New bowl criteria approved by Council

The NCAA Postseason Football Committee has recommended and the NCAA Council has approved new criteria for certification of new and existing football bowl games.

The new criteria are in addition to previous requirements, including the fact that each bowl must assure a pay-out of at least $400,000 per participating team this year and $500,000 per team beginning next year.

Included among the new criteria are six that are applicable to all existing bowls and to applicants for new bowls:

1. Each bowl management structure must include individuals with previous experience or association with intercollegiate football.

2. Each application for certification must be accompanied by letters recommending certification of the game signed by the chief executive officers of 10 member institutions that have participated in a bowl game at least once in the previous five years.

3. Each application must include an organizational chart that demonstrates active community involvement in the bowl's various committees.

4. Each application must be accompanied by a letter of commitment from a national network or an established syndicator of college football for the telecast of the game.

5. Each bowl must demonstrate that it has obtained a letter of credit from its telecast network or syndicator ensuring full payment of the agreed-upon television fee.

6. Each application must be accompanied by a $1.5 million letter of credit. That amount may be reduced by the amount of the letter of credit held by the bowl from its telecast network or syndicator.

In addition, each bowl management applying for recertification of its game must meet these additional requirements:

- The application must include confirmation that full payment has been made to the participating teams in the previous year's game.

- The application must include documentation that the bowl's management conducted meetings prior to its most recent games involving the head coaches, at least one other representative from each participating institution, the game officials and a representative of the television network or syndicator. Such a meeting must have included discussion of NCAA football playing rules governing persons in the team area and coaching box, as well as length of the half time; NCAA constitutional provisions regarding extra benefits for student-athletes, and the Association's bylaw and executive-regulation provisions covering radio broadcast and telecast restrictions.

"In addition, the committee reaff-

Staff services restructured to enhance compliance effort

A restructuring of NCAA staff services has been approved by the NCAA Executive Committee in an effort to provide maximum assistance to NCAA member institutions in their renewed commitment to abide by the rules of intercollegiate athletics.

NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers announced the restructuring, which consists of the enforcement department being renamed the compliance and enforcement department and the legislative services department being charged with an expanded role in conducting regional rules clinics for member institutions and conferences.

The restructuring is designed to assure that comparable attention is given to:

- The development and interpretation of NCAA legislation;

- A compliance service for chief executive officers and their representatives to assist them in determining the best way of achieving compliance with the rules, and

- An enhanced enforcement effort to carry forward the mandate of the June 1985 special Convention as to more severe penalties for major and repeat violators.

The Executive Committee approved the overall concept of the effort last month and provided the funds in the 1985-86 budget to staff the expansion of services in each of the three areas.

Byers announced that Stephen R. Morgan will be in charge of the compliance and enforcement department, with S. David Berst continuing as director of enforcement, his current responsibility. It is expected that a director of compliance will be named from within the current staff.

William B. Hunt, currently in charge of enforcement, will head the legislative services department, and John H. Leavens and Thomas E. Yeager will continue as directors of legislative services.

"We want to provide services to back up the initiatives of the Presidents Commission and the overwhelming commitment of the membership at the June Convention," Byers said. "The Presidents Commission clearly is calling upon the chief executive officers to stand firmly for integrity in the conduct of college athletics. The

William B. Hunt

June Convention vote showed that the chief executives are taking that challenge seriously.

"It was the conclusion of the NCAA Staff Evaluation Subcommittee and the Executive Committee that college presidents and chancellors should expect qualified help and guidance from the NCAA national office in charting the best means of securing compliance on their respective campuses and among their supporters," he said.

"Bill Hunt probably has done more than any one individual to maintain the effectiveness of the NCAA enforcement effort during trying times, and it is a credit to his own high

Alternative student-athlete aid form provided for Division III members

Alternative affidavit forms concerning financial aid provided to student-athletes in Division III have been mailed to chief executive officers in that division.

The alternative student-athlete form was developed and approved for Division III at the request of the Division III Steering Committee because some members of the division expressed concern that the required review of student-athletes' affidavits by head coaches would provide the coaches information about the specific amount of institutionally administered financial aid provided to each student-athlete.

Some institutions believe this information should be restricted to the student-athlete's family and the institution's regular financial aid authority.

The new affidavit does not replace those mailed August 1, but it may be used in place of the earlier form if the institution desires. The affidavit form for coaches and the chief executive officer's certification form mailed August 1 have not been changed. The forms are to implement Proposal No. 9 (compliance program), overwhelmingly adopted by the June special Convention.

The original student-athlete's affidavit form has been modified to consolidate the first two questions concerning financial assistance administered by the institution. The Division III student-athlete now is asked whether he or she is receiving any financial assistance in excess of financial need [as determined by Bylaw 11-3-(a)] and, if so, the amount and source of such excess aid. The other four questions remain the same.

No alternative to the original head coach's form is provided. That form requires the coach to review each student-athlete's affidavit and to conduct an independent investigation of financial aid received by student-athletes.

The investigation should involve a confirmation to the coach from the financial aid authority that the student-athletes in the coach's sport are not receiving institutional aid in excess of need.

The chief executive officer's certification form must be returned to the national office by October 1 for fall sports or all sports. If an institution returns the certification for fall sports only by October 1, it must submit the form for all other sports by December 1.

College football on TV: Less is more, chaos is king

By Jerry Lindquist
Richmond Times-Dispatch

Nobody said television sports was supposed to make sense. ABC expects ratings to tumble but revenue to climb in its college football series this fall. Uh, run that by us again, will you, Clyde? Buzz phrase for network hucksters these days is "more is less," but here we've got "less is more."

Not to be concerned. It works this way:

Last season, the first of deregulation, there was a great deal of scrambling. The Supreme Court, telling the NCAA to go sit in a corner, flung open the doors. Everyone into the pool. You want to televise football? Be our guest, the justices said. The NCAA no longer holds exclusive rights. It was in violation of antitrust laws. Go to it.

And they did. Syndicators flocked to the marketplace. They were wall-to-wall. "Chaos," ABC's Donn Bernstein calls it. The ensuing glut of games left several revenue-poor producers, who couldn't cover rights fees, ducking for cover. It was a mess. ABC and CBS, which had shared the NCAA contract, tangled, and while CBS lost the ratings game badly (8.3 to 6.1), it still managed to "make a little money," a spokesman says. Arledge U. finished in the red.

Why? "We gave it away. I mean, GAVE IT AWAY," says Bernstein.

Advertisers got real bargains. Sales were based on a projected rating of 6.

CBS opted for the noon Saturday afternoon window (a little TV lingo, there), while ABC went for the 3:30-to-6 o'clock slot. The early window proved a pain. CBS found itself opposite area syndicators—the ACC package, for example.

"...And we were hammered. One thing last year proved: College football points (percentage of this country's 89.3 million TV households) available late Saturday afternoons. He sees ABC dropping back to numbers in the mid-7s, while CBS rises to a similar total. But that's OK, Bernstein says, because commercials are being sold on the basis of a mid-7, which means a rate increase.

"Our sales have been good," Bernstein says. "We'll be all right."

The glut rut continues in 1985.

terpart agrees.

"It's not a question of good or better or worse. What we have now is a sense of direction; and that's good, because we came out of 1984 filled with despair, high anxiety and a lack of direction," Bernstein says. "The heyday of million-dollar contracts and high ratings is over. The dust has begun to settle. We know we can survive."

"We know what we have, and what we're going to do with it," the man from CBS says. "Things are going to be better [than last year]."

Whatever you say.

Bernstein can understand why many schools are moaning "The Supreme Court Done Me Wrong Blues." Had the NCAA retained its TV grip, approximately $90 million would have been distributed this year alone. That includes $36 million each from CBS and ABC, in accordance with what would have been the final of a three-year agreement. Bernstein puts the pencil to this year's figures and comes up with an estimated $55 million, which includes all syndication fees.

"Some schools' prospects are not as good as they were before," he says, citing Virginia Tech for one.

ACC schools, on the other hand, will make out like bandits. The Universities of Georgia and Oklahoma, which brought the original suit against NCAA control, did the ACC a favor.

"I've said that all along," says Wake Forest athletics director Gene Hooks.

No question ACC football will receive its greatest exposure ever this season. CBS entered into a two-year arrangement that will pay a reported $3 million, "but I think they went into it more for the exposure than the money," the network spokesman says.

WTBS will feature ACC teams at least three times. The Madison Square Garden cable network will bring ACC football to the New York metropolitan area. All that in addition to the conference's own series produced by Jefferson-Pilot Teleproductions of Charlotte.

Although a charter member of the CFA, the ACC chose to strike its own TV deal rather than remain part of the CFA-on-ABC, which resulted in one game (Wake Forest-Virginia) seen on a limited, regional basis a season ago.

Bernstein: "The ACC said, 'We can do better.' There were no strangleholds any more. The way was clear. They walked across the street to where the grass was greener and got a better deal."

So, tell us, Donn, what effect does the ACC's absence have overall?

"It always hurts when you lose good teams," Bernstein says, "but, no, it doesn't hurt that much. It's not going to devastate or destroy the CFA package."

Columnary Craft

is a very regional sport," the man from CBS says.

This year, CBS will put as many as six games (possibly more) directly opposite ABC's diet of Big 10, PAC-10, ACC and selected independent schools. The way CBS' shakers and movers see it, they didn't have a choice. No way were they going head-to-head with regional brokers any more. They'll take their chances against ABC's College Football Association package.

"ABC doesn't like it...but CBS has never been afraid of competition. Our news divisions do it. We do it on Sundays with the NFL. Why not college football? Let's have some fun," the CBS spokesman says.

What this all means, of course, is that viewers will have to make a choice. Bernstein estimates 15 rating

Grab a brewskie, settle back and watch the rah-rah guys run down the field—and into each other—to your little old pigskin heart's content. There will be 13 ACC games on WXEX-8 (in Richmond). SuperStation WTBS has a Saturday afternoon Southeastern Conference series and a Saturday night lineup of assorted teams that will compete in prime time with ESPN's CFA series. ESPN also has a limited Thursday night schedule. The Satellite Program Network, also available on Storer and Continental cable, will have a small-college game of the week and all University of Illinois games on tape delay. USA cable has a football schedule. So does local independent WRLH-35, although that pretty much overlaps with WTBS.

Who says things have changed? Well, Bernstein does. His CBS coun-

"It doesn't mean someone is going to be closed down for two years (the so-called death-penalty rule adopted by the NCAA membership). It could be one game or part of a season.

"The maximum authorized is two years. I don't think that is widely understood.

"I think the complete elimination was tailored to fit the situation. Sure, any time a major piece of legislation of this type is considered, litigation is brought up. There's no way to avoid litigation in our society."

"There needs to be much greater cooperation between administrators and coaches. Too many times, they view their relationship as adversarial, when in fact they should be working toward a common objective.

"If the recommendations of the NCAA Presidents Commission are followed, it will in large part alleviate the current concerns we have in college athletics."

The Commercial Appeal, Memphis, Tennessee

"Many fans are angry about recent investigations and reports about the Memphis State University athletics program. They should realize, however, that MSU is being affected by a nationwide trend, not isolated fault-finding.

"The 'new direction' of the NCAA is an intensified effort to stop the tide of professionalism from swamping college athletics. Perhaps the announcement of guidelines for booster clubs represents a new direction for Memphis State, too, both in compliance with NCAA rules and in conducting a more open athletics program.

"The university administration needs to maintain tight control over every facet of the program. It also needs to be forthright in explaining to the public what's happening with the program. If it follows that direction, there will be fewer violations, less confusion and a greater chance for stable growth toward athletics excellence."

"What we're trying to do (with a drug-testing program) is provide the resources for athletes to face the problems of such a complex society as we have.

"I think it's lousy that under the rules anybody can get a head start. It's not fair; it gives Pittsburgh (which started its season two weeks ago against Purdue) a tremendous advantage. They have had 40 practices to 20 practices for us, in addition to having played a game. The greatest improvement of a team comes between the first and second games of the season.

"Because of television, games are being moved ahead in the schedule. Right now, there is no policy or procedure (for finding a solution). There has to be a common starting point.

"You don't (compensate) if you have an inexperienced team. At Ohio State, we have not been fast starters. Obviously, you don't want to start that way against Pittsburgh. But there's money involved, and that's why television moves games around."

"Blacks still carry the stigma. I don't care what level you're at. There's always the implication you aren't as good as your white peers. Then Blacks entering college pick up these perceptions and don't feel as good as whites, so it becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy."

"I would like to see the limit (grant-in-aid) at 25 with no upper limit. Then, we would encourage the staff to keep the kids in school as long as possible.

"The NCAA used its portion of (football) TV income to sponsor championships in all sports in Divisions I, II and III. Without that income, you might have a wrestler at Capital (University) who would win the Ohio Athletic Conference championships; and say the national championships are at Seattle; he wouldn't have his way paid.

"Now, with the lack of income, the NCAA won't be able to pay his transportation. That's a shame, because it affects athletes who had nothing to do with the ruling (U.S. Supreme Court ruling voiding the NCAA football television contracts) in the first place. Unless things change, they will continue to get worse."

Eric N. Berg, columnist

The New York Times

"Artificial turf has surged into popularity in recent years and has become a $50 million industry worldwide. But many experts say that artificial turf is a leading cause of player injury. Some say man-made surfaces increase the speed of the contests, and that leads to more sprains. Designers of artificial turf have been working hard to produce what they say are safer surfaces...several smaller companies have entered the fray and have produced three-part 'systems' in which a thick pad is placed over asphalt or gravel; then a two-part carpet, consisting of the 'grass,' is attached to a plastic sheet called a pile, which is attached to the underlying pad. The total thickness is two inches.

"Equally important, many companies have begun using polypropylene instead of nylon to make artificial grass itself. While both substances technically are plastics, polypropylene is believed by materials experts to be the more flexible and durable.

"Toward the same end, the new surfaces being shown to athletics directors also have loose sand fills in the polypropylene

Some coaches would like a slimmed down NCAA rule book

By Steve Richardson
The Kansas City Times

Don Fambrough, former Kansas football coach, once said the NCAA Manual had grown so thick he couldn't keep up with it. His successor at Kansas, Mike Gottfried, would like to chop it in half, or even into one-sixteenths.

"They have 962 zillion rules," Gottfried said. "The major problem is the rules as they stand today. Those rules are not designed for 1985, probably for 1938. They don't keep up with the times."

Gottfried is not on an island unto himself.

Joe Morrison, South Carolina football coach, calls for the same reduction and deletion of unnecessary rules. Georgia Coach Vince Dooley begs for a change, too.

"I would like to see a complete study of the rules by a committee of knowledgeable individuals that might make them more simple and understandable," Dooley said.

If no changes are made, what will continue to happen? Abuses in recruiting, many coaches say. Gottfried says several rules restricting the players' ability to earn extra money should have been changed years ago. Again, he's not alone.

Maryland Coach Bobby Ross said recruiting violations are indirectly caused by some rules, including the limits on recipients of Pell Grants, Federal grants to underprivileged students.

In recent years, the NCAA has made strides in taking some of the rules off the book and liberalizing others. At January's NCAA Convention, legislation passed allowing student-athletes to work during the summers while attending summer school. At the 1984 Convention, Pell Grant money available to students on athletics scholarship was extended from $400 to $900.

But a move in January to increase a student-athlete's Pell Grant allowance to $1,400, up from the current $900 a year, failed. And efforts to provide incidental fees of $50 to $200 a month for athletes to take care of laundry and other personal needs have failed.

"Players should be given $50 a month spending money in Division I-A," said Nebraska coach Tom Osborne, "and they should be allowed to keep the full $1,800 of the Pell Grant money over and above their scholarship money if they qualify for that amount. I believe players are being asked to sacrifice more and more and in return are receiving less and less from the game."

What seems to be a particular problem concerning the rule book is the fact that one set of rules isn't always applicable to all parts of the country.

"One of the main problems we have today in college football is the diversity all across the country," Auburn coach Pat Dye said. "It is very difficult to have one set of rules for everybody. The problems we have in the South are different from the problems they have in the Ivy League...."

"One of the problems in our section of the country is recruiting kids from very, very low income levels, kids whose families are on welfare. To bring these kids into an environment where they need more than their parents can give them creates problems for them and college football."

The rule book, however, may get even thicker.

Pat Dye

Joe Morrison

In coming months, legislation is expected to be passed that will include drug testing on the national level, administered by the NCAA. And at the 1986 NCAA Convention in New Orleans, another controversial subject will be discussed: stricter admission standards for freshman athletes to be eligible to play their first year.

Beginning in 1986, to be eligible for competition, freshman athletes at Division I schools must have a 700 score on the SAT or a 15 on the ACT plus a 2.000 grade point (on a 4.000 scale) in a core curriculum of 11 courses. The test-score requirements are considered by some critics to be biased toward certain racial and socioeconomic groups.

Coaches as well as administrators have mixed views on whether the test scores should be used. The NCAA Special Academic Standards Committee has proposed an "eligibility" index, combining grade-point and test scores, that would eliminate the absolute test-score requirement. Also, dropping the ACT requirement to 13 in the index has been proposed by the same committee.

Some coaches believe freshmen should be ineligible anyway, as they acclimate themselves to college life. But many administrators have fought the return to the early 1970s, when freshmen were ineligible for varsity competition, because of the costs of maintaining freshmen teams, which many schools have abandoned.

Regardless of whether freshmen play, the book, the NCAA Manual, is just too much for some people.

"The problem is the first day they took the first dollar from the booster club," Gottfried said. "It (college athletics) changed a little bit then."

Alumni, who sometimes neither understand nor care about NCAA rules, get into the picture. Southern Methodist, which just began a three-year NCAA probation, is allowed no alumni or booster involvement in football recruiting for three years, and four SMU boosters have been permanently banned from any recruiting or association with any SMU recruit or athlete.

The answer may be outside the NCAA, one coach says.

"I would propose not a rule," said Bill Yung, Texas-El Paso football coach, "but a civil law that would eliminate alumni involvement in the recruiting process and make alumni answerable to appropriate authorities. This would be beyond the reach of the NCAA. I recognize that alumni then would have to be responsible to judge and jury."

That's one way to cut down on the number of pages in the NCAA Manual.

Committee Notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, administrative assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than September 30, 1984.

Men's Golf: Replacement for John W. Wadas, University of South Florida, no longer an administrator under the NCAA definition. Appointee must be a Division I administrator.

COMMITTEE CHANGES

Council: New address and telephone number: William H. Baughn, Acting Chancellor (also will continue as faculty representative), University of Colorado, Campus Box 17, Boulder, Colorado 80309, 303/492-8908; Use home address and telephone number for: Mary Alice Hill, 10150 Campo Road, Spring Valley, California 92077, 619/460-2902.

Men's and Women's Skiing: Gail A. Bigglestone, University of New Hampshire, appointed to replace Martha Rockwell, Dartmouth College, resigned from the committee.

Women's Skiing: Bonnie J. Kestner, Sweet Briar College, appointed to replace Timothy F. Welsh, no longer at a Division III, District 3 institution.

Division II Women's Volleyball: Linda Delk, University of Northern Colorado, appointed to replace Tania R. Torrence, Lincoln University (Missouri), resigned from the committee.

Eligibility: Della Durant, Pennsylvania State University, appointed to replace Mary Alice Hill, no longer at San Diego State University.

National Youth Sports Program: Donald W. Morefield, University of Dayton, appointed to replace Stanley V. Wright, resigned as director of athletics at Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck.

Postseason Football: Ann Marie Lawler, now at the University of Florida instead of the University of Alabama.

Top Ten Selection: Dan Foster, Greenville News (South Carolina) is serving as a replacement for Jack Gallagher, The Houston Post, as acting president of the Football Writers Association because of Gallagher's illness. Foster, therefore, has been appointed to serve in Gallagher's stead on the Top Ten Selection Committee.

Voting: James I. Tarman, Pennsylvania State University, appointed to replace Stanley V. Wright, resigned as director of athletics at Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck.

Follow-up studies have found, not surprisingly, that upwards of 90 percent of National Football League players prefer grass. Those who like plastic are mostly the ones who don't get knocked around a lot—punters, place-kickers and the like. Even these figures understate the problem. "In some, if not all, respects, the best thing about small colleges is that they are small. Low enrollments and tight budgets discourage, if not prohibit, the expansion of departments beyond the number of professors needed to teach the required and elective courses. What this means is that professors are expected to devote themselves to the classroom and its inhabitants rather than to the careerist projects through which reputations too often are made in the larger, ostensibly more prestigious institutions. It is neither simplification nor sentimentalization to say that at the small colleges, more often than not the students come first. # Division I title race could be cross-country chase

Tim Hacker, Arkansas

The NCAA News Staff

Division I men's cross country followers may see a three-horse race for dominance this fall. The inside track has to go to last year's triple-crown winners, the University of Arkansas, although Arizona and Wisconsin seem ready to make memorable stretch runs.

"We should be decent, but I don't believe we will have enough firepower up front," said Arkansas coach John McDonnell, who guided the Razorbacks to team titles in cross country, indoor track and outdoor track last season. "We're not throwing in the towel, but Wisconsin and Arizona are loaded, and they will be tough."

Arkansas has three of the top five runners back from a year ago, but David Swain (14th at the championships and Arkansas' first finisher) is gone, despite thoughts otherwise.

"David only had three years of eligibility, so he will not be back," explained McDonnell. Razorback returnees include sophomore Joe Falcon (24th at the 1984 championships), junior Gary Taylor (56th) and senior Espen Borge (37th).

McDonnell will be looking for help from some relatively unheralded runners, including Chris Zinn, who was redshirted last season; Doug Consiglio, and Richard Cooper. "Chris is a good runner, and having him back will be a big asset," McDonnell said. "Doug has run 8:43 in the steeplechase, and he's a four-minute miler. Cooper wasn't really good in high school but he has been coming on like gangbusters; he really could help us."

McDonnell also speculated that a fast course at the 1985 championships would help the Razorbacks in an attempt to capture the first jewel in a 1985 "triple crown" effort.

"We won the title a year ago with a bunch of milers," he said. "The course at Penn State was very fast—it was suitable to milers. If the course is fast again this year, we believe it would help us."

McDonnell must find enough quality runners to replace three-time all-America selection Paul Donovan, along with Roland Reina and Swain, but he also must develop some depth.

Depth does not appear to be a problem at Arizona, where six of the top seven runners return from a second-place championship effort a year ago. The lone loss appears major (Tom Ansberry finished fifth overall last fall), but coach Dave Murray is confident, and for good reason.

"We are a very young team, but hopefully, our underclassmen have matured quite a bit after their exposure to national and world-class competition," Murray said. Three Arizona sophomores, Jeff Cannada, Matt Giusto and Simon Gutierrez, were members of the United States team that ran in the world junior championships this summer, and Cannada was the top American finisher.

Add to these fine young runners the returning leadership of seniors Keith Morrison and Andre Woods, and throw in another returning sophomore, Chris Morgan, and the Wildcats appear very strong.

Then, think about these newcomers. Aaron Ramirez has transferred from UTEP. "He is definitely going to be a factor," Murray said. "He may even break the top five, and I'm sure he will be in our top seven."

Another threat to make the top seven is redshirt sophomore Jim Maxwell. He and Ramirez will battle two of the top freshmen in the country—John Quade and Doug Herrin—for spots in Arizona's top seven.

Quade, out of Woodinville, Washington, owns the third fastest 1,500-meter race ever run at the high school level (3:44.43), and Herrin has a similar record for 800 meters. Herrin is a story in himself, being a native of Anchorage, Alaska, which is not known for its training conditions.

"It will be a challenge to duplicate our performance of a year ago, but we have a fine nucleus of runners to work with," said Murray. "Arkansas and Wisconsin have to be the other teams people are talking about."

"Quite frankly, the reason we finished ahead of Wisconsin a year ago, in my opinion, is that our young runners came through for us and theirs didn't. Anything can happen this season, but I believe we have the horses to finish in the top five."

Murray said his goal was to produce a team that, collectively, would make up for the loss of Ansberry. A tight group, in terms of times, would be helpful. Last season, Arizona's two-through-five runners at the Division I championships were separated by only 15 seconds. That kind of consistency in 1985 easily could lead to a title.

At Wisconsin, seniors Tim Hacker, Scott Jenkins and Joe Stinzi are a terrific trio. A dozen lettermen return for coach Martin Smith, and the Badgers have to be considered as strong as any team in the country.

Senior Kelley Delaney and sophomore Phil Schoensee also should make the top seven, and the rest of the returning group will battle for spots with newcomers Scott Fry (Sandusky, Ohio) and Chris Borse (St. Louis, Missouri). Hacker and Jenkins will serve as cocaptains as the team tries for a fifth straight top-five national finish and a seventh consecutive Big Ten Conference title. The return of Stinzi, who was redshirted last season, may be the catalyst that leads the Badgers to national honors.

Providence women's track coach Ray Treacy takes over the men's cross country program and a team tabbed best in the East by the New England Track Coaches Association.

The Friars will be led by senior cocaptains Andy Ronan and Mike Capper, but Treacy said the key to the team's success may hinge on the performances of sophomores Ed Harratty, Mark Keller and Kerion Tumbleton.

"If they (the sophomores) continue to progress as they have, we will once again be the team to beat in New England," said Treacy, a former runner and academic all-America at Providence.

Tennessee has a new coach in Doug Brown, and the Volunteers will be looking for ways to make up for the loss of two-time all-America Doug Tolson. Seniors David Giles, David Krafur and John Young will lead the '85 squad, and sophomores Gene Gray and Ted Goodlake should join

13 of top 14 runners return in Division II

Edinboro coach Doug Watts ought to be pretty happy. He has one of the best Division II men's cross country teams this season, and the Division II championships will be held on familiar turf. Call the Fighting Scots a favorite as the new year begins.

"We should be pretty good," said Watts, who took Edinboro to a second-place finish at last year's national championships. "But I believe that, for individuals, this may be the hardest year ever to make all-America at the Division II level."

Watts edits a newsletter devoted to running, and his research indicates that 13 of the top 14 individuals from last year's championships are back. Only Mike Vanatta, who won the individual title and led his Southeast Missouri State team to the overall championship, has graduated.

Watts has his own shining star back in junior Luke Graham, a top-10 finisher a year ago. Edinboro also boasts the return of seniors Steve Repko, Mike Hulme and Bill Maloney and junior Tim Dunthorne.

"We have some depth this season; in fact, I believe we are basically interchangeable in terms of positions from runners four through nine, which will be very helpful should injuries crop up," Watts said.

With the Division II championships set for the course at Pennsylvania Conference rival East Stroudsburg, the Fighting Scots have more than a fighting chance to bring home a national championship trophy.

Vanatta was not the only runner lost at Southeast Missouri State, where head coach Joey Haines works with the squad's new cross country coach/specialist, Bill Gautier.

"We have a big job to do," said Haines, commenting on the loss of Vanatta and two more of the team's top five scorers from last season, "but we feel like we have replaced at least some of the kids we lost."

"Working is definitely the right word for what we're doing at this point," laughed Gautier, who radiated excitement at the thought of working with national-caliber runners. "At least one freshman will really have to come through and produce for us to have a chance at repeating."

In addition to the return of junior Art Waddle and senior Norm Kellar, the Indians have added transfers Paul Skie (from Missouri) and Brian Radle (from Louisiana State). Jay Townsend also is back and rounds out the probable top five.

South Dakota State mentor Scott Underwood probably is more concerned with reloading than he is rebuilding, since six of his top seven are back from 1984.

The head of the group is Rod DeHaven, who finished fifth overall at the 1984 championships as a freshman. Sophomore Todd Stevens also is back, as are juniors Joe Flannery (second-place finisher in the steeplechase at the 1985 Division II outdoor championships) and Jeff Massman and senior Rob Beyer.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo likely will replace California-Riverside as the dominant team on the West Coast, as coach Tom Henderson lost only two runners from last season. With a nice mix of youth and experience (Brent Griffiths and Jim McCarthy are seniors, Dave Livingston and Jerry Hernandez are juniors, and Mike Miner and Chris Craig are sophomores), the Mustangs may stampee into championships contention.

Jackrabbits' Rod DeHaven

Of course, Cal Poly-Pomona coach Jim Sackett and his charges may have something to say about Western dominance. The Broncos have nearly everyone back, including senior Steve Perez. California-Riverside coach Chris Rinne said his team was "a year away from contention. We're counting on five freshmen, and they are very fine runners, but I doubt that we will be national caliber by the middle of November." Still, Mark Castro could make waves. He finished 33rd overall as a freshman last season.

Indiana (Pennsylvania) also will enjoy the luxury of running for the national championships close to home, and the Braves seem to have enough talent to qualify for an 11th straight trip. Key returnees include juniors Tom Doran, Jeff Coleman and Mike Patton and seniors Larry McDonough and Jim Sullivan.

Tommies should handle all Division III comers

St. Thomas (Minnesota) should dominate Division III men's cross country this season. Oh, there will be challenges, but the Tommies have the returning muscle and new talent to take care of most contenders.

The only loss for the Tommies was a big one: Peter Wareham finished third overall at the Division III championships and was the school's top runner.

However, coach Larry Russ has standout seniors Nick Mancini and Paul Thurmes, junior Tom Faust, and sophomore John Bielinski back, and he has added a super high schooler and a junior college champion to the fold.

Freshman Marty Urick won the Minnesota high school championship at 1,600 meters, and newcomer Alemyu Tulu was the national junior college cross country champion a year ago. So, the Tommies probably will be as good as they were a year ago.

Al Carius has produced 33 all-America runners in 19 years at North Central, and his squads have won six national titles in 12 years of Division III competition. Five of the team's top seven runners are back from 1984, so the Cardinals again should be strong.

Look for Central's "fearsome foursome" of seniors Joe Gross, Bob Pottle, Larry Wood and Pat Zinn to team with junior Jim Jones for a potent front line. Carius certainly has the know-how and experience to take his charges to the national championship, but St. Thomas probably will be tough enough to outlast a Cardinal charge.

Brandeis coach Norm Levine lost his top three runners, including 1984 individual champion Mark Beeman, so things probably will be shaky early on.

But the Judges may be able to parlay their youth and Levine's coaching into another top-three finish. The top returners are senior Mike Salvon, juniors Dave Langdon and Rob Littman, and sophomore Chris Cameron.

Wheaton (Illinois) may be the surprise of the season, since senior Todd Moxley returns from a fourth-place finish overall at the 1984 championships. Several experienced runners are back, so the Crusaders may stage an uprising of their own on the way to the 1985 championships race.

Other top teams, with top runners and their class ranks listed, include:

St. John's (Minnesota) (Jim Gathie, senior; Paul Cornelison, senior); Mount Union (Chris Ceager, senior; Mike Maloney, junior; Dennis Beougher, senior; Marcell Stephens, junior); St. Joseph's (Maine) (Rick Garcia, senior; Jess Crocker, senior; John Hallee, junior; George Bockus, sophomore); Frostburg State (Dwight Scriber, sophomore; Tom Zubeck, senior; Bob Iannucci, senior; Tad Davis, sophomore; Gene Smith, senior); Albany (New York) (Ian Clements, senior; Craig Parlatto, senior); Christopher Newport (Dan Pittman, senior; Ron Borsheim, senior; Steve Kast, junior).

Individuals

'Mininational' may offer early clue to put puzzle pieces in proper order

Wisconsin, Stanford, North Carolina State and Oregon are the best teams in Division I women's cross country, just like they were a year ago. The only thing left to determine is a final ranking.

"We are willing to put our title on the line and defend it," said coach Peter Tegen, who led Wisconsin to the 1984 team championship. However, the Badgers must replace 1984 individual champion Cathy Branta, one of the strongest and most consistent runners in the division.

"The key for any team is to be able to develop new talent," explained Tegen, who has a wealth of strong runners coming back. The leader of the group is Katie Ishmael, a senior who finished sixth overall last season.

"I think Katie was somewhat in the shadow of Cathy (Branta)," Tegen said. "She would have been the top runner on many, many teams around the country, and we are very fortunate to have her back. I suspect that a lot of eyes will be focused on her and the way she runs this season, but I don't think it's fair to put the whole load on one person's shoulders."

Fortunately, Wisconsin does not have to do that, since juniors Brigit Christiansen, Holly Hering and Kelly McKillen return, as do sophomores Stephanie Basset and Stephanie Herbst.

Among the newcomers expected to contribute is freshman Carole Harris, who has turned in a time of 9:35 over three kilometers.

"Again we have depth," said Tegen. "We have 12 runners good enough to break our top seven, so I am very pleased by that. And all of them came back to school in reasonable shape."

Division I followers will get a glimpse of Wisconsin and two of the other championships contenders at a "mininational" meet October 19 in Madison. Eight of the top 16 teams from a year ago will be on hand, including Stanford and Oregon.

While many people are talking Wisconsin, Oregon and some others, North Carolina State coach Rolie Geiger has a championship-caliber team in Raleigh.

Everyone is back from the squad that finished third at the 1984 championships, and former all-America Lynne Strauss has returned from an injury that sidelined her last season. Add freshmen Susie Tuffey, a top high school distance runner, and Kristy Orre, who has run a three-kilometer time of 9:29, and it becomes obvious that the Wolfpack is championships hunting this season.

"Having everyone back and gaining Lynne's services makes me very optimistic," said Geiger. "But Connie Jo Robinson is coming off a stress fracture, and we may redshirt her. If we do, we would have everyone back again next year."

Stanford will be led by seniors Regina Jacobs and Alison Wiley, and after three consecutive second-place finishes, you can bet the Cardinal upperclassmen are not interested in anything but the team championship.

Jacobs, like her team, won every race she ran until the national championships, where she finished fourth. Wiley finished second to Jacobs every time, then picked up seventh place and a third-straight all-America award at the Division I meet.

Also returning for coach Brooks Johnson are Cory Schubert, who was injured part of last season; Christa Curtin; Kathy Smith, and Michelle Mason. As was the case a year ago, expect Stanford to win every pre-NCAA championships meet and make a run for the top spot. The news at Oregon centers more around Cathy Schiro, arguably the top newcomer in the country. Schiro joins seniors Kim Roth, Brenda Bushnell, Rosa Gutierrez, junior Brigit Petersen and sophomore Deanna Schiedler to form a nucleus that will be tough to handle, regardless of the competition.

Oregon coach Tom Heinonen will have to replace four all-America runners, but he obviously has the talent to put together as fine a team as there will be in Division I competition this season.

In speculating on the championships possibilities, it is easy to give the nod to Wisconsin, since the Badgers have so many fine runners back and the championships will be run at Marquette University in Milwaukee, which could give Wisconsin a mental lift.

The remaining trio of powers matches up with Wisconsin very well. Purely on the basis of returning talent, Division I cross country followers should not be surprised if the Wolfpack is the team to unseat Wisconsin.

See Mininational, page 8

Mustangs favored for fourth straight crown

Last spring, several Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo runners were upset, and they still are. Upset by Abilene Christian for the Division II outdoor track championship, those Mustangs who run cross country are still ticked off about it, and they are likely to take out their frustrations on the rest of Division II.

Six all-America runners are back for coach Lance Harter, and the Mustangs have to be favored to win a fourth straight Division II title.

Of the super six, only one, Jeni Dunn, is a senior. Juniors Gladees Prieur, Lori Lopez, Jill Ellingson, Katy Manning and Lesley White (a redshirt who earned all-America honors in 1983) round out the group, and they definitely are among the best runners in the country at any level.

Consider the fact that Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo finished second at two Division I meets last season, the Stanford and California (Berkeley) invitationals, while winning meets hosted by California-Riverside and San Diego State.

All five returning runners who competed at the 1984 championships finished in the top 20, and White, if she returns to form, also could finish that high.

There are other good teams around the division, but it is doubtful that any of them will be able to tame this herd of Mustangs.

Although second a year ago, South Dakota State must make up for the points of four-time all-America Kristin Asp and three-time selection Audrey Stavrum, who have graduated.

Head coach Scott Underwood, who has his hands full with a powerful men's team, has a pair of youthful cousins, sophomores Charlene and Jackie Hubbard, to build around, but it may not be possible to replace everything the Jackrabbits lost in one season.

Southeast Missouri State also may have a tough time challenging Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, since the Otahkians have lost Chris Ridenour, the overall champion at last fall's Division II meet.

Juniors Jennella Torrance and Laura Byrne are back, giving coach Bill Gautier, who handles cross country coaching chores for head coach Joey Haines, reason to be positive.

"Even though we only have two people back, I feel like we started a tradition last season," Gautier said. "I just hope we have the ability and opportunity to keep it going again this season."

One team from the East with the potential to make a run at national honors is Indiana (Pennsylvania), particularly since the Division II championships course, at East Stroudsburg, should be familiar.

The Indians were led to a top-five national finish last season by Helen Gilbey, a native of Great Britain who has graduated. Look for sophomore Elisa Benzoni, who with Gilbey earned all-America status last season, to move into the role of team leader. Also returning under the guidance of coach Ed Fry are senior Mary Alico and junior Tammy Donnelly.

A strong, deep club from the nation's heartland, North Dakota State also could make a championships challenge. Coach Sue Patterson has recruited well, adding Julie Shorter and Pam Urbanski to the roster, and the Bison return a herd of upperclassmen. Standouts Nancy Dietman, a senior, and Bev Weiman, a junior will lead a stampede toward national honors.

Ashland is likely to have another top-10 finish this season on the strength of a senior class that already has three such performances to its credit. Alane Keefer, Sue Borawski and Debbie Gresens are entering the home stretch of their collegiate careers, while sophomores Kristin Hopper and Noel LeFrancis gained valuable experience last season.

Another Eastern team with a wealth of returning talent, maybe enough to mount a legitimate championships threat, can be found at Springfield, where coach Jim Pennington has everyone back from last season.

The top runners are sophomores Diane Hanks, Chris Brighton, Kris Lyons and Dolyne Divino. Also back are junior Mia Gomes and senior Kathy McDermott. The team took half of the top 10 places in the 1984 Northeast-8 Conference championship, all with freshman runners. The national experience will be valuable, and the team should be as strong as any in its region. The addition of freshman Martha Grinnel also will help.

Listed below, in order of their finish at the 1984 Division II championships, are other top returning runners. Class ranks and schools are listed:

St. Thomas (Minnesota) looks to newcomers to fill the gaps

St. Thomas (Minnesota) has a good chance of repeating as the dominant team in Division III.

Even with the loss of three of the squad's top seven runners from a year ago, coach Joe Sweeney has some fine runners back, including junior Jennifer Hintz, who redshirted last season.

A newcomer is Lisa Koelfgen, who transferred from Seattle Pacific and started her career with the Tommies by winning the 1,500-meters championship at the 1985 Division III outdoor championships.

Two more newcomers, one a junior college standout and the other one of Minnesota's best prep runners, add even more talent to the lineup. Michelle Stone, who transferred from Golden Valley Lutheran, was a junior college all-America honoree while running for the Royals.

Shari Sullivan comes to the Tommies after finishing second at the Minnesota high school cross country championships last fall. These newcomers join senior Cindy Hennessy, who finished ninth at the national championships last season, and sophomore Jenni Schultz, who finished 30th.

Wisconsin-LaCrosse, runner-up to the Tommies last season, also should be strong, but the Indians will be under the guidance of new coach Robert Smith, who comes from a Division II program at East Stroudsburg.

Smith replaces Gary Wilson, who has taken up residence at the University of Minnesota after guiding Wisconsin-LaCrosse to a team championship in 1983 and second place finishes in 1982 and 1984. Juniors Sharon Stubler and Julie Pederson and senior Patty Reynolds are the top returners for the Indians.

In the East, Ithaca seems set to make a run for the top spot on the Division III ladder, as six of seven runners are back, and five of the six are only sophomores.

Senior Mary-Lynn Pastizzo will again be surrounded by underclassmen. Sophomores Karen D'Angelo, Gabriella Frittelli, Cathy Livingston, Laura Riebold and Colleen Skelly raised a few eyebrows with their effort at last year's championships race. Those same folks should not be surprised if the Bombers, under coach Bill Ware, stay near the top of the standings for a long time to come.

Ed Woge had to be smiling ear-to-ear last fall when his Franklin and Marshall harriers bested a field of Divisions I and III teams to win Temple's Lady Owl Invitational.

A lot of good runners are back, including seniors Katrina Harriman, Nancy Leet, Lois Lucente and Laurie Reynolds; junior Amanda Shaw, and redshirt sophomore Terri Smith.

Another Middle Atlantic Conference title is a real possibility for Franklin and Marshall, which also could improve on the fourth-place national finishes earned for two consecutive years.

The Towers at Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Mary Towers that is, will be back to lead the Titans to new heights, and she will get support from Maureen Muldoon.

Coach Debra Vercauteren knows that Wisconsin-LaCrosse is the team to beat, and the Titans may be able to do it. They should find out through performances in the Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and Division III Midwest region meets.

Winning is common at Smith, where the top five runners from a year ago return. Seniors Gwyn Hardesty and Kirsten Kannengieser were among the top 10 individual finishers at the national championships last season, and juniors Karin Lec, Ann Adams and Lucy Chambers will add good skills and depth to the effort. Coach Mary Grinaker and her runners have their sights set on another New England championship and trip to the Division III championships.

All of Albany's (New York) top people are back, but coach Ronald White has his work cut out for him.

Field Hockey Preview

Old Dominion won't wait long to evaluate chances for repeat

By Timothy J. Lilley
The NCAA News Staff

Optimism abounds among the coaches of top Division I field hockey teams. With the 1985 season barely under way, fans of the sport should expect national polls to include many of the teams that dominated the 1984 rankings.

Increased scoring should result from a mandatory experimental rules variation, which reduces the number of players that may be behind the goal line on a penalty corner from six to five.

Old Dominion, coming off an undefeated national championship season, would seem to be the power in the division. But the Lady Monarchs are getting used to a new coach and trying to adapt to the graduation of three first-team all-America players (Willemien Aardenburg, Eveline Verlaart and Christy Morgan).

"The team will be strong, but a repeat of last season's perfect record seems unlikely. 'This definitely is a big challenge,' said first-year coach Melissa Magee, who moved to Old Dominion from a highly successful Division III program at Trenton State. 'I'm going to stay optimistic. We're young, but we're getting better.'"

The Lady Monarchs return five starters, including goalkeeper Shelly Behrens, so the proverbial cupboard is not bare. But Magee must rebuild the Old Dominion attack. "I think it's tougher to rebuild an offense than it is a defense," she explained. "And our forward line was a real powerful group. We may end up starting some freshmen on the front line, so it will take time for the young people to start working together."

Magee and her team will find out quickly what kind of prospects the new year holds. By the end of September, Old Dominion will have played North Carolina, San Jose State and Stanford, three of the top teams in the division. "There's no doubt about it," Magee said, "we're going to jump right in."

Iowa may be the team that jumps in front of Old Dominion to dominate the division this season. The Hawkeyes already have shown coach Judith Davidson "an awful lot of bright spots. We are going to be strong in nine or 10 positions, but we still have a couple spots that need work."

A team laden with talented seniors,

Iowa advanced to the championship game last year and could be on top from start to finish this time around.

Marcia Pankratz will lead the charge. She had a successful 1984 campaign in which she earned just about every award possible. The Big Ten Conference MVP last season, Pankratz also was a consensus first-team all-America selection and led the Hawkeyes with 26 goals.

Joining Pankratz are returning all-America seniors Deb Brickley, Kim Hermann and Mary Koboldt. "I believe these girls have made up their minds to lead this team both on and off the field," said Davidson. "From that standpoint, I think this will be one of the strongest teams ever at Iowa."

Quite possibly the most enthusiastic coach in the division is New Hampshire's Marisa Didio, who has compiled an impressive 30-7-2 record in her first two seasons.

"We have the potential to be one of the toughest teams in the nation," she said. "Right now, our preseason work is on schedule. I'm sure we will present a threat on offense; and if we can fill some holes on defense, we will be very strong. No matter how it works out, I am confident we will be very much improved over last season."

In 1984, the Wildcats finished 16-3-1 and advanced to the second round of the play-offs, bowing to Connecticut in overtime. Leading the potent New Hampshire offense will be junior Karen Geromini, who racked up a dozen goals last season. Also back is Patty Heap, who set a school record with 15 assists in 1984. Junior forward Pauline Collins also will be valuable on the front line.

Didio will build the Wildcat defense around senior Sandy Vander-Heyden. "I know who some of the regulars will be at this point," said Didio, "but I really would have a tough time picking all the starters. We have a lot of good people on the squad this season."

Connecticut coach Diane Wright now knows a lot about her upperclassmen, since the team recently returned from a playing tour of Holland. "I really can't say much about the overall situation, primarily because we did not have any of our recruits on the trip, and some of them could make an impact," Wright explained.

"I do expect Tracy Fuchs and Janet Ryan to be team leaders. Tracy did the bulk of our scoring in Holland, and Janet really did a good job of controlling the midfield."

As a freshman last season, Fuchs set a school record with 21 goals. She will be joined by team cocaptain Ryan, senior Marjory Abbott (the other cocaptain) and junior Michelle Baldwin as the nucleus around which Wright will attempt to replace seven starters lost from the 1984 team.

"I believe the major problem we will have to fight will be the inconsistency that plagues every young team," Wright said. "Since most of our returning people are on defense, we will have to work on the timing—the blending together that must take place for the offense to jell."

At Temple, replacing offensive standouts is the order of the day for coach Gwen Cheeseman, who, in effect, lost 34 goals through the graduation of Monica Mills and Elaine Turchi.

"We lost a total of three seniors, but I like to think the team is returning pretty much intact," Cheeseman said.

The most likely starters on the front line include senior Kathleen Barrett, a veteran who has seen plenty of time at both forward and midfield, and sophomores Maria Dornado and Crystal Gibbs.

A more balanced attack is one of Cheeseman's goals, and she said the experimental penalty-corner rule may help her team and many others along those lines.

"The less-strict rule on penalty corners will lead to more scoring. I think you will see everyone's offense opening up a little more this season, and that will give more players an opportunity to score and contribute."

So, defending titlist Old Dominion may have more work to do than any of its closest rivals, and Iowa may be the best of those intent upon wresting the seat of power from the Lady Monarchs.

All of the top teams lost some key people, many of whom were on offense. The overhauling that will be done at the top could open the door for even more fine teams to make a run for glory.

In the Midwest, the most likely threat to Iowa is Northwestern; the two perennially battle for the Big Ten title. In 1985, the Wildcats return Jennifer Averill, who dished out 25 assists last season, and the No. 3 all-time scoring leader at Northwestern, Amy Kekeisen. The goalkeeping duo of Robin Clark and Johanna Kung will be out to better the 100-save, 12-shutout performance they turned in a year ago.

Rutgers coach Ann Petracco may have a tough time matching the school-record 15 victories amassed last season, but the Scarlet Knights still should be among the division's best.

Returning will be offensive stalwarts Mary Beth Dwyer, a senior, and junior Cindy Cavallaro. The middle of the season will provide a test of Rutgers' postseason potential; the Scarlet Knights will play Delaware, Old Dominion, Penn State and Maryland during a 10-day stretch.

Although eliminated in the first round of the 1984 tournament, North Carolina may be the darkhorse among all Division I programs this season. Head coach Karen Shelton-Scroggs, who is building the same kind of Southern power husband Willie has fashioned with the Tar Heels' men's lacrosse program, will benefit from the return of steady goalie Jan Miles and all-America forward Louise Hines.

Hines will find able scoring help in sophomore Judith Jonckheer, who scored 21 goals from her midfield position as a freshman.

Springfield's Chris Manning

North Carolina will find stiff competition from its neighbor to the north, where Virginia coach Jane Miller is preparing a squad that lost only one starter from a 1984 team that advanced to the second round of the play-offs.

The Cavaliers are loaded with veterans; the offensive punch should come from senior Lindsay Sheehan and junior Elaine Maddox, while senior goalie Missy Farwell will anchor the defense.

Another fine net-minder will be found at Penn State, where junior Michele Monahan, who set a school record with 181 saves last season, has never surrendered a goal on a penalty stroke through two years of intercollegiate competition.

Head coach Gillian Rattray gave up responsibilities as head women's lacrosse coach after last season to devote more time to the Lions' field hockey program. The solid group of veterans should make for another strong team.

On the Pacific Coast, San Jose State again may be the class of the division. Nine seniors are returning and should be able to fill a scoring void that amounts to 42 of the team's 49 goals from a year ago.

Fortunately, coach Carolyn Lewis has the entire defensive backfield returning from last season's 10-3-2 team, which should allow for more work with an offense that needs rebuilding.

Following is a look at other teams around the country, region by region:

Northeast

The most exciting aspect of any look at field hockey in the Northeast is a review of the upcoming Ivy League season, which should be among the best in history.

Following is a team-by-team look at the Ivy: Brown—Head coach Wendy Anderson used her first season at the helm to lead the Bears to school records for wins (9) and shut-outs (7). The team's top two scorers, juniors Lauren Becker and Kelly McGarry, are back, as is senior goalie Mara Spaulder. Brown finished 5-1 in Ivy competition last season, winning a share of the league title. An outright championship in 1985 is possible.

Colgate Although the Lady Raiders finished 9-8 last season, eight starters return, and coach Carla Hesler believes the defense will be strengthened by the addition of freshman net-minder Christine Hanrahan. This team also could be a challenger for the title.

Cornell The Big Red returns seven players with at least two varsity letters, so head coach Shelby Bowman has some experience to work with. Whether the team can reverse last season's 5-8-1 mark remains to be seen.

Dartmouth League co-champions with Brown, the Big Green returns the team's top two scorers and seven of nine scorers from last season and again should mount a challenge for the title.

Harvard New coach Nita Lamborghini greeted eight returning veterans at the opening of practice, so the Crimson should be an experienced unit. After tumbling to 5-10 a year ago, this program should be a contender again.

Pennsylvania Head coach Anne Sage has four all-conference players back, including senior goalkeeper Nancy Meisinger, who was named Ivy player of the year last season. With 10 letter winners back, this team also will add to the bottleneck at the top of the standings.

Yale Offensive output must increase for the Bulldogs to be a factor in the Ivy race. The bright spot on the team is goalie Nada Sellers, who notched 190 saves and five shutouts last season.

Other Northeast teams: Boston College, the defending ECAC Division I champions, has lost the services of 1984 leading scorer Lynne Frates. However, a solid group of experienced players is back, and coach Charlene Morett is calling the incoming freshmen the best recruiting class in Eagle history.

Boston University, on the other hand, returns the entire starting lineup from a 1984 squad that posted a line 9-6-2 record in the school's first season of Division I competition. Look for senior Helen Godfrey to key the attack.

Springfield College coach Dottie Zenaty will count on offensive firepower from senior Chris Manning and junior Ingrid Gonesh. Seniors Melissa Robinson and Barb Vinciguerra, along with sophomore and potential all-America player Ann Freeman, are the other key returners.

Midwest

If Bucknell coach Martha Ludwig can find a way to bolster the offensive line, this team

Old Dominion

should be able to best last year's school-record 11 victories and be a factor in the East Coast Conference. Sophomore Michelle Manoff is a rising star and led the team in scoring last season.

Drexel stayed near the bottom of the East Coast Conference last season, but 10 starters are back for coach Patricia Thompson. Juniors Denise Vananzi and Debbie Hough lead a troop of underclassmen who got experience last season and should be much better in 1985.

New coach Lynne Kotler has a quartet of seniors (Joan Keegan, Maria LaFonte, Evaunn Malicki and Catly Nugent) to use as a foundation as she sets out to improve on last year's 8-6-3 finish. Leading scorer Michele Ramirez, only a junior, also will play a key role.

Lehigh won the East Coast Conference title last season, and new coach MaryBeth Holder has 10 letter winners back from that 13-5-2 squad. Patti Lee is the best goalie in the league, and her leadership as a senior could help the Engineers build another championship season.

After moving up with the demise of the Division II championship, Lock Haven lost five games last season, all to Division I competition and each by one goal. Head coach Sharon Taylor lost seven key players, including the leading scorer and net-minder from teams that won a pair of Division II titles, so a lot of young players will have to mature quickly.

St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania) has amassed a 19-5-1 record in two years under coach Dolly Trainer, and the Hawks should be good again in 1985. Look for the development of freshman goalie Carolyn Friel to key the team's success.

Syracuse should improve on last year's 7-9 mark, since the defense and last year's leading scorer return. A replacement for graduated goalie Eileen Lewis is critical, however.

Villanova has added six top-20 teams to its 1985 schedule. The Wildcats lost seven players from a 6-9-3 team of a year ago, so things may not improve drastically this season.

West Chester has a new coach in Kathy Kramm, who served under Karen Shelton-Scroggs at North Carolina. Nine varsity players are back, so improvement on last season's 7-9-3 mark is possible.

Mid-Atlantic

American University has everybody back as the team moves into competition as a member of the South Atlantic Field Hockey and Lacrosse Conference. Junior Margaret Taggart will lead the American attack.

Although nine starters are back at Delaware, coach Mary Ann Hitchens must find a way to replace Missy Meharg, one of the game's best players over the last four years. Forwards Anne Wilkinson and Beth Manley are back, so

Bloomsburg's entire starting lineup returns from unbeaten 1984 team

Bloomsburg should be the best team in Division III field hockey this season. The Huskies' starting group returns intact from last season's undefeated (19-0) national championship team, and coach Jan Hutchinson has looked at more good players in the preseason than ever before.

"You always invite a lot of people to camp, but you expect a fair amount of no-shows," explained Hutchinson, who has amassed a 93-23-12 record in seven seasons. "But this season, we had 50 girls in camp. The nicest thing about that is the fact that the skill level is so high."

Hutchinson does not have any painstaking decisions to make about the starting lineup, since that entire group is back from the title-winning team. "With all the starters back, we are hoping to pick up where we left off a year ago and improve even more."

"Even though we won every game, there were a lot of things I saw that we need to work on. One thing is for sure... this team will be quicker than ever."

Bloomsburg plays a killer of a schedule, with games scheduled against Messiah, the other 1984 finalist; Cortland State; Ithaca, and traditional Pennsylvania Conference rivals.

"Our goal in scheduling is not to try to ensure another undefeated season," Hutchinson said. "We want to play as tough a schedule as possible and win as many games as possible, make as much progress as we can throughout the season."

An October 7 date with Messiah could be a preview of this fall's championship match. "Our kids certainly enjoy that rivalry, although I believe our most intense rivalries are found within the Pennsylvania Conference. "Playing Messiah always means a good game, because they are a very good team and the players get along so well with each other. We are really happy to have them back on our regular-season schedule," Hutchinson said. "We had a game scheduled a year ago, but it had to be cancelled because it conflicted with their conference tournament."

The Huskies will present formidable opposition to every team on the slate this season, with leading scorer Diane Shields and goalie Lori Guitson returning. Both juniors, Shields racked up 13 goals and dished out six assists last season, while Guitson allowed only 10 goals in 19 games, stopping 105 shots and recording 10 shutouts.

Other Bloomsburg players to watch include juniors Kate Denny and Carla Shearer and senior Karen Hertzler, all attack players. This trio, along with Shields, produced 36 goals and 19 assists a year ago. Three of those goals came against Messiah in the 1984 championship game.

The Falcons, although without the services of four starters (including all-America selection Kim Leppo), must be considered the top contenders for Bloomsburg's spot at the top of the division.

The Middle Atlantic Conference champions finished 20-1 last season, due in part to the goal-keeping prowess of Annette Mullen. A junior this season, Mullen gave up one goal in the regular season and recorded an amazing 19 shutouts; only Eastern Mennonite and Bloomsburg were able to neutralize Mullen's magic.

Although the defense around Mullen is untested, Messiah's offense should be at least as potent as a year ago. Head coach Jan Trapp speculated that the Falcons may rely on their offense a little more this season, due to a defense that needs playing time to mature.

"We may not have as many shutouts this season, although Annette practically takes every goal scored on us personally," said Trapp, who has a 12-year record of 104-51-22 at Messiah.

"We never trailed in a game last season until there were 10 minutes left in the Division III championship, and I do not believe that will be the case this year," Trapp was quick to point out, however, that the Falcons returned to campus in much better shape than a year ago.

"Our returning players are real strong. I knew they'd come back in good shape, but they are exhibiting almost midseason form. We are so much further along at this point than we were a year ago... I am very excited about it."

Junior Jennifer Terranova is expected to be as important to the Falcons' attack as Mullen will be to the defense. She scored 28 goals last season, with eight assists, and was named to several all-star teams.

Senior Cecelia Gebhart, junior Julie Esh and sophomore Tara Boyer also will be important to the offensive output, and these four players must generate enough offense to keep pressure off a very young Messiah defense.

"Last season, our defense was playing together for the fourth straight year," said Trapp. "Everybody knew where everybody was, and they were so confident, due to playing together for so long, that their goal was not to let anybody score on them all season."

"This year, we are very young, and newcomers are going to make some mistakes until they learn how to play together and make our defense go. However, having Annette in the goal certainly will help things."

Trapp singled out the October date with Bloomsburg as a key game, but not in terms of getting even for the loss in the Division III title game a year ago.

"That game will be important because Bloomsburg is a very strong team and because we enjoy playing them. It will not be a grudge match. I think the players on both teams have shown that they respect each other too much to let those kinds of negative emotions enter into things."

"I'm sure it will be a tough, physical game, but because both teams will have their pride on the line, not because one wants to get even with the other."

In upstate New York, Ithaca coach Doris Kostrinsky has a veteran defensive unit returning, and the trio of seniors Jane DeGrenier, Jenny Powers and Peg Radkiewicz contributed a total of 15 goals and 12 assists to last year's 12-6-1 campaign. With senior Karen Howarth back in goal, a solid defense and some scoring punch back, the Blue Hens' offense should be potent again.

Loyola (Maryland) is basically a young team riding a wave of optimism. The Lady Greyhounds won eight off their last 10 games a year ago and could put together another fine season.

Maryland lost all-America Kay Ruffino, but with Heather Lewis and goalie Kim Chorosiewski back, head coach Sue Tyler may be able to equal or better last year's 15-7 mark. This is definitely a top-20 caliber team.

South

Appalachian State coach Cathy Lowe will get a baptism of fire in her first head coaching position, as the Lady Mountaineers play a schedule that includes North Carolina. Senior Lynn Carrino will lead the attack.

The Blue Devils of Duke are coming off a 16-5 season, the school's best ever, and coach Jacki Silar has eight starters back. Leading scorer Karen Havens (13 goals and 10 assists in 1984) will key a potent attack that could lead to a national ranking before the season is over.

James Madison may start out slow. Coach Dee McDonough is rebuilding the offense, but a solid defense should help. With sophomore Diane Buch and juniors Elo Goodman and Sandy Wilson back, the team could have a fine year if the new offense jells in time.

Pleiffer never has had a losing season, and the Lady Falcons won the 1981 Division II championship. Head coach Nancy Ingram must count on newcomers for immediate help this season, and she will look for sophomore Diane Hernberg and senior Kathy Wolf to lead the attack.

The bright spot at Radford is the return of two-time all-America Crista Beisel, who has scored 36 goals through two seasons. This is another young team playing a very tough schedule.

Virginia Commonwealth's first three games are at Virginia, North Carolina and James Madison. If head coach Pat Stauffer can lead the Rams through those contests, this group of veterans could earn a spot in the national rankings.

Midwest

Ball State probably will win a third straight Mid-American Athletic Conference title, as the Cardinals ride into the season with a 17-game league winning streak. Karen Burkholder and Kelly Dawson lead the returning charge.

Kent State gave the Cardinals their stiffest challenge, making the league champs play three overtimes in the conference semifinals. This season, the Lady Flashes have eight veterans back, including first-team all-conference goalie Dawn Malone; so, Ball State again should be challenged by this fine group.

Miami (Ohio) will be going for a ninth straight winning season under coach Lil Fesperman, but the need to replace all-time scoring leaders Kathy Kiernan and Sharon Wolfington will make the going tough.

If Northern Illinois coach Andi Hoffman can figure out a way to keep more players healthy, this team could have a good season. In 1984, the Huskies had to play five games shorthanded due to injuries. This is a youthful team, one that could do well without so many bumps and bruises.

Notre Dame enjoyed a 15-5-2 1984 season, the school's best ever. A dozen letter winners will return to take on a beefed-up schedule that includes several Big Ten squads and a visit to Division III power Trenton State.

Purdue coach Nancy Crosse is out to increase her team's offensive prowess. "In some games last year, we would have possession of the ball

Returning all-Americans

Following is a list of returning players who were named to the first team of last year's College Field Hockey Coaches Association All-America team, with their 1985 class rank and position:

DIVISION I

Megan Donnelly, senior, attack, Massachusetts; Louise Hines, senior, attack, North Carolina; Mary Koboldt, senior, midfield, Iowa; Marcia Pankratz, senior, attack, Iowa.

DIVISION III

Holly Brennan, senior, attack, Salem State; Linda Burkhardt, senior, attack, Eastern Mennonite; Karen Hertzler, senior, attack, Bloomsburg; Paola Prins, senior, attack, Smith; Diane Shields, junior, attack, Bloomsburg; Stacy Stem, junior, midfield, Salisbury State; Jennifer Terranova, junior, attack, Messiah; Holly Trumovicz, senior, attack, Trenton State.

about 90 percent of the time, but we would still lose the game," recalled Cross. "We just didn't capitalize on our scoring opportunities. Making the most of our possessions will be a focal point this year."

St. Louis went 4-1-1 in overtime games last year, so coach Kelly O'Connell obviously knows how to win the close ones. With only four players gone, the Billikins could become a major threat in this region.

Southern Illinois won six of the last seven games played a year ago, and the Salukis have seven starters back. Senior Kathy Crowley is the team's top returning scorer.

Toledo coach Kirpal Singh Mahal has the top three players back from last season, making it possible for the Rockets to challenge for the Mid-American Conference title. Twins Amy and Kathy Hudson will lead the attack, as they have the last two seasons when they finished one-two in scoring.

West

Although few Division I field hockey programs reside in this part of the country, there are some very good teams.

California coach Donna Fong has a strong front line returning from last year's top-20 team, which finished 7-5-2. Kathy Forbey and Celine Buczek are the leaders of the attack.

Although Pacific finished with a sub-500 record last season, coach Carla Konet has more depth than ever. The Tigers could get in the hunt for national recognition this season.

Stanford almost made the NCAA play-offs last season, and the Cardinal, with eight starters back, probably will challenge again. Look for junior Andi Wolpert to key the offense, while senior Karen Chamberlain anchors the defense.

Popejoy stands tall in big program as volunteer at 'tiny' North Central

When a guy looks up to people five-feet tall and weighs less than a half-dozen bowling balls, he does not have much of a future in athletics, does he?

About all he could do is start running, become a standout prep performer, follow that up with a stellar collegiate career, use the discipline he acquired to complete law school and go on to volunteer his time as an assistant coach for one of the best Division III teams in the country.

Yep—even a tiny fellow can do all this—the way Ken Popejoy has.

A former world-class miler at Michigan State, Popejoy is well into his fourth season as volunteer assistant coach at North Central, where he teams with Al Carius to continue one of the most successful track and cross country programs at any level of competition.

"It has been ideal," Popejoy said recently, describing his stint at the Naperville, Illinois, school, enrollment 1,300; tiny, like Popejoy. "I'm strictly volunteer," he continued. "Al and I are a nice mix. I feel like I'm a confidante with some of the runners. I'm kind of in that 'in-between' phase of being a coach and one of the guys."

Twenty years ago, in junior high school, it probably seemed as if Popejoy would never be more than one of the guys. Standing all of four feet, 11 inches, and weighing 85 pounds, athletics seemed out of the question; guys that size play piano, not linebacker.

But guys like that can run, and Popejoy soon found he could run quite well. Good enough, in fact, to earn a spot in his high school (Glenbard West, Glen Ellyn, Illinois) track team.

About that time, the youngster was digging around the family attic, undoubtedly using his lack of size to explore even the nooks between boxes and heirlooms, when he came across a legacy, unknown to him before, that would lead this pint-sized powerhouse to national acclaim.

Turns out a fella named Charlie Popejoy was a big-time track star at Purdue back in the '30s and won the Big Ten championship at two miles in 1934. As he respectfully examined the spoils of his father's outstanding collegiate track career, Ken wondered why his dad never told him.

"I had no idea he had ever done anything like that until one day when I discovered a bunch of medals in the attic," the younger Popejoy recalled. "He never wanted to pressure me. He was a super motivator, but he didn't coach. He didn't want to interfere with my high school coach, Jim Arnold."

Arnold was the first freshman ever to earn a track letter at Michigan State; he did it in 1951. Under his guidance, Popejoy lowered his time in the mile from 4:36 as a freshman to 4:09 as a senior, when he finished second to Steve Prefontaine at the Golden West meet in California.

Young Popejoy, still looking less than full-grown, enrolled at Michigan State, following in the footsteps of his high school coach and attempting to add another Popejoy to the Big Ten record books.

"He was like a second father to me," said Popejoy, describing his relationship with Arnold. "He didn't influence me at all to go to Michigan State. He left the decision up to me."

Apparently, the choice was a good one. In 1970, Popejoy became the second freshman (after Arnold) to win a track letter. He went on to win the Big Ten championship in the mile twice and the NCAA indoor title at that distance in 1972, and he earned all-America honors outdoors in 1972 and 1973.

His time of 3:38.4 for 1,500 meters was ranked ninth in the world in 1975, when he competed at the U.S. Olympic tryouts and advanced to the finals.

Still in shape? Popejoy ran unattached in the North Central Invitational May 17 of this year and turned in a 3:49.8 for 1,500 meters, covered 800 meters in 1:52.8 and galloped through a 49.8 400 meters.

All of this in addition to his volunteer (unpaid) coaching duties. Popejoy also handles cases as a member of the Wheaton, Illinois, law firm of Huck and Walsh.

"It probably costs me $10,000 a year to come down here and do this," he said of his coaching. "I could be back putting in extra hours at the office to make the 'big bucks,' but, money can't buy the moments I've experienced here working with Al."

"Ken is a tremendous role model for our athletes," said Carius, who is in his 20th year at North Central, where his teams have won six Division III titles in the last decade. "He's a quality person and a tremendous athlete at his age."

"He commands instant respect from the team. His experience at the national and international levels gives our program greater perspective. He sincerely loves working with the guys and appreciates the Division III philosophy. He has never received a penny as our assistant coach; he's intrinsically motivated, and he's doing it because he loves it."

The story is unique, and one suspects that, despite his good intentions, Ken Popejoy has an ulterior motive for giving so much back to the sport that brought him national recognition.

Just maybe, some day, somewhere, Popejoy will walk on the track some crisp fall afternoon and find a too-short, too-skinny "athlete," the kind that swims in shoulder pads but flies in spikes.

simply because the Great Danes share conference and regional affiliations with a talented Ithaca team.

However, with four seniors back (Karen Kurthy, Lynn Jacobs, Bette Dzamba and Donna Burnham) to go along with sophomore Kim Pettichord, the experience and talent of this squad could lead to a serious threat for the Bombers, at both the regional and national levels.

Juniors headline the team at Oberlin, and two of them, Kathy Barnum and Sarah Cox, are among the best in the country. Diane Rimple and Cathy Collins are the other returning juniors who have the potential to run well this season.

Oberlin will be looking for another undefeated regular season (it was 5-0 last fall), another North Coast Athletic Conference championship, another Great Lakes Collegiate Association title and a national finish well into the top 10.

Coach Marty Uher has only three of his top six runners back at California (Pennsylvania), but freshman Sharon Eugi looks promising, and the team could make another trip to the Division III championships.

Individuals

Following, listed in order of finish at the 1984 Division III championships, are other top returning runners. Class ranks and schools are listed:

them in the top five. If Brown can find a way to make up for Tolson's departure, this could be a top-five team.

Michigan is Wisconsin's biggest threat in the Big Ten, and the Wolverines have the "home course advantage" in the league meet, which will be run at Ann Arbor November 2.

Top Michigan runners include seniors Chris Brewster and Bob Vandenburg; juniors Joe Schmidt, Jeff Costello and John Chambers, and sophomore John Scherer. The biggest addition to the Michigan roster is Marty Newingham, who transferred from Miami (Ohio).

North Carolina State has a fine group of underclassmen back, and coach Rollie Geiger has the team working on a third consecutive North Carolina state championship. The Wolfpack could be a top-10 team, as they were a year ago, with returnees Pat Piper, Gavin Gaynor, Andy Herr and Ricky Wallace, all juniors, and senior Paul Brim.

Big Eight champion Iowa State also could move up considerably in the national picture, thanks in part to the return of seniors Yobes Ondieki and Raf Wyns and junior Tim Wakefield. Coach Bill Bergan's newcomers have an international flavor, with the addition of Richard Findlow from England and Kenyan Barnaba Korir, who redshirted last season.

Boston College was the first New England school to send full teams to the Division I men's and women's championships in the same year (1984). Coach Jack McDonald probably will take at least one team to the 1985 championships, as six of his top seven men are back. Senior John Clopeck, the Eagles' first-ever cross country all-America, will lead the squad.

Other teams and their top returning runners, with their 1985 class rank, include: Weber State (Jerry Allred, sophomore; Dave Andreason, sophomore; Tracy Fifield, sophomore; Paul Henderson, senior); Illinois (David Halle, sophomore; Paul Kivela, senior; Wade Cepulis, senior. NOTE: No. 3 runner in 1984, Jeff Jacobs, is being redshirted); Northern Arizona (Mark Souza, senior; Chris Caldwell, junior; Bo Reed, junior); Navy (Ron Harris, junior; Jim Foley, senior; John Lesniak, junior; Kevin Nibbelink, senior; Louis Poor, junior); Notre Dame (Mike Collins, senior; Dan Garrett, sophomore; Jim Tyler, senior; John Magill, senior).

Two "sleepers," according to some observers, may be East Texas State and Keene State. The former, under coach Eddie Vowell, have Africans Samson Obwocha and Agapius Amo ready to go, while Keene State has a solid nucleus of returners. "It may be that we in the East know more about them than other folks," Edinboro coach Watts said, "but I think Keene State will be very, very dangerous. They may surprise some folks."

Another Northeastern team with potential is Lowell, primarily due to the return of two-time all-America runner Dave Dunham. The major problem facing the Chiefs is whether or not enough depth is available to make championships qualification realistic.

Millersville coach Cy Fritz lost all-America selections Bill King and Steve Koon to graduation, but returning seniors Gerg Beegle, Craig Lowthert and Doug MacNeal and junior Larry Levy make a tough unit. The Raiders will be looking for a second straight East regional championship and fifth straight trip to the national championships race.

Other teams to watch, with their top returning runners listed, include:

St. Cloud State (Brooks Herrboldt, junior; Darrin Diedrich, junior; Jim Holovnia, junior); Texas A&I (David Garcia, junior; Orlando Gonzalez, junior; Stacey Whitt, junior; Jesse Liguez, sophomore; Tony Parisi, sophomore); Northwest Missouri State (Brad Ortmeier, senior; Rusty Adams, sophomore; Brian Grier,

Individuals

Most first-year I-A coaches taking their lumps

By James Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Utah's Jim Fassel has made the most impressive start by far among the five first-year coaches in Division I-A football. (By first-year, we mean no previous head-coaching experience at a four-year college; all are experienced—three in professional football.)

Fassel's team edged Hawaii, 29-27, last Saturday night after nudging Boise State, 20-17. That makes him 2-0; but as a group, the I-A first-year coaches are 3-5. It is different with five first-year men in I-AA. They stand 7-2, with three unbeaten—Delaware State's Bill Collick, Maine's Buddy Teevens and Northern Arizona's Larry Kentera. That makes all 10 stand 10-7 to date:

Division I-A	W-L-T
Paul Schudel, Ball State.....	0-2-0
Robert "Woody" Widenhofer, Missouri.....	0-1-0
Jerry Pettibone, Northern Illinois.....	1-1-0
Cleve Bryant, Ohio.....	0-1-0
Jim Fassel, Utah.....	2-0-0
Division I-AA	W-L-T
Bill Collick, Delaware State.....	3-0-0
Mike Ayers, East Tennessee State.....	0-1-0
Buddy Teevens, Maine.....	2-0-0
Larry Kentera, Northern Arizona.....	2-0-0
Edie Williamson, Virginia Military.....	0-1-0

This list does not include Galen Hall, who took over at Florida after three games last season and finished 8-0.

Fassel is a 36-year-old Anaheim, California, native who, as offensive coordinator at Stanford, tutored the record-smashing John Elway and national passing champion Turk Schonert, both now professional quarterbacks. He was brought to the Portland Breakers by former pro and Stanford head coach John Ralston after the end of the 1984 season. "Jim has a brilliant offensive mind," said Ralston. "I've had people like Dick Vermeil and Bill Walsh on my staff, and Jim is cut from the same mold." Fassel played quarterback for Southern California, Long Beach State and three pro teams.

Widenhofer, 42, wasted no time in regenerating state-wide interest in Missouri football. To begin the process, he dyed his graying hair black and shaved off his mustache, going from the "pro look" to the "college look" even before his first press conference. Finding the alumni a bit reserved, he quickly toned down the rhetoric and the promises. Then he barnstormed the state, selling himself effectively to players, high school coaches, businessmen and alumni. "In one stretch," he said, "I was on the road 96 of 104 days." He signed 27 players—21 from Missouri.

"My biggest problem was finding time to meet with my players," he said. In 11 years as a top defensive assistant for the Pittsburgh Steelers (including four Super Bowl championships), he became a strong believer in intangibles, built in part by close attention in practice by the head coach to all facets of the team. "Winning and in-state recruiting are the two things that will bring the fans back," said Widenhofer, a reserve linebacker under Dan Devine at Missouri in the mid-1960s. "When I played here, you couldn't buy a ticket."

Three are in the MAC

The other three I-A first-year coaches—Pettibone, Bryant and Schudel—are coaching in the Mid-American Conference, and Bryant is the first black head coach in the history of the MAC. A standout quarterback at Ohio in the late 1960s, Bryant was an assistant under Dick Crum at Miami (Ohio) and at North Carolina before becoming an assistant for the New England Patriots in 1982. Schudel played under Bo Schembechler at Miami (Ohio) in the mid-1960s and assisted him (offensive interior line) at Michigan the past 10 seasons (so Miami, the "Cradle of Coaches" can add another name to the list). "There is no question that Bo has influenced me," Schudel said. "We plan to be an aggressive, hard-hitting team that plays old-fashioned football."

Pettibone is the third head coach in three years at Northern Illinois, but insists he will stay at least four years. "We're making firm commitments—we intend to see our freshmen become seniors," he said. Pettibone, 45, earned a reputation as one of the best recruiters in the country at Texas A&M, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

Three from own staff

Three Division I-AA first-year head coaches—Kentera, Collick and Ayers—were promoted from assistant jobs at the same college while Teevens, 28, assisted at another Yankee Conference school (Boston U.) and Williamson was offensive line coach at Georgia.

Ayers, the defensive coordinator,

State where he was athletics director the last two seasons. Baker's record is 57-48-5 for 10 seasons, the last five at Citadel, and he was an assistant at Florida State last year. Schnellenger was 41-16 in five years at Miami (Florida), Brown 6-5 in one season at Appalachian State (he assisted at Oklahoma last year), Morton 57-15 in six years, all at North Dakota State, and Cooper 56-32 for eight, all at Tulsa.

Purzycki's career record is 21-21-1 over four years, all at Delaware State; Garrett is 39-11-1 for six seasons at Susquehanna (through 1965) and has been in pro coaching since then, the last seven as head of research and development for the Cleveland Browns.

Says Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer: "He's smarter than his years. Some guys come to the crossroads and then make decisions. Mack has already made the decision before he gets there."

Schnellenberger back home

Schnellenberger is returning to Louisville, where he grew up and went to high school, hoping to transform that program, just as he did at Miami (Florida)—from a loser to national champions in five years. "We have a very similar timetable here, but we're going to have to learn to win first," he says. "This season will be difficult, at best. As coach (Bear) Bryant would say, all of us have something in our background that keeps us working hard. For Bryant, it was being behind that mule in Arkansas. For me, it was holding up those (auto) transmissions on cold winter mornings here."

Cooper played on Iowa State's famous "Dirty Thirty" squad in the early 1960s under Clay Stapleton and his well-disciplined Tulsa teams averaged seven victories per year. At Arizona State, he made a highly favorable first impression with civic and booster groups. He took time for the personal touch and answered his mail personally, in longhand. Wrote Bob Hurt of the Arizona Republic in Phoenix: "What we have here is a mild case of overkill. Cooper is becoming like the guy your wife almost married. Nobody can be this good."

Much has been written about Blanton Collier's staff at Kentucky in the late 1950s, on how it produced so many notable coaches, Schnellenger among them (also, Louisiana State coach Bill Arnsparger, Miami Dolphin coach Don Shula and others).

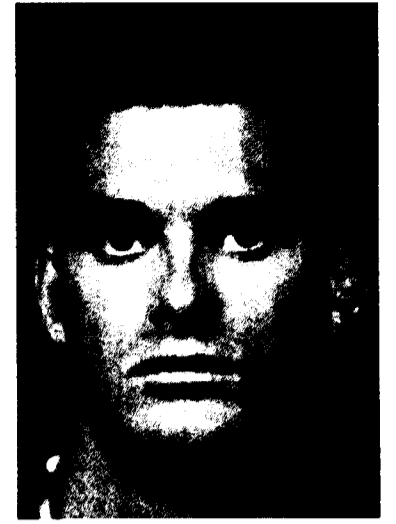

The Pepper Rodgers staff at Kansas in 1968, which led an Orange Bowl team, is fast becoming a notable one, too. It produced four current Division I-A head coaches—Cooper, UCLA's Terry Donahue, Wisconsin's Dave McClain and Hawaii's Dick Tomey—plus two current I-A athletics directors—Doug Weaver (former Kansas State head coach) at Michigan State and Larry Travis at Kansas State. Also on that staff was Don Fambrough, who succeeded Rodgers as Kansas head coach.

Donahue, McClain, Cooper and Tomey have totaled 266 head-coaching victories, with a winning percentage of .625 and close to seven victories per season.

I-AA attendance up, I-A down

Despite a turnout last Saturday of 810,118 for the top 10 attendance games—fourth highest in history—Division I-A per-game attendance so far this season is down 1.65 percent or 715 per game to 42,599. In Division I-AA, it is up 11.09 percent or 1,209 per game to 12,108. It is too early to spot any trend in either division. The chart:

Quotes of the week

Kansas kicker Jeff Johnson, whose two field goals were the victory margin in a 33-27 win over Hawaii, had his right foot sliced in half in an oil well accident in Chanute, Kansas, shortly before he was eight years old. "I was lying in KU med center and watched Tom Dempsey kick the longest field goal (in pro history...63 yards for New Orleans vs. Detroit in 1970). I knew he only had a partial foot also, and that kind of sparked me. I have talked to him on the phone and studied his films. The biggest thing he left with me is there is no such word as can't."

Rob Foster, who snaps the ball on Johnson's kicks, also played trumpet in the band last year for three games when his wrist was injured (his dad is the Kansas band director). "People don't realize how tough it is to do both," Foster told Bill Woodard of the Lawrence Journal-World. "Most music majors practice three or four hours a day, attend concerts and recitals and other meetings. I also have football practice and all the meetings that go with that. I love to do both so much that I just make the time." (Doug Vance, Kansas SID)

Vanderbilt has two well-regarded freshmen who are sons of sportswriters—kicker Johnny Clark, son of John Clark of the Birmingham News, and defensive back Renford Reese, son of Earnest Reese of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution. Says Clark: "Dad just says 'keep your head down, follow through and don't embarrass your dad.'" Says Reese: "Dad hasn't always been a writer—he was a football coach at first." Vanderbilt coach George MacIntyre just shakes his head at the thought of two sportswriters sons on the team: "It's kinda scary." (Tony Neely, Vanderbilt assistant SID)

Last Saturday was "Ed Reinhardt Day" at Colorado. Reinhardt suffered a life-threatening injury playing tight end in a game at Oregon last year, underwent surgery and remained in Eugene a month. "This day is not to get our team fired up to play—it's our chance to thank the people in Eugene for their love and support," said coach Bill McCartney. "The way that community poured out its heart was something we'll never forget." As it turned out, Colorado was fired up and used its new wishbone attack to upset Oregon, 21-17, with Ed and his family watching happily. (David Plati, Colorado SID) moved up when Buddy Sasser resigned to become director of athletics. Collick helped build a winning program under Joe Purzycki, coming in after that 105-0 humiliation at Portland State in 1980, and he will stick with the wing-T. Williamson, 33, liked the challenge at VMI, the smallest school playing I-AA football and uncompromising in its academic standards. Kentera moved up after one season as recruiting coordinator. An Arizona State graduate (1951), he was a junior college head coach in California with 13 winning teams in 15 seasons before going to his alma mater as an assistant (1966-78), then into private business.

Football notes

New-job coaches

Oregon State's Dave Kragthorpe and East Carolina's Art Baker are off to the best starts among six new-job Division I-A coaches with previous head-coaching experience. Each is 2-0. Kragthorpe's team upset California 23-20 last Saturday on a field goal as time expired and won its opener over Idaho, 43-28, for the best Oregon State start in 18 years. Baker's team beat state rival North Carolina State, then Southwest Texas.

Among six Division I-AA new-job coaches with previous head-coaching experience, James Madison's Purzycki has the only perfect mark, although two do not open until this Saturday. As a group, the 11 new-job coaches stand 9-9-0 to date:

Division I-A	W-L-T
John Cooper, Arizona State.....	0-1-0
Art Baker, East Carolina.....	2-0-0
Howard Schnellenger, Louisville.....	0-2-0
Dave Kragthorpe, Oregon State.....	2-0-0
Mack Brown, Tulane.....	0-2-0
Don Morton, Tulsa.....	1-1-0
Division I-AA	W-L-T
Steve Stetson, Boston U.....	0-1-0
Jim Garrett, Columbia*.....	0-1-0
Vic Gatto, Davidson.....	1-1-0
Joe Purzycki, James Madison.....	2-0-0
Ron Rogerson, Princeton*.....	0-1-0
Bill Kelly, West Texas State.....	1-1-0

*First game this Saturday.

Kragthorpe's career record is 24-21 for four seasons, the last three at Idaho State, and he comes from Utah

Hamilton, ending 6-1-1 in 1984; Rogerson 19-23-1 in four seasons at Maine; Kelly 13-7-1 in two years at Eastern New Mexico and Gatto 49-44-4 in 12 years, the last six at Tufts with a 29-16-3 mark. Remember that incredible battle of unbeaten in 1968 when Harvard "beat" Yale, 29-29? Gatto, the team captain, scored the last touchdown on a pass from Frank Champi as Harvard scored 16 in the last 42 seconds.

Morton, a 38-year-old Augustana (Illinois) graduate, won 45 games his last four years at North Dakota State. His team won the NCAA Division II national championship in 1983 and reached the championship game in 1981 and 1984. Morton is sold on the split-back veer option: "It is an entertaining, wide-open offense, but more importantly, we think it's the type of offense to put Tulsa in the end zone." He coauthored a book on the veer with Jim Wacker, former North Dakota State coach and current Texas Christian head man. And in his season opener, Morton defeated the inventor of the veer, Houston's Bill Yeoman, 31-24.

Kragthorpe, 52, helped build Brigham Young's dynasty for 10 seasons as offensive coordinator, then went to Idaho State in 1980 to take over a team that had lost 16 in a row. His first team was 6-5 in 1980, then won the NCAA Division I-AA national title in 1981 at 12-1. He became Utah State's athletics director in 1983. Kragthorpe has installed a BYU-style passing game at Oregon State.

Baker, 55, said he learned "a lot more about the passing game" as a Florida State assistant, and "it will be part of our offense here at East Carolina. But I'm an option coach and will continue to be one."

Brown, a 34-year-old Florida State graduate, led Appalachian State to a rare winning season in 1983 in his only previous head-coaching season. He molded a Sugar Bowl offense at Louisiana State in 1982 before retooling the Oklahoma attack last year.

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 32

Affidavits concerning financial aid—special Convention Proposal No. 9

Member institutions are reminded that Proposal No. 9 (adopted by the special NCAA Convention, June 21, 1985) states that those institutions that fail to administer the student-athletes' affidavits and head coaches' affidavits shall be ineligible for all NCAA championships for men and for women and for postseason football contests during the 1985-86 academic year.

As set forth in the August 1, 1985, memorandum to the chief executive officers of NCAA member institutions concerning Proposal No. 9, an institution may elect to submit its certification for all sports at one time for receipt in the national office no later than October 1, 1985, or submit its certification for fall sports (i.e., football, soccer, cross country, field hockey, water polo and women's volleyball) to the national office for receipt no later than October 1, 1985, and the certification for all other sports for receipt no later than December 1, 1985. There are boxes at the top of the chief executive officer's certification form that should be checked to indicate the option the institution has chosen.

Satisfactory-progress rule interpretations

In adopting NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6), Divisions I and II member institutions have established minimum satisfactory academic progress requirements that must be met in order for student-athletes to be eligible to represent them. Case Nos. 320-324 (pages 346-349, 1985-86 NCAA Manual) set forth official interpretations concerning this legislation. The following is a guide to situations relative to Bylaw 5-1-(j)-(6) [all references are to cases and pages in the 1985-86 NCAA Manual]:

Advanced placement credit	Case No. 321 (page 346)
Certification date	Case No. 321 (page 347)
Declaration of degree program	Case Nos. 322, 323 (pages 347-348)
Effective date	Case No. 320 (page 346)
Incomplete grades	Case No. 321 (page 347)
International competition	Case No. 324-(d) (page 349)
Medical absence	Case No. 324-(c) (page 349)
Midyear enrollment	Case No. 324-(b) (page 349)
Missed term	Case No. 324-(a) (page 349)
Nonrecruited, nonparticipant	Case No. 324-(e) (page 349)
Remedial courses	Case No. 321 (page 346)
Repeated courses	Case No. 321 (page 347)
Transferable credit	Case No. 321 (page 347)

In addition, the NCAA Council has approved other interpretations that have appeared in the Legislative Assistance column in The NCAA News as follows:

Failure to designate a program of studies	The NCAA News 6/13/84
Banked credit hours	The NCAA News 6/13/84
Season of competition option	The NCAA News 6/13/84
Missed term	The NCAA News 9/17/84

Campus entertainment—expense-paid visits

Under the provisions of Bylaw 1-8-(j) and Case No. 233 (page 322, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), a prospective student-athlete's entertainment shall take place only in the area within a 30-mile radius of the institution's main campus, and such entertainment must be at a scale comparable to that of normal student life and not excessive in nature.

It is important to note that for Divisions I and II member institutions, Bylaw 1-2-(b) strictly forbids in-person, off-campus contacts with prospective student-athletes by representatives of an institution's athletics interests at any time or location. This being the case, if a prospective student-athlete's entertainment is off the institution's main campus but within the permissible 30-mile radius, the provisions of Bylaw 1-2-(b) would prohibit in-person contact by representatives of the institution's athletics interests.

Recruiting contacts—away contests

Bylaw 1-2-(a) requires that all off-campus contacts with a prospect are subject to applicable recruiting regulations. Therefore, the practice of having prospects visit the team locker room or visit with the coaches at an institution's away contest would be considered a countable contact, and in football and basketball, it would be a violation if outside the permissible contact periods set forth in Bylaws 1-2-(a)-(4), (5) and (6).

Championships Corner

Future Championships

1. Dates and sites have been determined for the following future NCAA Men's Tennis Championships:

1987 and 1988 Division I Championships (May 16-24, 1987, and May 21-29, 1988) University of Georgia.

1986 Division II Championships (May 12-18)—California State University, Northridge.

1986 Division II Championships (May 12-18) Claremont McKenna-Harvey Mudd-Scripps Colleges.

Staff

personal standards that the enforcement department and its personnel are respected for their honesty and commitment," Byers said.

"Dave Berst will continue those policies under Steve Morgan's supervision. Steve is uniquely qualified to supervise both the compliance and enforcement activities, and his immediate priority will be to develop fully the compliance services." [Editor's note: A future issue of The NCAA News will feature a detailed report on the compliance services.]

"The expanded needs in legislative services, including the simplification and revision of the NCAA Manual, and the new compliance effort give both Bill and Steve new challenges," Byers continued, "and will provide them with new experiences that will make them even more valuable staff members of the NCAA."

Hunt joined the NCAA staff in September 1972 as an investigator and later served as an executive assistant to Warren S. Brown when Brown headed the enforcement department. Hunt was promoted to assistant executive director for enforcement when Brown left the NCAA staff in May 1977. He is a graduate of Texas Christian University

11.5 million saw college baseball in '85

More than 11½ million people attended college baseball games in 1985, according to Collegiate Baseball. That figure was the second highest since the newspaper began keeping attendance statistics in 1979.

After a rainy 1984 held attendance under 10 million, a total of 11,668,916 fans filled college baseball parks in 1985. Only the 12.8 million in 1983 tops this past year's attendance.

Information was compiled from questionnaires that were sent to all four-year and junior colleges in the United States.

The University of Miami (Florida), the NCAA Division I champion, led all teams in home attendance with 136,249, an average of 2,390 fans per game. The University of Texas, Austin, Division I runner-up, was next with 115,015.

Other teams that exceeded 40,000 in home attendance were the University of Hawaii (106,526); Florida State University (103,478); Mississippi State University (95,604); California State University, Fresno (91,106); University of South Carolina (84,000); Oklahoma State University (61,570); San Diego State University (61,000); Stanford University (56,000); University of Arizona (49,204); University of New Orleans (45,528); Arizona State University (42,298), and Louisiana State University (40,762).

Mississippi State led all teams in average attendance by a wide margin with a mark of 3,984. Oklahoma State was next at 2,463, followed by Fresno State (2,462) and Miami (Florida) (2,390).

Although overall attendance fell short of the record 1983 season, attendance records were set in the NCAA Divisions I and II championships, as well as the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championship tournament.

The College World Series in Omaha, Nebraska, drew a record 125,970, and another 2.2 million viewed the series on ESPN. The NCAA Division II play-offs drew 17,000, and another 33,000 attended the NAIA championship tournament.

Levick appointed project coordinator

Cheryl L. Levick has been named NCAA youth program coordinator, replacing S. Patricia Walden, who resigned to return to teaching.

Levick, who had been an assistant director of communications, will be responsible for the NCAA youth clinics and coordinating the National Youth Sports Program and will serve as the staff liaison with Volunteers for Youth during 1985-86.

She joined the NCAA administrative staff December 27, 1982, and was responsible for the promotion of women's events, moving to the communications department in June 1983.

No replacement for Levick will be hired in the communications department.

and has a law degree from Southern Methodist University.

Morgan has been an NCAA staff member since October 1977, serving first as an enforcement representative and then as executive assistant in the enforcement department. He was named director of legislative services in 1981 and has headed that function since, becoming an assistant executive director when legislative services was established as a separate department in September 1984. He holds a bachelor's degree and a law degree from the University of Kansas and practiced law in the Kansas City area before joining the NCAA staff.

confirmed its intention to adhere to the Bylaw 2-2-(o) requirement that only those bowl games be certified that provide a national contest between deserving winning teams," said Milo R. Lude, University of Washington director of athletics and chair of the Postseason Football Committee.

"The committee indicated that even closer scrutiny will be given to applications from bowl games with a history of noncompliance with the governing rules and regulations," he said.

In approving the committee's recommendations, the NCAA Council noted that it is possible the committee may in the future approve new bowl games while declining to recertify existing games.

The Postseason Football Committee also revised its guidelines for implementing the fine system set forth in Bylaw 2-2-(p), and those revisions were approved by the Council.

For late payments by bowl managements in violation of Bylaw 2-2-(h), the fine will be the amount of interest accumulated from April 1 on the unpaid balance to the two participating teams, plus a minimum of $5,000.

For all other violations by bowl managements of the policies and regulations governing certified bowl games, the fine will be a minimum of $1,000 or one-tenth of one percent of 75 percent of the total gross receipts, whichever is greater.

In no instance would the total fine exceed 50 percent of the bowl's share of the gross receipts.

Oregon State University and the University of California, Los Angeles, are negotiating with a New York promoter to play their opening football game next season in Great Britain. The game would be played August 30, a Saturday night... The University of Miami (Florida) has unveiled plans for a 3,000-seat tennis stadium in time for next spring season. More than $500,000 already has been raised, and the athletics department expects to raise at least $200,000 more for the project... Purdue University has completed a $762,800 project of repairs and additions to Ross-Ade Stadium. The funds, from athletics department operations, provided for renovation of the team meeting room, the addition of a visiting-team locker room and structural repairs to various parts of the stadium.

Johnny Majors, head football coach at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and Barry Switzer, head football coach at the University of Oklahoma, have been named to coach the East and West, respectively, in next year's 40th annual Hula Bowl January 11... Fairleigh Dickinson University, Teaneck, has broken ground for a new athletics and recreation center, which will serve as the home for the basketball teams. The $7.5 million center is scheduled to be completed in 1986... Eastern Illinois University has announced a $450,000 athletics fund-raising campaign to improve O'Brien Stadium. Primary improvements include a new artificial track and lights.

Northern Arizona University is starting a drug-testing and counseling program. The program will consist of mandatory drug testing of all student-athletes, and it will address and identify any drug dependency... Cleveland

Briefly in the News

State University will dedicate a soccer field, Viking Field, in a match against Indiana University, Bloomington, October 17. However, since some soccer alumni of the institution have waited—in some cases 31 years—for the school to have its own soccer field, they got the first opportunity to play on the field in a pair of alumni games August 24. One former player phoned in a reservation from Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

Central Connecticut State University has become the eighth member of the Seaboard Conference. Last year, the conference conducted a championship only in women's basketball... A $1 million gift by an Ohio businessman is the largest single grant ever received by the University of Kentucky Athletics Association. The gift by Ervin J. Nutter of Xenia helped the association come within $900,000 of its $5.5 million goal for a new football training facility, which will bear Nutter's name.

William E. Lingelbach, a 1925 University of Pennsylvania graduate, has donated $30,000 to the Lingelbach endowment for soccer. He was an all-America at the school in 1923 and 1924. The gift is part of the university's $2 million drive to endow all sports... Reporters will be barred from the football locker room at Clemson University, but they will be allowed to interview coaches and players in another area for up to 30 minutes after a game. Officials said the locker rooms became too crowded after games... The stadium press box at Brown University will be named in honor of John "Jay" Barry, currently director of special editorial projects at the university. Barry, a 1950 graduate, has had a long association with Brown athletics.

Central Michigan University has filed a breach of contract suit against the University of Central Florida, which has backed out of a September 21 game in Mount Pleasant. Central Michigan contends it will lose $10,000 in gate receipts because no other opponent is available. Central Florida says it can't play the game because of a $1 million athletics deficit... A share of profits from the A-Day spring football game at Auburn University will purchase 450 books for the Ralph B. Draughon Library at the institution. In the past four years, the game has provided 1,750 books for the collection.

Ground will be broken this fall for a $5.5 million multipurpose athletics training center at Rutgers University, New Brunswick. The center will be constructed in three levels above and around the east side of Rutgers Stadium.

Arizona State University has begun a mandatory drug-testing program for all its athletes. Random tests have been conducted for the past three years. Athletes testing positive will be required to undergo counseling. Refusal to do so will be treated as a second offense, requiring notification of parents. A second positive test results in a seven-day suspension from practice and play, and a third violation brings a one-year suspension and possible loss of financial aid... Benny Anders, a forward on the University of Houston basketball team last season, received three years' probation from a state district judge after pleading no contest to a charge of possessing a firearm on school property. A student court suspended Anders for the summer and fall term, but he says he plans to return to school later... St. Francis College (Pennsylvania) has increased its intercollegiate sports program for women to seven teams with the addition of softball.

Kostrinsky needs only to get some young people molded into the offensive scheme to field another powerful squad.

September dates with Syracuse and the James Madison Invitational should provide strong tests for Ithaca as the Bombers try for a sixth straight trip to postseason competition.

Trenton State has a new coach in Sharon Goldbrenner and some old faces returning in seniors Suzanne Gallo and Holly Trumpovicz and juniors Charlotte Heenan and Darlene Franchi. The Lions' only loss in a 23-1-1 1984 campaign came at the hands of eventual national champion Bloomsburg. Eight starters return from Trenton State's highly successful squad, making Goldbrenner's job a little easier. Four of the top five scorers are back, including junior forward Robin Schwartz, whose 26 goals tied the school record.

With East Stroudsburg, Scranton and Salisbury State slated to play in the season-opening Trenton State Invitational tournament, and with early season trips to Pennsylvania Conference powers Millersville and Shippensburg, the Lions will learn a lot about their potential for play-off contention very early.

Oneonta State coach Brenda Meese has six starters back from a team that broke the school scoring record with 68 goals and 116 total points. Junior Sue Murray will power the offense, as she did last season with a school-record 28 goals. Forward Becky Ryan, also a junior, finished third in scoring, giving the Red Dragons plenty of returning scoring punch.

Despite a schedule including potential Dragonslayers Cortland State, Salisbury State, Drew and Ithaca, Oneonta State has the power and maturity to make a strong push for national honors.

Salem State also has lots of returning strength. Coach Maryellen McGee lost only one starter from last year's 14-3-1 squad. Senior Holly Brennan is three points shy of the school's all-time scoring record.

With Brennan, her sister Heidi, senior Mary Tormey and junior Leslie Boucher back for action, Salem State could improve dramatically on last year's finish at No. 11 in the regular-season rankings.

In the mountains of western Maryland, Frostburg State coach Chris Lottes has some replacing to do but seems optimistic the Bobcats can make another run at a spot in the NCAA play-offs. Seniors Tracey Shelley and Kathy Rafferty will provide leadership and attempt to build on the success that led to a 14-4-2 record in 1984.

Although Plymouth State lost all-America selection Terry Galley and all-region selection Laura Giusti, the return of players like junior Cindy Ingerson and sophomore Beth Hamilton signal another good Panther team.

Another 14-4 record is possible for Plymouth State, as coach Dot Diehl leads the team toward a second straight postseason appearance.

Cortland State coach Pat Rudy faces a big rebuilding job and a schedule that includes Oneonta State, Salisbury State, Syracuse, Denison and Trenton State.

Rudy must find replacements for all-America players Patty Swenk and Lisa Noll. After a penalty stroke loss to Ithaca in the 1985 Division III tournament, Rudy should have no trouble getting her charges fired up for the season, but the strain of key losses may make things tough this time around.

Fairleigh Dickinson-Madison came from nowhere to crack the division's top 20 a year ago, and coach Hallie Cohen has 10 starters back from that 11-3-1 squad.

Look for a quartet of juniors, Patti Lynch, Kristin Mesick, Julie Muller and Becky York, to lead the way as the Lady Devils attempt to pick up where they left off in the national rankings while contending for a play-off spot.

Coach Yvonne Kauffman returns to Elizabethtown after a year-long leave to inherit a team that needs some rebuilding. Interim coach Leanne McFalls guided the Lady Jays to a 15-4-2 mark, but three offensive players and the team's net-minder have graduated.

Junior Bonnie Bair, who tallied 13 goals and two assists last season, may bear the burden of scoring as Kauffman puts things back together in a regular season that includes dates with Messiah, East Stroudsburg, Lynchburg and Shippensburg.

Millersville has a new coach in Carol Miller, and she inherits nine veterans from the Marauders' 9-6-3 team of a year ago.

Juniors Lynn Fry and Kelley Shea will lead the offense, and junior Doreen Frascino will take over goal-keeping duties. The latter is a position that, due to a lack of depth, could be troublesome for Millersville this season if injuries strike.

Goalkeeping is not a problem at Lynchburg, where junior Patti Brennan is back. She earned all-conference honors last season after allowing only eight goals in 18 games.

Coach Enza Inturrisi will count on seniors Roxie Ferraro and Kappie Fraher to lead the offense and defense, respectively.

After an 18-2-1 campaign last season and a trip to the play-offs, Denison has lost standouts Meg Filoon and Kristen Hall to graduation, along with top defender Barb Van Horn.

Senior Sarah Arndt is the only upperclassman among the top returning players, so if coach Jan Hathorn can mold a young team into another winner, Denison should be strong again this year.

Wooster shared the North Coast Athletic Conference title with Denison a year ago, and the Scotties need only to reload for the new season.

Top scorers Aggie Belt and Carol Martin are back, as are all-conference players Kate Koehler and Mary Charles Avinger. New coach Sheila Noonan inherits a good returning group, and the Scotties again should be a contender for conference and post-season honors.

Following is a look at other teams from Division III regions throughout the country:

Northeast

Bates will be out for a fourth consecutive Maine state championship, and the Bobcats will be led by sophomore goalie Anne Marie van Heuven, who notched five shutouts last season.

Bentley will be playing Division III competition exclusively for the first time in 1985. Last year, the Falcons had a 6-1-2 slate against Division III foes (7-4-2 overall), and coach Linda MacDonald has nine starters back.

Senior Bronwen Morrison returns to the Bowdoin lineup after two years of study at Rice. Coach Sally LaPointe will be out to find a way to best Bates for the state title; the Polar Bears have finished second to the Bobcats the past two seasons.

Bridgewater State (Massachusetts) has a whopping 23 veterans back from last year's 10-2-4 squad. Another trip to either the ECAC or NCAA tournament is likely.

With goalie Ashley Ridgeway heading the list of returning players, coach Peel Hawthorne should be able to mold the 1985 Connecticut College team into another New England contender. Look for scoring punch to come from forward Sue Landau.

Julie Chen is the bright spot at MIT, where the two-time squad MVP returns to help the Engineers try to improve on last year's 5-7-2 mark.

Middlebury will be one of the region's most potent offensive teams again this year. With leading scorers Ann McCollum and Lynn Holappa back, the Panthers may be able to post numbers similar to 1984, when they outshot opponents, 231-77, and outscored them, 36-11.

Mount Holyoke will benefit from the return of forwards Kathleen Kinsella and Sarah Dunkelberger, who spent last season abroad. Look for the Lyons to improve on their 1-6 record of a year ago.

Nichols outscored opponents, 59-24, last season on the way to a school-best 13-5-2 record. With the scoring unit returning intact, the Lady Bisons should rack up impressive numbers again.

The return of Paola Prins, one of the division's standout players, bodes well for followers of Smith's field hockey program. Coach Jacki Blei is set to go after a top-20 ranking.

Trinity (Connecticut), although hurt by graduation losses, should have enough firepower left to claim the school's 10th consecutive winning season.

Westfield State, with 11 players back, should improve on last year's 9-5-3 record, when the Owls lost four times by only one goal. Sophomore Kathy Chambers may lead the scoring attack.

Heidi Pike takes over the coaching duties at Wheaton (Massachusetts) and will try to better last year's 7-8 record.

Mid-Atlantic

If Drew coach Maurcen Horan can rebuild the Ranger offense quickly, the team should be able to make another strong run for postseason play-off action. Replacing the graduated Sally Jo Placa is the biggest problem.

Renee Cioffi will lead the Glassboro State attack, after scoring a dozen goals last season. Look for the Pros to mount a challenge for the New Jersey State Athletic Conference title.

Connecticut alumnus Holly Payne is the new coach at Manhattanville, and she has 13 players returning. The chief goal is to improve on a 10-7-2 record from last season.

Lynn LaBar has taken over at Montclair State, replacing Sharon Goldbrenner, who moved on to Trenton State to replace Melissa Magee.

Rochester coach Jane Possee has the luxury of working with seniors Nancy Melvin and Karl Sprandel, who already have earned places in the school's record book. Melvin is the career scoring leader with one season left, and Sprandel has the all-time mark for assists heading into her final campaign.

Five of the top six scorers are back at William Smith, along with junior goalie Trish Stern. An improvement over last year's 7-6 mark is a possibility.

Pennsylvania

Bryn Mawr will be better than last year's 9-8-1 season, when the team was fighting the loss of nine starters. This time around, coach Jan Shillingford has eight starters back and more reason for optimism.

Carnegie-Mellon is one of several teams that will compete in the Presidents' Athletic Conference's inaugural field hockey season. The Tartans have 11 players back, including team captain Lynn Otto.

(Note: Other Presidents' Conference field hockey teams include Bethany [West Virginia], Washington and Jefferson, and Hiram.)

Haverford College enters competition in the Middle Atlantic Conference this season, and coach Penelope Hinckley must replace four starters lost to graduation.

Barbara Bergstresser may become one of the top offensive players in the region as she plays her senior season for coach Betty Wesner at Kutztown. Bergstresser had 19 goals and five assists a year ago.

Middle Atlantic Conference all-stars Denise Eisenhauer and Wendy Tretheway are back at Moravian, where coach Betty Prince is looking for improvement on last year's 6-6-1 record.

Shippensburg has a new coach in Debbie Tweed, who inherits nine starters from last year's 6-6 club. Offense was the problem, since the team scored only 15 goals in 12 games.

Susquehanna, on its way to the Middle Atlantic Conference play-offs last season, recorded seven shutouts and allowed only five goals. With 12 letter winners back, coach Connie Delbaugh should be able to better last year's 9-3 campaign.

New Swarthmore coach Gaile Rockey has almost everybody back from last year's 6-5-1 team. Junior Ashley Litton will lead the scoring attack.

Another new coach in the region is Fileen Sharp at Wilkes. She will have to replace record-setting goalie Tracey Kelly in an attempt to best the 1984 mark of 5-10.

South

Bethany (West Virginia) has a new coach in Judith Soderlund, who must replace four starters lost to graduation. Junior Michelle Crayton is expected to bolster the offense as she did a year ago, when she scored 21 times.

Eastern Mennonite was the only team to score on Messiah during the regular season, and with all-America standout Linda Burkhardt back, the Royals could repeat last season's 12-3-1 campaign.

Roanoke could challenge Eastern Mennonite and Lynchburg in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference. The Maroons finished 6-2 in the league a year ago, and coach Jane Layman has most of the squad's top players back.

Just about everyone is back for coach Jeannie Fissinger at the University of the South, where senior Jennifer Cook is expected to power the offense.

Great Lakes

Alma coach Debra Mapes has a lot of new faces in the lineup as her team prepares to defend the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association titles it has won two straight years.

Carleton has a new coach in Jean Mollenkamp, who returns a very experienced team. An improvement in last year's 14-7-1 record and a move into the division's top 20 are possibilities.

Earlham's new coach Laurie Freitag has eight players back, including honorable mention all-district standout Martha Kerrick, from last year's 13-3-1 team.

Grinnell finished 10-3 last season, and coach Dee Fairchild lost only two starters. With a roster dominated by underclassmen, the Pioneers could be on the verge of a real push for national recognition.

Denise Amato is the new coach at Hiram, and she has leading scorers Renee Waldman and Anne Hayman back, along with sophomore goalie Hope Sheppard.

Andrea Dahl takes over at Hope, inheriting eight starters from last year's 10-5-4 team, including scoring leader Jennifer Sharp.

Muskingum's scoring leader, sophomore forward Elaine Eddy, returns to greet new coach Cheryl Payne. With only three seniors gone from that team, Payne should be able to better the 1984 record of 4-10.

Oberlin goalie Robin Cardin will be hard-pressed to better her freshman performance of a year ago when she posted a nifty .882 saves percentage and averaged a whopping 50 saves per contest.

Wheaton (Illinois) has a new coach in Bert Kuehler, and the return of goalie Tori Plank will boost the squad's hopes for play-off consideration.

Senior forward Kristen Kemerling leads the attack for Wisconsin-Stevens Point, where coach Nancy Page led her charges to a 16-2 mark last season. Kemerling scored 16 goals and should be the offensive focal point again this season.

Private colleges seek new limits on student aid

Education Secretary William J. Bennett has commended the Committee for Economic Development, which includes representatives from dozens of major U.S. corporations, for a report that claims falling education standards are responsible for the decline in the nation's industrial competitiveness.

The 107-page report by the New York-based organization said an alarming number of children leave school without learning discipline and work habits that are essential for success. The report marked the first major statement by business leaders on the state of American education, the Washington Post reported.

Among the report's recommendations were the following: injecting more money into public schools and raising teacher salaries, giving more emphasis to increasing the authority of administrators rather than school boards, and emphasizing basic English.

"If schools tolerate excessive absenteeism, truancy, tardiness or misbehavior, we cannot expect students to meet standards of minimum performance or behavior either in school or as adults," the report said. Bennett praised the report for its call for more control by administrators.

Economic link

The National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, representing private institutions, has proposed a redirection of grants to low-income students and limiting the popular student loans to those who need them most, the Washington Post reported.

Under the proposal, the Pell Grant program for low-income students would be restructured to take into consideration the actual cost of the college the student attends, in addition to a living allowance.

"We need to restructure the aid programs in a way that redresses the serious and growing imbalances that threaten their effectiveness if not their very existence," said John Phillips, president of the association.

Phillips said the average cost of private schools is $9,600, but public tax that could raise money from apartment dwellers, whom she contends pay too little of the cost of education.

Futrell said a public opinion poll conducted for the NEA by the Gallup organization indicates that a large percentage of the population would support higher local and state taxes for education if they knew how the money would be spent.

Loans defaults

Government payments on defaulted student loans will jump 45 percent this year to more than $1 billion and huge increases are predicted by 1990,

Elsewhere in Education

schools can keep tuition lower because they receive an average $4,000-per-student subsidy each year from state legislatures.

Phillips said about half of the 2.6 million students in private institutions get some financial aid.

A recent College Board report said the average cost of a college education is up seven percent.

Spread the cost

Mary E. Futrell, president of the National Education Association, recommends that governments spread the burden of education expenses to a broader population base because property owners are bearing too much of the burden.

She suggests that state and local governments raise taxes on sales to individuals or institute a state income according to Education Secretary William J. Bennett.

Bennett released a report in late August predicting that the default rate will increase from 10.7 percent to 11.7 percent during fiscal 1985. If that trend would hold, the default rate will reach 13.6 percent by 1990, when the Guaranteed Student Loan Program's debt would be nearly four times the $3.2 billion accumulated by the end of fiscal 1984.

"Ultimately, the costs of a high default rate by current students must be borne by the taxpayers and by students seeking loans in the future," Bennett said.

A jump in the default rate would break a four-year string of declines since it reached 12.5 percent in 1980, the Department of Education reported. Bennett has urged Congress to approve pending legislation to require state loan guarantee agencies to step up collection efforts and tighten procedures to prevent defaults. The legislation would reduce from 100 percent to 90 percent the proportion that state agencies are reimbursed by the Federal government.

The Department of Education announced in August that it would impound tax refunds next spring for persons who are in arrears on their student loans. Also, the government docked 10,000 Federal workers' paychecks to cover outstanding loans. The names of 16,000 other borrowers have been submitted to the Department of Justice this year for prosecution.

Older students

Most American college students are 22 years old or older, and the student population is becoming more female, according to the Census Bureau.

Students aged 18 and 19 represent 25 percent of the total number of college students. In 1970, that percentage was 31.6.

Meanwhile, the proportion of students aged 25 to 29 increased from 11.4 percent in 1970 to 14.1 percent in 1981. The report surveyed enrollments for 1980 and 1981. The proportion of students aged 30 to 34 nearly doubled between 1970 and 1981, increasing from five percent to 9.9 percent.

It is believed that the shifts in ages of students will pose some difficult choices for Federal policy-makers, See Elsewhere, page 16

CORRECTIONS

Due to a reporter's error, the summary of proposed legislation to be sponsored by the Council at the 1986 NCAA Convention that appeared in the August 28, 1985, issue of The NCAA News contained an error regarding the effective date of one proposal. An amendment to Bylaw 11-1 to require women's basketball teams in Division I to meet the same scheduling requirements currently in place for Division I men's teams would become effective September 1, 1987; thus, Division I institutions would be required to meet the requirement in the 1987-88 academic year, rather than 1986-87.

Due to incorrect information, Hartford assistant men's soccer coach Charles Hinckley's name was incorrectly spelled in the September 9 issue of The NCAA News.

Chair

Jack Ryan, U.S. Military Academy, chair of the NCAA Men's Swimming Committee, was incorrectly identified in a photograph in the September 1 issue of The NCAA News.

Deadline extended in Williams case

Prosecutors have been given an extra week to ask a state appeals court to reinstate charges against former Tulane University basketball player John "Hot Rod" Williams.

Criminal District Judge Alvin V. Oser, who declared a mistrial and threw out the charges against Williams August 27, had originally set September 11 as the deadline for appealing his decision, but extended the deadline to September 18.

In declaring the mistrial, Oser said the prosecutors deliberately kept back information, including a tape of a statement by former Tulane player Jon Johnson, that would have helped Williams' defense against two counts of sports bribery and three of conspiracy to commit sports bribery.

Executive Regulations

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Executive Committee has adopted executive regulations consistent with the provisions of Constitution 6-3. Executive regulations may be amended at any annual or special Convention by a majority vote of the delegates present and voting in accordance with the procedures set forth in Bylaws 13-1, 13-2 and 13-3. Publication in this column of executive regulations adopted or revised by the Executive Committee constitutes official notice to the membership.

Regulation 1-5(c), page 177, was revised as follows:

(c) Institutions that fail to meet a deadline imposed in Executive Regulation 1-5(b) may appeal to the NCAA Administrative Committee for an exception. If the Administrative Committee, acting for the Executive Committee, grants the appeal, then the institution may be restored to eligibility for meets and tournaments. Such an institution that fails to meet a deadline a subsequent time within four years may be granted an exception only upon payment of a penalty of $150 for the second offense and $300 for each subsequent offense. Upon approval of the Administrative Committee of such an exception and receipt of the institution's check in the NCAA national office, the institution may compete in NCAA meets and tournaments, provided it is otherwise eligible. (Revised: 8/13/85).

Regulation 1-18(a) and (b), page 191, were revised as follows:

(a) The Association maintains an excess liability insurance policy to cover the conduct of NCAA meets, tournaments and contests. The coverage includes bodily injury and property damage resulting from accidents. (Revised: 8/13/85).

(b) Host institutions and sponsoring agencies shall purchase primary bodily injury and property damage liability insurance policies, listing the NCAA as an additional insured, and shall provide the national office with the appropriate insurance certificates. (Revised: 8/13/85).

Regulation 1-2(p), page 171, was revised as follows:

(p) A governing sports committee may assess a financial penalty, subject to review by and appeal to the Executive Committee, against an institution for failure of any of its representatives to adhere to the policies and procedures governing the administration of the championship.

(1) Institutions failing to adhere to published procedures for the submission of regular-season results, availability questionnaires and/or certification of eligibility/entry forms may be assessed a financial penalty of $100 per team or $50 per individual up to a maximum penalty of $300.

(2) Institutions failing to adhere to published managerial and administrative policies and procedures may be assessed any one of the following penalties: (i) $100, (ii) cancellation of all or a portion of the payment of the NCAA travel guarantee, or (iii) the withholding of all or a portion of the institution's share of the net receipts.

(3) Sports committees shall receive Executive Committee approval prior to establishing financial penalties other than those specified above. (Revised: 8/13/85).

particularly when it is learned that 52 percent of college students are 22 or older, defying the idea that a college student is a young person who still is able to rely on parents for support.

According to the Census Bureau, much of the growth in the older student population can be attributed to women. Women students in the older age group more than doubled their numbers between 1970 and 1981.

There were an estimated 12.13 million college students in 1981, including 6.3 million women and 5.83 million men. In 1970, there were 4.8 million men and 3.4 million women.

Tradition ends

Washington and Lee University ended a 236-year all-male tradition this month, when women enrolled as undergraduates.

The school decided in July 1984 to open its undergraduate program to women. Women have been attending the law school since 1972.

There are 107 women in the 316-member freshman class this fall.

Only four all-male schools are left in the U.S. Two are in Virginia—Virginia Military Institute and Hampden-Sydney College. The others are The Citadel, a military institution in Charleston, South Carolina, and Wabash College in Indiana.

Women CEOs

The number of women college presidents has nearly doubled since 1975, with women now running 10 percent of the nation's campuses, according to a study by the American Council on Education's Office of Women in Higher Education.

Of the 286 women college presidents at the end of 1984, 71 percent were in charge of coeducational institutions, and women also are running 84 of the 117 women's colleges. There were 148 women college CEOs 10 years ago.

Today, 18 percent of the women presidents operate institutions with 3,000 to 10,000 students; six percent are at institutions with 10,000 to 20,000 students, and three percent run campuses or systems with enrollments of more than 20,000.

Transportation policies are reviewed

Transportation expenses are guaranteed for teams and individuals that participate in 1985-86 national collegiate men's and women's team championships in all divisions, except the Division III women's lacrosse tournament, and Division I men's and women's individual/team championships.

The transportation-expenses guarantee will apply only to one round trip to the site of competition for each team or individual within the required guidelines.

Local ground transportation is not covered under the transportation guarantee and must be paid by the institution; however, if a competing team or a championship site is located outside the metropolitan area of an airport, reimbursement may be claimed for the cost of transporting the team or individuals from the campus to the airport or from the airport to the championship site within the required guidelines.

Transportation costs for competitors in Divisions II and III men's and women's individual/team championships will be met by income generated from those events (if available), excess receipts from the respective division championships or by the participating institutions.

Block grants will be used to cover transportation expenses in all championships in Divisions II and III in 1986-87, for which reserve funds have been established in the 1985-86 budget.

Those events considered team championships include baseball, basketball, field hockey, football, ice hockey, lacrosse, soccer, softball, volleyball and water polo.

Those events considered individual/team championships include cross country, fencing, golf, gymnastics, rifle, skiing, swimming and diving, tennis, track (indoor and outdoor), and wrestling.

Conference to add championships for women in 1986-87

The Midwestern Collegiate Conference, beginning its seventh season as an NCAA Division I conference, will bring women's athletics at conference schools under its jurisdiction in the 1986-87 academic year.

Six of the seven active conference women's programs will continue to compete in the North Star Conference in 1985-86.

Representatives of the conference will meet in October to begin implementing a governing structure for women's programs and consolidate it within the existing conference structure.

Commissioner James W. Shaffer indicated that championship sports currently conducted in the North Star Conference most likely would be those administered by the MCC.

Those sports are basketball, cross country, softball, swimming, tennis and volleyball. The conference conducts championships in seven men's sports.

The following institutions' women's programs would be included in MCC competition: Butler University, University of Detroit, University of Evansville, Loyola University (Illinois), St. Louis University and Xavier University (Ohio).

Cherry Bowl is prospering

Aggressive marketing is proving its worth to the youngest of the collegiate postseason football games. Despite having staged just one game, the Cherry Bowl apparently is on its way to becoming financially sound.

The bowl finished $700,000 in the red after last year's inaugural game, which, considering its short start-up time, "was almost as good as breaking even for our 90-day wonder," Mike Mills, director of communications for the Cherry Bowl, told the Associated Press. "We'll easily be in the black this year."

The key to the sound financial footing is the support from Michigan industry including the Buick Motor Division of General Motors Corporation, Michigan Sugar, MCI, Budweiser and Coca-Cola.

Mills also has leaned heavily on the marketing work of Donald B. Canham, athletics director at the University of Michigan, who has been filling a 101,001-seat stadium in Ann Arbor, Michigan, for nearly a decade.

"I told Canham I didn't want to reinvent the wheel," Mills said. "I figured since he had the mailing lists and the know-how, he could be a big help if he wanted to and, thankfully, he pitched right in."

The 1985 Cherry Bowl, which will be televised by Mizlou in all top 10 television markets, already has been sold in 12 of the top 20 radio markets and more are expected after the teams are announced in November.

Last year's payout of $741,000 to each of the competing teams ranked seventh among the major bowl games and is expected to reach $1 million per team this year.
