Career-counseling panels establish plan to improve their effectiveness

A plan to improve the effectiveness of career-counseling panels at NCAA member institutions was formulated by representatives of those panels last month at a meeting in Chicago.

This was the first meeting of panel representatives, whose primary responsibility is to assist student-athletes during the transition from collegiate to professional athletics careers.

Panel members hope to enhance their efforts through an internal education process, which includes acquainting coaches, athletics personnel and student-athletes with the actual problems with agents and the choices that are available to the student-athletes regarding professional careers.

Panel members requested that a network be established to exchange information among panels, with the national office serving as intermediary. Through such an exchange, the activities and policies of particular panels could be made available to others on a regular basis to prevent each panel from, as one speaker at the Chicago meeting put it, "reinventing the wheel."

L. Douglas Johnson, director of legislative services, is the national office liaison, replacing John H. Leavens, who has been named director of compliance.

Panel members agreed that coaches will play a vital role in the success of their institutions' panels. It was stated that institutions need the assistance of their coaches and administrators in introducing panel members and identifying their services to student-athletes.

Representatives at the Chicago meeting generally agreed that as additional panels are established, semi-annual meetings should be held. Another meeting has been planned tentatively for the spring of 1986. It is estimated that about 45 to 50 counseling panels are in place at member institutions, although there were only 27 panels represented at Chicago.

The national office liaison will request through a mailing that Division I chief executive officers and directors of athletics specify whether their in-

Nominations to sports committees are due December 4

Nominations for vacancies on NCAA sports committees to be filled by the 1986 Convention in New Orleans must be forwarded to each member's Men's and Women's Committees on Committees district representative no later than December 4.

In addition, a copy of the nominations for men's committees should be sent to Howard Elwell, Athletics Director, Gannon University, Erie, Pennsylvania 16541, chair of the Men's Committee on Committees. Copies of nominations for women's committees should be sent to Mary Roby, Associate Director of Athletics, University of Arizona, Tucson, Arizona 85721. She is chair of the Women's Committee on Committees.

So that a complete summary of nominations can be prepared, a copy of each nomination form should be sent to Fannie B. Vaughan, Administrative Assistant, NCAA, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

When submitting nominations, the nominee's name, title, institution, division, district and conference should be provided, along with a brief paragraph describing the candidate's qualifications. Nomination letters should be provided for each nominee and should indicate whether the nominee would serve if elected. Unless an unexpired term on a committee is involved, the positions to be filled by the Convention are three-year terms.

Particular attention should be given to eligibility requirements set forth in Bylaws 12-1, 12-4 and 12-5 in the NCAA Manual.

The Men's and Women's Committees on Committees are responsible for soliciting nominations from the membership of individuals who are interested in serving. They then make their recommendations to the annual Convention.

Other members of the Men's Committee on Committees and their districts are Robert E. Hartwell, Babson College (1); Kenneth A. Free, Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (3);

James W. Lessig, Mid-American Athletic Conference (4); Noel W. Olson, North Central Conference (5); Michael T. Johnson, University of Houston (6); C. Arnold Ferrin Jr., University of Utah (7), and Norman B. Jones, Utah State University (8). At-large members are Allen F. Ackerman, Elmhurst College; Dennis J. Keihn, California State University, Los Angeles; Roy A. Kramer, Vanderbilt University, and John L. Spring, Oswego State University College.

Other members of the Women's Committee on Committees are Mary Lou Thimas, Bridgewater College (Virginia) (1); LaVerne Sweat, Hampton University (2); Marjorie T. Berkley, Hollins College (3); Karen L. Womack, Miami University (Ohio) (4); Rosemary Fri, University of Northern Colorado (5); Jeannine McHaney, Texas Tech University (6); Margie H. McDonald, High Country Athletic Conference (7), and Kay Don, California State University, Long Beach

Commission, Council agree on amendment

The NCAA Presidents Commission and the NCAA Council will cosponsor a proposed modification of NCAA Bylaw 5-1-(j) at the 1986 NCAA Convention, and the proposal will be one of 110 facing the delegates to the January 13-15 gathering in New Orleans.

That total of 110 amendments—representing every proposal fully sponsored and properly submitted by the November 1 deadline—is the lowest since the 1980 Convention, when 103 legislative proposals appeared in the Convention publications.

The joint Commission-Council approach to Bylaw 5-1-(j)—which will determine the initial eligibility of student-athletes in Division I effective August 1, 1986—was announced November 1 in a statement by John W. Ryan, chair of the Commission, and John R. Davis, NCAA president.

The Commission and the Council agreed to establish an indexing formula, using high school grade-point average and national test score, for a three-year phase-in period, with the current requirements of the bylaw becoming effective in the third year.

The eligibility-index amendment, if adopted, would apply for the first two years (i.e., the entering classes of 1986 and 1987), and the bylaw requirements adopted in 1983 then would become applicable in the third year (i.e., the entering class of 1988).

In the first year (1986-87), the student-athlete could achieve initial eligibility by using an index whereby a 740 on the SAT test or 17 on the ACT test could be combined with a minimum 1.800 grade-point average in the core curriculum, and a 2.200 grade point in the core could be combined with a minimum 660 SAT or 13 ACT.

In the second year (1987-88), the index would be reduced to the point where a 720 SAT or 16 ACT could offset a 1.900 GPA, and a 2.100 GPA could offset a 680 SAT or 14 ACT.

In 1988-89, the original language of the rule would become the minimum requirement: a 2.000 or better in the core, and at least a 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT.

"I am pleased with this refinement of the rule," Ryan said in the joint statement. "I believe the joint position of the Commission and the Council will enable us to attract the largest number of presidents to the Convention in New Orleans, and I believe most will come to support this joint position."

proposals since

Davis also expressed satisfaction with the proposal. "This phase-in approach would appear to take into account the additional flexibility in implementing the rule that was desired by the Presidents Commission and the goal of reaching the original standards that were included in the rule when it was adopted," he said.

"It must be recognized that additional experience with the core curriculum should increase the national test scores, while the approach we have agreed upon is responsive to the re-

Cold reality tells us to forget reform in athletics

By Blackie Sherrod

The Dallas Morning News

It just could happen, if recruiting hassles maintain domino action and us bleeding hearts continue our piteous mewling, that we will witness the Collegiate Reformation. A bare possibility. Somehow, I feel we'll cure the common cold first and see old Bossy jump over the moon.

Such a drastic revolt would require several steps. The NCAA disciplinary committee would have to grow even longer fangs and use them more. The number of punished schools would have to increase noticeably. There would need to be universal anger, followed by widespread revulsion and then probably a national blight of apathy toward big-time college football.

If all these factors were extreme enough that they affected college coffers and the surrounding business community, then, and only then, would a Collegiate Reformation become a remote possibility.

We reformists talk about a return to grassroots, of course, wherein athletics would be only a part of campus life, a cutdown basic model with no frills, of one-platoon rules and simple schedules, of students who play football, rather than football players who occasionally act as students.

Such a remodeling project would need authorization above and beyond college presidents.

The Reformation would have to begin with the Big Daddies of the field, and they are beginning to stir and make their presence known. They have publicly urged, nay commanded, NCAA disciplinaries to do their duty. They voted to stiffen educational requirements.

But college presidents all answer to somebody. For example, Donald Shields (president of Southern Methodist University) wouldn't support any drastic rollback in college football

Davis.

Someone would have to show these Big Daddies that a revulsion to college football just did not make good economic sense, to the institution itself or the business community in which it has connections. That it would take drastic measures to right the ship, like President Roosevelt closing the banks.

And then, for any Collegiate Reformation to occur, all these Big Daddies would have to be in accord. Dernigh impossible. You wouldn't even be able to get the Southwest Conference Big Daddies to agree.

There are all sorts of grudges and ill feelings within the conference right now. Start with the coaches. Bobby Collins (head football coach at Southern Methodist), when he came here, sensed some cold shoulders around the league. Some SWC coaches felt Collins and staff had come from an independent school at Southern Miss, where they could play rather fast and loose with recruiting rules because they were under no conference monitoring. They felt he was assuming a program left by Ron Meyer, which included suspect recruiting.

When Jim Wacker took over Texas Christian University, he immediately wrote a letter to league coaches proposing a new sanitary approach to recruiting and made the letter public. Several coaches resented the newcomer's volunteer counsel. Bill Yeoman (head football coach at the University of Houston), for one, suggested Wacker limit his supervision to his own backyard. Jackie Sherrill, with his highpowered operation moving into Texas A&M, generated a certain amount of friction.

Don't think there wasn't silent giggling when SMU was upset by Arizona. And at the early season flops by the Aggies during Sherrill's early years. And the sudden exposure of payoffs at TCU.

You won't be able to get these conference schools in bed together for a generation or so, if ever. And a Collegiate Reformation would demand a hundred times that. We can dream about it, but cold hard reality says forget it.

Columnary Craft

private schools such as Baylor and Stanford and Notre Dame. The financial supporters of the institutions. And the governors and big political cheeses who sway the boards of state universities like Nebraska and Georgia.

College presidents can be strong influences on the course of athletics, but they ain't the ones who would call this shot.

In truth, the presidents seem just now aware of problems in this sweaty unless he got word from Robert Stewart and Ed Cox and Bill Clements and perhaps others who lend heavy financial aid and influence to SMU. These are businessmen, not idealists. You get their attention with bottom lines, not some romantic notion that the fullback should wear corduroys and a pullover sweater with a block letter and pedal his way to class on a battered bicycle with books in the basket. This was good enough for Red Grange, but not for Kenneth

"What we want to do is develop a straight line between the coach and the player. The problem is when you have a booster enter the picture, it becomes a triangle. We're trying to cut the cord. Obviously, we haven't done a very good job of it...."

"You can only speculate, 'What's their motive?' If you have a child who does something wrong, he may say, 'Well, Jimmy's doing it. Why can't I?' When one institution is caught in a violation, they sometimes want to justify it on the grounds that others are doing it. I don't think that's right."

"If this office really wanted to go on a witch hunt, we could go out and find a disgruntled employee. We could talk to a transfer with something to say about his former school. We could go to any recruit and talk, not about the school he selected, but what happened with the schools he didn't select. The ideal way is self-enforcement."

"Something I feel that is very important to the future of collegiate wrestling is that we need to develop some way to produce a national dual-meet championship."

"The individual NCAA championships are important, and we need to continue with this. We also need to find some way to incorporate a team title in the form of a dual-meet championship. Fan interest and television interest would be greater in a dual-meet championship series that what we now receive in the individual NCAA championships."

"Fans are more inclined to be supportive of a team rather than several individuals attending a national tournament."

"I would like to see Mat News or Amateur Wrestling News, or both, select the top 32 teams in the country on a format similar to basketball, wrestle it down to 16 and finally to the final four. I believe there would be more interest from wrestling fans and from the general public, and a lot more interest from television. We need to pursue a dual-meet championship as soon as possible."

Several players closing in on I-A career records

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

With the season winding down, the talented senior class of 1985 is on the verge of some all-time career records.

Navy's Napoleon McCallum, for instance, needs 501 yards in all-purpose running in his last three games to surpass the Division I-A career record of 6,885 by Stanford's little Darrin Nelson in 1977-1978-1980-1981 (he missed 1979 with an injury). That is a per-game average of 167, and McCallum's current season average is 192.9 (giving him 6,385 for his career).

Illinois' David Williams needs 40 catches in his last three games to break the career receiving record of 261 catches by Tulsa's Howard Twilley from 1963 to 1965 (Twilley played only three seasons to Williams' four). That is unlikely, but possible.

UCLA's John Lee needs only five field goals in his last three games to break the career record of 78 by Arizona State's Luis Zendejas from 1981 to 1984. Max Zendejas of Arizona, Luis' brother and one of several kickers in a famous family, has 72, just two fewer than Lee, and he also could surpass the record.

Lee also seems certain to break the all-time accuracy record, unless he develops a sudden case of the yips. He is now 74-for-84, or 88.1 percent, and the record is 81.9 percent (using a minimum of 60 attempts) by Chuck Nelson of Washington in 1980-1982.

McClure nears 10,000 yards

Bowling Green's Brian McClure needs 342 yards passing in his last two games to become the second 10,000-yard career passer in I-A history. With 9,658, McClure needs 922 in his final two games—a 461-yard average—to break the career mark of 10,579 by Boston College's Doug Flutie in 1981-1984. McClure now is averaging 228 this season.

Next in passing and certain to finish high are Iowa's Chuck Long at 8,385 and Illinois' Jack Trudeau at 7,413, followed by Fresno State's Kevin Sweeney (only junior in the group) at 7,394 and Brigham Young's Robbie Bosco at 7,251.

In total offense, McClure leads with 9,154 rushing-passing yards—third on the all-time I-A list. Long had 8,261, Trudeau 7,356, Sweeney 7,165 and Bosco 6,875.

214 and counting

Trudeau, by the way, now has a streak of 214 consecutive passes without an interception after throwing 36 passes against Michigan. That breaks one of the oldest records in the book—198 in a row by Tulsa's Jerry Rhome in 1964. And remember, Trudeau has three more games this season to add to his streak.

4,000 next

At least three players can reach 4,000 career rushing yards by the end of the season—Auburn's Bo Jackson has 3,967, Notre Dame's Allen Pinkett 3,827 and McCallum 3,761. Next are Louisiana State's Dalton Hilliard at 3,479, Southern Methodist's Reggie Dupard 3,354 and Washington State's Rueben Mayes 3,195.

Totten's toteboard

Mississippi Valley State's Willie Totten smashed a whole flock of Division I-AA and all-time, all-divisions NCAA season records in passing and total offense in 1984. With many of his receivers gone, his figures are more human this fall but still outstanding. With 11,742 career passing yards and 11,952 in total offense, he is second on the all-time, all-divisions list to Portland State's Neil Lomax, who leads with 13,220 passing and 13,345 total offense in 1977-1980. Totten, however, holds the all-divisions mark in career touchdown passes at 130 (to 106 for Lomax).

Rhode Island's Tom Ehrhardt will finish high, as will Lehigh's Marty Horn. Ehrhardt now has 8,829 total offense and 9,361 passing, Horn 8,395 total offense and 8,569 passing. Horn's favorite target, Rennie Benn, has 223 catches (a distant second to Jerry Rice, Totten's former target, whose 301 is the all-divisions record) and 3,486 receiving yards.

Dudek reaches 73

Plymouth State's Joe Dudek, already above Walter Payton's NCAA all-divisions record of 66 career touchdowns and already the Division III career rushing leader, reached 73 with three more TDs November 2 and now has 5,180 yards rushing. He thus surpassed the 70 by Wilbert Montgomery of Abilene Christian from 1973 to 1976 when that college was an NAIA member. Payton played at Jackson State from 1971 to 1974.

The Division III duel between Wheaton's Keith Bishop and Wisconsin-Stevens Point's Dave Geissler is going down to the wire, with both far above the previous division records for passing and total offense. Through October 26, Bishop had 8,965 passing and 8,462 total offense with two record of 34 by the Division III record-holder, Ralph Gebhardt of Rochester in 1972-1975. Collins already had the Division II career record.

With 384 return yards on his 36 steals, Collins is not far from the Division II career record of 411, set by Greg Anderson of Montana on just 11 interceptions in 1974-1976. The NCAA collegiate record is 479 by Fort Valley State's Eugene Hunter on 29 returns in 1972-1974 (also the Division III record).

The 6-3, 195-pound Collins also plays varsity basketball at Indiana Central as a guard-forward. He was the team's sixth man or supersub last season.

"Basketball comes to me naturally," Collins says. "I've been playing it all my life... And in football, I incorporate the same outlook on defense that I use in basketball—and that is to concentrate on the ball."

Although he did not decide to come out for basketball until after the Kelly, 5-3-1 vs. 3-8 last year.

Quotes of the week

Without doubt, UTEP's 23-16 upset over Brigham Young's defending national champions October 26 was one of the most remarkable in college football history. Consider that UTEP entered the game winless for the season, with an 11-year-plus record of 14-113, and had lost the last 14 meetings with BYU (since 1977, BYU had scored 347 points to 43 for UTEP). Its last victory over BYU was in 1970—also UTEP's last winning season (6-4). BYU had won 30 of its last 31 games and 25 straight Western Athletic Conference games. UTEP held BYU to 151 passing yards, and BYU had gained at least 200 yards passing for 64 consecutive games since September 6, 1980, when it was held to 147 passing by New Mexico. UTEP intercepted four passes—a figure topped by only one BYU opponent since 1977 (Georgia, with six in 1982). UTEP coach Bill Yung had a simple response to the big victory: "It may have been a miracle, but you know me, I believe in miracles." (Jeff Hurd, Western Athletic Conference SID)

Kansas State got its first victory of the season and Lee Moon his first victory as a college head coach, 20-17, over Missouri October 26, with John Welch passing for 271 yards and two touchdowns in his first college start. A fourth-and-16, 49-yard deflected pass to Gerald Alphin with a minute to go set up the winning TD. "I talked to John Saturday morning and he said, 'Coach, I have been over this (the Kansas State game plan) 9,000 times, and I've seen it in my mind,'" Moon said. "He's got a lot of poise." After the game, tears welled in Moon's eyes and his voice cracked as he told Steve Richardson of The Kansas City Star: "John gave me the ball. I think I may sleep with it. I've cried after losses, so I can cry after a win. There's nothing wrong with that... tears of joy are just as good." (Tim Allen, Big Eight Conference SID)

Penn State tailback D. J. Dozier, a junior from Virginia Beach, Virginia, proved he is close to full recovery from a midseason hamstring injury with a 125-yard game against West Virginia October 26. Weeks of standing on the sidelines unable to play was quite a learning experience, Dozier said: "I'd go into the game knowing that no matter what, I wasn't going to play. All I could do was help others. I could have stayed home when the team was on the road, but I just couldn't do that. I had to be there on the sidelines so I could help someone if he needed it. It helped me become more of a leader. I learned that I have to talk when things need to be said." (Dave Baker, Penn State SID)

Ted Roof, who is closing in on Georgia Tech's school record for career tackles, is an ideal choice to lead the defense. He was not a model child. At age seven, Ted and his younger brother were walking to school in new yellow rain slickers. Another kid stole his brother's hat and threw it in the river. Ted knew of only one appropriate response: "I threw the kid in the river. I always got in trouble, got in a lot of fights. I was real competitive—when I didn't win, I got mad." Many times the leader of Tech's "Black Watch" defense has heard he is short of talent, but he says: "I'm just thankful for the talent the Lord did give me... I'm blessed to be here." (Mike Finn, Georgia Tech SID)

Arkansas linebacker David Bazzel has been playing organized football for 13 years from the Pee-Wee leagues on up. He got his first interception ever October 26 and returned it 51 yards to set up a touchdown in a 57-27 victory over Houston. "The ball was such a foreign object to me that I almost bobbled it," he told Bob Holt, Arkansas Democrat. "I was beginning to think that when I was born, the Lord touched me and said, 'Thou shalt not intercept.'" (Bill Morgan, Southwest Athletic Conference SID)

Wagner defensive tackle Paul Thompson after a 27-24 victory over Glassboro State: "It's just a game of real estate—you try to gain a yard and then they try to gain one back." (Renata Jacynicz, Wagner assistant SID)

Dayton coach Mike Kelly: "Our defense this year has been Hekeyll and Jekyll... No, what is it? Hekeyll and what? Oh, yeah, Jekyll and Hyde." (Doug Hauschild, Dayton SID)

Coaches Lou Holtz of Minnesota and Earle Bruce of Ohio State, whose teams played a barnburner October 26, were assistants to Woody Hayes in 1968, the last year a Big Ten team won a national championship. That team beat Southern California in the 1969 Rose Bowl, 27-16, after the Trojans led 10-0 at half-time on an 80-yard touchdown run by O. J. Simpson. Holtz had been working with the defense, and at half-time, Hayes growled, "How come Simpson went 80 yards?" Replied Holtz: "That's all the farther he had to go." (Bob Peterson, Minnesota SID) games left, while Geissler had 8,820 passing and 8,233 total offense with three games left.

Football notes

Another record streak?

South Dakota State junior Jeff Tiefenthaler caught another touchdown pass November 2 and now has at least one scoring catch in 13 consecutive games. Can any Division II player top that? (Ron Lenz, South Dakota State SID)

Two little guys

Temple junior Paul Palmer, only 5-9 and 171, is second nationally in rushing and already has reached 3,029 for his career. Missouri sophomore Darrell Wallace, only 5-7 and 167, ranks 13th in rushing and already has the second- and third-best rushing games in Tiger history at 224 and 196. Both players exude confidence. "I'm harder to bring down than people think," says Palmer. "I wanted to go to Maryland, but they were not interested. I had a visit scheduled for West Virginia, but they canceled it. I've always considered it their loss." Says Wallace: "I've got a big heart, a lot of self-confidence and a lot of pride in all that I do. I can go out and get it done."

A pair of 200s

Tulsa's Gordon Brown rushed for 214 yards and teammate Steve Gage (a quarterback) for 206 against Wichita State November 2—the first such pair of 200s in I-A history. Who came the closest until now? Syracuse's Larry Csonka (216) and Floyd Little (196) against West Virginia in 1965.

Interception record

Indiana Central senior Tom Collins has established an all-time NCAA collegiate (or all-divisions) career record for interceptions at 36 (eight this season in eight games). He had two October 26 against Georgetown (Kentucky), including his first-ever career interception touchdown on a 60-yarder. That broke the former career football season last year, he led the team in blocked shots and often held down the opponents' top scorers. "He's just been a real joy, and I can't say enough about the effort he has given us," said basketball coach Billy Keller. (Chris Denari, Indiana Central SID)

Long dry spells end

Until November 2, Ohio's Cleve Bryant and Missouri's Robert "Woody" Widenhofer were the only Division I-A first-year (that is, without head-coaching experience on the four-year level) coaches without a victory, and it was doubly painful because each is coaching at his alma mater. But on that happy day, both won—Ohio, 33-23, over Kent State and Missouri, 28-27, over Iowa State on a two-point conversion with 71 seconds left.

"There were a lot of times when I was bleeding inside," Widenhofer finally said after a long period of silence. "There were a lot of times when I was shedding tears. There were a lot of times when I woke up and didn't want to face the day. This one, I'll cherish forever."

Utah's Jim Fassel, now 7-2 (vs. 6-5-1 last year) is the most successful first-year coach in I-A. In I-AA, the most successful is Delaware State's Bill Collick at 6-2, while Virginia Military's Eddie Williamson is 2-5-1 vs. 1-9 last year.

Among the new-job coaches in I-A (that is, with previous head-coaching experience on the four-year level), Arizona State's John Cooper leads at 6-2 (vs. 5-6 last year), while Oregon State's Dave Kragthorpe is 3-5 vs. 2-9 last year, and his team's 21-20 upset over Washington at Seattle October 19 on a last-minute blocked punt is certainly one of the biggest in college football history (Washington was a 37-point favorite). In I-AA, the new-job leader is West Texas State's Bill

Attendance loses a little ground

Division I-A attendance lost a tiny bit of ground November 2, but the picture is virtually unchanged. The per-game average now is 819 behind 1984's record pace (vs. 798 behind a week earlier) at 42,242, but that still is 1.90 percent. In I-AA, the decline was bigger. It now is 338 ahead of 1984's pace (vs. 552 each of the previous two weeks) at 11,386, or 3.06 percent. The chart:

Defending team champions look like titlists again

By Michael V. Earle
The NCAA News Staff

As if having several of last year's top returnees in addition to key red-shirts and top recruits was not advantage enough, the NCAA Divisions I, II and III defending wrestling championships teams—Iowa, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville and Trenton State—will have the home-mat advantage when their respective national championships begin next March.

Iowa, led by coach Dan Gable, is aiming for an unprecedented ninth consecutive Division I Wrestling Championships team title. The Hawkeyes return all-Americans in seven weight classes, lacking proven performers only in the 118- and 158-pound classes and at heavyweight.

If preseason drills mean anything, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville figures to make a strong run at its third consecutive Division II team title. The Cougars, coming off one of their best preseason conditioning regimens and recruiting campaigns, return six of last year's nine all-Americans in addition to Mark Kristoff (158), who redshirted after reaching the finals in the 1984 championships.

Trenton State proved last year that underdogs do have their day. The Lions, touting the season as a rebuilding year, entered last year's championships with coach David Icenhower's youngest team in his nine years at Trenton State. But freshman Tim Jacoutot, the championships most valuable wrestler, got the Lions rolling by winning the 118-pound title, and Trenton State was on its way to its fourth team title in the last seven years.

Although all three defending champions have the potential for another title-winning year, injuries, upsets and upstarts over the regular season will determine if there are any Davids out there who can pin these Goliaths.

Following is a look at the top teams and individuals in conferences and independent regions that receive automatic qualification to their respective division championships:

Division I

Atlantic Coast: North Carolina, North Carolina State and Clemson are the league's front-runners and steadily are gaining on the nation's well-known programs. North Carolina, however, has the edge in the conference race.

The Tar Heels had no seniors on last year's squad, which captured its second consecutive ACC crown and placed 19th at the championships. Included among the returnees are six grapplers with championships experience and three conference championships—Al Palacio (118), Chip McArdle (126) and John Aumiller (126/134).

Big Eight: Defending conference champion Oklahoma returns 12 lettermen from last year's second-place championship team. The Sooners are led by defending national 190-pound champion Dan Chaid and John Laviolette, who placed third nationally at 167 pounds. On paper, the Sooners appear to have a legitimate shot at dethroning Iowa.

Iowa State, coming off a surprising third-place championship finish, figures to give Oklahoma a strong run for the conference championship. Excitement is surrounding the Cyclone program this season as former Iowa State national champion Jim Gibbons takes over as head coach. Gibbons will rely on his brother, Joe, the defending 142-pound national champion, to continue Iowa State's winning tradition.

Joe Gibbons, Iowa State

Big Sky: After losing the last two conference championships by one-fourth and one point, respectively, Weber State may have the talent to get over the top. Coach John Webb, who has produced three all-Americans each of the past three years, returns nine lettermen, including conference champion Mel Robinson (177) and runner-up Stewart Richards (134).

Idaho State, led by conference champions Dan Pugmire (158) and heavyweight Jim Nielsen, who came within one victory of gaining all-America status last season, will be a factor in the conference race.

Big Ten: What more can be said about Iowa? Gable molds teams that take advantage of their opponents' mistakes and that are seemingly as strong at the start of the season as at the end of the nationals.

The Hawkeyes are led by Marty Kistler, who will wrestle this season at 167 pounds after having compiled a 39-1 record en route to last year's 158-pound title. Kistler's supporting cast includes all-Americans Matt Egeland (126), Greg Randall (134), Kevin Dresser (142), Jim Heffernan (150), Rico Chiapparelli (177) and Duane Goldman (190), all of whom had at least 27 victories last season.

Wisconsin, led by defending national 134-pound champion Jim Jordan, and Michigan, which features sophomore sensation John Fisher, who compiled a 45-10 record and finished second nationally at 126 pounds, should battle it out for second in the conference and a top-five finish nationally.

East Coast Conference: Coach Jack Childs of defending ECC champion Drexel should not have to wait long for career victory No. 100 despite a tough schedule. The Dragons feature a fast start in Paul Zarbatany (118), who compiled a 25-5 record last season, and a big finish with heavyweight George Kovach, who recorded six falls on his way to a 20-6-1 record last year.

Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association: Lehigh had only its second losing season in coach Thad Turner's 15-year tenure last season but regrouped in time to win its 25th EIWA title and place ninth at the NCAA championships.

The Engineers should hit the mats running with a more solid lineup that includes four NCAA qualifiers, three EIWA champions and a highly rated recruiting class.

Syracuse has a senior-laden team, featuring 177-pound national runner-up Wayne Catan and conference champion heavyweight Andy Schwab, that should push Lehigh for the league title.

Eastern Wrestling League: Penn State is looking for its fifth consecutive league title; however, Clarion and Bloomsburg could put a damper on those plans.

Penn State returns three all-Americans, including 158-pound runner-up Greg Elinsky, but has a relatively young squad that might be hard-pressed to duplicate or better last year's seventh-place championship finish.

Clarion, which has placed in the top 26 in 12 of the last 14 championships, has a very solid team that returns two all-Americans in Jim Beichner (190) and Ken Haselrig (158) and four national qualifiers.

Bloomsburg has a solid group of veterans, notably 118-pound champion Ricky Bonomo, but inexperience at a handful of weight classes could hamper the Huskies' league title chances.

New England Wrestling Association: With 12 returning lettermen, Boston University appears to have one of its strongest squads in years, making prospects good for a fifth consecutive conference title. Boston U., which never has lost a conference meet in four years under coach Carl Adams, boasts one of the nation's top heavyweights in two-time conference champion and NCAA qualifier David Koplovitz.

Pacific-10: Arizona State and Oregon State appear to be the preseason favorites, but Oregon and Stanford also feature talented teams.

Defending champion Arizona State lost three all-Americans from last year's team that placed sixth at the championships but has a talented group of

North Dakota State sets sights on Division II team title

Following is a look at the top teams and individuals in Division II conferences and independent regions that receive automatic NCAA qualification in wrestling:

East Region: Pittsburgh-Johnstown coach Pat Pecora has a young team that may find it difficult to duplicate last year's 15-3 dual-meet record, third-place regional finish and 20th-place championship finish. But the Mountain Cats have the potential to be a top contender by the regular-season's end and should not make Pecora wait long for his 100th career coaching victory.

Springfield, coming off an outstanding 22-4 dual-meet season in addition to four first-place tournament finishes, has a well-balanced lineup that could carry coach Doug Paker, who has a 410-125-9 record in 30 years, to the regional title.

Midwest Region: Ashland, the region's champion, has had top-10 championship finishes in four of the last six years and has crowned 42 all-Americans since the inception of the program.

Coach Mark Osgood has the talent to continue Ashland's strong tradition as well as contend for the national title. The Eagles return five all-Americans from last year's fourth-place championship team, notably 118-pound regional champion Rick Dicola, who is coming off a third-place championships finish, and Dave Maiorana, a two-time all-America in the 190-pound slot.

With all five NCAA qualifiers back from Wright State's most successful team ever, the Raiders should challenge Ashland for regional supremacy and make a strong bid for a top-five championships finish. Coach Stamat Bulugaris has at least seven wrestlers, led by three-time all-America Tim Begley (126) and last year's 158-pound championships runner-up Ken Davis, who are capable of qualifying for the national tournament.

Regional runner-up Lake Superior State also has the makings for another strong team with the return of 13 lettermen from last year's 16th-place championship team. The Soo Lakers have one of the top 142-pounders in the nation in senior Shawn Murdoch, a fourth-place championships finisher last year.

Other strong teams in the region include Ferris State, Oakland and Indiana Central.

Midwest Region: With Missouri-Rolla, Northwest Missouri State and Wisconsin-Parkside facing rebuilding years, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville once again should emerge as the region's dominant team. Central Missouri State and Minnesota-Duluth have solid lineups but lack the overall depth and experience of Southern Illinois.

If Southern Illinois coach Larry Kristoff's freshman son, Kip, a three-time Illinois state high school all-America, can fill in at 142 pounds while his other son, Mark, a two-time all-America redshirt, mans the 158-pound class, the Cougars' lineup will be set, with the exception of the 167- and 177-pound and heavyweight classes. The rest of Kristoff's lineup features two-time 118-pound national champion Tim Wright, two-time 126-pound all-America Steve Stearns, defending 134-pound champion Alan Grammer, fourth-place 150-pound championships finisher Brian McTague and 190-pound championships runner-up Ernie Badger. Wright could become only the seventh wrestler in Division II championships history to win three individual titles.

South Region: A close two-team race between defending regional champion Liberty and runner-up Pembroke State again appears to be shaping up.

Both teams match up well with each other's stronger weight classes, particularly at 126, where Liberty all-America Perry Ainscough squares off against Pembroke State national qualifier Joe Stukes and at heavyweight where Liberty regional champion Mike Hatch matches up against Pembroke State all-America Derek Edmonds, who compiled a 34-5 record last year.

West Region: After winning seven Division II titles in the last 10 years and placing second in two other championships, Cal State Bakersfield slumped to a seventh-place national finish last year.

Odds are that the Roadrunners will not finish so low this year. Second-year coach T. J. Kerr, who found Cal State Bakersfield's wrestling-room cupboard bare upon his arrival, has a slew of talented redshirts that migrated with him from San Jose State anxious to hit the mats and recapture Cal State Bakersfield's past domination of the division.

Kerr has outstanding talent in the middle- and upper-weight classes, led by former Division I all-America Darryl Pope (167) and Marvin Jones (177).

Portland State, led by 126-pound national champion Anthony Amado, has a solid lineup that includes potential all-Americans Lloyd Hygelund (150), Dean Wygal (177) and Mark Sanders (190).

Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association: Conference runner-up Norfolk State returns four conference champions and nine lettermen who should mount a serious challenge to defending champion Livingstone.

Coach James K. Lee will build his squad around three-time 126-pound defending conference champion Timothy Bonds, a potential national champion.

North Central Conference: In what undoubtedly is the strongest conference from top to bottom in Division II, four-time defending champion North Dakota State rates a slight edge for the top spot. After that, it is a free-for-all for second place among Nebraska-Omaha, North Dakota, South Dakota State, Augustana (South Dakota) and St. Cloud State.

North Dakota State returns all 10 wrestlers from last year's starting lineup, including all-Americans Steve Anderson (118), Jack Maughan (134), Mike Frazier (142), John Morgan (167) and Pat Johannes (177). North Dakota State coach Bucky Maughan, who enters his 22nd season with a 220-66-7 record, appears to have a lineup that is capable of giving him his first Division II national title.

Division II contenders

Following are some of the top Division II preseason contenders by weight class:

118 pounds

Runner-up Oregon State, which has won 22 conference titles since 1957, returns four national qualifiers.

Pacific Coast: Defending conference champion Fresno State again will be the team to beat. The Bulldogs have outstanding upper-weight strength, paced by Fred Little, who has the best record among the nation's returnees at 167 pounds. Fresno State's strength is capped by heavyweight Chris "The Fall Guy" Mast, who recorded nine falls en route to a 25-16-2 record and a runner-up conference finish.

Western Athletic: Wyoming, two-time defending conference champion, has established itself as one of the top teams in the Rocky Mountain area under coach Joe Dowler. The Cowboys have compiled a 22-8 dual-match record and have won nine tournaments in the past three years.

With returning starters at every weight class and defending conference champions Scott Rardin (150), Mike Hamel (167) and John Bragg (190) leading the way, the Cowboys should ride roughshod over their conference opponents.

Top East region independents: George Washington coach Jim Rota believes this year's squad is as good as any team he has fielded and has the potential to be his best. Seven starters return from last year's 13-10-1 team, including senior captain Bill Marshall (126), a two-time East regional place-winner.

Shippensburg features a veteran squad, despite the loss of 134-pound all-America Terry Lauver, that should improve upon last year's championships showing. Other top teams in the region include Virginia Tech and Slippery Rock.

Top West region independents: Since Louisiana State discontinued its formidable wrestling program, Tennessee, Northern Iowa or Indiana State should emerge as the region's dominant team.

Tennessee has the ingredients for another top-10 championship finish. The Volunteers have outstanding talent in the lighter weights, capped by all-America Tim Cochran (134), the defending West regional champion. Tennessee needs to develop strength in the middle weights—particularly if coach Gray Simons elects to redshirt all-America Glenn Lanham (158)—if it is to improve on last year's eighth-place championship finish.

Despite having only two upper-classmen, Northern Iowa's outlook is optimistic. Coach Don Briggs has NCAA qualifiers Pat Pickford (126) and Jeff Weatherman (177) back and welcomes his best-ever recruiting class. The Panthers' freshman class, which includes eight redshirts, boasts eight former high school all-Americans and a total of 18 individual state championship titles.

Indiana State has a good chance to improve upon last year's 11-4 dual-meet record if coach Ralph Manning can find capable replacements at 134 and 167. The rest of the Sycamores lineup returns intact.

First-year Cal Poly-SLO coach Lennox Cowell also should field one of the top teams in the region, led by championships qualifiers Ernie Geronimo (134), David Wood (150) and Mark Tracey (190).

Many Division III teams filled with veterans, top recruits

Following is a look at the top teams and individuals from conferences and regions that receive automatic qualification to the NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships:

College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin: Augustana (Illinois), Wheaton (Illinois), Millikin and North Central are top contenders for the conference title.

Wheaton, which last year suffered the most injuries in coach Pete Wilson's 32 years of coaching but still managed to finish second in the conference, may have the inside track to this year's title. In addition to four top returnees, former 177-pound all-America Brian Stamm, who did not wrestle last season, will return to aid the Crusaders' title drive.

Iowa Intercollegiate Conference: National runner-up and defending conference champion Central (Iowa) graduated four all-Americans, yet the Dutchmen still should contend for another conference title and a top-10 championship finish. Central has a solid lineup from the 118- to 158-pound classes but will have to rely on younger wrestlers to fill the remaining weight classes.

If Central slips, Buena Vista appears to be the Dutchmen's likely successor. The Beavers, returning veterans represent the most returning NCAA championships points of any team in the division. Last year's eighth-place championship finishers have exceptional strength in the middle and upper weights, anchored by fourth-place championships finishers Paul Van Oosbree (142), who compiled a 39-9 record, and Mike Schimp, who ended 13 of his 28 victories last year with falls. Doyle Naig, 24-8 last season, provides the punch in the upper weights.

Middle Atlantic Conference: A strong group of recruits could propel Susquehanna past conference favorites Delaware Valley and Lycoming. Susquehanna has outstanding upper-weight strength, notably 190-pound Steve Deckard, whose third-place championships finish last year was the highest national tournament finish in 19 years under coach Charles Kunes.

Midwest Collegiate Conference: Cornell College should be able to defend its conference title due to the return of five league champions who qualified for the championships, where Jay Van Cleve (126) and Dean Miller (134) earned all-America honors.

New England Wrestling Association: Defending champion Worcester Polytechnic returns half of its front-line wrestlers from last year's 20-1 team, including three conference runners-up. If coach Phil Grebinar's rebuilding job falls behind schedule, Western New England, Coast Guard and Wesleyan have the best chance for the league championship.

Ohio Athletic Conference: Mount Union appears poised to regain the momentum generated last year from winning its first conference title in 11 years by a record margin of 44 points over runner-up Ohio Northern. The Purple Raiders have six national qualifiers back, three of whom—Randy Cook (118), Mike Sessor (134) and Jerry Tennant (142)—earned all-America honors.

State University of New York Athletic Conference: The race for the SUNYAC title promises to be a wide-open one among defending champion Brockport, Binghamton, Oswego State, Buffalo and Albany (New York).

Brockport was hit hard by graduation but should be a contender by midseason. Binghamton coach Steve Erber has some rebuilding to do but has Mark Gumble, a potential 142-pound national champion, for a cornerstone. Oswego State will suffer some growing pains with a young but talented group of wrestlers that includes outstanding freshman recruits, but it should be a contender by post-season. Buffalo, coming off a seventh-place championship finish, has outstanding middle-weight strength led by third-place championships finisher Steve Klein.

Northeast Region: Ithaca was a clear-cut favorite going into last year's championships until all-Americans Bob Panariello (118) and Glenn Cogswell (126), who compiled 24-3 and 29-7 records, respectively, suffered season-ending injuries. The seniors have recuperated and are expected to have the Bombers flying high despite the loss of all-Americans Bart Morrow and Dave Kittay.

Midwest Region: Five returning

all-Americans and 12 returning lettermen ensure John Carroll coach Tony DeCarlo another successful season. The Blue Steaks, coming off a fourth-place championship finish, should have little trouble winning their 20th consecutive Presidents' Athletic Conference crown and 200th dual meet. They boast a well-balanced lineup that is capped by heavyweight regional champion and third-place championships finisher Sal D'Angelo, who rolled to a 32-3 record that included 10 falls.

Other top teams in the region include Thiel, Salisbury State, Allegheny and Olivet.

Southeast Region: Trenton State coach Dave Icenhower's lineup is more settled than at the start of last year's national championships season. And that's bad news for other teams in the region.

The Lions should credit Icenhower's glossy 130-24-1 record despite a dual-meet season that includes division powers John Carroll, Montclair State and Brockport State. In addition to national 118-pound champion Tim Jacoutot, Icenhower has all-Americans Ralph Venuto (134) and Dwayne Standridge (158) to build his lineup around.

West Region: Three-time defending Wisconsin State University Conference champion Wisconsin-River Falls and runner-up Wisconsin-Whitewater are pegged as the top teams in the region. Wisconsin-River Falls is a little green through the middle weights but quality wrestlers at the remaining weight classes should compensate for that inexperience. Seniors Matt Renn, the defending national champion heavyweight, and Brian Keller, a two-time all-America coming off a 42-6 season, has Wisconsin-River Falls coach Byron James eyeing a top-five championship finish.

Promising Alaskan runner plans to turn up the heat in Tucson

By Timothy J. Lilley
The NCAA News Staff

Doug Herrin could become the best distance runner in history.

Consider the facts. Herrin ran a 4:13 mile in high school and turned in times of 1:49.20 for 800 meters and 15:12 for 5,000 meters. Good times, every one of them, but not great; until one learns where Herrin recorded those times.

"Anchorage is a great place. I was born and raised there, and I really enjoy it." Anchorage, Alaska: Snow... absolute cold... the land of the midnight sun and home to one of the brightest young runners in the country.

Cross country season at Bartlett High School, home of the Golden Bears, begins in late August. By October, it usually is too cold to run outside; runners abandon roads and tracks until the following April.

"After cross country season, we stayed inside until April," Herrin recalled. "Sometimes, we'd get out in late, late March, but even in April it might only warm up to 50 degrees, and that's pretty chilly."

Six months of outdoor training, maximum. Through the winter, Herrin and his teammates did little more than work on their form, using the school's hallways.

"One of the coaches figured out that running a mile in the halls would involve more than 20 90-degree turns, so about all we could do was work on our strides and stuff like that."

But Herrin's times were good, and he turned in a 1:48.09 800 meters at The Athletics Congress (TAC) Junior National meet this summer. Somehow, this youngster was getting the kinds of nonrunning workouts that really make a difference.

For one thing, he fished a lot. "I love to fish, mostly for salmon," he explained. "We had a cabin on the Talkeetna River, and I fished there and on the Kenai River."

His target? King salmon. "The largest one I ever caught weighed 52 pounds. I caught it on my spinning outfit. I've never been able to land anything above 20 or 30 pounds on my flyrod. But, there have been 90-pound kings caught out of the Kenai, so maybe someday...."

But, even in Alaska, fishing seasons end. "Well, I love to hunt too," Herrin said quickly, talking at length about the moose hunting he enjoyed. "I have some friends who hunt with bows. I've never tried that, but I want to some day."

Hunting, fishing, hiking, camping; Herrin enjoyed each, and each contributed to his physical condition in one way or another, partially making up for the lack of training time.

"I guess that's right," he said, sounding excited at the concept. "I never really thought about it before, but I guess all of those things would help keep me in shape. I have so much fun when I'm out, I never thought about how it might be helping me."

Herrin quit worrying about that short training calendar when he left for college not long ago. He can run any time he wants to these days; Tucson, Arizona, is a long way from Alaska.

"Adapting to the heat is something a lot of people have asked me about since I got here, but I don't feel like I've had any trouble at all," said Herrin, a freshman at the University of Arizona. He said he has reached his usual 40-miles-per-week training level without heat-related problems.

"I feel like I'm ready to jack up my distance, but coach (Arizona's Dave Murray) wants me to stay at 40 for a while. I ran a lot this summer in the heat, and I guess that helped some. The temperature was in the 90s the day I ran the 1:48 at the TAC meet."

Without saying a word, Herrin also revealed the mixed emotions he feels these days; they were there, thinly veiled in the tone of his voice.

Easy to understand, that kind of anxiety. Gone are the moose, replaced by desert bighorn sheep. Gone is Mt. McKinley, the continent's highest peak, replaced by the Grand Canyon, one of its most awesome troughs. Gone are frostbitten winters and endless summer days, replaced by shirt-sleeve Decembers and endless summer heat.

"It's different here, that's for sure,"

Herrin said, anxious to end an interview in favor of a run. "Right now, it's probably in the 40s back home, and I'm about to go out, take my shirt off and enjoy a real pretty afternoon."

Strong runners may provide edge in title runs

Strong runners may have an edge in all six NCAA cross country championships this fall.

Common sites will be utilized for the men's and women's title races in Divisions I, II and III, and each course includes steep grades at strategic points. The kings and queens of those hills probably will become NCAA champions.

Following is a look at the courses and top men's and women's teams in each division.

Division I

Men's Championships

Marquette University coach Jim Allen is in charge of staging the school's first-ever NCAA championship event. "If I had to design a course for a tough, strong runner like our Keith Hanson, this would be it," Allen said. "And you will not find a more beautiful site for a cross country course."

The men's route on the Dretzka Golf Course, like the women's, will start slightly downhill. Allen said the first mile should be fairly quick, with only a few gradual turns. Just before the 1 1/4-mile mark, a 100-meter-long hill should allow the eventual winners to begin breaking away from the pack. "I think this is where you will see the front-runners emerge," Allen said.

The rest of the second mile includes three bridges, one of which recently was widened to 20 yards to accommodate the runners. The next 1 1/2 miles will be run either on the fringe of the course or on trails. The course's second hill, "a little tougher than the first," according to Allen, will be waiting at the 3 3/4-mile mark.

A little more than four miles into the race, runners will pick up the midsection of the course again and, with a few little twists, make their way to the finish line.

"The real guts of this course is the section from 1 1/2 to four miles," Allen said, adding that a 100-yard incline will challenge the leaders with a quarter-mile left. After almost six miles, that grade could prove to be troublesome.

The top teams? "I have to believe Wisconsin comes in here an overwhelming favorite in the men's race," Allen said. "The most interesting aspect of this race, from that standpoint, is the fact that about a mile of this course is part of (Wisconsin senior standout) Tim Hacker's old high school course. He's coming home, and that could make things a little more exciting."

As could the running of Marquette's Hanson. "Everybody knows he's a good runner on this kind of course, and he likes to push the pace," said Allen. "If he qualifies for the championships, the men's race really could be something."

Defending national champion Arkansas again should make the championships field, as should Arizona and Iowa State. West Virginia also has been making waves. Coach Marty Puskin's Mountaineers cracked the division's top five this season.

Regional qualifying meets are scheduled at seven sites November 16; the championships are set for November 25.

Women's Championships

The women's course will be identical to the men's for the first 1 1/2 miles. "At that point, the women will cross a bridge to a very challenging hill," Allen said. "There are more subtle inclines on the women's course."

Allen said women's coaches whose teams ran in the 1985 Marquette Invitational were very high on the course, as were their men counterparts.

"Most of the comments we received concerned the fact that the coaches thought the courses were very challenging and well laid out. Many said they hoped they could bring their teams back to run for the national championships."

In the women's competition, Wisconsin is as highly regarded as the Badgers' men's team. The defending national champions should be tough again, with runners like senior Katie Ishmael and juniors Kelly McKillen and Brigit Christiansen.

Other contenders include North Carolina State, Stanford and Oregon. Each team has runners capable of taking the individual title, and all appear to have the depth to make a serious run for the team championship.

Women's regional competition also will take place November 16; like the national championships, regional meets will be held at common sites.

Regional host institutions include: Regions 1 and 2, Lehigh University; Region 3, Furman University; Region 4, Indiana University, Bloomington; Region 5, Oklahoma State University; Region 6, University of Texas, Austin; Region 7, Boise State University, and Region 8, University of Washington.

Division II

Men's Championships

Three major hills dominate the Mountain Manor Golf Course route that Division II men's teams will cover.

"There is a half-mile from the start to the first turn, and 700 yards from the last turn to the finish," according to East Stroudsburg coach Richard DeSchraver, whose school is hosting the Division II championships.

Large, steep hills they are, the first about 1 1/4 miles into the course. Topping out, runners will cover almost two miles of fairly flat land before tackling a 700-yard incline, quite possibly the back-breaker on this course.

A mile of rolling hills, the first half going down and the second up, will bring the men to the five-mile mark. Another subtle downhill will lead the way to the final turn and the finishing straightaway.

"Our seniors have run that course before" said Doug Watts, coach of defending national champion Edinboro. "Every day we run a mile-long hill. Of course, we're just starting to round into shape again. Between now and the championships, we will simply reassemble our starting seven runners and get ready for that meet."

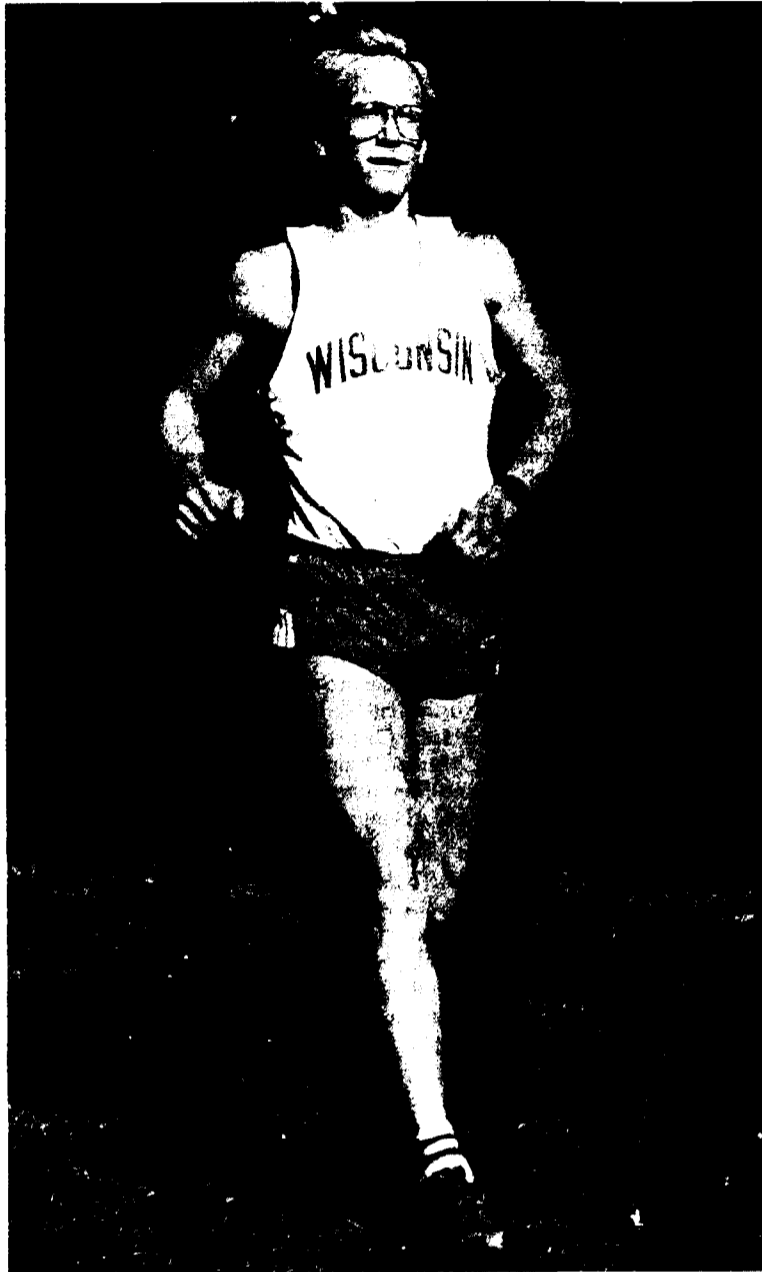

Watts has a different approach to training and competition. "I believe any team can really only run a good race two or three times a year. We train with that in mind."

"We hit an early-season peak for the Notre Dame Invitational, a big test for us; then we broke up the team, running in smaller groups, until recently. The only way you can be effective with this philosophy is to have experienced runners," Watts said, "and we have more experience than ever before here."

Sophomore Jim Manocchio has been running well, and Watts said Scott Burns has been inconsistent but has the ability to surprise some people.

Senior Mike Hulme is just coming back from ligament damage suffered in an accident on his way to school this fall. Luke Graham also should be ready to run for another team title.

Among the challengers will be perennial power South Dakota State and West Coast contender Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo. Both could have trouble with the hilly Eastern terrain, a fact that had some observers making Edinboro a prohibitive favorite before the year began.

Scott Jenkins, Wisconsin

"I'll tell you, the team people ought to look out for is Southern Connecticut (State)," Watts said. "They have some good runners... they had four guys qualify for the (NCAA) outdoor track championships last season."

Watts will find out what the Owls have when regional competition is run November 9, in preparation for the November 23 championships.

Women's Championships

One big hill stands out on the women's course at East Stroudsburg, with rolling terrain the rest of the way. A quarter-mile "stretch" to the finish should make the latter stages of the race exciting.

"Both courses have a little bit of every kind of terrain," DeSchraver said. "I believe the speed/rhythm runners will have an advantage on the rolling portions of the courses, while the strength runners will take over on the hills."

"The positioning of the hills will require both the men's and women's runners and their coaches to think things through. They will have to develop an attack on this course, based on their individual strengths and weaknesses."

Indiana (Pennsylvania) seems the logical choice for the women's championship. The Indians have good talent and depth, and coach Ed Fry's charges are used to running courses like this one.

"We really have only had one bad meet this season," said Fry, "and that was at Bucknell. We ran very poorly."

Leading the team will be junior Tammy Donnelly, who is coming off a bout with the flu. Other top runners include Mary Alico, Eliza Benzoni, Kathy Ewing and Elizabeth Urquhart.

Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo and Cal State Northridge appear to be the most likely challengers for the team title, although regional competition at five common sites November 16 will determine the exact field that will cover the Manor Golf Course routes in the November 25 championship races.

Regional sites include: East, East Stroudsburg; South, Mississippi College; Central, St. Cloud State University; Great Lakes, Ashland College, and West, California State University, Sacramento.

Division III

Men's Championships

Two miles into the Stone Mountain Golf Course route that will be used by Division III men and women runners, a steep, 180-meter hill will be waiting.

"There are tougher hills on other courses," said coach John Curtin of championships-host Emory University, "but the positioning of this one makes it crucial. I believe the races will be won or lost there."

The first 1 1/2 miles are relatively flat, according to Curtin; the next half-mile includes an interesting downhill that leads to "two-mile mountain." After topping out, the course flattens out again. The women will run through the finish at this point, while the men will make another circuit before heading for home.

The biggest question surrounding the November 23 races might be whether St. Thomas' (Minnesota) men's and women's teams can repeat their dual-national-championship performances of a year ago.

"Although we lost Nick Manciu to graduation, I feel like we are stronger through our seventh man than we were a year ago," said Tommie's men's coach Larry Russ. "We have had real good pack running (team members finishing fairly high in the standings and close to each other) all season."

"We have been training on and running hills since day one this season, and people have pinned the favorites tag on us since day one. I don't buy all the ratings; we really try to take these races one at a time. Right now, we're just trying to stay away from the common colds, flu and so on."

North Central coach Al Carius probably could tell Russ a thing or two about those kinds of problems. "We have not been healthy all at once this season," Carius explained. "Illness and injuries have taken their toll, but in spite of that, we have had a good year."

The high-flying Cardinals include seniors Joe Gross, Bob Pottle, Larry Wood and Pat Zinn and junior Jim Jones. While the team has talent and depth, it lacks exposure to a lot of hills this season.

"It (the Stone Mountain course) certainly could be a surprise," said Carius. "I guess we'll get a chance to respond to that if we make the championships."

Luther, Rochester Institute of Technology and Mount Union also should be championship contenders, based on the results of regional competition that will be held November 16.

Women's Championships

"I thought we'd be good early, but we weren't," said St. Thomas (Minnesota) women's coach Joe Sweeney. "We have run (Wisconsin) La Crosse three times and lost to them three times; on their home course, we lost by 26 points."

Cindy Hennessy is the Tommie's top runner, and Jennifer Hintz, who is returning from injury, is No. 2. Junior Paulette Goodrich has been very consistent in the No. 3 spot, and Michelle Stone has been as high as No. 1 this season.

"From here in, it (the season) should be pretty good. (Wisconsin) La Crosse is tougher than I thought they'd be, especially their top three runners. What we have to do is get Jennifer and Cindy up there running with their top people. They beat us three times during the regular season last year, but we beat them for the NCAA championship. So far, things have been a lot like last year."

Wisconsin-La Crosse coach Bob Smith scheduled a lot of Division I competition.

"We got hammered around a lot this season, but I think it will help us in the championships," he said. "We are more of a rugged running team than a pretty team. We handle different types of terrain pretty well."

Top runners for the Indians include Sharon Stubler, Patty Reynolds, Sheri Winter and Angela Bartoszek.

Another team to watch is Franklin and Marshall. The Diplomats have beaten every Division III team on their schedule, and Indiana (Pennsylvania) is the only Division II school that has outscored them.

Other teams to watch include Wheaton (Illinois), Wisconsin-Oshkosh and Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Sites for the regionals November 16 to determine qualifiers for the November 23 championships: New England, Southeastern Massachusetts University; New York, State University of New York, Stony Brook; Midwest, Allentown College; Great Lakes, Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology; Central, Wartburg College; Midwest, Augustana College (Illinois); Southeast/South, Emory University, and West, California State University, Stanislaus.

Parity throws title chase open to many Parity has come to Division I field hockey. With first-round 1985 tournament matches scheduled November 16-17 at on-campus sites and the final four set November 23-24 at Old Dominion, every region boasts at least one team capable of winning the title.

Two of the biggest surprises this season are Connecticut in the Mideast and Northwestern in the Midwest. Both programs suffered significant losses to graduation last season, and both have rebounded to top-three status in the division.

North Carolina and perennial power Old Dominion will fight it out in the South, while Maryland, Temple and Delaware go after Mid-Atlantic honors. Massachusetts, Boston U. and New Hampshire will go for it in the Northeast; Iowa and Northwestern will fight it out in the Midwest, and San Jose State will square off with Stanford in the West.

Connecticut coach Diane Wright credits much of her team's super season to a summer trip to Holland.

"I believe the game experience really helped season some of our younger players," said Wright, who had guided the Huskies to a 14-1 record through October 29. "When the regular season started, we honestly did not have a very tough schedule through our first five games, and I think the early success gave us some confidence."

"Our first big test was against Iowa, and we beat them. I think the players realized we had the potential to be a very good team after that game, and we have seemed to gain a little more confidence with each game."

Wright said sophomore center/forward Tracy Fuchs and senior midfielder Janet Ryan have been on-the-field leaders.

"We don't have a lot of stars on this team. We have had a real balance on offense and defense, but Janet and Tracy have led us through the challenging times this season."

While the Huskies have claimed the top spot in the division in spite of the graduation of seven players from last season, Northwestern coach Nancy Stevens had her team on top earlier this year after losing six players from the 1984 squad.

"I think Connecticut was in the same situation we were when the season started," said Stevens. "You come in not expecting a whole lot after losing to so many people, and then, in our case, we go out and win 14 in a row. That was a very pleasant surprise."

The Wildcats still are undefeated (4-0) in overtime games, although No. 2-ranked Iowa took a 2-1 decision in regulation.

On the way to a 15-2-1 record through October 29, Iowa coach Judith Davidson has gotten great point production from four players and solid defense from a pair of goalies.

Michelle Murgatroyd (14 goals, eight assists), Marcia Pankratz (17, three), RosAnna Salcido (11, 12) and Liz Tchou (11, two) have provided the scoring punch, while goalies Joan Behrends (27 saves, two shutouts) and Karen Napolitano (12 saves, one shutout) have stifled many an opponent.

A strong midfield and speed on the front line have powered North Carolina ahead of Old Dominion in the South. Louise Hines, Judith Jonckheer and Beth Logan have been the standouts for coach Karen Shelton-Scroggs.

"Those three really have been the backbone of the team," said Shelton-Scroggs, who has taken the Tar Heels to a 10-2 record and No. 4 ranking in the division. "I think our strength in the midfield and speed up front have been very important; actually, we have good overall team speed. The defense does not have a lot of experience, but that unit has played very well."

New coach Melissa Magee had some major rebuilding to accomplish at Old Dominion, and the team has responded with a 14-4 record through October 29.

Hartwick eyes 17th trip to Division I play-off

Hartwick has made a habit of extending its regular-season schedule into the postseason. Only St. Louis (25) and San Francisco (21) have made more appearances in the Division I Men's Soccer Championship than the Warriors (16).

Five of Hartwick's trips resulted in final-four showdowns—and the 1977 championship—and last season, the Warriors notched their 30th tournament victory before being eliminated in the semifinals. St. Louis, with 52 victories, and San Francisco's 34 lead the list in Division I.

Hartwick coach Jim Lennox finds just one drawback to so many postseason appearances.

"The trouble is," he said, "when you win it once, you're always disappointed unless you can win it again."

Hartwick, ranked second in the latest Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America poll behind defending national champion Clemson, is expected to be in the 23-team field that must complete first-round play by November 17.

Bouyed with the confidence of experience, Lennox hopes to weave physical ability and mental control into a fabric of tournament endurance.

"Last year, we had four or five starting freshmen and three or four starting sophomores," he said. "This year, with a year's experience, the major thing we are concerned about is injuries...our biggest concern is keeping the integrity of the team together."

"We have a psychological advantage in that we have a group that has participated in the tournament and done well," Lennox said. "We have the confidence to know we can go out and win the big games and the confidence that if we go a goal down, we can pull it out...the personalities of the individual players are pretty strong, which means they have a strong collective mentality. They are able to play aggressively throughout the whole game, yet control and channel that aggression to the proper places."

The Warriors will need that control to get out of the tough New York region, which includes 1983 national runner-up Columbia and ninth-ranked Long Island-Brooklyn.

"Our region is a stinker," Lennox said. "If you do come out of the region, because you do play a lot of quality teams, I think it really helps."

Clemson, top ranked through most of the season, goes after its second national title, after an extremely difficult schedule that included fifth-ranked Virginia November 1.

The biggest surprise of the season has been Temple, which as of October 28 was the only unbeaten, untied Division I team. Evansville's 17-0-1 record and South Carolina's 16-1-0 mark are considered mild surprises but support the contention that the popularity of soccer in this country is bringing parity to the collegiate sport.

A tournament format change eliminates the seeding of teams in the quarterfinals. Geographical pairings have been predetermined and the Men's Soccer Committee will select the hosts of the four quarterfinal match-ups based on the same criteria used in selecting sites for first-round games—quality of facilities and revenue potential.

The 23-team field will be made up of two teams from each of the eight regions and seven others selected at large. The championship game will be played December 14 at the Seattle Kingdome.

Following is a list of teams by region being considered for selection to the tournament, with records as of October 28.

New England—Boston U. (10-2-1), Connecticut (15-1-3), Massachusetts (14-5); New York—Hartwick (12-1-1), Columbia (6-2-2), Adelphi (10-3), Cornell (8-3), Long Island-Brooklyn (13-0-1); Middle Atlantic—Temple (12-0), Penn State (13-5), Rutgers (11-3-2), Drexel (8-2-1); South Atlantic—Virginia (13-2-1), George Mason (14-2), Old Dominion (12-1-2), American (13-1-1); South—Clemson (14-0-1), South Carolina (13-1), Duke (12-4), North Carolina State (11-2-1), Alabama A&M (10-5); Great Lakes—Evansville (17-0-1), Indiana (9-6-1), Wisconsin-Milwaukee (13-3-1), Akron (8-4-3); Midwest—Air Force (13-1-2), Southern Methodist (12-4), Eastern Illinois (10-3-1), St. Louis (9-5-2), North Texas State (9-4-1); Far West—Nevada-Las Vegas (13-0-2), UCLA (10-1-4), Fresno State (13-4), California (11-3-1).

Owls focus vengeance on Division II opponents

The Southern Connecticut State Owls have been playing with a vengeance in 1985...a vengeance that could lead them to the NCAA Division II Men's Soccer Championship, beginning November 17 with first-round play. The finals are scheduled December 7 or 8 at an on-campus site.

After eight straight appearances in the championship, which include one second-place, two third-place and three fourth-place finishes, Southern Connecticut waited for an invitation in 1984. It never came.

So, to assure one in 1985, the Owls have played to a 13-1-1 record and a first-place national ranking in the Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America (ISAA) poll.

Southern Connecticut assistant coach Ray Reid attributes the success to depth. "We have 16 very strong players. We can interchange them at any time and not lose any of our power."

The distribution of talent is apparent in scoring statistics as six players have between five and eight goals. Senior Elias Zurita leads the Owls with eight goals and six assists, followed by Jose Barroso with seven goals and one assist.

"We have been trying to establish consistency," said Reid. "With the players we have, if we can establish consistency, we should do quite well in the tournament. A lot depends on our leadership. If our team leader, midfielder Brian Bliss, is on, he will hold the team together."

Bliss, from Rochester, New York, was captain of the U.S. Junior National team.

Southern Connecticut should receive the strongest competition from some old faces—traditional powers Seattle Pacific and Florida International—and from one new face—Gannon.

Seattle Pacific, national champion in 1978 and 1983 and runner-up in 1974, 1975, 1977 and 1984, is 14-2 and ranked third in the ISAA poll. Like Southern Connecticut, the Falcons have scoring depth.

"We're very young but we have an explosive nature," said coach Cliff McCrath, who is closing in on 300 career coaching victories. "Most teams have a game breaker but this team has about six or seven of those people on it."

Junior Peter Hattrup leads the Falcons with 18 goals and 12 assists, including five goals in one game.

Glenn Lurie has 15 goals and four assists, and defensively Seattle Pacific boasts two-time all-Northwest Collegiate Conference selection David Wittrell.

Florida International was the national champion in 1982 and 1984 and runner-up in 1980. Although 10-4-4 this season, the Sunblazers have played a very strong schedule and also have had to overcome numerous injuries.

"We have had seven starters out with injuries at one time. But now we are starting to get everybody back and come on again," said coach Karl Kremser. "We always have been a team that plays well late in the season."

"I think we have what it takes to win again this year, but we lack consistency. We can be absolutely brilliant at times, while at other times, we are on a mental vacation."

Leading the Sunblazers in scoring is Munga Eketebi with seven goals and four assists. Goalkeeper Marc Wolff has five shutouts.

The new name in the Division II soccer picture is Gannon, undefeated (17-0) and ranked second in the nation. The Golden Knights made it to the championship last year for the first time, losing to Lock Haven, 2-0, in the first round.

"I think they feel the pressure of going into the tournament but they are ready for it," said coach Rob Russo of his veteran team. "Last year, it was a new experience; but this year it's different."

Gerry van DeMere leads the Golden Knights with 23 goals and six assists, followed by Rob van Rhee with 13 goals and nine assists. Goalkeeper Mike Celetti has allowed only nine goals in 15 matches.

The top teams by region include: New England—Southern Connecticut, Bridgeport, New Hampshire College, Keene State, New Haven and Stonehill; Mid-Atlantic—Gannon, East Stroudsburg, Liberty and Slippery Rock; South—Florida International, St. Thomas (Florida), Tampa, Barry, Sam Houston State and Rollins; Great Lakes/New York—New York Tech, Davis & Elkins, Oakland and C.W. Post; Midwest/Northwest—Seattle Pacific and Missouri-St. Louis; Far West—Cal State Northridge, Chapman, Cal State Dominguez Hills, Cal State Chico, UC Davis and Humboldt State.

99 schools ineligible because of late forms

Because they have not yet submitted certification of financial aid affidavits to the national office, 99 member institutions thus far have been declared ineligible for all NCAA championships in 1985-86, according to Patricia E. Bork, director of women's championships.

The deadline for submitting the forms was October 1, but the NCAA Council has ruled that eligibility would be restored to those institutions that submit their forms before selections to the championships are made.

The institutions affected are as follows:

Division I — DePaul University; Eastern Michigan University; California State University, Long Beach; Mississippi Valley State University; University of Nevada, Las Vegas; Ohio State University; University of Portland; St. Bonaventure University; University of South Alabama; Southern University, Baton Rouge; Tennessee State University; Texas Christian University; Texas Southern University; and West Texas State University.

Division II — Ashland College; University of California, Riverside; Central State University (Ohio); Cheyney University of Pennsylvania; Clarion University of Pennsylvania; Clark College (Georgia); Columbus College; Dowling College; Elizabeth City State University; Humboldt State University; Immaculata College; Johnson C. Smith University; Le Moyne College; Lincoln University (Missouri); Livingstone College; Morehouse College; Morris Brown College; North Dakota State University; California State University, Northridge; Northwood Institute; Pembroke State University; Quincy College; Saginaw Valley State College; St. John Fisher College; St. Paul's College; Savannah State College; Shaw University; Long Island University (Southampton campus); Virginia State University; West Georgia College; and Winston-Salem State University.

Division III — Anna Maria College; Asbury College; Aurora College; Clarkson University; Cornell College; DePauw University; Emerson College; Emory and Henry College; Fisk University; Heidelberg College; John Jay College of Criminal Justice; Kean College; Lake Erie College; Lane College; Le Moyne-Owen College; University of Maine, Farmington; Maine Maritime Academy.

Convention material distributed

Composite meeting schedules and hotel reservation forms for the 1986 NCAA Convention have been mailed to all active, conference, affiliated and corresponding members.

The mailing was sent to each active member's chief executive officer, director of athletics, faculty athletics representative and primary woman administrator of athletics programs.

The composite meeting schedule contains a day-to-day listing of all meetings for the 80th annual Convention, which will be held January 13-15 in New Orleans, Louisiana. Dates and times of meetings of numerous conferences and affiliated organizations held in conjunction with the Convention also are included in the meeting schedule.

The hotel reservation form should be completed and returned to the New Orleans Hilton Riverside and Towers, New Orleans, Louisiana. In the event an institutional letter is used to request reservations, a reservation form should be attached to the letter. This will provide correct identification and ensure the Convention room rate.

Mizlou, CSN sign agreement

Commerce Satellite Network and Mizlou Productions have entered an exclusive agreement in which Mizlou will provide all live sports programming for the cable network.

CSN, which also is billing itself as Cable Sports Network, telecasts 24 hours of sports on weekends and 12 hours during the week. It has commitments from 550 cable affiliates with a 6.5 million subscriber base. It is the only cable outlet that does not charge a subscriber's fee to affiliates.

Included in CSN's live programming will be college football and basketball, horse racing, and boxing.

Sports Bureau, a scoreboard and highlights show that is presented 20 times each Saturday, also will be produced by Mizlou.

Delegate forms to be mailed November 22

Forms used to appoint official delegates to the annual NCAA Convention will be mailed to chief executive officers at all NCAA member institutions November 22.

Faculty athletics representatives and directors of athletics will not receive the forms because only CEOs are authorized to make delegate appointments.

The delegate-appointment form will be inserted in the chief executive's copy of the Official Notice of the Convention.

Other delegate-appointment procedures:

- When no appointment form is received from the chief executive, no other institutional representative is permitted to complete the form at the time of Convention registration. In such cases, the institution's representatives will be registered as visitors until written authorization is received from the chief executive officer.

- Once the form has been signed and submitted by the chief executive officer, no one may be added as a voting or alternate delegate without a letter or telegram from the chief executive.

- Once the voting and alternate delegates have been appointed properly, they may transfer voting rights among themselves as the institution desires. No badges will be changed among voters and their alternates at the Convention.

- Conferences without voting privileges, affiliated members and corresponding members may appoint one delegate each. That delegate may speak on the Convention floor but will not have voting privileges.

- NCAA members and non-members are permitted to register as many visiting delegates as they wish. Visitors are considered observers and may neither address the Convention nor vote.

Foundation plans to set up bowl

Documents of incorporation have been signed to establish the Fellowship Bowl Foundation, which will work toward an NCAA-sanctioned post-season bowl game for December 1986 in the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis.

The first annual Fellowship Bowl would be December 27, 1986, if approved.

"We wanted to let everyone know we're for real and that we do mean business," said Norma Moore of Edmond, Oklahoma, special projects chairman and Fellowship Bowl coordinator for ESA foundation.

The foundation is a national women's service group.

Contact and evaluation subsequent to signing National Letter of Intent

Under the provisions of Bylaw 1-2(a)-(i)-(ii), subsequent to the occasion of the National Letter of Intent signing, there shall be no limit on in-person, off-campus contacts with the prospect, the prospect's relatives or legal guardian by the institution with which the prospect has signed. This being the case, the institution with which the prospect has signed is not required to follow the contact and evaluation calendar as set forth in Bylaws 1-2(a)-(4), (5) and (6) and Bylaw 1-3 for that prospect. However, because the athlete is still considered a prospective student-athlete until enrolled at the institution, all contact in person with the prospect or the prospect's relatives or legal guardian shall be made by those institutional staff members who are allowed to recruit and scout off-campus, and in-person, off-campus contact by representatives of an institution's athletics interests is prohibited.

Please note that Bylaw 1-2(a)-(i)-(ii) does not permit contacts with or evaluation of the prospect in situations (e.g., high school games, awards banquets) where it would not be permissible to contact or evaluate other prospective student-athletes because the event occurs outside the permissible recruiting periods set forth by Bylaws 1-2(a) and 1-3.

Outside competition

Under the provisions of Constitution 3-9(c), a member of an institution's intercollegiate team (other than basketball) who wishes to remain eligible may not compete as a member of any outside team in any intercollegiate, amateur competition in that sport [other than the Olympic games and final tryouts therefor or other competition approved by the NCAA Council in accordance with Constitution 3-9(c)]. The intercollegiate season in a sport shall be the period between the opening of the institution's formal varsity practice and its last regularly scheduled game. For an individual student-athlete, the season begins when the student first reports for practice or competition for that sport in that year. [Legislation dealing with outside competition in basketball is set forth in Constitution 3-9(b).]

An institution that conducts clearly defined, separate fall and spring playing or practice periods in a sport (e.g., tennis, golf, baseball, lacrosse, softball, volleyball, soccer) may permit a student-athlete to participate in that sport on an outside team during the time between the two periods without affecting the student-athletes eligibility for that sport. However, if an institution's intercollegiate team continues to practice or to participate against outside competition continuously during the academic year, members of the institution's intercollegiate team would be prohibited from participating on an outside team during this time. Further, only those student-athletes who otherwise are eligible for intercollegiate practice and competition could participate as members of the institution's team. Please note that competition in indoor soccer or box lacrosse is considered competition in the sport of soccer or lacrosse, respectively, for the purpose of any NCAA legislation.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question that it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director, at the NCAA national office.

Commission

search data available to us at present," Davis stated.

The Commission and the Council also agreed not to propose any amendments to Bylaw 5-1(j)-(2) at the '86 Convention. That rule currently enables a nonqualifier under the Bylaw 5-1(j) standards, but who has a 2.000 overall high school GPA, to receive athletically related financial aid (but not to practice or participate) in the freshman year, forfeiting one of the four seasons of eligibility if aid is received.

In their October meetings, the Commission had favored permitting four years of eligibility after the first year (but deleting the 2.000 requirement), while the Council had expressed a desire to permit the nonqualifier with a 2.000 in high school to practice, but not play, and utilize only three subsequent varsity seasons.

The two groups now have agreed that rules governing the nonqualifier need additional study and decided to propose no changes pending further consideration in their respective April 1986 meetings.

Syracuse adopts drug-testing plan

Syracuse University worked on a drug-testing program for its athletes since last fall and will begin the mandatory tests during the 1986 fall semester, officials said October 31.

Athletics director John J. Crouthamel made the announcement one day after the appearance in city court of former Syracuse basketball player Tony Bruin, who pleaded innocent to four counts of possession or sale of cocaine in April 1984.

Crouthamel said he hoped in July to start spot-testing for substance abuse by this year but gave up the idea because there was not enough time to prepare.

Convention are 35 fewer than the 145 submitted last year. In 1984, there were 162 amendments; there were 132 in 1983, 122 in 1982 and 121 in 1981. Preceding the recent low of 103 in 1980 were the record 225 in 1976, 175 in 1977, 161 in 1978 and 132 in 1979.

Next week's issue of The NCAA News will feature a report on the number of proposals in each of the topical groupings of legislation. In addition, a group-by-group review of all proposed amendments will appear in issues of the News leading up to the Convention.

The Official Notice of the Association's 80th annual Convention, including all of the proposed legislation, will be mailed from the NCAA national office November 22.

Career-counseling

stitutions have established panels and identify panel members.

The National Football League Players Association informed panel representatives that information concerning certification of sports agents and their specific activities is available for a fee.

Mel Blount, NFL director of player relations, said he is willing to visit member institutions to discuss player agents' activities.

Paul E. Wilson, director of recreational services at the University of Oklahoma, tape-recorded portions of the discussions and has agreed to make a transcript available to member institutions through the national office. The national office will mail an abridged version of the proceedings to counseling panel chairs once the tapes have been transcribed and edited.

Model provision suggested for contracts with coaches

The NCAA Administrative Committee has approved the publication of a proposed statement that member institutions might wish to include in employment contracts with their coaches.

NCAA legal counsel proposed the model provision as a guideline to member institutions to assist in complying with the provisions of Constitution 3-2(g), Bylaw 5-6(d)-(3), and Enforcement Procedure 2-(e) and 7-(c) and (d), as approved by the special NCAA Convention in June.

NCAA President John R. Davis emphasized that the suggested language is intended only as a guideline for member institutions, which may find it helpful to use all or part of the statement in their contracts.

The approved statement follows:

"Without limitation upon any right or remedy of the institution in the event the employee (coach) breaches this contract, it is specifically agreed that if the institution finds after due hearing that the employee is or was at any time involved in violations of NCAA legislation applicable to the institution or applicable to any prior employer of the employee, which was at the time of such employment a member of NCAA, it may take one or more of the following actions that it deems appropriate: (a) termination of employment; (b) suspension, with or without pay, for such period of time as the institution shall determine; (c) modification of duties; (d) reassignment to other employment duties within the institution."

Briefly in the News

Faculty athletics representatives to the Southwest Athletic Conference have voted to support a proposal to the 1986 NCAA Convention that would ban boosters from the recruiting process. The conference also voted to support a proposal to reduce the number of sports required for Division I-A membership from eight to six or seven. The actions were taken in a meeting October 28 in Dallas... Astronaut Sally Ride and former U.S. Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana were honored for their support of women in sports by the Women's Sports Foundation October 29 in Washington, D.C. Ride received the leadership award, and Bayh was honored for his courage and conviction in writing the Title IX legislation.

A new NCAA women's volleyball attendance record was set October 29 in West Lafayette, Indiana, when Purdue University defeated Western Michigan University in three of four games. Attendance for the match at Mackey Arena was 10,645. Western Michigan previously held the record of 8,543 for a match with the University of Nebraska, Lincoln... The University of Detroit won a court order October 29 prohibiting the University of Kansas from backing out of a January 6 basketball game in Detroit so it could play the University of Louisville on national television. An injunction prohibiting Kansas from playing the Louisville game January 25 unless it honors its contract with Detroit was issued by a Wayne County circuit judge.

Marc Buoniconti, 19, a linebacker for The Citadel, is in the neurosurgery intensive care unit at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, Florida, with an injury that may leave him paralyzed. Buoniconti was injured while making a tackle in a game October 26 with East Tennessee State University. He was hospitalized in Johnson City, Tennessee, before being transferred. A hospital spokesman said the neck injury was not life-threatening... A proposed $11 million recreation/athletics facility at Iowa State University will be put to a student referendum in early December. Included in the structure would be an area for indoor football, baseball and softball practice, and the area could be converted for volleyball, tennis, basketball and track. Part of students' fees have been applied to planning funds. If students approve the facility, then permission will be sought from the board of regents.

Kelly cites problems in athletics

A double standard pervading collegiate athletics makes it hard to raise academic standards for athletes and keep sports-happy alumni supportive of the nation's universities, the president of Tulane University said October 27 in San Francisco.

Tulane dropped participation in NCAA Division I men's basketball in April after a point-shaving scandal involving team members was revealed. A school committee is reviewing Tulane's place in other sports and is expected to decide in January whether to recommend that Tulane continue in Division I-A, the classification that gives the most athletics scholarships and competes at the highest level of collegiate sport.

Tulane President Eamon Kelly said none of the options—staying in Division I-A and following NCAA academic recruitment guidelines, staying in the division but deemphasizing athletics or switching to a less competitive NCAA division—is altogether appealing.

Kelly was part of a panel that discussed academics and athletics with editors attending the 51st convention of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association.

Knight says alums are afraid of him

Coach Bob Knight says Indiana University is not susceptible to a scandal similar to those at other institutions because "our alumni are scared to death of me."

Knight, in a benefit speech for the Knox County Youth Shelter in Vincennes, Indiana, said, "I've got them in a position where I don't utilize them. I don't expect them to contribute to basketball; we pay our own way."

"Obviously, I can't control every single thing that happens. That's impossible. But I do think I can set the tone. I can say, 'Hey, this isn't going to happen, and I won't allow it to happen.'"

Two named to directors positions

Richard J. Evrard and L. Douglas Johnson have been named directors of legislative services for the Association, according to William B. Hunt, assistant executive director for legislative services.

Evrard and Johnson most recently have been enforcement representatives for the Association. Evrard joined the NCAA in March 1985, and Johnson was appointed to the national office staff in August 1982.

Before joining the NCAA, Johnson was a trial attorney with the Metropolitan Public Defender's Office in Portland, Oregon. He attended Pomona College, where he served as student-body president and was co-captain of the institution's varsity soccer team.

Johnson was awarded a law degree from Northwestern School of Law in Portland in 1978.

Evrard is a graduate of South Texas College of Law.

He worked with a Houston firm
