsity and recruited new student-athlete at NCAA member institutions to sign an affidavit regarding their current compliance with specifically designed

Computer selects names for Final Four tickets

The mystery was better than an Agatha Christie thriller. Who was going to get tickets to the 1986 NCAA Final Four?

That question was resolved June 5 with the help of Dallas Dan — a computer robot. About 1,000 applications were pulled out of 38,000 applications received — and they become the lucky ones to receive the coveted tickets to the 1986 NCAA Final Four in Dallas March 29 and 31 at Reunion Arena.

For the first time, a computer was programmed to assist in the random selection process of applications received for tickets to the Final Four.

"The demand for tickets to the Final Four always has exceeded the supply," said Rick Baker, executive director of the Dallas Final Four Committee. "Reunion Arena will hold around 16,000 seats for the Final Four, and we had approximately 3,000 to 4,000 seats available to the general public."

Legislation is no solution to player-agent problem

By Ed Fowler
Houston Chronicle

Fred Akers has a problem. The Texas football coach is fed up with agents plying his athletes with wine, women and pizza during their senior seasons in hopes of engaging them as clients when they turn pro. The problem is real and deserves serious consideration. The proposed solution is questionable at the very least.

Akers is looking to the legislature for relief, and he stands a chance of getting it. He supports a bill that calls for regulation of sports agents. California currently is the only state that has enacted such legislation.

Astute observers will note that Akers' teams have exhibited a ghastly habit of playing the first half of each season like the San Francisco 49ers and the second half like the Bad News Bovines. One can almost plot the Longhorns' season each September 1: a beginning in the top 10 or 15 in the nation, a dazzling ascent to No. 1 and a swoon that tumbles them right out of the Southwest Athletic Conference championship. It would look something like a chart of home sales in Houston, 1975-85.

An astute observer himself, Akers has discerned that pressure on his young men intensifies as their senior seasons progress. Agents turn up brandishing all sorts of goodies and promising everything but the Heisman Trophy, melted down and recast as a Porsche. On the Wednesday before the 1984 Texas-Oklahoma game, Akers said, an agent entertained several UT players at an Austin hotel. "There was beer, whiskey and pizza," he complained.

"This was about the fifth Wednesday night they met with different agents," Akers said in testimony in support of the bill. "They are not offering only money, but drugs, privileges with women, automobiles, apartments, furniture, clothing. And it goes beyond the players to providing services to the family."

A turnkey operation, one might say.

Testimony before the House Business and Commerce Committee abounded with horror stories. Akers said agents have instructed players to feign injury to avoid real injury and jeopardizing a pro contract. Other interested parties said agents have lied about representing pro stars, bilked kids out of advances and skipped, taken money from pro clubs to give players advice against their interests.

The bill aimed at righting these abuses has a distinctly orange tint. Its sponsor, Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, is a UT law graduate. Another important backer is Travis Roach, an all-SWC guard at Texas in 1972 who played for a year with the New York Jets and is now a lawyer and an agent. It would serve the work for Akeem Olajuwon for one more year.

The issue thus is whether the legislature, which could be spending more time on where our next drop of water will come from and how to keep talented teachers in the classroom, ought to join the NCAA in helping out coaches and good agents at the expense of college athletes. As for the abuses, the state already has on the books statutes dealing with misrepresentation, fraud and theft that apply to agents as well as the rest of us.

It should be noted, too, that the state wouldn't collect nearly enough in licensing fees to fund the new bureaucracy that would be required to administer and enforce provisions of the law.

In fact, it takes two to break the NCAA's applicable rule, and coaches could look first to their players. The problem is that there is no effective sanction against them. It's not especially rare for a college football jock to take on an agent anymore — Mike Rozier admitted he signed with Mike Trope while still at Nebraska — and if a coach finds out, he's not likely to turn in his star and lose him.

For the young men, the wooing by agents is a way of reliving those glorious days of college recruiting when so much attention, and other things, were lavished on them. It's all part of the star syndrome; and having helped perpetuate it, the colleges should be prepared to live with the consequences.

The sensible approach would be for the NCAA to abandon its rule and for coaches to give players guidance on how to find a reputable agent whenever they determine they need one: Ask for the guy's degrees, certifications and testimonials from established clients first, his large pepperoni and six-pack second. Check for traces of white powder around his nose and beware of ladies who fall in love punctually at 11 every night.

Meanwhile, redwood hot tubs we can live with, but the agent regulation is a California kind of idea that ought to remain there.

Columnary Craft

interests of coaches — others face the same problems Akers identified — and reputable agents, who don't approach players until their eligibility is completed only to find many of them already snatched up.

Randy Hendricks of Houston, one of the ethical ones, says on the one hand such a law would benefit him; but from a principle standpoint, denying young men expert advice on planning their futures makes no sense. If passed, the bill would give the force of law to an NCAA rule that bars players from retaining agents while playing for a college.

It's a self-serving rule predicated on protecting the school while it wrings its four years' worth out of the athletes. It has endured only with the acquiescence of the NFL. Top prospects in basketball and baseball routinely turn pro when the market is ready for them. You can bet your 1.50 ERA that Cliff Gustafson, the Texas baseball coach, would have loved to hold on to Roger Clemens and Calvin Schiraldi for another season, your 15 rebounds a game that Guy Lewis at Houston could have found

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

In the May 24 issue of The NCAA News, statements were made both pro and con in relation to the problems all universities are faced with in terms of athletes' academic excellence. I can see where a coach is placed in a situation where he or she has to make demands on the athlete to create academic excellence; also, if he or she doesn't win, society says that he or she must be replaced. This places a great deal of pressure on the athletics administration and also on the university officials.

I think that we should evaluate ourselves and the departments (athletics) to see what we are doing to solve the problem or better this situation. For you see, if we fail to get the great athletes, the athletics program will diminish, thus making the finances unavailable. If this happens, there will be no athletics staff, coaches, athletics counselors; no NCAA or any other conferences because of lack of funds. Without great athletes, television appearances will be limited. We can go on and on.

I think it's time to think of the athletes as human beings and not pieces of meat that can be bought and sold. If we want to keep the athletics program, I think the universities' officials, faculty, coaches and athletics administrators have to sit down and come up with the solution of a lifetime to solve some of

"This fee would be part of the scholarship agreement. It would be figured in right along with tuition, books and fees. It would help make them like 'normal' college students."

College presidents have an opportunity to right the wrongs

By William T. O'Hara

It is no great secret — in fact, it is an obvious and embarrassing stain on the reputation of higher education in modern times. Even the casual reader of daily sports pages knows that intercollegiate athletics is having a tough time keeping its house in order.

Reports of recruiting violations by coaches, illegal use of steroids and point shaving by athletes, and numerous other NCAA rule violations capture headlines and erode the public's confidence in higher education to solve its own problems creatively and forcefully.

The criticism is leveled at coaches, student-athletes and overzealous alumni boosters. Some coaches justifiably have been subjected to institutional and, in a few cases, civil punishment. But these actions will not solve the problem, because the solutions must emanate from one source — the offices of college and university presidents.

Presidential concern and involvement in the matters of intercollegiate athletics, both on the campus and national levels through the NCAA, is token at best and nonexistent at its worst. Presidents at major institutions where infractions have occurred have failed to harness the "obsession to win" and the "victory at all costs" attitudes that have seized control of their programs. But all campus chief executives, at small and large schools alike, are at fault. We have chosen to ignore the growing problem, to criticize in private and boast in public of the purity of our own programs. We have assumed, wrongly, that there was no reason to get involved in someone else's problems. In our myopic contentment, we have failed to see the implications for higher education.

Lackluster presidential support for the goals of the NCAA is most obvious at NCAA annual meetings, where policy and rules are established. Since attendance by presidents is not mandatory, athletics departments' personnel often are called upon to attend and vote the issues. They cannot reasonably be expected to reflect comprehensive institutional priorities when voting on the proposals. The result is a lost opportunity for insuring a balanced perspective between academics and athletics, which can only be contributed by a chief executive officer.

Despite this history of presidential noninvolvement, I sense that a spirit of reform is stirring in our ranks, based on concrete new efforts put forth by the NCAA. Last year, a Presidents Commission was formed within the Association, comprising 44 elected college and university presidents. The Commission's mission is to identify and address major questions related to the operation of intercollegiate athletics. During the early months of the Commission's existence, major inquiries have been initiated into the integrity of intercollegiate athletics and the economic issues affecting college sports programs.

In June of this year, the first results of these efforts will be seen. The Presidents Commission will convene a special NCAA Convention for college and university CEOs. The Convention should see the endorsement of new proposals to eliminate practices which debilitate college athletics. New measures will be introduced to insure the balanced development of athletics programs in the future.

The special Convention is an unusual step, and a critical one. The reactions to the proposed codes.

Former NCAA President J. Neils Thompson, University of Texas, Austin, a member of the committee, began developing the three codes in 1982.

The Long Range Planning Committee also took these actions, all of which will be reviewed by the NCAA Council in August or the Administrative Committee in the interim:

- Endorsed the concept of developing videocassettes regarding drug use and gambling for use with student-athletes, which will be discussed by the Special NCAA Program Evaluation Subcommittee next month. The committee also recommended investigation of the cost of producing videocassettes on the role of the NCAA and on the Association's rules and regulations for use with student-athletes and coaches.

- Recommended a revision of Case No. 141 to permit a student-athlete to continue to receive his or her athletics grant for the full year in which the individual's eligibility is completed in the sport for which the grant was awarded, so long as any action that professionalizes the student-athlete occurs after that eligibility is completed and the individual continues as a full-time student.

- Recommended that the Council sponsor legislation to require a member institution's appropriate admissions officials to state in writing at the time a prospective student-athlete signs a national, conference or institutional letter-of-intent that the prospect is admissible to that institution at the time of the signing.

- Recommended that the Division I Steering Committee consider scheduling a Division I summer meeting (canceled in 1985) in future years, at least those during which no Divisions I-A and I-AA summer legislative meetings are held, and that chief executive officers and coaches in sports other than football and basketball be added to those invited to attend.

- Agreed to report to the Council the committee's concern that with three competing programs currently offering catastrophic-injury insurance, there may be no such program available to the membership in the future. The planning committee will suggest that member institutions be urged to subscribe to the program developed by the NCAA Insurance Committee in order to assure that it has an opportunity to succeed.

- Affirmed its February decision favoring continuation of the Association's current amateurism standards. The committee vote was seven in favor, one opposed and three abstentions.

Among the other topics discussed in the meeting were these:

- Conference alignments for men's and women's programs, noting that five additional conferences began to offer programs for both men and women in 1984-85 and another men's and women's conference joined the NCAA.

- The Association's new project to attempt to measure the success of athletics programs other than via the won-lost record.

- The NCAA Council's program to enhance integrity and compliance with NCAA legislation, as reported in the April 24 issue of The NCAA News.

- The future financial structure of the Association.

- Suggestions by the two student-athletes serving on the committee — Jay Bilas, Duke University, and Ellen Ferguson, University of California, Los Angeles. The committee asked that the students' viewpoints be featured in a future issue of the News.

- Identification of other trends and emerging issues in society that may have application to college athletics.

- Opportunities for women in athletics administration and coaching, as well as the number of women athletics administrators with integrated assignments involving both men's and women's sports. This will be a topic at the committee's February 1986 meeting.

The committee is chaired by William J. Flynn, Boston College, former NCAA secretary-treasurer and president.

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 24

Out-of-season basketball practice

Under the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 3-4(b), postseason practice in basketball shall be prohibited. As set forth on O.I. 302 (page 76, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), "practice" is any meeting, activity or instruction held at the direction of, or supervised by, any member or members of an institution's coaching staff. At its recent meeting, the Administrative Committee affirmed that it would not be permissible for a member of an institution's coaching staff in basketball to observe student-athletes in pickup basketball games prior to October 15 even if such activities are not arranged directly by the institution's coach. [Note: Member institutions' women's athletics programs are exempt from these restrictions until August 1, 1985.]

Expenses for summer athletics competition

As set forth in Constitution 3-1(g)-(iii), it is not permissible for a member institution to provide expenses for a student-athlete competing in an event that occurs when the student-athlete is not regularly enrolled in a full-time program of studies during the regular academic year, or not eligible to represent the institution — except that expenses may be paid for a student-athlete to compete only in regularly scheduled intercollegiate events and established national championships occurring between terms and during the summer months, provided the student-athlete is representing his or her institution and was eligible for intercollegiate competition the preceding term, and in international competition approved by the NCAA Council. Further, as indicated in Case No. 7 (page 259, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), it is not permissible for a sponsor, other than an individual upon whom the student is naturally or legally dependent or the nonprofessional organization that is sponsoring the competition in question, to provide expenses for a student to participate in athletics competition.

As set forth in Constitution 3-1(h)-(3), it is permissible for a member institution to provide a student-athlete actual and necessary expenses for participation in Olympic, Pan American and World University Games qualifying competition that occurs at any time during the calendar year.

Outside competition — summer basketball

As set forth in Constitution 3-9(b), a student-athlete shall be ineligible if he or she participates in organized basketball competition except while representing his or her institution in intercollegiate competition and except as permitted under the provisions specified in Constitution 3-9(b). Member institutions are reminded that Constitution 3-9(b) applies to both men's and women's intercollegiate basketball programs in all divisions. As set forth in Constitution 3-9(b)-(1), a member of an institution's intercollegiate basketball team may participate in an approved summer league only with the specific written permission of the director of athletics. In addition, a student-athlete may participate on only one team in an approved summer league, and member institutions should consult The NCAA News for a listing of those leagues that have received NCAA approval. Further, a student-athlete may participate in other basketball competition permitted under the exception provisions of Constitution 3-9(b)-(2), (3) or (4).

Clarifications regarding agents

A column by George White of the Houston Chronicle, reprinted in the May 22, 1985, issue of The NCAA News, stated inaccurately that a student-athlete cannot speak with an agent until his college eligibility is completed. While it is true that NCAA legislation does not permit an individual to agree to be represented in marketing athletic ability without the individual losing collegiate eligibility, any individual (including an enrolled student-athlete) is free to speak with agents and to hear presentations concerning the services that particular agents may provide, their overall experience and terms of their proposed representation agreements.

In addition, a number of member institutions have established career-counseling panels designed to advise student-athletes concerning future professional athletics careers. Among the primary purposes of such panels are the coordination of institutional policy regarding contacts by player agents and assistance in the selection of competent representation, including the scheduling of formal presentations by player agents.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

No, I'm not saying to give the athlete anything. I feel strongly that he or she should work equally hard in the classroom as on the field of competition. If the athlete has problems with reading, I feel he or she should be placed in a reading class for the duration of eligibility.

Reading classes should have qualified or certified instructors involved. This program could be funded by the athletics department, if the university will not. Increase the tutor programs by getting instructors involved with the tutor programs with pay. This will give the athlete one-on-one instruction, which I feel he or she will need. Make a special effort to encourage the high school athlete to motivate herself or himself to become a university or major-college qualifier.

I feel that the NCAA could hold seminars at the high school level with all coaches and counselors to explain Proposal Nos. 48 and 56. This I feel will be a big step in the right direction.

college, he or she shouldn't be admitted, and so the presidents have taken it upon themselves to make retention of athletes in school a high priority.

"... We can't give athletics scholarships, and we are not in the business of being in business to make money athletically. Of course, we're delighted when we do draw crowds; and we recognize that athletics has a bonding effect on the student, the university and what's called its permanent community — employees, professors and the area where it's located. But at the same time, we feel athletics has to complement the university life rather than compete with it.

"We try to schedule more of our games on weekends so they don't interfere with classes, and we encourage students to miss practices or games if they feel it's needed for academic reasons.

"We hope we're providing a model for the rest of Division III without saying our way is the only way.

"Division I schools would have to find their own way of working out things, but they will have to come to terms with the academic-athletics balance, probably through a combination of rule-making at the NCAA Convention and tighter local surveillance."

The right of the university to retain the championship was confirmed by final action of the executive committee of the SEC April 3, 1985...the governing rules of the SEC provided for no other review (conference presidents voted May 30 to strip Florida of its title).

"Therefore, by law, by any standard of fairness, and in our hearts, 1984 always will be the year of the Gator. As a university, we shall continue to proclaim the 1984 team as the SEC football champions.

Tulane's fortunes weren't that good when they were in the conference (Tulane dropped out of the SEC two years after Georgia Tech did). Just look at the standings each year. meeting will represent only the fifth time in the 80-year history of the NCAA that a special Convention has been called. The meeting offers an unmatched opportunity for the top leaders of higher education to establish strong policies influencing intercollegiate athletics.

Of course, the presidents must be there to make the Convention successful. Executive officers from all three member divisions of the NCAA will be invited. The agenda will be difficult and complex, but it calls for the undivided attention of all college presidents.

Walter Byers, NCAA executive director, sees the success or failure of the Convention in terms of "whether the policies of intercollegiate athletics are going to be set by the chief executive officers or by a minority of coaches and enslaved alumni and boosters who think that the order of the day is to win at any cost."

I believe the presidents will respond in unprecedented numbers to this call for action. They must, if certain unethical practices in intercollegiate athletics are to be stopped cold. College presidents sense that they have evaded their responsibilities in this area, and that this may be the last chance to rectify the problems that haunt the athletics programs and influence the public's perception of higher education as a whole.

Hurricanes blow past Texas for baseball crown

Miami (Florida) parlayed five Texas errors and the offense of designated hitter Greg Ellena into a 10-6 victory June 11 to win its second NCAA Division I Baseball Championship in four years.

Ellena pounded out four of Miami's 14 hits to push the Hurricanes, who won the title in 1982, to 65-13. Texas, finishing second for the second straight year, ended the season with a 63-17 mark.

The Hurricanes built a 4-0 lead with the help of four Texas errors. Don Rowland's first-inning single scored the first run before a Texas throwing error allowed Jon Leake, who had walked, to score on what could have been an inning-ending double play.

Mike Fiore led off a four-run third inning with a double and scored one out later on a passed ball. Ellena, who tied a College World Series record with 22 total bases and was named the tournament's most valuable player, then collected his second hit of the game to chase Texas starter Bruce Ruffin, 13-3.

Rusty DeBold and Chris Hart greeted Texas reliever Michael Poehl with singles to score Ellena. DeBold then scored when Texas right fielder Dennis Cook misplayed a bloop and Hart later scored on another Texas throwing error to give Miami a 6-0 lead.

After Texas scored one run each in the third and fourth, two singles and a fifth Texas error loaded the bases for Miami in the fifth. Catcher Julio Solis, starting in place of Chris Magno, who earlier in the day was diagnosed to have blockage in the main vein of his right arm, then walked one run in and center fielder

Texas catcher Robbie Byers is too late to stop Miami's Chris Magno from scoring

Rick Richardi's fly to center scored the Hurricanes' eighth run of the game. In the sixth, Miami's Calvin James led off with a triple and scored on Fiore's third hit. Ellena made the score 10-2 with his fourth straight single which scored Fiore.

Texas' Dodd Johnson singled home a run in the sixth and the Longhorns used a three-run seventh to chase starter Kevin Sheary, who had six strikeouts in 6½ innings. Reliever Ric Raether shut the door on Texas to pick up his third save of the series to go with two victories, one of which was a 2-1 victory over Texas.

"This is a special team, unlike any other we've had," Miami coach Ron Fraser said. "We've had better talent, but this team had the chemistry and that's what made the difference. This team didn't know how to lose."

Miami became the fifth team to come out of the loser's bracket to win two straight games against the winner's bracket champion.

The final-game crowd of 9,380 pushed total attendance for the series to 125,970, an all-time record.

Joining Ellena on the all-tournament team were teammates Magno and Sheary, who won three tournament games. Texas players on the team were second baseman Bill Bates, outfielder Dennis Cook and pitcher Greg Swindell. The rest of the team consisted of first baseman Will Clark, shortstop Frank Davis and outfielder Dan Van Cleave of Mississippi State, and third baseman Jeff King and outfielder Ralph Kraus of Arkansas.

CEO rejects funds

University of Wisconsin, Madison, Chancellor Irving Shain has forbidden the school's athletics department from accepting any money from the Great Badger Sports Raffle.

Shain also instructed athletics director Elroy L. Hirsch not to accept "personally or on behalf of the athletics department any contributions from Butch's Badger Benefit or related organizations."

Butch's Badger Benefit, Inc., is the sponsor of the statewide raffle, which organizers had hoped would raise as much as $2 million for UW sports programs.

Moccasins place three on all-America team

John Pleicones, who had five hits in the 1985 Division II Baseball Championship, was one of three Florida Southern players named to this year's Division II all-America team selected by the American Baseball Coaches Association.

Shortstop Pleicones' hits included a home run in Florida Southern's 15-5 victory over Cal Poly-Pomona in the Division II championship game last month. Dave McCorkle, Florida Southern's winning pitcher in the first game of the championship, and outfielder Robert Green were the other Moccasins representatives on the first team.

Runner-up Cal Poly-Pomona placed two players on the first team, as did Valdosta State. Pomona's John Love, a second baseman, and pitcher Mike Munoz were named to the team, along with Valdosta State pitcher Chris Nixon and outfielder Mike Jones.

Following are the Division II all-America teams selected by the ABCA:

Effective promotion a key to athletics program success

Effective marketing and promotional strategies are key factors for a successful athletics program, Jim White, University of Iowa sports marketing director, said at the NCAA Professional Development Seminar in Cincinnati.

The two-day seminar attracted 156 participants representing 36 states.

"It is critical that universities at all levels of competition develop the expertise they need to effectively promote their athletics program," White said. "We face increased pressures to attract fans and community support. We must meet the challenges if our program is to be viable."

Due in part to White's promotional campaign for the women's basketball game between Iowa and Ohio State University, a record crowd of 22,157 packed Iowa's Carver-Hawkeye Arena February 3, breaking the previous single-game attendance mark of 10,622.

In promoting athletics programs, universities must be concerned with image. William H. Millsaps, executive sports editor for the Richmond Times-Dispatch, stressed honesty with the media in creating the proper image.

"You must create an impression that the athletics department has nothing to hide," Millsaps said. "This is important at a time when the general public has a diminished respect and confidence in college athletics."

In a discussion of the bid process and current trends in college sports radio, Robert Fowler, vice-president and general manager of Learfield Communications, said university officials must decide which is more important—coverage or rights fees.

He said increased coverage is costly, requires sponsorship and results in significantly lower rights fees. Large rights fees mean less coverage, he said.

Other topics at the seminar included athletics merchandising; promotional opportunities in print, radio and television, and athletics funding sources.

The two-day seminar is an annual event for promotion and marketing directors and provides the opportunity to discuss problems and issues with other professionals in the field. Cassette tapes of each session will be available for purchase at the end of June.

Macho image: Minnesota opts to gopher it

The University of Minnesota's Golden Gopher has done some body-building since the last football season; and when Goldy hits the field this fall, he'll be much more formidable.

It seems fans didn't identify much with the present gopher mascot—actually a ground squirrel—who didn't quite measure up to the macho image of an athlete. So the field gopher is making way for a meaner-looking Goldy.

The revamped version of the mascot also will be standardized for the first time in the university's history and will appear on official university uniforms.

The change is an attempt to help fans identify the mascot—and to identify the mascot with the university's athletics teams, said Gerald O'Dell, assistant to the athletics director for promotions and marketing.

"Wisconsin has one badger. We're going to have one gopher," O'Dell said.

Mooradian, four others earn NACDA posts

Andrew T. Mooradian, University of New Hampshire athletics director, has been elected president of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA).

Mooradian, who served as the president of the East Coast Athletic Conference during the past academic year, was one of five officers elected at NACDA's 20th annual convention.

A member of the NCAA Council since 1981, Mooradian has served on seven Association committees, including the Division I-AA Football Committee, the Nominating Committee, the Football Television Committee, the Division I Steering Committee and the Professional Sports Liaison Committee. In addition, he was a member of the National Football Hall of Fame Committee and the Special Division I Committee on Criteria.

Also elected as NACDA officers were Homer C. Rice, Georgia Institute of Technology, first vice-president; Dave Hart, University of Missouri, Columbia, second vice-president; Carl

Andrew T. Mooradian

R. Miller, University of the Pacific, third vice-president, and Vincent Cullen, Community College of Rhode Island, secretary.

Lacrosse rules changes intended to create more excitement

Rules changes intended to create a more exciting game and a vote to recommend expansion of the Division I tournament bracket highlighted the June 3-6 meeting of the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee in Snowmass, Colorado.

"After receiving input from various groups, including coaches, players and fans, the committee made two changes it believes will lead to a faster-paced, more exciting game," said E. Richard Watts, committee chair.

Effective next season, teams will be permitted to use a minimum of three and a maximum of five long sticks at any one time during the game.

The committee defined short sticks as those measuring 40 to 46 inches and long sticks as those between 56 and 72 inches. Sticks shorter than 40 inches, longer than 72 inches or measuring longer than 40 inches and shorter than 56 inches will be illegal.

The committee also voted to specify that teams may be warned for stalling in the goal area, even though the offensive unit is being closely defended.

"It also is significant to note that the committee discussed and voted to include language emphasizing that offensive and defensive stalling will be strictly enforced as those rules are written," Watts said.

"It should be noted that the members of the committee did not take these steps in an attempt to legislate a deliberate offensive attack out of the game. It was the sense of the committee that significant action had to be taken to promote a more exciting style of play. We believe these rules changes are positive steps in that direction."

In other action, the committee voted to recommend expansion of the Division I championship bracket from eight to 12 teams. The new format, which will be reviewed by the Special NCAA Championships Standards Committee before submission to the Association's Executive Committee, would include the seeding of the top eight teams, with the first through fourth seeds receiving a first-round bye.

Teams seeded fifth through eighth would play first-round games against four teams that would be placed in the bracket and paired geographically for first-round contests.

If expansion to 12 teams is approved, first-round games in 1986 would be played Wednesday, May 14. Second-round games would be played Sunday, May 18. The semifinals would be Saturday, May 24, and the championship Monday, May 26. The committee also recommended the Sunday-Saturday-Monday dates for an eight-team tournament.

Due to scheduling problems, the U.S. Military Academy withdrew its bid to host the 1986 Division I championship, the first under the final-four concept. The committee recommended Rutgers University, New Brunswick, as the 1986 host.

Regarding the Division III tournament, the committee responded to a directive from the Executive Committee by recommending a change in seedings and pairings for the eight-team play-off. If approved, the 1986 tournament bracket would include the seeding of the top four teams, with teams five through eight being placed in the bracket geographically.

"The Executive Committee has asked all sports committees to review the seeding and pairing philosophies used in those championships that do not generate income for the purposes of reducing expenses," said Watts. "We believe the move to four-team seeding, combined with geographic pairings for first-round games, will reduce significantly the costs associated with the administration of the Division III championship without sacrificing the quality of competition in that tournament."

Recommended dates for the 1986 Division III tournament include first-round games Wednesday, May 7; semifinals Saturday, May 10, and the championship Saturday, May 17. On-campus sites will be used for all Division III play-off games.

Branta, Conley receive honors

Cross country and distance runner Cathy Branta of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and Mike Conley, horizontal jumper from the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, have been named the first recipients of the Jumbo Elliott Award, which recognizes the outstanding female and male collegiate track and field athletes. The awards were presented June 4 in Newton Square, Pennsylvania.

The awards are given in memory of James "Jumbo" Elliott, track and field coach at Villanova University. He coached 30 Olympians and 86 NCAA champions during his 47 years with the Wildcats. His teams won eight NCAA team titles.

Branta has excelled in most of the distance events—1,500 meters, 3,000 meters and 5,000 meters. She won the 1984 NCAA Division I cross country title. This spring, she won the 1,500 meters and 3,000 meters in the NCAA Division I Women's Outdoor Track Championships, establishing a meet record in the 1,500 event.

Conley has won eight indoor and Regency in Dallas, and Baker explained what happened to applications after they were received by the NCAA.

"The requirements were to send your name and address and a check or money order for the tickets ordered to a post office box in Kansas City. Orders were received from March 1 to April 15. The applications were opened, verified, and the information from the application was put into a computer. After the April 15 deadline had passed, the post office box was closed and applications were transferred to a computer tape, which was then sent to our office in Dallas.

"Tom Perkins, a former Southern Methodist University professor, and now president of Tricraft Info Systems, assisted us with the computer program to select the ticket recipients."

Baker explained that the information from the tape was placed in SMU's main-frame computer and then was transferred onto a small computer for the selection process. There were 38,000 records of data and eight million characters on the computer tape.

"The program that Tom Perkins created is what is called a random number generator," said Baker, with starting points to begin the computer tied into the time of day. This ensures the randomness of the drawing.

"At the split-second the button is hit, the program starts the selection process, and every application received has an equal chance of being selected. It also is impossible to have the same record come up twice."

Richard D. Schultz, athletics director at the University of Virginia, who will become chair of the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee September 1, started the computer program to select the recipients.

Those who were selected for tickets will receive them by mail by June 30. Checks also will be returned by June 30 to those whose applications were not selected.

Affidavit

nated rules.

The other three proposals offered by the Council—Nos. 10, 11 and 12—all are intended to resolve immediate situations that would result in unnecessary expenditures by member institutions if such action could not be taken now.

Affidavit program

Proposal No. 9 represents a strong Council position on the issues of improper financial aid in the sports of football and basketball, as well as excesses in many other sports. It relates to the survey of chief executive officers conducted by the Presidents Commission inasmuch as that survey reflected overwhelming support for essentially maintaining the NCAA's current financial aid legislation.

Only 13 percent of the responding CEOs favored increasing the maximum limit on an athletically related grant-in-aid for student-athletes in all sports (only 12 percent in Division I, with 17 percent in Division I-A). The Division I presidents, in particular, did not favor any type of increase in aid for student-athletes, whether only in football and basketball (only six percent), by using the Federal government's cost-of-education definition instead of the NCAA limit (34 percent), increasing the limit only for high-need student-athletes (40 percent) or permitting work during term time (44 percent).

Coupled with those findings, the Council noted that a survey of the NCAA sports committees did not favor any pronounced changes in the Association's financial aid provisions as they related to amateurism and that chief executive officers clearly question the current level of compliance with NCAA legislation.

As a result, the Council's resolution to establish the affidavit program notes the necessity for a detailed review of all financial support provided to student-athletes—specifically including that provided by the institution, the institution's staff members, outside individuals and organizations, and equipment manufacturers or distributors, as well as a review of head coaches' knowledge of such assistance and possible involvement in such assistance.

Specifically, Proposal No. 9—if adopted by a majority of all delegates present and voting at the special Convention—would require each member institution to administer affidavits to all varsity and new recruited student-athletes prior to or shortly after the beginning of the 1985-86 academic year.

The affidavit would be in a form prescribed by the NCAA Council. It would ask specific questions concerning the financial assistance and athletically related benefits being received or to be received by the student-athlete.

A similar affidavit, also developed by the Council, would be administered in the same manner to every head coach of an intercollegiate sport at each member institution. It would determine the awareness and knowledge of the head coach as to the financial assistance and other benefits being received or to be received by the student-athletes in that coach's sport. It also would determine the coach's knowledge of the source of any improper aid available or to be available, within or outside the institution.

The affidavit program would be administered on the campuses through the direction of the CEOs. Institutions that failed to administer the affidavits would be ineligible for all NCAA championships (for men and women) and all postseason football games during the 1985-86 academic year.

If a head coach failed to complete and sign the affidavit and the institution continued to employ that individual in a coaching capacity, the institution would be ineligible for NCAA championships or postseason games in 1985-86 in that coach's sport(s).

Any student-athlete who failed to complete and sign the affidavit would be ineligible for intercollegiate competition for the 1985-86 academic year.

Convention

circularized 4 p.m. adjournment on the final day.

The complete schedule of Convention-related meetings in New Orleans accompanies this article.

Apparently at least half of the member institutions attending the Convention will be represented by chief executive officers. Of the first 354 member institutions returning their delegate-appointment forms (as of June 7), the CEO was listed as a delegate on 178, or 50.3 percent. That total included 131 Division I presidents or chancellors, 33 from Division II and 14 from Division III.

Actual attendance at the special Convention is difficult to predict inasmuch as this is the first time the Association has conducted a Convention in the month of June, and the filing of delegate-appointment forms may have been slowed by the end of the spring term and the Memorial Day holiday.

athletes for life."

Some institutions apparently are being told by other companies that it would be advantageous to negotiate their own contracts rather than participate in a group plan. Wilson, however, believes that a group policy is the best choice, since most medical insurance is written on a group basis.

"The NCAA Insurance Committee spent 2½ years designing this policy and negotiating with reputable insurance carriers for this coverage," Wilson said. "This negotiating power is much more than any one institution could exercise. Further, the ultimate cost of the program will be less for each institution when the coverage is purchased by a group of institutions acting together."

Wilson said the accusation that the NCAA plan has no death benefit nor coverage for coaches or guests of the institution is irrelevant. He said the

The resolution states clearly that the administration of the affidavits would not affect the processing of violations of NCAA legislation that occur before the signing of the affidavits. It also proposes that the compliance issue treated in the resolution would continue to be addressed in the future through the existing certification of compliance procedure, the annual student-athlete statement pre-required to schedule the meetings.

So that members know whether the meetings would be held this year if the proposal is adopted, the Council members from I-A and I-AA already have decided not to schedule the meetings for 1985.

Division I-A criteria

Proposal No. 11 will be voted upon by Division I-A members only, with scribed in the constitution and the ongoing NCAA enforcement program.

The affidavit program would be administered on the campuses through the direction of the CEOs. Institutions that failed to administer the affidavits would be ineligible for all NCAA championships and all postseason football games during the 1985-86 academic year.

Summer meetings

Proposal No. 10 recognizes the fact that the majority of Divisions I-A and I-AA members reportedly are not interested in conducting midyear legislative meetings this year, especially in light of the special Convention. Several cited the cost of attending another meeting.

The Council's proposal amends the constitution (two-thirds approval by all delegates present and voting) to say that the appropriate members of the Council (Division I-A or Division I-AA) may schedule the summer legislative meetings for their respective subdivisions in any given year, rather than requiring such meetings every year. A two-thirds vote of the appropriate Council members would be majority approval required.

It would reinstate in the I-A membership criteria in Bylaw 11 the series of steps for reaching the required minimum of eight varsity sports for women. That step-up process was deleted through a series of actions at the January 1985 Convention, meaning that Division I-A members would have to comply with the eight-women's-sports requirement during the 1986-87 academic year, rather than in 1987-88 as specified previously.

If the proposal passes, I-A institutions would have to meet the six-sport women's requirement (along with all of Division I) in 1985-86, sponsor seven in 1986-87 and comply with the eight-sport requirement in 1987-88.

Playing rules

The final proposal before the special Convention would amend Bylaw 3-5 to delay by one year the effective date of the requirement adopted last January that members must conduct all of their intercollegiate contests under NCAA playing rules in those sports for which the Association develops playing rules.

This Council proposal also is designed to save institutions unnecessary expense by permitting time for the sports committees to develop exception provisions in the rules so institutions—especially in Division III—do not have to spend money to comply with certain portions of the playing rules that are more administrative than competitive in nature.

The legislation would become effective August 1, 1986, instead of this year, if the proposal is adopted. Football and men's basketball already must use NCAA rules in all intercollegiate competition, and women's basketball is exempted from the Proposal No. 12 delay at the request of women's basketball interests.

Proposal No. 12 amends a divided bylaw, so each division, by majority vote, can adopt or reject it independent of the other divisions.

The highest attendance figure among the four previous special Conventions was 972 (including representatives of 494 member institutions) at the third special Convention in January 1976 at St. Louis. That turnout is misleading, however, because the special session was conducted one day prior to that year's annual Convention and attracted many because of that scheduling.

Attendance at the other three special NCAA Conventions:

- August 1973, Chicago: 573 in attendance, including 376 member institutions.

- August 1975, Chicago: 821 in attendance, including 455 member institutions.

- December 1981, St. Louis, 740 in attendance, including 364 member institutions.

Next week's issue of the News (June 19) will be a special Convention issue and will be distributed at registration to all Convention delegates.

purpose of the NCAA program is to provide lifetime benefits to seriously injured student-athletes.

The NCAA program is an excess plan and pays once the injured student-athlete's medical expenses have exceeded the deductible amount of $25,000 and all other valid and collective insurance programs have paid their benefits. The Association offers a basic athletics accident medical insurance program, which includes an accidental death and dismemberment provision and covers medical expenses up to a maximum of $25,000 per occurrence, which is where the catastrophic program begins.

One of the excess provisions of the NCAA program is that 50 percent of any wrongdoer judgment is used to offset payments from the policy.

"The NCAA plan is not designed to overpay unreasonably for medical, rehabilitation and disability expenses," Wilson said. "Fifty percent of any wrongdoer action judgment is one of several payments that the policy offsets. This is an understandable and common provision in many insurance programs and reduces premium costs. Benefits would be unaffordable if the program did not take into account such duplications."

If a member institution is interested in receiving a personal presentation of the program, ASU will provide a representative for an in-person presentation. Selected insurance brokers have been authorized to represent ASU and market the NCAA catastrophic insurance program.

Institutions that are interested in enrollment in the program or obtaining information on the expanded personalized service available throughout the regional network of insurance brokers should contact ASU, 300 Unicorn Drive, Woburn, Massachusetts 01801. # Overemphasis, gambling cause sports problems, public says

Six of 10 Americans believe sports in college are overemphasized, and seven of 10 say gambling on college sports encourages athletes to cheat, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

Thirty-three percent said the role of sports in college is "about right."

"I think the general tone that you've picked up in your survey is a concern about the integrity of athletics in general," said John R. Davis, president of the NCAA. "This is our concern, too — whether athletics is overemphasized, whether there is too much emphasis on 'win at all costs' and gross cheating."

Respondents in the Media General-AP poll were asked, "Do you think the role of sports in college today is overemphasized, underemphasized, or is emphasized about right?" Sixty percent said overemphasized, two percent said underemphasized, 33 percent said about right, and five percent were unsure.

When asked, "Do you think gambling on college sports encourages athletes to cheat, or not?" — 70 percent said it did and 20 percent said it did not. Ten percent were unsure.

The nationwide telephone survey of 1,402 adults was conducted shortly after Tulane University abolished its basketball program following the indictments of eight people on bribery and conspiracy charges. The eight, including three basketball players, were charged in a scheme to shave points to control the outcome of three games last season.

Sixty-four percent of the people questioned said they had heard about the Tulane investigation; 28 percent said they felt Tulane officials did the right thing in abolishing the basketball program.

Davis said Tulane and other well-publicized cases accounted for the impression that cheating is widespread.

"I personally would hazard a guess that it isn't widespread right now. I don't think there are that many fixes on," he said.

The general public apparently is against payments to athletes. In the poll, 76 percent of the respondents said athletes should not be paid for competing in major-college sports.

"We're not proposing they be paid to play. We're proposing that they be treated like every other student," said Jack Hartman, past president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches and basketball coach at Kansas State University.

"There are many scholarships that pay a student more than an athletics scholarship. It makes it awkward in some cases when a kid has absolutely no money to buy the basic essentials such as toothpaste and deodorant."

Because athletes must practice, they don't have time to work for spending money, Hartman added.

Respondents also were asked about proposals to give coaches job security, much like professors get tenure. Some people believe that recruiting violations arise because coaches fear losing their jobs if their teams don't win enough games.

Forty-two percent said coaches should be given job security, regardless of their teams' records. Forty-six percent said colleges should have the option of firing coaches if the teams lose too many games, and 12 percent were unsure.

"I think a coach should have the same security as a professor should have," said Charles "Lefty" Driesell, head men's basketball coach at the University of Maryland, College Park. "This is an academic institution, not a pro basketball team."

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,402 adults across the country May 1-7.

For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of three percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample.

Thunderbirds drop out

Southern Utah State College will withdraw from the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference after the 1985-86 school year and become independent in all sports except football.

The football team will compete in the Western Football Conference, an NCAA Division II conference of California and Oregon colleges and universities.

However, President Gerald R. Sherratt said the other men's and women's sports would be upgraded to Division I.

The announcement ends nearly 20 years of the school's affiliation with the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference. School officials said the upgrading of all sports would be funded by increased ticket revenues and private donations.

Syracuse ordered to pay part of contested tax bill on dome

A state judge June 7 ruled that Syracuse University should pay a partial tax assessment on the Carrier Dome, a 50,000-seat covered arena used for athletics and entertainment events.

State Supreme Court Justice Thomas Murphy awarded a "partial assessment against the university," his secretary said.

The university brought the suit against the city in an effort to avoid paying taxes.

The ruling, which could have wider implications for cities and schools in other cities with tax exemption feuds, was greeted as only a first step in a lengthy legal process. Supreme Court is New York's lowest court.

"My guess is that nobody's going to worry about it until it goes up through the courts and a higher court decides if the Carrier Dome really is taxable," said Howard Nelson, a spokesman for Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy. RPI's Houston Field House also is a multiuse facility, he said.

Syracuse University claimed the Carrier Dome is an educational building and thus nontaxable. However, the dome is used for rock concerts and other events that the city of Syracuse said are profit-making and not related to the independent university's educational mission.

Drug tests planned

Two more NCAA member institutions have announced plans to begin drug-testing programs for their student-athletes.

Testing will begin in the fall at the University of Southern California and Temple University.

"We are within legal application as far as a student's participation in sports," said Michael B. McGee, Southern California athletics director. "And we're not saying we have a major drug problem on our campus. But even if there is a small problem, it can be extremely significant. We want to have a positive influence on the problem."

A committee of Temple's board of trustees has approved a program that would involve mandatory rehabilitation for first offenders and suspensions and loss of financial aid for repeat offenders. First offenders at Southern California will be subject to more testing and will be asked to enroll in a drug-education and counseling program.

"Drug use in athletics is a national concern, whether by professional athletes or amateurs," Temple President Peter J. Liacouras said.

Change in name

The Eastern College Athletic Conference South has become the Colonial Athletic Association, and conference officials say the change will aid marketing and name identification.

The association, unveiled June 6 at a news conference at the University of Richmond, includes Richmond; American University; East Carolina University; George Mason University; James Madison University; the U.S. Naval Academy; the University of North Carolina, Wilmington, and the College of William and Mary.

"The reason for our change in name and structure is to create a more effective regional identification and an expanded ability to market what is an excellent group of athletics programs," said Charles S. Boone, Richmond athletics director, who will serve as the association's president.

The association plans to hire a commissioner and will have its headquarters in Richmond.

pionship, the Division I Baseball Championship and the Division I Women's Basketball Championship enjoyed by the schools under the ECAC South.

Charges contested

A former Tulane University basketball player has asked a Louisiana state court to throw out charges that he conspired to shave points in games, claiming the law in the case is unconstitutional.

and cause of the accusation."

Lawyers for another former player accused of the same scheme, David Dominique, also asked that the indictment be dismissed, contending a New Orleans businessman tainted the case against Dominique by entering secret grand jury proceedings.

Scores a first

With her recent victory in the 5,000 meters at the NCAA Women's Division III Track and Field Championships, Julia Kirtland of Macalester College became the first woman athlete in NCAA history to win national championships in cross country, indoor track and outdoor track in the same academic year.

The sophomore from Aurora, New York, captured the Division III cross country title last fall in 17:23.55, followed by a victory in March in the 3,000 meters (9:47.36) at the NCAA Division III indoor championships. Kirtland's 5,000-meter time outdoors of 16:57.11 was 22 seconds faster than the second-place finisher.

Only two men have accomplished the triple, both in Division I—Gerry Lindgren of Washington State in 1966-67 and Suleiman Nyambui of UTEP in 1980-81.

Autonomy move

A new Ohio Valley Conference rule allowing member schools to determine a sport-by-sport distribution of scholarships will allow more local autonomy—but also could hurt the quality of intraconference play, the league's commissioner says.

"Obviously, if one school gives four tennis scholarships and another gives two, they're not going to be equal," Commissioner James E. Delany said June 5 after the rule change was approved by the OVC presidents.

Under the new rules for grants-in-aid, all OVC-imposed sport-by-sport limits are dropped and each school is allowed a total of 95 scholarships for the sports where men's championships are determined. Members still must abide by NCAA sport-by-sport limits.

There is no conference-imposed limit on the total number of grants for women's programs.

Delaney said the change will help those schools that aspire beyond the conference in a particular sport.

"It will encourage more regional and national competitiveness in areas in which a school has a particular tradition or a good program," he said.
