More effective NCAA Manual is committee goal

Often the target of criticism because of its size, the NCAA Manual—in keeping with the times—may be going on a diet.

There may not be any weight loss; but, at the very least, the special NCAA committee in charge of the project hopes to rearrange some bulk to make the book more manageable.

The cooperation of member institutions, coaching associations, conferences and NCAA committees is being sought, according to Wilford S.

Bailey, chair of the Special NCAA Committee on Deregulation and Rules Simplification.

"We need the full assistance of the membership to accomplish our goals within the given timetable," Bailey said.

At its September 23 meeting in Kansas City, the committee outlined its objectives.

Its basic purpose will be to consider the feasibility of possible deregulation and modification of some rules in certain areas, including the transfer rule, recruiting contact rules and financial aid legislation. The committee also has the responsibility of completing an overall revision of the Manual.

Other committee members, in addition to Bailey, are Clayton W. Chapman, associate commissioner of the Eastern College Athletic Conference; Prentice Gault, associate commissioner of the Big Eight Conference; Donna A. Lopiano, women's athletics director at the University of Texas, Austin, and G. David Price, assistant executive director of the Pacific-10 Conference.

The committee has established three goals:

- Revise the Manual in terms of its format so that it is organized and structured for easier understanding; improve the index and develop a glossary to define key terms.

- Simplify the wording of the rules, including changes to clarify the original intent of the legislation (often a number of amendments are layered on top of the original rule and it is possible to lose sight of the original intent of the legislation).

- Consider deregulation in some areas, whereby some rules might be eliminated in their entirety. The committee hopes that reduction of some possibly unnecessary regulations would eliminate the frustration experienced by institutional staff members who want to comply with the rules but find some regulations difficult to interpret and understand.

Bailey has asked that individuals from member institutions, conferences, Association committees and coaches associations who have suggestions for the committee to contact

NCAA Council requests legislation to reduce Association's legal costs

The NCAA Council will consider in its October 14-16 meeting four alternative legislative proposals to reduce the Association's legal costs, especially those incurred in defending against actions filed in local courts.

NCAA President John R. Davis requested a report on the Association's legal costs for consideration at the August meetings of the Executive Committee and Council. In its meeting, the Council requested that the legislative proposals be developed for review and action in October.

Davis noted that the Association spent slightly more than $2 million in legal fees in the 1984-85 fiscal year, with another $1.4 million budgeted for 1985-86.

"The Executive Committee has recommended that the Council seek means of reducing those expenses, differentiating between those suits involving legitimate legal questions at the Federal level and those spurious actions filed in local courts," Davis said.

Acknowledging that a member institution should not be discouraged in its right to raise legitimate legal issues in the Federal courts, the Council nonetheless noted that the Association had spent more than half a million dollars on 12 eligibility cases that were current as of the August meeting, a number of those filed in state courts.

"The present climate seems to encourage institutions to seek court action to set aside NCAA eligibility rulings on the basis of defending the rights of their student-athletes and demonstrating to their supporters that they stand behind their coach and program," Davis said. "The competitive equities of their sister institutions are ignored in such cases."

Members of the Council urged that the membership be informed of the costs involved in defending against such suits. "It is important for the membership to know that the majority is paying legal fees for the actions of a few," Division I Vice-President Arliss L. Roaden said.

The four proposals that will be considered by the Council in October are as follows:

- An amendment to Constitution 4-2 to add a requirement that any member institution that becomes a party to litigation involving the construction, application or validity of NCAA legislation shall be obligated to defend the legislation, notify the Association of such litigation, and consult and cooperate with the Association and its legal counsel, including support for a motion to remove a case from state court to Federal court.

- An amendment to Constitution 4-2 to add a requirement that a

MacKenzie says he's fearful of effects of civil-rights bill

Grove City College President Charles S. MacKenzie testified September 20 before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution about the proposed Civil Rights Restoration Act.

This legislation seeks to reverse the Supreme Court decision in the Grove City College vs. Department of Education case, which held that receipt of Federal financial aid does not trigger institution-wide coverage under Title IX.

Those favoring the Civil Rights Restoration Act want jurisdiction and regulations to affect all colleges, hospitals and other private institutions in all of their programs, whether they receive direct or indirect Federal aid.

MacKenzie said he believes passage would allow the bureaucracy to intrude into the affairs of private institutions that take no government funds and that have not been found to discriminate, and that the bill, as it now stands, "will lead to the destruction of free mediating institutions, vastly expand government control of American life and greatly diminish freedom."

He cited military protection, police and fire protection, and the national highway program as examples of indirect government assistance that benefits everyone. "Organizations that receive no direct Federal financial assistance will be caught in the web of Federal jurisdiction if they indirectly benefit from government aid, and who doesn't?" MacKenzie said.

Regarding the effect of the proposed legislation on Grove City College, MacKenzie said he is concerned about maintaining the institution's historic philosophy of independence and freedom, its ability to continue to offer quality education, and the threat to its Judeo-Christian values.

MacKenzie said he believes the most effective way to fight discrimination is to regulate actively and to censure the programs and institutions that directly receive Federal funds and that discriminate.

He recommended that the Senate accept the amendments to S.431 as proposed by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch (R-Utah).

Sen. Hatch has suggested exemptions for schools that receive no direct assistance, that have not been found to discriminate and that are affiliated with a religious denomination.

Committee hopes that suggestions for changes in rules will be forthcoming from the membership

William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the national office. Hunt is the committee's liaison at the national office.

Proposals from the membership will be reviewed during the committee's next scheduled meeting November 20 in Kansas City, Missouri.

George H. Gangwere, an attorney with the Kansas City law firm of Swanson, Midgley, Gangwere, Clarke & Kitchin, has prepared a transcript of a revised Manual for purposes of meeting the goal of format revision. Members of the committee are reviewing the transcript for discussion in detail in November.

The committee expects that a more comprehensive index to the Manual could be available for the 1986-87 edition, and it hopes to complete its work in time for consideration of proposed changes by the full membership at the 1987 NCAA Convention.

November 1 deadline set for amendments

The deadline for submission of proposed amendments for the 1986 NCAA Convention in New Orleans is Friday, November 1.

Unless sponsored by the NCAA Council, a division steering committee or the NCAA Presidents Commission, any proposed legislation must be sponsored by six active member institutions. Instructions and forms to be used in submitting amendments for consideration were mailed last week.

As a result of legislation adopted at the 1984 Convention, an institution's sponsorship of an amendment must be submitted on behalf of the institution by the chief executive officer or the CEO's designated representative.

If a CEO wishes to designate another individual to indicate the institution's sponsorship of legislation, such designation must be submitted in writing to the NCAA national office.

The procedures for proposing NCAA legislation are set forth in Constitution 7-1 and Bylaw 13-1, pages 5 and 162-163 of the 1985-86 NCAA Manual.

Proposed amendments must be received in the national office by November 1. Any submission received after that date must have been sent by certified or registered mail postmarked no later than October 25.

All properly submitted proposals will be included in the Official Notice of the 80th annual Convention, which will be mailed from the national office no later than November 22.

Questions regarding specific amendments or the legislative procedure in general should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the national office.

Nominations open for Top Five, valor awards

Nominations are open for NCAA Today's Top Five awards for outstanding student-athletes in fall sports and for the Association's Award of Valor.

Nomination forms have been mailed to all member institutions and must be returned by November 1 to be considered for the awards, which will be presented at the honors luncheon during the 1986 Convention in New Orleans.

Nominees for Today's Top Five must be seniors and must have earned a varsity letter in the sport specified. There is no limit on the number of student-athletes an institution may nominate, whether from one sport or from several sports; neither is there a limit on the number of winners from an institution.

Selection of winners will be based 40 percent on athletics ability and achievement; 40 percent on academic achievement, and 20 percent on character, leadership and involvement in campus activities.

The Award of Valor is presented to a coach or administrator currently associated with intercollegiate athletics or to a current or former varsity letter winner at an NCAA member institution.

Nominees, when confronted with a situation involving personal danger, must have averted or minimized potential disaster by courageous action or noteworthy bravery.

Completed forms should be returned to David E. Cawood, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Pollio's goal is to improve VCU graduation rate

By Vic Dorr Jr.

The Richmond News-Leader

Distressed by his team's academic heritage—a heritage he describes as “an embarrassment to the reputation of our school”—Virginia Commonwealth University basketball coach Mike Pollio has decided to challenge his players with a set of tough new classroom guidelines.

The guidelines were introduced in a two-page memorandum circulated within the VCU athletics department. The key sections of Pollio's memorandum dealt with the players' minimum course loads, which in the past have been insufficient to meet VCU's standards for graduation; evaluation forms that will be submitted every three weeks by the players' instructors; and mandatory study-hall attendance. Last year, there was no study-hall policy.

These are the highlights of the program (the wording is Pollio's and was taken directly from the memorandum):

- Progress toward graduation: The NCAA requires a student-athlete to pass 24 hours a year. However, this does not give the athlete his required 126 hours toward graduation (from VCU). I will require any basketball player to pass 30 hours per year. If he has not passed these 30 hours by the end of the spring semester, he will be required to attend summer school.

- Study hall: There will be mandatory study halls. They will be held in the library with an assistant coach in charge. Study hall will be open three nights a week. The following will be required to attend:

All freshmen and anyone below a 2.000—three nights; all transfers and anyone below a 2.250—two nights; anyone between a 2.250 and 2.500—one night.

- Evaluation forms: Every three weeks, the players must present to their instructors an evaluation form that asks for their present grade and attendance record. The form will be returned to me.

Pollio, who admits to merely “paying lip service” to the concept of the student-athlete when he was introduced as J. D. Barnett's successor at the beginning of the summer, said his change of heart was prompted by a wave of adverse publicity—publicity that was not well-received by Edmund F. Ackell, the university's president.

The firestorm reached its peak in June, when USA Today published a nationwide survey of Division I basketball graduation rates. The survey covered a period beginning in 1972 and ending in 1982. VCU's percentage was 36 (18 graduates out of 50 scholarships issued) and ranked seventh in the eight-team Sun Belt Conference. Only South Alabama (21 of 71, 28 percent) was lower.

Circumstances may make it a difficult percentage to improve. Of the eight scholarship seniors who have departed VCU since 1983, only two (Greg Shropshire and Stan Davis) possess degrees. And none of the five seniors who exhausted eligibility last season has graduated.

Sources within the VCU athletics department indicate that one of the five (Rolando Lamb) only needs to complete an internship and that two others (Calvin Duncan and Mike Schlegel) are within one semester of completing their degree requirements. That's good news. The bad news is that Lamb, Duncan and Schlegel all are involved in professional tryouts and are not likely to return to school until their basketball appetites have been satisfied.

“This is a great academic institution, and our basketball program is reflecting poorly on it; and it's simply got to stop,” said Pollio. “Everything you read about academics among our athletes is negative, negative, negative, and I'm tired of it.”

“Now, I'm not suggesting that it's anyone's fault. The people who were here before me weren't bad people... they didn't purposely do anything to keep their kids from graduating. It just seems as though somehow they all kept missing the mark. And I'm including myself in that group.”

“When I stood up at that (introductory) press conference and said, ‘I want my players to graduate,’ I figured, ‘OK. That's that.’ But everything that's come out over the last six months has caused me to do a lot of soul-searching. Finally, I sat down one afternoon and said, ‘Look. What's the problem here? Why are our players not doing what they ought to be doing academically?’”

One of the reasons, he decided, was a distinct lack of reinforcement from the head coach's office.

“I suppose you could say I'm a born-again academician,” he said. “But I'm not Mr. Clean in this area, not by any means. In the past, I've been as guilty as anyone. Keeping them eligible was the big thing. That's what was important to me. But now, I realize that I've got responsibilities beyond eligibility.”

“If I'm their coach and I'm crazy about time—and I am—you can bet those players are going to be on time. If I'm crazy about hair, you can bet they'll shave and keep their hair cut. They'll do whatever we stress, and I damn well think it's time we start to stress academics.”

So, evidently, does VCU's administration. It has equipped Pollio to fight this battle by giving him two weapons his predecessors did not possess: a full-time director of academic counseling (Charles McLeod) and a standing faculty/administration/alumni committee (the VCU intercollegiate athletics council) whose job it is to formulate academic/athletics policies and monitor the results.

“The school has done its job,” said Pollio. “The school has provided us with a system that will permit our athletes to graduate. Maybe all the pieces weren't in place in the past, but they are now. Now, I think, it's up to us. It's up to me. No matter how much the administration does, unless the head coach stands up and says, ‘Gentlemen, this is the way it's going to be: if you don't go to class, you don't play,’ nothing's going to happen.”

“I hope our fans realize that. Fans are a lot like coaches in that respect. They want to win, and they want to keep their favorite players eligible, but they also want everyone to graduate. Well, they can't have it both ways. If we're going to have academic integrity, we have to be willing to tell our players, ‘Do the things necessary to graduate. Period. If you don't, you're not going to play basketball at

Grants should require graduation

Allen Pinkett, student-athlete
University of Notre Dame

The Chronicle of Higher Education

“It should be a mandatory requirement of their scholarships that athletes graduate. Athletes are not going to be able to play football or basketball or whatever for the rest of their lives. They are going to have to have something to fall back on. The justification I had for attending Notre Dame was that I felt I would graduate. That I would play football and graduate made me feel secure with my future, and I would like to see that happen to more athletes.”

Jack Bicknell, head football coach
Boston College

The Washington Post

“We don't have all choirboys. We've got some kids who have to be pushed in the right direction. But we've got to have the kind of kid who wants to play and go to school. Academics have to be first, or least close to first.”

“When I go into a home recruiting, I'm trying to make a good impression. But I'm also looking to see how the kid acts toward his parents. If a high school coach says a kid is a great player but I just can't get him to do this or that, I'll back off. Because if he's shaky in high school, what's he going to be like here? He'll be out of my control. All the freedom, the social life.... We don't have an athletics dorm.”

Art Spander, columnist

The Sporting News

“This much is certain: The trial (for accused cocaine dealer Curtis Strong in Pittsburgh) was agony for the players. Their colleagues in all the sporting leagues of America should have seen them, heard them. The experience, more than any other type of advice, would serve as a warning against the use of cocaine.”

“Did (Jeff) Leonard realize the extent of his crime when in 1979 he joined J.R. Richard and Enos Cabell to snort cocaine for the first time? Did he care? He cares now. Cabell, (Keith) Hernandez and the rest also care.”

“Throughout their lives, these men of special talent have played games, first for fun, then for profit. The games are over now.”

“I entered rehabilitation in 1982,” testified Leonard. One reason: He was worried about the deterioration of his skills.

“What we must worry about is whether those skills were reduced when Leonard was under the influence. Then, the integrity of the game must be questioned as surely as it was with the Black Sox.”

Vincent J. Dooley, athletics director and head football coach

University of Georgia

The Washington Post

“Anybody with any ambition has an ego. But there's a danger in having one. The danger is that it may be excessive. I tried to make sure that it was not a driving force with me when trying to make up my mind (to continue coaching or run for political office), that it was there because it was necessary for it to be there.”

Jay Michael Walsh, chief of pharmacology
National Institute on Drug Abuse

Wall Street Journal

“In the last six to 12 months, drug testing (in industry) has really snowballed. There's been a remarkable change in attitude by industry. Companies used to be reluctant to acknowledge that they had a drug problem. Now they're saying, ‘It's not our company in particular that has a problem, it's society that has a problem.’”

Bosco Djurickovic, head men's basketball coach
North Park College

The Chronicle of Higher Education

that students, whether they are athletes or not, are getting into the institution on their academic merits.

“Let's face it, these bigger schools are committing academic indiscretions.”

Thomas Sowell, columnist

Scraps Howard News Service

“Make no mistake about it. The special interests are going to fight tooth and nail to keep the taxpayers' money flowing into their pockets. And if they succeed, the huge Federal deficit can only be reduced by raising taxes again.”

“No one is fighting harder for Federal subsidies than academics. Their advertising isn't even called advertising, but op-ed columns, written by college presidents, professors and other well-cared-for members of the education establishment. As a public service, they tell us why our money should go to them.”

Outside influences on players concern Big Eight coaches

By Dennis Dodd
The Kansas City Times

University of Kansas coach Mike Gottfried watched the Texas Christian University situation with interest recently. A zealous Horned Frogs alumnus may have bought down a budding Texas Christian program by allegedly paying off players.

Gottfried, who lost seven players for academic reasons, knew, in a different way, the helplessness of losing players. A coach tries to resurrect a program. He tries to recruit the best players. He tries to do it all, and sometimes that still isn't enough.

"One of the biggest problems we had was agents," Gottfried said. "Believe it or not, when you have 130 players, sometimes you don't realize what all is going on.

"My first year here, an agent came in here and actually talked to some of my players before the Oklahoma State game, right before the game. I had no knowledge of it until the season was over, when one of my senior players told me."

Jim Criner

Colorado coach Bill McCartney has another view: A good-enough program will keep itself in check.

"The University of Michigan has the largest alumni body in the world," said McCartney, who was an assistant at Michigan for nine years. "I've seen those guys totally controlled because Bo Schembechler runs that kind of a program.

"I've long believed that it's the responsibility of the athletics department to control those guys. I believe an athletics department can control them. I'm not necessarily in favor of punishing those guys (alumni) as such until they just flagrantly disregard what the university has presented to them."

When asked, all the Big Eight coaches except McCartney supported legislation to control alumni. The Oklahoma legislature, after contracts allegedly signed by Sooner athletes with an agent became evidence in a lawsuit, has passed a law requiring agents to register in the state before practicing.

That move set a legal precedent. The move to control alumni could have a much larger effect. Coaches haven't forgotten those who pay for the new training facilities and training tables. They just want the money to fly in a straight line from the alumni's pocket to the athletics fund. Some alumni just don't know where to stop.

"I feel that agents are essentially in it for themselves," Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones said. "The statement has to be made that collegiate athletics are not a win-at-all-costs proposition. I don't know if that will ever happen or not. Most of the alumni who are involved, their hearts are in the right place."

The problems with agents and alumni have not surfaced in the Big Eight, but the scandals of outside influence into a school's athletics program certainly has become the talk of the country.

"It's hard to believe that alumni would get involved without initially some encouragement from the athletics department," Nebraska coach Tom Osborne said. "The individual would have to know who the individual was they were going to try to give inducements to."

Iowa State coach Jim Criner, however, would not put the blame solely on the boosters.

"I feel that the athletes should be penalized as well as the other individuals who are responsible for giving," Criner said. "That might put some teeth into the rule."

Contract with a tithe that binds

To the Editor:

If Keith Byars wants to be paid a monthly salary while in college, why not? Just have him initial a contract that will include a clause to the effect that he knows that this college education will earn him considerably more money than he would have earned without it—and that he will, therefore, contribute 10 percent of this money back to the university.

Freshman eligibility is main problem

To the Editor:

It is my opinion that our serious problems with intercollegiate athletics began the day we made freshmen eligible for varsity competition in basketball and football.

Let's reinstate our freshman programs and give the student-athlete the opportunity to adjust to collegiate life without the additional pressures of varsity competition.

students merely are the conduits through which other people's money reaches administrators and professors. A large part of that money comes from government, even in so-called private colleges and universities.

"The picture we are presented in the media is that students have to have more government aid because tuition and other college expenses are rising by leaps and bounds. It is as if rising college tuition is one of those things that just happen—like rain.

"But one of the big reasons why tuition has skyrocketed out of sight in the past quarter of a century is precisely because government—state and Federal—has been willing to pour more and more billions into academics to help cover rising tuition costs. Having the government subsidize anything virtually is a guarantee that the price will go up."

"There are some well-meaning people who say these standardized test scores discriminate against minorities, so we should keep them out; but I think as long as you continue that kind of attitude about it, you perpetuate the concept that minorities are always going to remain inferior and won't be able to reach that standardized test score or to reach whatever goals the individual would have in mind."

Association is urged to lend its support to World University Games

By Nicholas Rodis
Brandeis University

Since 1965, when the United States sent the first group of athletes to the World University Summer Games in Budapest, Hungary, the vast majority of athletes, coaches and officials have been from NCAA institutions. This was also true this year, when the United States sent a large delegation to the World University Summer Games in Kobe, Japan, August 24 through September 4.

The NCAA did not play an active role in assisting our country in preparing for these games even though they are recognized by various international sports federations as second only to the Olympic Games in importance as a multisport event.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, has noted on a number of occasions that the competition at the World University Games is of very high caliber and that the IOC holds them in very high esteem. He has attended a number of the games and has given them his full support.

The franchise in our country in the International University Sports Federation is held by the United States Collegiate Sports Council.

The USCSC consists of the National Junior College Athletics Association, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA), and the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (AAHPERD). FISU sponsors the World University Winter and Summer Games and world championships in various sports and conducts seminars that relate to university sports and physical education activities.

The United States National Students Association held the franchise to FISU prior to August 1967, when its general assembly awarded it to the USCSC.

The NCAA was a charter member of the USCSC and remained in that organization until January 1979. Why the NCAA decided to drop out of the USCSC can best be explained by the leadership of the NCAA.

Many people cannot understand why the most powerful collegiate organization in the world does not play an active role in the FISU movement. Competition at FISU events is world-class. The opportunity to be directly involved in these events should be a concern of the NCAA membership. There is no question in the minds of many that contributions made by the NCAA would be a plus for our country. The United States has not been represented by our best athletes in FISU events in recent years. A cooperative effort by all involved in collegiate athletics can do a great deal to rectify this matter.

In recent months, the leadership of the USCSC has discussed the possibility of having the NCAA rejoin the USCSC. This is a matter for the leadership and membership of the NCAA to resolve. Given the facts, there is a strong likelihood that the membership of the NCAA would vote to participate in the deliberations and events of the USCSC and FISU.

The NCAA should make every effort to present these issues to its membership.

VCU."

Pollio said he would understand—and indeed, would be empathetic—if the public greets his announcement with a high degree of skepticism.

"I don't blame them," he said. "I've become cynical myself. You open the newspaper and what do you read? You read about drugs in baseball, and you read about Tulane basketball and you read about Florida football. I can't help but wonder, 'When is it going to stop?' Or worse, 'How much can the fans tolerate? When are they going to reach a breaking point?' No, I don't blame them in the least.

"I suppose what we're trying to do is let people know that we're sincere; that we're really and truly trying. Maybe we're putting a lot of pressure on ourselves and our players. We probably are. But I feel very strongly that there comes a time when you've got to stand up and say, 'That's it. No more."

"I think that's one of our biggest problems in education. We in the colleges blame the high schools for not having the students adequately prepared. The high schools blame the grade schools for not teaching them to read. The grade schools blame the parents for not being sufficiently supportive. Somewhere, somehow, someone's got to say, 'That's enough. We've got to find a way to stop this. We've got to.'"

Liberalized blocking rules opening up offenses

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

At the one-third mark of the college football season, it seems that coaches who predicted that the liberalization of blocking rules would produce greater passing emphasis and more offensive yardage were right on target.

Division I-A games September 28 produced an all-time high in total offensive yardage for a single weekend. The figure was 736.6 rushing-passing yards per game for all 53 games involving at least one I-A team. That broke the 734.4 set October 8, 1982.

For the season to date, the nation's I-A teams are averaging 715.1 yards per game in total offense — well above the record 704.5 set in 1983. At the same time, passing yards have reached 375.7 for all 206 games this season involving at least one I-A team — well above the record 365.5, also set in 1983.

And passing emphasis now has reached 38.5 percent — well above the record high set in 1982, when 38 percent of all rushing-passing plays were passes. In 1983, passing emphasis fell to 37.6; and last season it dropped again, to 37.4 percent.

Efficiency set records in 1983 that is why the passing yardage record was set although pass emphasis was down. The record of 6.79 yards per attempt was set in 1983, along with the record completion percentage of 53.6 and the record of 4.92 yards per total offensive play. Those records are in danger this season, which so far has produced 6.77 yards per attempt (same as last season), 53.7 percent completed and 4.97 yards per total offensive play.

Scoring, TD passes also up

Scoring also is moving at a record pace, with 44.9 points per game so far compared to the record of 44.2 in 1983 (and 44.1 last year). So are touchdown passes, now averaging 2.24 per game compared to the record high of 2.16 in 1982 (and 2.12 in 1984). The scoring increase has come despite a slight decrease in field goals, now at 2.24 per game compared to the record 2.30 a year ago.

Use of hands a factor

Some coaches felt the latest liberalization of blocking rules permitting more use of hands was certain to keep the passing trend going.

"I really believe the passing trend will continue, especially now that offensive linemen can just about tear off a defensive player's uniform," said Mississippi coach Billy Brewer. "He doesn't have to be as good agility-wise as he must be in upper-body strength."

"The new blocking rule makes it most difficult to rush the passer. You're going to see much larger offensive linemen," Arizona State coach John Cooper said. "Passing records will be broken every year as long as you can legally hold."

Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield charged that the rules change "enabling the active use of hands" has led some coaches "to teach unethical tactics to gain an advantage in use of hands. This is being done even to the point where officials cannot realistically call it. This is unwholesome and leads to credibility problems between coaches and officials."

Hatfield thinks that "we must return to the days of having offensive linemen with their palms in, before we can solve the problem."

Washington coach Don James, who is on the NCAA rules committee, said, "Our biggest problem is to solve the blocking problems on offense. Whatever changes are made, if any, it is certainly the obligation of all coaches to instruct our players to use legal techniques. That hasn't been the case these past few years."

New rules safer

All this technical talk may be hard to visualize and understand for those of us who have never played football,

Dalton Hilliard, Louisiana State, is fifth among Division I-A rushing leaders

North Carolina's Kevin Anthony is one of the leaders in Division I-A total offense

Andre Garron, New Hampshire, is the Division I-AA rushing leader with 182.7 yards per game

Heidelberg's Chuck Longnecker ranks second among Division III receiving leaders

but one thing we can understand — the new rules are safer. "The current blocking rules are super," said Maryland coach Bobby Ross. "The head and headgear now no longer are first to strike a defender's blocking surface, making the game safer." Says North Carolina State coach Tom Reed: "The use of hands has helped the passing game and cut down drastically on injuries."

Running may be helped

Many coaches also felt the new rules would help the running game, and they may be right. So far, rushing yards have averaged 339.4 — highest since 1980 — and yards per carry 3.83 — highest since 1979. Last Saturday's 377.3 rushing yards per game was highest since late 1979. Of course, this is far from the record-high 408.9

Mexico's Bill Bell, Temple's Jim Cooper, Indiana's Mark Rogers, Arkansas' Greg Horne, Ohio State's Rich Spangler and Nebraska's Craig Schnitzler. So far, Johnson has kicked seven (in 10 attempts) to lead this group.

So far, the conventional nine as a group has kicked 28 in 47 attempts for 59.6 percent. A year ago, the 10 straight-aheads in I-A made 57.9 percent.

I-AA smashing offensive records

In Division I-AA, the trend to passing emphasis has been up, up, up — and this season is no exception. Emphasis on the pass now is 40.9 percent — well above the record 39.4 of last season (vs. 37.4 in 1983 and 37.0 in 1982). The average I-AA game now is producing 58.4 passes (both

King of the road?

It is not hard to see why Florida State people call coach Bobby Bowden the "King of the Road." His team beat Nebraska at Lincoln, 17-13, earlier this season and now stands 4-0 after rallying to hand Kansas its first loss, 24-20, last Saturday night at Tallahassee. Next for Bowden's team is a trip to Auburn, smarting from a loss at Tennessee, which knocked the Tigers out of No. 1 in the national polls.

It is a chance for Bowden to add to his remarkable road record of 11-2 against big-winning teams over three years. Specifically, his teams are 2-1 at Nebraska, 1-0 at Notre Dame, 2-0 at Ohio State, 4-1 at Louisiana State and 2-0 at Arizona State. The road does not get any easier next season, when his Seminoles play at Nebraska again, plus a trip to Michigan's 100,000-seat stadium (not to mention trips to North Carolina and Florida this season after going to Auburn). (Wayne Hogan, Florida State SID)

Fourth longest streak

Kansas' Mike Norseth, No. 2 nationally in total offense and No. 5 in passing efficiency, had a streak of 175 pass attempts without an interception ended by Florida State. That is the fourth longest streak in Division I-A history. Tulsa's Jerry Rhome holds the record at 198 during the 1964 season. Second is Cal State Fullerton's Damon Allen (brother of Southern California's Marcus Allen, the 1981 Heisman Trophy winner) with 181 last season, and third is Texas A&M's Edd Hargett at 177 in 1968. Allen also owns the fifth longest streak at 147, spanning parts of 1983 and 1984. So, over one remarkable stretch, he had just one interception in 329 attempts.

Turnaround of the year?

Indiana, which started the year with a 16-game losing streak — longest in Division I-A — hosts Northwestern October 5 with a chance to go 4-0. Bill Mallory's Hoosiers defeated Missouri, 36-17, last Saturday after beating Navy and Louisville earlier. Some could see a turnaround coming, since eight losses were by an average of 6.1 points in an 0-11 1984 season, and remembering Mallory had turned around programs at Northern Illinois and Colorado earlier in his career. But how many thought it could be the turnaround of the year? It is early, but that is now a strong possibility.

Mallory finally achieved his 100th career coaching victory in the season opener. On the same day, reports

Indiana SID Kit Klingelhofer, his three sons also had big days. Both Mike and Doug play for Michigan and Doug had a big interception late in his team's 20-12 win over Notre Dame, while Curt, a sophomore starter at guard and linebacker for Bloomington South High School, helped his team beat Connersville, 28-7.

(Another top turn-around candidate is Colorado, now 3-1 [vs. 1-10 a year ago] after handing Arizona its first loss. Coach Bill McCartney looked at his personnel and switched from all-out passing to a wishbone offense. Now his team is seventh in the nation in rushing offense at 304.0 yards per game.)

Playing football at Missouri-Rolla is becoming a family tradition. The current roster is dotted with four sets of brothers — David and Brian Andrzejewski, Ben and Scott Finke, Jim and John Frerking, and Brian and Brad Haug. But the family affair hardly ends there. Seven other squad members had brothers who played sports at Missouri-Rolla: Tony Kaczmarek's brother Joe was the quarterback last year, Mark Paris' brother Brian recently was the team's leading scorer at fullback, Glenn Wilhelm's brother Greg was an all-league defensive tackle, Tim Knollmeyer's brother Joe was an outstanding lineman, Greg Suellentrop's brother Paul was an all-league defensive end, former assistant coach Marty Mastroianni's brother Mark was a strong safety, and Ty Dinsdale's brother Kent played basketball and was all-America in golf.

The Suellentrop family has been the most productive of all. Greg, a freshman defensive end, is the fifth brother from that family and the fourth participating in sports. "We have been fortunate," said coach Charlie Finley. "It is encouraging when a young man comes here after seeing his older brother play." (Gene Green, Missouri-Rolla SID)

Marist has three sets of brothers totaling seven players, four of them starters. They are Chris, Sean and Brian Keenan of Hopewell Junction, New York; Peter and Tom Moloney of Ronkonkoma, New York, and Chris and Tony Runza of Poughkeepsie, New York. Sean Keenan and Peter Moloney are the starting linebackers, Chris Runza the starting wide receiver, and Chris Keenan the starting noseguard. (R. W. Bortas, Marist SID) for the 1975 season, when option offenses were in full swing.

Some coaches feel the option will make a comeback soon.

"I feel that the liberalization of the use of hands by the offense will restore the balance between running and passing," said Harold "Tubby" Raymond, Delaware coach. "Football will not become a form of basketball."

Jim Criner, Iowa State coach, pointed out the new rule was recommended by the American Football Coaches Association rules committee. "Most running teams already were teaching it, and officials were not calling holding on runs."

Passing records likely

Passing and other offensive figures normally climb slightly as the season goes on, but 1984 was an exception. Passing emphasis was 38.2 percent and passing yardage was 368.2 at this stage last season but fell to 37.4 and 362.2 at season's end. Similar declines between now and the end of this season still would leave passing emphasis and yardage comfortably above the all-time highs.

The same might not be true in scoring and total offense, where the margin is less. Scoring was at 45.1 and total offense at 698.5 at this stage in 1984 before declining.

The conventional nine

There are only nine "conventional," or straight-ahead kickers among the 117 in Division I-A who have attempted at least one field goal so far this season. The other 108 are soccer-stylers (perhaps they should now be labeled conventional). As recently as 1975, only 37.6 percent of I-A kickers were soccer-stylers. Now it is 92.3 percent.

The soccer-stylers consistently have been more accurate than the straight-aheads and that is a reason why accuracy and production nationally consistently set records. Accuracy again set a record last season, at 68.2 percent. It now is 65.4 percent.

The conventional nine are Kansas' Jeff Johnson, Georgia's Steve Crumley, Colorado's Larry Eckel, New teams combined) vs. the record 55.7 of last season.

As a result, passing yards (374.2), total-offense yardage (684.4) and scoring (43.9) all are above the all-time highs of 361.9, 666.9 and 43.6 set in 1984.

Efficiency is a minor factor, it seems. Yards per attempt is down slightly at 6.41 vs. the record 6.49 of last season; but completion percentage is up, with 50.6 vs. the record 50.0 of last season. Rushing yards per carry is up to 3.68 (from 3.56 in 1984), pushing total offensive yards per play to 4.80 compared to the record 4.72 in 1984.

Field goals, up to 1.67 per game vs. the record 1.60 set last season, also are a factor in the scoring increase. Touchdown passes virtually are the same, at 2.40 per game compared to the record 2.43 of last season.

As in I-A, the biggest single factor is increased emphasis on the pass.

Robinson ties Bryant's 323

Grambling State's Eddie Robinson got career coaching victory No. 323 to tie the collegiate record by Alabama's Paul "Bear" Bryant when Grambling scored an impressive 23-6 victory over Division I-A Oregon State September 28 in Shreveport.

This is Robinson's 43rd season and his teams have won 323, lost 106 and tied 15 for a winning percentage of .744. He is 66 and will have three more seasons after this one before he will retire at 70 under Louisiana law. He will be 70 February 13, 1989.

Bryant died early in 1983 at the age of 69, shortly after his retirement. His team had given him No. 323 by defeating Illinois, 21-15, in the Liberty Bowl at Memphis. In 38 seasons at Maryland, Kentucky, Texas A&M and then the last 25 at his alma mater, Bryant was 323-85-17 for a percentage of .780 — 16th highest in history for coaches with at least 10 head-coaching seasons in Division I-A. His Alabama teams were voted national champions six times between 1961 and 1979. (See September 23 Notes for details and quotes on Robinson's career.)

I-A attendance still lags, but I-AA up

Division I-A per-game attendance lost more ground last Saturday and now lags 2.14 percent behind the pace a year ago. The drop so far is 945 per game to 43,221. In Division I-AA, however, the per-game figure went up some more and now is 871 per game, or 7.84 percent, ahead at 11,892 per game. The chart:

Legislative Assistance

1985 Column No. 34

Permissible practice expenses

As set forth in NCAA Constitution 3-1-(h)-(1), an institution may provide a student-athlete actual and necessary expenses on intercollegiate athletics trips or reasonable trips (within the state in which the member institution is situated or a distance not to exceed 100 miles if outside that state) to practice sites other than those of the institution.

As set forth in Case No. 90 (page 281, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), it would not be permissible for a member institution to transport its team to a practice site outside the state in which the member institution is situated or in excess of 100 miles from the member institution if outside that state if no competition is scheduled at that practice site. For example, traditional "winter or spring trips" to warm-weather locations must involve actual competition, as listed on the institution's official schedule, in order for the institution to provide any expenses for the trip.

Permissible team entertainment

As set forth in Case No. 68 (page 275, 1985-86 NCAA Manual), an institution's athletics team playing an away-from-home contest may be provided actual costs for reasonable entertainment that takes place in the general area where the team plays or practices during the road trip. The member institution may not transport the team outside the area for this purpose. Furthermore, it is not possible for the team to stay over after the event for entertainment purposes in excess of 48 hours.

For example, any practice on an extended road trip should take place either at the competition site or on a direct route between two consecutive competition sites. It is not permissible for an institution to schedule practice sessions at other locations in order to provide entertainment opportunities for team members.

Cash to hosts

As set forth in Bylaw 1-8-(j)-(2), an institution may provide a student host with a maximum of $20 (Division I) or $10 (Divisions II and III) for each day of a prospective student-athlete's campus visit to cover the actual and necessary costs of entertaining the prospect. Institutions are reminded that the money provided to student hosts is to be used to cover actual entertainment costs only (e.g., food, movie, etc.) and may not be used for the purchase of souvenirs or other memorabilia of the campus visit.

Transportation of prospective student-athletes

Under the provisions of Bylaw 1-8-(j)-(3), a member institution may not arrange for or permit excessive entertainment of any prospective student-athlete on the campus or elsewhere. Accordingly, the provision of a chauffeur-driven limousine for transportation of prospective student-athletes on expense-paid visits would be deemed excessive entertainment and would not be permissible under this legislation or Bylaw 1-1-(b), inasmuch as such transportation would constitute an improper recruiting inducement.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Water polo guaranteed funds for transportation

Cornell became the 54th institution to declare water polo as a varsity sport last week, which meets the required number of teams the sport needs to receive championship transportation expenses.

The NCAA News announced in its September 23 issue that United States Water Polo, Inc. (USWP), the governing body for water polo in the United States, would provide grants totaling $6,000 over three years to schools that wish to start intercollegiate water polo programs. Cornell accepted the USWP's offer last week.

"We've been aware for some time that water polo was in jeopardy of losing its national championship," said Al Gantert, associate director of athletics at Cornell. "We decided to accept the grant because of the alleviation of some of the financial burden along with helping out the other water polo teams in the country." Water polo has been a club sport at Cornell since 1965.

The USWP voted September 15 to provide grants of $3,000 the first year, $2,000 the second year and $1,000 the third year to interested schools.

Grants are still available, and although the NCAA deadline for declaration of fall sports was September 15, schools taking advantage of the USWP grants can appeal to the NCAA Administrative Committee for an exception. If the Administrative Committee, acting for the Executive Committee, grants the appeal, then the institution may be restored to eligibility for meets and tournaments. [See Executive Regulation 1-5-(c) in the NCAA Manual.]

To apply for a grant, school representatives should contact California water polo coach Pete Cutino, a member of U.S. Water Polo's board of governors, at 415/642-2248 (office) or 415/642-6616 (pool).

Recommendation to limit coaches' salaries draws opposition

University of Georgia athletics director Vincent J. Dooley said he is opposed to a recommendation that the NCAA restrict coaches' salaries, tying them to those of college administrators.

Dooley said each institution should have the power to set salaries without outside interference, the Associated Press reported.

In a statement released September 27, Dooley said he was asked in his capacity as president of the American Football Coaches Association to respond to proposals made by Jack V. Doland, president of McNeese State University in Lake Charles, Louisiana, a member of the NCAA Council.

Doland, a former football coach, has recommended that coaches' salaries be brought in line with those of deans and presidents, that television highlight shows become the property of each institution, that complimentary tickets be limited to the coach's immediate family, and that endorsements of products be cleared by the institutions.

"The present benefits and 'perks' that a small percentage of college coaches are receiving undermine the entire concept of the amateur spirit of college athletics," Doland said.

Dooley, who said his views do not

College swimming coaches name selections for academic all-America

California swimmers Bengt Baron and Thomas Lejdstrom, members of two winning relay teams at the 1985 Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships, head the Division I men's academic all-America team selected by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America (CSCAA).

The CSCAA selects men's and women's squads in each of the three NCAA divisions and in the NAIA. To qualify for academic all-America honors, swimmers must qualify for the NCAA or National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championships, have a cumulative grade-point average of 3.500 (4.000 scale) and have completed the equivalent of 24 semester hours at their institutions.

Baron and Lejdstrom swam on California's winning 400-yard freestyle and 800-yard freestyle relays. They were among 32 men honored.

Deborah Risen of Texas, NCAA women's champion in the 100-yard backstroke, and her teammate on the winning 200-yard medley relay and 200-yard freestyle relay teams, Ann Drolsom, top the 47 women's honorees.

Following are the 1985 CSCAA teams:

Research on knee brace gets funds

Although a number of ongoing research projects were reviewed, the NCAA Research Committee approved only one new project at its meeting earlier this summer in Kansas City.

An amount of $1,221 was approved for Carol Teitz, University of Washington, to collect data on preventive knee braces. The committee noted some information already had been collected on this subject and that a continuation would be helpful to the Association.

The committee recommended that the project determine whether injuries occurred during practice or contests and requested that the research be expanded to include Divisions II and III institutions.

In addition to this research project, the committee suggested that additional information on knee braces be gathered through the NCAA's injury surveillance system.

In addition, the Research Committee approved $4,100 for repairs of the Hybrid III Human Simulator used by the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment. The proposal was made by Voigt R. Hodgson, Wayne State University (Michigan). The funding will be made directly to NOCSAE so that group can monitor research done on the equipment.

The Research Committee also reviewed three ongoing research projects and approved additional financial support for each of the following:

• An additional $25,000 was approved for 1985-86 for the Association's agreement with Mitchell H. Raiborn, Bradley University, to update Revenues and Expenses of Intercollegiate Athletics Programs. Any changes or modifications in the research design will be reported to the Research Committee.

• The National Center for Catastrophic Sports Injury Research received an additional grant of $9,900 on the recommendation of the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

• An additional $5,000 was granted to NOCSAE on the recommendation of the competitive safeguards committee.

Wilford S. Bailey, secretary-treasurer of the NCAA and chair of the Research Committee, said the work of the Special Committee on Academic Research will be assigned to the Research Committee. He said two additional positions on the committee have been proposed to handle the increased duties.

Bailey also noted that other NCAA committees should be more knowledgeable about the Research Committee's functions and recommend areas of research that the committee could pursue.

Other members of the Research Committee are Robert C. Deming, Ithaca College; Armin P. Langholz, Capital University; Sharon A. Plowman, Northern Illinois University; George W. Schubert, University of North Dakota; John W. Stoepler, University of Toledo, and Irene Shea, California State University, Sacramento.

Swim standards corrected

Due to an error in recording data, the 10th-place time instead of the 12th-place time was used to determine the Division II women's relays' standards. These standards have been printed incorrectly in The NCAA News, as well as in the 1986 NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming and Diving Rules.

The following standards are correct:

Yards	Short Course Meters	Long Course Meters
200 Medley Relay	1:52.18	2:07.30
400 Medley Relay	4:04.14	4:36.56
200 Freestyle Relay	1:39.49	1:53.22
400 Freestyle Relay	3:36.68	4:06.08
800 Freestyle Relay	7:54.37	8:57.69

In addition, the degree of difficulty for Division II women's one-meter diving was calculated incorrectly. It should be 11.0.

The corrected standards will be printed in the National Collegiate Championships handbook for swimming, which will be published in December.

difficult to establish criteria to judge an administrator's performance compared to that of a coach. And he said a school may not want to pay a coach as much as a vice-president but would be forced to do so for competitive reasons.

Attempts to limit a coach's outside income from such sources as speaking, television appearances and research "would be arbitrary at best and punitive at worst," Dooley said.

Dooley said he agreed that endorsements should have to be cleared to make sure they are in good taste and follow NCAA rules. He said coaches should receive a limited number of complimentary tickets but be free to give them to whomever they wish.

Dooley said he was "in absolute agreement" with Doland that booster or alumni contributions to coaches' salaries must be funneled through the institutions.

He said he also sided with Doland's recommendation that cars, boats, housing and other such items provided to coaches should be approved by the chief executive officer and the controlling athletics board of a school.

"I do not agree that they must be published," he said.

For example, he said, it would be playing together on the same squad in the same season? Nicholls State does, with senior tight end Bobby Connell and brothers Tim and Mike, both linebackers. Tim is a junior and Mike is a freshman. (Martin Harmon, Nicholls State SID)

A 4,000 combination

Central (Ohio) may have the only quarterback-receiver combination in the country in which both players student-athletes in the truest sense maintained perfect 4,000 grade-point averages over the last school year. They are quarterback Paul Krzysiak, a junior college all-America last year, and wide receiver Alvin Street, the team's top receiver last year with 84 catches, eight for touchdowns. [Gregory Payne, Central (Ohio) SID]

All-deaf rushing backfield

Hofstra played a rare all-deaf rushing backfield when both Andy Metz and Steve McNeese played for the Dutchmen in the fourth quarter against Iona. Metz, a sophomore from Valparaiso who attended the Indiana School for the Deaf, rushed seven times for 30 yards. McNeese, a freshman from Batesville, Mississippi, who attended the Mississippi School for the Deaf, rushed five times for 46 yards and a touchdown in Hofstra's 59-0 victory. (Christopher Humm, Hofstra SID)

Buda also belongs

In the September 16 football notes item about the notable coaches and athletics directors of the Pepper Rodgers staff in 1968 that led Kansas to the 1969 Orange Bowl, Sandy Buda of Nebraska-Omaha was left out. His teams have won 56, lost 24, with 26 wins in the last 31 games, 11-2 last season and now nationally ranked in Division II. (Gary Anderson, Nebraska-Omaha SID)

(And with all that brainpower, gentlemen—Terry Donahue, John Cooper, Dick Tomey, Dave McClain and others—will one of you explain how Kansas had 12 men on the field at the finish, giving Penn State a second-chance two-pointer for a 15-14 victory?)

Can you top these?

When was the last time in college football an offensive center caught a forward pass? It happened against UTEP when New Mexico State senior center Brett Cooper caught a four-yard pass from quarterback Jim Miller that had been deflected by a Miner lineman. After much discussion by the officials, it was ruled a completed pass. (Peter Kynion, New Mexico State SID)

Has any Division I-AA (or I-A) team ever had the nation's leading rusher and the nation's leading passer the same week? Nicholls State did, the week of September 16, when senior Oscar Smith led in rushing (176 yards per game) and junior quarterback Doug Hudson led in passing efficiency (175 points). (Martin Harmon, Nicholls State SID)

Heidelberg may have the tallest manager in college sports. He is 7-foot-2 Troy Hitchcock, a center on the basketball team and manager in football. (Jim Collins, Heidelberg assistant SID)

Talk about turnarounds. Can any team top this? Case Western Reserve had a 22-game losing streak when coach Jim Chapman arrived. He lost his first game in 1982 and has gone 26-3 since then. (Dale Meggas, Case Western Reserve SID)

Backups can be winners

Here is a twist. Rhode Island senior free safety Mike Cassidy, a 5-11, 190-pounder from Valley Stream, New York, was a backup quarterback and punter for three years until regular punter Jim Donnelly broke his leg against Brown last year. Cassidy stepped in and had an 88-yard punt against Montana State in the NCAA semifinal play-off, equalling the national record and setting marks for the Yankee Conference and New England. He also was 3-for-6 for 40 yards and a 17-yard touchdown subbing for Tom Ehrhardt in 1984.

Now Donnelly is healed, so Cassidy switched to defensive back in the spring, thinking he might get more playing time as a senior. As it turned out, all four secondary positions were taken by the end of spring, so he asked to redshirt this 1985 season.

As fate would have it, Tony Hill, outstanding free safety, broke his arm on the fourth play of the season. Cassidy returned and in his first start as a defensive back intercepted two passes and made three tackles in a 46-0 victory over Howard to earn Yankee Conference defensive player of the week honors. (Jim Norman, Rhode Island SID)

Biggest players in football (September 9 notes)? Rob Schabert, Tennessee Tech SID, reports 6-5 freshman Lance Thompson was 316 on high school graduation day in Atlanta but has since slimmed down to 298. And LeCounte Conaway, SID for the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, has three candidates: Hampton's Wendell Thorne at 6-6 and 305, Virginia State's Darryl Brown at 6-5 and 310, and the leader to date, Virginia Union's Paul Jones at a startling 6-5 and 345 pounds.

member institution must exhaust internal Association remedies prior to initiating litigation against the NCAA or opposing the NCAA in litigation initiated by other parties.

• An amendment to authorize the Council to assess all or a portion of the Association's legal costs when the NCAA is successful in defending against litigation brought by or on behalf of a student-athlete at the institution or by or on behalf of the institution itself. The assessment would be against the institution.

• A clarification of Section 10 of the enforcement procedure to permit the restitution provisions to be applied if the lawsuit is declared to be moot or if a restraining order or injunction otherwise ceases to be enforceable.

If the Council decides to sponsor any of those alternatives, the legislation would be submitted for vote at the January 1986 NCAA Convention.

NOTABLES

Philadelphia Textile's ED MOSTAK named winner of the first Eastern College Athletic Conference Award of Valor. Mostak, a basketball player, overcame two bouts of cancer, chemotherapy and major surgery during which one lung, his kidney and spleen were removed. Playing with just 65 percent of lung capacity, Mostak averaged 17 minutes, 4.3 points and three rebounds a game for the 24-7 Rams. During his illness, he remained in school, compiling a 3,000 cumulative grade-point average in accounting. He graduated with a bachelor of science degree last May. Other ECAC award winners included LEOTUS MORRISON, winner of the Katherine Ley Award; ROCCO MONTANO, winner of the George L. Shiebler Award for long-term officiating excellence, and ROBERT N. BROWN (West Virginia), the late RICHARD W. COLMAN (Middlebury), DANIEL LYNCH (St. Francis) and MOX WEBER (Hamilton), winners of the James Lynch Award for outstanding success and contributions as athletics administrators.

DEATHS

DEAN D. NESMITH, Kansas athletics trainer for 46 years, died September 25. He was 71. Nesmith was a three-year letterman as a tackle at Kansas and played one year of professional football before earning his degree in 1937. He joined the Kansas staff as trainer the following year and continued until retiring in 1983, giving him the longest tenure of any trainer in the Big Eight Conference. Among Kansas standout athletes during that period were Wilt Chamberlain, Gale Sayers, Glenn Cunningham, Clyde Lovellette, Al Oerter, Jim Ryun, John Hadl, Jo Jo White and Nolan Cromwell. HERB TRAWICK, one-time football great, recently died at the age of 64. A Kentucky graduate in science and physical education, Trawick was the first Black player in the Canadian Football League, where he was an outstanding offensive and defensive lineman. HOWARD N. HARTMAN, Colgate assistant professor emeritus of physical education, Trawick was the first Black player in the Canadian Football League, where he was an outstanding offensive and defensive lineman. HOWARD N. ## Schools plan football contest to boost scholarship funding

The Coleman A. Young Foundation of Detroit has announced that Tennessee State University and Southern University, Baton Rouge, will meet in football in Detroit November 2 to help fund college scholarships for black students. Officials at the University of Missouri, Kansas City, have announced plans to join the NCAA as a Division I member for the 1986-87 season. The University of Texas, San Antonio, athletics program will enter the Trans America Athletic Conference in 1986-87. The Roadrunners will compete in conference championships in basketball, golf, tennis, cross country, rifle and soccer. Texas-San Antonio will add soccer to its athletics program in 1986-87. The school will become the 10th member of the conference.

The Amateur Basketball Association of the United States of America is accepting bids from any college, junior college or high school interested in hosting the 1986 regional U.S. Olympic Festival trials for women's basketball. Trial dates are April 25-27, and the deadline for bids is December 1. For information, contact Lynn Norenberg, ABAUSA, 1750 East Boulder Street, Colorado Springs, Colorado 80909, or telephone 303/632-7687.

The University of Georgia will discontinue its men's gymnastics program after the 1985-86 season. That action will leave the school with nine sports each for men and women. The women's gymnastics program will continue.

Some follower of Syracuse University could become a lot richer if the school's football team does its part in a promotion sponsored by a radio station and a bank. If the Orangemen score a 95-yard or longer touchdown on either a pass or a run this season, a person who will be selected at random will have 30 minutes to call the radio station and claim a $100,000 prize. Every time Syracuse is on or behind its five-yard line, a name will be drawn from postcards sent to the station. The longest run in school history was 95 yards by George Davis in a 1949 game against Fordham University. Three-time all-America softball pitcher Kathy Slaten of California State University, Northridge, will return for another season, reversing a decision she made last season. Slaten has struck out 1,322 batters in 1,032 innings the past three seasons. Her record is 119-29.

The University of Virginia will implement a mandatory drug-education program for all student-athletes this fall that ultimately will include testing for drugs. The three-phase program includes education, eventual testing and rehabilitation, if necessary. The Great Lakes Athletics Trainers Association will host its 1986 winter meeting and sports-medicine symposium at the Amway Grand Plaza Hotel in Grand Rapids, Michigan, March 19-22. For further information, contact Lee Kermode, 2317 Gleneagle Drive, Kalamazoo, Michigan 49001.

The Washington Times will be the official sponsor of the George Washington University women's basketball tournament November 22-23. The tournament is in its seventh year and will feature the host team, Howard University, George Mason University and Georgetown University.

In cross country, the race doesn't always go to the swiftest

By Timothy J. Lilley
The NCAA News Staff

Think about cross country—the sport.

Runners huddle up at the starting line of a course that usually doubles as somebody's favorite golf course. The starter fires his gun, and a mass of humanity moves out across fairways and through the rough, running somewhere between a few and several miles before finishing where they started.

Not much to it, right? Get in shape, develop the discipline of a distance runner, and you too can be a cross-country star, your team a perennial contender for some championship.

Wrong.

Skill and strategy run hand in hand in this loneliest of fall sports. You have to know the course, plan your attack and expend energy in precise amounts at exact moments.

To hear one guy tell it, you get the impression cross country is not so much running as it is a test of logic; a thinking man's sport devoted to solving the problem of covering the distance between two points (the start and finish lines, even though they physically may be one) in as short a time as possible.

"Every cross country coach tries to solidify his top seven runners and work with them to reach the point where they are running as close together as possible," said Norman Levine, track and cross country coach at Brandeis, a perennial power in Division III.

"And you run different races in different ways. As a coach, I have to look at the courses we will run and develop an attack for each one of them. You don't want guys going out like rabbits on a course that is very hilly near the finish. At the same time, going out too slow on a fairly flat course can be just as troublesome."

So, just like the football coach who analyzes offenses, defenses and opponents' tendencies and a basketball coach who consumes opponents' stat sheets, looking for the worst foul shooters, the guys you want on the line late in the game when you're up a point, a cross country coach has to worry about more than his runners' feet. He has to do some homework.

"The key is developing your team to the point where you are packing your runners in up front," Levine explained. A championship team will have less than 50 seconds' difference, in terms of finish, between the No. 1 runner and the No. 7 runner. "In 1983, for example, when we won the men's team championship, only 15 seconds separated our top finisher and our No. 5 finisher. I was very happy with that, as you can imagine."

Levine said that most teams winning championships these days will have a few runners in the top 10 overall and everyone in the top 30. "Coaches die...it's amazing what a fifth man will do to your team if he's not real good."

So, in addition to working on a consistent level of talent among the top seven runners, Levine said that coaches worry about quality depth in this sport as much as in any other.

"It pays to have a deep team, a team with quality depth," he explained. "We have to run different races, different courses, in different ways; and having quality depth that can be utilized in different situations, and particularly in case of an injury, is very helpful."

Also helpful is the ability to let individual styles work in a team's favor. "If possible, you don't like to change a runner's style. Some guys may not start well but have a tremendous kick. Other guys are consistent: not real quick at the start or finish but fast enough overall to be a top finisher," Levine said.

"If it is possible, coaches like to utilize those individual styles within the team goal of running together near the top. Sometimes, you may have seven guys who never really see each other until the closing stages of a race; but then, when it counts, they finish together and claim a team victory."

Cross country gives coaches more to think about than the way their student-athletes run. There is terrain to consider, just like a coach weighs the differences between natural and artificial playing surfaces.

There are styles to blend, as is the case when a hot-shot point guard must become part of a team loaded with big men, oriented toward a powerful inside game.

And there is team balance to attain, like five double-digit scorers, three 1,000-yard rushers, or four .300 hitters.

The next time you drive across campus on some errand and notice a group of runners trotting off to practice, think about what they are thinking about; running is probably way down the list.

Memphis State's Kirk testifies before Federal grand jury

Memphis State basketball coach Dana Kirk testified before a Federal grand jury investigating sports gambling September 26 and said afterward that his income taxes are under review, the Associated Press reported.

Kirk refused to discuss his testimony, but his lawyers issued a written statement by the coach.

"My financial affairs and tax liabilities are being reviewed," Kirk said in the statement. "I am comfortable that there will be no finding of illegal conduct."

The grand jury began its investigation in March after agents from the FBI and Internal Revenue Service raided about a dozen suspected bookies in the Memphis area.

The Commercial Appeal, the major newspaper in Memphis, has quoted three other grand-jury witnesses as saying they were questioned, among other things, about Memphis State's surprising late-season losses last year to the University of Detroit and Villanova.

Kirk did not refer to those games in his statement but said his team "did the best it could to win every game it played."

The coach, who led his team to the NCAA Final Four earlier this year, said in his statement that he is not worried about the investigation into his personal finances.

"My earnings and income are from proper sources. Nothing will be discovered that I am ashamed of," he said.

Frank Glankler, one of Kirk's two gustinius Jaspers.

Jaspers died last October 19 of congenital heart disease, but traces of the antiinflammatory drug phenylbutazone were found when an autopsy was performed, and the drug was traced to Tennessee.

As a result of the South Carolina investigation, Clemson weight coach

Maryland, had a four-year athletics scholarship to play for Maryland, a Division I-A program. But he left after his sophomore year after deciding to switch his major to hotel administration.

He applied at Cornell, a member of the Division I-AA Ivy League, last fall and was admitted in January.

Then he decided to play football, running afoul of a longstanding NCAA ruling that requires players who transfer to wait a full calendar year before playing intercollegiate sports at the new institution and of an Ivy League rule that limits careers to four consecutive years.

After McHale, with Cornell's support, unsuccessfully asked for a waiver last summer, the player sued the NCAA and Cornell.

McCurn enjoined both from interfering with McHale's right to play and said he would consider the case again October 3. A law clerk said the judge could decide for or against McHale or issue a preliminary injunction.

Such an injunction gives a judge time to study a case for a permanent ruling. In McHale's case, it would allow the junior to play the 1985 season while the case worked its way through the court.

Newsworthy

lawyers, also refused to answer questions about his client's testimony.

The grand jury has heard from more than 80 witnesses during its investigation, including two former athletics directors from Memphis State.

Kirk is the first witness, however, who currently is employed by the university's athletics department.

Charges dropped

Prosecutors were given until September 30 to appeal a judge's dismissal of eight charges against former Vanderbilt strength coach E. J. "Doc" Kreis alleging he illegally obtained and distributed steroids to athletes.

Circuit Judge Bobby Capers ruled September 25 that eight of the misdemeanor counts against Kreis could not be prosecuted because the state's one-year statute of limitations had run out.

Capers let stand a conspiracy charge, which names Kreis, former Franklin pharmacist Melvin "Woody" Wilson and Thomas Patterson, a former employee of Wilson's.

The judge gave District Attorney General Tom Shriver until September 30 to file an appeal and set a tentative November 19 trial date for Kreis.

Shriver said he has not yet decided whether to challenge the ruling and may try to reinstate Kreis on the dismissed counts.

"We can go back to the grand jury and correct" a technical defect in the wording of the original charges to include an explanation of why the statute of limitations should be overlooked, he said.

In his ruling, Capers said the conspiracy charge "was a proper indictment," but said the other counts naming Kreis "appear to be barred by the statute of limitations."

Kreis' attorney, Roger May, said the statute of limitations also should have forced dismissal of the final charge, but noted that he and his client were happy with the outcome of the hearing.

Kreis, a Clemson football player from 1973 to 1975; and Patterson were named in a 97-count indictment April 19 handed up by the Davidson County Jury that alleged nearly 100,000 doses of steroids were sold to athletes.

Wilson was named in 91 counts and Patterson in six.

More than 30 current and former Vanderbilt athletes were named by the grand jury as unindicted coconspirators.

The indictments were returned after a three-month probe by the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation in conjunction with an investigation by South Carolina authorities into the death of Clemson University track athlete Au-

Sam Colson, who was best man at Kreis' wedding, and the school's track coach, Stanley S. Narewski, resigned their positions in November.

Jayhawks back

Two University of Kansas football players who filed a lawsuit earlier this month against the school after being ruled academically ineligible were certified to play when the Jayhawks met Florida State September 28.

Senior tailback Lynn Williams, junior linebacker Dane Griffin and senior offensive guard Doug Certain were declared academically ineligible under NCAA rules to play this year prior to the start of the football season. Williams and Griffin were certified to play against Florida State. Certain dropped his portion of the suit and left the team, according to the Associated Press.

The players were declared ineligible under the NCAA's satisfactory-progress rule, which requires student-athletes to complete 24 hours a year toward their degree, beginning with their junior year.

The three players filed suit in Johnson County District Court September 19, charging that the university improperly advised them about their academic status and deprived them of their due process when they appealed their cases in early September.

The suit said the players passed the 24 hours with a C average as required under NCAA rules, but that KU advisers enrolled them in classes that were not acceptable under the school's interpretation of the rule.

It is left to the individual university to decide whether hours completed toward a degree are acceptable under the NCAA rules.

A Johnson County district judge issued a restraining order September 19 allowing the three to practice. The following day another Johnson County district judge modified the order, giving the university permission to prohibit the three from participating in varsity games.

Order issued

U.S. District Judge Neal McCurn September 26 issued a one-week restraining order blocking NCAA regulations and allowing transfer student Tom McHale to play football for Cornell University September 28.

The Big Red met traditional rival Colgate in Ithaca.

In effect, the decision extends a temporary restraining order issued September 30 by State Supreme Court Justice Charles B. Smartwood of Ithaca.

Under Smartwood's order, McHale played in a 10-6 loss to Pennsylvania.

The case was moved to Federal court because it involved the NCAA.

McHale, a 6-foot 4, 260-pound defensive end from Gaithersburg, the October 25 deadline.

Final selections will be made by the NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship Committee in December.

Scholarships will be awarded to 90 student-athletes during the 1985-86 academic year. In addition to the 25 football awards, 20 will be presented to basketball players (10 men and 10 women) and 45 in sports other than football or basketball (25 men, 20 women) in which the NCAA conducts championship competition.

Thomas E. Yeager

Tom Yeager appointed commissioner

Thomas E. Yeager, NCAA director of legislative services since September 1984, has been named the first commissioner of the Colonial Athletic Association.

Yeager, 35, was elected to the new position by athletics directors from the eight conference-member institutions, which include American University; East Carolina University; George Mason University; James Madison University; the University of North Carolina, Wilmington; the University of Richmond; and the College of William and Mary.

The eight institutions formerly comprised the ECAC South and will compete in seven men's and five women's sports.

Yeager joined the NCAA in 1976 as an investigator in the enforcement department, moving to legislative services in 1981. Before joining the NCAA, he was an assistant athletics director at Springfield College, his alma mater.

Postgraduate scholarship deadline October 25

Nominations for NCAA postgraduate scholarships in football must be mailed to district selection committee chairs by October 25.

A total of 25 awards, each worth $2,000, will be awarded to student-athletes in three categories: Division I, six; Divisions II and III, six; and at large 13.

The following guidelines should be followed in nominating candidates:

- Nominate no more than two candidates.

- Use the forms recently mailed from the national office, providing complete information.

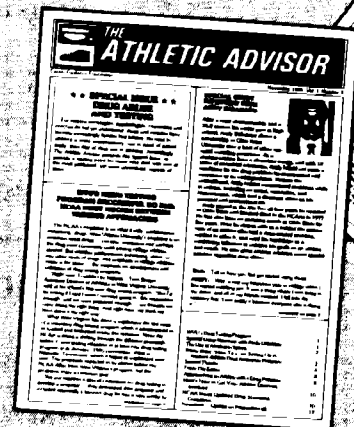

- Include a copy of the student-athlete's transcript with each application. Also include any entrance or placement-examination scores and a Graduate Record Examination score, if available.

- Mail the completed forms and other information to the appropriate district selection committee chair by
