

Affidavit forms on aid to athletes to be mailed August 1

Affidavit forms detailing financial assistance provided to all student-athletes at NCAA member institutions will be mailed to chief executive officers August 1.

The forms — to be completed by all returning student-athletes from 1984-85 varsity teams, all new recruited student-athletes and all head coaches — are in accordance with Resolution No. 9 (Compliance Program) adopted overwhelmingly at the June 20-21 special Convention in New Orleans.

Institutions failing to administer the affidavits to coaches and student-athletes will be declared ineligible for all NCAA championships for men and women and for postseason football contests during the 1985-86 academic year.

Institutions that continue to employ head coaches who fail to complete properly and sign the affidavits will be ineligible for NCAA championships and postseason competition in the sport or sports in which the coach is employed during 1985-86. Student-athletes failing to complete and sign the affidavits will be ineligible for intercollegiate competition during that same year.

The procedure will not be repeated again and is in addition to the student-athlete statement forms and coaches certification of compliance forms, which will continue to be filled out each year as per Constitution 3-9-(i) and Bylaw 5-6-(d), respectively.

Each package received by CEOs includes two different affidavit forms — one for student-athletes and one for coaches — a certification form to be filled out by the CEO and an instruction sheet. Individual institutions are responsible for copying and administering the affidavits to student-athletes and coaches.

Affidavits to be completed by student-athletes require disclosure of all financial aid or extra benefits received from the institution, individual coaches and outside individuals or organizations.

Eligibility, drug plan on Council agenda

Possible legislation regarding a national drug-testing policy and a modification in Bylaw 5-1-(j) [so-called Proposal No. 48] are on the agenda for the NCAA Council's summer meeting August 14-16 at the Westin Hotel, Copley Place, in Boston.

The Council will receive recommendations regarding legislation for consideration at the 1986 NCAA Convention from the Special NCAA Committee on National Drug-Testing Policy, chaired by former NCAA President John L. Toner, and the Special NCAA Academic Standards Committee, chaired by NCAA Secretary-Treasurer Wilford S. Bailey.

Both topics have roots in the January 1985 Convention in Nashville. A drug-testing proposal at that Convention was remanded to the Council and Executive Committee for additional study, and Toner's special committee was appointed as a result of that referral.

The Special Academic Standards Committee was formed after the 1985 Convention adopted a resolution calling for a joint study by the Council and the NCAA Presidents Commission to determine possible modifications in Bylaw 5-1-(j).

Other topics on the August Council agenda that might result in legislation for the January 1986 Convention in New Orleans are possible institutional controls on coaches' income, alternatives to reduce the Association's legal costs, and possible changes in sports sponsorship criteria and the multidivision-classification legislation.

The Council and the three division steering committees will receive all legislative proposals for the 1986 Convention that have been submitted or directed by the Council as of the week of the meeting.

Also on the agenda will be a review of the actions taken at the fifth special Convention June 20-21, further discussion of the compliance program endorsed by the Division I Steering Committee and the Council in their April meetings, and consideration by the Division III Steering Committee of possible playing-season limitations in that division. Divisions I and II adopted such limits at the Convention last January.

The August agenda — always the busiest of the year — will include reports from the following NCAA committees: Academic Requirements, Academic Research, Academic Standards, Classification, Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, Eligibility, Executive, Extra Events, Governmental Affairs, Ice Hockey Developmental Funding, Infractions, Insurance, Long Range Planning, National Drug-Testing Policy, Player Agents, Postseason Football, Professional Sports Liaison, and Recruiting.

The Council and steering committees also will review Administrative Committee actions, membership data and requests, new and revised interpretations, Presidents Commission activities, and other miscellaneous topics.

Council sessions will be held August 14 and 16, with the three steering committees in session August 15.

Executive Committee to consider annual budget

Approval of the 1985-86 budget and reports from 24 sports committees are among the agenda items for the August 12-13 meeting of the NCAA Executive Committee in Boston.

Budget projections for the 1985-86 fiscal year were in final draft stages at press time. Complete details of the budget and a summary of Executive Committee actions will be included in the August 28 issue of The NCAA News.

Following are recommendations from sports committees that will be considered by the Executive Committee:

Division I Men's Basketball — This committee is recommending the retention of the distribution formula that provides institutions participating in the Division I Men's Basketball Championships 60 percent of the net receipts and the Association 40 percent.

Division I Women's Basketball — With the championship tournament field increased to 40 teams for the 1986 event, the committee recommends that the top two teams in each of the four regional brackets receive first-round byes and the remaining teams be seeded Nos. 3 through 10. First-round games are recommended for the Wednesday following the selection of teams and the 16 second-round games on the following Friday, Saturday or Sunday.

Men's Lacrosse — This committee recommends the Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship bracket be expanded from eight to 12 teams.

Women's Lacrosse — This committee recommends an increase in the number of teams in the 1986 National Collegiate Women's Lacrosse Championship from four to six.

Men's and Women's Swimming and Diving — A recommendation has been proposed to include a 10-meter diving event in the Division I Men's and Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Men's and Women's Track and Field — This committee recommends more stringent standards in six men's events (500 meter, 1,000 meter, 3,000 meter, 1,600-meter relay, long jump and shot put) and nine women's events (500 meter, 1,000 meter, 55-meter hurdles, 1,600-meter relay, 3,200-meter relay, long jump, high jump, shot put and triple jump). In addition, the committee recommends eliminating the men's and women's 400-meter and 800-meter races from the indoor track championships and replacing the men's distance medley with the men's 3,200-meter relay.

Women's Softball — The Women's Softball Committee recommends increasing the 1986 Division I championship bracket from 16 to 18 teams.

Wrestling Committee — This committee is recommending that the NCAA Wrestling Championships include wrestle-backs from the quarter-finals instead of the semifinals.

Other reports will be considered from the following sports committees:

Most freshman student-athletes plan on graduating in four to five years

An NCAA-sponsored study of freshman-year course-taking patterns indicates that of those student-athletes surveyed, the majority carried course loads that would allow them to graduate in four to five years.

The survey, conducted by Advanced Technology, Inc., of Reston, Virginia, found that little of the freshman year was spent on courses that would not count toward graduation.

The study is a follow-up to one conducted in 1982 dealing with freshman eligibility standards. The same transcripts employed in the 1982 survey were used to create a sample for the study of freshman course-taking patterns.

A random sample of 20 institutions was drawn from the 206 Division I members participating. Eight institutions were selected from Division I-A, seven from Division I-AA and five from Division I-AAA. A total of 825 student-athletes were included in the sample — 440 from Division I-A, 310 from Division I-AA and 75 from Division I-AAA.

Of the student-athletes surveyed, 195 were Black (162 male, 33 female) and 575 were white (412 male, 163 female).

Nine out of 10 of the student-athletes in the sample declared a major during their freshman year. Business and general studies majors were declared by 22 percent of the students for whom information was available. Liberal arts (10 percent), engineering (10 percent) and education (nine percent) were the next most popular majors.

The types of courses taken by most student-athletes were within the graduation requirement rules of the individual institutions, even the nonacademic courses.

Taking into account all credits earned toward graduation, the median freshman student-athlete accumulated nearly one-quarter of the total required.

Social studies courses accounted for roughly one quarter of all credits earned during the freshman year, followed by regular English courses, which accounted for one-fifth of the average course load in the sample. Nonacademic credits were roughly equally divided between remedial courses and athletics-type activities.

The survey showed that black males and females earned fewer academic credits during their freshman year than their white counterparts

Survey on eligibility for freshmen under way

Chief executive officers at NCAA Division I member institutions are being surveyed to obtain their views on the issue of freshman eligibility for intercollegiate athletics in that division.

Otis A. Singletary, president of the University of Kentucky and chair of the Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Presidents Commission, wrote to the Division I chief executives July 25, enclosing a listing of 12 statements regarding freshman eligibility or ineligibility and asking the CEOs to indicate agreement or disagreement with each.

Singletary noted that the issue of freshman eligibility is on the agenda for the October 1-2 meeting of the Commission's Division I subcommittee. "Because this is an issue with so many variables, I have asked the NCAA national office to conduct the enclosed survey for me," his letter stated. "The Division I members of the Presidents Commission need your opinions on the various factors...."

The survey asks each chief executive to agree or disagree with the following statements:

- In general, freshmen should be ineligible for college athletics.
- Freshmen should be ineligible in all sports.
- Freshmen should be ineligible in football only.
- Freshmen should be ineligible in basketball only.
- Freshmen should be ineligible

January Convention will reveal CEOs' resolve

By Bob Collins

The Indianapolis Star

There really is only one sure way to stop cheating in college athletics — banish people. Face it, if we all were so good, we wouldn't need the Ten Commandments and a million laws.

NCAA presidents finally have noticed what has been parading across their lawns — and stadiums — for years. And even though they almost were too late for the ball, it's good that their olfactory senses are leading them near the scene of the crime.

Their words were strong; their intentions undoubtedly were honorable. But all they could do in New Orleans was make proposals — some suggestions.

The proof of their resolve — or lack of it — will arrive at the NCAA Convention in January.

The proposals were more like Mom coming out of the kitchen to stop the racket in the living room. If she shouts, "Stop that!" and returns, it will resume shortly.

But if she whacks a few butts, she'll get their attention.

So, we'll see if the prexies are armed with switches or merely well-modulated voices.

Nobody in his right mind expects a president of a large university to stay on top of everything. To survive, he delegates.

And some of those delegates in athletics departments haven't exactly been abstaining — from sin.

In the area of rules infractions, I believe university presidents have fallen into three categories: those who didn't know, those who didn't care and those who were accessories.

Much was made of the fact that roll-call balloting was employed; everyone had to stand and be counted. But not many people will vote for cheating — at least not in public.

They also addressed only one of what I believe are two major issues. They offered strong penalties for illegal recruiting.

For example, a school can be banned [in a sport] for up to two years if it's caught twice in a five-year period

And an offending coach could be suspended.

The CEOs also are going to request reports on academic progress. About time. That train had been sitting on a siding so long the wheels are rusted to the track.

But before (or maybe if) they begin their charge, they should start somebody to work on NCAA rules.

Some are good. Some are unreasonably tough. Some are asinine. And some are untranslatable.

Like the tax code, the NCAA rules just grew until they were so fouled up nobody could play them.

Sometimes, it seems the only way the NCAA chases problems is by adding new rules.

Sure, I believe schools cheat. I also believe the ones who live within the rules are cheated.

The athlete should meet academic requirements. That should be rules one through 25. But there is nothing wrong with putting some cash in his pocket. I don't mean pay him. I'm talking about living money.

Helter-skelter recruiting should be restricted. However, a coach shouldn't be penalized because he buys a lad a pair of mittens.

The meeting of CEOs merely was step one. And the problem will not be resolved at the January meeting.

If all are sincere, if all want to clean the house, it can be done. But it will take time. A quick broom simply will sweep the mess into another room.

This may be a classic oversimplification of people in my business, but I believe it can be done in two steps: (1) write fewer, simpler and fairer rules, and (2) strictly enforce them.

'Consortium is a welcome initiative'

The New York Times

"Colleges may earn millions off the labors of student-athletes yet leave them with little more than press clippings. A recent survey found that fewer than a third of college basketball players earn degrees [in four years], even though most somehow managed to remain eligible to play for four years.

"Led by Northeastern, in Boston, a group of 11 colleges now proposes to make amends for this appalling record. Members of the group have agreed to readmit, tuition-free, any athlete who entered school with a scholarship after 1975 but failed to graduate....

"As more and more money comes into a program, there is more incentive to cheat. I always said that as long as women's athletics remained poor, the better chance it had of staying clean.

"It's (cheating) not nearly as serious as the men's. It isn't common for somebody to give a player a car or anything like that. We're still in the era of (providing) prom dresses and jobs for former coaches.

"The biggest problem facing college football is one we created ourselves. The Supreme Court decision on television seriously impaired our future. I'm not sure it wasn't a selfish, one-sided venture to run the smaller, weaker programs out of existence so in the future there would be only a few strong teams. Only in time can we recover.

"Perhaps only a play-off system with its big bucks can recover what we have lost. Maybe that's what those people who brought this about had in mind. College football parallels the situation the United States faced in Vietnam: 'We're in it, we don't know how we got in it and we're not quite sure how to get out of it.'"

"In cable homes, the viewer has 20, 30, 40 channels. He can watch six different football games, and he thinks this is terrific. I have traveled around the country enough to have people tell me at airports: 'This is great. I can watch three football games at once.'

"I don't think it's so good, but he loves it... it is an issue of proliferation, and we have to deal with that. We are cutting back on the number of college basketball games that we televise. We see cable situations that are not turning out as anticipated. We constantly are assessing the whole issue of how many hours do we devote to sports....

"I would say, overall, that the pattern of viewing is down on network television. We are not oblivious to that fact. But it remains that the networks are the media opportunity broadcasting over 200 affiliates around the country and reaching 100 percent of the total television homes. We will have that advantage."

Jonathan Rand, columnist

Kansas City Times

"It's easier to make bold statements than take bold actions and easier to pass tough rules than to enforce them. That's why it would be naive to assume big-time college athletics has been cleaned up because the National Collegiate Athletic Association has passed the strongest legislation in its history aimed at stopping schools from cheating to gain a competitive edge.

"The NCAA delegates who voted almost unanimously for several get-tough measures should be applauded for making a sincere effort to clean up their act, and the 'death penalty' in the short term will earn them a lot of bouquets. In the long term, though, it will put the NCAA on the spot because sooner or later it will be called up to practice what it preaches."

Letters to the Editor

Keep Proposal No. 48 the way it is

To the Editor:

I agree with Bob Roesler's opinions as stated in the July 3, 1985, issue of The NCAA News regarding Proposal No. 48; the entrance requirements that go into effect in August 1986 should remain intact.

The principle of athletics serving as a means to achieve a college education seems to have been forgotten, or at least made subordinate to the principle of using young people's bodies for money and prestige.

To those educators who oppose these standards on the grounds that they are discriminatory, I argue: Yes, we must be sensitive to giving minorities increased opportunities; but as with all opportunities, they must be earned.

As a minority, I am especially troubled by the delusion that young people have concerning sports. Proposal No. 48 should serve as a warning to coaches, educators, parents and students that education, not athletics, is the best route to success.

A different way to name all-Americas

To the Editor:

In light of the growing popularity of college baseball, I believe it is time for the nation's coaches to modernize their method of choosing an all-America team.

It is my perception that an all-America should be regarded as a student-athlete who has truly singled himself out as an outstanding player and not someone who is selected primarily because of politics.

I propose a stair-ladder system to select the all-America team each season. Perhaps a timetable of this sort could be used:

May 15: All-league teams chosen by respective conference coaches. These players then become eligible for all-regional selection.

June 1: All-regional teams chosen by each of the respective regional coaches. This ballot only includes players chosen to appropriate all-conference first or second teams. These players then become eligible for all-America selection.

June 15: All-America team chosen by all of the nation's coaches (categories for Divisions I, II, III). This ballot only contains players chosen to the all-regional teams.

In my opinion, this is the only fair and democratic method of selecting a representative all-America team, because it involves full participation from all coaches throughout the entire process.

CEOs pleased after first year as conference administrators

More than 75 years after President Theodore Roosevelt's concern about college football violence sparked discussions eventually leading to the creation of the NCAA, seven college presidents initiated their own discussions on how to put college athletics in perspective.

After one year of operation under the direction of those presidents, the North Coast Athletic Conference is taking account of its accomplishments—academic and athletic.

"The NCAC seeks to position sports as complementing academic life, not competing with it," said Philip H. Jordan, president of both Kenyon College and the NCAC. "The NCAC is trying to prevent the exploitation of the higher educational system and its athletes by using sports to enlarge the experience of the students."

The seven-member conference—Kenyon, Allegheny College, Case Western Reserve University, Denison University, Oberlin College, Ohio Wesleyan University and the College of Wooster—was formed in 1983.

"It was a presidential initiative that founded the conference, but we were encouraged in that by our athletics people," Jordan said. "They were extremely positive."

Working in conjunction with athletics directors and faculty athletics representatives, the presidents control the conference, from establishing policy to the recruiting of athletes. Academics is the top priority.

Athletics directors and faculty athletics representatives "are free to discuss and present their opinions on virtually all matters pertaining to the conference," said S. Frederick Starr, Oberlin College president. "However, fundamental policy comes from the presidents."

The presidents avert a "Big Brother-is-watching-you" atmosphere at individual institutions while maintaining a close watch on the entire athletics procedure.

"We oversee and improve every aspect," Jordan said. "We don't try to look over every staff member's shoulder all the time, and it has raised our consciousness from regular to post-season competition. It helps us to keep better informed and to provide sound guiding policy."

Open communication also is maintained from president to president.

"We report to each other how it goes and what we spend. We want comparable levels, and we want to come to a common point of view," Jordan said.

"I had felt for a long while that athletics at a college like Kenyon are an important complement to its academic qualities, but I had not had the occasion to look closely at how intercollegiate athletics are organized and how to sustain it in beliefs you believe in," Jordan said. "It thrust me into an understanding of intercollegiate athletics that I would invite all other presidents to undertake."

From an athletics standpoint, success goes beyond the victories and losses—although success in those terms cannot be overlooked. The NCAC promotes equality in all sports—men's and women's.

"Specifically, the visionary aspect of this conference is the equity for men's and women's sports—the goal of a fair balance among all sports rather than having a football-basketball conference," Starr said. "And then, of course—and above all—is the healthy relationship between athletics and the fundamental and pedagogical mission of the schools."

The relationship's structure is supported by NCAC regulations, implemented by the President's Council, that include:

- Permitting student-athletes to miss practices for academic reasons;
- Scheduling most intercollegiate contests on weekends to cut down the number of classes that may be interfered with, and

- Not providing athletics grants-in-aid to students, who are accepted solely on academic performances.

"They (the student-athletes) clearly have to be of the academic quality to forecast success in the classroom," Jordan said. "We expect them to be regular students, and we make relatively few concessions to athletes. They are expected to make their academic obligations."

"In a Division III situation, I tend to think that's the way athletics ought to be on the collegiate level," Jordan said. "Understanding how the dynamics work when things are at stake—income, passions of the followers of the teams, alumni—we are relatively insulated from those very powerful forces."

"Our athletics program is a cost center and not a revenue center, and we look at it as part of the overall academic attitude of the college."

The NCAC's first full year provided its share of athletics accomplishments. In addition to Kenyon's NCAA team championships in men's and women's swimming, the conference was represented in play-offs in six other sports. Fourteen of the 21 sponsored sports were ranked in their respective Division III top 10 during the year, and 65 student-athletes earned all-

America honors. James Drougas, a Case Reserve tennis player, and Kris-sann Mueller, a track performer at Kenyon, were among the CoSIDA academic all-America selections.

"We find the degree-completion rate is higher among student-athletes than among others. We have a very low attrition rate among students and a very low rate among student-athletes," Jordan said.

The presidents now look toward the future with anticipation and questions.

"Our expectations have been more than met this year," Starr said. "But there are further steps. One important question is to identify other like-minded conferences... I think generally our focus now is to refine our procedure, to gain experience dealing with the problems that inevitably arise and also make sure that we really are living by the high goals that we've set for ourselves."

What the NCAC has put into practice the NCAA Presidents Commission is attempting to create on a much larger scale. The overwhelming support provided by college presidents and chancellors at the special NCAA convention is a case in point.

"To me, the most astonishing thing about the present debate nationwide is that anyone could doubt that full responsibility for all things athletic, or final responsibility for all aspects of the athletics program, rests with the president," Starr said. "The presidents are responsible ultimately for the academic programs and the physical plant. Surely they must be answerable for the athletics program."

"We do not claim the NCAC is a single depository of virtue," Jordan said. "We do believe that the conference is taking a leadership view in several respects with the willingness to assert those publicly."

"I'm surprised that people can be surprised at the NCAC," Starr said. "Here is a conference that is, in effect, doing everything that people are talking about. We have had a lot of communication from other schools. I am frequently asked about it, and not just by Division III schools."

"I think American athletics needs working models for emulation. I believe the Ivy League provides such a model and there are various other conferences that have been pacesetters. But now, with the NCAC, we have another model that, in many respects, goes beyond the norm."

Starr points out that John Heisman coached at Oberlin long before his name became associated with the nation's best college football player each season.

"I would like to think that our old coach, John Heisman, would approve of what's going on here at the conference."

At the place where football started, playing, not winning, is paramount

By Dick Kishpaugh

College athletics are alive and well in Great Britain, if the impressions gained from a recent trip to England and Scotland are correct.

Asked to account for the lack of acute problems such as we have on the far side of the Atlantic, the academic advisor at Aberdeen's Robert Gordon Institute of Technology wasted no time in coming to the point:

"We have games, of course, but they have nothing at all to do with the school's goals or our standing. In fact, we'd encourage a lad with unusual athletics promise to turn out for one of the town (noncollege) teams for his own betterment. Our people can best represent the institute by academic excellence, not by incidental physical strength."

At RGIT, a world leader in offshore drilling technology, life is exciting and challenging and is free from what was termed "the curse of trying to sponsor semiprofessional school teams." That's a common philosophy in the United Kingdom.

A small minority of British athletes do follow the typical American cycle from high school to college to the professional ranks. However, the real difference between the two nations is in the collegiate relationship with the groups at the opposite ends of the cycle.

Professional sports, soccer football in particular, has an overwhelming impact in the United Kingdom. Professional soccer is, indeed, a way of life in Britain.

With this intense emphasis on the professionals, the corollary is that the average Briton is blithely unaware of what is going on in collegiate circles. Thus, with the exception of a few featured matches, the colleges simply go about staging games at their own pace, minus the pressure of financial stakes, huge crowds and mass publicity.

At the high school level, there is intense varsity competition, particularly in track and field, where area championships are followed by all-England and all-Scotland meets. There are vigorous supporters of competitive sports; witness the angry reaction to a recent proposal by the Inner London Education Authority that would discourage interscholastic meets in favor of a "ring around the rosie" approach.

Even the secretary for the Central Council of Physical Recreation termed the proposal "loony and misguided."

So the high school events continue—but with few external influences, minimal numbers of spectators and nothing remotely resembling our pressure-packed state tournaments.

Rugby School, where the renowned Frank Drewett teaches physical education on a high academic level and receives no compensation for coaching teams, is the shining example of schoolboy games for their own sake. Competition against outsiders consists of simultaneous events involving virtually every member of the student body.

At this place where all forms of football had their roots and for which rugby football is named, each day's events stand on their own merits; standings and records are immaterial. The school's leaders, in fact, would be perturbed if reporters and a crowd of spectators showed up to keep track of the proceedings.

Yes, there is some college recruiting. Athletics ability may be a factor in considering all-around adaptability. A few wearers of the "old school tie" grumble about the inability to defeat those "other fellows" at cricket, but several random contacts at places such as Oxford and Cambridge failed to uncover any great anxiety about the progress of the university teams.

Certain showcase matches do attract considerable attention. One notable example is the Oxford-Cambridge crew race. This may have the largest attendance of any collegiate event in the world since thousands upon thousands of spectators line the banks of the Thames for that spring-time event.

Tradition is so strong that a recent book listed the names and positions of every member of both crews by years and in alphabetical order, starting with the first race in 1829. But even for an event of this stature, there is no great fuss about eligibility; each school applies its liberal criteria in selecting teams, and a recent move to limit crews to undergraduates failed for lack of support. Our London hosts also suggested that the race is looked upon simply as a splendid spring outing, with many spectators having no great concern with the identity of the winner.

The result is that the average British athlete reaching college age expects neither public adulation nor financial athletics inducements, a far cry from the extensive recruiting of 18-year-old American "blue chippers."

Of a typical group of students interviewed at Cambridge, none had even heard of recruiting visits or letters of intent. Several were fine athletes, but their interest lay in spirited intramural competition among the several colleges that make up the university and in possible eventual membership on national teams.

At Cambridge, at Oxford and elsewhere, the reaction by students to any mention of athletics meddling with academic standards was that it simply could not and would not happen there. Students themselves called such possibilities "intolerable"—and this from a group that otherwise delights in needing the establishment and in tackling outlandish causes.

The professionals go their own troubled way and do not invade the colleges. The colleges do not invade the high schools. There are no swarms of recruiters following every successful prep team, and schoolboy egos tend to remain intact.

Certainly there are problems in British academic circles. Parliament is taking a hard look at the economic picture, particularly in government research grants. One proposal would fund research only at certain large facilities, creating a sharp division between "haves" and "have-nots" in terms of support.

The closing or merging of several universities by parliamentary action is a distinct possibility. These may not be easy times for British universities in many respects, but athletics is the least of their problems, and they are blessedly free from trauma and turmoil on the playing field.

Our American administrators would be well-advised to look at the British philosophy for clues to the solution of our crisis.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, in the national office no later than August 19, 1985.

Division II Women's Volleyball: Replacement for Tania R. Torrence, Lincoln University (Missouri), who will not be coaching volleyball. Replacement must be from Division II.

Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received no later than August 23, 1985.

1986 Voting Committee: Replacement for Stanley V. Wright, Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck, resigned as director of athletics. Replacement may be from any division, any district, inasmuch as Wright was an at-large member of the committee.

National Youth Sports Program: Replacement for Stanley V. Wright, Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck, resigned as director of athletics.

Women's Swimming: Replacement for Timothy F. Walsh, formerly at Johns Hopkins University, accepted a position at the University of Notre Dame. Replacement must be from Division III, District 3.

Lottery used for preferred seats at wrestling championships

The 1986 NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships are more than seven months away, but Jerry Wood of Leroy, Illinois, already is a big winner.

Robert J. Kopnisky, chair of the NCAA Wrestling Committee, drew Wood's ticket application first from more than 500 ticket requests for preferred seating to the March 13-15 championships at the University of Iowa's Carver Hawkeye Arena in Iowa City, Iowa.

Tickets left over from the lottery now are on sale on a first-come, first-served basis. The arena seats 15,502.

The lottery was set up because East Coast fans were concerned that Iowa fans would buy all the preferred-seating tickets in hopes of seeing their Hawkeyes win an unprecedented ninth consecutive NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships team title.

According to Gary Kurdlemeier, Iowa associate athletics director and tournament director, fans planning to attend the championships should get their orders in soon.

"The response has just been tremendous," Kurdlemeier said. "We have about 800 all-session tickets left. I estimate that by December, we'll have a sellout."

Kurdlemeier attributed much of the response to activities that will be conducted in conjunction with the championships.

Several schools, including Cornell College, Northern Iowa, Wisconsin, Penn State and Iowa, are organizing reunions for their past wrestlers. For the first time, a reunion of all past NCAA champions will be held during the championships.

Past champions also may return to their glory days. The Iowa athletics department, in conjunction with the NCAA Library of Films, will show videotapes in Carver Hawkeye Arena and various businesses in Iowa City of past championships.

"We have the addresses of most past champions and have heard back from about three-fourths of them," Kurdlemeier said. "We'd like to hear from everyone and are in hopes that the word will spread to those people we weren't able to contact."

Past champions attending the championships can volunteer to undergo complete physical examinations, free of charge, for a study conducted by the Iowa sports medicine department. The study is designed to gauge the effects of "weight-cutting," a controversial practice some wrestlers use for drastic weight reduction.

Any former NCAA Division I wrestling titlist interested in attending the reunion should contact NCAA Champions Reunion, Room 340, Carver Hawkeye Arena, Iowa City, Iowa 52242.

Moratorium on realignments declared by golf committee

After taking action on some pending realignment petitions, the NCAA Men's Golf Committee has declared a moratorium on requests for regional realignments until a study is conducted on current qualifying districts.

The committee, which met July 16-19 in San Francisco, recommended a $100 fine for late submission of certification of eligibility/entry forms. This action is subject to Executive Committee approval and would be imposed on institutions in all divisions, beginning with forms not postmarked by May 1, 1986. An appeal process is included in the recommendation.

The committee realigned Eastern Kentucky and Western Kentucky from District 3 to District 4 in Division I and realigned the state of Kentucky from District 3 to District 4 in Division II. In addition, the committee transferred two allocations for individual qualifiers from District 7 to District 3 South for Division I individual qualifiers and transferred three allocations from District 2 to the large allocations in Division III.

The committee also clarified rules governing team scoring. If student-athletes from the same institution are selected as individual qualifiers, they must compete as individuals and will not be eligible for team scoring.

The committee recommended removing the waiver for the minimum number of contests for Division III selection criteria.

Under the recommendation, Division III institutions or individual qualifiers must compete in a minimum of four contests after January 1 to be eligible for selection to the championships.

Other recommendations include:

- The loss of Executive Regulation 1-3-(i) privileges for conferences that conduct their postseason tournament after the committee's conference-call selection dates.

- The University of Southern California as host for the 1988 Division I championships at the North Ranch Country Club in Thousand Oaks, California.

Guidelines set for placement of shot clocks

Recommended locations for 45-second clocks, which are required for men's intercollegiate basketball competition during the 1985-86 season, have been announced by the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee.

"The 45-second shot clocks should be recessed on top of each backboard," said Edward S. Steitz, secretary-rules editor of the committee. "The intent of the committee's recommendations regarding installation of the shot clock was to make sure the clocks were in a conspicuous location."

"The committee's first preference is that the clocks be mounted on top of and recessed from the face of the backboard. If that is not possible, the clocks should then be placed out of bounds on the floor at each end of the court. They must be positioned to the left of each basket near the intersection of the endline and the sideline, as viewed from the center of the court."

"If it is impossible to mount the clock on top of the backboard or on the floor as indicated, a wall mount or other suitable placement may be necessary," Steitz said.

"Again, it is imperative that the clocks be in the most conspicuous location available within the restrictions of the facility and that if placed on a wall, they be mounted to the left of the goal when viewed from mid-court."

Steitz said individual institutions with special placement problems should outline their intended installations and forward them to him at Springfield College for review.

Cable firm gets 100,000th client

Home Team Sports, a regional cable network started in April 1984, has grown to 100,000 subscribers. The network's 49 affiliates serve more than 500,000 basic subscribers, 101,500 of which now receive Home Team Sports.

Home Team Sports is available to cable systems in a six-state region that includes all of Maryland, Virginia and Delaware and parts of North Carolina, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Naval academy is proposed as rifle championships host

The NCAA Men's and Women's Rifle Committee has voted to recommend that the U.S. Naval Academy host the 1986 National Collegiate Men's and Women's Rifle Championship, March 14-15. The recommendation will be forwarded to the NCAA Executive Committee, which meets in August.

The rifle committee voted to include the following information in the 1986 championships handbook regarding the substitution of student-athletes: "An institution that has qualified a team or teams in the championship may select, as team members for the competition, any athlete listed on the institution's certification of eligibility/entry form. However, the number of shooters from a given institution who will be allowed to compete in all (individual or team) events shall not exceed the total number of shooters that qualified from that institution."

In addition, the committee, which met July 19-21 in Asheville, North Carolina, will develop a description of the criteria used to determine the fields for the individual and team events. This description will be included in the 1986 championships handbook, which will be mailed in early December.

The committee also set dates for certifying matches and receipt of reports from those matches. To qualify for the 1986 championships, individuals and/or teams must participate in certified competition between January 10 and February 17, 1986. The score report from that competition must be received by Edward F. Etzel, secretary-rules editor of the committee, no later than February 21, 1986.

The committee also voted to alter Rule 2-2-5-(b)-(2) to define the maximum width of allowable waist belts as 40 millimeters (1.57 inches). The group also moved to include, as Rule 4-1-2, the following definition of a shot:

"A shot is the result of the act of firing the rifle, in which the bullet or pellet leaves the barrel of the rifle."

Deadline September 3 for Council nominations

The deadline for submitting nominations to the NCAA Nominating Committee for 15 Council positions that expire in January 1986 is September 3.

Five of the 15 Council members whose terms expire are eligible for reelection, including four of the nine Division I members and one of the three members in Division II. In Division III, none of the three members can be reelected.

Nominations may be sent to Jack V. Doland, McNeese State University, chair of the Nominating Committee, or to any member of the committee. A copy of the nominations also should be sent directly to Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, at the NCAA national office, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

Three of the Division I representatives elected or reelected must be from Region I (Districts 1 and 2), one must be a chief executive officer and two must be women. In addition, one must represent Division I-A South independents, three must represent Division I-AAA and one may be elected at large. New representatives must be elected from two Division I-A conferences — Big Eight (Region 3) and Western Athletic (Region 4). One new representative must be elected from I-AA East and one from I-AA Central.

One of the Division II representatives must be from Region 2, with the others to be elected at large. Of the three to be elected or reelected, at least two must be women.

One of the new Division III representatives must be from Region I and another from Region 2, with the third elected at large.

In Division I, those not eligible for reelection are Arliss L. Roaden, formerly of Tennessee Technological University; William H. Baughn, University of Colorado; Richard W. Burns, University of Texas, El Paso; Thomas J. Frericks, University of Dayton, and Andrew T. Mooradian, University of New Hampshire.

Those not eligible for reelection in Division II are Judith M. Brame, California State University, Northridge, and Bob Moorman, Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

In Division III, those not eligible for reelection are Elizabeth A. Kruczek, Fitchburg State College; Robert T. Shields, Fairleigh Dickinson University, Madison, and Elmer W. Yoest, Otterbein College.

Those wishing to nominate persons for any of the vacant Council positions should refer to Constitution 5-5-(c), which lists the Association's geographical regions for purposes of Council representation.

A brief paragraph describing the qualifications of the candidates should accompany the nomination form, which appears below.

ACC schedules 12 regional football telecasts next season

A 12-game schedule, which includes 10 conference contests, represents the 1985 Atlantic Coast Conference regional football television package to be produced by Jefferson Pilot Teleproductions of Charlotte, North Carolina, and telecast throughout the conference area.

This is the second year Jefferson Pilot Teleproductions has produced the ACC package. The current agreement extends through the 1986 season.

Every conference team will appear at least once on the schedule, which opens with Penn State at defending conference champion Maryland September 7. The other nonconference game on the schedule features Navy at Virginia September 28.

"We feel we have put together an excellent schedule of games," Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Robert C. James said. "It puts our conference in an excellent position as far as TV exposure is concerned with the other major football conferences across the country. It will provide more exposure for all of our schools and will generate more revenue for members."

In addition to the 12-game regional schedule, the ACC, in the first year of a two-year agreement with CBS, is expected to have seven national appearances. There also will be three appearances on WTBS, Turner Broadcasting, in prime-time.

Madison Square Garden Network and Jefferson Pilot Teleproductions also reached an agreement whereby MSG Network will televise 13 Atlantic Coast Conference football games next season.

Atlantic Coast Conference football is expected to reach more than 1.8 million subscriber homes through 63 affiliates.

Villanova signs

Villanova University has signed a three-year contract awarding rights to most of its basketball and football games to the Grant Broadcasting System, Inc., which recently acquired WWSG-TV, channel 57 in Philadelphia, scheduled to go on the air this fall.

The three-year agreement, estimated at between $800,000 and $1 million, calls for Grant Broadcasting to televise all nonnational network or Philadelphia city-series basketball games, approximately 20 home and away games a season, and a minimum of four football games a year, as well as pregame shows for basketball coach Rolie Massimino and football coach Andy Talley.

Villanova also recently signed a multiyear contract with WCAU-AM of Philadelphia to serve as the flagship radio station of the Villanova basketball radio network.

Beginning with the 1985-86 season, WCAU will broadcast every home and away game. WCAU-AM is a CBS affiliate that reaches 33 states and most of Canada.

Peach Bowl rights

Peach Bowl organizers have reached agreement on a contract with CBS that will pay the bowl $350,000 for the rights to this year's game and give the network the option of acquiring rights to the 1986 game.

CBS has televised the Peach Bowl for the past seven years; however, 1984 marked the last year of a four-year pact. The network paid the bowl $350,000 in 1984.

ESPN schedule

ESPN has finalized four College Football Association telecasts for the 1985 season, two of which feature defending national champion Brigham Young. The contests are the first two and last two games on ESPN's live, 17-game Saturday night prime-time schedule. The remaining games will be announced during the season.

ESPN's CFA schedule will open

August 31 with Purdue visiting Pittsburgh. The following week, September 7, Brigham Young will host UCLA.

ESPN will conclude its season with West Virginia at Syracuse November 30, followed by Brigham Young at Hawaii December 7.

The 1984 CFA telecasts became ESPN's highest-rated series (4.0 rating, 1,360,000 homes tuned in). The 1985 season will be the first year of a two-year contract between ESPN and the CFA.

La Salle University; St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania); Temple University and the University of Pennsylvania have competed in the city series, a round-robin tournament among Philadelphia-area universities, for 30 years.

PRISM sports director Jim Barniak will handle play-by-play for the telecasts, while former Pennsylvania another in 1983 as producer of NBC's 1982 World Series coverage.

Adamo, associate producer since 1982, has been a member of the production team the past six years.

Gowdy gets pact

Colorado State University and Curt Gowdy Sports have reached an agreement to broadcast the school's football and basketball games for the next three years, beginning with the 1985 football season and ending with the 1988 basketball season. No terms were announced.

KNUS Radio in Denver is the flagship station for the football network.

Basketball plans

Lorimar Sports Network and the Southeastern, Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences have released their 1986 basketball television syndication schedules.

The Southeastern Conference package again will consist of 23 games in 1986 — nine prime-time Thursday telecasts, nine late-Saturday-afternoon games and five postseason tournament contests.

Lorimar will offer Big Ten Conference basketball for the first time in 1986 with a 23-game package consisting of 10 Saturday afternoon, 10 Sunday afternoon and three Thursday prime-time broadcasts.

Lorimar also is offering a 23-game Pacific-10 Conference schedule with 10 Thursday prime-time telecasts, 10 Saturday prime-time games and three telecasts this December.

Bluebonnet rights

The Lorimar Sports Network has acquired the rights for the 27th annual Bluebonnet Bowl. Lorimar plans to syndicate the game on a nationwide basis, guaranteeing the bowl 80 percent national coverage.

In addition to commercial syndication, the telecast will be supplemented with national cable television exposure.

TV in the News

guard Ed Stefanski will provide color commentary.

Two sign contracts

NBC's award-winning producer George Finkel has signed a new multi-year contract with the network, while associate producer Glenn Adamo has been promoted to producer.

Finkel, who has overseen the telecasts of nearly every major sports event for NBC for the past 14 years, earned an Emmy for his production of Super Bowl XIII in 1979 and

Big 5 series

PRISM, a regional movie and sports pay-television network, has acquired exclusive rights to all Philadelphia Big 5 city-series basketball games for the 1985-86 and 1986-87 seasons.

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 28

Approval for foreign tours

The membership's adoption of amendments to Bylaw 3-6(b), which are effective August 1, 1985, will require NCAA Council approval of foreign tours in all sports in all divisions. Application forms for approval may be obtained from the legislative services department at the national office.

Compensation from professional sports organizations to college staff members

As set forth under Constitution 3-6(c) and Case Nos. 148 through 153 (pages 297-299, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), staff members of a member institution's athletics department are not permitted to accept compensation or gratuities of any kind, directly or indirectly, for representing a professional sports organization in the scouting or contacting of athletics talent or the negotiating of a contract. Any compensational arrangement between a professional sports organization and a college staff member (e.g., for scouting other professional teams or assisting the professional employer in coaching its team) shall be prima facie evidence of an indirect arrangement to assure the staff member's assistance in evaluating or procuring college talent.

As set forth in Case No. 150, an institution's athletics department staff member may not be employed by a professional organization as a coach, inasmuch as the evaluating or procuring of talent for a professional team cannot be separated effectively from coaching responsibilities. For example, it would not be permissible for an institution's baseball coach to assist in the coaching of a professional minor league baseball team, regardless of whether such coaching occurs outside the regular academic year.

Permissible expenses—supplies and equipment

As set forth under Constitution 3-1(g)-(1), the award of financial aid to a student-athlete may not exceed commonly accepted educational expenses at that institution (i.e., tuition and fees, room and board, and required course-related books). This legislation does not permit a member institution to purchase supplies or equipment for a student-athlete (e.g., notebooks, art supplies or photography supplies).

Division III financial aid

As set forth in Bylaw 11-3(a)-(6) and Case No. 415 (page 377, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), the composition of a financial aid package offered to a student-athlete by a Division III member institution shall be consistent with the established policy of the institution's financial aid office for all students. A Division III member institution may offer a student-athlete a financial aid package that takes into account variables in the packaging formula other than need (e.g., academic ability, minority status, specialized interests and activities including athletics) so long as the package does not exceed the recipient's financial need and it is equivalent to individual packages for other students with similar need characteristics and falls within the guidelines of O.I. 1101, which defines the term "consistent" as used in Bylaw 11-3(a)-(6).

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Stephen R. Morgan, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Affidavit

The coach's form requires an investigation of financial aid provided to student-athletes in the coach's sport and disclosure of any additional financial assistance or extra benefits of which the coach is aware that may violate NCAA rules.

Only those affidavit forms disclosing violations of NCAA rules are to be returned to the NCAA national office. The remaining forms are to be retained on file by individual institutions for five years.

The certification to be completed by CEOs confirms that the documents have been distributed and properly executed and requests a list of any NCAA rules violations that were disclosed on the affidavits and what steps have been taken to correct the violations.

The CEOs also are required to provide a list of all student-athletes and coaches who have filled out the affidavits and a separate list of any student-athletes and coaches who failed to properly complete them.

The affidavits relate to financial and had more credits in nonacademic courses. Black males were the single category of student-athletes earning more remedial credits than athletics-type activity credits. On the average, 12 percent of their credits were remedial and 10 percent athletics, while white males accumulated five percent of their credits in athletics and four percent in remedial course work.

assistance currently provided or promised for the future. They do not address aid received in the past. "This provides the opportunity to get in compliance now and stay in compliance," said Stephen R. Morgan, NCAA assistant executive director.

Two dates have been established by which time the CEO certifications must be returned to the national office. They are not postmark dates, but indicate when the forms must be received.

For schools with academic calendars that include an early start of classes for the fall term, forms for all sports can be returned by October 1. Those institutions whose calendar requires classes to start in the late fall can file for men's and women's fall sports by October 1 and all other sports by December 1.

Administration of the affidavits does not affect the processing of violations of NCAA regulations that occur before the signing of the forms.

Guidelines on athletics participation while pregnant approved by Council

Guidelines for participation by pregnant student-athletes in intercollegiate athletics at member institutions have been approved by the Council upon recommendation by the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

The guidelines recommend that should a pregnant student-athlete elect to participate in athletics, "a properly executed document of understanding and waiver should be signed by the student-athlete."

It is recommended that "serious consideration of the risks and benefits of participation in athletics must be weighed by the pregnant student-athlete, her physician, the team physician and the member institution."

Noting that few studies accurately assess the risk of strenuous physical activity to a pregnant athlete, the guidelines state that "many medical experts would recommend that pregnant women not participate in competitive contact sports or activities that require sustained maximum performance."

In particular, the pregnant athlete who has conditions that would place her pregnancy at "high risk" is warned not to pursue vigorous physical activity. Those conditions would include—but not be limited to—diabetes, hypertension, obesity, cardiovascular disease, a previous history of spontaneous abortion, or cervical defects that are predisposing to spontaneous abortion.

The guidelines note that, according to available studies, "women who exercise at a submaximal level do not appear to be at greater risk for spontaneous abortion, do not have a greater incidence of complications during labor or delivery than their more active counterparts and do not adversely affect fetal well-being."

"On the other hand, sustained maximal exercise would appear to be deleterious to the mother and fetus, possibly resulting in increases in deep-body temperature that exceeds the teratogenic threshold, a higher incidence of fetal growth retardation and increased risk for premature birth," the guidelines state.

The full text of the guidelines on participation by the pregnant student-athlete follows:

"Few studies exist that accurately assess the risk of strenuous physical activity in the pregnant athlete. Nevertheless, a review of currently available literature would indicate that women who exercise at submaximal levels do not appear to be at greater risk for spontaneous abortion, do not have a greater incidence of complications during labor or delivery than their sedentary counterparts and do not adversely affect fetal well-being."

"On the other hand, sustained maximal exercise would appear to be deleterious to mother and fetus, possibly resulting in increases in deep body temperature that exceed the teratogenic threshold, a higher incidence of fetal growth retardation and increased risk for premature birth."

"Based upon this information, many medical experts would recommend that pregnant women not participate in competitive contact sports or activities that require sustained maximum performance. Vigorous physical activity should not be pursued by those women who have conditions that would place their pregnancies at 'high risk.' These conditions would include—but not be limited to—diabetes, hypertension, obesity, cardiovascular disease, previous history of spontaneous abortion, or cervical defects predisposing to spontaneous abortion."

"Serious consideration of the risks and benefits of athletics participation must be weighed by the pregnant student-athlete, her personal physician, the team physician and the member institution. This discussion, and the subsequent process by which the decision for or against medical qualification to participate is made, should thoroughly take into account the risk of injury to the student-athlete or her fetus."

"In instances where a decision is made to allow the pregnant student-athlete to compete, a properly executed document of understanding and waiver should be signed by the student-athlete."

Athletics department representation on player-counseling panels sought

Improving the institutional counseling panels was the main concern of the Special Committee on Player Agents in its final meeting July 16 in Kansas City.

The special committee was formed in June 1983 to recommend guidelines for dealing with player agents. The special committee's duties now will be assigned to the Professional Sports Liaison Committee.

Institutional counseling panels were approved at the 1984 Convention to assist student-athletes in their consideration of professional athletics careers. An institution can appoint a three-person panel (selected by the chief executive officer) from among the institution's full-time employees who are employed outside the athletics department.

The special committee recommended, however, that not more than one athletics department staff member be allowed to serve on an institution's three-person panel. The NCAA Council will consider this recommendation in its August meeting.

"We think it is necessary at this point for a member of the athletics department to be a part of the counseling panel," said Richard A. Perry, University of Southern California, chair of the special committee. "The committee believes that better cooperation and communication is needed between the athletics department and the counseling panel."

The special committee also will urge the Council to sponsor legislation at the 1986 Convention to permit the counseling panels to be involved in student-athletes' discussions with representatives of professional teams.

Perry said that this change would involve the institution more formally. At this time, student-athletes must negotiate alone with representatives of professional teams.

Another change proposed by the special committee to improve the institutional counseling panels is to conduct fall counseling panel forums. This annual meeting of counseling panel members would help clarify the roles of the panels and establish any national policies. The meeting would enable panel members to discuss items of mutual concern.

Other members who served on the Special Committee on Player Agents are C. Arnold Ferrin Jr., University of Utah; Carl C. James, Big Eight Conference; Charles McClendon, American Football Coaches Association; Fred A. Schaus, West Virginia University; Bo Schembechler, University of Michigan; Richard D. Schultz, University of Virginia; Eddie Sutton, University of Kentucky, and John R. Thompson Jr., Georgetown University.

Executive Regulations

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Executive Committee has adopted executive regulations consistent with the provisions of Constitution 6-3. Executive regulations may be amended at any annual or special Convention by a majority vote of the delegates present and voting in accordance with the procedures set forth in Bylaws 13-1, 13-2 and 13-3. Publication in this column of executive regulations adopted or revised by the Executive Committee constitutes official notice to the membership.

Regulation 5-5(e), page 196, was revised as follows:

(e) There is no forfeit of a contest until the referee or other appropriate contest official has assumed jurisdiction of the contest in accordance with the applicable playing rules. When a team does not appear (e.g., due to weather conditions, accidents, breakdown of vehicles, illness or catastrophic causes), a forfeit is not recorded. An institution shall not, for statistical purposes, declare a forfeit for nonfulfillment of a contract. Such instances shall be considered as "no contest." (Revised: 5/7/85)

NYSP can give disadvantaged youth a new outlook on life

By Timothy J. Lilley
The NCAA News Staff

Active in 42 states, the National Youth Sports Program has grown into one of the nation's leading summer activity youth programs.

"We will serve around 55,000 youngsters this summer," said Ruth M. Berkey, NCAA assistant executive director and coordinator of the Association's administration of NYSP. "Many people in our membership do not realize that NYSP is in its second decade. Our sponsorship and participation numbers grow every year, but we still have fewer than 150 institutions involved. I believe that could increase considerably if people knew more about the program itself."

The National Youth Sports Program grew out of a 1969 announcement by the Federal government that a $3 million grant had been committed to the development of a sports program for economically disadvantaged youth. That dollar amount has more than doubled since then.

NYSP is targeted to serve 10- to 16-year-olds and is administered by the NCAA, through participation by two- and four-year institutions around the country. "It is significant to note that NCAA membership is not required to sponsor an NYSP project," Berkey said.

The government continues to supply NYSP's operating capital through the Health and Human Services Department's Office of Community Services. "The program obviously has benefited many young people," Berkey said, "and the most gratifying sign of that effectiveness has been in the continued support NYSP has received from Congress."

Congressional support is relatively easy to measure, based on the annual grants NYSP has received. However, the effectiveness of the program as it relates to the young people it is designed to serve must be measured at the local level.

The people in charge of two of the 141 projects that have or will be held this summer had high praise for this kid's only 11 years old, but he is seeing that there is more to America, more to life, than simply surviving day-to-day in some city's impoverished neighborhood.

"We want these youngsters to see that there is a way for each of them to become productive citizens, instead of going the other way," Slider continued. "We have people on our staff who started participating 10 years ago when they were in grade school. Now, they're 20 years old, many of them in college; and they're back here working on the staff, showing the kids what they can become."

"Many of the people who have gone through our program have gone on to do quite well in college. That's what it's all about; we try to show these kids the better part of America through the things we do in NYSP."

Some of those things include sports activities—the learning of lifetime skills, the kinds of things that can provide recreation, exercise and enjoyment throughout adult life.

An emphasis on enrichment makes it possible for NYSP participants to hear about career possibilities; obtain guidance and counseling in areas relating to personal hygiene, alcohol serves the same role in a different setting. It could be argued that some Americans have stereotypes of this country's poverty as a disease that strikes only the charred, scarred, rat-infested portion of a city that seems always to be home to alcohol, narcot-and drug abuse, and to see that they are not alone in the problems they face.

"Our staff people keep in touch with the youngsters throughout the year," said Slider. "We have a genuine interest in their growth, and we believe that interest motivates many of these young people to accomplish things far beyond anyone's expectations."

In other parts of the country, NYSP

ics, vice and other illegal activities.

Some would also equate poverty with backwoods America: a ramshackle, crumbling mass of mismatched boards that provides shelter to men, women, children, dogs, cats, livestock and other life forms. Two decades past, a then-trailblazing social reform movement made this dirt-road, mountain-hollow squalor easier to digest by renaming its malignant nucleus Appalachia.

These days, poverty is finding a new home, nesting in areas once protected by an economy that supported heavy industry, like the steel mills of the Ohio Valley and the family farm—a species that has become endangered through an open season on foreclosures.

A decline in milling and mining operations, along with a lapse in a once-booming timber industry, has led destitution to Big Sky country, where Keith Glaes directs the NYSP project at the University of Montana in Missoula.

"A lot of the young people participating in the project this year are coming from families who have been without work for two years," said Glaes. "It used to be that the timber industry made it possible to make $12 an hour, work 10 months a year, and go hunting and fishing the rest of the NYSP. "I could go on forever talking about why NYSP is so good for the kids we serve," said Elmo Slider, who marks 1985 as the ninth year he has served on the staff of the project sponsored by California State University, Sacramento.

"We have many other people who have been on the staff as long as I have. Seeing the progress many of these kids make... that makes it all worthwhile."

Slider illustrated his claim with the story of a youngster whose first trip to NYSP occurred this summer. "We had one young fellow come in here with a real attitude problem, and we tried to let him know right off that his arrogance and hostility would not get him any attention from the staff. At the same time, we let him know that if there were things he wanted to talk about, questions he wanted to ask, we would always be there with a smile."

"He finally opened up to us. The bottom line was that he came to NYSP from the ghetto, and he had developed the belligerence that can become a way of life for young people in that atmosphere. He told us he hadn't seen his father in eight years... it was obvious that he needed direction, and he was finally looking for it."

"It wasn't long before he came back and said he'd never been in a place like this before, where people were so friendly and wanted to help. Now,

Illinois approves drug testing for athletes and staff in fall

The University of Illinois Athletics Association will begin a drug-testing program this fall for student-athletes and staff members. Anyone from the athletics director to a reserve player on the football team could be asked to provide a urine sample for testing. Refusal to sign a consent form or to refuse a drug test will be considered the same as a positive test each time the athlete or staff member refuses... Hofstra University will receive the Award of Merit from the National Institute on Parks and Grounds Management for its swim center, which contains the only Olympic-sized indoor pool in the New York metropolitan area. The institute cited Hofstra's facility as a "super fast pool" that also is extremely versatile.

The Football Writers Association of America all-America football team again will be sponsored by Mercedes-Benz of North America. The writers select a 24-man team, including a punter and place kicker. They also name the Outland Trophy winner, honoring the nation's top interior lineman... Brigham Young University's program for student athletics trainers has been denied accreditation by the National Athletic Trainers Association. The association cited poor control of drugs used to treat student-athletes, lack of certification by professional trainers in the program and the unsafe condition of some training equipment... Sonja Hogg, who resigned as women's athletics director and co-head coach of the women's basketball team at Louisiana Tech University, has been named girls' head basketball coach at Deer Park High School in the Houston area.

Mississippi Valley State University football coach Archie Cooley will be the subject of a made-for-television movie scheduled for showing next winter. Cooley said CBS is gathering material for the show, which will feature his life

The program will focus on the medical aspects of the sports sciences. Concentrations are available in adapted physical education/therapeutic recreation, athletics training, coaching and exercise physiology.

Wrestling has been discontinued as a varsity sport at Louisiana State University because of costs incurred in travel and recruiting. The Southeastern Conference, of which Louisiana State is a member, does not sponsor the sport... The University of Wisconsin, La Crosse, has discontinued women's field hockey as a varsity sport. The sport is not played at high schools in the state.

The health and physical education building at the University of Akron has become the JAR Arena, according to athletics director David H. Adams. The facility, completed in 1984, serves as home court for the men's and women's basketball teams and the women's volleyball team... The Kansas board of regents has approved publication of its intention to issue up to $7 million in bonds as part of the construction costs of the Fred Bramlage Coliseum, a 16,000-seat basketball arena at Kansas State University. The arena will be paid for through student fees. The coliseum, which will replace the 11,500-seat Ahearn Field House, is expected to be completed in August 1987.

The Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference is relocating its offices, effective August 5. The new address and telephone number are MAAC, One Lafayette Circle, Bridgeport, Connecticut 06604; 203/368-6969... A total of 485 student-athletes, including 12 who posted perfect 4.000 grade-point averages, have been named to the 29th annual Atlantic Coast Conference honor roll. A 3.000 GPA for the full school term is required for the honor. Of those selected, 176 have been on previous honor rolls. Seven are on the list for the fourth time and 43 for the third time... Vincent J. Dooley, athletics director and head football coach at the University of Georgia, announced July 25 that he will not seek the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate in 1986. Dooley said he decided to remain at Georgia because he felt a responsibility to the football team and the school.

Six NCAA golfers selected for U.S. Walker Cup team

NCAA Division I men's individual golf champion Clark Burroughs of Ohio State and 1985 runnerup Sam Randolph of Southern California have been named to the United States team for the 30th Walker Cup matches August 21-22 at Pine Valley Golf Club in New Jersey.

U.S. amateur champion Scott Verplank of Oklahoma State also will play for the U.S. in the oldest international golf competition, which has been held every two years since 1922. The U.S. leads the competition with Great Britain and Ireland at 26-2-1.

Jay Sigel of Berwyn, Pennsylvania, is the U.S. team captain and will be making his fifth Walker Cup appearance. Sigel is a two-time U.S. amateur champion. The other team member with Walker Cup experience is Bob Lewis Jr. of Warren, Ohio.

Rounding out the team are Jerry Haas of Wake Forest; Davis Love of North Carolina; James "Duffy" Waldorf of UCLA; Michael Podolak of Fargo, North Dakota, and Randy Sonnier of Woodlands, Texas.

time. And if you didn't get a job in the woods, you'd go to Butte or Anaconda and start work right away in a mine or something.

"These kids have to learn about their options, because it doesn't look like they will be able to do what their fathers did. We really stress, as part of the enrichment program, that the kids in NYSP consider every alternative for employment, whether it be a trade school, college, the service, whatever.

"Another big benefit we see from NYSP is the opportunity it provides for rural youth to get together with other people their age whom they might otherwise never have an opportunity to meet."

While many urban areas have significant city- or county-sponsored recreation programs, Glaes said the Montana NYSP project also is bringing lifetime sports skills to kids who otherwise may not get them.

"Basketball is the dominant sport in Montana... it has been for many years. We've tried to introduce other sports, both team and individual, that will permit these young people to continue being active well into their adult life. I believe, for example, that our efforts have been a contributing factor in the growth of rugby and soccer associations in this area.

"We try to provide instruction in at least 10 sports every summer, and we believe those sessions are as important to the kids as the enrichment programs."

One thing that the city NYSP has in common with the country NYSP is food.

"We have had different people comment on the fact that, throughout the summer, this (NYSP project) is the only opportunity some of these kids will have for a decent meal during the day," Glaes said. "We have a fair incidence of malnutrition around here, and I believe you will find that this project, like just about all the others, goes a long way toward providing the basic nutrition and hygiene needs of the participants."

In a nutshell, NYSP combines sports and enrichment activities with a good lunch and comes up with a way of introducing almost 55,000 of America's underprivileged youth to the good things that can be a part of their lives.

"We hope other member institutions see how valuable an NYSP project could be to the youth in their area," Berkey said. "We would hope they would call the NCAA national office or write for more information or apply for participation in 1986.

"NYSP gets bigger every year, but there always is room for new projects," Berkey said.

CORRECTIONS

Due to a reporter's error, three conferences were inadvertently omitted from the list of Division I women's basketball conferences granted automatic qualification for the 1986 tournament as listed in the July 17 issue of the NCAA News. The Big Eight, Gateway and High Country conferences should have been included in the list.

Because of an editor's error, the site for the 1986 Final Four was listed as New Orleans, Louisiana, in the July 17 issue of the News. New Orleans is the site for the 1987 Final Four. The 1986 Division I men's basketball champion will be decided in Dallas. In addition, the University of Arizona was mistakenly identified as the host of the West region basketball tournament in 1987. Arizona will be the site for first- and second-round games.

In the June 19 issue of the News, due to an editor's error, the sports information director at Pan American University was identified incorrectly. Jim McKone is the SID.

Florida will stay in conference

The University of Florida, which threatened to pull out of the Southeastern Conference after the Gators were stripped of the 1984 SEC football title, will remain in the 10-school league, President Marshall M. Criser said July 25.

Criser's statement — released eight weeks after the SEC presidents voted to take the crown because Florida had been placed on NCAA probation — said the Gators' study of alternatives was being terminated, in part, because of speculation over the school's motives.

"I have determined that the time and effort required for careful analysis and action are not now available and the conclusions of such study, if change were indicated, would probably be suspect regardless of its stated rationale," Criser said.

"Furthermore, existing contractual relationships make any abrupt change impossible," he told the Associated Press.

Criser announced recently that prior scheduling and other factors would prevent Florida from withdrawing from the conference in the next year. He said at the time, though, that the university would continue to examine the long-term effects of remaining in the league.

Florida, a charter member when the SEC was formed in 1933, swept to its first-ever football championship with a 5-0-1 league record, despite distractions created by the culmination of an NCAA investigation that lasted two years.

The SEC's executive committee voted earlier this year to let Florida keep the title, but the league's presidents reversed the decision.

Baseball Committee hopes to cut time from games over three hours

Concern about the length of college baseball games was one of the primary topics at the July 15-18 meeting of the NCAA Baseball Committee in South Lake Tahoe, California.

Although aluminum bats often are cited as the main reason behind increased offense and extended games during the past few years, the Baseball Committee focused on other areas that have caused many games to exceed three hours.

The committee believes that umpires have tightened the strike zone and are not calling many pitches strikes that are above the waist and in the strike zone. This has affected pitchers, increased the number of runs in games and added to the length of games. The committee emphasized that umpires should call pitches strikes that are in the strike zone, as outlined in the NCAA Baseball Rules book.

In another move to improve the pace of college baseball, the Baseball Committee reduced from eight to five the number of warm-up pitches between innings.

In addition, a subcommittee was appointed to study the use of aluminum and wood bats, as well as the new graphite bats. Members of the subcommittee are Johnny L. Reagan, Murray State University, chair of the overall committee; Mike Riskas, Pomona-Pitzer Colleges; Larry Cochell, Oral Roberts University, and Hal Smeltzly, Florida Southern College. The subcommittee will review several studies and tests that have been conducted on the use of aluminum and wood bats and will report to the committee in its November 11-14 meeting in Kansas City.

The subcommittee also will be responsible for recommending the baseball to be used in NCAA championships play. The contract with Diamond expires after the 1986 championship.

"Interest in college baseball is at an all-time high at this point," Reagan said. "We are, however, concerned about the number of three-hour games and hope that these changes will help reduce the length of games."

The Division I subcommittee recommended another expansion in its championship, from 38 to 40 teams. The 1985 championship was the first with 38 teams, having jumped from 36 teams in 1984. Division I members of the Baseball Committee also reviewed and revised lists of umpires for championship competition.

In Division II, the committee voted to return to Montgomery, Alabama, the site of the most successful Division II championship in history (1985). The committee is seeking an additional day to conduct the 1986 tournament.

In hopes of playing as much late afternoon and night baseball as possible, to attract larger crowds, the committee has recommended May 23-28 as the dates for the 1986 Division II Baseball Championship. Double-headers would be played on most days, with the possibility of one triple-header.

For the 11th straight year, the Baseball Committee recommended Marietta, Ohio, as the site for the 1986 Division III Baseball Championship, pending budget approval. Marietta College serves as host institution. The Division III subcommittee also recommended that one umpire from each region be assigned to the finals because it believes the current restrictions affect the quality of umpiring.

All championships items will be considered by the Executive Committee in its August 12-13 meeting in Boston.

Classified ad may give coach last word in recruiting wars

Telephone lines into Upper Iowa University were humming July 23 in response to a newspaper advertisement seeking football players for the small school tucked away in Fayette, in the upper northeast corner of the state.

Coach Steve Fickert, who has been on the job only since March, placed a large display ad in the Chicago Sun-Times, urging prospective players to contact the school.

Fickert said the response has been excellent.

"We have a toll-free number that they call and it was quite busy all day yesterday, and they tell me it's been ringing constantly today," said Fickert, formerly an assistant at the University of Texas, Austin.

"We'll find out how well it goes when we actually get some students. But even if we get one, it will have more than paid for the ad. And if we get one tailback or linebacker, it will be well worth it."

All callers are referred to the admissions office, and Fickert said about 15 calls were received July 22.

The newspaper ad reads: "Wanted: College football players. Make your dreams come true. Play football for a university that is dedicated to excellence in education and has made a strong commitment to its athletics program."

Upper Iowa, which was 1-9 in football last fall, is a private, coeducational school of 714 students in a city of 1,500. As an NCAA Division III school, Upper Iowa offers no athletics grants-in-aid, but Fickert said financial aid is available.

He added that the school offers 15 sports for men and women, and 80 percent of the students participate in intercollegiate athletics.

Fickert, also the school's athletics director, said the idea for the newspaper ad was hatched during a football staff meeting about a month ago.

Fickert said he and his staff decided to run the ad in Chicago because the city traditionally has been the school's No. 2 area for recruiting students.

Tax-exempt status nullified

Syracuse reviewing nonsports uses of dome

Syracuse University will schedule no more rock concerts at the Carrier Dome while studying a court decision that says such concerts hurt the dome's tax-exempt status, a university spokesman said July 22.

State Supreme Court Justice Thomas J. Murphy ruled last month that rock concerts and some other profit-making events held in the dome are not related to education; therefore, the university must pay some property taxes on the 55,000-seat covered stadium.

"The university is reviewing the appropriateness of sponsoring concerts in the Carrier Dome in view of Judge Murphy's decision," spokesman Dan Forbush said.

Forbush declined to say whether the university also had frozen scheduling of other profit-making events called into question by Murphy's decision, such as political and religious gatherings.

Although the review focuses on rock concerts, Forbush said it "reflects a larger consideration of the general use of the Carrier Dome."

Syracuse University has said it intends to appeal Murphy's ruling, but it cannot do so until a second phase of the current case is completed. Murphy is scheduled to hear testimony in October on how much the dome is worth for tax-assessment purposes.

The university claims the Carrier Dome is an educational building and thus nontaxable.

The city of Syracuse claims the Carrier Dome has made $55 million for Syracuse University since it opened in 1980 and says the dome should pay its "fair share" of taxes as a profit-making business.

No drug abuse

Two separate investigations have revealed no evidence to support allegations of steroid abuse by the University of Washington, the university said July 24.

The probes were conducted by the State Board of Pharmacy and the school's athletics department.

"Our internal review and the external investigation by the pharmacy board arrived at pretty much the same conclusion—that no evidence has been brought forth to support allegations of drug abuse by the University of Washington," athletics director Milo R. Lude told a news conference on the Seattle campus.

Clark said ASU fired Weinbauer

"We did not find that there was any intentional violation in the methods being used to distribute drugs," added Don Williams, executive secretary of the pharmacy board. "Nor did we find that there were any problems or harm that came to anyone as a result of the drug distribution methods."

The investigations were started following a copyright story May 1 in the university's student newspaper. The paper said that athletes, particularly members of the men's track and field team, used steroids during the past 11 years.

Claim is filed

Arizona State University basketball coach Bob Weinbauer has filed a claim for $400,000 in his recent firing, attorney Scott Clark said July 25.

Clark said the claim, which was served July 24, named the State of Arizona, the Arizona Board of Regents, Arizona State University, ASU President J. Russell Nelson, acting ASU athletics director Frank Sackton and ASU counsel Duane Schultz.

Clark said the parties named in the claim have 60 days to respond; and if they do not reach an agreement, he will file a lawsuit for a larger amount.

1985 NCAA FOOTBALL

Keith Byars - Ohio State Running Back

Football records book

NCAA Football, the complete compilation of in-season and postseason individual, team and coaching records, is available from the NCAA publishing department. This year's edition features consensus all-America tailback Keith Byars of Ohio State University. He led the nation in rushing, scoring and all-purpose running last season. The $5 publication, which also contains 1985 schedules and 1984 game-by-game scores for all NCAA football-playing institutions, can be ordered from NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201. First-class postage is an additional $2.

Weinbauer has coached at ASU for the past three years, including back-to-back losing seasons in the past two years. He contended the university had given him a five-year contract, but Nelson said any such agreement would not be binding because state law limits coaches to one-year contracts.

Clark said ASU fired Weinbauer

26 and was booked with one count of conspiracy to commit sports bribery before being released on his own recognizance, the district attorney's office said.

He is accused of trying to control the score in a February 2 game against the University of Southern Mississippi.

Turkel was the ninth person arrested in the case.

At Tulane, Turkel roomed with Gary Kranz, who has pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit sports bribery and sports bribery.

Kranz agreed to cooperate as part of a plea bargain in which prosecutors dropped several cocaine charges against him as part of the point-shaving investigation.

Prosecutors interviewed Turkel during the early stages of their investigation but reportedly decided to arrest him only after Kranz made a statement about the case.

Three basketball players, two other students and two nonstudents were indicted earlier.

Three of the students and one player have pleaded guilty and are expected to testify in the August 5 trial of team star John "Hot Rod" Williams, who is charged with conspiracy to commit sports bribery.
